EDITORS SING IN SEARCH OF THRILLS; "LATE CARNEGIE PAYS THE BILLS"

Newspaper Men Traveling Abroad Burlesque 100 Per Cent Americanism—Appoint Steering Committee to Prevent Party Being "Representative of Press"—Hark the Glee Club

By TOM WALLACE
(Editorial Writer Louisville Times)

Mr. Wallace, author of this article, is a member of the party of 40 editors spending a month abroad as guests of the Carnegie Foundation for International Peace. Last week the party visited London and its environs, and left Aug. 1 for the Hague. After two days in Holland they will proceed to other parts of the Continent.

S. S. MINNETONKA, Cherbourg.—Fine weather and a sea almost as flat as a mill pond most of the time, never rough enough to cause the slightest rolling of the boat, made the crossing of the American editors to the liking of those who feared seasickness in the event of a rough voyage.

An early event of the voyage was the organization of the party of editorial writers and the appointment of a steering committee of which Maurice S. Sherman of the Hartford Courant, who is a trustee of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, was made chairman. It is not believed that the Steering Committee will have many or heavy duties. Its creation was precipitated by discussion of a speech which one of the party had been invited to make in response to an address of welcome at a dinner which was to be given at the Pilgrims' Club in London.

The speech contained the line, "representing, as I do, the American press." The gentleman's colleagues insisted that the speaker-prospective did not represent the American press, or even the representatives of American newspapers who compose the party. It was held, moreover, that the traveling editors collectively do not represent the American press, and that the American press would resent any member of the party, or the party as a whole, posing as, or permitting itself, or himself, to be represented as speaking for the American press. To this the speaker-prospective agreed readily. But the Steering Committee was appointed upon the theory that it would be well to exercise care that nobody in the party should be represented in foreign newspapers as presenting the view of the American press, or of the traveling group of editors, in any matter touching the situation in Europe or in America.

No sooner was the Steering Committee formed than there ran around the boat the rumor that a plot to "make prohibition ridiculous" in the eyes of Europeans, was scented, because members of the committee, and particularly Mr. Sherman, were anti-prohibitionists.

A dry organization in London, by the way, cabled two members of the party in New York, before the sailing of the Minnetonka, to know if they would be guests of honor at a dry reception in London. The invitation was not accepted, as the recipients did not care to occasion more wet-dry discussion than might occur in the ordinary course of events.

There has been a good deal of casual smoking room discussion among members of the editors' party as to whether the trip should be devoted to observation solely, or partly to writing matter to be published during the course of the journey through Central Europe. The majority view seems to be that the tour would be more beneficial should it be devoted to observation, and that any writing done during the tour should be, for several reasons, mere "travel stuff." Reason one is that any conclusions reached, as to international relations, would be, naturally, reached after the tour rather than at this or that point during the tour, and usable in future editorial work rather than in correspondence. Sundry members of the party will, however, write letters for their papers as they move from one European capital to another.

An editorial from the Chicago Tribune quoting the Manchester Guardian as describing the Carnegie tour as "a minor American invasion of which more will be heard after its end than during its course," was brought aboard by Harold Goff of the Deseret Evening News, and has been passed around and read with a relish by members of the party, whose journey, it predicts, will result in their returning to America, after the wining and dining and speech making abroad, "with caviar on their vests and ready to sign blank checks," as a result of having set out "with every pore open" to receive impressions from capable impression-makers.

The social aspects of the voyage have been agreeable, not only because of the pleasure editors from various parts of the United States have found in meeting one another, and in discussing domestic problems, but also because of the usual social activities on trans-Atlantic liners. Deck dancing almost every evening, a fancy dress ball Thursday evening, with prizes for masculine and feminine costumes, and a concert Friday evening, in which The Editorial Glee Club figured were among the festivities.

The Editorial Glee Club, Hamilton Owens of the Baltimore Evening Sun, singing the song and a chorus of a dozen men shouting the refrain, "rendered" a lyrical burlesque of 100 per cent Americanism under the title "The National Anthem." The song, probably of Baltimore origin, was in part brought aboard by Mr. Owens, and in part written aboard by Mr. Owens, Earl J. Langdon of the Sacramento Bee and others.

The song runs through many stanzas, of which the following are samples:

I am a na
I am a na
I am a native born Caucasian Protestant!
I am a Knight
I am a Knight
I am a Knight of the Ku Klux Klan!
And when the Kleagle sounds his Klarion kall
I am there with the tar and feathers and all.
I am a one hundred per cent American
I am, God damn,
I am.

I am a ji
I am a ji
I am a jiner, shriner, Junior Orderite,
I am a ki,
I am a Kiwanian, too!
I'm a Red Man, Woodman, Rotaree,
I belong to 'em all except the K. of C.
I am a one, etc.

A stanza composed on board ran as follows:

I am an ed
I am an ed
I am an editorial writer on the sea;
I shape the pub
I shape the pub
I shape the pub-lic pol-icee,
I journey far in search of thrills,

While the late Carnegie pays the bills.
I am a one, etc.

An address by Percy S. Bullen, American representative of the London Daily Telegraph, upon the Institute of Journalists, a British institution in existence thirty-five years, to improve the ethics of journalism and the welfare of salaried newspaper workers, was delivered to the editors exclusively, and provoked a good deal of discussion, as to the probability of such an organization being formed eventually in America.

If a prize had been offered during the voyage for the best improvement upon the eternal statement, to journalists "yours must be an interesting calling," it would have gone to Miss Collette Krischner of New York, a diminutive individual who, costumed as a Negro bell hop, was dancing at the fancy dress ball with a six-foot editor wearing the uniform of the Minnetonka's Quartermaster.

"Your profession," said Miss Krischner, "must be like being on the soap box and knowing that the police will not interfere."

LORD RIDDELL TALK ON PEACE-PUBLICITY

Addressing U. S. Editors in England Blames Lack of Press Representatio for Trouble at Geneva—Party Visits Dunford House

Lack of publicity was declared to responsible for the present trouble Geneva by Lord Riddell, newspaper pu lisher, addressing a dinner given July in London by the Newspaper Proprieto Association to the visiting American e tors, guests of the Carnegie Foundati for International Peace. Lord Ridd handled the publicity at the Washingt Arms Conference. This week he said:

"At the Washington conference the was no misunderstanding, because t press insisted on publicity. The best ro to peace is publicity, and I believe th all the trouble which has arisen at Gene has been due to the fact that the Briti and American press were not represente as they were at Washington."

The editors were entertained at lunc eon on July 29, at Dunford House, t former home of Richard Cobden, apost of peace and International understandin

Mrs. Jane Cobden Unwin, the vene able daughter of the Great Peace Adv cate, greeted the visitors in the Cobd home. She is giving this home as memorial to her father, and it is to used as a center for promoting the idea of the British leader. Richard Cobde who was a contemporary and friend Charles Sumner, the American State man, died in 1865 as a result of overwo in preventing Parliament from passing measure for the fortification of the Can dian-American frontier.

Philip Bright, son of John Bright, lifelong friend and co-worker with Col den for peace, also attended the luncheo Addresses were delivered by James Brow Scott, of Washington, secretary of th Carnegie Endowment for Internation Peace, Lawton B. Evans, of August Ga., and Maurice S. Sherman, of Spring field, Mass. The latter two are truste of the Carnegie Endowment.

The editors were entertained at te by Lord Cowdray at the ruin of Cow dray Castle.

AMERICAN EDITORS TAKE TEA AT HOUSE OF COMMONS

A party of American editors who are touring the principal countries of the Continent, paid a visit to London, and are seen in the above picture with Sir Harry Brittain, M. P. (in tall white hat) outside the House of Commons where the visitors took tea on the terrace.

AD BUREAU SCANS COMMUNITY ADVERTISING

Samples of Outstanding Campaigns Listed in New A.N.P.A. Book—Many Illustrations Show Technique of Best-Pulling Copy—Efficient Use of Newspapers Described

FROM a discussion of various methods for raising the appropriation to the final preparation and placing of copy the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association considers the subject of "Community Advertising" in a book which came off the press of William Green, New York, this week.

In the very beginning of the book, the Bureau gives credit to "live chambers of commerce," which, it is pointed out, have unquestionably brought about the present-day increase in community advertising.

"With courage and confidence," the book declares, "a chamber of commerce can about raising a sum sufficient to tell other states in the Union why its city deserves the careful consideration of the manufacturer and the homesteader.

'Dead' villages have been brought back to life through the helpful ministration of advertising; communities with selected industrial or farming advantages have won practical recognition, joyously settled, but beautiful spots have been brought to populous success, all by plans of wisely-directed newspaper campaigns in their behalf.

Says a chamber of commerce expert: "The United States has grown to such a startling extent that competition exists in the matter of homesteaders and attracting desirable business and industrial enterprises. The manufacturer, faced with the same problem, learned to meet the problem through advertising; now communities are operating similarly.

Romance, mingled with hard work and common sense, is involved in the raising of money for a Community advertising campaign.

In fifteen days, at the inception of its drive for $1,000,000, Atlanta, Ga., attained its objective. Yet this is by no means an unusual enterprise today. The previous appropriation was $250,000. Obviously everyone concerned understood that advertising Atlanta was a profitable undertaking. It has been officially announced that as a result of the expenditure of $250,000 for advertising in the past three years, Atlanta has secured 152 new plants, with annual payrolls aggregating over $8,000,000 and bringing to the city 10,000 new people.

An advertising campaign to further the claims of Birmingham, Ala., as one of the South's leading industrial cities was sponsored this year by the Axis Club, a women's civic development organization, with the co-operation of the Chamber of Commerce and other business associations. Subscriptions brought in $300,000.

An advertising campaign in newspapers involving an annual expenditure of $10,000, has just been launched by the Chamber of Commerce of Norfolk-Portsmouth, Va. Tourists and industries are appealed to.

"An increase from $100,000 to $250,000 in the national advertising fund of Jacksonville, Fla., followed a recent meeting of an organization known as "The Believers in Jacksonville." It is a community advertising association, formed for that exclusive purpose. Jacksonville was dissatisfied with its condition not long ago. Advertising has brought it back to normal.

"It was not so long ago that real rivalry, tinged with a bit of jealousy, existed between the cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul. The other night 900 prominent business men of both communities held a good-will dinner. Plans were formed for advertising the Twin Cities in newspapers, in a united campaign. And all Minnesota was to share in the results.

"Under the direction of the Providence Chamber of Commerce, and other local business organizations, the cities of Providence and Pawtucket were not afraid to undertake the raising of an advertising fund of $50,000. A campaign was based on the most exhaustive of industrial surveys.

"Behind the national newspaper campaigns of seventy towns, districts and states are 160 or more live organizations located in thirty-five states. In California alone there are thirty-nine individual community campaigns; Florida boasts twenty-eight.

"Where it was once a discouraging task to raise the necessary funds for appropriations of this character, quotas are filled today with speed and enthusiasm. 'Just try it once,' is the slogan in communities where merchants, business men of all kinds, and citizens are loathe to undertake campaigns 'and see what happens.'"

The booklet points out that railroads, steamship lines, and hotels have inspired community advertising programs. Numerous instances are cited of this co-operation between community and railroad. In addition to the many separate California campaigns, in which, one after another, practically all of the important communities of the state have been "sold" to the Nation, by railroads, through newspaper campaigns, the following typical instances may be mentioned at random:

"The Burlington Route's imposing series in behalf of Colorado, illustrated magnificently, which puts the place always before the railway system; the New York, Ontario & Western Railway's newspaper campaign for a series of playground counties of the Empire State; the Missouri Pacific Lines and the colorful newspaper series exploiting San Isabel National Forest; the New York, New Haven and Hartford effort for New England, as, one by one, each important community is featured in copy and illustrations; the Lackawanna Railroad's beautiful series for the Delaware Water Gap country; the Chicago North Western's Duluth series; the Baltimore & Ohio newspaper schedule to tell the untold side of Pittsburgh."

The Bureau contends that the "modern idea of logical market selection rules in community as well as commodity campaigns," and continues:

"Newspapers open the doorways to all markets and when the right markets have been found, it is newspaper advertising that offers the avenue of approach.

"There are many examples of how communities have solved the market problem to their profit. One community—whose case may be considered typical—awoke to the need of attracting manufacturers. Local conditions were good. Labor, cheap land and shipping facilities were plentiful. The only reason the community was not alive with factories was because it had failed to let anybody know the truth about itself.

"Advertising was planned, but before a dollar was spent, a wise chamber of commerce appointed a bright young man to travel and investigate. His job was to find the places where manufacturers needed the advantages his community had to offer.

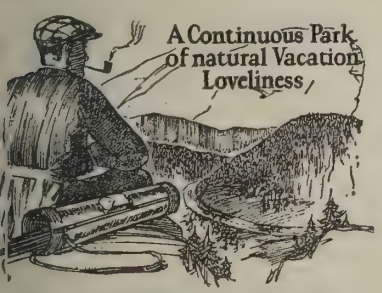
"When he returned, he knew where labor costs were high, where lack of power was distressing and he had especially marked the zones where manufacturers had long been dissatisfied and were only awaiting an advantageous chance to move.

"The advertising, therefore, was prepared with these specific traffic lanes and prospects in mind. It was not general and it wasn't 'an arrow in the air.' It talked, in its copy, to live prospects in certain cities.

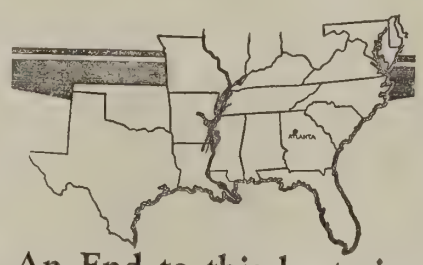
"Herein is the advantage of the newspaper campaign. It can be specific. It can aim at a definite target and be reasonably sure of a receptive audience.

"The city's advertising, let it be emphasized, was not designed until the facts about the markets were secured.

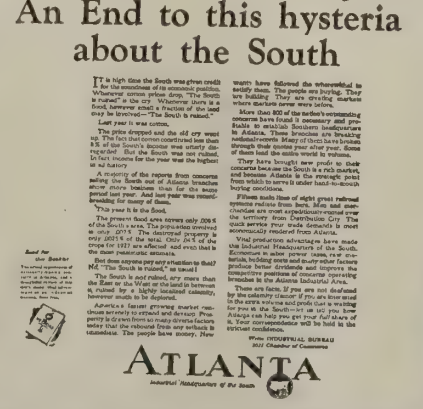
"The size of the advertisements was equally strategic. The investigator knew that one city should have a certain display and could be reasonably expected to support it. Other cities, less certain, could drop back into smaller space. Every line of copy was based on knowledge.



"In one place chosen for the campaign there had been labor difficulties together with socialistic tendencies. Water and electric power was in the hands of a monopoly. Apparently that city deliberately discouraged its manufacturers. In this section half pages were used in every newspaper."



As reasons behind the biggest successes in community advertising, the Bureau lists "adequate appropriations, persistency, continuity, and boldness," and adds:



"One of the striking examples of this is to be found in the coherent, close-knit effort in behalf of Atlanta, Ga. There is a purpose behind every picture: a reason for every line of copy. The advertising rolls up its sleeves and goes to work along modern lines."

An entire chapter is devoted to advertising by Pacific Coast cities.

"Undoubtedly community advertising has paid the Pacific Coast," the chapter concludes. "A comparison by chart showing the rate of growth over a given period of years before the advertising started and since invariably shows an upward trend in growth as a result of the advertising. Pacific Coast community advertising continues to show an increase in volume from year to year and a large reliance upon newspaper space to accomplish its purpose."

visit the new

PRINCE of WALES HOTEL

in the Canadian Rockies Adjoining Glacier National Park

This summer will mark the opening of the beautiful new Prince of Wales Hotel in Waterton Lakes National Park—adjoining Glacier National Park north of the international boundary in the Canadian Rockies.

Plan now to come out and enjoy the fascinating outdoor sports and scenic wonders of this new international Alpine playground.

Complete your Adventure Land Vacation by visiting Spokane, Seattle, Portland, Tacoma and Vancouver. Low Round Trip Summer Fares are good on the NEW ORIENTAL LIMITED—finest train to the Pacific Northwest.

GREAT NORTHERN

a dependable railway

Mail Coupon or Phone

M. M. Hubbert, General Eastern Passenger Agent, W. S. Great Northern Railway, 595 Fifth Ave. at 48th St., New York, N. Y.
Telephone Murray Hill 1666-7-8-9

I will spend my summer vacation in the Northwest. Am interested in the tours I have checked below:

- ☐ General Tour of Glacier and Waterton Lakes National Parks
- ☐ Pacific Northwest Tour, Rainier National Park, Mt. Baker Region, Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, Spokane
- ☐ California via Pacific Northwest
- ☑ The Hawaiian Islands and the Orient

There will be _____ in our party. We will leave about _____ from _____. Please quote low round trip summer fares, mail me free booklets and other detailed information.

Name _____

Address _____

Samples (above) of advertisements picked by the Bureau of Advertising of the A. N. P. A. to show how different states and communities are using newspaper space to bring vacationists to the state as in the case of Vermont; to sell business men the South; to inform readers of the Diamond Jubilee in Canada; and to promote interest in the Canadian Rockies.

BATTLE-SCARRED REPORTERS RETURN FROM COVERING STILLMAN WEDDING

Plate Thrown by Irate Hostess Cuts Camera Man Over Eye—Writers Go Hungry and Make Wild Night Drive to Get News of Ceremony on the Wires

By MORRIS DE HAVEN TRACY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

MONTREAL, QUEBEC, July 28.—The Stillman wedding story has been told, and now, perhaps, the story of how it came to be told is interesting.

The facts of the matter are that the reporters who went into the Quebec woods to record the story of the marriage of Lena and Bud, came back battle-scarred, tired, dirty and hungry, but if the public got a chance to see the pictures of the wedding and read the story of the marriage, then the newspaper men won the Battle of the St. Maurice.

Grande Anse, where the Stillman camp is located, is not a town. It is just a stretch of water somewhere along the St. Maurice River, surrounded by mountains and forest—one of the mountains being the "Mountain of the Island of Nuts," by literal translation of its French name.

It is 30 miles by road which is little more than a trail from La Tuque, Quebec, and about 35 miles by a still worse road from Grand Mere, Quebec. To get to La Tuque one goes to Montreal; takes a Quebec train to a little spot in the wilds called Hervey Junction; and then takes a train for Winnipeg, Manitoba. From La Tuque the reporters had to go to Grande Anse over the tortuous road by automobile. It takes two days to make the trip from New York.

Most of the newspaper men assigned to the Stillman story and all of the news photographers and movie men went first to Grand Mere, only to find that chauffeurs would not risk trying to take them over the road to Grande Anse.

A small group of newspaper folk, including the writer, however went direct to La Tuque, arriving at 1 a.m. Monday. There they found a small French hotel, run by two jovial young Frenchmen willing to help all they could but unable to do much. Those who made La Tuque immediate headquarters made a preliminary survey of the situation that day.

That night the party of photographers and reporters at Grande Mere sent an airplane to Grande Anse to find out what was going on. The airplane landed in the St. Maurice river, in front of the Stillman home; its passengers, two in number, were stranded there for four hours when the plane hung up on an island and were finally rescued by a woodsman living near by, receiving no assistance from the Stillmans.

The plane finally got back to Grand Mere and the two newspaper men abroad it came into La Tuque on a truck about midnight that night, tired, bruised and disgusted.

The 1 a.m. train brought the remainder of the newspaper men and photographers from Grande Mere and La Tuque took on a holiday attire with more people than it had seen in many months crowding its little hotel.

Early the following morning the procession to Grande Anse began. Automobile after automobile pulled out, carrying the representatives of the press. Arriving at Grande Anse they were greeted with word from Mrs. Stillman that they would not be permitted on the grounds until the hour of the ceremony. There was no food for them. They were told to shift for themselves.

One party of reporters from the New York tabloids shared a can of cold beans with a few of the photographers. Many went hungry. The United Press correspondent, and Bob Parsons of the Montreal Star, through means which perhaps might cost an employe of Mrs. Stillman his or her job were it recorded, found it possible to obtain lunch for himself and four others at the expense of Mrs. Stillman, however, and they had accordion music and folk dances with the meal for entertainment.

Mrs. Stillman refused to see anyone before the wedding, as did Bud, Lena and all the others. After the ceremony Mrs. Stillman's highly efficient and imperious secretary answered three or four questions and wished everyone good-bye.

When the ceremony started cameramen set up their machines among some shrubs where they were partly concealed, and began grinding away. No sooner was the ceremony over than employes of Mrs. Stillman surrounded them and administered a thoroughgoing rebuke. But rebukes counted little under the circumstances and the cameras were set up to record the cutting of the wedding cake. A few shots were taken and a few feet of film ground out when Mrs. Stillman noticed them.

"Out with you, out with you", shouted the proud lady of Grande Anse, and she began herding photographers and reporters away. One man hesitated. He got his ears boxed. Another was too slow. Mrs. Stillman shoved him over. There was a general retreat of cameramen but most of the reporters simply looked innocent and mixed with the crowd.

But the photographers were back in a few moments, setting up their cameras on the opposite side of the table where stood the wedding cake. Mrs. Stillman spied them.

"Out with you," she shouted in an excited, high-pitched voice. "This party is for my friends and not for photographers."

She grasped a dinner plate of Dresden China from a stack near her, and threw it with all the form of a discus thrower at a field meet. She threw three of them, smashing windows, upsetting punch glasses, knocking over a camera and catching Bert Mason, a photographer, over the eye. His injuries were not serious. The photographers retreated permanently.

Then began the race for La Tuque, the nearest wire head. It was probably the longest run reporters ever were required to make with a flash on a spot news event.

The writer had for his chauffeur a young French Canadian, John Lavoie by name, who spoke no English, but who knew how to drive on mountain roads and whose sporting blood was aroused. John covered the 35 miles in an hour and 30 minutes. The U. P. correspondent reached the wire at La Tuque and was followed soon by Bryan Bell of the Associated Press and Wm. Nyson of the Montreal Gazette, just as a thunder storm broke, making the road almost impassable. The U. P. correspondent had a large, blue bump on his head from contact with the top of the automobile and Bell was also shaken.

But it did only a little good. There was but one operator experienced in handling press matter at La Tuque and another struggling with an uncertain commercial wire over which he could move about 600 words an hour. Then the electrical storm crippled the one wire which had been good. By mid evening the wires had 30,000 words of matter to move, and correspondents were tearing their hair as it limped out amid many breaks.

But the photographers had even worse troubles. Two planes sent to carry out the camera plates, could not land at Grande Anse because the river was running full of logs. They landed about 10 miles away at the River de Rat. When the last of the pictures had been taken and the last of the crockery thrown, photographers started for the River de Rat. One car proved too heavily loaded to climb the precipitous grades and the wife of one of its passengers, who had come with her husband, was unceremoniously dropped by the road side to shift for herself. Another car went into the ditch. But finally all the photographers arrived —to find the planes had gone. Then it developed that the planes found it possible later in the day to land at Grande Anse and had alighted in the river there about 30 minutes after the photographers left.

The pictures arrived that night by automobile in La Tuque and were carried to Montreal by train. One photographer tried to get his plates by automobile to Three Rivers, but after 10 miles found the road impassable, and returned to La Tuque.

It was daylight before the last of the stories were cleared over the telegraph wires and it was a bedraggled crowd of men who boarded the train for Montreal at 4 a. m. Wednesday; bought up two drawing rooms; crowded into them and went to sleep.

Anne Stillman, who had been out of the news for a long time, had broken back onto the front pages—but it was a bruised and bleeding corps of newsmen who emerged victorious from the Battle of the St. Maurice, voting it the fiercest of the campaigns of 1927.

CHICAGO'S "AD WEEK" OCTOBER 16-22

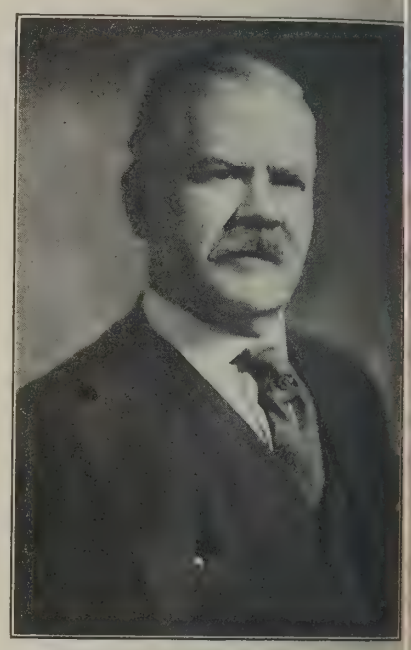
Inland Press, A. B. C., Direct Mail, A. N. A. E. and Other Bodies Schedule Their Annual Meetings for 6-Day Period

The Advertising Council of the Chicago Association of Commerce is busily at work on plans for the largest gathering of advertising men and women during the week of Oct. 16 to 22. The period has been designated as "Advertising Week" and eight of the most important advertising gatherings of the year have geen scheduled for then. Among the organizations which will meet in Chicago in October are the Direct Mail Advertising Association; the Audit Bureau of Circulations; the Insurance Advertising Association; the Mail Advertising Service Association; the Agricultural Publishers' Association; the Inland Daily Press Association; the Association of Newspaper Executives, and the National Association of Teachers of Marketing and Advertising, who will hold a special meeting.

The two largest conventions will be those of the Direct Mail Advertising Association, which expects an attendance of 3,000, and Audit Bureau of Circulations, which anticipates 1,200 to 1,500 delegates.

A business show or advertising exposition will be one of the important features of the convention of the Direct Mail Association. The exposition, which is directly sponsored in Chicago by the Chicago Advertising Council, will be held in the great exhibition hall of the new Stevens hotel, and will include 165 display booths fitted up ready for exhibits. The exposition is open to all legitimate concerns engaged in the various types of advertising, including advertising agencies, advertising service organizations, printers, publishers, lithographers, engravers, electrotypers, direct mail, list and letter service companies, producers of equipment applying to advertising, etc.

Charles W. Collier is manager of the Direct Mail Advertising Exposition and Ben C. Pittsford is chairman of the Advertising Council's committee which is supervising the arrangements for the convention.



BUFFALO GREETS I. A. A. GROUP

The Buffalo Chamber of Commerce entertained members of the International Advertising Association, returning from the convention in Denver, at their Buffalo visit. The visitors, headed by John A. Wilkens, of the New York Advertising Club as chairman of the delegation, were greeted by a special reception committee. The first event of the Buffalo reception, before disembarking from the Steamer Octorara, the delegates and the Buffalo committee were guests of William J. Connors, Jr., publisher of the Buffalo Courier and Express, at luncheon. The advertising men were welcomed to Buffalo by Robert E. Coulson of the Chamber of Commerce committee.

SCRANTON TIMES STAFF HONORS LYNETT

His Fiftieth Year as Newspaper Ma Marked by Dinner with Employes as Hosts, Competitors Guests

E. J. Lynett, owner and editor of th Scranton (Pa.) Times, who observed hi 50th anniversary in the newspaper busi ness Aug. 1, was the guest of honor at banquet given by the Times employes o that date. Almost 200 were in attendanc at the dinner, including the following out of-town men: David E. Smiley, North American Newspaper Alliance; John Reitinger, Associated Press; Paul Eyerly, Bloomsburg, president of State Publishers' Association, and H. D. Lacoste, New York. Talks were given at the dinner by Col. L. A. Watres, representing the Scranton newspapers; Mr. Smiley, Mr. Eyerly, Thomas Murphy, editor of the Times, and Mr. Lynett. E. J. Hart, a member of the Times staff, also spoke, saying he was "speaking for the boys in the trenches."

E. J. Lynett

In his speech to the Times family, Mr. Lynett briefly reviewed the fifty years he has been in the newspaper business. He said it was wrong for people to give him all the credit for the success that has come his way, declaring most of it resulted from the loyal and capable men who have been connected with the Times. The toastmaster of the banquet was John E. Bradley, general manager of the Times, who has been associated with Mr. Lynett for the past forty-eight years.

In his speech, Col. Watres, who has been a friend of Mr. Lynett for over 50 years, recalled the days when the two served as auditors for Lackawanna county at $3.50 a day. Mr. Watres is owner of the Republican in this city.

Mr. Lynett was presented with a grandfather's clock by the Times family.

Mr. Lynett told those at the dinner that when he wrote an editorial several days in advance of his 50th anniversary he expected that would be the end of it and that he would have a quiet day. Instead he said he never put in a busier—nor happier—period in his office, he said.

The testimonial dinner was arranged by a committee named from all departments. William Cullen as secretary-treasurer, while Mr. Murphy served as chairman.

ADDRESSES WANTED

Victor H. Williams
R. O. Dudley
Preston L. Grover
E. J. Strong

INSIDE INFORMATION ON COPYRIGHT CLAIMS

Thorvald Solberg, Register of Copyrights, Explains Intricacies of Recording Literary Properties—Publishers Declared to Be Lax in Filling Out Blanks

YARDS of red tape were unwound by Thorvald Solberg, register of copyrights, Washington, D. C., when he explained the intricacies of filing claims to literary properties to the newspaper group of the Special Libraries Association at their recent Toronto convention.

Mr. Solberg admitted there was much that editors, publishers and writing men and women should know about copyright, the American laws on which date back to 1783. Requirements of the law, according to the register, may be blamed as one source of trouble, but he also found fault with those seeking copyrights who file applications that are so "defective" that they require considerable correspondence to eliminate variances, erroneous statements, wrong dates, etc.

Mr. Solberg furnished in detail inside information of the red tape of obtaining copyright claims, and ended with the expressed hope that the United States might see fit soon to join the International Copyright Union the articles of which, he said, expressly declare that copyright protection shall not depend upon "compliance with any condition or formality."

In the case of the 28 countries that are members of that union it is understood that there is automatic protection in all of them without any requirement either of publication or of publication with notice, or of deposit of copies or of registration or claim of copyright," he explained.

The United States has not entered this union which is now in its 40th year, but there is a distinct feeling, which is believed to be growing among educated people at least, that the United States should no longer hold back, but should join this very practical association of nations to protect literary and artistic property.

Various bills have been introduced in Congress to provide for the accession of the United States to the Articles of Convention in order to permit entry into the Copyright Union. The two bills proposing the general revision of the copyright laws both contain provisions to that effect."

So much for the future; it was the present that chiefly concerned Mr. Thorberg.

The copyright business as it is now operated in America with respect to newspapers, he explained, is divided into two classes; first, registrations made, as required by law, for each number of issue of a paper to be protected; and second, registrations made to protect special contributions to the newspaper.

Nearly 2,000 different periodicals are regularly entered," he said, "but only 43 different newspapers are registered currently for the entire contents of their daily issues. But newspaper publishers as a class are amongst the largest clients of the copyright office.

Thus the New York Times which does not register for copyright its daily issues at all pays copyright fees to the extent of about $1,000, each month. It makes registration regularly for each issue of its Book Review and of its Magazine Section, and for more than 10,000 contributions yearly. The Chicago Tribune pays upwards of $6,000 in copyright fees each year.

The justification for these numerous entries by the New York Times Company and for other thousands of entries as well is found in the provision inserted in section 12 of the Act of March 4, 1909, providing for the deposit of copies of copyrighted works, reading as follows: 'if such work be a contribution to a periodical, for which contribution special registration is requested, then one copy of the issue or issues of the periodical or newspaper containing such contribution is to be deposited with an application for the registration of the contribution.' These contributions may be very different kinds of things. This provision of law was very likely originally proposed having in mind the serial publication of stories and novels; but the contributions actually registered may be in addition news articles or pictorial illustrations, or comic strips, combining both pictures and words, or illustrated strips of a more serious character—historical or otherwise—or the contribution may even be a drama or a musical composition. In either case the procedure is the same so far as the application for registration is concerned (the filing of the properly specified claim, and the deposit of one copy of the newspaper); but when it comes to registration and the cataloguing of the entry, this will be given a class designation and go into the proper series of registration numbers, according as to whether it is text matter when it is technically called a book or is classed as a drama, a print, or a musical composition, according to actual circumstances.

"In addition there are such large clients of the copyright office as the King Features Syndicate, which pays about $4,000 in copyright fees yearly; the International Feature Service; the Premier Syndicate, the Metropolitan Newspaper Service, each making registrations requiring copyright fees from $1,200 to $1,400 or more yearly, and the Newspaper Feature Service making about half as many entries.

"At least two other classes of very extensive and regular contributions should be noticed, namely, the so-called 'Service' publications of a serious and educational character, and the very noticeable advertisement services. These registrations may vary from brief text paragraphs to elaborate and often distinctly beautiful pictorial and descriptive matter.

"Of the 2,186 double column pages of closely printed fine type matter in the Catalogue of Copyright Entries, Part 1, Group 2, for 1926, by far the largest part is, no doubt, for newspaper matter, as the index of about 500 additional pages will show.

"The registration and cataloguing of the periodicals and newspaper themselves are comparatively easy matters. The magazines are of course, arranged under their titles in one alphabetical list, and little difficulty ordinarily is experienced as regards the names of the claimants of copyright. But when it comes to dealing with the many thousands of entries for all kinds of newspaper contributions, it is quite another matter. What is required with respect to copyright in such things is that a copyright claim should be presented for recording and indexing which should be intelligible and sufficient clearly to identify the claim, and, of course, one entry must be intelligently differentiated from the other, otherwise the identity is not maintained and the entries cannot be properly indexed and catalogued.

"The law requires that one complete copy of the newspaper containing the contribution shall be deposited accompanied by a 'claim of copyright.' This requirement of the complete copy is the first source of trouble. It not unnaturally seems to the applicant that it should be sufficient to clip his paragraph from the newspaper and slip it into the envelope containing the application. But copyright is a grant upon conditions, under our law, and the conditions must be fully and exactly complied with if the entry is to prove adequate to secure the protection desired. So the Office is obliged to insist upon the full copy of the newspaper or periodical. Then the next difficulty experienced is to find the contribution, the article, possibly simply a brief paragraph, in the great mass of printed matter in the pages of a modern daily. Hours of dreary labor would be saved the clerks in the Copyright Office if we could only induce the applicants to mark the front page with the number of the page where the article is to be found, and in addition, to mark the paragraph itself in some way to catch the eye when the pages (not unfrequently more than 100) are searched for it. If the page containing the paragraph or article was pinned in front that would, of course, prove most convenient.

"The next consideration is the application for copyright registration. This must embody the "claim of copyright" which the law requires shall be filed with the copy of the article for which copyright is claimed, in order to secure copyright protection.

"This application is not very complex, but it should always be borne in mind that the application blank is devised to secure all the information which it is essential to have of record to permit an intelligible, fully identifiable record. The application blank to be used is designated 'A-5' and is for a 'contribution to a newspaper or periodical.' The first item required is the name of the claimant, the proprietor or owner of the copyright. The application calls for three things with respect to the claimant of copyrights 1, his full legal name; 2, his citizenship; 3, his legal address.

"This would seem at first blush a very simple matter. It is quite reasonable to suppose that the owner of the copyright should know his own name and could give it correctly; should also know his own nationality, and could indicate his legal address. But experience demonstrates that nothing is so simple as it looks when it need to be done completely and exactly.

"The law requires that the owner's name to go of record shall be stated in the required copyright notice. If there is a variance or disagreement between the owner's name in the application and as it appears in the notice, that variance or disagreement must be explained and cleared away before we can act.

"Such variances are of daily occurrence, and are sometimes quite surprising. It has even happened that a newspaper claiming copyright has printed the name of a brother newspaper in the notice.

"The variances discovered are vexatiously numerous, and indicate a woeful lack of thought in filling up the blank. The Office necessarily endeavors to secure completeness and uniformity. The name of the claimant may sometimes be written in three or four ways upon a single application blank. This is embarrassing when it is the name of the author, but prohibits registration when it occurs in the name of the claimant of copyright.

"A common fault in applications for newspapers or periodicals or contributions to them is to state the claimant in the name of the periodicals for example, the 'Chicago Daily News' instead of the 'Chicago Daily News Company,' 'the Century' instead of 'The Century Company.'

"The statement of nationality does not usually give trouble for newspaper entries for the claimants or authors are usually American citizens. But the law does require, if the name is that of an alien resident in the United States, that the place of his domicile be stated, and if a foreigner, his nationality must be given. Not all foreign authors are entitled to obtain copyright in the United States. Unless copyright relations have been established between the United States and the country to which the author belongs his work cannot be registered.

"Trouble frequently arises when newspaper or periodical contributions are published under the pen name or pseudonyms of their authors. The copyright law protects anonymous works or articles published under pseudonyms and does not require the declaration of the true name of the writer (except in some special cases); but if the claim of copyright is to be recorded in the name of the author, then the true, legal name of such author must be stated for record, and not his pen name or pseudonym. It goes without saying, that no copyright can be recorded without a name for the copyright owner.

"While copyright is a personal property, and protects the result of the author's personal effort, the ownership of the copyright may be registered in the name of an institution or a firm or corporation, and in the latter case the name of the owner should be exactly stated in the application form, including the 'Inc.' and the place, if part of the incorporated title, should also be stated as part of the owner's name and not merely as the address. Where the claimant of a copyright is a married woman who has written and become

(Continued on Page 33)

NEWSPAPER CIRCULATIONS AND RATES—ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS

The following additions to and corrections of newspaper listings printed in EDITOR & PUBLISHER for July 16 have been noted:

Population City	Trade Area	Date Estab.	City	Name of Paper	Issued	Net Paid Circulation	5,000-Line Adv. Rate
14,174	54,300	1865	Boone (Iowa)	News-Republican	(e)	5,451	.035
4,270	12,000	1879	Marshall (Mich.)	Chronicle	(e)	2,561	.02
5,500	35,000	1874	Fairmont (Minn.)	Sentinel	(e)	3,526	.036*
14,500	50,000	1873	Missoula (Mont.)	Missoulian	(m)	4,714	.....
		1911		Sentinel	(e)	2,249	.....
				Combined daily	(me)	6,963	.0425
		1873		Sunday edition	(s)	6,399	.0425
6,500,000	9,500,000	1924	New York	Graphic	(e)	334,795	.60
109,920	275,000	1904	Tulsa (Okla.)	Tribune	(e)	43,953x	.10*
				Sunday edition	(s)	48,509x	.10*
10,050	.....	1884	San Angelo (Tex.)	Standard	(e)	5,728	.03*
				Sunday edition	(s)	6,331	.03*
8,268	.....	1891	Norwich (N. Y.)	Sun	(e)	3,163	.03*
8,000	.....	1889	Nyack (N. Y.)	Journal	(e)	2,883	.025*
		1922		News	(e)	1,783	.025*
16,500	35,000	1830	Ogdensburg (N. Y.)	Republican-Journal	(m)	6,071	.04
105,000	300,000	1882	Utica (N. Y.)	Press	(m)	26,052	.07
42,000	150,000	1899	Muncie (Ind.)	Star	(m)	24,458x	.08*
				Sunday edition	(s)	15,718x	.08*
Rate effective September 1, 1927
408,000	875,000	1903	Indianapolis	Star	(m)	102,237x	.20*
				Sunday edition	(s)	141,565x	.27*
Rate effective September 1, 1927
70,000	190,000	1903	Terre Haute (Ind.)	Star	(m)	26,690	.07*
				Sunday edition	(s)	24,653	.07*
Rate effective September 1, 1927
45,945	125,000	1876	Moline (Ill.)	Dispatch	(e)	12,292	.05*
11,039	.....	1901	Palestine (Tex.)	Press	(m)	2,230	.025*
				Sunday edition	(s)	2,230	.025*
300,000	11,541,831	1900	Manila (P. I.)	Bulletin	(m)	6,346	.035*

WELDING GROCERY UNITS INTO CHAIN TO BEAT COMPETITION OF GIANTS

Niagara Falls Newspaper Perfected Organization of Retailers, Guaranteed Regular Advertising and Merchandising, and Made "Niga" Store Synonym of Economy

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

HOW a newspaper can guide the independent retailers of its city to meet and beat rapidly growing chain store competition, how the declining strength of the jobbers in a community can be replaced by fresh vigor, and how a live medium-size city newspaper can add notably to its local and national food linage, have been demonstrated during recent months by M. Bradley Norton, advertising manager of the Niagara Falls (N. Y.) Gazette.

M. Bradley Norton

The Niga Stores plan did it.

This plan is strikingly different from the space-selling "special page" of the average newspaper. It is much more far-reaching and really gets at the bottom of the retailer's present problem. Almost from the start it assured the Gazette seven to eight columns of extra local advertising every Thursday.

Five Niagara Falls grocers met together in April of last year. They found themselves facing stiff competition especially from the chains, poor credits and limited buying. The dealers were in a mood to battle the chain stores, but the local newspaper, which was represented said that it would be better to adopt the practices of the chain organization and work along the "chain" lines. Those at this conference arranged for a mass meeting at the Chamber of Commerce for the following Monday night with the cashier of a local bank, the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, the president of the Business Men's Association and the advertising manager of the Gazette as speakers. More than 250 dealers and others interested were present.

From this nucleus, the Niagara Falls Retail Grocers Association was formed with 100 active grocer members. Its dues were $2 a month. Then came plenty of details to be worked out. The newspaper gave freely of its time during the next two or three months to help get the organization functioning. A set of agreements between the grocers and the association was drawn up. The association gathered data and prices on mass-buying. The members were helped to clean out all of their old stock that they could.

A start was made on collective buying when the group pooled together in the purchase of 1,000 pounds of a well-known brand of coffee and a carload of flour.

At a meeting addressed by Mr. Norton, the value of joint advertising was made plain and a suggested contract between the individual larger members and the association for the payment of $4 a week each to finance a large seven column weekly space for the Niga Stores was passed, copy to be approved by the association committee on buying and advertising. Through the efforts of the Gazette solicitors, 36 members signed the iron-clad contract for 52 weeks.

The contract provides that the committee will meet every Monday to decide what is to be advertised. The store agrees to stock and display all advertised items, to make displays of such items in the windows or on the counters every Friday and Saturday, to paste on the windows every Friday a copy of the advertisement, and to sell the goods at the price advertised. The store's name, address and telephone number is printed at the bottom of the advertisement. On Thursday, Oct. 21, 1926, the first seven-column advertisement appeared. Since then, the size has been increased to eight columns.

The copy resembles that of chain stores with "specials" displayed boldly at attractive prices in boxes. At the top under the trademark, Niga, and the heading, "Buy in quality—home town grocers" appears this explanation:

"The N.I.G.A. is the Niagara Independent Grocers Association composed of the leading independent grocers of Niagara Falls. Every grocer who is a member of this organization is a reliable merchant pledged to serve the buying public with the best foodstuffs, fruits, produce and meats that the markets afford and to sell at prices lowered by greatly increased buying power. Our motto is 'quality foodstuffs, lowered prices and prompt service.'

"The N.I.G.A. policy is to save you money. The combined resources of the dependable grocers listed below are affiliated in buying in large quantities which will allow price concessions from the wholesaler. These savings will be passed on to those who patronize grocers who are members of the N.I.G.A. in your neighborhood—it will pay you well to patronize him—He not only serves you well but gives you FREE DELIVERY SERVICE."

With but two exceptions, the original signers of the agreement report increased volume, large profits and smaller stocks

"At the start of course lines were in a hopeless confusion," Mr. Norton stated. "This was solved by advertising a commodity, without naming the brand, at a low price. Excess stocks were taken over by the association and divided among the members at a special sale. This cleared the shelves and enabled them to put in similar lines in all stores. Then the advertising carried the name of the brand in every instance. Today nationally advertised articles dominate.

"The NIGA management has been strict in enforcing the agreement clauses. If a dealer does not stock the advertised line, if he is convicted of substitution, if he runs an untidy store or if he does not make his displays each week, he is summoned before the committee. If he continues to ignore instructions, he is dropped by committee vote. Some seven dealers have dropped out, but been easily replaced by others.

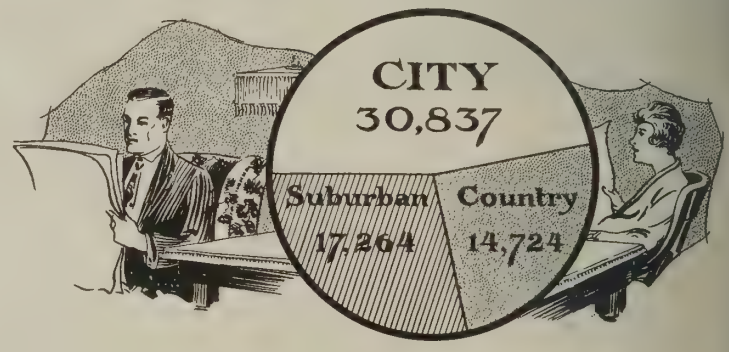
"It is my belief that the success or failure of such an organization rests with the newspaper and the way it handles it. From the start we supplied a man to attend all meetings and advise on business matters. His duties include the preparation of the seven-column copy. Right here I want to emphasize that the newspaper cannot inaugurate this plan and then expect it to run itself. Constant watch must be maintained, and the paper must be able to assist at a moment's notice. If the newspaper has the confidence of the association, the paper can shape the organization's plans and policies so that greatest good will accrue to all—the grocer, jobber, manufacturer, newspaper and public.

"With this plan, the national advertiser is not asked to assist in defraying part or all of the cost of the page advertisement. The grocers pay their own money for that. The association does ask the manufacturer to run advertising apart from the local copy on different pages and on different days than the NIGA advertisement appears. The idea is to educate the housewife so that when the full page appears on Thursday, she will recognize the old friends she has been meeting in her paper during the week.

"Some associations follow the plan of asking the manufacturer to take space in a composite page weekly. Then the names are listed below. This neither accomplishes what the manufacturer wants nor meets chain store competition. Pure price advertising is needed by the stores, and the public must be educated to the merits of the product first before the price appeal can register."

The housewife has been taught the advantages of telephone service, quick delivery, advertised merchandise reliability, and the courtesy of a charge account, yet lower prices. A number of the merchants report largely increased telephone business. The average increase in volume for all the store members is estimated at 25% for the period since last October.

The national advertiser is introduced by the newspaper to the jobbers. Distribution for old and new products has been brought about by the newspaper, the Niga Store committee and the jobbers. For instance, a manufacturer of baking powder who had not touched the state, was brought into the New York market by a 50-case order placed by the group, and now is planning schedules and sampling crews for the entire rest of the state. Strong opposition has arisen from some quarters, especially jobbers in neighboring cities, but so far the plan has worked well. A Niga Dairy at a cost of $25,000 has been formed to supply milk to their stores, bringing the price down from 1(to 10c. The next step may be the acquisition of a jobbing house of its own.



After nine months of close association with the movement, Mr. Norton has this counsel to offer fellow newspaper executives:

"Proceed very cautiously. Do not expect just to roughly outline the pro cedure and then have a local grou execute it. Be prepared to lead and ad vise every step of the way.

"Help sell the idea to the individua store, assist the dealers to sign up, an then be at the secretary's elbow con stantly to counsel and advise. Keep th group from starting with the idea o 'fighting' something. Instead, have then use a policy of better stores, better busi ness methods, better buying plans, an some real advertising. Interest other bi men in the city, such as your banker who should take off his coat and work with you to improve the credit condi tions.

"When the plan is working smoothly, the newspaper should 'tell the world about it every possible way. No manufacturer or agency should be overlooked, for one can never tell when the next new product is coming from. The national representatives should be enlisted. The association should write to its sources of supply. The jobber should write to his manufacturers. The salesman should be welcomed, introduced to the secretary and to the jobber and furnished with route lists.

"If you put your heart into this job, you will place your retail grocer on a higher level and enable him to make money, you will foster good will among your subscribers, you will have larger linage (our total increase is 50,000 lines or 14% for the last nine months, a good bit of it on food advertising) and the national advertiser will express his thanks by 'saying it with schedules,' which is sweet music indeed to every newspaper publisher."

The Only Sunday Newspaper in Jacksonville

THE Florida Times-Union blankets Jacksonville on Sunday, for it is the only Sunday newspaper published here.

Its city circulation on Sunday, according to the latest ABC report, is 30,837 —or one paper to about every 4.5 persons in Jacksonville.

In addition, it has a suburban circulation of 17,264 and a country circulation of 14,724. The total Sunday circulation is more than 63,000 — the largest in Florida.

The possibility of combining Sunday advertising with daily advertising in one dominant medium with complete coverage offers a great advantage which national and local advertisers have recognized. This is just one more reason why the first newspaper on Jacksonville and Florida advertising schedules is—

The Florida Times-Union
JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

ADVERTISING NEW ARM OF BRITISH EMPIRE

World-wide Commerce the Motif of Great Convention and Exhibition of Advertising Association at Olympia—Attendance Includes 2,000 from Great Britain and Many Foreign Delegates

By ALLAN DELAFONS

(London Correspondent of EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

LONDON, July 22.—That lusty infant of organized British business, the Advertising Association, has just concluded a four-day convention at Olympia —its third—with a total registration from Great Britain in excess of 2,000 delegates, including more than 600 women, and representatives from France, Germany, Austria, Holland, Czecho-Slovakia, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, the United States of America, and all the Dominions. The attendance far surpassed the 1924 international convention at Wembley.

Empire marketing was the theme discussed before the general sessions by a number of important speakers but every phase of advertising was covered in the papers delivered by the ninety or more speakers who addressed one or more of the convention's 18 sessions. Five halls were occupied every day. The display of the Empire Marketing Board was the centre of attraction of the British Advertising Exhibition, which, according to Sir Lawrence Weaver, K. B. E., chairman of the exhibition committee, was a co-operative effort on the part of the newspapers, advertising agencies, printers, billposters, and a number of national advertisers, to present to the public a picture of what advertising meant today and to show that advertising was an essential factor in Empire trade. The exhibition ran concurrently with the Empire display week in London and the provinces. It was unofficially stated that a profit of $50,000 was realized on the exhibition.

Speakers who dealt with the problem of empire marketing included the Rt. Hn. L. S. Amery, P. C., M. P.; Rt. Hn. Viscount Burnham, G. C. M. G., C. H., LL. D.; Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Horne, G. B. E., M. P.; Rt. Hon. Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, K. B. E., M. P., Sir Edwin F. Stockton, Major the Hon. J. J. Astor, M. P.; Rt. Hon. W. Ormsby-Gore, M. P.; Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, P. C., M. P.; Sir Herbert Morgan, K. B. E.; Rt. Hon. Sir Alfred Mond, M. P.; and the Rt. Hon. C. A. McCurdy, K. C.

Receptions, balls, parties, a visit to the Royal Apartments at Windsor followed by tea with the Dean, golf, and cricket tournaments, etc., were carried out for the amusement of the delegates.

A great advertising carnival and costume ball at Olympia, specially arranged so that the general public might join in the week's fiesta, was held at Olympia on Friday night.

The Exhibition was organized by the Advertising Association which represents 31 affiliated advertising organizations and clubs and some 20,000 people engaged in advertising throughout Great Britain and Ireland. It was guaranteed eight months ago by the members of the Thirty Club of London.

For the first time in England, a great exhibition was designed and built on architectural lines. The specific character of each exhibitor's business was examined by the architect, Joseph Emberton, A. R. I. B. A., and made to conform to one architectural formula. It was essentially modern in spirit—so "futurist" in fact, that it was almost Egyptian in its composure. It represented the highest point reached by the modern movement in decorative art and, in the opinion of Sir Lawrence Weaver and other authorities, will revolutionize existing ideas of shop façades, decorations, etc.

There were 300 exhibitors, including most of the great newspapers, the Government, printers, advertising agents, photo-engravers, and poster artists at work, publishers, national advertisers, railways, etc.

At the opening general session on Tuesday morning, Rt. Hon. Charles A. McCurdy, president of the Advertising Association, led the speakers, who included Rt. Hon. L. S. Amery, M. P., Secretary of State for the Dominions, Sir Robert Horne, M. P., H. H. Charles, president of the Charles Advertising Service of New York, and Percy C. Burton, a director of the London Press Exchange.

Addressing the newspaper executives' session Ulric B. Walmsley of the London Daily Sketch referred to the activities of the press agent in sending out letters above the signature of well-known persons, and containing "puff" matter of some kind. The news columns of a paper were worth more than the advertisement columns because readers believed in the statements they read therein. Mr. Walmsley suggested a central control board of some kind to prevent those attempts to obtain free publicity.

Sir Basil Clarke, in the discussion that followed Mr. Walmsley's address, pointed out that a good press agent put his name at the top of the copy he sent out as evidence of good faith.

Lieut.-Col. E. F. Lawson, of the London Daily Telegraph, said that provided matter came from a known source and that it was of some news interest, it would be considered by the editor with a view to publication. Press agents, he suggested, should be paid for the work they actually did for their clients, not for the amount of space they obtained.

Holiday rates for advertising were not good business, S. P. Thornett, assistant general manager of the Morning Post, declared. The question, he said, could not be considered solely from the point of view of the advertisement manager. Holiday rates were not a modern growth, but were a modern cultivation from that rank growth—hidden rates. The reduction made by most papers at certain seasons was based on the knowledge that there were periods when advertising was less effective than at other times. Exigencies of make-up, paucity of news when Parliament was up, the Long Vacation at the Law Courts, the policy of making newspapers ever larger, compelled the forcing of advertising, Mr. Thornett claimed, when the demand for space was less than normal, and forced spaces could not be obtained except at reduced rates.

Horace Imber, advertisement director of the London Daily Chronicle, pointed out, with regard to the falling off in advertising on Saturdays, that nowadays most people spent a large percentage of their money on Saturday. They were paid either on Friday evening or Saturday, but did not, as many advertisers thought, spend all their money on Saturday. The sales of chocolates, cigarettes and tobacco where larger on Saturdays than on any other day of the week.

J. A. Whamond Mudie, London representative of the Dundee Evening Telegraph and Post, pointed out that holiday rates were mainly used by London newspapers, not by those in the provinces. Another speaker suggested that holiday rates were bad for the advertiser, for perhaps he was induced by that means to advertise when it was not really a paying proposition for him to do so.

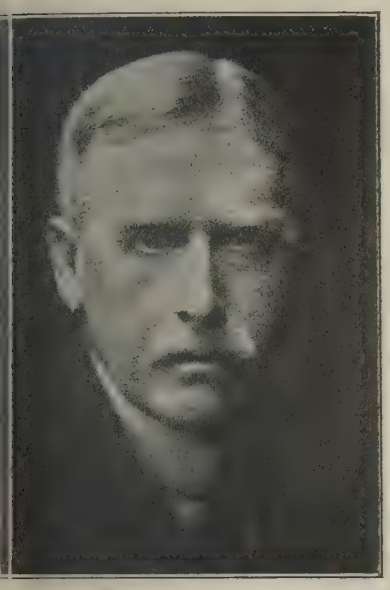
Robert J. Webber, joint managing director of the Cardiff Western Mail, paid tribute publicly to the work of national and international importance being done by advertising agents. The interests of newspapers and advertising agents, he pointed out, lay in co-operation, not antagonism.

The newspaper representative often complained that the advertising agent made it difficult for him to obtain business. The agent, on the other hand, urged that newspaper representatives were a menace, and did not realize that if the agent had anything for them he would send it to the paper's offices. He would suggest that where business was big enough to justify it, the advertising agent should establish a separate space-buying department, and place it in charge of a competent manager, ready at all times to see newspaper representatives. The expenses of such a department would be more than defrayed by reason of the closer co-operation between the agency and the newspapers. Where business was not sufficient to justify such a separate department, Mr. Webber suggested that agents might well spare as much of their time as possible to getting on friendly terms with newspapers and their representatives. Referring to bad debts, Mr. Webber stated that the reason for the failure of agencies was often that commissions had been split, and he urged agents not to accept accounts on too small a commission basis.

Two types of newspaper representatives that the agent was always glad to see, said Philip de G. Benson, president of the Institute of Incorporated Practitioners in Advertising, were the man who had some knowledge of his own newspaper and the man who could inform the agent what space was vacant for the next few days. The recognized agent was not concerned with the production of an individual order for the following day's issue. He was concerned with the maintenance and increase of the available advertising appropriation. The fundamental essential was that advertising should pay the advertiser. As long as the advertiser was thus making a profit he was able to keep on advertising. The press, Mr. Benson urged, should not look upon the agent's commission as a payment for any individual advertisement, but as a specific subsidy to enable the agent to maintain efficient advertising organizations to develop advertising and make it pay.

Speaking at the Opening session Percy C. Burton, a Director of the London Press Exchange, Ltd., dealt with "The Position of the Advertising Agent in Advertising."

"We in the advertising profession," he said, "realize that the agent has long passed from the position of a mere broker or seller of space—a huckster of Advertising wares, yet we realize also that we have not yet fully attained our ultimate aims, namely an acknowledged profession rendering a highly specialized service in a complex commercial field where its authority is unquestioned and its ability accepted as authoritative.



"Ethically, agency practice has progressed a long way from the day when it had no more morals than a counterfeiter or no more conscience than a politician. In spite of all kinds of resistance, self-interest—which after all is the greatest compelling force in all human practice—has forced the modern advertising agency to develop a wide and varied service, combining specialized knowledge in industry, commerce, finance and the professions.

"Advertising, I believe to be in its infancy—one day all the professions will advertise—doctors will advertise the advantages and blessings of health; lawyers will advertise how to avoid lawsuits; architects will advertise the delights of beautifully designed and perfectly equipped homes—and why not? The history of the development of man is the history of the development of advertising, for every good that man possesses, whether it be religious or social or physical welfare, has come to him through the advantages of these things being advertised to him."

Mr. Benson, president of the British Institute of Incorporated Practitioners in Advertising, outlined the aims and objects of that recently formed body.

"Our one and sole object," he said, "is the continued improvement of the service that advertising agents can offer their clients. We frankly believe that the system of service advertising agencies that exists today, working in close operation with the advertiser and his organization, is the best available means by which an advertiser can get the best results from his advertising expenditure and our object in developing the Institute is, by organizing and training, to develop our industry and make it more and more of greater value to the advertiser.

"It is a serious thing that the cost of advertising depends not on its intrinsic value, but on the demand for it and as advertising increases in this country (as it always is bound to increase as trade grows) so will it become more and more difficult to get paying results from an advertising appropriation. Thus will the maintenance and development of this country's trade depend very much on the adequate supply of efficient advertising men and we firmly believe that in this Institute we have the beginning of an organization which will ultimately do its

RT. HON. CHARLES A. McCURDY
Managing Director of the London Daily Chronicle and President of the British Advertising Association.

SIR LAWRENCE WEAVER, K. B. E.
Chairman of the Advertising Exhibition which featured British Advertising Convention.

part in this important development of the nation's industry."

W. H. Harford, a director of Saward Baker & Co. Ltd., and one time general manager of the London Daily Herald, presided over the Press Representation Session on Wednesday. E. M. I. Buxton, a director of Paul E. Derrick, Ltd., read a paper on "How Newspapers Can Increase Their Efficiency as Advertising Media and thus Increase the Amount of Their Press Advertising." Mr. Buxton dwelt on the infrequency of contact between the dictators of newspaper policies and the managers of advertising enterprises, and urged the necessity of newspapers supplying detailed information for the benefit of advertisers concerning their respective markets. Some of the subjects upon which advertisers would be glad to receive information from the local newspapers included:

1. Geographical boundaries of the market represented by the paper's readers.
2. Population distribution within the market covered, parallel with sales figures.
3. Retail and wholesale distributors, listed by trades, in parallel for each sub-division, with certain further analysis indicative of standing and location.
4. Analysis of population by:
(a) Occupations, with unemployment ratios.
(b) Housing—rateable values, new buildings.
(c) Estimated purchasing power.
(d) Numbers and distribution of children.
(e) Distinctive local haunts of life; at work, at recreation, at home, with any tendencies to change.
(f) Characteristics of taste or habit in dress (men, women, children), with tendencies.
(g) Characteristics of taste in homes and home furnishings, with tendencies.
(h) Characteristics in choice of foods and drinks, their purchase, preparation and serving, with tendencies.
(i) Characteristics in feeding, management, and education of children, with tendencies.
(j) Floating, visiting and travelling people —numbers and descriptive material useful from trade standpoints.
(k) Registration (and other details) of motor vehicles over a series of years—cars, cycles and commercial.
(l) Telephones—number of, and tendencies.
(m) Transportation facilities, described in relation to the regular activities of the districts covered, occupational and commercial, with probable changes.
(n) Proportions of their retail buying locally, and of various merchants outside their district, as observed in different lines of merchandise and different population classes, with tendencies.
(o) Purchasing habits as related to branded goods, advertised or unadvertised, with tendencies.
(p) Disposition towards goods of foreign manufacture, classed by countries of origin and by lines, and freely illustrated, with tendencies.
5. What mass influences have produced noted effects on popular choice of goods, with some comparative efficiences—merchants' stocks and recommendations: press, outdoor, postal and other forms of advertising, etc., with tendencies.
6. Data on local merchandising conditions that sales managers can use to advantage from the beginning of an advertising campaign.

Wynne Williams, Nursing Mirror, agreed with Mr. Buxton's advocacy of the zone system of merchandising and with the necessity of market surveys supplied by the newspapers for advertisers and suggested that agents should contribute to the cost of such service. "The Chicago Tribune Book of Facts," Mr. Williams stated, cost $1,250,000, and newspapers in America had found the need of a protective society to protect them from costly demands that were not within the limits of newspaper practice. The protective society laid down a "Standard of Practice" that defined the demands that might justly be made by advertisers from newspapers. W. N. Roberts, Farming, mentioned the thirst for information concerning advertising media on the part of American agents. All progressive advertising agents desired to see representatives, and when this was not the case then their representatives might take it that the days of those agents were numbered.

Lord Burnham, proprietor of the London Daily Teleghaph, spoke at one of the general sessions on July 21.

"It was said in an American newspaper," Lord Burnham said, "that if one tenth of the cost of the European War had been put into well directed publicity and advertising to teach the people of the world that they were brother citizens of the world—the War would never have come.

"This may be in the nature of hyperbole, but it is certain that in common belief today, as shown by the big schemes of advertising that are being undertaken by the states of the world, advertising counts for more than editorial comment in influencing public opinion.

"The churches and conventicles are all agreed as to the benefit of advertising their religious and philanthropic activities and the only question that they are seeking to answer is how to do it best. So it looks as if community advertising would have its proper place in the advertising world. At any rate collective advertising is sure to be developed, but in order to fulfill its purpose it must depend on the co-operation of individual firms and it must be closely related to the actual delivery of the goods, that is to say the general idea must be applied to many lines of business by a large body of constituent traders, by way both of production and distribution.

"The collective advertising creates the right atmosphere or, to vary the metaphor lights up to the ground that is to be occupied, but if it be not followed up by special appeals to the various classes of consumers it will be dissipated in general sympathies.

"In the circle of trade and industry there are four quarters but until recently one was wanting to make the wheel turn easily for the satisfaction of human necessities.

"When, in the past, it was urged that in a special line of goods the market had reached saturation point, it was, as often as not, because no adequate effort had been made to enlarge and to fertilize the area of consumption. The demand was assumed to be fixed and the condition to be static. Instead of that the impulse of publicity might have advanced to boundaries which were largely set up by ignorance and inertia curve upon curve. So when capital, labor and management have made up three quarters of the whole, it still remains for the organization of knowledge which we call advertising, to make up the last quarter, which is essential to the big scale business of our modern world."

"Every church ought to have a publicity department," said the Rev. Benjamin Gregory, editor of the Methodist Times, at the church advertising session.

"While I would not exclude the parson from service in the department," he went on, "it should be in the hands of a practised expert.

"The business man who wants to place his goods does not rely on the amateur. Why should the church, which has to put over the greatest of all goods, be content with the work of a man who has neither wide experience nor marked capacity?

"There still exists in this country a deep-rooted objection to church publicity. America has given us a long lead. If you are seeking a guide book to church advertising. you have to go to an American writer and publisher."

At the session organized by the Incorporated Sales Managers' Association, Lord Eustace Percy, president of the Board of Education, spoke on the importance of education to commerce and industry.

Viscount Leverhulme, who presided, described advertising as a form of education. Education, the press and advertising, represented a great triple partnership.

Percy S. Brown. deputy director of the International Business Institute of Geneva, also spoke on the scientific approach to the problem of distribution.

Edward A. Filene, of William Filene's Sons Company, Boston, Mass., addressing the Incorporated Sales Managers' Association took as his subject "More Advertising, More Sales, More Exports."

Mr. Filene began by stating that the war had ended the day of individualism and created a co-operative world, in which mass production and mass distribution alone can assure future permanent prosperity, bringing lower prices to the public, more buying power in wages, better total profits. Advertising, alw provided it is both honest and scient will play a great part in this deve ment, and he believes the future lies v the big advertisers.

In retail distribution he saw the sm retailer being rapidly eliminated by chain or multiple shops, either produc themselves or buying direct from producer, and the same problem is fac the wholesale middleman. The mult shop system brings to each branch, h ever small, all the advantages of pow ful buying and highly skilled organ tion, as well as the benefits of large s advertising at the minimum percent cost. But Mr. Filene looks ahead two further stages—the first (alread evidence) the development of chain partment stores, and the second, an u mate system of a series of departm stores in all leading towns, having each their departments linked up and adm istered as a chain within the main grou for instance all the shoe departments ing controlled by a manager equal in al ty to the manager of any chain of sin purpose shoe shops, etc., etc.

Mr. Filene believed that the scale fixed price articles, on the lines of Wo worth's stores, must inevitably increa and that 85 per cent of many retail tu overs can be economically dealt with three grades of price. He believes t individual retailers can only save th position by combining as a chain of dividual units under private owners with central purchasing machinery which the existing wholesalers can fo the nucleus, but that success would pend upon the efficiency being really eq to that of the big department stores.

E. C. Austen-Leigh, vice-president the Federation of Master Printers the United Kingdom, presided at luncheon given by the Federation Olympia on Wednesday prior to Printers' Session. The guests inclu the Earl Beauchamp, Lord Askwith St. Ives, Sir Edgar Jones, J. C. Ack man, of the London Times, J. S. El of Odhams Press, Ltd., proprietors John Bull, etc., J. S. King, president the British Newspaper Society, Sir W liam S. Crawford, of Crawford's A vertising Agency, and others. Many ot well-known men in the printing wo including W. H. Lock, of Linotype Machinery, Ltd., A. E. Owen-Jon editor of the Caxton Magazine, w noticed among the large gathering.

The artistic development of the adv tising poster during recent years was theme of several speeches, made at annual dinner of the British Poster A vertising Association, held at the H born Restaurant, on Tuesday. Isle Ro ley, the new president of the Associati was in the chair.

The Dean of Windsor toasting association said that posters had ad new characters to our lives, which become as familiar as some of those vented by great novelists. In a refere to illuminated sky signs the Dean said knew he would be told he was very v gar, but he loved them.

Sir Harry Brittain, M. P., who a spoke in support of the toast, while mitting that the standard of our Pos Advertisements was improving, said had still something to learn from It and France, and even Norway. He plored the fact that beautiful post were so often seen on extraordina ugly hoardings.

Mrs. Ethel M. Wood presided at well-attended women's session on same day, when "The Working of E nomic Laws in Relation to the Empl ment of Women" was the leading qu tion, from which the speakers, all w known, took sub-divisions and spoke "Production as the Basis of Prosper (Miss Grier), "Population and Econo Wealth" (Hugh Quigley).

Thursday, July 21, was occupied chie by sessions dealing with home and ov seas markets with reference to marketing of Empire-produced goo Also on Thursday were held the Busine Research Session, when Shaun P. O Connor, chairman of the Business R search and Management Association

(Continued on page 14)

REVISIT SCENES OF 1924 AD TOUR

Thomas McDougall, London representative of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, and Harry H. Charles, special representative of the I. A. A. and the Advertising Club of New York, at the entrance to the famous York Minster containing the tablet erected by the Advertising Club of New York in July, 1924.

1,823,292

Daily Mail

NET DAILY SALE

The Largest in the World

7th July, 1927.

WE CERTIFY that the average Net Daily Sale of The Daily Mail, after deducting all unsold and free copies whatsoever for each of the six months ended 30th June, 1927, was as follows:—

January	1,725,094
February	1,747,379
March	1,750,280
April	1,776,621
May	1,784,419
June	1,823,292

Graybar Building
420 Lexington Avenue
New York City, U. S. A.
London—Manchester—Paris

(Signed) LEVER, HONEYMAN & CO.
Chartered Accountants.

(Signed) E. LAYTON BENNETT, SONS & CO.
Chartered Accountants.

838,088

The Evening News

NET DAILY SALE

7th July, 1927.

WE CERTIFY that the average Net Daily Sale of "The Evening News" after deducting all unsold and free copies whatsoever, for each of the six months ended 30th June, 1927, was as follows:—

January	656,543	April	776,479
February	677,708	May	802,957
March	731,094	June	838,088

Graybar Building
420 Lexington Avenue
New York City, U. S. A.

(Signed) LEVER, HONEYMAN & CO.
Chartered Accountants.

(Signed) E. LAYTON BENNETT, SONS & CO.
Chartered Accountants.

ADVERTISING NEW ARM OF BRITISH EMPIRE

(Continued from page 12)

Great Britain, presided, and "Management and Research as an Aid to Development" (W. A. Cooke, managing director of Faudels, Ltd.), "Research Applied to Merchandising" (John C. Kirkwood, of the Business, Research and Management Association of Great Britain), and "Research Applied to Advertising" (H. G. Lyall, director of the London Research Bureau).

At the Club Executives' session, Roy Hardy, chairman of the Publicity Club of London, gave his views as to "Why Every Town Should Have a Publicity Club."

D. C. Cuthbertson, a past president of the Publicity Club of Glasgow, described the valuable contributions publicity clubs could make both to the national work of the Advertising Association, and to local advertising and general interests.

W. H. Harford, vice-president of the Fleet Street and Advertising Club, told the session "How to Get the Right Audience and the Right Speakers."

Seven leading points in direct mail advertising were also discussed on July 21, these being "The Preparation and Development of Good Lists" (Harry Pickup, Harpic Manufacturing Co., Ltd., London), "Direct Mail and the Point of Contact with the Purchaser" (E. J. Burrow, of the firm of publishers and printers of that name), "What Percentage of Postal Publicity Is Read?" (Max Rittenberg, London), "The Manufacturer's Point of View, in Direct Mail Advertising" (C. Murray de Launay, Spillers Milling and Associated Industries, Ltd., London), "Some Users and Wasters of Direct Mail Advertising" (Arthur Chadwick, Amalgamated Publicity Service, Ltd., London), "Direct Mail Advertising from the Point of View of the National Advertiser" by E. W. Eley, of the Dunlop Rubber Company.

The press was well represented at the exhibition. National and leading provincial newspapers were there in force, and the trade and periodical press also had a good show. Among individual displays that arrested attention was the stand of the Daily Telegraph, where among other interesting exhibits was a miniature facsimile of a recent issue of the paper, copies of which were being presented to visitors, a large photograph, occupying one wall of the stand, and depicting a crowd containing 3,155 people, which number advertised in the paper on May 19 last year. On this stand, above each of the two doorways, was a large clock, a useful feature in an exhibition that seemed singularly devoid of clocks.

The British Newspaper Society stand demonstrated the manner in which the provincial press meets the requirements of advertising campaigns, either in particular districts or on a national basis. A large scale map of the territories through which the journal circulates was an appropriate exhibit on the stand of East Africa (London weekly paper). A selection of the paper's files, and a miniature reproduction of an historic issue of the London Morning Post, of 1776, were attractions on the stand of that newspaper. The British Periodical, Trade Press and Weekly Newspaper Proprietors' Association stand carried a number of the journals published by its members.

"The Sowers" was the thought-provoking emblem prominently displayed on the stand of The Daily Dispatch and Evening Chronicle of Manchester. The Religious Tract Society showed some of its publications, as did the Studio Publications, Ltd., prominent amongst the organs of the latter firm being Commercial Art.

Models of rotary presses, and a small section of the firm's mechanical typesetting installation, including an Intertype machine in operation, were principal features on the interesting stand of St. Clements Press, Ltd. Copies of the Belfast Telegraph and allied papers, as shown on the stand of that paper, were held by a huge crimson hand, inscribed "the 'read' hand of Ulster." (A red hand figures in the civic coat-of-arms of Ulster.)

On the Liverpool Daily Post stand was a working demonstration of the Murray Multiplex telegraph system, as used by that paper. Odhams Press, Ltd., occupied a large space with its many publications. The Amalgamated Press, Ltd., had on view its 61 publications. A duplicate installation of the Creed telegraphic apparatus, which links London and the recently opened Manchester offices of the Daily Express was in operation on that paper's stand, where the Evening Standard and the Sunday Express were also exhibiting.

Examples of early engravings as they appeared in the paper more than 100 years ago were shown by the Observer. Advertisements in earlier issues were compared in interesting fashion with those of the present on the Punch stand.

Among attractive features on the stands of the Daily News and the Star were reproductions of advertisements inserted in these papers. The Times stand was a handsome structure, exceptionally large photographs, produced by the paper's staff, occupying the outer walls. A practical demonstration of the production of a newspaper illustration was staged on the stand of Associated Newspapers, Ltd., photographs taken in the exhibition being made into half-tone blocks for the edification of visitors. There was also a working model of the Igranic newspaper conveyor. An interior of a steel works, and specimens of rustless steel products were appropriately displayed on the stand of the Sheffield Daily Telegraph and allied journals.

A tableau of a portion of the city and a population map of the paper's territory were shown on the North Mail and Newcastle Daily Chronicle stand. The story of an advertisement, "From Pulp to Purchaser," was cleverly demonstrated on the Daily Chronicle stands, a linotype machine setting display advertisements being a feature. There was also a Central News high-speed tape-machine in operation on this stand.

Exceptionally well-planned was the combined exhibit of the British Railways, which included a miniature railway made exactly to scale.

The eight stands of Illustrated Newspapers, Ltd., were grouped together with central connecting vaulted passageway. An enlarged front page, models of famous Continental trains built at Leeds, etc., were shown by the Yorksh Evening News.

"The News of the World" featured huge circulation, with models of premises, a miniature pile of pulp wo etc.

Sells Complete Advertising Serv exhibited many samples of success campaigns. A tableau of the launchi of a ship was presented by the Glasg Evening News and allied publications.

Current Stock Exchange quotatio were recorded on the Financial Ne stand from hour to hour.

Universal Postal Frankers, Ltd., d monstrated their postal franking m chines, which are being increasingly us by the large newspapers. The Unde wood portable typewriters stand was particular interest to journalists. clever optical illusion was utilized by t Sunday Herald and Sunday Graphic show more than a million families rea ing the paper.

The layout, composition from th frame, and printing of advertisement was demonstrated by young maste printer students attending the Londo School of Printing. Monotype keyboard and casters were in operation on th stand of the Lanston Monotype Cor poration, Ltd.

Other attractive displays had bee staged by the Temple Press, Ltd., Blu Peter Publishing Co., Ltd., the Universa the Manchester Guardian, National Trad Press, Iliffe & Sons, Ltd., Industria Newspapers, Ltd., the Financial Times the Liverpool Daily Courier, the Sunda News, Sunday Pictorial Newspapers, C Arthur Pearson, Ltd., Pantone Processes Ltd., the Empire News, the Yorkshir Post, the Financial News (with a me chanically operated life-size figure of page boy, handing out leaflets), the Daily Mirror, Benn Bros., Ltd., Business Publications, Ltd., (the Advertiser's Weekly), the Religious Newspapers Advertising Committee, George Newnes Ltd., the Daily Herald, Long Acre Press Ltd., Printed Salesmanship (U. S. A.) Reynold's Illustrated News, George Outram & Co., Ltd., the Christian Herald, the Starmer Group, Hazel Watson & Viney, Ltd., (with the latest Miehle color press in operation), Ashtead Potters, Ltd.

(Continued on page 16)

A WORLD VISION FOR AMERICAN ADVERTISERS

We welcome enquiries from American manufacturers contemplating opening up in the English market or in the British overseas dominions and all foreign countries.

Research information as to marketing conditions, trade customs, etc., supplied as a preliminary to press and other advertising for all parts of the world.

Let us know your problem and we will show you how we will tackle it—simply, lucidly, effectively.

G. STREET & CO., LTD.

6 Gracechurch Street, E.C.3
8 Scale Street, W.E.

LONDON, ENGLAND

LONDON
AND Greater London

BRITISH ISLES (Provincial)

All the British Overseas Dominions

The Continent of Europe

INDIA

We have an exceptional knowledge of this great and complicated market.

DUTCH EAST INDIES

MALAYA

etc., etc., etc.

The Daily Mirror'

INCREASING BUSINESS

FROM ALL TRADES

More and more advertising comes to the 'Daily Mirror' from all trades. 964 pages in the first half of 1926; 1239 pages in the corresponding period of this year! Just glance at these remarkable figures under their various classifications. They show a substantial increase in every case, except one. They unmistakably show something else, too; that the 'Daily Mirror' can be relied upon to bring gratifying results and to sell every kind of commodity and service. Notice, also, the biggest increases are among the 'luxury' class—Financial; Wines and Tobacco; Household; Drapery. This proves the readers of the 'Daily Mirror' have ample means for the 'good things of life'; for all the necessities and luxuries essential to families whose standard of living, and whose homes, are far above the average. There are still plenty of comfortably-situated people in Great Britain and they are the readers of the 'Daily Mirror'. Every American Product which has attained success in Great Britain uses the 'Daily Mirror' which has made many names, famous in America, 'household words' over here. There is no waste in the 'Daily Mirror.' Every member of the million or more better-class families who read it each day is not a 'probable' but a certain buyer of your goods.

FOR ALL TRADES

'DAILY MIRROR' VOLUME OF ADVERTISING

	FIRST PART OF 1926		1927
	Pages	Inches	Pages	Inches
Drapery	141	7	176	17
Household	86	31	127	13
Foods	215	33	236	41
Wines and Tobaccos	63	41	104	2
Toilet	122	19	156	38
Patent Medicines	123	11	182	5
Publishers	33	53	21	46
Theatres	36	16	45	40
Travel	6	42	13	18
Miscellaneous	93	32	98	14
Garden	4	..	4	6
Financial	25	52	54	53
Motoring	11	35	18	10
Total	964	48	1239	33

NOTE THIS POINT !

The volume of financial Advertising has doubled in the period. People with money to invest have plenty to spend on everyday things. Let them spend it on your goods!

The Daily Mirror'

THE DAILY PICTURE NEWSPAPER WITH THE LARGEST NET SALE.

Full particulars, specimen copy and rates from Mr. S. A. Willmott, Advertisement Manager, 'The Daily Mirror,' Geraldine House, Rolls Buildings, Fetter Lane, London, E.C.4.

ADVERTISING NEW ARM OF BRITISH EMPIRE

(Continued from page 14)

(ex-Service men who specialize in advertising novelties in pottery, Addressall Machine Company, Ltd., the Sydney Morning Herald, the People (with revolving colored illuminated pillars at the stand entrance), the Sunday Chronicle, Printers' Pension Corporation (photos of almshouse, etc.), the Sunday Times, Lorilleux & Bolton (printing ink and varnish makers), the Canadian Pacific Railway, etc.

McCURDY AND STONIER NEW I. A. A. OFFICERS

Retiring President of British Group, a Newspaper Publisher, and New Pacific Chief Appointed Vice-Presidents

Rt. Hon. C. A. McCurdy, K. C., publisher of the Daily Chronicle of London, England, and Harold J. Stonier, vice-president of the University of Southern California, Los Angeles, have been honored by the International Advertising Association. Acting under authority of the constitution, the executive committee of the association appointed Mr. McCurdy to become honorary international vice-president, and Mr. Stonier, chairman of the Twelfth District of the International Advertising Association, to a vice-presidency.

News of Mr. McCurdy's appointment was borne personally by H. H. Charles of the Advertising Club of New York, who appeared before the convention just closed at Olympia of the Advertising Association of Great Britain, the presidency of which was held by Mr. McCurdy during the last year. He is the managing director of the United Newspapers, Ltd., and a member of the Thirty Club of London.

Mr. Stonier is the retiring president of the Los Angeles Advertising Club and the new president of the Pacific Advertising Association.

Cabling from England, Mr. Charles informed President Gilbert T. Hodges of the New York Club that the Olympia convention was a "tremendous success," with 2,000 registrations. Certificates of honorary membership in the Advertising Club of New York were presented by Mr. Charles to Sir William Crawford, Sir Charles Higham and Thomas McDougall.

I. A. A. SETS 1928 DATES

Detroit Advertising Convention to Be Held July 8-12, Pearson States

Dates for the 1928 convention of the International Advertising Association, to be held in Detroit, were set for July 8-12 at a meeting between representatives of the Adcraft Club of Detroit and the I. A. A. meeting in the club's city last week.

Tentative plans for the convention were discussed at the meeting, which was attended for the I. A. A. by C. K. Woodbridge, president, and Earle Pearson, general manager.

Mr. Pearson this week said that a plan drawn up for raising the $50,000 needed to carry on the association's expansion plans will be presented to the executive committee, which is scheduled to meet in Detroit Sept. 1. At the same executive meeting plans for the possible publication of an association house organ will be discussed, he said.

INTERNATIONAL FORMS BRANCH

The International Paper Company of Newfoundland, Ltd., was incorporated in St. Johns Aug. 1 with a capital of $25,000,000. A. R. Graustein, president of the International Paper Company of New York, said the subsidiary had been formed to take over the Corner Brook Paper Mills.

BRITISH JOURNALISTS TO VISIT CANADA

Group of 100 Will Arrive in Quebec Aug. 12, Under Leadership of John S. King, President of English Newspaper Society

A group of 100 British newspaper men will arrive in Quebec Aug. 12 for a month's tour of Canada. The itinerary, which was announced this week, provides that they will visit practically every corner of the Dominion, with opportunities to study at first hand Canada's natural resources and investment possibilities.

It is the expressed desire of the party to meet representative Canadian business and financial men throughout the country, with a view to extending their knowledge of general conditions and the dissemination of this knowledge throughout the British Isles.

Under the leadership of John S. King, president of the English Newspaper Society, the party will be the most distinguished newspaper group to visit Canada since the Imperial Conference in 1920.

It will include Sir Richard Winfrey of the Peterborough Advertiser; Isaac Edwards, of the Bolton Evening News; E. M. Davies, Swansea Daily Post; John Buchan, Dundee Courier and Advertiser; T. T. Stanley, Birmingham Gazette, and R. V. H. Taylor, of the Bristol Times.

From Quebec the party will travel by special train to Fredericton, St. John and St. Andrews, N. B., thence through to the Pacific Coast, via Montreal, August 17th; Ottawa, August 18; Winnipeg, August 20; Saskatoon, August 22; Edmonton, August 23; and Vancouver, August 28.

They will return to the East via the main line of the Canadian Pacific, and arrangements have been made to the end that wherever the train stops the party will be greeted by provincial and civic officials and by prominent newspaper and business men.

At High River, August 24, they will be received by the Prince of Wales on E. P. Ranch and at Rideau Hall, earlier, in the trip, by Viscount and Viscountess Willingdon.

The party will leave Montreal for return to Liverpool on September 9.

CARR SUCCEEDS LINDSAY

Sells Interest in Agency to Rejoin St. Petersburg Times as Manager

By a change in ownership and management of the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times, C. C. Carr, former general manager, succeeded David B. Lindsay in that capacity this week.

Paul Poynter, president of the company, will continue as such. Mr. Carr has sold his interest in the Lesan-Carr Advertising Agency to his partner, H. E. Lesan and his other Florida associates. Noble T. Praigg, who has been production manager of the agency, will be manager of the Florida office in St. Petersburg.

Mr. Lindsay, in retiring as general manager of the Times, sold his stock interest in the company. He is acting manager of the Clearwater Lumber Company and is also active in the management of the Sarasota Herald, and a stockholder in the Marion (Ind.) Chronicle.

The only change in personnel announced by the Times, other than the changes involved in the investment by Mr. Carr in the Times Publishing Company, was the appointment of Nelson P. Poynter as assistant general manager.

Nelson Poynter has had extensive experience in his father's newspapers in Indiana, has done free lance newspaper writing for the Indianapolis Star, N. E. A. Service, and has been on the staff of the Washington (D. C.) News and the Japan Times, an English language newspaper published in Tokyo. While a student at Indiana University he was editor of the Indiana Daily Student. He recently took his M. A. degree at Yale.

INDUSTRIAL NEWSPAPERS LIMITED

WEEKLY—

Iron and Coal Trade Review
Textile Mercury
Foundry Trade Journal
Coal Merchant and Shipper

MONTHLY—

Advertising World
Tobacco

YEAR BOOKS, Etc.—

Ryland's Directory
Cotton Year Book
Tobacco Year Book
Wool Year Book
Directory of the Tobacco Trade

Throughout the United Kingdom each of these publications is recognized as a leading authority in the industry it serves

Specimen copies and advertisement rate cards sent on request

INDUSTRIAL NEWSPAPERS LIMITED
49 Wellington Street, Strand
London, W.C. 2

Can you afford to be left behind when other papers are giving their readers

January 1 60 papers

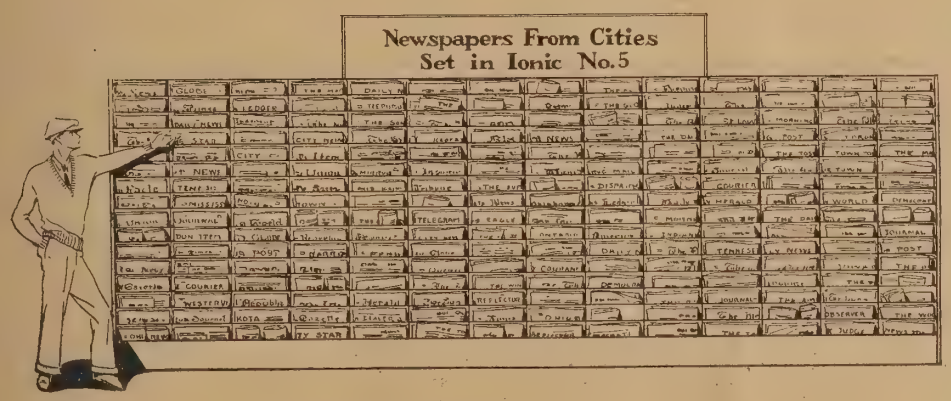
Ionic No. 5



The Type That Is Kind to the Eyes

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

March 1 125 papers

IONIC No. 5 is rapidly becoming the universally used face for newspaper body matter and classified advertising because it is so outstandingly the best thing for the purpose. It gives a higher word count than any other face of comparable size; it is so clear and legible that readers notice the difference at once; it stands up under any stereotyping and printing condition. If you are not using it in your paper now, you will be eventually. Why not cash in on it while it is still new?

May 1 260 papers

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

Brooklyn, New York

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS
CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

August 1 448 papers

List of users on following pages

Linotyped in the Garamond Family

ALABAMA
Anniston Star

ARIZONA
Douglas Dispatch
Glendale North Side News
Nogales Herald
Phoenix Gazette

ARKANSAS
Ashdown Little River News
Benton Courier
Little Rock Baseball News
Little Rock Arkansas Farmer
Little Rock Arkansas Gazette
Little Rock News
Mena Star
Paragould Daily Press
Paragould Tri-Weekly Soliphone
Pine Bluff Commercial
Rogers Daily Post
Siloam Springs Register

CALIFORNIA
Anaheim Bulletin
Burbank Tribune
Compton High School
Crescent City Triplicate Publishing Company
Fillmore Herald
Jackson Dispatch
Hemet News
Hollywood High School
Lemoore Advance
Lompoc Valley Sentinel
Los Angeles Times
Mayfield Palo Alto News
Mojave Record
Monterey Herald
Napa Register
Oroville Mercury
Oroville Register
Pacific Linotyping Co., Fresno
Pittsburg Post
Placerville Republican
Red Bluff Times
Riverside Enterprise
Sacramento Union
San Diego Evening Tribune
San Diego Union
San Francisco Daily News Co.
San Jose Mercury-Herald
San Pedro Pilot
San Jose News
San Juan Mission News
Santa Ana Enterprise
Santa Cruz Sentinel
Selma Enterprise
Tujunga Herald
Tulare Advance-Register
Watsonville Pajaronian
Wilmington Twin Harbor Press
Whittier News
Yreka News

COLORADO
Denver News
Denver Rocky Mountain News
Florence Paradox Publishing Co.
Greeley Weld County News

CONNECTICUT
Bridgeport Post Publishing Co.
Hartford Courant
Hartford Times
New Haven Register
New Haven Union
New London Day
Torrington Register
Waterbury Republican & American

DELAWARE
Wilmington Every Evening
Wilmington Journal
Wilmington News

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Washington Labor
Washington National Tribune
Washington Post

FLORIDA
Florida Times-Union
Pensacola Journal
Pensacola News
Tallahassee Florida State News
Tampa Tribune

GEORGIA
Atlanta Daily Report
Carrollton Carroll County Times
Kingsland Southeast Georgian
Macon News
Montezuma Georgian
Tallapoosa Journal

IDAHO
Arco Advertiser
Pocatello Tribune
Rupert News Company
Twin Falls News

ILLINOIS
Belleville Advocate
Belleville News Democrat
Chicago Daily News
Chicago Journal of Commerce
Decatur Review Publishing Company
Harrison Tech. High School, Chicago
Havana Democrat
Hoopeston Aldrich Printing & Publishing Company
La Salle Post
Metropolis News Publishing Co.
Peoria Star
Pittsfield Democrat
Quincy Herald-Whig

INDIANA
Brownstown Banner
Evansville Courier
Evansville Journal
Goshen News
Indianapolis Times
Indianapolis Tribune
Jasper Herald
Michigan City Dispatch
Muncie Press
Rockville Tribune
South Bend News-Times
South Bend Tribune
Valparaiso Vidette
Wabash Citizen

IOWA
Bayard News
Eagle Grove Eagle
Glenwood Opinion
Griswold American
Manchester Press
Monticello Express
North Guthrie News
Sheldon Sun
Sioux City Tribune Company
Storm Lake Pilot-Tribune
Waterloo Courier
Waterloo Tribune
West Union Union

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

NO

Ioni

KANSAS
Dighton Herald
Garden City Telegram
Geneseo Journal
Great Bend Tribune Publishing Co.
Herington Sun
Hiawatha World
Iola Daily News
Lewis Press
Mankato Western Advocate
Marysville Advocate Democrat
Meade Globe News
Pittsburg Headlight
Topeka State Journal
Wichita Eagle
Winfield Courier Free Press

KENTUCKY
Augusta Bracken Chronicle
Lexington Leader
Paducah News-Democrat
Prestonsburg Floyd County Times
Somerset Journal
Walton Advertiser

LOUISIANA
Homer Guardian-Journal
Jena Times
Lafayette Advertiser-Gazette
Leesville Vernon Parish Democrat
Llano Colonist
New Orleans Christian Advocate
New Orleans Item-News
New Orleans Tribune
Shreveport Times

MAINE
Portland Press Herald

MARYLAND
Baltimore Afro-American

MASSACHUSETTS
Boston Herald Traveler
Everett Herald & Republican
Haverhill Gazette
Haverhill Sunday Record
Lynn Item
Middleboro Gazette
New Bedford Standard & Mercury
New Bedford Times
Newton Progress
Northfield Press
Salem Evening News
Worcester Post

MICHIGAN
Alpena News Publishing Company
Capac Journal
Coldwater Reporter
Detroit Inland Press
Detroit Ecorse Tribune
Detroit Evening News Association
Frankenmuth News

MICHIGAN—Continued
Holland Sentinel
Ionia Standard
Jackson Square Deal
Lincoln Park News
Niles Daily Star
Royal Oak Outlook Publishi
Suttons Bay Courier

MINNESOTA
Alexander Park Region Publ Company
Appleton Press
Austin Herald
Centralia Courier
Duluth Herald
Fosston, A. W. Foss
Perkins-Tracy Printing Co.
Two Harbors Chronicle

MISSISSIPPI
Hernando De Soto County De crat
Holly Springs South Reporte
Jackson News
Ruleville Drew Leader
McComb Journal
Meridian Star
Ruleville Record
Yazoo City Sentinel

MISSOURI
Billings Times
Butler Weekly Times
Cassville Democrat
Jefferson City Tribune Printi
Kansas City Call
Kansas City Post
Kansas City Star
Richmond Missourian
Salisbury Press Spectator
Springfield Leader
St. Louis Star
St. Louis Von Hoffman Press

MONTANA
Anaconda Standard
Belgrade Journal
Billings Gazette
Columbus News-Democrat
Glasgow Courier
Great Falls Tribune
Great Falls Montana Newspap Association
Madison County Forum, Sherid
Miles City Star

NEBRASKA
Fremont Tribune
Grand Island Independent
Lincoln Star Publishing Compa
St. Paul Herold
Weeping Water Republican

Linotyped in 7 Point Ionic No. 5 with Bold Face No. 2

NG TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

NO.5

ette

REY

d Interboro Review
Citizen and Chronicle
n Jerseyman
ening News
nday Call ws Publishing Company
unday Times Advertiser tate Gazette
imes
n Star

CO

alley News
ogress Builder

K

ening News
mes
Advertiser Express ily Star zette-News
d City Star
City Bronx Home News
Evening Post
Herald Tribune
City Swedish North Star
Telegram
Evening World
World
g Republican-Journal
Union Gazette
Times-Union
enter Nassau Daily

ly Union Star s Press
nd Staten Islander
erald
ost Standard
gara County Herald
erald

ROLINA

imes
Daily Reflector
urier
ost

KOTA

Independent ss
ners Press
ald

on-Journal
Star-Beacon

OHIO—Continued

Athens Messenger Herald Publishing Company
Canfield Mahoning Dispatch
Canton Repository Printing Co.
Chillicothe Scioto Gazette
Cincinnati Billboard
Cincinnati Post
Cincinnati Times Star
Cleveland Central Press
Cleveland Leader-News
Cleveland Press
Cleveland Typographical Union
Columbus Dispatch
Dayton Herald
Dayton Journal
Dover Reporter
Georgetown News-Democrat
Lorain Times-Herald
Massillon Independent
Piqua Call Press Dispatch
Sandusky Journal
Sandusky Register
Toledo Daily Times
Youngstown Vindicator
Zanesville Times Recorder

OKLAHOMA

Altus Plain Dealer
Altus Times Democrat
Antlers American
Blackwell Commercial Press
Blackwell News
Blackwell Tribune
Mounds O. K. Poultry Journal
Muskogee Trench 90
Newkirk Democrat
Oklahoma City News
Sand Springs Pointer
Shawnee Morning News

OREGON

Baker Record
Brownsville Times
Forest Grove News-Times
Hillsboro Independent
Hood River News
Forest Grove News-Times
Joseph Herald
Portland Journal
Salem Capital Journal
Silver Lake Leader
Sutherlin Sun
Tillamook Herald

PENNSYLVANIA

Bellefonte Center Democrat
Belle Vernon Enterprise
Brookville American
Clairton Progress
Erie Dispatch-Herald

PENNSYLVANIA—Continued

Farrell Sentinel
Girardville News
Lancaster Intelligencer
New Castle News
Philadelphia (Germantown) Independent Gazette
Philadelphia Record
Pittsburgh Press
Portage Dispatch
Quakertown Free Press
Scranton Sun
Selinsgrove Times
Sunbury Daily Publishing Co.
Waynesboro Record Herald
Williamsport Grit Publishing Co.

RHODE ISLAND

Providence Journal
Woonsocket Evening Call

SOUTH CAROLINA

Anderson Independent
Florence News-Review
Greenville Daily News
Greenville Piedmont
Greer Citizen
Yorkville Inquirer

SOUTH DAKOTA

Belle Fourche Northwest Post
Parker New Era

TENNESSEE

Chattanooga Cardin Almanac
Chattanooga Fashion Book
Chattanooga Medicine Company
Chattanooga News
Chattanooga Selling Hints
Knoxville Journal and Tribune
McMinnville Southern Standard
Memphis Press-Scimitar
Murfreesboro News-Banner
Waverly Democrat Sentinel

TEXAS

Abilene Morning News
Abilene Reporter
Abilene Sunday Morning Reporter-News
Arlington Journal
Amarillo Sun
Brownwood Banner Bulletin
Canyon News
Denton Record-Chronicle
Edinburg Review
El Paso Post
Forney Messenger
Greenville Banner
Houston "El Tecolote"
Houston Press
Perryton Herald
Rosenberg Fort Bend Reporter
Weatherford Herald

UTAH

Ogden Standard-Examiner
Park City Park Record
St. George Washington County News

VERMONT

Bennington Banner
Brattleboro Reformer
Burlington Free Press

VIRGINIA

Bedford Democrat
Culpeper Virginia Star

VIRGINIA—Continued

Danville Register
Fredericksburg Free Lance-Star
Norfolk Journal & Guide
Norfolk Virginian-Pilot
Roanoke Times
Roanoke World-News

WASHINGTON

Aberdeen World
Bellingham Herald
Centralia Chronicle
Colfax Commoner
Colville Statesman-Index
Ellensburg Record Press
Omak Chronicle
U. S. S. "New Mexico"
Yakima Daily Republic
Yakima Farm News

WEST VIRGINIA

Charleston Gazette
Oak Hill Fayette Republican
Parkersburg News

WISCONSIN

Milwaukee Journal
Oshkosh Hicks Printing Company
Racine Capital Times
Whitehall Times

WYOMING

Big Piney Examiner
Lander Evening Post
Sheridan Journal
Wheatland, Walter E. Patterson

BRITISH COLUMBIA

Abbotsford News
Granbrook Courier
Greenwood Ledger
Prince Rupert News
Observer Printing & Publishing Co., Salmon Arms
Victoria Daily Colonist
Victoria Times

MANITOBA

Winnipeg Free Press

NOVA SCOTIA

Liverpool Advance

ONTARIO

Belleville Intelligencer
Brantford Expositor
Brookville Recorder and Times
Cornwall Standard
Gananoque Reporter-Journal
Kingston House of Providence
Kingston Jackson Press
Kitchener News-Record
London Free Press
Napanee Express
Orangeville Sun
Ottawa Citizen
Peterborough Examiner Limited
Russell Leader
Toronto Globe
Toronto Mail & Empire
Toronto Telegram
Toronto Star
Welland Tribune & Telegraph

QUEBEC

Drummondville, La Parole Limitee

HAWAII

Honolulu Advertiser
Honolulu Star-Bulletin
Kamehameha Schools, Honolulu

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

Ionic No. 5

THE READABLE TYPE

6½ Point

The British delegation of trade-union representatives, who came here on Tuesday at the invitation of "The London Daily Mail" to study reasons for the disparity between the high wages and prosperous living conditions of the American worker and their own lower wage standards, gained considerable light in a tour of several industrial establishments in Brooklyn yesterday.

They were curious to know how it was that the average wage of the American toiler virtually doubled that of his British brother, and how it was possible for industries here to offer such fat envelopes to their employees and at the same time compete successfully in world markets.

American More Productive

After a study of the Brooklyn Edison plant and the factory methods of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company in Brooklyn, the delegates remarked that one of the vital reasons for the disparity was that the American worker was capable of producing and actually did produce more than the British toiler in a given time.

This he was enabled to do, they learned, because of the high standards of efficiency obtaining here, mass production methods, the utter perfection of organization for which the American industrialist seems always to be striving, and labor-saving devices evident on every hand.

The comments of the delegates were voiced by Sir Percival Phillips, special correspondent of "The Daily Mail," Fenton MacPherson, of the same newspaper, and William Mosses, J. P., who had a prominent part in the British Labor Ministry during the war.

Mr. MacPherson also noted that the welfare facilities offered by the American plant were much more elaborate than in England and that equipment and quarters were more beneficial. This was evidently the result, he observed, of the frequent scrapping of plants here to make way for expansion and develop-

7 Point Body
Will average 1238 words to a 21-inch column

6¾ Point

The British delegation of tradé-union representatives, who came here on Tuesday at the invitation of "The London Daily Mail" to study reasons for the disparity between the high wages and prosperous living conditions of the American worker and their own lower wage standards, gained considerable light in a tour of several industrial establishments in Brooklyn yesterday.

They were curious to know how it was that the average wage of the American toiler virtually doubled that of his British brother, and how it was possible for industries here to offer such fat envelopes to their employees and at the same time compete successfully in world markets.

American More Productive

After a study of the Brooklyn Edison plant and the factory methods of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company in Brooklyn, the delegates remarked that one of the vital reasons for the disparity was that the American worker was capable of producing and actually did produce more than the British toiler in a given time.

This he was enabled to do, they learned, because of the high standards of efficiency obtaining here, mass production methods, the utter perfection of organization for which the American industrialist seems always to be striving, and labor-saving devices evident on every hand.

The comments of the delegates were voiced by Sir Percival Phillips, special correspondent of "The Daily Mail," Fenton MacPherson, of the same newspaper, and William Mosses, J. P., who had a prominent part in the British Labor Ministry during the war.

Mr. MacPherson also noted that the welfare facilities offered by the American plant were much more elaborate than in England and that equipment and quarters were more beneficial. This

7¼ Point Body
Will average 1156 words to a 21-inch column

7 Point

The British delegation of trade-union representatives, who came here on Tuesday at the invitation of "The London Daily Mail" to study reasons for the disparity between the high wages and prosperous living conditions of the American worker and their own lower wage standards, gained considerable light in a tour of several industrial establishments in Brooklyn yesterday.

They were curious to know how it was that the average wage of the American toiler virtually doubled that of his British brother, and how it was possible for industries here to offer such fat envelopes to their employees and at the same time compete successfully in world markets.

American More Productive

After a study of the Brooklyn Edison plant and the factory methods of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company in Brooklyn, the delegates remarked that one of the vital reasons for the disparity was that the American worker was capable of producing and actually did produce more than the British toiler in a given time.

This he was enabled to do, they learned, because of the high standards of efficiency obtained here, mass production methods, the utter perfection of organization for which the American industrialist seems always to be striving, and labor-saving devices evident on every hand.

The comments of the delegates were voiced by Sir Percival Phillips, special correspondent of "The Daily Mail," Fenton MacPherson, of the same newspaper, and William Mosses, J. P., who had a prominent part in the British Labor Ministry during the war.

Mr. MacPherson also noted that the welfare facilities offered by the Ameri-

8 Point Body
Will average 1083 words to a 21-inch column

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

Brooklyn, New York

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

Linotyped in Garamond Bold and Ionic No. 5

TARCH BEGINS STUDY OF NEWSPAPERS

our-A Research Director Who Has Analyzed Magazine Distribution, Now Turns Eyes to Readers of Dailies

Preliminary tests are being made by he research department of the American ssociation of Advertising Agencies oking toward the inauguration of what ames O'Shaughnessy, executive secre- ary, this week described as "a practical tudy of newspaper circulations."

The tests are being made by Dr. Daniel Starch, who has been making researches egarding the quality of magazine circu- ations for A. A. A. A. The nature of he preliminary newspaper "tests" was ot disclosed by either Mr. O'Shaugh- nessy or Dr. Starch.

"We eventually want to determine where newspapers go, who reads them, nd why they are being read," Mr. O'Shaughnessy said. "One of the ideas ehind the study is that we believe an- wers to these questions will help adver- isers fit their products and the adver- ising copy promoting those products to he different types of circulations.

"Any study will result in a larger use of newspaper space, I believe," Mr. O'Shaughnessy continued. "It is foolish for any publisher to be afraid of having ll possible facts regarding his news- paper's circulation known. Certainly no ublisher is foolish enough to want his irculation to consist solely of bank presi- dents.

"Whatever study we make of news- paper circulations must be disinterested o be valuable. While many individual newspapers have developed some remark- able data along the same lines we ex- pect to work, this data is frequently not trusted by agents or advertisers, who are inclined to suspect it of being self- serving. What we must do is to make an independent study of a nature adver- tisers and agents generally will accept.

"If we can remove any doubts from the minds of advertisers regarding news- paper circulations, we believe we will automatically increase newspaper adver- tising linage. We know that, as a whole, newspapers are sound and that newspaper advertising does pay. We also know that from time to time questions arise regard- ing newspaper circulations. We expect that answers to these questions will re- move all doubts from advertisers' minds."

Dr. Starch has been associated with the A. A. A. A. in charge of research for the last several years. The idea of the research department was first brought forward by Stanley Resor, president of the J. Walter Thompson Company, New York advertising agency, when he was president of the association.

Mr. Resor was mainly interested in having made what he termed a qualitative analysis of magazine circulations, but when Dr. Starch was first retained by the association it was expected that a survey of newspapers would later be in- cluded in his work.

Dr. Starch has not yet issued a com- plete report on qualitative magazine cir- culations, although at the last meeting of the A. A. A. A. in Washington he made a report to members which included his tentative findings on this subject and also some statistics he had gathered on the question of magazine duplication.

No date has been set for the com- pletion of the study of newspaper circula- tions. Mr. O'Shaughnessy stated defi- nitely this week that he did not expect Dr. Starch would be ready to make an announcement at the next annual con- vention of the association, which will be held in Washington Oct. 26-27.

"When Dr. Starch has completed his study, we will have his findings published in book form," Mr. O'Shaughnessy de- clared.

ROTO PRINTERS MOVE OFFICE

The HyRoto Corporation of Memphis, Tenn., has removed its New York execu- tive offices from 342 Madison avenue to 100 East 42nd street.

BEACH AND LINKS CALL TO A. N. P. A.

Slover Announces Entertainment Plans for Fall Meeting at Virginia Beach —Bryan Invites Members to His Home

S. L. Slover, president of the Norfolk (Va.) Ledger-Dispatch, and chairman of the Fall convention golf and entertain- ment committee of the American News- paper Publishers Association, has notified members of arrangements being made for the third Fall convention of the A. N. P. A. to be held at Virginia Beach, Oct. 31 and Nov. 1-2.

One of the features of this year's meet- ing will be a visit to "Laburnum," the beautiful home in Richmond of John Stewart Bryan, A. N. P. A., president, and publisher of the Richmond News-Leader.

Describing the convention site, Mr. Slover has written A. N. P. A. members in part as follows:

"Virginia Beach, Va., only forty min- utes by trolley from Norfolk, one of the most attractive of all Southern resorts, has been selected as the place, and it is believed that all those who are with us at that time will be unanimous in their ap- proval of this location.

"The Hotel Cavalier, in which the con- vention will be held, has just been com- pleted, and is equipped with every con- ceivable modern convenience to add to the comfort and well-being of its guests. The hotel is located on the seashore, and from its spacious verandas one may look out over the vast expanse of the Atlantic Ocean. The hotel has 200 guest rooms, each with bath or shower, with running ice water in each room.

"Special convention rates have been se- cured as follows: Single room with bath, $10 and $11 per day per person; double room with bath, $8 per day per person. All rates, of course, are on the American plan.

Those who attend the Fall convention will be most fortunate in that the Princess Anne golf course, on of the sportiest and most picturesque courses in the country, has been secured for the Golf Tourna- ment. The course is only a short dis- tance from the hotel, and while it is sporty, is designed for the enjoyment and pleasure of golfers, rather than for their downfall. Golf is a year-round sport at Virginia Beach, and is sure to be more than pleasant during the mild Fall weather when our convention is held.

"For those who do not golf, there are many other attractions. There are ex- cellent motors roads to places of historic interest, such as Jamestown, Yorktown, Williamsburg, and many others. In addi- tion, there are many lovely woodland bridle paths, and an excellent livery stable where riding horses may be ob- tained at reasonable rates. There is also fishing and hunting in season, and in ad- dition to surf bathing the hotel has a large salt water swimming pool.

"In addition to all the foregoing attrac- tions, our president has extended an invi- tation to all those attending the Fall con- vention to stop off in Richmond, where he will entertain them at a reception on the Saturday before the convention. A visit to his beautiful home, Laburnum, is alone worth the trip, and when offered in conjunction with so many other attrac- tions, makes more certain that all who are with us at that time will have an un- usual vacation of exceptional interest, which will prove to be as well most in- structive and enjoyable."

P.-I. TEACHES SWIMMING

Co-operating with the city parks and bathing beaches, the Seattle (Wash.) Post-Intelligencer provides free swim- ming instruction for any youngsters who may wish to acquire proficiency or have channel ambitions. An expert swimmer has been engaged to conduct the free swimming classes at the nine bathing beaches where instruction has been in progress during recent weeks, for the swimming season does not open until late and is very short in Seattle.

To Merchandise a Product In Indianapolis

The Outside Trading Radius Must be Sold

The Territory in Which

THE INDIANAPOLIS STAR

Leads All Indianapolis Newspapers

DAILY STAR

Average for first 6 months, 1927.

104,060

LEADS IN 56 COUNTIES OUT OF 92 IN 224 TOWNS OUT OF 396 DAILY

LEADS IN 63 COUNTIES OUT OF 92 IN 264 TOWNS OUT OF 396 SUNDAY

SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE

KELLY SMITH COMPANY

New York Chicago Boston Philadelphia

Alco-Gravure, Incorporated, New York, Chicago

SUNDAY STAR

Average for first 6 months, 1927.

140,131

"GHOST" FOR LIEUT. NOVILLE CONFESSES HE ENJOYED ASSIGNMENT

Flight Engineer of Byrd Plane Had Excellent Sense of News Values, Declares Stowe of Herald Tribune Who Wrote 2,000 Words a Day

By ALBERT LANEY

(Paris Correspondent of Editor & Publisher)

IN a recent issue of Editor & Publisher Philip Schuyler, after tracing the extensive literary output of Col. Charles Lindbergh to Carlyle MacDonald of the New York Times, went on to relate the experiences of "ghosts" he had met. He named the "ghosts" of a dozen or more celebrities and told many interesting things about the gentle art of ghosting. His story had been in print only a week or so however, when another and greater ghost arose to walk in the shadow of another great hero and turn out a series of the most dramatic and readable stories ever a ghost was responsible for.

The hero was Lieut. George O. Noville, flight engineer of the plane America on its dramatic but hopeless all-night search for Le Bourget field, and the ghost was Leland Stowe of the Paris bureau of the New York Herald Tribune.

Mr. Schuyler's story made it appear that being ghost to a celebrity is no great shakes as an assignment and one not coveted by newspaper men. But this is the story of a reporter who got his greatest thrill from his first experience at ghosting and freely confessed, when the last article of the series was on the cables, that it had been the most interesting assignment of his career.

He had seven days of being ghost to a very much alive celebrity and since this celebrity happened to be an international air hero—one of four to snatch at a thousand-to-one gamble for life in a blind dive to a melodramatic windup, and win—his job was an extremely lively one, as the following "confession" shows:

"When the Herald Tribune assigned me to get Lieut. Noville's story of the America's transatlantic flight and put it on the cable, it sounded interesting. It was—much more so than I had expected.

"Once the generous and impulsive French public gets hold of a great aviation hero he has about as much time to himself as a candidate for the presidency in the U. S. A. This idea of sitting down quietly in a locked room and taking down a carefully dictated story sounds easy, but it doesn't work out. At least it didn't in Paris.

"That's why there are a lot of things this particular ghost can be thankful for. A ghost to a celebrity must be twin brother to the original pest and pretty trying on the original's nerves, I should think. And there is no logical reason why a man who has flown for 42 hours in succession, through the worst weather hazards any plane ever battled for so long a time, should have any great amount of the patience of Job.

"But I was most fortunate in the man whose ghost I was elected to be. Lieut. Noville somehow came through a terrific nerve-wracking experience with plenty of good nature to spare. More than that he turned out to be what, in such circumstances is every newspaper man's joy, a flyer with a high sense of the dramatic and a fine grasp of details.

"You didn't have to be a high-pressure question-asking ghost to get the high lights of the adventures of the America's crew from Noville. For the most part he poured them out in good sequence and with a surprising newspaper sense of the unusual. Almost nothing of the dramatic tenseness of their situation, imprisoned in the fog over France for seven hours, escaped him. Better still, he recalled quickly and accurately countless little incidents which told more than columns of rhetoric could have told. It was a genuine relief to his ghost to discover that this Lieut. Noville had all the instincts of a newspaper man.

"Never once did he pull down the ego-whistle and let her blow. I remember the first thing he said to me after reading our first story in the Paris Herald the morning after the crash at Ver-sur-Mer. 'I've no criticism to make at all—only go easy on the I-stuff. Don't use the personal pronoun if you can help it; say 'we.'

"And he held to that wherever he could throughout the series of seven articles on the America's flight. Wherever the personal pronoun appeared I stuck it in of my own accord because I felt it would detract from the graphic realism of Noville's story if I left it out.

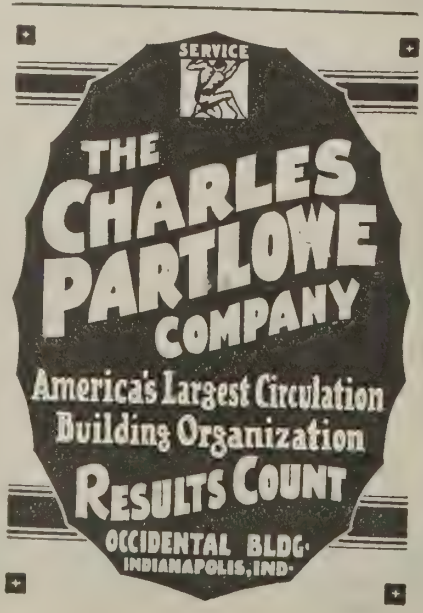
"But this business of getting the story of a celebrity is not so simple. His first day in Paris I got snatches of it between courses at a luncheon at the Union Interalliée, between countless interruptions in the parlors afterward, by riding with him in a car enroute to buy a suit of 'civies' and on the way to the Elysées Palace to call on President Doumergue.

"As we rode through the streets, with crowds on both sides cheering continually, he gave me the account of their blind hours in the fog over France. A little here, a little there; always being interrupted by cheering crowds, by receptions or by autograph-seekers, but always coming back to the point again and never losing the thread of the story. I wonder where I would have been in a situation like that if I'd drawn a hero with a touch of temperament.

"The one factor which helped most in whipping those stories into shape was Lieut. Noville himself. I didn't have to fight to get at him. He gave me the run of his suite and when, as often happened, he had to dash off again to some reception or other, he would declare 'Stowe's coming with me' and that would settle it so far as officials were concerned. Only this made it possible to get a story up to 2,000 words daily in the face of the dizzy program which was thrust upon the Byrd expedition during their stay in Paris. It meant eternally dogging Noville's footsteps from 8:30 in the morning until that hour or later in the evening, but it also meant that you got your stuff, and when you did it was graphic and real and had a tremendous punch in it.

"If you must be a ghost, it is a comfort to be ghost to a man who senses a story and gives it to you without self-consciousness, in a Navy man's language.

"The biggest thrill of this week of ghosting came on the afternoon when Noville asked me to unpack his camera case.



"'Just take out the camera and get the stuff that's in the bottom of the case,' he said.

"There was just a soggy, greasy wad of papers, about as useless as anything could be until you slowly unrolled one bit after another. And then I had in my hands one message after another that Byrd had written to Noville and the others during those hours in the air, over the Atlantic and over France. In Byrd's own handwriting the radio messages he had sent and the directions he had given to his crew which no one but members of the crew had seen until then. Noville grinned as I read them.

"'Say! That stuff is dramatic, isn't it? Why, when you read them now they even get under my own skin!'

"It was no wonder they did for they told the story of the America's great battle as nothing else could.

"Being a ghost, in this instance, had its compensations."

PHILLIPS TO PARIS

New York News Man to Join U. S. Paper in France

Joseph B. Phillips, who joined the staff of the New York Herald Tribune in June, 1926, sailed last week for Paris, where upon his arrival he will become a member of the New York Herald Tribune's Paris Bureau.

Mr. Phillips is a graduate of the Virginia Military Institute and the Columbia School of Journalism. Before going to the Herald Tribune he worked for the Paducah (Ky.) News-Democrat, at his birthplace; on the Washington Herald and in the Associated Press New York office.

Shortly after joining the Herald Tribune Mr. Phillips was assigned to fly to the scene of the Florida hurricane. The plane crashed in a swamp several hundred miles from Florida, and the journey was completed by automobile.

Mr. Phillips also covered the Ford-Sapiro trial for the Herald Tribune.

TWO WRONGS MAKE—?

Anyway, Two Indiana Papers' Mistakes Nullified Injunction's Effect

The Huntington (Ind.) Herald and the Huntington Press were enjoined last week by the Circuit Court from publishing legal notices of the city of Huntington, to enable that city to annex College Park, a suburb.

However, the notices were published the day the order was issued in the Herald by mistake and the next day in the Press by mistake. Publication of the notices makes annexation legal, according to attorneys.

F. W. H. Bangs, president of the College Park board of trustees, said contempt proceedings may be brought against the newspapers. No action has been taken by Judge Sumner Kenner, who issued the restraining order.

EDITOR GOES BACK TO SOIL

After spending the best part of his life in the newspaper business and after having worked in at least 20 cities in the country John Cowen recently resigned as assistant telegraph editor of the Scranton (Pa.) Times to become a farmer. He has moved to Band, Oregon where he has purchased a farm of some 50 acres. Mr. Cowen was presented with a traveling bag by members of the Times staff before he left Scranton.

Announcement

I wish to announce the appointment of Paul Block and his Organization as representatives in the National Advertising Field for the Pittsburgh Evening Sun-Telegraph and Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

The Evening Sun-Telegraph is the consolidation of the former Evening Chronicle-Telegraph and Evening Sun. The Sunday Sun-Telegraph is the combination of the former Sunday Post and Sunday Gazette-Times.

It is a little too early to estimate what the circulation of the two papers will be but it is my opinion that both editions will be larger than even the most optimistic advertiser may expect.

H. M. BITNER
Vice-President and Publisher

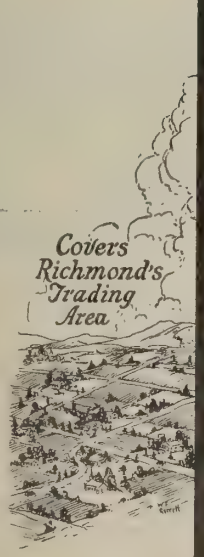
To Cover The Richmond, Virginia Market Requires Only One Medium—

THE NEWS LEADER

Virginia's Greatest Newspaper

The Richmond News Leader goes into the homes of Richmond every day.

It is carried by train and bus into every one of the 30 counties in Richmond's trading area every day.



It goes into homes both in Richmond and outside at the time of day when everyone has the time and inclination to read the daily news—in the afternoon.

It is the best medium—and the only medium needed—to reach the 550,000 people in Richmond and its trading area.

Both local and national advertisers recognize this fact. Last year the Richmond News Leader gained 581,826 lines of advertising while the other Richmond paper lost.

There are only three other newspapers in the United States which so intensively cover their markets as The Richmond News Leader.

The Richmond News Leader has the largest circulation of any paper in Virginia—and it is steadily growing.

National Representatives:

KELLY-SMITH COMPANY

Graybar Bldg., New York City — Waterman Bldg., Boston, Mass. — Atlantic Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa. — Tribune Tower, Chicago, Ill.

J. B. KEOUGH, ATLANTA, GA.

The Richmond NEWS LEADER

"On News Leader Square"

Covers Richmond Like a Roof

CALL FOREST FIRES BY CORRECT NAMES, NORTHWEST URGES NEWSPAPERS

False Impression Given Other Parts of U. S. by Stories Which Feature as Equally Big, Fires in Slash and in Valuable Timber

WITH the season of forest fires opening, timber owners, forest conservation officials as well as Chambers of Commerce and leading citizens of the Pacific Northwest, have undertaken a campaign of education with newspapers throughout the country in the hope of obtaining more accurate reference to forest fires in headlines and news columns.

Representatives of these interests have felt for the last few years that loose terminology on the part of copy editors and reporters especially, has been responsible for the middle-west, east and south getting the wrong impression of the forest fire situation in the Northwest during the months of August and September each year with a resulting loss of travel and investment.

At a conference of citizens interested in Tacoma, Feb. 16, 1927, a committee of newspaper men and others was named to formulate a chart to be used in newspaper offices as a guide for reporters and editors when referring to the various types of forest fires. At the same time, the committee pledged co-operation with the newspapers in obtaining more accurate information on forest fires. This co-operation will extend into every avenue of the timber and lumber business and it is expected will bring about more satisfactory conditions for the newspapers when covering forest fires or slashing fires.

The committee had made itself clear that it was making no effort to suppress news of the truth about forest fires, but it is making an effort in the interest of business and tourist travel to have forest fires properly referred to when news is put on the wire to other communities and when the news is being handled by the newspapers in the community itself.

The committee points out that the East gets the idea that vast acreages of green timber of marketable age are swept by flames, whereas the truth is only a very small percentage of the forest fires each summer and fall are located in marketable timber areas. Many of the fires are in logged-over lands which are worthless for timber or in well-controlled burnings of slashing or clearings. These two types of fires make as much smoke as fires in marketable timber and therefore lead to erroneous impressions on the part of reporters and the public.

The committee hopes that the campaign of education which it is starting now with newspapers throughout the country will induce editors and reporters to choose their words when referring to forest fires. The committee maintains that by use of the chart below, head writers and reporters can find expressions other than "forest fires" which will give the reader a more accurate impression of what has actually occurred in the forest area during the dangerous season.

The chart is as follows:

FOREST FIRE CLASSIFICATION

Newspaper Usage			Official Usage How entered by forest officers on forms sent their head offices for official statistics.
Main Head	Secondary Decks and Copy	Descriptive Key for Forest Officers and Press	Forest Service	State and Association
Forest Fire... 1.	Green timber Merchantable timber Timber Old growth Virginia forest	Mature and merchantable only.	Mature or merchantable timber.	Merchantable timber.
It will go for main head, Young Growth 2. Fire suggested for Bracket 2 and 3 fires and Woodland Fire for Bracket 4 fires. 3. If won't go, use Forest Fire qualified in second deck by best bracket term.	Regrowth Second growth Young trees Young growth New crop Immature forest	Recognizable young forest of commercial species. Any age and size between 1 and 3.	Reproduction or young growth.	Potential forest land.
	Cutover land Logged-off land Reproduction Reforestation Seedlings Reforesting land	Land that will produce commercial forest if fire prevented, whether reforestation now noticeable or not.
4.	Scattered growth Non-commercial woodland Woodland Scrub forest Alpine growth	Forest land permanently non-commercial because of altitude, species or permanent sparsity. May have game or watershed value or hazard other land.	Protection forest.
Slash Fire...	Slashings Logging works Logging debris Clearings	Either accidental or purposeful burning of new slashings.	Slash.	(Official practice varies with states). Other land.
Brush Fire...	Brush Waste land Watershed Chaparral	Permanently non-forest land. May have game or watershed value or hazard other land.	Non-timbered (brush or other).

The recommendations of the committee have been printed and sent to all newspapers in the Northwest. The committee in charge of this educational compaign is:

E. T. Allen, Western Forestry & Conservation Association, Portland; M. J. Mingo, Tacoma, Tacoma Ledger; W. W. R. May, Portlond Oregonian; Marshall Dana, Portland Oregon Journal; Fred Insinger, Seattle Times; Edwin Selvin, Business Chronicle, Seattle; J. P. Austin, American Lumberman, Seattle; J. A. Ford, Chamber of Commerce, Spokane; Geo. C. Joy, State Supervisor of Forestry, Olympia; L. P. Cronemiller, Deputy State Forester, Salem, Ore.; J. D. Guthrie, United States Forest Service, Portland; C. S. Cowan, Washington Forest Fire Association, Seattle; Paul E. Kendall, Long-Bell Lumber Company, Longview, Wash.; C. S. Chapman, Weyerhaeuser Timber Company, Tacoma.

IF YOU WANT TO GET MORE LOCAL DISPLAY
WITHOUT EXTRA COST
WRITE OR WIRE
THOS. W. BRIGGS CO.
Columbian Tower Building
MEMPHIS, TENN.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER CALENDAR

Aug. 11-13—East Tennessee Press Assn., annual meeting, Lenoir City, Tenn.
Aug. 18-20—Maine Press Assn., annual summer meeting, Lakewood, Me.
Aug. 19-20—North Louisiana Press Assn., meeting. Opelousas, La.
Aug. 20-25—National Assn. of State Press Field Mgrs., annual meeting, Detroit.
Aug. 22-24—Georgia Press Assn., annual convention, Eatonton, Ga.
Aug. 25—Florida Circulation Managers Assn., meeting, Orlando, Fla.
Aug. 29—International Press Conference, League of Nations, Geneva.

CHANGES ON ROCKFORD STAR

L. H. Fredericks has been promoted from city editor to managing editor of the Rockford (Ill.) Morning Star. He is succeeded as city editor by Alden E. Calkins, lately City Hall reporter. G. Douglas Wilson, director of the Star's junior press club and day city editor, will continue in both capacities. Dick Ramey, correspondent at the University of Illinois, will succeed Mr. Calkins at the City Hall.

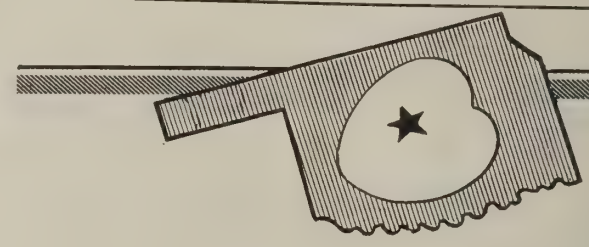
PRESS CLUB ALMOST READY

The National Press Club Building Corporation moved July 30 to its quarters in the new National Press Club building in Washington, which is approaching completion. The office section of the building, most of which has already been rented, will be completed Sept. 1 and the floors to be occupied by the National Press Club will be finished shortly afterwards.

GRIER NAMED EDITOR OF EVERY EVENING

Has Been City Editor for 31 of His 42 Years on Wilmington (Del.) Paper—Other Staff Changes Follow Promotion

Albert O. H. Grier, for the past 3 years city editor of the Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening, has been appointed editor of that paper, succeeding William J. Robertson, who resigned last December to go with the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Harris Samonisky, who has been assistant city editor, becomes city editor, Samuel Caufman, Jr., a member of the local staff, has been made assistant city editor.



A. O. H. Grier

There are no other changes in the executive staff. William F. Metten is publisher and general manager; Frederick K. Reybold, managing editor; William J. McVey, state editor; Morris Taylor, editor emeritus. Thomas D. Ranson continues as assistant to the editor.

All of the above are natives of Delaware, with the exception of Mr. Ranson. Mr. Taylor has been with Every Evening 44 years; Mr. Grier, 42 years; Mr. Metten, 30 years; Mr. Reybold, 15; the others mentioned, from three to ten years.

BROOKLYN EAGLE ADOPTS IONIC

Seven point ionic No. 5 is to be used by the Brooklyn Daily Eagle beginning with the issue of Aug. 8. A complete new set of matrices will be installed in all of the Eagle's 40 linotypes.

Take these facts into Consideration in Selling the

OKLAHOMA CITY MARKET

$600,000 in new wealth each day from oil production.

$1,836,238 increase in Oklahoma City building permits over the first six months of 1926.

$3,196,804.29 increase in Oklahoma City bank deposits over January 1, 1927.

This prosperous, able-to-buy market is thoroughly and alone covered by the two biggest newspapers in the state of Oklahoma.

Morning, 78,757; Evening, 72,512; Sunday, 92,366

The DAILY OKLAHOMAN
OKLAHOMA CITY TIMES

Represented by E. Katz Special Advertising Agency
New York, Chicago, Detroit, Kansas City, Atlanta, San Francisco.

A Note from CHARLES A. WEBB:

GEORGE STEPHENS, PRESIDENT

PUBLISHED BY THE CITIZEN COMPANY

CHARLES A. WEBB, V.PRES & TREAS

Western North Carolina
Good Roads Climate and Scenery Unsurpassed The Nearest Playground to Twenty Million People

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN
DEDICATED TO THE UP-BUILDING OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA

76 PAGES TODAY

ESTABLISHED 1868. ASHEVILLE, N.C. SUNDAY MORNING MAY 9, 1926 PRICE FIVE CENTS

ASHEVILLE, N.C.

July 19, 1927.

My dear Mr. Katz:

Our Business Manager this morning has called my attention to the large increase in our national advertising lineage since the first part of the year, and I want to personally thank you for the very substantial increase in our revenues derived from that source. It is most acceptable and agreeable at this particular time.

I feel that I should ~~at this time~~ express to you my sincere appreciation and the appreciation of all those connected with this newspaper, for the intelligent cooperation and assistance which your organization has given us since you have been representing us in the national field. I do not see how it could possibly have been better.

I know personally almost every one connected with your organization and I am glad to have the acquaintance and business connection with such a large, fine, intelligent, energetic, hustling group of men as those who are associated with you. I congratulate you on being able to secure and retain the services of such an able force of assistants.

We have found it a pleasure to do business with you, as well as to have received real, direct financial returns. We have never regretted that we made a contract with you, nearly nine years ago. It is one of the pleasant spots in our business life.

With best regards for you and all your assistants, I am,

Sincerely yours,

Chas. A. Webb

Charles A. Webb,
Co-Publisher.

W:B

Mr. G. R. Katz,
% E. Katz Special Advertising Agency,
58 West 40th Street,
New York City.

SOLICITOR ENJOINED FROM COMPETING WITH FORMER EMPLOYER

Kentucky Court Upholds Contention of Thomas W. Briggs Co. That Its Contract With Employe Debars Him from Entering Its Field

By LESLIE CHILDS

AS a general proposition of law, an employment contract that restricts an employe from competing with his employer, after the termination of the contract, will be enforced, providing it goes no farther than is necessary for the protection of the employer's interests. So much for the general rule, the application of which to particular cases depends, of course, on the facts involved.

However, it's a good rule for both employers and employes to have in mind when restrictive contracts of employment are being entered into. And, as an illustration of its application to a contract arising in the advertising field, the recent Kentucky case of Thomas W. Briggs Company v. Mason, 289 S. W. 295, may be reviewed by advertising men with interest and profit.

In this case the Briggs Company employed Mason as a crew manager in its business of soliciting and selling advertising. The business involved the getting out of special advertising through contracts with newspapers, magazines and other periodicals, and its continued success depended in a measure on the preserving of its trade secrets, business methods and good will. In view of this the contract of employment with Mason contained the following restrictive paragraph:

"It is expressly agreed that upon the termination of this employment * * * and for a period of two years thereafter, the party of the second part [Mason] will not engage, * * * for himself or others in a similar or competitive business * * * in any city or state where * * * he shall have worked for party of first part under this contract. * * *"

Pursuant to this contract Mason worked about four years, when he left the employment, and immediately organized a similar business in competition with the Briggs Company. The latter thereupon brought the instant action for an injunction, on the grounds that Mason was violating the terms of his contract of employment as quoted heretofore.

Upon the trial of the cause, the lower court declined to give the Briggs Company relief, and dismissed the action. From this an appeal was taken which squarely raised the question of the validity of the restrictive clause in the contract between the Briggs Company and Mason. Here, in stating the general rule in enforcing clauses of this kind, the court said:

"Contracts have frequently been upheld whereby salesmen, agents, canvassers, and other employes who come in personal contact with their employer's customers agree not to engage in a competitive business in a limited time and area after leaving their employer's service. * * * Such restraints, however, must not be wider than reasonably required for the protection of the employer's business. * * *"

Following the above statement of the general rule, the court turned to the record in the instant case to determine the validity of the restrictions, and whether or not, if valid, they had been violated. In this connection the court, in part, said:

"The business was a new and unusual one, employing special methods which constitute trade secrets. * * * Necessarily years of patient and careful study and attention were necessary to organize and develop such business and bring it to a point where it would be profitable. * * * The employer, it would seem, under facts like these, has the right by contract to protect himself against the giving out of information * * * and trade secrets * * *.

"As appellee [Mason] was engaged as manager of the business and sent * * * into different cities to carry out contracts * * * he was put in intimate touch with all of appellant's clientele and customers and learned all of the intimate secrets of the business and how to carry it on * * * The period of two years in which appellee engaged not to go into a similar business cannot be said to be too long * * *.

"There is and can be no denial that * * * Mason violated the terms of his contract by engaging directly in a business similar to that of his employer in territory in which his employer was actively engaged in business at the time of and during his employment, and in which by the terms of his contract he was not to work for a period of two years.

"Giving full force and effect to the established general rule * * * we are constrained to hold that the restrictive clause in the contract before us could not have been of advantage to the employer had it been limited in territory to space less than that covered by the employment, and to a period of time much less than that fixed in the contract. * * *"

In conclusion the court, after passing upon other matters not material here, reversed the judgment of the lower court in favor of Mason, holding, in effect as outlined in the opinion, that under the facts of record the Briggs Company was entitled to have the restrictive terms of the contract enforced.

The foregoing case is one of the clearest the books contain, on the construction of this phase of an employment contract, in the field of advertising. And, in the light of the facts and circumstances involved, it seems the holding fairly represents the weight of authority on the question decided.

It is of course obvious, that each case of this kind presents a question of fact, which precludes the statement of a hard and fast rule that would apply in all situations. And the case reviewed does not purport to announce any such rule. However, it does constitute a well reasoned case on the question involved, and in view of the nature of the contract construed, becomes a decision of considerable importance to advertising men in general.

MOVE LAWSON CARVINGS

Rare French Walnut from His Home to Adorn Chicago News Plant

Rare wood which Victor F. Lawson, late editor and publisher of the Chicago Daily News, imported from France for the living room of his home on Lake Shore drive, is to become a part of the new home of the Daily News as a memorial to Mr. Lawson, who guided the destinies of the newspapers for almost half a century.

The wood will adorn the directors' room of the building to be constructed by the Daily News on the west bank of the Chicago river between Madison and Washington streets.

When planning his home, Mr. Lawson went to Europe in search of materials and furnishings. In France be obtained the walnut for his living room and had it carved there before sending it on to Chicago.

The Lake Shore drive home is to be replaced by a 25-story $5,000,000 co-operative apartment building. When this became known, the Daily News, wishing to preserve in its new building some tangible reminder of Mr. Lawson, arranged for the purchase of the rare wood.

Largest Circulation
and
Largest Volume of Advertising
of any Daily west of the Missouri river
LOS ANGELES
EVENING HERALD
REPRESENTATIVES
Chicago, JOHN M. LEDERER, 910 Hearst Bldg.
San Francisco, A. J. NORRIS HILL, 640 Hearst Bldg.
New York, HERBERT W. MOLONEY, 604 Times Bldg.

I. T. U. CELEBRATES ITS 75TH ANNIVERSARY

Indianapolis Convention Next Week Will Tackle Report of Laws Committee and Reform of Pension System

The International Typographical Union, founded in Cincinnati in 1852, will celebrate its diamond anniversary Aug. 8 to 13 when more than 3,500 members will gather at Indianapolis for the union's convention. Daily sessions throughout the week will be held at the national guard armory.

Preceding the convention the committee on laws will be in session and will prepare a report to be made at the opening session Monday, Aug. 8. A reception will be held in the armory Saturday night. An automobile tour of the city will be made Sunday afternoon.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers; W. L. Hutcheson, president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters & Joiners; Daniel J. Tobin, president of the International Union of Teamsters and Chauffeurs, all of Indianapolis, and Thomas F. Taylor of Terre Haute, president of the Indiana State Federation of Labor, will speak on the opening day. A chicken dinner at Broad Ripple park will close the first day's activities.

Problems before the convention include the thrashing out of the situation surrounding the representation of allied crafts in international conventions, determination of other basic policies and stabilization of the pension fund. A special commission appointed last year to study the latter question is to report. Forming the commission are Theodore McCullough, Omaha; George Seibold, Washington; Edward Close, Denver and Sylvester McBride, Boston.

Twenty-five hundred are on the old age pension roll and 300 at the Union Printers' Home.

The union has 78,000 members in the United States and Canada and reports $5,250,000 in money and securities in Indianapolis financial institutions. Headquarters of the union were established in the Vance block, now the Indiana Trust building, in 1889, with 20,000 members and an office force of three persons. The union now has headquarters at Typographical Terrace, Twenty-eighth and Meridian streets, with a personnel of sixty.

Officers of the union are Charles P. Howard, Chicago, president; J. W. Hays, Minneapolis, secretary-treasurer; Seth R. Brown, Los Angeles, first vice-president; Austin Hewson, New York, second vice-president, and Charles N. Smith, Brooklyn, third vice-president.

EDWARDS HEADS PRINTERS

The New York State Allied Printing Trades Council held its thirty-first annual convention at Rochester, N. Y., last week and elected officers as follows: President, E. W. Edwards of the International Printing Pressmen & Assistants' Union of New York; secretary-treasurer, John L. Hartnett of the Typographical Union of New York, for the fourteenth consecutive time; vice-presidents, Typographical, Florence A. Tague of Syracuse; mailers, James J. Gibson of Rensselaer; pressmen, Norbert Berger of Buffalo; stereotypers, Leon De Veze, of New York; electrotypers, John C. Schmidt of New York; photo-engravers, Edward Fisher of New York, and bookbinders, Thomas Mullan of Albany.

LENGEL GETS LIFE

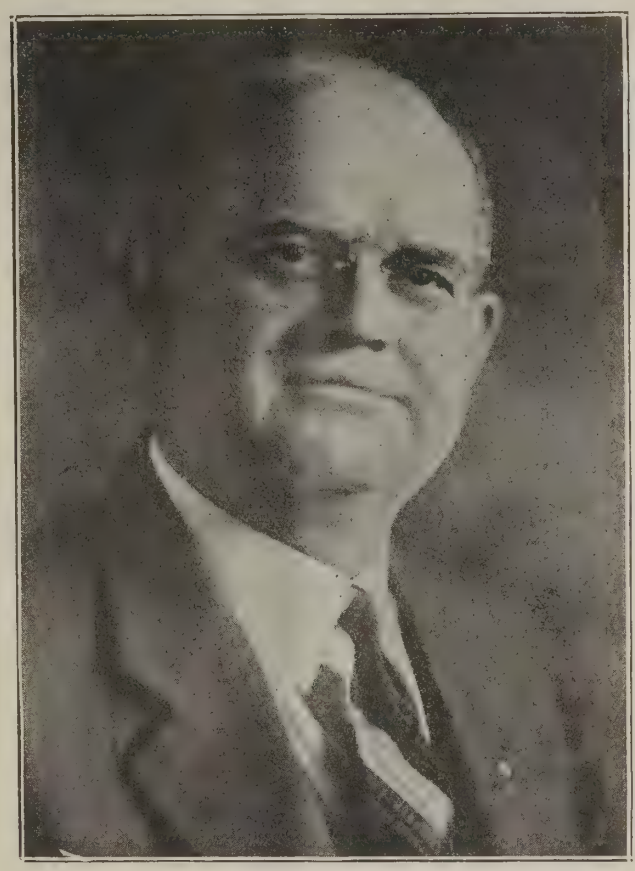
Saranus A. Lengel, former Chief of Police of Canton, Ohio, was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of Don R. Mellett, editor, Aug. 4, when Judge Frank M. Clevinger overruled his motion for a new trial. Lengel was convicted on July 16.

THE MIRROR DELIVERY TO YOU AS AN ADVERTISER

This then is what The Mirror offers to you:

Daily Contact in the Home

City families	12,625
City consumers	53,908
Exclusive city consumers	40,565
Outer families	12,370
Outer consumers	56,655
Exclusive outer consumers	46,980
Total families	24,995
Total consumers	110,563
Total exclusive consumers	87,545



Such a universal acceptance of The Mirror throughout the trade area gives reason for an inspection of circulation methods. Examine the ABC report. The auditors show that no premiums or contests were used; canvassers were not employed; clubbing offers were not permitted; no artificial stimulus had any part in securing this audience for Mirror advertisers. The paper is bought on merit, because the family demands it.

Clearly it dominates the inviting Altoona market so far as home coverage is concerned.

THE ALTOONA MIRROR
Altoona, Pa.

Business Direct

Fred G. Pearce, Adv. Mgr.

Walter J. Scott

The Dallas Morning News
THE DALLAS JOURNAL
The Semi-Weekly Farm News

Dallas, Texas

are pleased to announce the appointment of National Advertising Manager of Walter J. Scott, who has been in charge of the Chicago office of these papers for twenty-three years.

THE JOHN BUDD COMPANY :: NATIONAL REPRESENTATIVES

New York Chicago St. Louis Atlanta San Francisco Los Angeles Portland

FALL PROSPECT BETTER CROP REPORTS SHOW

Chicago Tribune Business Survey Finds Optimism Prevailing—Farmers to Get $500,000,000 More Than in 1926

Fall prospects have greatly improved declares a survey report issued by the Chicago Tribune, Aug. 5. The new impetus originates at the farm, a quarter whose principal contributions to business information in recent years have been gloom, the report states, and continues "Many a day has passed since Wall Street has been able to derive enough encouragement out of the soil for a major upward movement. But exactly that has just happened. The facts about the agricultural situation which came to light during July have precipitated a bull stock market which has already carried many securities to the highest prices ever reached.

"The farm income is only 10 per cent of the total national income and yet its concentration in the fall months gives it an influence in fall business that is greater than appears from the annual aggregate. The condition of the farmer pretty well determines whether the business of the closing quarter of the year is good or bad. The government published its forecasts of crops on July 11, and these probable yields calculated at present prices indicate that from the eight principal crops alone, farmers will receive at least a half billion dollars more than last year. There is a real basis for optimism about trade this fall.

"The whole level of business appears to have improved in the past sixty days if allowance is made for seasonal variations.

"Chicago and Zone 7 building construction continues to be the bright spot of the industry. The awarding of contracts totalling $51,197,800 in June brought the total for the half year in the city up to $225,717,700, a volume that was greater than any state's except three, $20,000,000 in excess of that in all New England and more than five that of the whole northwest. The six months' total is moreover about $35,000,000 in excess of the aggregate for the same period last year.

"In the geographical division which is called the Central West in the Dodge reports, there was an increase during the first half of the year of $167,226,700. Leaving the Central West out of the building totals for the country a loss of $107,400,000 is shown for the country. With the Central West in, there is a gain of $59,834,000. Current commentators on business have said that the building industry is the backbone of the business structure in 1927. From these figures it is quite clear that the Central West is the backbone of the building industry.

"Chicago and the middle west were about the only places in this country where the factories had more people at work in June than they had in May. The Illinois Department of Labor has announced that its monthly survey of employment shows 1.6 per cent increase in the number of people at work in Chicago industrial establishments, and the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago at the same time announced an expansion in the district of 2/10 of 1 per cent. Meanwhile in the country as a whole the number of employes declined 7/10 of 1 per cent, according to the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"Good business weather prevailed throughout June, and it had a stimulating effect upon the sales of the department stores. As reported by 552 stores to the Federal Reserve Board, there was an increase the country over amounting to 1.6 per cent compared with a year ago."

PLAY FOR ICE FUND

Two thousand tickets for the baseball game between the Chicago Tribune and the Lombard, Ill., teams Sunday, July 24, were ordered by Lombard almost a week before the game. The contest was held for the benefit of the Tribune's free ice and Camp Algonquin funds, which the newspaper sponsors each summer.

DALE PAROLED

Muncie Editor Serves Half-Hour of His Sentence for Contempt

George R. Dale, editor of the Muncie (Ind.) Post-Democrat, whose editorial attacks on Judge Clarence W. Dearth echoed through the state Legislature and the United States Supreme court and brought him a ninety-day sentence for contempt, at last gained his freedom July 30 after "serving" half an hour on the state farm. Dale stayed at the farm only long enough to become a technical prisoner so that he could receive the parole granted him by Gov. Jackson.

The parole was granted Dale after he withdrew his appeal to the Federal Supreme court from the contempt conviction in the Delaware Circuit court, over which Judge Dearth presides. The Indiana Supreme court had affirmed the lower court.

In his editorial attacks upon Dearth and other Delaware county officials, begun about four years ago, Dale charged that jury panels in the Circuit court were illegally drawn and that the Ku Klux Klan dominated certain county offices. Judge Dearth was tried for impeachment before the last state Legislature, where testimony supporting some of Dale's charges was presented. The Senate, which heard the trial, returned a verdict of acquittal.

SPENCER NOW HEADS COAST UNIVERSITY

Former Dean of Journalism at Washington Appointed President of Seattle Institution, Effective Sept. 1

Dr. M. Lyle Spencer, who formerly directed the department of journalism of the University of Washington, Seattle, has been appointed president of the University of Washington by the board of regents. He will assume his new position Sept. 1, with an annual salary of $12,000.

Dr. Spencer, who is 46 years of age, was educated at Kentucky Wesleyan College, Northwestern University and the University of Chicago, where he received the degree of Ph. D. Prior to the war he was reporter, copy reader and editorial writer in Milwaukee, and was a captain in the U. S. Army in 1918.

Coming to the University of Washington in the summer of 1919 as a lecturer in journalism, he was promoted to the director of that school in the fall of that year. Since retiring recently he has been engaged in the preparation of textbooks on journalism and has also devoted attention to the country papers which he owns, being deeply interested in the press of the State of Washington.

At present he is president of the Seattle Rotary Club, was vice-president of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce last year, and last Monday returned from a convention of International Rotary which was held at Ostend, Belgium.

Whenever you see a dispatch signed by

George T. Hughes,

market expert,

you know the paper that prints it has the exclusive city-of-publication rights of the financial service of

CONSOLIDATED PRESS

"MILL" MAKES LABORER AT THE BORDER

Canadian Official Rules Buffalo Reporter Going to Toronto Ball Game with Typewriter Violates Regulations

It is illegal for a United States newspaper reporter to go into Canada to cover an assignment if he takes his own typewriter with him, but there is no bar to his going on such an errand provided he leaves his favorite machine at home, judging from an incident of last week on the Niagara frontier.

Accompanied by his wife, Don B. Reed, baseball writer for the Buffalo Evening News, began a motor journey to Toronto to cover the series between the International League baseball team of that city and the Buffalo team of the same league. Arriving at the border at Niagara Falls he was asked where he was going and like all good reporters told the truth. The Canadian official, spotting the typewriter, forced the reporter and his wife to turn back, ruling they would be entering the country to work, contrary to certain Dominion regulations.

The baseball writer took his automobile and typewriter to a Falls garage, boarded a train, and upon being questioned by another Canadian official told his destination. Having no typewriter this time he was admitted without question and the series was covered, using a Canadian typewriter to produce the copy.

While in Toronto, Mrs. Reed suffered a serious attack of ptomaine poisoning from which she is now recovering.

BACK TO HAND-SET DAYS

In the electrical storm of Aug. 1 which incapacitated wires all over New York and New Jersey, the Jersey City (N. J.) Journal found itself, an hour before press time, with no "juice" and two columns of front page material unset. A hurry-call to linotypers revealed the fact that two of them were old type-setters, and and an old case of dusty, unused type in the back of the shop completed the plan to set the missing columns by hand. Ten minutes after the electricity was on again the paper was on the streets.

NEW PRESS CONGRESS FORMING IN PACIFIC

Organization Suggested by Dean Williams at Honolulu Meeting Will Study Propaganda—Ivy Lee Approves

Investigation of propaganda organizations and study of their methods in attempting to color news reports in Pacific countries is expected to be one of the first tasks of a Pan-Pacific Press Congress being organized at Honolulu, T. H.

Need of a Pan-Pacific Press Congress to supplement the work of the Press Congress of the World was pointed out by Dean Walter Williams of the University of Missouri School of Journalism, in conferences with newspaper men attending the Institute of Pacific Relations there.

Preliminary organization work has been placed in charge of L. A. Thurston, editor and publisher of the Honolulu Advertiser; Riley H. Allen, editor of the Honolulu Star Bulletin, and representatives of the United Press, Associated Press and International News Service. The first meeting is tentatively scheduled for Honolulu in August, 1928, and the second in South America or New Zealand in 1929.

Impetus to study methods used by groups intent on coloring news was given all newspaper men and institute delegates here by a paper submitted by Karl A. Bickel, president of the United Press Associations. Bickel's paper recounted the refusal of the United Press to become entangled with official or semi-official news agencies that might attempt to shade news reports.

Ivy Lee, addressing guests at a Pan-Pacific luncheon in honor of Williams, urged that the new congress make the study and investigation of these propaganda groups one of its first duties.

OUR POLICY

ONE SIZE

all mats 20" x 24"

ONE QUALITY

only the best we can make

ONE PRICE

15c

on standing order

Certified Stereotyping is Simplified Stereotyping

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION

340 Madison Avenue New York, N.Y.

For wet mat printing with DRY MAT facility — use CERTIFIEDS MADE IN U.S.A.

MADE IN CERTIFIED DRY MATS THE U.S.A.

The children's month is August. Vacation is at its height, yet school is less than a month away. This is the time to go after rotogravure advertising on children's wear. Use this insert to supplement the big 32-page catalog of photographs furnished you by the Kimberly-Clark Rotogravure Development Department. Including the illustration on this page, sixteen pictures, ready for your use, are shown. Extra copies of this insert will be sent you upon request. Order the prints you need by number.

THE only limit to the number of products for which these illustrations are appropriate is the ability of the advertising man to create appropriate headings. Just below is a picture equally well suited to a baby food, to rompers, or to a baby walker.

These pictures, shown small here to get them all in, are adaptable to other sizes. The first page of this insert illustrates what may be done in liberal space. For your convenience in ordering, these pictures are numbered. Send orders by mail or wire to Kimberly-Clark Company, Rotogravure Development Department, 208 So. La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

X-2—We dress boys to be boys

Rotoplate, the perfect paper for rotogravure printing, is used by almost every newspaper in North America publishing a rotogravure section.

X-3—Suits for the Young Man
Rompers 98c and up

X-4—School boy Specials

X-5—Healthy Babies Do Not Tie Mothers Down

X-6—Everything for Babies

X-7—Jean Laurie's Layettes make an art of caring for babies

X-8—Well Shod

X-9—Merit Flour Makes Wholesome Cake

X-10—She protects those teeth

X-12—O-o-o-h Daddy! For me?

X-11—The Wilson Candy Smile

X-13—Tasty Pastry from

X-14—Wash Suits and Frocks Clearance Sale!

X-15—August Special in Sleeping Garments

X-16—Low Prices on Play Suits for Hot Weather Days

Make Up

FROM the preceding pictures—or from parts of them—our art director made up five advertisements, quite varied in appearance and size. We think they illustrate how great a number of advertisements can be laid out with the material in this insert.

Just below this paragraph there's a shoe advertisement illustrated by a part of X-4. The upper part of the same picture could be used in a boy's lumber jacket advertisement, while the whole makes a general boys' clothing picture.

Let the art and copy men of your Service Department make suggestions for your advertisers on using these pictures in your rotogravure section.

The Headline HERE MIGHT BE—

Eager for Belle Mead Milk, Wholesome Bread makes Healthy Children, Tiny Togs for Tiny Tots—or any one of a host of others suitable for foods and children's furnishings.

NAME HERE

Active

Boys Need Rugged Clothes

These illustrations suggest a dozen possible advertisements for a boys' department and might also be used in advertising playgrounds, boys' camps, foods, etc., with such headlines as Off the Street, Direct Their Play, The Milk-Fed Boy on Top, etc.

With

Name Big, Here

Adapt the Shapes to Space Available

This panel of mother and child is cut from the nearly square picture No. X-5. It would go well in oval or circle, too. The baby, to the right, might be in rectangle as on Page 2. Could have a patterned background also.

Headlines might be written for this layout making it an excellent advertisement for baby's wear, baby food, milk, orange or other fruit juices, etc. Balance the headline by placing from No. 9-x and good for a barber, a food product, or a "Save for Them" banking advertisement.

THE NAME HERE

CUT

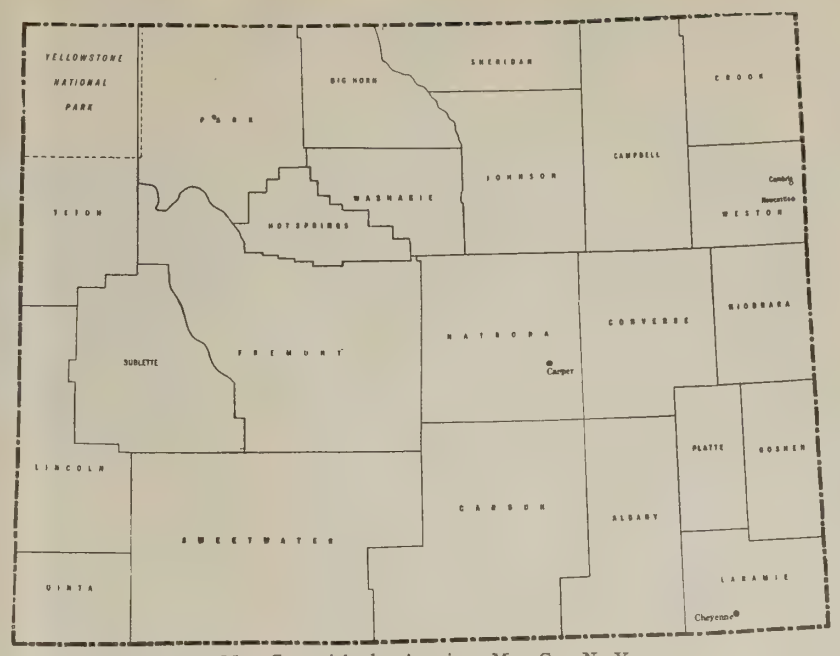
KEY TO CONSUMER BUYING ABILITY

Statistical Rating of Wyoming Counties and Cities for Products of General Appeal, in Six Major Classes of Quality and Cost—An Original Simplified and Tested Formula from Basic Data



By NELSON H. SEUBERT

Copyright 1927 by Editor & Publisher Company. All rights are reserved and warning is given that reproduction of these results, in whole or in part, without written permission of Editor & Publisher Co., will constitute copyright infringement.

FOLLOWING is the twelfth article in the series descriptive of the consumer buying-ability of the states and their counties and city subdivisions. The current article deals with the state of Wyoming, large in area, comparatively small in population, yet having ability to buy necessities and luxuries far in excess of the percentage of its population to that of the country as a whole. According to the formula of this key which has been described in several of the preceding articles, Wyoming presents a market ranging from 20% to 160% better than the average for the country, for merchandise ranging from staples to fairly high-priced luxuries. Even in the highest priced luxury class, this state stands well.

This chart shows the relative variation for the State of Wyoming above or below the United States average for cities of 10,000 or more population, cities of less than 10,000 and rural population and the entire State of each merchandising class.

Base County and Town Map Copyright by American Map Co., N. Y.

All cities of more than 10,000 population, according to latest census estimates, are indicated on this outline map of Wyoming

BUYING POWER ANALYZED BY PRODUCT CLASSES FOR WYOMING

Note: Figures below represent percentages of U. S. total carried out to four places: To use, mark off four places and insert decimal point.

Counties in bold face capitals—Cities in capitals and lower case

	CL No. 1	CL No. 2	CL No. 3	CL No. 4	CL No. 5	CL No. 6
WYOMING	2070	2309	2547	2785	3024	1123
ALBANY	59	96	134	171	208	85
BIG HORN	127	125	123	121	119	13
CAMPBELL	49	42	34	26	19	9
CARBON	62	104	146	188	230	100
CONVERSE	88	83	78	73	68	23
CROOK	51	42	33	24	15	6
FREMONT	122	115	109	102	95	34
GOSPEN	76	63	51	38	25	8
HOT SPRINGS	57	63	69	75	81	37
JOHNSON	44	40	36	31	27	15
LARAMIE	228	261	295	328	361	148
Cheyenne	140	187	235	282	329	131
LINCOLN	102	114	127	139	151	28
NATRONA	292	410	528	645	763	358
Casper	239	306	374	442	509	243
NIOBRARA	67	56	45	34	23	7
PARK	73	66	59	51	44	46
PLATTE	73	67	61	54	48	8
SHERIDAN	176	189	203	217	230	77
SUBLETTE	15	14	14	14	13	5
SWEETWATER	157	211	266	320	374	66
TETON	13	11	9	7	5	9
UINTA	63	65	68	70	72	24
WASHAPIE	32	29	26	23	20	7
WESTON	45	42	39	35	32	8
YELLOWSTONE NAT'L PARK	1	1	1	0	0	4

INSIDE INFORMATION ON COPYRIGHT CLAIMS

(Continued from page 9)

known under her maiden name and wishes to continue to use it publicly, the claim can be registered under the name used before marriage if the application so requests and without statement of the surname of her husband.

"A requirement in the application is the statement of the title, and here we experience considerable difficulty in relation to newspaper contributions. Newspaper editors think of the thing required in relation to any contents as a heading, or an announcement rather than a bibliographical title, so that very frequently the heading used if recorded does not at all identify the actual printed text. I apprehend this is something which it is almost impossible to change; but if the difficulties experienced in making reliable copyright registration were understood and some consideration given to the needs of the indexer when headings are assigned, no doubt gradually a distinct improvement could be obtained.

"It is, of course, desirable and necessary for complete identification to state the name of the newspaper in which the contribution was printed, and the volume-number and date of the issue of the paper where the contribution appeared. Finally the statement of the date of first publication is absolutely necessary as the term of copyright begins to run from that date. Ordinarily in a newspaper that date is the same as the date of issue; but in the case of weeklies or monthlies, there may have been such prior distribution that the date when distribution was made becomes the actual legal date of publication, the law itself declares that the date of publication shall be held to be the earliest date when copies of the first authorized edition were placed on sale, sold, or publicly distributed by the proprietor of the copyright or under his authority.'

"To summarize: Copyright is set up by publication with notice, and the notice must contain the name of the owner of copyright in the correct form—the form in which it is recorded when the copyright is registered. The form of notice prescribed by law should be strictly observed and the year date of publication included; i. e., 'copyright, 1927, by The Chicago Daily News Company.' Any deviation from this form whether by addition, omission or modification will affect unfavorable the validity of the copyright.

"Promptly after publication in order to secure copyright registration for the newspaper, two copies must be deposited, one for registration of the contribution and one complete copy of the paper with the entered contribution plainly marked.

"In either case the copies should be accompanied by a suitable application carefully filled out and a money order for the $1 fee.

"In general each separately published article requires separate registration and fee.

"Copy, application and fee should reach the Office at the same time, otherwise prompt action cannot be taken. No registration can be made unless copies, and an application and fee have all been received, and if the fee is sent in advance of copies and application it compels the Office to book up the fee, causing unnecessary bookkeeping, and if, as often happens, there is a confusion of names of applicant and remitter, then much time is lost in searching to make necessary connection and delay results in making the required registration."

VIRGINIA SPENDING $300,000

Advertising Funds of State Equal One-sixteenth of U. S. Total

Virginia this year is spending more than $300,000 on national advertising, according to figures which have been compiled by the publicity department of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, covering all sources of state and municipal advertising in the Old Dominion. This represents approximately one-sixteenth of the amount being spent throughout the United States in community and state advertising of various kinds.

Virginia's expenditures include $50,000 being spent by the state conservation and development commission for advertising, $100,000 being spent for advertising and promotional work by the Norfolk-Portsmouth Chamber of Commerce and smaller amounts which are being spent in advertising by the Roanoke Chamber of Commerce, the Richmond Chamber of Commerce, the Northern Virginia bureau and small sums ranging as low as $1,000 by various other chambers of commerce.

ANOTHER QUINCY WEEKLY

The second weekly to appear in Quincy, Mass., within the past two weeks issued its initial number last week. The new paper is the Wollaston Local News, being devoted to news of the Wollaston section of Quincy. The other new paper which appeared two weeks ago is the Quincy Transcript. A. W. Fuller is editor of the Wollaston Local News and W. F. Hallisey is business manager.

PRINTING CONGRESS IN BERLIN

The International Federation of the Trade and Technical Press, headquarters of which are in Paris, will hold its international congress this year in Berlin, Sept. 26-30.

EDITORIAL

PITTSBURGH MERGERS

NEVER before in the era of newspaper consolidations have we witnessed such a sweeping of a field as the present week revealed at Pittsburgh where two great interests purchased four dailies and two Sundays and by trades and mergers brought forth one evening paper, one morning paper and one Sunday paper.

This action gives Pittsburgh two evening dailies, two Sunday papers and one morning paper. The astonishing contrast to this lies in the fact that in 1923 Pittsburgh had three morning papers, five Sunday papers and four evening papers. Thus, a total of 12 papers has been reduced to five in four years.

The line-up in Pittsburgh in 1924 was as follows: Dispatch, morning and Sunday; Leader, evening and Sunday; Sun, evening; Post, morning and Sunday; Gazette-Times, morning and Sunday; Chronicle-Telegraph, evening; Press, evening and Sunday. The present alignment is: Press, evening and Sunday, owned by Scripps-Howard; Sun-Telegraph, evening and Sunday, owned by William Randolph Hearst; Post-Gazette, morning, owned by Paul Block. Three of the strongest journalistic interests of this country now divide the field.

There are those who deplore newspaper consolidations, largely through sentiment, and those who believe that they are decided by economic conditions and are therefore "just business." That Pittsburgh was badly over-newspapered in 1923 there can be no question, since, to relieve a situation that was distressing all of the publishers and the advertising world in general, it became necessary for the publishers' association to purchase and suspend both the Dispatch and the Leader. That seemed a very drastic measure at the time but subsequent events proved that it did not suffice—that still sharper pruning was required to satisfy the advertising public. The mergers of the week are the result.

A feature of interest is that all three of the dailies of Pittsburgh are now owned by so-called newspaper "chains" and it is also noteworthy that Pittsburgh, which four years ago supported three morning papers, has become a one-morning-paper town, following in this respect such other middle west cities as Cleveland, St. Louis, Detroit, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Buffalo.

In its recent semi-annual survey of circulations and rates EDITOR & PUBLISHER revealed the astonishing fact that the total number of English language dailies in the country had dropped from 2,001 to 1,952 in six months. Since that time several mergers have been announced and the year promises to break all records for consolidations, at least during the nine-year period in which EDITOR & PUBLISHER has published such statistics.

Aside from all other questions, it is obvious to any business man that sound economy will be served by the Pittsburgh mergers. Faced by curtailed volume of advertising, publishers found it practically impossible to reduce expenses. Each paper seemed prosperous, but the future was in doubt. The mergers give the city exceptionally strong and virile papers, each one well able to keep the hot pace of the times.

Editors who would fly into a rage if they discovered a partisan statement in first-page news accounts seem never to notice that their sport pages are filled with actual "tips" to the gambling fraternity while financial writers are advising the public to buy this or sell that.

GOOD PROMOTION

ONE of the most interesting pieces of newspaper promotion that has recently come to our desk is a pamphlet, issued to the advertising circle, by the management of the Cleveland Press. On the cover is a design of a human heart and the entire text concerns the civic activities of the newspaper during the year—community parties, tournaments, educational features and other enterprises in behalf of the people of the circulation district. "Deep in the hearts of the people," is the title of the booklet. There is no better theme for any newspaper's promotion, but it must be deserved by reason of action.

Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.—James, 1; 12.

ATTACK CONSIGNMENT SELLING

HOW to break up the gentle game of forcing unsolicited merchandise into the hands of the public, on a consignment basis through the mails, has been a great problem in many cities. EDITOR & PUBLISHER recently reported that more than 10,000 people of Richmond, Va., had within a few weeks received unsolicited packages of neckties, initialed handkerchiefs and other products, but that the Richmond Chamber of Commerce had vigorously attacked the practise. It was also stated that the Better Business Bureau of Philadelphia had notified the public, through newspaper advertisements, that "you do not have to buy unordered goods, nor return them, even if sufficient postage is enclosed for the purpose." The advice was to hold the goods, with reasonable protection of them, and let the company that sent them call for them.

This is not bad advice, but the best scheme we have heard of to break up this "train butcher" merchandising plan is the invention of the Cuba (N. Y.) Patriot & Free Press, of which Elmer E. Conrath is publisher. Acting on what was considered competent legal advice the newspaper opened a department for the storage of such consigned merchandise. It then gave notice to its readers that if they received unsolicited goods with a request that they remit for or return them, they were under no obligation either to pay for the merchandise or return it. The fact that stamps were enclosed for the return package did not in any way obligate the recipient. All that could be expected of the person receiving the goods was that he hold them until they were called for by some one representing the shipper. Nor could they be expected to hold the goods for an unreasonable length of time.

The Patriot then announced that it had opened a storage department where unordered goods would be held for the recipients. When John Smith gets a box of neckties which he did not order and does not want he brings them to the Patriot office where they are put in storage. Notice of the fact that they are being so held is given to the shipper by mail. He is also informed that a storage charge is accumulating against the merchandise, pending its removal by him. This charge varies, according to the article, and when it approaches the approximate value of the goods the newspaper proposes to sell the merchandise at public auction.

A point that should be remembered is that when notice is given to the shipper that the goods have been placed in storage, at his expense, the letter is signed by the person to whom the unwelcome goods have been consigned.

This scheme is working wonders in Cuba. Shippers have suddenly taken a great dislike for that town, which heretofore had been deluged with unsolicited merchandise.

When newspapers give art and science to the people they are offering safe antidotes for the poisons of this material age.

INDEFINITE REPORTING

REPORTERS elsewhere than Rapid City, N. D., will agree that getting definite facts and figures is the hardest, as well as the most essential, part of the newspaper job. They will likewise agree that it would have been a relief if on Wednesday and Thursday this week any of the correspondents at the Summer Capital had been able to learn exactly how many telegrams President Coolidge's terse announcement actually brought forth. There is too frequent use of the cliches, "a tremendous stack," "fell like snow," "kept wires humming" and similar generalities which no longer glitter.

MOVIE CRITICISMS

IN language that is plain and emphatic Chest Bahn, dramatic critic of Syracuse (N. Y.) H challenges the smug practice of the moving ture industry which seeks to have published ir press as original expressions of editorial op prepared reviews which gush and glow hot productions that may be good, bad or indifferent. Bahn has the courage to carry to his readers recent editorial entitled "The Critical Function," tended by us for the professional circle, agr perfectly with its plea for better and more inde dent criticisms of plays, pictures, radio and b "Speaking for the Herald," writes Mr. Bahn can say that whatever may be the situation where, the critical comment appearing in this n paper is without outside influence." He adds local theatre managers know that, in the long the entertainment business is benefited by fair free criticism.

Mr. Bahn is amused by a comment recently m by a volunteer spokesman for the moving pic industry in New York, who questioned the righ a newspaper man, drawing from $35 to $150 week, to "pass judgment upon a product of 'br with a collective remuneration of hundreds of t sands of dollars." The answer is that the cri salary is not necessarily the gauge of his ab to judge a picture; he is quite likely to write al the picture with no thought of himself; he is do less better able to judge local sentiment than lordly director out in California; he might e know better than does the producer that cer situations offered on the screen are illogical absurd or observe faults in details of such as pe pictures. But mainly the local critic can be pended on to tell whether a performance has re entertained a local audience, and this should be garded as valuable service to the entertainm industry. Mr. Bahn points out some glaring er in pictures that were passed to the public by aforementioned "brains." His comment is that s of those who depend on the picture industry their quail on toast might very well call on th who depend upon newspapers for their beer skittles for comment that might save many wasted dollar.

George R. Dale, valiant battling editor of Muncie, Indiana, paid his $500 fine and it was applied to the local school fund. In the next issue of his paper Dale wrote: "This fine was assessed against me for telling the truth. I hope that the school children will be taught that truth is a virtue, not a crime."

LAST OF THE COURIERS?

THAT 100,000 people could be killed on the ea and the fact be not known to civilization more than 60 days, seems astonishing in t day of rapid communications service. It was May 22 that the mighty quake in the Kansu provin of China occurred, the fact being reported in few hours by Science Service, which maintains world-wide seismograph watch, but the news the extent of the devastation was brought to t cable head by courier, requiring 62 days.

This is the second great earthquake disaster occur in Kansu province, the first being reported 1920 with an estimated loss of life of 500,000. T incident suggests the primitive conditions that exi in China. Kansu province is compared to our ow wild-west in pioneer days, being an unsettled countr where the people have reared several cities only see them fall in ruins. A few world travelers onl know how bitter, wild and futile have been the liv of the people.

With the spread of radio it seems impossible tha dissemination of such vast news can depend upo courier from any section of the world for lon This incident may be the last of such occurrence Science may even equip the seismograph with a jig ger which will tell us, not only that the quake ha occurred, but add that 100,000 are dead, with whol cities in ruins. The thought seems fantastic unti one considers what have been the developments i communications since 1914.

PERSONAL

ARTHUR BRISBANE, editor of the New York Evening Journal, sailed on the Aquitania this week with Mrs. Brisbane and their two children Sarah and Seward. Mr. and Mrs. Brisbane expect to enter their children in a school in Paris and to return home late this month.

Roy W. Howard, chairman of the board of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers, and W. W. Hawkins, assistant chairman, are now on the Pacific Coast and will return to New York early next month.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Reid, of the New York Herald-Tribune, are at their camp, Aldair, at Paul Smith's, N. Y., for a short visit.

Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, who only recently returned from a European trip, will sail from New York Aug. 10 to attend the International Press Conference to be held at Geneva, Aug. 24.

George B. Parker, editor-in-chief of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers, sailed for abroad this week to attend the conference.

E. F. Crandall, president of the British United Press, and Karl A. Bickel, president of the United Press Associations, sailed from New York Saturday on the majestic to attend the League of Nations Press Conference at Geneva, Aug. 24.

Robert P. Scripps, president of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers, and Thomas L. Sidlo, of counsel for that organization, sailed this week on the Berengaria for Europe. They expect to attend the press conference to be held in Geneva, Aug. 24, under the auspices of the League of Nations.

Howard Davis, business manager of the New York Herald Tribune, is spending his month on vacation at Lake Champlain, Vt.

James C. Dayton, publisher of the New York Evening Journal, and his daughter sailed for Europe last week.

Hugh H. Soper, editor of the Watonna (Minn.) Journal-Chronicle, has returned to his desk after spending a vacation at Camp William Colvill, Lake City, Minn., as plans and training officer of the 135th Infantry.

George W. Marble, editor of the Fort Scott (Kan.) Tribune-Monitor and former president of the National Editorial Association, has returned from the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., where he spent several weeks recently.

Fred B. Appleget, of the Hearst Newspapers, New York, has returned from two weeks of bass fishing in Kennebec County, Me.

Fred L. Rentz, president of the New Castle (Pa.) News received congratulations July 30, the 45th anniversary of his connection with the News. For the past 31 years he has been its manager.

Dean H. F. Harrington of the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern University is recovering in Ostend from a fractured leg, it was learned here. Prof. Harrington had been conducting a tour of Europe for students and instructors in journalism.

Benjamin F. Lawrence, general manager of the Star League of Indiana, is spending his vacation taking a leisurely trip up the east coast.

Nelson Metcalf of the Boston Evening Transcript and Mrs. Metcalf, E. W. Preston, publisher of the Boston Herald, and Mrs. Preston, and G. B. Mitchell of Albert Frank & Co., of New York, advertising agency, were among the passengers on the S. S. Yarmouth on her maiden voyage from Boston, Mass., to Yarmouth, N. S., recently.

Omar Gray, field secretary of the Press Congress of the World, was honor guest at a dinner given to officers of the California Newspaper Publishers Association by Crombie Allen, editor of the Ontario (Cal.) Daily Report, a former president of the association, in appreciation of courtesies shown by Gray when Allen went to Switzerland last fall to invite the Press Congress to California in 1932.

Max Elser, president of the Metropolitan Newspaper Service, returned to New York this week from a vacation spent in Quebec and other Canadian cities.

Norman B. Black, publisher of the Fargo (N. D.) Forum, a director of Rotary International, returned to this country on the White Star Liner Cedric, docking at Boston, Mass., July 24th, with the Rotary delegation. It is expected that Black's name will be presented as a candidate for Rotary president in 1928.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

EDWIN S. FRIENDLY, business manager of the New York Sun, is taking the month of August for his vacation at Scarsdale, N. Y., where he and his family are living for the summer.

H. C. Milholland, vice-president and advertising manager of the Pittsburgh Press, returned last week from a vacation spent abroad.

William Farrell of the Chicago Tribune's national advertising department has been sent to the Boston office of that department. Mr. Farrell, who has been with the Tribune since November, 1914, has served in the business office, in the auditing department, pay office, business survey, and classified, local and national advertising.

W. E. Bates, for the past eight months with the business survey of the Chicago Tribune, has been transferred to the eastern office of the national advertising department.

J. A. Rayner, of the Miami (Fla.) Daily News business office staff, has returned from a 10 weeks' holiday in England, Scotland and France.

Walter J. Scott has been appointed national advertising manager of the Dallas (Tex.) News, Dallas Journal and Dallas Semi-Weekly Farm News. He represented those newspaper in Chicago for more than 20 years.

Thornton E. Pike, classified advertising manager of the Haverhill (Mass.) Gazette, and Miss Donna Bayley of Haverhill have become engaged.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

JAMES A. STUART, managing editor of the Indianapolis Star, and Mrs. Stuart are the parents of a bady boy, Lawrence Day, born last week. The baby was named for Benjamin F. Lawrence, general manager of the Star League of Indiana.

A. R. Holcombe, managing editor of the New York Herald Tribune, with Mrs. Holcombe, has gone to Siasconset, Mass., for several weeks. George Goldsmith, dramatic editor, is also at Siasconset on a vacation.

Ralph Clifford of the Boston (Mass.) Traveler won the newspaper men's golf tournament at the Winchester, Mass., Country Club July 25, with a gross of 86. A. F. Pratt, Jr., of the Boston Post won the net prize with a 76. In Class B, M. G. Clarke of the Post scored both the winning gross and winning net. A large field turned out for the tournament.

Boyd Gatewood has resigned as secretary to Gov. Moody of Texas, and will again be Austin correspondent for the Houston Post-Dispatch.

(Continued on page 36)

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

G. RUSSELL CHAPMAN, who is the general secretary and manager of the Advertising Association of Great Britain, has had a varied career, which has seen him at work in Egypt, Australia, the United States, and Canada, as well as the "tight little Isle" of England.

G. Russell Chapman

Born in Croydon, England, he studied for the law, but, regarding the wishes of his family, gave up the idea of a profession and went into the textile business. In 1903, he became interested in men's clubs and was for a while organizing secretary in the old Volunteer and Territorial Army camps. In 1906 he went to Egypt, where he taught school for more than three years. When he journeyed to Australia, it was to become departmental manager of a large sugar growing firm.

Returning to England during the war, he undertook the organization of canteen and welfare work in the great munitions factories. He had hoped for a commission in the army, but had been rejected on account of malaria. In 1917 he took over the direction of the publicity campaigns for the British National Y. M. C. A. war work with the troops. It was in the following year that he came to the United States for the U. S. Liberty Loan and the Combined Drive Campaigns and to Canada for the Victory Loan.

After the war he organized and directed the "Over Seas Visitors Bureau," which served 10,000 American visitors in eight months. This was in 1920 and in 1921 he became sales manager of the London Times, a position he held until 1923 when he joined the staff of the London Press Exchange and became organizing secretary of the Air League of the British Empire.

At the International Advertising Convention at Wembley in 1924 he was in charge of finance, registration and programme.

HUMOROUS FEATURES AND WE HAVE THEM!

By America's Leading Writers and Cartoonists

Will Rogers—Daily dispatches and weekly articles.
Irvin Cobb—Daily anecdotes.
Rube Goldberg—Cartoon Follies of 1927.
Harry J. Tuthill—The Bungle Family strip and page.

If your territory is still open for these features, wire us for samples and quotations.

The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

V. V. McNitt, President — Times Bldg. New York, N. Y. — Charles V. McAdam, Vice-President

Now Ready

MILDRED BARBOUR

At Her Best

In

JEALOUS HEARTS

A Powerful Serial

Of

Love and Marriage in Conflict

72 Dramatic Chapters
Superbly Illustrated

Wire Now for Terms

Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Maximilian Elser, Jr., General Manager — Earl J. Hadley, Associate
150 Nassau St., New York City

(Continued from page 35)

Harris M. Crist, managing editor and treasurer of the Brooklyn Eagle, is spending his vacation with his family at Vineyard Haven, Mass.

Cleveland Rodgers, associate editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, is spending his vacation in Canada, accompanied by his wife and daughter.

H. V. Kaltenborn, who is touring the Orient in the interest of the Brooklyn Eagle and to obtain material for his radio talks, climbed Mount Fuji Yama, in Japan, on his first day in that country. He has since left for China.

Brooks Burnside, feature writer on the Columbus Ohio State Journal, and Mrs. Burnside, are parents of a daughter born last week.

Charles D. Heck, a reporter on the Columbus Ohio State Journal, won the championship in a newspaper men's golf tournament held at Columbus a few days ago.

Henry P. Lewis, who served in the naval flying forces during the war, is conducting an aviation column for the Springfield (Mass.) Union.

Thomas C. Stowell, Albany (N. Y.) staff correspondent for the New York Herald Tribune, suffered a severely sprained ankle when he fell while working on a ladder in the rear of his house.

Forrest Lowry, city editor of Salt Lake City Tribune, is convalescing from an operation performed in the Latter-Day Saints Hospital, that city.

George E. Farrell of the staff of the Hartford (Conn.) Sunday Courant is spending two weeks with his parents in New London, Conn.

Clement E. Kennedy, former reporter on the old Boston (Mass.) Journal and later Associated Press correspondent, has been appointed managing director of the Vinoy Park Hotel, St. Petersburg, Fla. He has been president and general manager of the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

Willard De Lue of the Boston (Mass.) Globe staff is writing a series of daily articles on "Daily Visits Among the New England Vacation Spots."

Daniel Rochford, aviation editor of the Boston (Mass.) Transcript, was a passenger in the first aeroplane to land at Round Hills, Mass., the spacious estate of Col. E. H. R. Green, in North Dartmouth. Rochford is secretary of the Massachusetts American Legion aviation committee.

William Grant Barney, until recently financial editor of the Buffalo News, has become advertising manager for Schoellkopf, Hutton & Pomeroy, Buffalo investment banking house.

William L. McPherson, editorial writer for the New York Herald Tribune, will sail on August 11 on the American Banker, for a six weeks' vacation in Europe. He will be accompanied by Mrs. McPherson.

Charles H. Roland of the staff of the New York Herald Tribune is in Europe on vacation with Mrs. Roland.

Dave Shackelford, feature writer on the Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman, who was one of the 65 pilots and passengers who made the national air tour recently is back after a two weeks' vacation in the air. Single seaters and gigantic 12-passenger cruisers sailed over 4,000 miles at a rate of 100 miles an hour, visiting half the states of the Union and Canada, all the Great Lakes, the Atlantic, the Chesapeake and other places.

E. F. Hughitt, golf writer for the Buffalo Evening News, worked his way into the first flight of the Western New York golf tournament with a medal score of 77. He also won his first round match in the competition but later was eliminated.

Harry Berger, for many years Boston, Mass., newspaper photographer and recently newsreel camera-man, is now in charge of the Paramount news pictures in Philadelphia and vicinity. Berger was formerly photographer for the Boston (Mass.) Post and prior to that connected with numerous western papers.

Col. Franklin P. Sellers, for the past 30 years religious editor of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, was declared considerably improved this week and well on the way to complete recovery after a serious illness of several weeks' duration. He will leave for Lake Minnewaska, Ulster County, N. Y., on Aug. 6.

Arthur J. Bean, financial editor of the Boston Post, is the author of a book entitled "Successful Speculative Investment."

Kenneth Youel has left the Brooklyn Daily Eagle to join the reportorial staff of the New York Evening Post..

Frederic Sterbenz, telegraph editor of the Cleveland Press, and Irene Holmes Sterbenz, former woman's editor of the Press, are parents of a son, born July 30.

Charles C. Stone has been promoted from telegraph editor to head of the universal copydesk of the Indianapolis Times.

Franklin Chase, dean of the editorial staff of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Journal, is writing an editorial page column headed "Ten, Twenty, Thirty." He recounts in an original way events that were chronicled in Syracuse ten, twenty and thirty years ago. Mr. Chase also is dramatic editor of the Journal.

ASSOCIATIONS

THE FINANCIAL ADVERTISING ASSOCIATION will hold its annual convention at West Baden, Ind., Sept. 12-15.

The EAST TENNESSEE PRESS ASSOCIATION will meet at Lenoir City, Tenn., August 11-13.

Turning in a 92 for 18 holes, Andrew Kellner was awarded first prize for low gross score in the golf tournament conducted at East Aurora, N. Y., by the GREATER BUFFALO ADVERTISING CLUB as part of its midsummer outing entertainment program. With a score of 73, Charles Wilson was prize winner for the low net, Walter Weimert followed with a net score of 74 while Charles Baxter won third with 75.

Elaborate plans are being made for the annual convention of the NORTHWEST TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION to be held Sept. 9-10 at Wichita Falls.

THE WEST TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION has just held its semi-annual gathering at Sweetwater. Lamesa was chosen for the next meeting. The session was featured by talks by J. L. Martin, Snyder, president of the association; Ollie Webb, New Orleans, La., secretary to the president of the Texas & Pacific railroad; Bowen Pope, Hamlin, and T. Paul Barron, Midland. Visitors at noon were guests of a luncheon at the Sweetwater Club.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

C. E. HONCE has been appointed news editor of the central division of the Associated Press, Chicago, succeeding C. K. Eastman, resigned.

Hugh Baillie, vice-president of the United Press, left New York this week with Mrs. Baillie to spend their vacation on the Pacific Coast.

L. B. Mickel, superintendent of bureaus of the United Press, returned to New York headquarters this week from a business trip to Kansas City.

Tom Gerber, promotion manager of the United Press, addressed the Rotary Club of Allentown, Pa., Aug. 5, on "Newspapers and Press Associations."

Horace Epes, director of the editorial department of the Consolidated Press, is spending his vacation with his family at Cape May, N. J.

L. C. Owen, Pacific Coast superintendent of the Consolidated Press, is returning to San Francisco after a motor trip through the Yellowstone where he spent his vacation with his family.

Charles A. Ahrens, formerly of the Lansing bureau of the United Press, has been appointed manager of the Cleveland bureau.

Ben Titus of the staff of the San Francisco bureau of the United Press, was called home to Portland, Ore., this week at the death of his father.

BLACK DROPS FLORAL RAIN

Van Lear Black, chairman of the board of the Baltimore Sun, who recently finished a round trip airplane flight between Amsterdam and the Dutch West Indies, arrived at Glasgow to meet his daughter. Mr. Black flew over the ship as she entered the harbor and showered her with thousands of carnations from a Fokker monoplane.

"STAR CHAMBER" DIDN'T PAY

No longer will minutes of the Knox county road commission be withheld from reporters. A reporter for the Knoxville (Tenn.) News-Sentinel learned of steps taken to build a road which would benefit the property of a member of the commission, exposed it, and Chairman Peter Blow announced that in the future the minutes would not be denied reporters.

PLANNING TEXAS MEETING

Elaborate plans are being made in El Paso to entertain the annual tenth district convention of the International Advertising Association, Nov. 10 to 12, according to Paul O. Sergent, assistant business manager of the El Paso Herald and Times. Outstanding speakers will include King Woodbridge, I. A. A. president. Drives over the border city and through the Rio Grande Valley, dances, luncheons and a fiesta at Juarez in old Mexico are included on the tentative program.

JOINS STANDARD UNION

John A. Gaffney, for nine years editor of the Plainfield (N. J.) Courier-News, has resigned from the paper to become associate editor of the Brooklyn Standard Union. He had been with the Courier-News for more than twenty years.

FLASHES

We do not choose to work tod but that's all the good it does us.—R Crouse, New York Evening Post.

* * *

If politics makes strange bedfellow is due to their fondness for the s bunk.—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

* * *

Wherever all these non-stop flyers headed, they are all really trying to l on the first page.—Wichita Eagle.

* * *

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler says for the first time in 2,000 years world is without a great man, wh would seem to go to show that the do had fooled away so much time teac school he hasn't had time to read Hollywood press agents' stuff.—Ma Telegraph.

* * *

Another thing we admire about Col Lindbergh is that he doesn't seem have been cured of anything yet in patent-medicine advertisements.—C State Journal.

* * *

Have you heard about the air m carrier who flew to Europe to delive letter and then forgot it?—H. I. Phill New York Sun.

* * *

Example of soft answer that turn away wrath:—"Make the alimony a li larger, Judge; I want to take care her well."—New York Evening Jour

* * *

The next thing to coming from g stock is owning plenty of it.—Worces (Mass.) Post.

* * *

An Austrian cut the fingers off two his brothers. Another case of sever relations.—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

Building Prestige —AT A PROFIT

USERS of the Ludlow system of composition are steadily building the kind of prestige that pays. They are giving their advertisers more than just a good newspaper. They are providing a higher grade of service—more attractive advertising and a better paper with display lines that are easy to read because of the always-new type used.

The Ludlow system promotes confidence between advertisers and newspaper. Business men recognize the increased selling power of Ludlow-set advertisements and their enthusiasm encourages the use of greater space. Hence the Ludlow serves to advantage both the newspaper and advertisers.

The Ludlow is not expensive to install or to operate —in fact its economies are frequently startling. Write us for details that prove how it can help your paper.

Ludlow typelines are slug-cast from hand-set matrices in sizes up to 72 pt., full-width caps and lower-case, and even 84 pt. caps. No machine or mold changes required.

Ludlow Typograph Co.
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago

Boston: 470 Atlantic Avenue
New York: 63 Park Row
Atlanta: 41 Marietta Street
San Francisco: 5 Third Street

LUDLOW QUALITY SLUG COMPOSITION

Rate based on this Circulation

This Circulation actually delivered

Sept. 1920 — 330,972 Circulation — $1.25 per Line

Same Old Rate

June 1927 — 494,725 Circulation — $1.25 per Line

163,753 circulation free

SEPTEMBER 1, 1920, The Weekly Kansas City Star established its advertising rate of $1.25 per agate line, basing the rate on its circulation of 330,972.

Today The Weekly Kansas City Star has a circulation of 494,725, yet the same old rate of $1.25 per line is still in effect. An additional 163,753 circulation! No increase in rates! This extra circulation alone would be a sizable circulation for a farmers' newspaper. Yet it comprised less than a third of The Weekly Kansas City Star's present circulation.

The Weekly Kansas City Star's advertising rate, based on circulation, is the lowest of any farmers' publication in America. This fact would still be true even if The Weekly Star today had only the circulation it had in 1920. But it has 163,753 more!

In short, Weekly Star advertisers pay for 330,972 circulation and The Weekly Star delivers them 494,725 circulation. A pretty good buy for advertisers, don't you think? "The best advertising buy in the world," you'll say, particularly when you consider that over 90% of The Weekly Star's total circulation reaches the rural two-thirds of the Southwest not covered by daily newspapers.

$1.25 is mighty cheap for nearly half a million of this kind of circulation.

And an Additional 25% DISCOUNT

Not only does The Weekly Kansas City Star give advertisers 163,753 circulation free. It gives them an additional 25% DISCOUNT from the regular rates, providing they use an equal or greater amount of space in The Daily or Sunday Kansas City Star.

The Daily-Weekly combination provides nearly a million circulation at a rate scaling down to $1.35 a line. The Sunday-Weekly combination provides nearly 800,000 circulation at a rate scaling down to $1.17 a line.

Largest Farmers' Weekly in the World

The Weekly Kansas City Star

Chicago Office:
1418 Century Bldg. Wabash 1067

New York Office:
15 East 40th St. Lexington 10122

FORGIN

For May, for June, for July—for the first seven months o advertising, but was the only standard

WHAT WAS DONE

For May—

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD GAINED 46,925 Lines

The Inquirer	Lost	171,355 Lines
The Bulletin	Lost	141,860 Lines
The Public Ledger	Lost	112,130 Lines
The Evening Ledger	Lost	19,970 Lines

For June—

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD GAINED 53,040 Lines

The Inquirer	Lost	201,925 Lines
The Bulletin	Lost	177,985 Lines
The Public Ledger	Lost	36,410 Lines
The Evening Ledger	Lost	86,680 Lines

For July—

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD GAINED 46,230 Lines

The Inquirer	Lost	33,850 Lines
The Bulletin	Lost	210,440 Lines
The Public Ledger	Lost	27,555 Lines
The Evening Ledger	Lost	106,630 Lines

For First Seven Months of 1927—

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD GAINED 24,075 Lines

The Inquirer	Lost	739,205 Lines
The Bulletin	Lost	1,718,425 Lines
The Public Ledger	Lost	719,590 Lines
The Evening Ledger	Lost	579,490 Lines

Those who spend advertising dollars are fast coming to appreciate the fact that it's not so much how many people you talk to, as how many hear and believe your story.

THE PHILADE

Alw

SECOND LARGEST MORNI

AHEAD

Philadelphia Record not only showed a substantial gain in newspaper to show any gain at all

AND WHO DID IT

Advertising Personnel

Rowe Stewart, President

W. H. H. Neville, Advertising Manager

Ross Anderson
J. C. Bates
Miss M. Bell
G. N. Benjamin
S. Berman
J. J. Brown
J. A. Butler
A. M. Burns
Joseph Campbell
J. J. Carlin
William Collar
Miss Sara Cohen
W. W. Dalling
J. S. Dimon
Miss R. V. Donahue
Miss Irene M. Farrel
Charles Fayko
C. H. Fehling
Joseph L. Fitzpatrick
C. W. Fleming
Miss Margaret Fort
C. W. Foy

Robert J. Gicking
E. L. Gilchrist
E. Forrest Held
Miss M. Helms
A. E. Hera
C. L. Herschel
Robert Hitchings
Max Kahn
C. W. Kelly
L. F. King
R. J. Knight
William Koset
P. W. Lewis
Miss Catherine Lynn
William F. Maginnis
Miss Marian C. Mahony
Edwin I. Manning
H. J. Mayer
Miss H. McDermott
C. F. McGowan
Miss V. McGurk

Miss R. McManus
Miss Ruth Miller
Miss Ethel R. Moran
Miss Rose Mungiole
Miss Ethel O'Connor
Anthony Pavese
H. A. Peirsol
Alfred Pflueger
Miss Marie Quindlen
Fergus Reed
Warren G. Sanderson
Miss Eleanor Schweiger
Vernon S. Smith
Harry Spain
W. Stark
Arthur H. Story
William V. Stroup
Harry S. Waters
William C. Weber
Miss K. D. Whelen
William H. Winslow

Foreign Representatives: Story, Brooks & Finley
Financial and Steamship Representative: Robert S. Farley

HIA RECORD

le

LY IN PHILADELPHIA

BUILDING NEWSPAPER CIRCULATION

How Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette Increased Mail Circulation—Getting the Boys to Make That Pesky Sales Talk—Worcester Post Tries Recipe Contest

W. G. MERCIER, circulation manager of the Fort Wayne (Ind.) Journal-Gazette, has a story to tell. The Journal-Gazette, a morning paper published in a town of 100,000 population, with a trading area of less than 50 miles, in which reside 300,000 persons, has built up a mail subscription list of close to 19,000 readers.

"This circulation," Mercier has explained, "was built up through the sale of a splendid newspaper by experienced salesmen making direct house to house calls on the rural route residents.

"These men are paid a straight commission of 25 per cent on renewals and 33⅓ per cent on all new business, plus an allowance of $2.50 a day for auto expense. They furnish and maintain their autos. The circulation manager assigns them their territory. A card system is maintained by the circulation department showing the dates canvasses or when mail canvass by letter or circulars have been made of the routes operated. This card record makes a systematic canvass possible.

"During the week ending June 11, 1927, the cash collections totaled $1,336.50. Eight solicitors working a total of 42 days during that week produced 108 new subscriptions and 169 renewals. The total expense involved which included the cost of magazines, insurance policies, etc., was $459.43. The cost per order, therefore, was $1.65 for every $4.00 subscription. The pecentage of new subscribers was 40 per cent with 60 per cent renewals.

"Employment of good solicitors is the best method we have ever found for building mail circulation."

That poem "barefoot boy with cheeks of tan," as every circulator knows, should read "bashful boy." Sometimes you just can't make them give that sales talk. To get them to ring the door bell is at times a feat in itself.

But John Ahlers of Spokane, Wash., has an idea. He passed it on to EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week as follows:

"A good scheme to keep the boys working is to leave a free amusement ticket or some other sort of a prize at the home of some friendly non-subscriber to be given to the first boy giving a complete 'selling talk' to the prospect.

"The first night tell the boy that the prize is somewhere on his route. If he does not find it the first night he will be encouraged on the second night if you name the street on which it is to be found. In order to find it he will have to try many people whom he did not think wanted his paper and he will be agreeably surprised if some of them take it. The mystery of the 'game' also interests the boys."

The Worcester (Mass.) Post is gunning for summer slump circulation with a recipe prize contest. Awards totaling $300 weekly are offered, with the stipulation that winners who are carrier-delivered readers of the paper will receive double the offered awards.

C. Ray Graves, who has been Canton (Ill.) circulation representative of the Peoria (Ill.) Star, has been made district circulation manager and F. G. Gmelich of Peoria, with the Star circulation department four years, has been made Canton circulation manager.

The Chicago Tribune's third annual golf driving contest will be held Sunday, August 7. Entries close at noon Saturday, August 6. The purpose of the contest is to find the best tee shot expert within range of The Tribune's circulation. The contest is open to any amateur and a contestant may use any golf club, ball or tee that is legal under the rules of the United States Golf Association.

Each contestant will drive three balls, the total distance of the three drives to count.

In accordance with the Tribune's policy of fostering amateur sports, there will be no professional contest this year, but instead there will be a new contest for women.

Three silver cups and thirty-six gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded to the winning golfers.

The Chicago Herald & Examiner is also making it possible for many legionnaires and members of auxiliary units to go to Paris this September to attend the legion convention.

The veterans, who sell subscriptions for the Herald & Examiner, receive cash pay and the newspaper then sees that all their expenses are paid to Paris aboard the legion ships.

As a special inducement, the Herald & Examiner last week gave $50 in cash awards to the three legionnaires or members of auxiliary units who sent in the largest number of subscriptions.

Readers of the Chicago Evening American are helping the Cook Book editor of the paper prepare a new cook book, by furnishing her with menus and recipes. The newspaper asked its readers to send in to the Cook Book editor their favored recipes and menus, or their favored recipe for one dish. The best of these will be compiled and published in a volume of about 250 pages.

SEEK STANDARD TRADE AREA

A. N. A. Finds Present Newspaper Definitions "Inconclusive"

Further discussion of the problem of determining trading areas featured a special meeting of the research council of the Association of National Advertisers, held in New York Aug. 4. The advertisers are seeking to establish a uniform method of dividing the country into selling areas to assist in sales control.

Arthur Ogle, A. N. A. secretary, commenting on this week's meeting, declared the association was particularly anxious to find a uniform method of determining newspaper trading areas. As set up by publishers at present the areas are inconclusive, he said, because they are not standard.

Attending the meeting were Everett Smith, who is chairman of the council, S. E. Conybeare, Armstrong Cork Company; E. T. Hall, Ralston Purina Company; M. B. Bates, Life Savers Corporation; W. A. Hart, DuPont de Nemours Company, Inc.; P. L. Thomson, Western Electric Company, and Bernard Lictenberg, Alexander Hamilton Institute.

PINCH-HITTER FOR PREACHER

When efforts failed to secure a pastor to replace an absent clergyman at Worcester, Mass., Robert T. Phillips, church reporter for the Worcester Telegram, stepped into the breach and conducted the services recently. After doing the parson's work, Phillips went at his own day's work and "did the beat" as usual. The reporter's sermon touched on native life in India, based on observations he made on a tour two years ago.

WOMEN IN ADVERTISING AND JOURNALISM

These Girls Are Following Their Nose for News in South America—Washington Chapter of Theta Sigma Phi—Miss Foster Writes on Swimming

PART of the cargo which the freighter, the S. S. Commercial Guide, took to South America on its last voyage from New York recently was two Indiana newspaper girls in search of information about their Latin-American neighbors.

Miss Josephine Crowder and Miss Ruth Crawford

The young women, Miss Josephine Crowder of Sullivan, Ind., and Miss Ruth Crawford of Terre Haute, have commissions from some of the leading journals of the United States for articles covering their tour.

They intend, during the three months they are in South America, to visit Brazil, the Argentine, Chili, Bolivia and Peru, returning to the United States by way of the Panama Canal.

From the beginning the young women have sought to avoid the usual tourist trails through South America. To do this they shipped as passengers on a freighter, carrying a cargo to Santos, Brazil; Montevideo and Bueno Aires. They write back that their choice proved not only a happy one but a surprising one as well. They had expected, since the ship was a freighter, that there would be a chance to pose as travelers who could withstand great hardship. Instead, they found themselves basking in leisure and comfort throughout the twenty-day voyage through southern waters.

The seamen were at first at a loss to know whether to treat "the girls" as ladies of leisure or as human beings, but finally decided upon the latter course. Consequently, the travelers enjoyed the camaraderie of a rare cosmopolitan group, a Norwegian captain, a Danish and a Canadian engineer, a South American banker and an Australian trader en route to his headquarters in South America. The latter two, along with the two Hoosier girls, made up the entire passenger list, the first which the U. S. S. Commercial Guide has ever carried.

The itinerary of the young women is indefinite. They plan to go wherever their "nose for news" scents a good story. They intend interviewing the leading political figures of the countries visited, also to study trade and social conditions as they bear on relations to the United States. They hope to visit the interior, as well as the cities, and are looking forward to a stay on a ranch.

Both Miss Crowder and Miss Crawford have had varied newspaper experience. The former, who is a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. R. Crowder, after graduating from Indiana University, was feature writer for the Terre Haute Spectator and the Terre Haute Post. For the last year she has been feature writer on the Tourist News, a magazine published in St. Petersburg, Fla., and also done correspondence work for the New York World.

Miss Crawford likewise started her newspaper work on the Saturday Spectator in Terre Haute. During the Florida boom she did newspaper and magazine work in St. Petersburg. For the last year she has been working in New York, doing, among other feature work, a series of interviews with prominent Ameri... which was released by the United ... ture Syndicate of the United Press A... ciation. She is the daughter of Mr. ... Mrs. Edward Graves Crawford.

The organization of the National ... tal Alumna Chapter of Theta S... Phi, national honorary and professi... fraternity for women in journalism, ... brought together eleven of Wash... ton's younger newspaper and adverti... women with varied positions.

The chapter was organized for the ... pose of promoting the projects for wo... in journalism sponsored by the frater... particularly The Matrix, the maga... published by the fraternity for wo... in journalism, and the Woman's Nati... Journalistic Register, the fraternity's ... ployment agency, which has offices ... New York and Chicago, and for ... further purpose of working for the ... interests of women in journalism ... Washington.

The members of the National Ca... Alumna Chapter of Theta Sigma Phi:

Mrs. Alice Watts Hostetler, a gr... ate of DePauw University, associate ... itor of the Congressional Digest;

Miss Josephine Hemphill, a grad... of Kansas State Agricultural Coll... who, as "Aunt Sammy," plans the ho... hold radio programs of the United St... Department of Agriculture;

Miss Ruth E. Hill, a graduate of ... University of Kansas, the only wo... on the staff of the United States D... who covers the Department of Agri... ture for the paper;

Miss Flora G. Orr, a graduate of ... University of Wisconsin, who is ... Washington correspondent of the St. P... News and the Omaha News;

Mrs. Marjorie Hendricks Davis, ... graduate of the University of Wiscon... who writes biographies for the Natio... Dictionary of Biography;

Miss Edith Porter, a graduate of ... University of Wisconsin, who is on ... advertising staff of Palais Royal, a Wa... ington department store;

Mrs. Marjorie Binford Woods, ... graduate of Indiana University, w... handles feature advertising, particula... the "Hunting for Homes" feature wh... she recently originated on the Washing... Daily News;

Mrs. Lenore Berry Bennett, a gradu... of the Kansas State Agricultural Colle...

Miss Ruby A. Black, a graduate ... the University of Texas, who cov... Congress for the General Press Assoc... tion, a bureau serving as Washing... correspondent for forty eastern ne... papers;

Miss Pennell Crosby, a graduate of ... University of Wisconsin, who works ... a trade journal;

Miss Geneva Stiffler, a graduate ... Ohio State University, who is on ... editorial staff of the National Educati... Association.

One of Miss Porter's advertisemen... was recently reproduced in an advert... ing trade journal as an example of "p... fect copywriting."

Miss Hemphill has contributed to t... Country Gentleman and Child Life.

Miss Black is editor of the fraternit... magazine, The Matrix, and has contri... uted to the Nation. She writes regular... for Equal Rights, the Feminist week... published by the National Woman... Party.

During its first year, the Nation... Capital Alumna Chapter of Theta Sig... Phi has had as guests of honor at its ... weekly meetings the leading newspap... women of Washington, including Mi... Cora Rigby, head of the Washigton B... reau of the Christian Science Monito... Miss Marjorie Shuler, of the Christi... Science Monitor; Miss Ruth Finney, ... the Scripps-Howard Newspaper Allianc... Miss Martha Strayer, of the Washingto... Daily News; Miss Genevieve Hendrick... writer on interior decoration, and sever... fiction writers, including Mrs. Bertha ... Mellett and Lella Warren, youthful no... elist and short story writer.

Miss Dorothy Foster, assistant physic... education director of the Worceste... (Mass.) Y. W. C. A., is writing a seri... of articles for women and girl swimmer... which are appearing daily in the Wo... cester (Mass.) Evening Post.

Test Your Eyes!

Each of the three columns below is set in 7 Point Ideal News Face. The first column is solid, the second half point leaded, and the third one point leaded.

Read each column all the way down without stopping. Which column can you read quickest and with the least effort?

Naturally, your answer will be "the column that is one point leaded."

This illustrates very clearly and conclusively a principle in legibility that has long been accepted by authorities on the subject.

And just as proper white space between lines is essential to easy reading, so words with proper white space between letters are easier to read than words whose letters are too closely "packed" together.

Like an old friend . . . Intertype Ideal News . . . wears well on the eyes.

SOLID

It has been said that "all reading demands an effort." To produce a type for newspaper use which can be read almost without effort is a problem which has engaged the attention of Intertype designers for several years.

The solution of this problem resulted in the production of the Intertype News Series. This new series is meeting the unqualified approval of all those who believe that types should be made for the needs of the newspaper reader.

The qualities which make the Intertype News Series easy to read are not free from the usual mannerisms of the standard newspaper type faces. The Intertype News Series conforms to the familiar and friendly design to which the majority of newspaper readers are accustomed, and yet gives a clearness to print which is not to be had by the use of ordinary light-face type.

It's Like an Old Friend

Intertype established the fact that easy-to-read type is familiar type. Unfamiliar type quickly tires the eyes. Intertype then set about to improve familiar type. The changes from old standards were, in most instances, not of great importance, but most of them were in directions that have heretofore been avoided by type-makers.

The hairlines of Intertype News Series show a distinctly visible thickness. The serifs were shortened and bracketed, and the descenders were made a little longer. The sharp contrast between thin and thick lines has

HALF POINT LEADED

It has been said that "all reading demands an effort." To produce a type for newspaper use which can be read almost without effort is a problem which has engaged the attention of Intertype designers for several years.

The solution of this problem resulted in the production of the Intertype News Series. This new series is meeting the unqualified approval of all those who believe that types should be made for the needs of the newspaper reader.

The qualities which make the Intertype News Series easy to read are not free from the usual mannerisms of the standard newspaper type faces. The Intertype News Series conforms to the familiar and friendly design to which the majority of newspaper readers are accustomed, and yet gives a clearness to print which is not to be had by the use of ordinary light-face type.

It's Like an Old Friend

Intertype established the fact that easy-to-read type is familiar type. Unfamiliar type quickly tires the eyes. Intertype then set about to improve familiar type. The changes from old standards were, in most instances, not of great importance, but most of them were in directions that have heretofore been avoided by type-makers.

The hairlines of Intertype News Series show a distinctly visible thickness. The serifs were shortened and

ONE POINT LEADED

It has been said that "all reading demands an effort." To produce a type for newspaper use which can be read almost without effort is a problem which has engaged the attention of Intertype designers for several years.

The solution of this problem resulted in the production of the Intertype News Series. This new series is meeting the unqualified approval of all those who believe that types should be made for the needs of the newspaper reader.

The qualities which make the Intertype News Series easy to read are not free from the usual mannerisms of the standard newspaper type faces. The Intertype News Series conforms to the familiar and friendly design to which the majority of newspaper readers are accustomed, and yet gives a clearness to print which is not to be had by the use of ordinary light-face type.

It's Like an Old Friend

Intertype established the fact that easy-to-read type is familiar type. Unfamiliar type quickly tires the eyes. Intertype then set about to improve familiar type. The changes from old standards were, in most instances, not of great importance, but most of them were in directions that have heretofore been avoided by type-makers.

The hairlines of Intertype News

Intertype matrices will run in other slug-casting machines

Write nearest branch for larger specimens

Standardized INTERTYPE TRADE MARK

Designed in 5½, 6½, 7 and 8 Point

INTERTYPE CORPORATION: New York 1440 Broadway; Chicago 130 N. Franklin St.; Memphis McCall Bldg.; San Francisco 560 Howard St.; Los Angeles 1240 S. Main St.; Boston 80 Federal St.; London; Berlin

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

Puzzle Authors Rally to Defend Their Games Attacked by Professor—Miami Valley Press Service Organized—Water Color Artist Turns to Comics

WHEN a mere professor attacked puzzles the other day saying that "only morons engage in such forms of mental recreation," the puzzle authors got mad and statistical at the same time. Dr. Charles Gray Shaw, professor of philosophy of New York University, the attacking professor, is now in retreat.

Margaret Petherbridge, one of the originators of the cross-word puzzle, had this to say about Dr. Shaw's remarks:

"If Dr. Shaw says that people who do cross-word puzzles are morons I think he is maligning a large portion of the population, for many, many people like to do them."

Miss Petherbridge, who collaborated with Prosper Bernelli and F. Gregory Hartwick on the first cross-word puzzle book, said that the eighth book will be published in the near future and the ninth has already been completed.

Mr. Bernelli said that to date nearly 2,000,000 cross-word puzzle books have been sold. He enumerated Heywood Broun, F. P. A., Ruth Hale, Clare Briggs and Herb Roth as some of the 'morons' who like the sport.

Milton Mackaye, originator of the "Guggenheim," another type of brain tickler, likewise disagrees with the professor. "Dr. Shaw is breaking my heart." said Mr. Mackaye today. "For years I've been trying to crawl out of the moron class. First I became a newspaper man, and that didn't help any. Then I did cross-word puzzles, shook the dust off Dr. Shaw's books and read 'em, and, as a final prayerful gesture, helped write a Guggenheim book, and now I find out my case is as hopeless as that of the famous Mr. X of Weisbaden.

"Among the 'morons' who play and like Guggenheim are Professor Phelps of Yale, Irving T. Bush, Dr. Canby, Will Irwin, Irvin S. Cobb and others. Those fellows never did get along very well in school."

Three Ohio and Florida news writers have organized the Miami Valley Press Service with headquarters at Dayton, Ohio.

They are: George R. Hayes, director of public relations for Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus last season; Bert Klopfer who spent the last five years in newspaper work in Florida, and Miriam Rosenthal, until recently of the Dayton Daily News.

The Miami-Valley Press Service will engage itself in news and feature writing for syndicates and national publicity and advertising.

Alan Dunn, who draws "Gladys," a daily one column comic, for the Metropolitan Newspaper Service, established himself as a painter in oils and water colors before turning to the "funnies." He has exhibited at the National Academy and at the Chicago International Watercolor Exhibit. He is a fellow of the American Academy at Rome and is a member of the American Water Color Society and the Tiffany Foundation.

The Jersey Feature Service was organized last week by Irving A. Brody, political writer and legislative correspondent, and Leo J. Hershdorfer, special staff writer of the Union City (N. J.) Hudson Dispatch. The new syndicate intends to serve New Jersey papers mainly with political news, offering two releases a week. Brody, before joining the Dispatch was on the Elizabeth Times, Troy (N. Y.) Times, Troy Record, and Albany Argus. Hershdorfer was formerly city editor of the Bayonne (N. J.) Public Opinion and the Bayonne Times.

Leslie Fulenwider, president of the Famous Features Syndicate, is in Paris on business.

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate has obtained second serial rights to "The Strange Countess," by Edgar Wallace.

Dr. William T. Ellis, who syndicates Sunday School lessons from Swarthmore, Pa., is now making a speaking tour in the South.

Science Service, Washington, D. C., is offering a series of daily articles on building and and flying model airplanes. The author is Paul Edward Garber, assistant curator of engineering in charge of aeronautics, Smithsonian Institute, and a former air mail pilot.

Norman Klein is author of a series of three articles describing how Attorney General Arthur L. Gilliom of Indiana defied Hoosier State Law in order to give his sick children whiskey when the doctor prescribed it and other angles of the fight to modify the Wright act. They are being placed by the Post Syndicate, New York.

NEWSPAPER GOODWILL HELD UNTAXABLE

Knoxville (Tenn.) Papers Win Court Fight Against County Tax Assessor's Effort to Levy on Intangibles

An effort to assess the "good will" of Knoxville (Tenn.) newspapers has been lost by the county tax assessor Frank L. West.

The state board of equalization had upheld the contention of the newspapers that only their physical property was subject to taxation. Mr. West thereupon took the case to the courts. Naming the Journal and the News-Sentinel and the equalization board as defendants, Mr. West brought suit in the name of the state.

Judge A. B. Neil of the second circuit court at Nashville held that Mr. West had no right to seek to review a decision handed down by the state board of equalization.

The late Attorney-General of Tennessee, Frank M. Thompson, had also held that the intangibles of newspapers are not subject to taxation, it was pointed out this week.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

Quinlin Organizes Own Business in Chicago—Howell Now Vice-President of Burton Bigelow, Buffalo—Fuller & Smith Elects Billingsley

ROY QUINLIN is president and treasurer of a new advertising agency he has organized in Chicago under the name of the Quinlin Company. John Hayes Kelly formerly with Henri, Hurst & McDonald, Chicago, is secretary. Mr. Quinlin was formerly connected with the Potts-Turnbull Company.

Allen Billingsley has been elected a director and vice-president of Fuller & Smith, Cleveland advertising agency. He has been service manager of the agency for more than three years.

Shields & Colcord, Chicago advertising agency, has changed its name to Shields & Vanden, Inc. George W. Vanden has been elected vice-president.

The Homer McKee Company, Inc., Indianapolis, announces the appointment of Francis McGregor Smith to take charge of creative production. He was recently head of the direct mail department of the Detroit Saturday Night Press.

Erwin, Wasey & Co., is now directing the account of E. Frederics, Inc., manufacturer of permanent hair waving machines, New York.

Clarence L. Newton has been elected president and a director of the James T. Wetherald Advertising Agency, Inc., Boston, succeeding the late James T. Wetherald.

Walter R. Howell, who has been editing a house organ for Dodge Bros., Inc., of Detroit, has resigned to become vice-president and account executive of the Burton Bigelow Advertising Agency, Buffalo.

WITH THE GENERAL ADVERTISERS

Newspaper Campaigns Planned by Mutual Drug Companies—Piggly Wiggly in Co-operative Drive—Brown Sales Manager of Waltham Watch Company

JOBBING orgnaizations are being formed in various communities under the name of the Mutual Drug Companies for the purpose of meeting chain store and other competition and the keeping down of selling costs. Newspaper advertising campaigns are being planned for next year in Cleveland, Buffalo, Baltimore, Columbus, Ohio, Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Louis, and Kansas City. The prime mover in the organization is F. B. Rous, head of the Mutual Drug Company Cleveland. The various local mutual organizations have a national body known as the Federal Wholesale Druggists' Association, which will hold its next annual meeting in St. Louis, Sept. 14-16.

A co-operative campaign will start shortly for the Piggly Wiggly Operators' Association. Copy is to be placed by the J. Walter Thompson Company. There are 307 operators operating more than 2,400 stores in 824 cities and towns. The operators are each required to subscribe $7.50 per store per month for three years for advertising.

Wallace H. McLauthin, for more than 30 years advertising manager of Walter Baker & Co., Ltd., Boston, has resigned. The Baker company was recently purchased by the Postum Cereal Company, of which Ralph Starr Butler is advertising manager.

A. Page Brown, formerly with the Boston office of the Curtis Publishing Company, has been appointed sales manager of the Waltham Watch Company, Waltham, Mass. Recently Mr. Brown was with the H. B. Humphrey Company,

---

A net profit of $2,204,520 after charges for the first six months of 1927 is reported by the Lambert Pharmacal Company, Listerine makers, compared with $1,608,963 in the first half of 1926.

Donald K. David, for seven years assistant dean of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration in Cambridge, Mass., has resigned to become executive vice-president of the Royal Baking Powder Co.

AD TIPS

Aitkin-Kynett Company, 1516 Chestnut stre Philadelphia. Placing account for the Red L Cabinet Company, Red Lion, Pa.

Anthracite Operators Conference, 120 Bro way, New York. Placing account direct w newspapers.

Geo. Batten Company, 383 Madison aven New York. Now placing account for Beldi Hall Company, Belding, Michigan, makers Electro Ice Refrigerators.

Austin F. Bement, Inc., General Mot Building, Detroit. Placing orders for the C. Dent & Company.

Blaker Advertising Agency, Inc., 110 W 40th street, New York. Placing orders i the New Haven Clock Company, New Have Connecticut.

Biow Company, Inc., 9 East 40th street, N York. Renewing contracts for S. Glensb Sons Company, New York.

Brandt Advertising Company, 431 Nor Michigan avenue, Chicago. Sending copy a few papers on the Battle Creek Foo Company, Battle Creek, Michigan.

Glen Buck Company, 39 S. La Salle stree Chicago. Placing the account of the Electric Research Laboratories, Chicago, ERLA Radi

Calkins & Holden, Inc., 247 Park avenu New York. Making contracts to run fro August to November for the National Bi cuit Company, New York.

Nelson Chesman & Co., Inc., 1110 Locus street, St. Louis, Mo. Will handle accou for the Plapao Laboratories, Inc., St. Louis manufacturers Stuart's Adhesif Plapao-Pads an Goodform Reducer Supporter. Issuing contract to newspapers on the A. H. Lewis Medicin Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Corman Company, Inc., 49 West 45th street New York. Placing a test campaign wit newspapers for the Sterling Chemical Corpora tion, New York.

Dorland Agency, 101 Park avenue, New York. Placing account for Tecla Pearls.

Geo. L. Dyer Company, 76 West Munroe street, Chicago. Is issuing copy to newspapers on the Old Nick Candy Bar, Schutter-Johnson Candy Company, Chicago.

Ferry-Hanley Advertising Company, Inc., 1110 Grand avenue, Kansas City, Mo. Placing account for the Exchange Sawills Sales Company, Kansas City, Mo.

Albert Frank & Co., 134 S. La Salle street, Chicago. Is now placing the advertising of the Jewel Tea Company.

Hanff-Metzger, Inc., 1501 Broadway, New York. Placing account for Federal-Brandes, Inc., "Kolster Radio Equipment," Newark, N. J.

Harvey Adv. Agency, Walton Building, Atlanta, Ga. Is now placing account for Youthform Company, Atlanta.

Arnold Joerns Company, 26 East Huron street, Chicago. Has secured account of the Richmond Radiator Company, Chicago and New York.

Joseph Katz Company, 16 East Mount Vernon Place. Baltimore, Md. Renewing contracts for the Sealpax Company, Baltimore.

Klau - Van Pietersom - Dunlap - Younggreen, Inc., 417 Sycamore street, Milwaukee, Wis. Now placing the advertising of Yahr-Lange Company, Milwaukee, manufacturers of radios.

Lennen & Mitchell, Inc., 17 East 45th street, New York. Placing extensive newspapers campaign for P. Lorillard & Company, "Old Gold Cigarette," New York.

Littlehale Advertising Agency, 175 5th avenue, New York. Placing advertising generally for the Zetka Laboratories, Inc., Newark, N. J., and the Kilzo Chemical Company, New York.

Lord & Thomas and Logan, 247 Park avenue, New York. Placing an extensive schedule for the American Tobacco Company, "Lucky Strike."

Lord & Thomas and Logan, Inc., 1151 South Broadway, Los Angeles. Placing account for the California Fruit Growers' Exchange. Los Angeles.

Mitchell-Faust Company, 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Is issuing copy to a scattered list of newspapers on F. J. Cheney & Company, Toledo, Ohio.

Morris-Harris Advertising Company, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Placing account for the Reva Corporation, Chicago, manufacturers "Reva" hair tonic.

Quinlan Advertising Company, 35 East Wacker drive, Chicago. Will hereafter place the advertising of Lloyd Manufacturing Company, Menominee, Michigan.

William H. Rankin Company, 342 Madison avenue, New York. Placing orders generally for Thomas J. Lipton, teas, New York.

Roche Advertising Co., 310 South Michigan boulevard, Chicago. Has released some schedules on the Studebaker Motor Car Company, South Bend, Indiana.

Ruthrauff & Ryan, Inc., 225 North Michigan boulevard, Chicago. Placing advertising for the Glessner Company, Findlay, Ohio.

United States Advertising Corporation, Home Bank Building, Toledo, Ohio. Placing orders in coast newspapers for the Falcon Motors Corporation, Detroit.

Vanderhoof & Co., 167 East Ontario street, Chicago. Is using a few Chicago papers only on Tweaker Manufacturing Company, Chicago.

Williams & Cunnyngham, 6 North Michigan boulevard, Chicago. Is now placing account for the McDougall Company, Frankfort, Indiana.

Young & Rubicam, 285 Madison avenue, New York. Placing advertising in about sixty newspapers for the Borden Company, condensed milks.

THE JOURNAL DAILIES of OTTAWA say the Cline System of Press Control— "has given entire satisfaction."

Journal Building

The Journal Dailies

The Evening Journal The Morning Journal

Member Audit Bureau of Circulations

The Journal Publishing Co. of Ottawa Limited, Publishers

Advertising Offices

TORONTO Branch Office, 95 King St. East, J. B. Rathbone, Manager

UNITED STATES—Chas. H. Eddy Co., New York, Park-Lexington Bldg.: Chicago, 666 Wrigley Bldg.: Boston, Old South Bldg.

Ottawa, October 8, 1925.
Canada

The Cline Electric Mfg. Co.,
Conway Building,
111 West Washington St.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

We are very satisfied at the manner the Electric Press Control your company placed in our pressroom about a year ago has done its work. It is smooth, easy to handle and has given entire satisfaction. So far we have had no trouble with it, and its rugged construction seems to indicate that it will give many years of good service.

The Pressmen are very highly pleased at the easy manner in which the press can be controlled by your system and the signal system installed has eliminated any danger of accidents when working the press. The paper brake system is working fine and has also given good satisfaction.

Yours truly,

MP:AJH

THE JOURNAL PUBLISHING CO.,

Michael Powell

GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT.

The Cline Electric Mfg. Co. furnish Motors and Control Equipments for Printing Presses and Auxiliary Machinery for Newspaper and Job Presses.

CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO.

MAIN OFFICE, CONWAY BUILDING, 111 W. WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

WESTERN OFFICE
FIRST NAT'L BANK BLDG.
SAN FRANCISCO
CALIFORNIA

CLINE SYSTEM — CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO. CHICAGO — QUALITY, SERVICE, SAFE — CLINE WESTINGHOUSE

EASTERN OFFICE
MARBRIDGE BLDG.
47 WEST 34th ST.
NEW YORK CITY

INSIDE DETAILS OF GREAT PITTSBURGH MERGERS

(Continued from page 4)

advertisements were cleaned off the second and third pages of the first section and from the first page of the second section. Mr. Williams sent out notices by registered mail to a list of 3,000 advertisers announcing the increases in advertising rates. These increases, ranging from six to 10 cents a line, were effective with the Aug. 2 issue, and, according to Mr. Williams every local advertiser continued his space at the higher rates. The lowest department store rate of the Sun-Telegraph is 25 cents a line, according to Mr. Williams, comparing with a price of 30 cents local advertisers were forced to pay for representation in both the old Pittsburgh Sun and the Chronicle-Telegraph.

As announced this week at the office of Paul Block, Inc., the new national advertising rates for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, which happen to be the same, follow:

For 5,000-line contracts: 32 cents, first four months; 36 cents second four months; 40 cents, thereafter; 2,500-line contracts: 35 cents, first four months; 39 cents, second four months; and 43 cents, thereafter; transient: 40 cents, first four months; 45 cents, second four months, and 50 cents, thereafter.

Rates for the Sunday Sun-Telegraph are: For 5,000-line contracts, 40 cents, for the first four months; 45 cents, second four months; and 50 cents thereafter; 2,500-line contracts, 43 cents first four months; 48 cents, second four months; and 54 cents, thereafter; transient, 50 cents first four months; 56 cents, second four months; and 60 cents, thereafter.

The Hearst accounting system is also being installed on the Sun-Telegraph.

In returning to Pittsburgh as publisher of the new Hearst daily, Harry Bitner is renewing former associations and friendships. Bitner and T. R. Williams, who remains as business manager, had their first taste of journalism when they got out the college paper together at Franklin-Marshall College. Williams was graduated in 1902 and immediately started work as a reporter on the Pittsburgh Press. Bitner was a year behind, but as soon as he was graduated in 1903 he hastened to join his friend on the staff of the same paper. When a few years later, Williams was made city editor of the Press, he made Bitner his assistant. Bitner likewise followed Williams when the latter changed to the Chronicle-Telegraph, was made managing editor and then business manager. In 1922, Bitner left Pittsburgh to become associated with Mr. Hearst in Detroit.

Pennsylvania journalism loses the name of a family long connected with the upbuilding and governing of the state in the retirement of George S. Oliver and A. K. Oliver, whom Mr. Hearst and Mr. Bitner have succeeded as president and vice-president respectively of the company publishing the Sun-Telegraph.

Henry William Oliver, grandfather of the two brothers who have just sold out their newspaper property, came to Pittsburgh from Ireland and opened a saddlery warehouse in that city. George T., father of the two brothers, was born in Ireland during a return of his parents to their native land, but he always considered himself a native American. He made a fortune in steel in Pittsburgh, having established the Oliver Steel & Wire Company, which he later sold out to the United States Steel Corporation. The year of this sale was 1900 and in the same year Mr. Oliver purchased the Chronicle-Telegraph.

George S. Oliver was graduated from Yale in 1899 and started newspaper work at the time of the purchase of the Chronicle-Telegraph, George S., in talking with friends, has sometimes said:

"I worked up from office boy to president without a change of salary."

Like his father before him, George S. Oliver went into politics. He, however, never held public office while his father had been a U. S. Senator.

After he was graduated from Yale in 1903, A. K. Oliver also started his newspaper career on the Chronicle-Telegraph. He was a reporter at first, and today recalls how he covered a mine explosion near Pittsburgh in the winter of 1904 when 178 were killed. "A. K." worked on the news end of his father's paper until 1906 when he was appointed advertising manager. He also went into politics and served two years as city councilman.

Another who expressed regret at retirement from newspaper publishing was Arthur E. Braun.

The statement of Mr. Braun, signed jointly with George C. Moore, on relinquishing control of the Post and Sun, read in part as follows:

"It is with keen regret that we make this announcement of our retirement from the newspaper publishing field in Pittsburgh. For 16 years the services these papers have rendered to the economic development and growing civic consciousness of this great city has been a constant challenge to further labors.

"Multiplying demands of other interests, however, now leave us no choice. It would not be possible longer to devote to these newspapers the time and attention requisite to fulfillment of the inescapable obligations of a publisher. There is no course then, but to relinquish them to other hands."

Pittsburgh's newspaper history reaches back to the days when the city was a little cluster of log houses. It was in 1786—141 years ago—that the newspaper which became the Gazette-Times was founded. The Post, of which Mr. Block is now publisher, came into the field in 1842. Next to appear were the Chronicle and the Telegraph, later merged. The Sun was the city's newspaper baby. It was born 22 years ago.

John Scull and Joseph Hall founded the Pittsburgh Gazette. The first publication office was in a log house on the Monongahela river, at Water street and what was then known as Chancery lane. The equipment for the office was hauled across the Allegheny mountains from Philadelphia. Hall died after he had been in Pittsburgh about six months and his interest in the paper was acquired by John Boyd.

John Scull retired as editor of the paper in 1816. Morgan Neville became the editor and John I. Scull, a son of the founder, was made the business manager.

David M. McLean acquired the paper in 1822 and published it until 1829, when control of it passed into the hands of Neville B. Craig. Under his management it became a daily in 1833, having been a weekly and a semi-weekly up to that time.

Alexander Graham became the owner of the paper in 1840 and Craig performed the work of editor. D. N. White succeeded Craig as editor in 1841.

In 1847 Erastus Brooks had charge of the paper but about a year later D. N. White again took the helm. White remained in charge until 1856, when D. L. Eaton and Russell Errett succeeded him and conducted the paper until 1859. In that year the paper passed into the control of an organization composed of Eaton, Errett, S. Riddle and J. A. Crum. In 1866 F. B. Penniman, Josiah King, Nelson P. Reed and Thomas Houston became the owners, with Houston and King as editors.

Henry M. Long became a partner in 1871 but soon sold his interest to George W. Reed and D. L. Fleury.

In 1873 the ownership was known as King, Reed & Co., with Josiah King as editor in chief.

In 1877 the Gazette bought a controlling interest in the Commercial, a paper which had been started in 1864 by C. D. Bigham. The papers were merged and the name, the Commercial Gazette was adopted.

The Commercial Gazette was bought by the late George T. Oliver in 1900 and six years later the Pittsburgh Times, which was owned by the late Christopher L. Magee, was bought and merged. The paper then became known as the Gazette-Times and until the present there had been no further changes in the name.

Robert P. Nevin founded the Times and sold it to the company which Magee headed.

The Post became a newspaper under that name in September, 1842. It was an outgrowth of the Mercury and Manufacturer. The Post has been an organ of the Democratic party throughout its history. All other Pittsburgh papers, which endured for any great length of time, were Republican or independent.

Thomas Phillips and William H. Smith were founders of the Post but it quickly passed into the hands of a partnership known as Bigler, Sargent & Bigler. Lechy Harper and John Layton succeeded them in a year or two. John Layton died in 1854. Another partnership, Montgomery and Gilmore, bought the Post from Harper and sold it to James P. Barr. It was conducted for many years by Barr and his sons. The late T. Hart Given, then president of the Farmers' National bank, was the next owner. At his death, under the terms of his will, it passed into the control of Arthur E. Braun and George C. Moore, who had been Given's close associates in the banking business.

The Sun was started as an afternoon newspaper, 22 years ago, by the owners of the Post.

The Chronicle was the name of a newspaper founded in May, 1841, with J. Herron Foster and William H. White as joint editors. It was at first a weekly but was made a daily in 1842. Charles McKnight took over the paper in 1856, selling it in 1863 to J. G. Seibneck.

The Telegraph, which had been founded in the early seventies by H. Bucher Swoope, was consolidated with the Chronicle in 1884, and the Chronicle-Telegraph was the name chosen for the merged newspaper.

It was controlled for a number of years by Col. Oliver S. Hershman and associates, who sold it to George T. Oliver about 27 years ago.

ADD TO OKLAHOMA CHAIN

Elam and Lachenmeyer Buy Wewoka Daily Democrat and Weekly

With the purchase of the Wewoka Daily Democrat and the Wewoka Capital-Democrat, weekly, by Richard Elam and O. H. Lachenmeyer, from J. A. Patterson and V. A. Kiker of Wewoka, the third newspaper has been added to the Elam-Lachenmeyer chain of newspapers. The other two are the Pawhuska Journal-Capital and the Cushing Daily Citizen. Transfer of plant and equipment will occur Sept. 1. Additional equipment will be added. A long-time lease has been taken on a new brick building, which is being built for the newspaper.

This paper is to be under the direct supervision of Mr. Elam, who founded the Enid Morning News, the Ponca City Daily News and the Ardmore Daily Press. He is a past president of the Oklahoma State Press Association. Mr. Lachenmeyer was formerly connected with newspapers in Pennsylvania, but has been associated with Elam for the past three years in the publication of papers at Pawhuska and Cushing.

NEW MISSOURI DAILY

Publication of the Clinton (Mo.) Daily News by W. K. Leatherock, publisher of the Clinton Chronicle, has been started. It is an afternoon paper.

PROMOTIONS IN TOLEDO

Stephenson Now Associate Edit; Brown Managing Editor of News-Be

Appointment of Howard Stephenson be associate editor and Robert Brown be managing editor was announced t week by Har C. Place, edi of the Tol News-Bee Scripps - How newspaper.

HOWARD STEPHENSON

Brown joi the News-Bee cently as ne editor, after se ice with t Cleveland Pre He had been ne editor of t Cleveland Tim previous to connection wi the Press. Bro is a graduate of Ohio State Univers and has worked on newspapers in To Ohio; Wabash, Ind., and Miami, F He succeeds Paul Smith, resigned, managing editor.

Joining the News-Bee Staff after discharge from the army at the close the World War, Stephenson has be successively a reporter, city editor, promotion editor and editorial writer. He was educated at the University of Kansas and his previous newspaper experience was gained in Montreal, Springfield, Mass., Troy, Ohio, Waterbury, Conn., and in the Chicago and Columbus (O.) bureaus of the Associated Press. Stephenson was nation director for this year's marble tourn ment, staged annually under Scripp Howard auspices.

ROBERT BROWN

HELP FOR MOTORISTS

Chicago Tribune Seeks to Face Grie ance with Proper Remedy

As another feature to help automobi owners, the Chicago Tribune has estab lished a permanent new Sunday depar ment, "The Friend of the Motorist." Th department, assigned to the automobil section of the Sunday Tribune, has fo its object the public airing of the trouble injustices and abuses that all automobil owners and drivers face, and their ulti mate correction through public appeal and co-operation with the proper author ties. The department will be open to a motorists.

In addressing communications to "Th Friend of the Motorist," readers ar asked to confine their letters to 30 words.

"The Largest Business of Its Kind in America"

HOTALING'S NEWS AGENCY

NEW YORK

Distributors of Out-of-Town Newspapers

RETAIL BRANCHES

NEWS-STANDS—43rd & Broadway
North End of The Times Bldg.

WOOLWORTH BUILDING
Barclay St. Entrance

FOREIGN NEWS DEPOT
The TIMES BUILDING

FROM "NEWSPAPER HEADQUARTERS," 308 West 40th STREET.
We make five deliveries daily to the principal hotel news-stands.
(Call Longacre 4649)

Any daily, Sunday or weekly newspaper in the world secured. Low prices quoted on quantity and standing orders.
Back numbers of New York and out-of-town newspapers carried in stock.

L. K. Rothman

Machinist in Charge

Little Rock, Ark., Little Rock Gazette

. . . . "I figure that the time I am worth most to my paper is when I can sit back in my corner and watch a line of sweet-running Linotypes grinding out slugs. If a machinist has sense enough to stick to genuine Linotype parts, keep his machines cleaned and oiled and otherwise leave them alone, that is about all he will have to do and he will get pretty close to 100 per cent production from them."

GOOD WORK
GOES INTO IT

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

GOOD WORK
COMES OUT
OF IT

REPAIR BILLS FOR 1952

. . . It is this man's business to keep them down

The remarkably low records of upkeep cost that are constantly being reported by Linotype users are due partly to the self-protective features of Linotype design and partly to the extreme vigilance of Linotype inspection. Parts are rejected for microscopic defects. But in the course of twenty-five years' operation the defect which seems so trivial now might cause the part to wear or break. This man, and hundreds of others like him, are constantly on the lookout for possible trouble years before it may happen.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED
NEW ORLEANS TORONTO, CAN.

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

LINOTYPED IN GARAMOND AND GARAMOND BOLD

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

An Old Idea Refurbished Results in Two Additional Columns for the Fresno Bee—Do You Keep Reminders of Service in Busy Offices?—Stuffers for Mailing Lists

A SOMEWHAT new adaptation of an old classified idea has resulted in two additional columns of new classified advertising daily for the Fresno (Cal.) Bee. It is a variation of the "Who's Who" or business directory plan, and was put into effect on The Bee two weeks ago by Robert L. Bellem, the paper's classified advertising manager. So far it has resulted in new thirty-day orders to the tune of two full columns.

After having exhausted practically all the local business directory prospects and building the Fresno "Who's Who" to a daily two columns, Mr. Bellem conceived the idea of establishing a separate directory for the smaller towns surrounding Fresno. He set his telephone solicitors to work calling the merchants, physicians and service specialists within the radius of Fresno county—making sure that no telephone call cost more than 25c. Within a week the "Who's Who in Nearby Towns" amounted to a full column of solid monthly orders, and today it has grown to two columns and threatens to surpass the local "Who's Who" feature in point of size and volume. All ads are sold on the 30-time basis, and as soon as the order is secured via telephone, a 30-time contract is mailed to the prospect together with a form letter and a return envelope, stamped. The signed contracts come back 100 per cent, thus ensuring collections. The ads average from 2 to 4 lines and are grouped according to their various classifications, then grouped again under headings indicating the different communities. Mr. Bellem writes to EDITOR & PUBLISHER that he will be glad to send clippings of the feature to anyone who requents them.

Solicitors cannot call at every employer's office every day, nor every employment agency, but the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph sees to it that there is a reminder in these offices.

One of their stunts is to have their sales message printed on a pad of telephone instruction notes. The card is made out:

Mr.....Called at..... o'clock.

He said .....

And at top and bottom is promotional matter for classified advertising.

In letters sent out locally by newspapers, there may well be stuffers made up like those of the Aitkin (Minn.) Republican, which carry the questions: "What have you to sell? Do you wish to buy? Have you lost? Have you found? Would you like to swap? What else do you want? Try a Republican classified advertisement!" The recipient is asked to write his ad on the back of the card. Rates are printed.

REPRESENTING THE NEWSPAPERS

THE John M. Branham Company has just issued from its New York office a revised edition of its well-known telephone card, giving addresses and telephone numbers of all newspapers and other publications, advertising agencies, special representatives, and other interests allied with publishing and advertising in New York City. Copies will be supplied to the advertising trade upon request.

William C. Henning recently resigned as western manager of the Weaver-Stuart Company, representing Wisconsin daily newspapers, for an appointment with the Chicago office of Woodward & Kelly. Mr. Henning was formerly associated with the Class Journal Company and the Chicago Herald & Examiner.

J. Randall McDonough, formerly of the Chicago Herald & Examiner and Barron G. Collier Company, has been appointed manager of the Chicago office of the Thomas F. Clark Co., Inc. B. A. Pincus, formerly of the Charles A. Fuller Advertising Agency has been made assistant to Mr. McDonough.

J. M. Grassick has been appointed western advertising manager of the New York Evening Graphic with offices at 168 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago. H. J. Tyler is associated with Mr. Grassick in representing the Graphic.

The Norristown (Pa.) Register has appointed Fred Kimball, Inc., as national advertising representatives, effective immediately.

The Indianapolis Evening Post has appointed the Thomas F. Clark Company, Inc., as its national advertising representative.

E. Crosby Vining of the Chicago office of the Potts-Turnbull Company, has been added to the Chicago staff of Woodward & Kelly. Mr. Vining was formerly space buyer at the Shuman-Haws Advertising Company, Chicago.

Scheerer, Inc., representatives of Middle West daily newspapers, have added to their New York staff John O. Boyd, formerly of the advertising department of Best & Co., New York, handling advertising research work. Mr. Boyd will serve as assistant to Richard B. G. Gardner, Eastern manager.

LYNCH DESCRIBES CLUB HOUSE

N. Y. Newspaper Group in New Three-Story Home Aug. 5-6

The Newspaper Club of New York was to move into its new and larger home on Aug. 5 or 6, this week. The address is 136 W. 42nd street, and the newspaper men will occupy three floors of a five-story building.

This week, Denis Tilden Lynch of the New York Herald Tribune and club president, sent the following description of the new home to members:

"In our larger quarters we will have everything that makes for privacy short of our own building. We will have our own private elevator which will be operated by the Bush Terminal Company—our present landlord as well as our future—until eight o'clock in the evening. Thereafter we will run it ourselves. It is an automatic lift which a child can operate—as reads the advertisements.

"On the first of our floors will be the lounge, library, office, chess tables. The entire floor above will be occupied by the dining hall and kitchen. The billiard and card rooms will be on the top floor.

"Each floor will be the last word in modern lighting. This has been seen to by Mr. William G. Marthai, Chief Illumination Engineer of the New York Edison Company. Wall brackets and drop lights have been so arranged that we will not have any dark corners. The walls and ceilings are painted in light cheerful tones. Two wash rooms have been installed on each floor.

"We will have a main entrance from Number 136 West Forty-second street. We may also use the Forty-first and Forty-second street entrances of the Bush Terminal Building, as an opening has been made in the wall of the ground floor corridor, midway between the two sets of elevators.

"It would be impossible to find a more central spot."

Obituary

JOHN J. WILLIAMS, aged 59, for many years connected with the several Charlotte newspapers, one time as foreman of the News Printing Company, died Aug. 2. He had also worked on papers in Greensboro and High Point. Pallbearers included B. Arp Lowrance, field secretary of the North Carolina Press Association; Hugh M. Sykes, James E. Honeycutt, C. L. Grainger, W. E. Adans and R. L. Creech.

RUSSELL HARRISON SCOTT, a former Chicago newspaper man, died July 28 in a Baltimore (Md.) hospital after an illness of several months. Mr. Scott was at one time connected with the old Chicago Chronicle. He was a nephew of Mrs. Benjamin Harrison and a cousin of the late Gen. William Crawford Gorgas. He was once secretary to former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois. Burial was in Washington, Pa.

MRS. SARAH RIDENOUR, aged 79, mother of C. F. Ridenour, publishers of the Piqua (Ohio) Call, is dead.

WILLIAM COLBURN, aged 74, former editor of the New Lexington (O.) Tribune and later employed on papers in Chicago, died in that city a few days ago.

BERNARD F. TIERNEY, for 35 years employed in the Boston Globe press-room died in Roxbury last week.

MISS ISABEL J. LOUGHLIN, for more than 35 years a member of the Boston (Mass.) Globe reportorial staff, died in Boston last week. Miss Loughlin has been particularly active in reporting women's political, social and literary club activities.

FRANCIS K. WILLIAMS, aged 76, president of the F. K. Williams Company, oldest printing establishment in Springfield, Mass., died this week. He learned his trade at Adams, N. Y., later going to Oswego, N. Y., where he was employed by the Oswego Press. From Oswego he came to Springfield to enter the employ of the Springfield Republican, leaving that paper to become editor of the old Westfield News Letter.

J. WILLIAM SCHULTE, aged 80, the oldest printer in Quincy, Ill., who began newspaper work as a carrier for the Quincy Herald, died July 23. He was foreman of the Quincy Germania for 35 years up to his retirement 20 years ago and had been a member of the local typographical union more than 50 years.

FRED A. FERNALD, aged 66, attorney for many years for the Boston (Mass.) Globe, died in Sharon, July 17.

Mrs. MARY POST, 69, mother of Fred Post, city editor of the Leavenworth (Kan.) Times, died at Leavenworth recently.

JAMES S. REBER, 77, who established the Kansas City (Kan.) Daily News and for many years was editor and publisher of the Illustrated World, died at Kansas City recently.

M. D. GEDDES, editor of the Farm and Ranch Review, one of the best known newspaper men in Western Canada, was instantly killed Aug. 2 when he fell from Mount Lefroy, near Lake Louise. He was a noted Alpinist.

Lieut. GEORGE G. MYERS, 35, world veteran and former financial editor of the Indianapolis Commercial, was killed with two other young men at Newcastle, Ind., July 31, when his plane crashed to the ground from an altitude of about 200 feet. Myers had just opened a commercial flying field near Newcastle and was taking up his first passengers Sunday.

OSCAR GRANT THOMAS, 62, for 40 years compositor on Indianapolis newspapers, died in Indianapolis July 30.

Mrs. KATIE LOWRANCE, aged 65, of Forest City, N. C., mother of B. A. Lowrance, editor of the Mecklenburg (N. C.) Times and field secretary of the North Carolina Press Association, died in Charlotte, N. C., July 27.

THOMAS J. FLAHERTY

Heart Attack Fatal to Editor of Portland (Me.) Sunday Telegram

Thomas J. Flaherty, newspaper man for the past 44 years and editor of the Portland (Me.) Sunday Telegram since 1898, died suddenly at his home July 31 of heart trouble.

Taken slightly ill in his office in the Press Herald building, Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Flaherty went to his home. A physician was summoned, but there seemed to be no indication of illness of a serious nature. Later he suffered another attack and died within a few minutes. He was the fifth member of his family to die suddenly of heart disease within the past 20 years.

Mr. Flaherty had grown up with the newspaper business in Portland. He was born in that city of Irish parentage and received his education in the Portland schools. At the age of 15 he started his newspaper career in the composing room of the Sunday Telegram, later becoming foreman. In 1898 he was made editor of the paper and during the years that followed brought about many improvements, all the while steadily building up its circulation.

Austin M. Goodwin, sporting editor of the Portland (Me.) Evening Express and connected with that paper for the past 25 years, has been named editor of the Sunday Telegram to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Flaherty. Mr. Goodwin will still supervise the sporting section of the Telegram.

Mr. Goodwin will be succeeded as sporting editor by Edward D. Small, connected with the sporting department of the Express for the past ten years and previously with the Morning Argus.

JOHN FLETCHER DIES

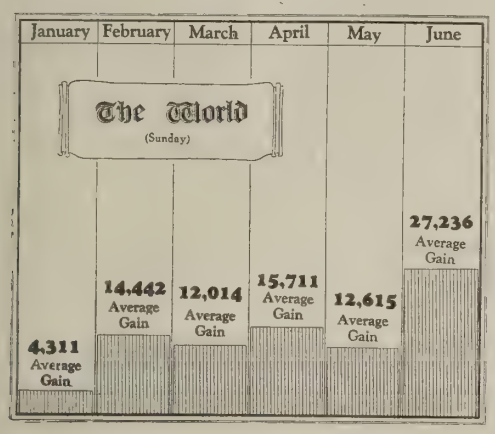
John Fletcher, 50, for fifteen years secretary to Ralph Pulitzer, editor of the New York World, died July 31 at his home in Great Kills, N. Y. Mr. Fletcher was born in Concordia Parish, La., and was in the bond department of the Union Trust Company before he became Mr. Pulitzer's secretary in 1912.

FOR PROMPT SERVICE

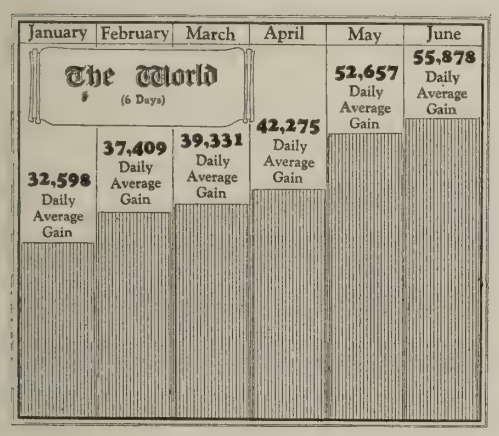
TYPE

BORDERS ∞ ORNAMENTS ∞ BRASS RULE

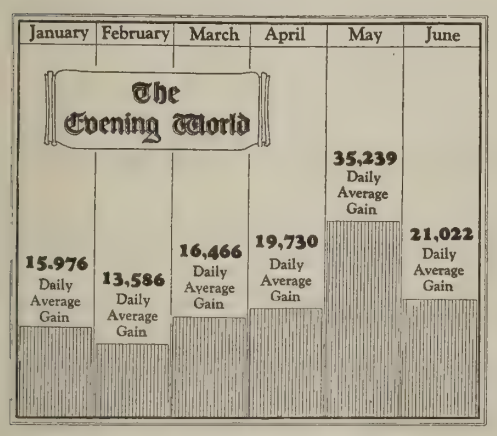
Printers' Supplies



KELLY PRESSES ◆ KLYMAX FEEDERS ◆ PAPER CUTTERS
HAMILTON WOOD AND STEEL EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING OUR AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT



Carried in stock for prompt shipment at the following Selling Houses of the



AMERICAN TYPE FOUNDERS COMPANY

Boston	Baltimore	Pittsburgh	Cincinnati	Kansas City	San Francisco
New York	Richmond	Cleveland	St. Louis	Des Moines	Portland
Philadelphia	Atlanta	Detroit	Milwaukee	Denver	Spokane
	Buffalo	Chicago	Minneapolis	Los Angeles

Since January 1, 1927, THE WORLD, THE EVENING WORLD and THE SUNDAY WORLD have delivered to their advertisers an excess circulation of 10,187,630 copies over the corresponding six months' period last year.

PURCHASERS of advertising space in THE WORLD, THE EVENING WORLD and THE SUNDAY WORLD have enjoyed a consistently increasing circulation since January 1st—an increase that in six months has piled up a total of 10,187,630 copies actually delivered to readers in excess of the distribution during the first six months of last year.

This excess circulation represents an average of 1,697,772 copies per month—no mean distribution in itself, but in the case of these newspapers, it is the extra measure, the assurance of increasing reader interest in three of the fastest growing advertising mediums in the New York market.

This increased sale is founded only upon the soundest kind of newspaper development—the making of a good newspaper that will attract new readers and hold old ones. No other inducement has been offered the army of new readers which the gains illustrated on this page indicate.

The merchant or the manufacturer who desires to widen his market, who wants to add new accounts on his books or bring new customers to his store, would be fortunate, indeed, if he could increase his sales even proportionately to the extraordinary increase in circulation shown in the accompanying charts. He can at least get his share of this new business by advertising in

The World — Pulitzer Building, New York

The Evening World — Tribune Tower, Chicago

New York

A COPY OF "THE A. B. C. OF THE NEW YORK MARKET" WILL BE MAILED ON REQUEST

BRITISH DAILIES FORM NEW COMPANY

Lord Reading Heads Firm Owning London Chronicle and Other Papers for Which Stock Is Offered

By ALLAN DELAFONS

(London Correspondent of EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

A new company has been formed, the public announcement was made in London on July 12, for the purpose of purchasing the ordinary shares of United Newspapers (1918), Ltd., the proprietors of the London Daily Chronicle and the Sunday News, and owners of the controlling interest in the Edinburg Evening News, the Yorkshire Evening News, and the Doncaster Gazette. The directors of the new company are the Marquis of Reading, chairman; Sir David Yule, Bt., Sir Thomas Catto, Bt., Sir Charles C. Barrie, and Major General Sir Robert Hutchison, M. P.

In November last year it was announced that David Lloyd George had parted with his controlling interest in United Newspapers to a company or group represented by Lord Reading, Sir David Yule and Sir Thomas Catto and Lord Reading took over the chairmanship at the beginning of this year.

The capital of the new company is to be £3,050,000, divided into 800,000 first preference shares of £1 each, carrying interest at seven per cent; 700,000 second preference shares of £1 each, carrying interest at 8 per cent; 1,400,000 ordinary shares of £1 each, and 3,000,000 deferred shares at one shilling per share. The 800,000 seven per cent first preference shares are shortly to be offered for sale by Messrs. Higginson.

Control of the company will be in the hands of Lord Reading, Sir David Yule and Sir Thomas Catto, and Lord Reading has stated that there was to be no change in the policy or style of the papers, which are conducted in the Liberal interests.

United Newspapers (1918), Ltd., has an authorized share capital of £2,000,000, of which £1,229,000 has been issued and paid up.

ENWRIGHT AT PRISON CAMP

Former Publisher, Term Half Served, Relieved from Boston Jail

Frederick W. Enwright, former publisher of the now defunct Boston Telegram and Telegraph, who is serving an eight months' sentence for having criminally libeled ex-Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, this week was transferred from the Charles street jail, Boston, to the state prison camp at Tewksbury.

In announcing the transfer of Enwright, who was committed to jail April 11, last, State Commisioner of Corrections Sanford Bates issued the following statement:

"It is the practice to transfer men from county jails to camp who have served about half of their time and are safe and suitable cases for camp. The present case comes within the rule."

Gov. Alvan T. Fuller has twice been appealed to by Mrs. Enwright on behalf of her husband, but refused to interfere.

G. O. P. EDITORS MEET

After two days of entertainment the annual outing of the Indiana Republican Editorial Association came to a close at Lafayette, July 29, with a banquet in the Purdue University Memorial Union building. Nearly a score of those prominent in Republican affairs were presented by James J. Patchell of Union City, president of the association, but political speeches were barred. Everett E. Neal of the Noblesville Ledger, first vice-president of the association; Allen C. Hiner of the Newcastle Courier, second vice-president; Paul R. Bausman of the Monticello Herald, treasurer, and Neil D. McCallum of the Batesville Tribune, secretary, were the association officers presented.

CIRCULATION EXERTS DIRECT SALES FORCE

(Continued from page 5)

on specific types or lines of merchandise —Friday for Saturday's business, for example, or on big events such as store anniversary sales and merchandising events involving all the departments, commonly known as store-wide events.

Quality appeal circulations draw better volume and draw more consistently for regular run of store merchandising and regular values as against bargain offerings and price sales. Metropolitan cities present interesting contradictions to these tendencies. This is due to the large number of floating or itinerant populations common to the nine or ten major cities and to the congested buying areas and concentrated market areas in all of them.

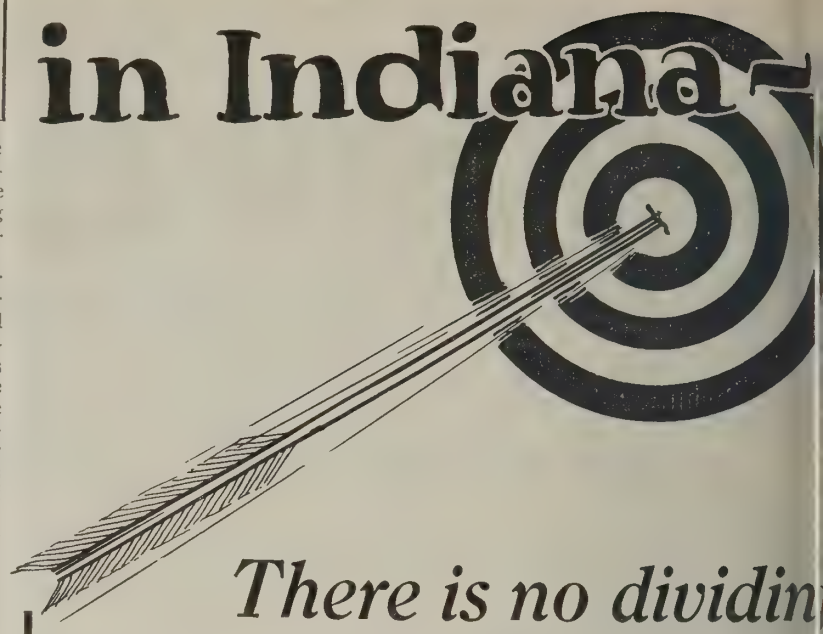
As an example in point, the checking over a period of ten consecutive days of returns of a New York store on the circulation of a morning paper of quality appeal, showed a consistent drawing-power of 36 cents per unit reader on whole-store volume, 12 cents on returns from advertised departments and 4 cents on advertised items, that is on direct returns. A similar checking (24 consecutive days) is another big city showed that a paper of popular appeal drew 30 cents, 10 cents and 2 cents per unit-reader respectively on whole-store, advertised department and direct returns volume.

Both instances are indicative of tremendous direct selling power and neither paper is a local leader in quantity of circulation.

If either of the papers in question could present in tangible terms, store terms, such proof of actual effectiveness their problems of new business would be materially reduced if not practically solved.

It is too much to expect competing stores to compare volume and analyze the drawing-power of mediums they must use in common. But in view of the need for better understanding of the value of newspapers to stores in a localized territory it is not too much to expect the newspapers to co-operate with the stores along general lines of research with the object in view of clarifying the market-power of each paper as it affects each store.

No vital secrets would be disclosed if five representative stores registered from time to time with each newspaper used the results of space on advertised departments stated in percentages over specific periods such as ten days in the middle of each calendar month. (Drawing power of circulation varies with calendar seasons just as normal demand in a given city varies with the seasons.)



Three or more newspapers in a local field could do worse than employ jointly an experienced retail man to act as a clearing house of research for both stores and papers, since research made by a single store, while valuable to it, throws no light on the general situation unless the facts are common property.

Every store in a community has common interest in and every newspaper common need for whatever market development is possible. Tangible facts as gathered could in no way disadvantageously affect individual initiative or normal competition. Whatever volume of business and profit merchant or paper can get comes from the same source: the buying population served by one and reached by the other.

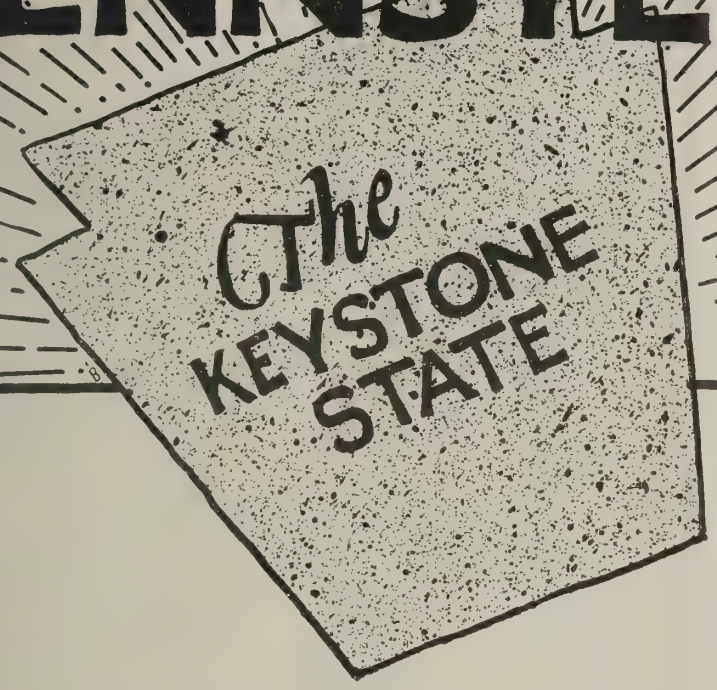
In the end, within five years if not sooner, common advertising practice with retail stores will be smaller average daily space but more frequent insertions and on a regular, consistent schedule. And the result will be better direct returns from space and circulation and a mighty increase in the general publicity value to the merchant of whatever amount of space he uses.

The newspaper publisher will gain in two directions: his selling costs will decrease and the value of his service to retailers will increase in definite relation to the rate he must charge.

in Indiana

There is no dividin Line in Selling

The consumers of Indiana have been so educated to the merits of the advertised brand that the private brand has hard sledding in this territory. Therefore, unless your product is well advertised in the local papers your chances for its success is negligible, for the dealer has little time to waste to talk about the merits of the non-advertised brands. Experience has taught him that it is much more profitable to give the customer what he asks for than to try to force upon the buyer brands of unknown quality and reputation.



Every manufacturer of a product, who wants to sell in the Indiana Market—a market that is rich in consuming and buying power because the people can afford the best on the market—must advertise the merits of his product in the Indiana newspapers, if he wants to reach the greatest number of consumers at the lowest possible cost.

The newspapers listed below are the representative dailies that circulate in the homes of Indiana's great army of buyers. They will co-operate with you if your product is meritorious. They will not only show you how to reach the consumer but they will enlist the aid of the dealer. They are awaiting to hear from you.

	Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Columbus Republican ..... (E)	5,027	.03
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette ..... (M)	38,539	.08
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette ..... (S)	30,255	.08
Fort Wayne News-Sentinel ..... (E)	44,217	.10
†Frankfort Times ..... (M&S)	8,231	.04
Gary Evening Post-Tribune ..... (E)	17,002	.06
Huntington Press ..... (M&S)	5,058	.03
Indianapolis News ..... (E)	130,079	.25
Lafayette Journal & Courier.. (M) 7,931 (E)13,813	21,744	.06
††La Porte Herald-Argus ..... (E)	6,839	.04
Marion Leader Tribune ..... (M&S)	9,898	.04
††Shelbyville Democrat ..... (E)	4,063	.25
South Bend News-Times .... (M) 9,858 (E)18,288	28,146	.07
South Bend News-Times ..... (S)	26,421	.07
South Bend Tribune... (S) 23,482... (E)	24,351	.07
Terre Haute Tribune ..... (E&S)	22,973	.06

A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, March 31, 1927.
†Government Statement, October 1, 1926.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1927.

PENNSYLVANIA

—A Billion Dollar Market—

The Keystone State—America's workshop, is known as a billion dollar market. So gigantic are its industries that it maintains this leadership in the quantity production of the important and necessary commodities which it distributes all over the world.

The market spends billions of dollars annually for every conceivable product. If you are not getting your share of the business then it's because your sales effort has not the force to create demand with the consumer and move your product with the dealer.

Advertising in the local newspapers below will forcefully bring before the great buying power of Pennsylvania, the merits of your product. It will stimulate demand for both dealer and consumer, for these newspapers enter the homes of the Keystone families and are read daily thruout the entire trading area, reaching a buying and consuming power of over 10 million people.

You can dominate America's most important market thru these papers. They are ready to help you with any advertising or merchandising plan you may formulate. Consult them freely.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Allentown Call .....(M)	33,300	.11	.11
Allentown Call .....(S)	23,638	.11	.11
††Beaver Falls Tribune .....(E)	7,141	.03	.03
††Bethlehem Globe Times ....(E)	14,147	.06	.06
††Brownsville Telegraph .....(E)	7,818	.04	.04
Chester Times .....(E)	19,742	.09	.07
††Coatesville Record .....(E)	6,866	.035	.03
Connellsville Courier .....(E)	6,012	.02	.02
Easton Express .....(E)	34,476	.10	.10
Erie Times .....(E)	30,594	.08	.08
††Greensburg Tribune Review(EM)	14,800	.05	.05
††Hazleton Plain-Speaker....(E) ††Hazleton Standard-Sentinel ...	20,582	.08	.07
Mount Carmel IItem .....(E)	4,340	.0285	.0285

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Oil City Derrick .....(M)	6,903	.04	.04
Scranton Times .....(E)	43,000	.13	.12
Sharon Herald .....(E)	7,656	.0357	.0357
Sunbury Item .....(E)	5,922	.035	.035
Warren Mirror-Times .....(ME)	9,685	.043	.043
Washington Observer and Reporter .....(M&E)	18,130	.06	.06
††West Chester Local News ..(E)	11,941	.04	.04
Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader ..(E)	26,442	.08	.06
Williamsport Sun and Gazette & Bulletin .....(ME)	28,722	.09	.09
††York Dispatch .....(E)	20,131	.05	.05

A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1927.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1927.

By MARLEN PEW

FOR the sake of historical accuracy it is important that the story of the first airplane flight in America be given to the world by one who can speak with authority. The man best equipped to tell the story is Edward O. Dean, of the telegraph copy desk, of the New York Times. It is with pleasure that we introduce him to the Shop Talkers.

* * *

Mr. Dean speaking:

The recent trans-Atlantic air voyages of Colonel Lindbergh, Chamberlin and Levine, and Commander Byrd and his companions, have revived interest in the pioneer flight of the Wright brothers in 1903. Much has been written from time time of the epochal event at Kitty Hawk, N. C., on the 17th day of December, nearly 24 years ago. The Wrights themselves have told the story, and others have added valuable details, all of which information is readily accessible. So that as to the initial flight, the facts are widely known and there can be no basis for controversies when writers in the years to come turn to the task of giving to the world an authentic record of aerial navigation. Such is not the case, however, with regard to the part newspaper men played in acquainting the public with that day's triumph on the wind-swept North Carolina shore, a triumph to which Americans now look back with renewed pride in contemplation of it as the forerunner of the notable air exploits of their fellow-countrymen in recent months.

* * *

ON several occasions there have been references, in more or less detail, to the first newspaper story of that first flight, some grossly inaccurate, others partly in error or deficient in vital points. Let us then here set down the recollections of an eye-witness, so to speak, one who was in the best possible position to know the facts and who remembers them distinctly, despite the lapse of many years. That was only a twelve-second flight a quarter of a century ago, but it was a flight nevertheless. A heavier-than-air machine rose from the surface of the earth and traversed space, albeit a tiny span; and the Wrights then and there knew that they had conquered. At the moment that the crude device was sailing deviously and haltingly through the air a few feet from the ground the inventors visioned the end of their years of sacrifice and struggle against obstacles, against bitter discouragements, against the derisive comments of their townsmen and friends. Later flights clinched their experiments and convinced a still doubting world, but the Dayton young men realized on that day that they had mastered the secret of flying by machinery. So we say that was the first flight and the newspaper stories that were written about it were the first flight stories put into newspaper type on the American continent. That being true, let us turn to the men responsible for getting that story before the American newspaper-reading public.

* * *

IN December, 1903, the writer was a member of the reportorial staff of the Norfolk (Va.) Virginian-Pilot, a morning newspaper. About 5 o'clock in the afternoon of that day I called at the Weather Bureau in the course of my routine work. Being in direct touch by a special telegraph line with a dangerous stretch of North Carolina coast, the Norfolk station was a prolific source of shipping news and required careful watching on the part of the press for reports of shipwrecks and vessels in distress.

The Weather Bureau man informed me that they had received over the station's special wire to the Manteo (N. C.) weather station a dispatch stating that the Wright brothers had made a successful flight in an airplane at Kitty Hawk, nearby. After getting all the available details at the Weather Bureau, and they were of a very meagre character, I hurried to the Virginian-Pilot offices and reported to Kevil Glennan, city editor. I was under the impression that I probably was the first newspaper man to have received the "tip" on a piece of news of world-wide interest and importance, but I was quickly dispelled of my delusion by Harry P. Moore, chief of the Virginian-Pilot's mailing room, a young man who though at that period not an active member of the news staff of the paper, was the local correspondent for a large number of out of town papers. Moore entered while Glennan and I sat talking, or rather standing and sitting at frequent intervals, so excited were we both, and unfolded the whole story.

* * *

HOW and from whom we obtained it I never knew. Although we were on terms of close personal friendship and still are, I did not ask him. Such matters, as all newspaper men know, are considered inviolable among the craft. Many pournalists have gone to jail rather than violate the confidence of those who supplied them with information for their columns.

* * *

MOORE had an uncanny "nose for news" and his sources of supply were then and are to this day a profound mystery to his fellow scribes. He has since achieved a wider reputation as a writer and news gatherer, and for years has occupied a responsible editorial post on the Virginian-Pilot, the while he has through a score or more of newspapers near and afar kept the nation informed on the doings of Eastern North Carolina and the Virginia seaboard. Moore and Glennan, the latter a master at descriptive writing, collaborated in the preparation of a front page "spread" story under streamer headlines for the Virginian-Pilot. In addition Moore and Glennan sent out a story over the wires to the Washington Post, Cincinnati Enquirer, New York American, Philadelphia Record, Chicago Inter-Ocean and some other newspapers which I cannot now recall.

I remember very clearly, and old newspaper files will bear me out, that the story did not go out that night of December 17 to the press associations, but was put on the associations' wires the following forenoon for the afternoon papers of December 18. In New York City, for example, The American was the only morning paper in the city that carried the story on December 18, its dispatch from Moore contaning about four hundred words. That dispatch was a summary of the greatly detailed article that appeared in the Virginian-Pilot on the same morning.

* * *

"VERY little can be learned here about the Wrights," said Moore's Norfolk dispatch to the New York American. "They seem to be men of means. Wilbur Wright, the inventor, weighs about 150 pounds, has dark hair, keen blue eyes and a long sharp nose. Orville Wright has a fair complexion and black eyes." In Chicago the old Inter-Ocean was the only paper in that city to order Moore's story, and I presume it published it. The Record had exclusive rights to Moore's dispatch in Philadelphia, and so on with the others, Glennan filing it to the papers of which he was the Norfolk correspondent and Moore to the papers of which he was the local representative. I believe that about eight papers all told carried it on the morning of December 18. The news became general that afternoon when the press associations got hold of it. The Virginian-Pilot, with a clear beat on its morning rival, the old Norfolk Landmark which it subsequently absorbed, carried a slashing story of the flight. That night Glennan was at his best and Moore crammed the article w details. It was an ideal combination f the handling of a big item of news.

* * *

FOR a long time the Wrights had be experimenting in the Kitty Hawk r gion and Moore had been watching a waiting, the embodiment of patience a tenacity of purpose. As secretly as could be done the Ohioans conducted the tests and quietly and unobtrusively Moo maintained his vigil. He sensed the ma nitude of the project as did the Wright and when the Dayton men triumph Moore was primed to proclaim it to t four corners of the earth.

Some recent dispatches from Washin ton have mentioned that on May 6, 190 D. Bruce Salley, a reporter on the No folk Landmark, during a trip along t North Carolina coast sent out from Ma teo to various newspapers a dispatch te ing of the "first Wright flight," and th the original of this dispatch has bee placed in the Congressional Library.

ADVERTISERS who understand the Iowa situation know from experience that the consumers' market there cannot be properly sold without the use of newspapers in these twenty-one key cities.

IOWA DAILY PRESS ASS'N
DAVENPORT, IOWA.

Ames Tribune
Boone News-Republican
Burlington Gazette
Burlington Hawk-Eye
Cedar Rapids Gazette
Centerville Iowegian & Citizen
Council Bluffs Nonpareil
Davenport Democrat & Leader
Davenport Times
Dubuque Telegraph-Herald
Fort Dodge Messenger & Chronicle
Fort Madison Democrat
Iowa City Press Citizen
Keokuk Gate City
Marshalltown Times-Republican
Mason City Globe-Gazette & Times
Muscatine Journal & News-Tribune
Oelwein Register
Oskaloosa Herald
Ottumwa Courier
Sioux City Journal
Sioux City Tribune
Washington Journal
Waterloo Courier
Waterloo Tribune

The Morning Telegraph

the leading newspaper in Theatricals, Turf, Finance and Motion Pictures, prints all of the day's worth while general news, with exclusive features covered by a great staff of special writers.

It has the largest professional circulation of any newspaper in the United States.

Over 260,000 Homes in Michigan served by Booth Newspapers

The Grand Rapids Press
The Flint Daily Journal
The Saginaw News Courier
The Kalamazoo Gazette
The Jackson Citizen Patriot
The Bay City Times Tribune
The Muskegon Chronicle
The Ann Arbor Times News

National Advertising Representatives

I. A. KLEIN
50 East 42nd Street
New York City

J. E. LUTZ
6 N. Michigan Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

NEW OFFICES
GRAYBAR
BUILDING

On and after August 1st the new offices of this organization will be 1823 Graybar Building, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York City.

S. P. WESTON, INC.

Newspaper Buildings, Production, Operation Surveys, Valuations.

420 Lexington Avenue, New York

ROTO-GRAVURE
Sections for Newspapers & Magazines
STANDARD
Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

Space is space—but the BEST Classified Advertising publicity justifies its daily appearance in your newspaper

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building, Philadelphia

IT WILL PAY YOU TO HIRE TRAINED MEN

Ambitious young men, schooled in every branch of the newspaper or magazine field, may be secured to fill that opening on your publication by simply making your wants known to the Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity.

No Charge To Employers

Avail yourself of this free service to replenish your staff whenever the occasion requires. Write or wire John G. Earhart, 836 Exchange Ave., Chicago, Ill., and he will put you in touch with the right man.

a mistake, of course, to call this flight f May 6, 1908, "the first flight." It was eferred to at the time as the first flight y the Wrights in their "war aeroplane." he first officially recorded flight was ade by Orville Wright at Dayton on eptember 26, 1905, when he flew 11.12 iles in eighteen minutes and nine seconds. Several newspaper correspondents itnessed the 1908 flights at Kill Devil ill, N. C. They were written up at onsiderable length and the Wrights alked freely to the press. There was one of the reticence on this occasion uch as marked their notable experiments t Kitty Hawk in 1903. A clipping bere me of a dispatch sent out at that me from Manteo, N. C., quotes Orville right as follows: "We know that we ave made the aeroplane a practical mahine, but we are not over-sanguine about s revolutionizing the transportation of ne future. It will scarcely displace the ailroad or the steamboat. Necessarily ne expenditure of fuel will be too great. n a steamship it is calculated that the eat from the burning of a sheet of letter paper will carry a ton a mile. You ould scarcely expect such results from n airship.

"The airship, so far as we can see at resent, will have its chief value for warare, and for reaching inaccessible places, or such uses as expeditions into the Klondike or to Peking during the siege few years ago.

"The value of an airship moving faster han a railroad train for reconnoitering r dropping explosives upon an enemy in ime of war, is now obvious to the entire ivilized world. The aeroplane also will e of great value in the near future for arrying mail. When properly developed t will be quicker than any other means f locomotion now in use for direct journeys between two places, unless against urricanes. There will be no switches or tops whatever, and the journey can be nade in an airline.

"The eventual speed of the aeroplane will be easily sixty miles an hour. It will probably be forced up to one hundred miles an hour. Our last machine howed forty miles and the one we are uilding now will go considerably faster. At speeds above sixty miles an hour the esistance of the air to the machine will nake power much more expensive. Our xperiments have shown that a flier designed to carry an aggregate of 745 ounds at twenty miles an hour would equire only eight horse power and at hirty miles an hour would require twelve orse power.

"At sixty miles twenty-four horse ower would be needed and at 120 miles ixty or seventy-five horse power. It is lear that there is a certain point of speed eyond which the air resistance makes it mpossible to go. Just what this point s experiments will determine. Every ear gas engines are being made lighter, fact which will increase the surplus arrying power of the machine available or fuel and operator and heavier construction; but at present sixty miles an our can be counted on for the flying machine.

"The aeroplane running sixty miles an hour will have a surplus lifting power enough to carry fuel for a long journey. We can and possibly soon will make a one-man machine carrying gasoline enough to go one thousand miles at forty miles an hour. Moreover, any machine made to move at speeds up to sixty miles an hour can be operated economically at a cost of not much more than one cent a mile for gasoline."

* * *

THE Virginian-Pilot's story of the first flight in December, 1903, all the facts of which were gathered by Mr. Moore and the story written jointly by Mr. Moore and Mr. Glennan, had as its opening paragraphs the following:

"The problem of aerial navigation without the use of a balloon has been solved at last. Over the sand hills of the North Carolina coast yesterday near Kitty Hawk two Ohio men proved that they could soar through the air in a flying machine of their own construction with the power to speed it and steer it at will.

"While the United States Government has been spending thousands of dollars in an effort to make practicable the ideas of Professor Langley of the Smithsonian Institution, Wilbur and Orville Wright, two brothers, natives of Dayton, Ohio, have quietly, even secretly, perfected their invention and put it to a successful test.

"They are not yet ready that the world should know their methods in conquering the air, but the Virginian-Pilot is able to state authentically the nature of their invention, its principles and its chief dimensions."

The story then went on to describe the "box kite" framework, the engine, wingspread and so on, and gave the following physical description of the aviators: "Wilbur Wright, the inventor, is a well-groomed man of prepossessing appearance. He is five feet, six inches tall, weighs about 150 pounds and is of swarthy complexion. His hair is raven-hued and straight, but a pair of piercing deep blue eyes peer at you over a nose of extreme length and sharpness. His brother, Orville, on the other hand, is a blonde, with sandy hair and fair complexion even features and sparkling black eyes. He is not quite so large as Wilbur, but is of magnificent physique."

During the ensuing few days Moore gave further details of the flight and the history of the Wrights' experiments over a period of several years. He obtained an exclusive interview with Orville Wright at Kitty Hawk, quoting the inventor as follows: "In the past several months my brother and myself have had a very strenuous tussle with the laws of gravitation and the problem of aerial navigation, but I confidently believe that we have now reached the point where we can look for success at an early date.

"We have virtually won out already. Our next step will be to prove it to the world. I believe that it is only a matter of a short time when transit through the air will be a thing of small moment. We shall return to Kitty Hawk in the early Spring and erect larger and more commodious quarters in which to carry on our work. Among other things we will have an extensive and complete shop supplied with all the necessary tools and appliances for building our machines. Our invention is practically completed now, but there are a few minor difficulties remaining to be overcome, which we anticipate little or no trouble in meeting, when we go back to our North Carolina experimental grounds next March or April. Of course our reasons are obvious for maintaining absolute secrecy as to the mechanical and technical arrangements of our invention. I will say, however, that its simplicity is the foundation for what success we have already achieved.

"It is true that in the past few days numerous scientific men connected with the Federal government have manifested deep interest in our machine, but as yet we have been tendered no offer of a purchase of our rights thereto. It would be, of course, premature for the government to make such an offer, or for us to entertain such a proposition until we complete our work and go before the world with a perfected practical aerial vehicle.

"I will say that the United States has as yet taken no official cognizance of our invention, though, as I say, several attaches of the scientific departments of the service have displayed keen interest in the progress of our experiments which we have been making at frequent intervals in the neighborhood of Kitty Hawk in the past week."

* * *

A DAY or two after this interview the Wright brothers returned to Dayton, taking their machine with them, having dismantled and boxed it. That is our story of a story. History, if it is to be fair and truthful, must give credit to Harry P. Moore and Kevil Glennan for putting into print the first account of the first airplane flight in this country. Each modestly insists that the other is entitled to the lion's share of the glory. Perhaps there is enough for both.

ADOPTS NEW TYPE DRESS

The Watertown (N. Y.) Times last week adopted a new type dress, beginning the use of the new Intertype Ideal type, in seven point face on a seven and a half point body.

Used Presses to Fit Your Needs

Fully guaranteed

Write us

THE DUPLEX PRINTING PRESS CO.

Battle Creek MICHIGAN

Buffalo, The Wonder City of America

Buffalo—a profitable Market for Advertisers

Sales in Buffalo are splendid for advertising goods. Employment conditions excellent, retail and other business thriving. One newspaper will put your story over to 83% of the people—that paper is the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

Read in 4 out of 5 Buffalo Homes

EDWARD H. BUTLER
Editor and Publisher
KELLY-SMITH COMPANY
Representatives
Graybar Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Atlantic Bldg. Philadelphia
Tribune Tower Chicago, Ill.
Waterman Bldg. Boston

IN some cities, the "leading" newspaper may have merely a few hundred more circulation than its competitor. The Press has 40,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two evening newspapers combined—and 35,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two Sunday news papers combined.

THE PITTSBURGH PRESS

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Member of the A. B. C.

The largest evening paper circulation in Baltimore

151,059

May, net paid

May, 1927, sets a new circulation record for daily papers in Baltimore.

The NEWS, with its May net paid circulation of 151,059, enjoys a margin of 24,141 copies over that of the Evening Sun, its nearest competitor.

You reach more of Baltimore through the

BALTIMORE NEWS

Largest circulation of any daily paper in the South

in Detroit—

Free Press circulation reaches 31,000 more than the total number of families owning their own homes.

The "Free Press"

"Starts the day in Detroit"

With a stable, uninflated, liberal pursed circulation productive of greater advertising returns at lower cost.

first! in OHIO

Dispatch Sets the Pace

During the first six months of 1927 The Columbus Dispatch carried more paid advertising than the second Columbus paper by 4,639,750 agate lines.

For years The Columbus Dispatch has enjoyed the distinction of being first in Ohio in paid advertising volume.

NET PAID CIRCULATION

City	60,216
Suburban	28,937
Country	24,525
Total Circulation	113,678

Columbus Dispatch

OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

The World

These two newspapers offer the most powerful all-day service in New York available as a unit under a single contact. The 600,000 DAILY WORLD — EVENING WORLD readers constitute a highly concentrated force to be reckoned with in any campaign designed to effect distribution in Greater New York.

The Evening World

Pulitzer Building, New York
Tribune Tower, Chicago

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

WILLIS SHARP in the Atlantic Monthly for August takes President Coolidge in the magazine woodshed for a sound thrashing because of the way Washington correspondents of American newspapers are now treated. Mr. Sharp wields a picric pen and favors hickory as a holder.

Once in the magazine woodshed, Mr. Sharp puts the President in the corner while he takes American newspapers across his knee. Before doing so, however, he delivers this little lecture:

> It has been repeatedly charged of late that the press of the country has become commercialized out of all independence of thought and spirit. It is alleged that the tingle for circulation and the itch for an even greater prosperity have pretty well paralyzed its critical faculties. It is asserted that the newspapers are to-day largely standardized, money-making machines, whose rich owners are so intent on the increase in advertising linage and so tickeled over the Mellon tax reduction on the higher bracket incomes that the only real political emotion they have left is the fear that the situation may be disturbed. Hence their general disposition to soften all criticism of the Administration and to treat as dangerous and degraded fellows those who grow excited over corruption in politics.

Logically, Mr. Sharp believes that political supineness should be most frequently found among newspapers which operated at a loss and that political independence and fearlessness should be present where the press had financial security. But that condition, in his opinion, does not obtain, for in the article he says:

> On the contrary, with few exceptions, it is the papers that make money literally by the cartload that seem the most sluggish and the smuggest, the least concerned about newspaper standards, the most indifferent to the dignity of their profession, the most narrow in their conception of the function of the press, the most deeply steeped in partisanship.

The illustration which he gives is the treatment by the Chicago Tribune of Gov. Smith's reply to the open letter of Charles C. Marshall which appeared in the April issue of the Atlantic Monthly. The Tribune is criticized because it cut the Smith statement from four thousand to four hundred words and printed it on an inside page with no editorial comment. "That," he says, "is a hard thing to get around."

In my opinion, the pivotal point is how much interest the readers of the Chicago Tribune had in the Catholic controversy. The article surely did not have the interest for Chicago newspapers that it had for those published in New York. A hard thing for me to get around is the tremendous amount of publicity American newspapers gave the Atlantic Monthly without cost.

Passing from the Smith incident, Mr. Sharp takes up the White House conference between the Washington correspondents and the President. The theory which he sets forth is that these conferences are occasions on which representatives of American newspapers of all shades of opinion may question the President and receive "If not answers, at least the courtesy of a reply that the President has nothing publicly to say on that subject"—the theory that has been thrown in the discard because the rules established by President Coolidge have made it absurd.

Under these rules the correspondent may not say that he saw the President; he may not quote the President; he may not say that an official spokesman said what the President said—in other words, he has no authority at all for what he sends to his newspapers. In effect, these conferences are merely pleasant chats where Mr. Coolidge secretly tells an obedient press what he would like to have printed about him. American newspapers, to quote Mr. Sharp, "have become little more than the personal publicity machine of Mr. Coolidge." Washington correspondents, therefore, have become merely press agents for the President—reluctant in some cases.

Mr. Sharp says that President Coolidge has gone further and stamped on a press prerogative "more vital to the press and to the people than the right to deal with him on approximately equal terms in the press conference." On this point, Mr. Sharp adds:

> Four times now has he expressed the view in effect that the newspapers have no right to criticize the Administration in matters of foreign policy, and evidenced his resentment over such criticism. Three of these occasions were at the aforementioned conferences with the Washington correspondents; one was in a public speech in New York, delivered at a dinner given by the United Press.

The first occasion was on Sept. 18, 1925, when Mr. Coolidge rebuked American newspapers for the criticism of the Administration in connection with the foreign debt. A Washington dispatch is quoted as follows:

> In connection with the French debt, the President thinks the press of the country ought to assume the duty of looking after the interests of its own country rather than the interests of a foreign country.

The second time the President lectured the press on this topic was on Dec. 31, 1926. On that day, according to Mr. Sharp, the President more curtly and emphatically than before expressed his displeasure over the criticism of Mr. Kellogg and the State Department that had appeared in reference to Nicaragua and Mexico.

Later in April, again at a conference with the Washington correspondents, the President returned this idea about the duty of the press to support the Administration. This time he deplored the tendency of American newspapers to "speculate" on the attitude of the American Government or the attitude of other governments with which the United States was brought into contact.

The fourth time, already mentioned, was the occasion of his address at the 20th anniversary dinner of the United Press, held in New York City. As this address was reported so fully in THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER at the time, no other details are necessary in this connection. Mr. Sharp then takes up the attitude of American newspapers toward other Presidents in general and toward Woodrow Wilson in particular. About the only important newspapers which Mr. Sharp finds opposing the President are the New York World, the Baltimore Sun and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

In conclusion, Mr. Sharp says that if Mr. Coolidge can continue to get away with this solemn lecture without real protest, that will be all right for the President. But this question is asked, "What of the Press?"

Mr. Sharp answers as follows:

> By excessive praise the press builds Mr. Coolidge up to a point where support appears to him not a favor but a duty. He then publicly reprimands it as a whole for the dereliction of a few, indicates his belief that it should pay a subservient and not an independent part in politics, and the newspapers for the most part humbly transmit his rebuke to the people, thus misrepresenting not the President but themselves. The thing would be ludicrous if it had not its serious side.

The Atlantic is surely kicking up these days. The first question it seems to ask about a manuscript is, "Is it interesting?"

* * *

CONSTANTINE TABIT, who for several years has been the Syrian correspondent of the London Times, chat about journalism in the June issue of th Alumni Monthly, published by the Ameri can University of Beirut. To him, jour nalism is a double-edged weapon whic "if mis-handled may cut the person tha wields it."

Mr. Tabit is speaking of the Londo Times when he says:

> It was the first newspaper to be printed b steam and was for 100 years practically th only prevailing type of daily newspaper in th British Isles. Much of the success is due t the enterprise and genius of the founder, M John Walter, and also, the fact that the owner ship remained for long in the hands of th Walter family, that jealously kept up the tradi tions of their forbear. It is a historic fac that, having been refused the use of the pos for his foreign news packets, Mr. Walter estab lished his own system of communication an beat the government with important items o news on several occasions, such as the new of Waterloo, which he was the first to announce The prestige and success of the Times was en hanced after the exposure of the maladministra tion of the Crimean campaign, through the pub lication of the letters of its correspondent, W H. Russell.

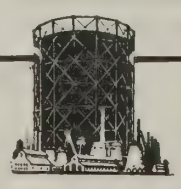
SEVEN MONTHS' LEADERSHIP

THE New York Times in the seven months of this year published 16,903,408 agate lines of advertising, 6,119,008 lines more than any other New York newspaper.

The Times maintains its leadership despite the exclusion of tens of thousands of lines of announcements which do not meet its censorship rules.

The New York Times

Detroit
Fourth Largest City



For most complete and economical coverage concentrate in one paper—

The Detroit News.

Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

Read in 4 out of 5 Homes In PEORIA

PEORIA JOURNAL-TRANSCRIPT
"The Try-Out Medium In the Try-Out City"

FOR linotype, stereotype and mat work—and in the engraving and photographic departments—there is no other source of heat so dependable as

GAS

In your business, as in your home, whatever the need for heat, "You can do it better with Gas."

American Gas Association
420 Lexington Ave., New York City

The insignia that represents GOOD service.

Over 400 newspapers discovered a simple and practical solution to their checking proof problems, when they accepted our NEW and Complete Checking Proof Service. Under this plan the Publishers' office is relieved entirely of all detail work.

Less expensive—
Greater results.

(Two months' trial test offer)

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.
79 Madison Ave. NEW YORK — 538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO

NEA Service newspictures are always on top of the news—or ahead of it.

NEA Service, Inc.,
1200 West Third Street
CLEVELAND, OHIO

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE
of the
INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION

Can supply you with competent circulation men of capacity and ability capable to take entire charge of your department or to fill important posts in the department.

Address the Secretary-Treasurer please, Mr. Clarence Eyster, care Star Building, Peoria, Ill.

This comparison is made by Mr. Tabit between journalism in England and that in America:

The two greatest newspaper countries in the world are Great Britain and the U. S. A.; since, out of 60,000 daily and weekly papers computed in the world, 28,000 are published in the U. S. A. and 13,000 in the British Empire. In Great Britain, where the modern newspaper had its origin, the development moved along conservative lines, and the newspaper continued to cater to the upper and educated classes until the influence and methods of the American press crossed the Atlantic, when two types came into being in England, expressively described as journals for classes and journals for masses, the prototype of the latter being the Daily Mail, the most widely read paper in Great Britain, whose daily circulation is said to have attained 1¼ million copies. The circulation of the leading Sunday papers is said to have exceeded 2½ million copies. These figures, large as they are, may be much surpassed by the leading American papers. There the peculiar conditions have created a new type of newspaper, which had to meet the needs of a large public, able and eager to read, but with no further education, and uncritical as to matters of taste and perhaps even of veracity.

Mr. Tabit frankly admits that for enterprise and for lavish expenditure newspapers in America surpass those of any other country in the world. He is speaking of journalism in Beirut when he says:

As a distinguished and unmalicious friend justly remarked to me in this connection, the newspapers of Beirut would do well to pool their interests and merge in a few, to be directed by able and competent hands. Some of the pitfalls that a certain section of our press would do well to studiously eschew are the tendency to personal abuse, mercenariness and cheap appeal to political and racial passions under the guise of nationalism. On the other hand, each and all would do well to cultivate the virtues common to all great newspapers in the west, viz. sincerity of political conviction, aim at highest service, scrupulous search for truth, honest desire to serve the national cause and welfare and, at the same time, humanity at large.

* * *

SOME one on the copy desk of the San Francisco Examiner has sent the following justification of the word "flay" to William Lyon Phelps who prints it in his department "As I Like It" in Scribner's magazine for August:

The word "flay" as used in newspaper headlines was submitted for your Ignoble Prize in the May issue of your magazine. It was proposed by a California woman who doubtless has read it in this newspaper, The Examiner.

Permit a blackball to be cast, please.

The head-line to which your correspondent objected was an indefinite one—"Senator Flays Rival." That, of course, is too indefinite to be a good headline. There are—or ought to be—96 senators. He should have been named, the slayer.

But the word 'Flay" is essential to our business.

Here is our problem:

What happens is: Senator William E. Borah excoriates the Permanent Court of International Justice, or whatever its name is.

We have to tell that story in a 96-point line, eight columns wide, counting 24 letters and spaces. So we write:

BORAH FLAYS WORLD COURT

It is a good line, well within the count. "Flay" is an excellent synonym for "Excoriate." That is, Borah strips the hide off the World Court.

If we don't use 96-point headlines, Gothic type, the circulation manager tells us the paper will not be sold, and if the paper is not sold, it will not be read, and if the paper is not read, no one will know what Senator Borah says, and the Republic will fall.

A rattling good newspaper yarn was recently printed in the Saturday Evening Post. I refer to the tale "Galle - Proof," by Clarence Budington Kelland.

This is a story of a small-town editor who owned his own soul. Throughout the story, Mr. Kelland has injected a good deal of sound philosophy about newspaper editing and making. The following is a typical illustration, "Given enough subscribers, and advertising comes in meekly, without a halter." "Galley Proof" is not only a good tale but it also has several good tips for editors of community weeklies.

So much for the tale of Mr. Kelland. The current issue of the Saturday Evening Post has a short article "Breaking into Advertising." It purported to be an interview with Henry Ewald by Norman Beasley. In this interview, Ewald advises young men who wish to learn advertising to spend three years as a newspaper reporter, then a year in the classified department of some good newspaper and then a year in the display department. Then—but not till then—is a young man well prepared to take a position in an advertising agency. Just what these years will teach a young chap is given in detail in the article.

Having spoken of a story and an article in the Saturday Evening Post, I do not need to overlook the advertisements. An advertisement which especially pleased me is that which the Scripps-Howard Newspapers inserted in the Post for July 30. It has for its caption, "There's the man who wrote that story and we all know he writes the truth." These advertisements are advertised to present little dramas in the life of a great newspaper system.

WHERE are the graduates of schools of journalism? That question is answered satisfactorily, so far as the School of Journalism at the University of Missouri is concerned, in an article which George Marvin contributes to The Outlook for July 20. His article, "Missionaries of Missouri—a University Source of Sound Journalism," not only tells what the graduates are doing but comments intelligently on the instruction offered at that institution. Of course it has words of praise for the Dean, Walter Williams, who started this school in 1908.

Since 1908, according to Mr. Marvin, 499 men and 308 women have been graduated by Dean Williams with a degree of Bachelor of Journalism. These graduates are scattered from Dan to Bersheba—to quote a Biblical phrase. Especially is the school of Dean Williams well represented in China, Japan, and South America. The article is illustrated with a picture of Neff Hall, the home of the School of Journalism at Columbia, Missouri.

WRITERS TESTIFY IN MURDER TRIAL

Three Called in Le Boeuf Case at Franklin, La.—They Obtained Confession in Prison Cell—Many Cover Case

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

COURTHOUSE, FRANKLIN, La., Aug. 4.—A battery of newspaper writers is covering the Le Boeuf murder trial here. Three of them have been summoned as witnesses. They are Meigs O. Frost, of the New Orleans State; Martha Dalrymple, of the New Orleans Item Tribune, and Gwen Bristow, of the New Orleans Times Picayune. They secured from Mrs. Ada Bonner Le Boeuf, a complete confession in her prison cell, and that confession, it is believed, let James Beadle, a defendant, to break away from the other two accused with him of murder.

The press throughout this case have found the chief defense counsel, Sen. James R. Parkerson, quite an obstacle. His summoning of Miss Dalrymple and Mr. Frost was regarded as purely a move to get them out of the courtroom. Their testimony certainly could not have been favorable to his clients. The summoning of Miss Bristow by District Attorney Emile Vuillemot, was done at the suggestion of the reporters, who wanted to spike the guns of Mr. Parkerson.

The next day the senator withdrew his objections to having the reporter witnesses in the courtroom and they returned to their desks. Press arrangements are very good, thanks to Sheriff Pecot. The Associated Press and New Orleans Item Tribune have leased wires. The Western Union put in several extra wires, all of which were installed in a room in the courtroom. The arrangements were made by the sheriff and by Sanford Jarrell of the Item Tribune, the first newspaper man of the scene.

Among the Newspaper representatives present were New Orleans States, Meigs O. Frost and Andrew Ojead; New Orleans Item and Morning Tribune, Sanford Jarrell, Martha Dalrymple, Ruth Nisbet, and William J. Sadler; New Orleans Times Picayune, Kenneth K. Knoblock and Given Bristow; Beaumont Enterprise, Frank Door; Associated Press, James Douthitt; Universal Service, Ann Daly; International News Service, M. F. Cassidy; Houston Press, Asa Bordages. Several other newspapers were represented by the Item Tribune News Bureau.

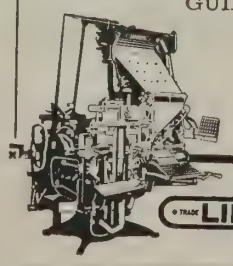
WORCESTER POST PRAISED

The Worcester (Mass.) Evening Post of which John H. Fahey is publisher and George T. Richardson editor has been highly commended by Gifford Pinchot, former governor of Pennsylvania, for its successful fight covering a several months' campaign for the reduction of rates of both the Worcester Gas Light Co. and the Worcester Electric Light Co. According to Mr. Pinchot, the rate cut victory of the Post has made history in the regulation of public utility rates and gives the small consumer the first ray of hope.

now

195,000 Daily
425,000 Sunday

and The largest home-delivered circulation of any paper in its territory



Los Angeles Examiner

From the Linotype Mailbag

"Solved Our Problem"

"We are glad to send you copies of the Norfolk Journal and Guide which is set in your recent Ionic 6½ Pt. and we wish to say that we are very much pleased with its effectiveness. It is a beautiful face of type, very readable, yet sufficiently condensed to be desirable newspaper body type. We received many compliments from our readers on our new dress and although we changed from an 8 pt. face to the Ionic there has not been a single reader complaint. Before installation of the Ionic we set a portion of our newspaper in 6 pt. Century which always brought a large number of complaints. The Ionic seems to have solved our problem and we are very happy with the results."

NORFOLK JOURNAL AND GUIDE
Norfolk, Va.

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

If Quality

of circulation is your first consideration.

The Evening Star

With Sunday Morning Editions
Washington, D. C.

will have your preference—same as it has the preference of practically everyone in the National Capital.

The Star's circulation is home circulation—both quality and quantity—the kind that counts most with advertisers.

N. Y. Office—110 E. 42nd St.
Dan A. Carroll

Chicago Office—Tower Building
J. E. Lutz

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's

Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns

Are Covered Completely by THE DAILY ARGUS
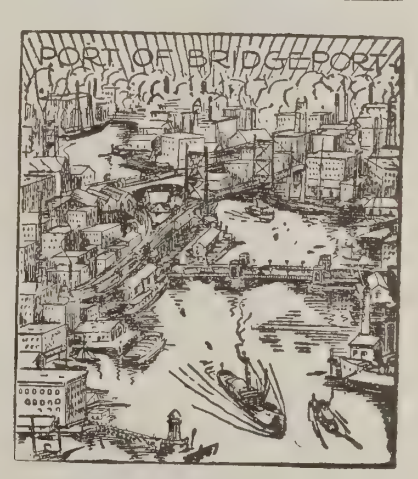
of
Mount Vernon



THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle

Both Members of A. B. C.

Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

America's Complete Newspaper

NEW YORK
Herald Tribune

A Busy Port!

15,719 vessels entered and departed from this harbor during 1926

1,173,493 tons of merchandise cargo valued $94,299,666

50,000 families spend $48,000,000 annually in Bridgeport's retail stores. National advertisers can cover BRIDGEPORT, Connecticut, completely with the

Post Telegram

National Representatives
GILMAN, NICOLL & RUTHMAN
New York, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco.

VICE-PRESIDENTS APPOINTED

President Meredith of National Editorial Association Picks State Chiefs

Appointment of State vice-presidents has just been announced by President C. M. Meredith, Quakertown, Pa., of the National Editorial Association, as follows:

Alabama—Marcy B. Darnall, Florence Herald.
Alaska—E. G. Morrissey, Ketchikan Chronicle.
Arizona—O. B. Jaynes, Tucson Citizen.
Arkansas—C. B. Hurley, Camden News.
California—Bernice C. Downing, San Jose Mercury-Herald.
Colorado—J. N. Green, Colorado Springs Farm News.
Connecticut—W. J. Pape, Waterbury Republican and American.
Delaware — Theodore Townsend, Milford Chronicle.
Florida—P. V. Leavengood, Ocala Daily Star.
Georgia—G. S. Chapman, Sandersville Progress.
Idaho—H. C. Dworshak, Burley Bulletin.
Illinois—Gerry D. Scott, Wyoming Post-Herald.
Indiana—J. P. Cox, Owensville Tribune.
Iowa—C. M. Richards, Toledo Chronicle.
Kansas—Mack Cretcher, Newton Journal.
Kentucky—Keene Johnson, Lawrenceburg News.
Louisiana—D. A. Gallagher, Southern Printer, New Orleans.
Maine—Charles H. Fogg, Houlton Times.
Maryland — Geo. C. Rhoderick, Middletown Valley Register.
Massachusetts—Gardner E. Campbell, Wakefield Item.
Michigan—M. H. DeFoe, Charlotte Republican.
Minnesota—E. K. Whiting, Owatonna Journal-Chronicle.
Mississippi—L. H. Bowen, Brookhaven Times.
Missouri—J. S. Hubbard, Missouri Publisher, Columbia.
Montana—T. J. Hocking, Glasgow Courier.
Nebraska—H. D. Leggett, Ord Quiz.
Nevada—W. C. Black, Lovelock Review-Miner.
New Hampshire—Charles G. Jenness, Rochester Courier.
New Jersey—Richard C. Anzer, Union City Hudson News.
New Mexico—J. G. Greaves, Portales News.
New York—C. G. Clarke, Perry Record.
North Carolina—J. A. Sharpe, Lumberton Robesonian.
North Dakota—Wayne Peterson, Rolla Star.
Ohio—C. R. Callaghan, Bellevue Gazette.
Oklahoma—N. A. Nichols, El Reno American.
Oregon—Hal E. Hoss, Oregon City Enterprise.
Pennsylvania—Marion S. Schoch, Sellinsgrove Times.
Rhode Island—E. A. Noyes, Wickford Standard.
South Carolina — E. H. DeCamp, Gaffney Ledger.
South Dakota—E. B. Oddy, Woonsocket New
Tennessee—Hugh J. Doak, Manchester Time
Texas—Mrs. Lee J. Rountree, Bryan Eagle.
Utah—Charles England, Logan Journal.
Vermont—Harry E. Parker, Bradford Unit-Opinion.
Virginia — George N. Buck, Front Roy Sentinel.
Washington—Frank S. Evanss, Sedro-Woole Courier-Times.
West Virginia—H. L. Snyder, Shepherdsto Register.
Wisconsin—Mark R. Bell, Ladysmith Ne Budget.
Wyoming—O. G. Frazine, Newcastle Ne Letter.

GEYER LEFT $50,000

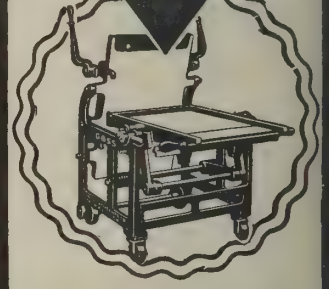
An estate of $50,000 was left Charles J. Geyer, well known advertisi man, who died at his home in Dayton, recently. The estate is left to his wido

Supplies and Equipment

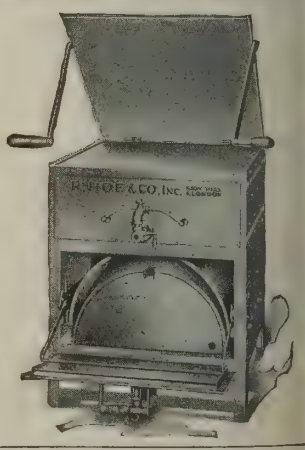
SUPREME
METAL FURNACE
For Remelting and Refining Metals
IMPROVED
SIMPLEX
METAL FEEDER
For Composing Machines
ALFRED W. CHANNING, Inc.
Manufacturers and Distributors of Equipment for Printers
27 Thames St., N. Y.

Drive and Control for Newspaper Presses

A representative installation on the Pacific Coast is a 100-h. p., a-c. equipment on a 4-unit Hoe press at the San Diego, Cal., Union. This is a repeat order.



GENERAL ELECTRIC



USED NEWSPAPER PRESSES
Scott 16, 24 and 32-Page Presses
GOSS 24 and 28-page presses good for black or color work, also Goss Sextuple.
HOE Pony Quadruple, Quadruple, Sextuple, Sextuple color Press, Octuple and Double Sextuple Presses.
DUPLEX Metropolitan Quadruple stereotype presses—print up to 32 pages.
Available for Early Delivery
WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY
Main Office & Factory.....Plainfield, N. J.
New York Office..Brokaw Bldg., 1457 Broadway
Chicago Office.....Monadnock Block

BLANKETS
of all kinds for all makes of
Rotary Newspaper Printing Machines
Automatic Efficiency Felt Blankets
Monocork Blankets
Oil-proof-face Rubber Blankets
Cutting Rubbers and Conveyor Wire.
You can save waste paper, increase production and obtain better printing when your machines are properly blanketed.
We specialize in the manufacture of Newspaper Printing Blankets and carry a complete line, including all widths and thicknesses.
New England Newspaper Supply Company
Worcester, Mass., U. S. A.
Cable Address NENSCO
Worcester, Mass.

Modern
Composing Room Furniture
as made by us will speed up production and reduce costs—a real saving in your Pay Roll. Are you interested? If so, consult your regular dealer in printers' supplies or write us direct.
Do it now!
HAMILTON MFG. CO.
TWO RIVERS, WIS.

Rebuilt
GOSS & HOE
PRESS
BARGAINS
ALL TYPES
SEND for LIST
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.
CHICAGO—NEW YORK—LONDON

GOSS
STEREOTYPING MACHINERY
Carried in Stock

Fastest, most easily operated, most accurate and durable flat casting box you can buy. Perfectly balanced. New design lock-up bar allows for quick change when regulating thickness of casts. Positive quick lock-up at four points on box with one lever movement. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

Two Matrix Scorching Ovens For The Price Of One

THIS Hoe Improved Combination Curved and Flat Matrix Scorching Oven is equipped with four gas burners to provide the high temperature necessary to scorch dry mats quickly and uniformly.
The curved saddle and the flat mat chamber are both covered with asbestos.
R. HOE & CO., INC. 504-520 Grand St., New York City
Sharon Bldg. SAN FRANCISCO — 7 So. Dearborn St. CHICAGO — Pere Marquette Bldg. NEW ORLEANS — 7 Water St. BOSTON

Eventually
Equipment must be replaced and there is always a demand for Supplies. Advertisers in Editor & Publisher keep their message before the men who buy—in fact this publication is the market place where the Buyer and Seller meet in the right atmosphere.

Employment—Equipment—Services

DITOR & PUBLISHER Classified Advertising Information

RATES

SITUATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .50 per line
3 Times — .40 per line
ALL OTHER CLASSIFICATIONS
(Cash with Order)
1 Time — .75 per line
4 Times — .60 per line

ite space charge at same rate per line insertion as earned by frequency of in- tion. Minimum Contract space, three es. The Editor & Publisher reserves the ht to classify, edit or reject any adver- ement.

ADVERTISING

General Promotion

You Want More Local Advertising put us work for you selling our "Worthwhile" atures. Write F. G. Hogan Syndicate, mcke Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind., or Kane, Pa.

Supplies

ading Sheets for Art work and Benday ef- ts. Bourges Service, Inc., 144 West 32nd eet, New York.

USINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Brokers

Big Bargain for Quick Buyer. Weekly and plant in Eastern Pennsylvania; field of re than 20,000; modern equipment, including plex press; good circulation; price $12,000, -half cash. J. B. Shale, Times Bldg., New rk.

gh Grade Properties in Kansas, Missouri, wa, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Arkansas, both ily and weekly; exclusive listings; no damag- publicity; personal service in every deal; ecial attention to financing. All matters solutely confidential. High grade newspaper nds for sale. Clyde H. Knox, 851 Board of ade Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

ade Journal, established, in good condition, pable of expansion. Gross about $20,000. king price, $17,500 cash. Harris-Dibble Co., 5 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Newspaper Interest Wanted

blisher - Editor - Manager, experienced in itorial, business and other departments, who s just built up and sold successful daily, eks new connection. Young, energetic, re- urceful. Would consider investment or mporary salary arrangement. C-869, Editor Publisher.

Service

Out of Town Concerns. You can secure all e advantages of a New York address, includ- g the services of established, fully furnished d equipped offices, where your interests, en- iries, callers, literature, mail, or samples ll be intelligently and properly handled, for nominal annual charge. Address (by letter ly) Suite 1004, at 1841 Broadway (Columbus ircle), New York City.

CIRCULATION

Promotion

rculation—When quick, additional circulation verage becomes necessary, remember that r twenty years in this one line of endeavor your proof against experimenting. Write or ire. Pacific Coast Circulation Service, Bell lock, Cincinnati, Ohio.

rculation Builders—Blair & Austin, 1504 Cen- e ave., Reading, Penn. Originators of Sales- anship Club Campaigns.

k the Man Who's Had One! In over 20 ears of nation-wide experience, we have proved urselves always able to produce greater results r dollar expended. Our circulation building mpaigns, large or small, have all expert man- gement and attention. Address us now, care of he World-Herald, Omaha, Nebr., or at any me at Box 288, Waterloo, Iowa. Myers' Cir- ulation Organization.

uperior Circulation Builders—The W. S. Ken- all Company, 104 North Bailey Ave., Louis- ille, Kentucky. The circulation-building or- anization that has set the standard for aggres- ive, successful circulation campaigns for nearly wenty years.

he World's Largest Circulation Building Or- anization—The only circulation-building serv- e in Newspaperdom furnishing publishers' ffidavits of the exact results of its every ampaign. The Charles Partlowe Company, ecidental Building, Indianapolis.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

ssistant Circulation Manager wanted on orning daily near New York City. Must be apable promotion man with carrier boys and ealers. Address Box C-877, Editor & Pub- sher.

ditorial Writer and News Editor, experienced, nterested in attractive opening, wanted. State ully education and experience and submit amples of editorial work. Adrian Daily elegram, Adrian, Mich.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Supervisor for telephone Want Ad room wanted. Prefer a young man but young woman with proper qualifications would be acceptable. Must be able to direct extensive voluntary traffic; know how to handle a force of 30 girls and be experienced in producing new business. The paper is first in an Eastern Metropolitan city. Give complete details in first letter. C-878, Editor & Publisher.

Typist Wanted—Young man, speedy typist, who can write terse captions for news photographs. Good opportunity for young man willing to assume responsibilities. Prefer young man with newspaper experience. Tell us all about yourself in your letter, and mention salary you want. To be in New York City. C-880, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Advertising Manager—Twelve years' experience, including one year each New York and Chicago, national fields; 6 years executive, both local and national. Thorough organizer and intensive salesman, accustomed to keen metropolitan competition. Intimate knowledge retail and national merchandising. Especially equipped to create large volume of new business. Excellent reason for desiring new opportunity. Six years present employers. Splendid record and best references. Correspondence invited in strict confidence. Age 33, married. Protestant. In New York week of Aug. 10 for interviews. Address C-801, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Salesman with five years' experience and an excellent record wants opportunity to increase linage for sound newspaper. Has had merchandising experience that inspires constructive promotion work. Employed but available on reasonable notice. C-861, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Executive, ten years' experience in newspaper, corporation, agency and direct mail advertising, desires permanent connection in city of 15,000 or over, with live newspaper or growing concern. A hard worker. Age 34, married, personable. Write C-872, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor, thoroughly experienced in all phases, layout, copy, long-term special pages. A money maker for newspaper in Middle West or Pacific Coast. Inquiry will bring you full story and photo. C-874, Editor & Publisher.

Cartoonist of great ability and reputation, with fifteen years' experience on large Eastern daily doing Editorial page cartoons, desires position with paper or syndicate, preferably in the East. C-859, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager—Capable, reliable and resourceful; 20 years' experience on all classes of dailies; absolutely familiar with all details. Reference furnished. C-871, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation—Young married man with successful record on four publications, who has made intensive study of circulation system, promotion and finance, and who has successful record in sub-executive positions on three publications in different parts of the country, and an excellent record in two years' circulation management on New England newspaper under most adverse conditions, is seeking a location with a paper that will afford him a definite opportunity for personal progress and of permanence. Changes made in position have been for purposes of advancement, and has never left a position except of his own accord. For a connection with the right publication, is willing to make some salary sacrifice at the outset. In position to assume new connection at once and willing to pay one half of expense in going for interview. Correspondence invited from publishers in cities of 150,000 or less, and assurance is given that letters will be held strictly confidential. C-809, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Advertising Manager.—Experience covers wide range in every phase of Classified as well as an intensive study. Now Manager on daily in city of 300,000 population. Paper is one of foremost in country. Age 25, married, in good health. Can train street and phone solicitors. Know collections and promotion. Experienced in organization departments. Works thoroughly and builds only permanent linage. Enjoys keen competition. Used to hard, consistent work. Dependable, aggressive, pleasing personality. Ability proven by references from past and present employers. Excellent reasons for desiring new opportunity. Never left position except of own accord. Seeking connection on large daily in either north, east or west. C-873, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager, employed at present, wishes to make connection with paper in city of 100,000 population or over. Can furnish best of reference. If I can't increase your production 20% in four months I don't want the job. C-853, Editor & Publisher.

Composing Room Foreman or Superintendent wishes a permanent position; can give reference as to ability, character and reliability; experienced in large and medium plants; 14 years in one place. Address C-868, Editor & Publisher.

Copy Writer—Man, 28, B.A. degree, four years writing news, editorials, and publicity, one year of selling, wants copy department opening. Metropolitan district, agency preferred. References. C-870, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer—Vigorous and snappy editorials on Democratic politics and Government activities. Small compensation. C-847, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Executive—Available to publisher on two weeks' notice, the services of expert upbuilder of small dailies. Can do work of several ordinary men as editor and general manager. Can hire, fire, buy to advantage and apply modern methods to ad, news and circulation departments at no extra cost. Record shows two successes, third under way. Recommendations from successful publishers, would want eighty, with small increase on each thousand for circulation boost. C-846, Editor & Publisher.

In Any Capacity—College graduate, 25, desires to connect with daily newspaper in or near New York. Two years' business experience. C-882, Editor & Publisher.

Mechanical Superintendent, three years' experience afternoon paper, city of thirty thousand, wants to make change. C-865, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Business Detail man, thorough, wants connection with Eastern newspaper. Many years' experience all branches of detail management. Experienced in all labor matters. Complete working knowledge of entire mechanics of newspaper publishing. Trained in good sized Western city. Several years executive experience in New York. Expert accountant and system man. Few hours away from New York. Interview confidential. Address C-879, Editor & Publisher.

News Executive—Editorial writer of wide experience; competent to take complete charge of news and editorial end; A-1 references; now employed; seeks permanent connection in South, East. Address C-876, Editor & Publisher.

News Executive and Writer, exceptional experience, free September 1. College man, 37, married. Nine years' newspapers from reporter to managing editor, seven years Associated Press, two years United Press. Organizer and developer of news staffs. Puts accuracy, fair play ahead of sensations. Understands money comes from business office. Address C-866, Editor & Publisher.

Service Dep't Manager of three publications open for connection. Prolific writer. $60. Available Aug. 8th. C-849, Editor & Publisher.

Young Man desires editorial work on trade paper or magazine, or, as an assistant to busy news executive or publisher. Experience includes 12 years' general business, together with 7 years' newspaper and journalistic work. Capable editorial writer, and in mechanical make-up and secretarial detail. B-881, Editor & Publisher.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Due to Consolidation of two Lima newspapers we have for immediate sale at very attractive terms and prices the following equipment:
1 Hoe mat rolling machine.
1 small coal melting furnace.
1 flat casting box.
1 Goss shaver or curved plate.
1 Goss chipping block.
1 Goss melting pot with pump and curved casting box attached.
1 saw trimmer with motor.
1 Westinghouse electric press control, 50 cycle, 25 H.P. motor operating on 220 volts.
1 24-page Goss press.
1 Westinghouse electric pot with automatic temperature control, size 150, using 220 volts, known as style B.

These articles must be moved at once, and are available at practically your own price with reasonable terms to responsible parties. L. T. Ward, Lima Star, Lima, Ohio.

Due to Consolidation of two Lima newspapers The Lima Star has a $2,450 credit on a new linotype machine which will be sold at a liberal discount on reasonable terms to responsible parties. If interested, wire or write L. T. Ward, Lima Star, Lima, Ohio.

For Quick Sale—16-page Scott press and stereotyping equipment, where it stands in Concord, for $2,000. Is in good condition. For information write Concord Monitor, Concord, N. H.

For Sale—Four Mergenthaler Electric pots, 220 volts, 60 cycle, A. C., complete and in excellent order. Changing because of rate. The Daily Pantagraph, Bloomington, Ill.

For Sale: Goss Monitor Perfecting Press with motor. Lately overhauled; guaranteed first-class condition. 7 or 8 columns. Mat roller, casting box and stereotype outfit complete. Must be sold at once. Can give terms. Globe-News, Amarillo, Texas.

For Sale—One complete photo-engraving plant. Miles Machinery Co., 64 West 23d St., New York.

Job Presses, Paper Cutters, Wire Stitchers, etc.—A complete line. Overhauled and guaranteed machines at bargain prices. Easy terms. Hoffman Type & Engraving Co., 114 E. 13th St., N. Y. City.

Printers and Bookbinders:—Two Revolution Presses, Drum Cylinder Presses, Power Paper Cutters, Lever Paper Cutters, Colts and Universal Presses, Chandler & Price Presses, Golding Jobbers, New Style Gordon Presses, C. & P. Presses, with Miller Feeder, Multi Color Presses Folders, Punches, Perforators. Wire stitchers Numbering Machines, Standing Presses, Embossers, Shears, Proof Fresses, at greatly reduced prices and upon most liberal terms American Type Founders Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Used Goss Mat Roller for wet mats only, for sale cheap. The Goss Printing Press Co., 153 So. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

Web Press for Sale—Goss, horizontal straight line quintuple. 2 plates wide, 36" web, 5 decks high, capacity 20 page straight, 40 page collect, single half page folder, with extra former, late news device, self contained paper hoist, belt driven, without electric control. General Electric D. C. motor, 35 HP, 230 V, 600 R.P.M. including base and pulley, rheostat, 2 pole switch, belt shifter and 45 lineal feet 7" double leather belting.

This press now in operation, in splendid condition and can be shipped immediately. Putting in larger press reason for selling. C-875, Editor & Publisher.

Equipment Wanted

Four Used Duplex QQ 1165-E form roller stocks wanted. The Journal Company, Webster City, Ia.

Wanted to Buy—Thirty stereotype chases, used, for 8-col., 12 ems, length 21½ or 22 inch. Would trade in equal amount of 7-col. chases, or sell outright. The Globe-News Pub. Co., Wilbur C. Hawk, Gen. Mgr., Amarillo, Texas.

SUPPLIES

Metal

Standard Linotype, Stereotype and Monotype metal at substantial discounts when purchased in ton lots or over. Let us quote you. American Alloys Company, 1939 East Sergeant St., Philadelphia.

Newspaper Properties Bought, Sold and Appraised

All negotiations confidential

PALMER, DEWITT & PALMER

Business Established in 1899

350 Madison Ave. New York

Pacific Coast Representative:
M. C. Moore, 515 N. Canon Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

CONSOLIDATION

The merging of newspaper interests is a subject that has received special study and investigation by this firm for nearly 17 years. It is a big subject and requires considerable technical knowledge, both as to valuation and operating methods. When properly organized, the results are never disappointing.

We have been factors in many important consolidations, sales and appraisals.

HARWELL & CANNON

Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

IF YOU ARE SEEKING a position in any department of newspaper work, our Individual Service Plan will show you the way. It is bringing good results for our clients. Let us tell you about it.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
SECURITY BLDG. SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

One Dollar will be paid for each idea published. Send clipping for payment.

THE Hudson (N. Y.) Evening Register last week used a band concert as the means of selling a full page of advertising. The page was headed: "For an evening of real enjoyment come to the next band concert in Old Kinderhook." The band's program occupied space in the center of the page. There was a total of 13 advertisements.—C. W., Albany, N. Y.

"Eat Fruit for Health" could be the heading over a page spread with ads of local fruit dealers appearing under the heading.—Frank H. Williams, 815 So. Van Ness Ave., Santa Ana, Cal.

Advertising men should not forget that now is the time to sell advertising to fur dealers. New stock arrives and many merchants are putting on special displays, accompanied, in some cases, by sales—Jack Sedwick, Dayton, Ohio.

The Albany (N. Y.) Times-Union printed a ten-page advertising section July 29, under the title of "Albany Old Timers' Edition." The sub-heading was "Concerns in Business 25 to More Than 100 Years."—C. W., Albany, N. Y.

A weekly of Seattle, Wash., gives $1 for the best letters on what changes would be made in the paper were the contributor the editor. Many new and excellent suggestions may be received by a paper which features such a contest.—C. M. L., Seattle, Wash.

Advertisers giving special offerings usually post clipped advertisements in their windows. As clippings they are unattractive and do not appeal to the eye, so we have adopted a system of furnishing attractively mounted clippings as soon as the paper is off the press. The mounting is made on lightweight card with an attractive printed border, of which we keep a half dozen sizes. Any size ad from the two-column to the page may be mounted effectively. Underneath we have "As Advertised in The Times-Herald," thus keeping our name before the advertiser and the public.—Rowland Threlkeld, Alliance, Neb.

Omaha real estate owners and managers are conducting a very interesting series of advertisements in the newspapers to acquaint the tenants and general public with some of their problems. The first "card" of the interesting series shows what the owners do with every cent in every dollar received, while the second card tells of insurance and taxes, the third about cleaning bills and the fourth deals with the cost of heating as a part of every rent bill. Why not interest the owners and managers in your community in the idea as a means of better relations between owners and tenants?—Cole, Fall River.

HUNCHES

One Dollar will be paid for each idea published. Send clipping for payment.

OUR paper has found that the interest in "Ask Me Another" is waning the same as that of "Cross-Word Puzzles." We have stopped both and started a "Do You Know—" feature like this:

DO YOU KNOW—

That Colorado is good state for a woman to "get a husband"?

That there are 45,000 more males than females in the state?

That Massachusetts has a superfluity of spinsters because there is an excess of 72,000 females in this New England state?

Do You Know—

That normally there is more precipitation in this vicinity in May than any other month, and that January has the least precipitation?

That in an average year, May has more than six times as much precipitation as January?—Houston Waring.

The Indianapolis Star and Indianapolis News, in co-operation with the Indianapolis Real Estate Board, have asked prominent business men of the city to tell "What I Would Do To Improve Indianapolis." The writers have been asked to point out any needs or ills and the remedy for them.—Dow Richardson, Logansport, Ind.

"Business Men Who Play Golf" is the title of series of intimate pictures of Salt Lake City's leading business and professional men who find great relaxation in playing golf. The articles will not be written to show golf skill but for the purpose of showing how health and pleasure has been secured by the game.—Fred L. W. Bennett, Salt Lake City.

The Utica (N. Y.) Observer-Dispatch is conducting a "Cartoon Voting Contest" based on amateurs reproducing the cartoons that are printed daily. Three prizes are offered, $5, $3 and $2.—C. W., Albany. N. Y.

The County Fair season will soon be "open" in most sections. Visit the various booths and side shows. There will be many interesting characters that will weave into a good feature story.—Davis O. Vandivier, Franklin, Ind.

Our weekly paper has just completed a "Big Six" election. We printed a ballot in the paper for two weeks and asked our readers to vote for the six leading men of the community, considering: High character, integrity, energy, civic spirit, leadership, and good influence. There were no prizes or commercial motive attached to the election, and the result of a heavy vote showed that the leaders really had been chosen. Good will was built for our paper; interest was created for the readers, and the town benefited by the encouraging of civic spirit.—H. W. Littleton, Colo.

The Rochester (N. Y.) Times-Union, afternoon daily, is featuring an advertising section headed: "Ancient and honorable business firms, who for over a half century have faithfully served this community."—Carroll Walker.

TRI-STATE MEETS OCT. 6-8

Business, Golf and Stock Show on Sioux City Editorial Program

The Tri-State Editorial Association annual convention will be held at the Martin Hotel, Sioux City, Oct. 6-8. Two hundred members from Iowa, South Dakota and Nebraska are expected to attend. Business meetings will be held the second and third mornings, with the annual banquet the night of Oct. 6. The visiting editors will be guests the first day at the Stocker and Feeder show at the Sioux City Yards Company and the Sioux City Live Stock Exchange; a special editors' golf tournament will be held the afternoon of the second day and a silver loving cup trophy will be awarded, winner for three consecutive years to come into permanent possession of the cup. The second evening will be given over to a theater party and golfers will vie with the editors.

Officers and members of the association who outlined the program for event were: Deloss Hall, Tyndall, president; H. F. Wagner, Homer, vice-president; C. C. Sturges, Correville, Ia., secretary; Mrs. Kathryn Hunt, Sioux City, treasurer; R. R lison, Laurel, Nebr.; Mrs. Lillian K Anderson, Elk Point, S. D.; He Koch, Mapleton, Ia., and Thomas ray, Pender, Nebr.

COSTS $25 TO HIT EDITO

Ganem A. Ganem, 21, of 360 street, Lawrence, Mass., was fined $ the Lawrence District Court Jul for assaulting Fred Ghusin of that editor and publisher of the Dai weekly newspaper. A similar c against Ganem's father, Najeen Ganem, was dismissed, the court fi him not guilty. According to testir the alleged assault was the result item in Ghusin's newspaper regardi relative of Ganem.

What Do You KNOW ?

A Great Questions and Answers Feature

New Questions Daily

King Features Syndicate, Inc.
New York City

We Supply
WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED
FICTION

Daily One-Column Mat Features

Weekly Special Articles

Serials

Ask Us for Samples

The O'Dell Newspaper Service
55 Fifth Ave., New York City

PAWNEE BILL
by
HERMAN EDWIN MOOTZ

GRIPPING TALE of INDIAN LIFE

Thrilling 60,000 word story of the ONLY LIVING SCOUT.

LOVE ROMANCE of FRONTIER DAYS

The Last Real Story of the Red Man in 32 instalments.
Released Now.
Illustrated by exclusive photos never before published from the collection of Major Gordon W. Lillie (Pawnee Bill).

44 Cities Closed.
Yours may not be.
Wire your order.

GRAPHIC SYNDICATE, Inc.
350 Hudson Street, New York, N. Y.

Sparkling Accurate Reporting and Complete World Coverage of Telegraph News

INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE
63 Park Row, New York City

Going Over Big—

"The best that I can say for Abie's Irish Rose is that I find myself reading it."
Don Sterling
Portland, (Ore.) Journal.

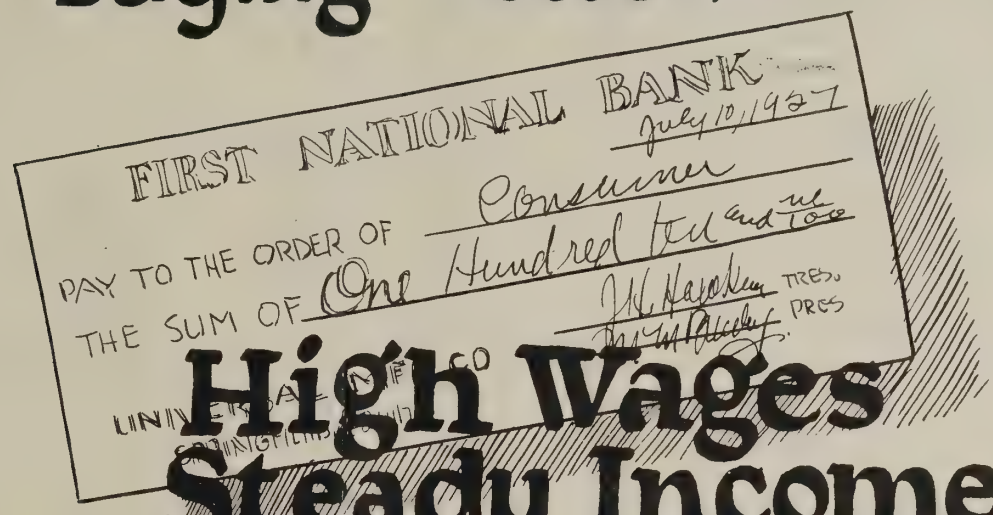
Abie's Irish Rose
The greatest serial since the war

Sixty daily installments, each illustrated with specially posed photographs.

UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE
World Building, New York

GIVE YOUR READERS "DAILY HEALTH TALKS"
by Dr Frank McCoy
"The Mayo of Health Writers"

A health service that is different—home treatments without medicine or costly apparatus, based on a knowledge of food chemistry and the mechanics of the body



WIRE OR WRITE
McCoy Health Service
Brack Shops Building, Los Angeles, Cal.

"Today's News Today"

UNITED·PRESS

Complete wire reports for evening, morning and Sunday newspapers everywhere.

What is behind New England's Buying Power----------

High Wages Steady Income--

Wherever you find a combination of high wages and steady income, there you have a fertile field for the cultivation of volume sales.

New England is this ideal market. Compact in area, peopled by a highly intelligent class of citizens who dwell in the most important industrial district in the country, they are earners of good and steady incomes and they represent a potential buying power second to none in the country.

Your advertising in the local newspapers listed below will fall on fertile soil. How big and how profitable your returns from the advertising dollar will amount to, depends only on how carefully you plan your campaign to reach this consuming power.

These New England newspapers have helped many an advertiser to successfully market their products in this territory. Their experience is available. You are free to call on them as often as you desire.

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Attleboro Sun .....(E)	5,736	.03	.03
Boston Globe .....(M&E)	286 361	.50	.50
Boston Globe .....(S)	333.452	.55	.55
††Boston Transcript .....(E)	38,245	.20	.20
Boston Post .....(M)	394.851	.60	.60
Boston Post .....(S)	350.627	.55	.55
Fitchburg Sentinel .....(E)	12,069	.06	.045
Haverhill Gazette .....(E)	16,415	.065	.05
Lynn Item .....(E)	17,004	.065	.05
††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader ...(M&E)	20,621	.07	.07
New Bedford Standard Mercury .....(M&E)	32,607	.10	.10
New Bedford Sunday Standard (S)	29,262	.10	.10
North Adams Transcript.(E)	10,427	.05	.04
Pittsfield Eagle .....(E)	18,264	.05	.05
Salem News .....(E)	21,495	.09	.07
Taunton Gazette .....(E)	9,414	.045	.035
Worcester Telegram-Gazette (M&E)	99,207	.28	.25
Worcester Sunday Telegram (S)	52,740	.21	.18

CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Bridgeport Post-Telegram (E&M)	44,370	.15	.15
Bridgeport Post .....(S)	23,171	.10	.10
Hartford Courant .....(M)	33,017	.09	.09
Hartford Courant .....(S)	58,674	.13	.13
††Hartford Times .....(E)	56,077	.13	.13
Middletown Press .....(E)	8,560	.05	.03
††New Haven Register.(E&S)	48,507	.145	.135
New London Day .....(E)	12,293	.06	.045
††Norwich Bulletin .....(M)	12,842	.07	.05
Norwalk Hour .....(E)	6,429	.04	.04
††South Norwalk Sentinel..(E)	5,320	.04	.03
Stamford Advocate .....(E)	10,937	.05	.04
Waterbury Republican-American (M&E)	25,234	.08	.08
Waterbury Republican....(S)	15,903	.08	.08

MAINE—Population, 768,014

Portland Press-Herald Express, Sun & Telegram...(M&E)	59.356	.20	.16

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683

Concord Monitor-Patriot.(E)	5.773	.0375	.025
††Keene Sentinel .....(E)	3,980	.036	.023
Manchester Union Leader (M&E)	32.585	.15	.12

RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604.397

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
††Newport Daily News....(E)	6.249	.0336	.0293
Pawtucket Times .....(E)	28,449	.08	.08
Providence Bulletin ....(E)	71,443	.20	(B).27
Providence Journal .....(M)	38,599	.12	(B).27
Providence Journal .....(S)	74,009	.20	.20
Providence News .....(E)	28,021	.08	.08
Providence Tribune .....(E)	21,162	.10	.09
Westerly Sun .....(E&S)	5,273	.03	.03
Woonsocket Call .....(E)	14,880	.05	.05

VERMONT—Population, 352,428

Barre Times .....(E)	7,282	.03	.025
††Brattleboro Reformer ...(E)	3,520	.035	.02
Burlington Free Press...(M)	14,265	.05	.05
Rutland Herald .....(M)	11,816	.05	.05
††St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record .....(E)	4,061	.03	.02

 A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, March 31, 1927.
†† Government Statement, March 31, 1927.
(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

UNDER BEN DAY'S HIGH HAT

Ben Day, the Founder of The Sun, was the son of a hatter and was known in his time for the quality of his high hat. He might well be known in these times for the quality of what was under his hat, for from his fertile and active brain he coined for the first column of the first page of the first issue of The Sun this statement of his ambitions:

> The object of this paper is to lay before the public, at a price within the means of every one, ALL THE NEWS OF THE DAY, and at the same time afford an advantageous medium for advertising.

It is the constant and consistent following of the principles first printed in The Sun nearly one hundred years ago—Sept. 3, 1833—that has resulted in a growth in circulation and in advertising that has placed The Sun in a class quite by itself as a newspaper of distinction in its news, its advertising and it readers.

The Sun First

In the New York Evening Field for Two Years.

The following table gives the advertising lead of The Sun over the nearest New York evening newspaper since June, 1925:

	Lead in Agate Lines
1925
July	21,260
August	62,326
September	71,820
October	41,278
November	58,664
December	132,656
1926
January	229,498
February	52,090
March	78,448
April	99,346
May	78,770
June	138,520
July	124,568
August	122,846
September	172,758
October	98,790
November	120,228
December	171,366
1927
January	259,348
February	132,490
March	237,134
April	154,772
May	200,778
June	183,984

What Would Ben Day Think of That?

The Sun

280 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

WASHINGTON, D. C.
Munsey Building

BOSTON
Old South Building

CHICAGO
208 So. La Salle St.

LOS ANGELES
Van Nuys Building

SAN FRANCISCO
First National Bank Building

THIS ISSUE: SURVEY OF COMBINATION NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1927

SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY.

MEMBER A.B.C. — MEMBER A.B.P.

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; Newspaperdom, March, 1892; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Advertising, February 7, 1925; Revised entry, Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Vol. 60. No. 12 — NEW YORK, AUGUST 13, 1927 — By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A. $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign — 10c Per Copy

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

Total Newspaper Advertising

in Greater New York in Agate Lines

FROM

JANUARY 1 TO JUNE 30, 1927-1926, INCLUSIVE

DAILY AND SUNDAY

Compiled by Statistical Department, New York Evening Post, Inc.

Pages 1927	Pages 1926		Percentage of total space	1927	1926	Gain	Loss
8,240	8,014	American	7.3	6,443,284	6,851,764	.....	408,480
9,872	9,478	Herald Tribune	10.9	9,655,694	9,642,818	12,876	.....
12,702	11,988	Times	16.8	14,954,094	15,251,876	.....	297,782
7,426	8,370	World	9.0	7,986,028	9,173,772	.....	1,187,744
5,646	5,218	*Mirror (Tab.)	1.9	1,618,945	1,810,890	.....	191,945
9,198	8,172	News (Tab.)	5.0	4,443,347	3,832,860	610,487	.....
6,022	6,784	*Eve. Graphic	2.0	1,788,632	1,847,878	.....	59,246
7,022	6,950	*Eve. Journal	3.2	2,869,752	2,618,302	251,450	.....
5,038	4,708	*Eve. Post	5.6	4,999,397	5,165,330	.....	165,933
4,718	5,056	*Eve. World	9.5	8,465,552	8,402,130	63,422	.....
6,572	6,448	*Sun	3.4	2,994,071	3,055,086	.....	61,015
3,836	3,726	*Telegram	10.2	9,027,445	9,359,124	.....	331,679
7,462	7,534	Brooklyn Eagle	3.8	3,387,276	3,720,052	.....	332,776
4,480	4,380	Brooklyn Times	3.2	2,863,612	2,966,420	.....	102,808
2,880	3,194	Standard Union
101,014	100,018	Totals		88,794,175	91,423,760	.....	2,629,585 (Net Loss)

*No Sunday editior

	1927	1926	1925	1924	1923	1922	1921
American	6,443,284	6,851,764	7,162,104	7,808,098	6,153,872	5,668,330	5,236,928
Herald	.....	.....	.....	2,355,910	5,927,014	5,982,182	6,287,834
Herald Tribune	9,655,694	9,642,818	7,794,822	6,206,288	4,996,138	4,737,786	4,841,259
Times	14,954,094	15,251,876	13,587,396	13,293,132	12,582,026	12,079,894	10,930,894
World	7,986,028	9,173,772	8,355,936	8,600,114	9,255,570	8,243,470	7,345,998
Mirror (Tab.)	1,618,945	1,810,890	1,915,106	.....	.....	.....	.....
News (Tab.)	4,443,347	3,832,860	3,251,376	2,884,664	2,123,898	1,643,000	1,126,112
Eve. Graphic	1,788,632	1,847,878	942,732	.....	.....	.....	.....
Eve. Journal	7,297,046	7,725,468	7,751,838	7,475,876	6,794,786	5,970,288	5,383,034
Eve. Mail	.....	.....	.....	††612,782	3,214,534	3,055,906	3,223,622
Eve. Post	2,869,752	2,618,302	2,507,736	2,209,886	2,077,672	2,047,812	3,142,521
Eve. World	4,999,397	5,165,330	4,357,518	3,951,176,	4,511,140	4,597,850	4,650,308
Eve. Globe	.....	.....	.....	.....	‡3,825,302	3,693,968	3,555,150
Sun	8,465,552	8,402,130	7,012,532	6,815,856	5,290,192	4,901,150	4,221,880
Telegram	2,994,071	3,055,086	3,562,044	4,824,988	3,438,312	3,516,492	3,430,878
B'klyn Eagle	9,027,445	9,359,124	8,577,076	8,804,036	8,289,030	7,789,578	6,829,310
B'klyn Times	3,387,276	3,720,052	2,518,838	2,389,888	1,934,896	1,762,750	1,621,564
Stand. Union	2,863,612	2,966,420	3,436,764	3,811,696	3,944,698	3,873,502	3,447,546
Totals	88,794,175	91,423,770	82,743,868	82,944,390	84,359,080	79,563,958	75,274,748

‡Sun and Globe combined June 4, 1923; name changed to Sun, March 10, 1924.
††Telegram and Mail combined January 28, 1924; name changed to Telegram May 18, 1925.

Thank You...

FIVE years ago a certain prominent advertising agent expressed the opinion that he doubted whether a tabloid paper would ever get support enough from either the public or from advertisers to justify its publication. His day of doubting, as far as this tabloid paper is concerned, is definitely ended.

The public speedily answered for itself. For more than three years The News has had the largest Daily and Sunday circulation in America. No newspaper in the United States ever gained public support or approval so rapidly and in such volume.

And year after year, advertisers have been turning to The News in increasing number with increasing volume. The first six months of 1927 furnished specific and conclusive proof of the advertising acceptance of The News.

* * *

FOR many types of business 1927 has been an off year. Advertising in all types of media ran somewhat behind the 1926 record for the first six months. Newspaper advertising for the six months period ran 2% to 10% behind last year.

In the New York field, eleven papers sustained losses in the first six months of this year.

Only four papers showed gains.

One of the four is The News—

A gain of 610,487 agate lines. An increase far greater than the gains of the other three combined.

An off season brings out strength. The News gain shows The News strength; its growing appreciation among advertisers.

It costs money to use The News. The News has the highest newspaper line rate in the United States. Advertisers in 1927 as a whole are paying from ten to twenty cents a line more to The News than they paid last year. So increasing News appropriations on shrinking schedules are a very substantial form of recognition.

Department store volume and advertising lineage throughout the country, and in New York, is behind last year. But The News gained 156,494 lines in this classification. In a buyers' market, the New York department stores are looking to The News for new business, and getting it.

This is also an off year for the automobile industry and also for automobile advertising. The News gained 38,570 lines in this classification.

Other News gains are in foodstuffs, furniture, jewelry, musical instruments, public service, book publishers, railroads, real estate, resorts, tobacco, and women's specialty shops.

These gains prove the value of The News. Advertisers are coming more and more to realize that it is not just "one of the tabloids" but a new selling influence of superlative efficiency, of extraordinary economy. It reaches approximately 70% of all families in New York City. Its cost is lower. The high visibility of the small paper and the small page helps advertising do a better job. It is the one newspaper in New York today that really covers and really sells the whole market.

THE second six months of the year will show the profits. Before you settle on your Fall schedule for New York, give serious thought to The News.

THE NEWS
New York's Picture Newspaper
Tribune Tower, Chicago
25 Park Place, New York

FOUND ONLY IN

Scott

"Multi-Unit" or "Straight-Unit" Presses

1 —A rated speed of 400 r.p.m.—48,000 per hour—made possible by solid forged steel printing cylinders, special roller bearings, especially rigid bases and framing, and special gearing.

2 —Special baseplate construction with one-piece unit, folder and passage bases machined, by a patented method, into exact alignment.

3 —Two revolutions of driving shaft to each cylinder revolution, rigid bearings placed close together and ball thrust bearings behind bevel gears to reduce power consumption.

4 —Units take up least floor space yet provide maximum accessibility for plating, web leading, cleaning and adjustment of rollers.

5 —Vibration against form rollers and two large transfer rollers between ink drums to assure uniform ink feed at all speeds.

6 —The only automatic tension device that adjusts itself instantly as pull on web varies, thereby lowering web breaks and paper waste, and increasing production.

7 —An unequalled printed-web control which entirely eliminates swaying or "floating" of webs and maintains correct register.

8 —The only 3 to 2 ratio folder on the market which cuts the inside section of collected products shorter than the outside section and cuts no ribbons. Handles heaviest products perfectly at full speed.

9 —All passages at floor level, provided with corrugated cast iron flooring, and absolutely safe.

10 —A perfected lubricating system with plate specifying the right kind of oil to use for every bearing.

WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY

Main Office and Factory - - - - - - Plainfield, New Jersey, U. S. A.
New York Office - - - - - - - - - - - 1457 Broadway
Chicago Office - - - - - - - - - - - 1330 Monadnock Block

Cable Address: WALTSCOTT NEW YORK

Replies to Advertising

What price each?

Cost per inquiry is an absolute measure of the responsiveness of circulation. We say that the New York Herald Tribune readers respond to advertising. Here is proof that they do.

An advertising agency placed five advertisements for a client who manufactured an essential but costly item of building equipment in the New York Herald Tribune, and the same five advertisements in another leading New York morning newspaper.

The Herald Tribune produced 78 replies at a cost of $6.50 each. The other morning paper produced 73 replies at a cost of $12.50 each.

The New York Herald Tribune produced more replies, at a cost per reply not much more than half the cost per reply produced by the other paper.

Veteran advertisers in the world's greatest market have found that the New York Herald Tribune readers are remarkably responsive. And there's a reason—

The New York Herald Tribune is edited for, and is read by, people above the average in intelligence and income.

Advertisements in the New York Herald Tribune reach readers who are buyers.

NEW YORK

Herald Tribune

CHICAGO
Woodward & Kelly
360 N. Michigan Ave.

DETROIT
Woodward & Kelly
Fine Arts Building

SAN FRANCISCO
Thomas Emory
681 Market Street

BOSTON
Carroll Judson Swan
931 Park Square Bldg.

8 QUESTIONS and ONE ANSWER

From the last Audit Bureau of Circulations report of The Evening Bulletin, Philadelphia's Newspaper

15.	Were premiums offered free with subscriptions? (By "Premium" is meant anything (excepting periodicals) offered to subscriber either free or at a price for or with his own subscription either direct, through or by agent.)	No
16.	Were premiums offered at a price in addition to regular subscription price?	No
17.	(a) Were canvassers employed on salary? (b) On commission?	No
18.	Were subscriptions received through club raisers?	No
19.	Were clubbing offers made?	No
20.	Were subscriptions received through or from other publishers?	No
21.	(a) Were circulation contests employed?	No
	(b) Were carrier competitions employed?	No
22.	Other sources from which subscriptions were received.	None

The Evening Bulletin is sold on its merits as a newspaper; no prize, premium, coupon, guessing contests, insurance schemes, or other methods of artificially stimulating circulation have been used.

Dominate Philadelphia

Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

Average daily net paid circulation for the six months ending March 31, 1927

546,527 copies a day

The circulation of The Bulletin is the largest in Philadelphia and one of the largest in United States.

New York.....247 Park Avenue (Park-Lexington Building)
Chicago.....Verree & Conklin, Inc., 28 East Jackson Blvd.
Detroit.....C. L. Weaver, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 321 Lafayette Blvd.
San Francisco.....Thomas L. Emory, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 681 Market St.

(Copyright 1927, Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication, by The Editor & Publisher Co.
J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1700 Times Building, 42nd St., at Broadway,
New York. Telephones, Bryant 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056. Charter Member Audit Bureau
of Circulations. Member Associated Business Papers Inc.

60 NEW YORK, AUGUST 13, 1927 No. 12

urvey of "All-Day" Newspaper Rate Cards Reveals Varying Sales Practices

136 "Combinations," 119 Sell As Unit in National Field, and 68 in Local Field—274 Newspapers Listed—Principal Arguments on Both Sides of Question

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

'ORTANT eyes of the advertising orld are focused these days on a ce of newspaper publishing vari- known as the "combination" or the ay" paper.

ese are the newspapers, usually ing and evening in the same city the same ownership, space in which ld as one unit, one rate covering es for insertion in both. While in t every instance such groupings, tially local economic developments, led to prosperity of the publishers eneral welfare of the advertisers and rs by reason of economical produc- complete coverage obtained, and oved product, they have also occa- l no small amount of opposing lip- e from a section of the advertising nity, which has been ever ready to resolutions branding the plan as und business practice."

a new voice in the chorus of ism aimed at the system by the As- ion of National Advertisers, the re- resolution of the advertising man- members of the National Automobile ber opposing the "enforced com- ion" has agitated the discussion of practice, which, at least 40 years has stubbornly resisted attacks and ily flourished.

pioneer in the all-day paper field, e plan is called by its friends, is Kansas City Star, which recently at the record price of $11,000,000, dex to its prosperity and the com- able service it must have given to and national advertisers. Some 40 ago also the York (Pa.) Daily and ork Dispatch were sold in "enforced ination." Eventually the Daily was out to the morning paper publisher ow the two papers under different rships cover this market.

t elsewhere, and those who have a thorough study of the system this to be true, the all-day paper, mbination, has, where it has arisen, ued as a blessing to communities o publishers, who, by purchase and lidation, have saved themselves the ant worry, expense and general luggery concomitant with competi- n a crowded field.

e number of all-day papers has never so large as it is today. According e best available figures there are to- -different pairs of all-day papers, dvertising columns of which may urchased in some cases separately n others only as a unit, as local con- ts or the policy of the publishers dic- Of the total, 18 are sold sep- ly in the national field and 119 are as a unit. To local advertisers 68, shers said they sold their two papers unit and 58 sold them separately.

is survey, according to advocates of ll-day paper system, doesn't begin cture the differentiation in practice policy of this particular publishing gement denounced in general terms nsound."

ere flourishes, for instance, the combination in which the morning paper circulation is largely held to the surrounding rural territory reached by automobile delivery, while the evening paper's reader-concentration is in the city. In another case, competition from a threatened invader of the field was forestalled and the entrenched paper strengthened and complete coverage of the field at one rate insured by the start of a morning edition sold in combination with the afternoon. Still another example appeared where an unjust circulation comparison was being created by a competing paper with a pre-date edition. Adjustment of this situation was only possible through the combination plan. Four papers losing money have in several cities combined into two on the advice of local merchants and have gone into the black. Then, no consideration of the question could, of course, be complete without mention of the unique Davenport (Ia.) combine, where two evening papers, under different ownerships, but of opposite political camps, are being successfully sold together locally and nationally.

Despite this conglomerate aspect of the combination newspaper problem, the question is treated in the most general terms by resolution-framers of hostile organizations.

HOW COMBINATION NEWSPAPERS SELL LOCAL AND NATIONAL SPACE

WIDE diversity of practice prevails among the so-called "combination" newspapers in the sale of their advertising space, according to the following tabulation. It covers all of the generally listed "combinations of two or more papers in the same city selling all or a part of their space at a joint rate. There are 274 papers listed—135 morning and 139 evening, and they are formed into 136 groups. Generally, a morning and an evening paper are paired, but in two cases, evening papers compose the combination, and in one instance, two mornings and two evenings are assembled on one rate card.

Of the combinations, 119 of the 136 are sold as a unit in the national field and 68 as a unit in the local field. Details of the tabulation follow:

Name of Newspapers	Issued	SOLD AS UNIT In National Field	SOLD AS UNIT In Local Field	SOLD SEPARATELY In National Field	SOLD SEPARATELY In Local Field
ALABAMA
Birmingham Age-Herald & News	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Mobile Register & News-Item	(me)	Yes*	No	Yes	Yes
ARKANSAS
El Dorado News & Times	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Fort Smith S. W. American & Times-Record	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
CALIFORNIA
Modesto News-Herald	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
San Bernardino Sun & Telegram	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
San Diego Union & Tribune	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
San Luis Obispo Tribune & Telegram	(me)	Yes	....	No	....
COLORADO
Colorado Springs Gazette & Telegraph	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Denver Rocky Mt. News & Evening News	(me)	Yes*	No	Yes	Yes
Denver Post	(me)	Yes*	No	Yes	Yes
Greeley Tribune-Republican	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
CONNECTICUT
Bridgeport Post & Telegram	(em)	Yes	Yes	No	No
Waterbury Republican & American	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
DELAWARE
Wilmington News & Journal	(me)	Yes	....	Yes	Yes
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Washington Herald & Times	(me)	Yes*	No	Yes	Yes
FLORIDA
Lakeland Ledger & Star-Telegram	(me)	Yes	....	....	....
Pensacola Journal & News	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Tallahassee Democrat & State	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No

(Continued on page 44)

As one enthusiast for the all-day paper bluntly expressed himself to EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week, "if these gentlemen instead of passing vague resolutions denouncing 'enforced combinations' devoted the same thought to analyzing thoroughly the different combinations offered them, they would want to invest in all-day newspaper space with big money, rather than threaten foolishly to stay out."

It seems that those publishers and space salesmen who have essayed the combination have all become enthusiasts. They express no fear of resolutions or boycott threats, believing that they are playing their part in an inevitable trend of publishing, and feeling that advertisers who at the moment happen to resent the policy will eventually come to realize its saneness and will respect the inherent right of a business man to run his business as he sees fit, provided he serves his customers well and obeys the law.

These enthusiasts experience no difficulty in massing arguments for selling all-day papers to advertisers.

"The hardest part is selling the publisher on the idea," declared a New York representative who is an ardent advocate of the plan. "Given an opportunity and we can make the proposition appeal to the advertiser. Sometimes the publishers are blinded by fear to the advantages to be derived from cleaning up destructive competition in his field."

Briefly tabulated, the five main arguments in favor of the all-day paper are:

1. Economy of operation, including reduced selling cost.
2. Improved product resulting, increasing reader-interest.
3. Relief of over-papered communities.
4. Controlled circulation.
5. Lower rates to advertisers through combination.

First and foremost as an argument favoring the all-day paper is the economic aspect of the plan. Obviously it is cheaper to publish two papers from one plant than from two. A smaller staff is required; the mechanical investment is lower. One man well versed in the the question, viewed this angle as follows:

"To me the combination paper in most instances looks like a question of business efficiency. I hate to see it, but the bald fact of the matter is that the newspaper business is losing its individuality and personality and gaining dollars and cents. Newspapers today are viewed more often as business propositions than as personal playthings. The big corporation idea has gained a foothold in newspaperdom. Just as the big manufacturing corporations are making money, so are the newspaper combines. They can do it because of the possible economical methods of operation employed.

"Certainly no advertiser cares to do business with a moribund paper losing money. Where does he gain any insurance of the future by placing his copy in a paper that may any day be forced to the wall? It was to correct such situa-

(Continued on page 44)

FIRST FALSE RADIO ADVERTISING CASE BEFORE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

Complaint Issued Against Omaha Tannery for Misrepresentation of Profits and Product by Ether and Mail Channels

THE Omaha Tanning Company and W. C. Kalash, of Omaha, Neb., have been charged with broadcasting false statements in radio advertising representing the products of the company, in a complaint just made public by the Federal Trade Commission. It was stated orally that this is the first trade practice case involving the use of the radio which has come before the Commission.

The complaint alleges that representations made by the respondents that the company had eliminated "needless profits" by selling its manufactured products direct to the consumer are false.

The company, it is said, advertises its products through radio talks made by its president, W. C. Kalash, broadcast from stations located at Omaha, and other points throughout Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas.

The full text of the complaint follows:

The respondent sells its merchandise principally to the ultimate user thereof. It solicits orders for said merchandise by means of catalogs and by form letters, which catalogs and form letters are sent by mail to prospective customers residing in all the States of the United States, but principally residing in the States of the Mississippi Valley.

Respondent also advertises its business by having broadcast through radio stations located at Omaha, and other points, talks made by its president, W. C. Kalash. These radio talks are broadcast throughout Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and other States.

The form letters referred to are signed by the president under the fictitious name of "Harness Bill Kalash," as president of the respondent corporation. The catalogs referred to contain pictorial representations of various harnesses, saddles and collars, together with instructions for ordering, and also many statements and representations in regard to the business of the respondent corporation and its merchandise, which statements and representations purport to be made by the respondent Kalash as president of said respondent corporation.

The respondents in said form letters and catalogs have made and make many false and misleading statements and representations relative to the character of respondent corporation's business and the sources and character of the merchandise sold by it. Among such false statements and representations are the following:

(a) "Owning my own tannery, making harness leather in my own plant, manufacturing harness and selling direct to you, I am able to make you a better harness for less money than you can possibly get in any other way."

(b) "This is the only tannery in the United States that actually tans harness leather from which it makes harness and sells direct to the farmer."

(c) "Oma-Tan leather is the best I know how to make from selected hides tanned by the old-fashioned oak-bark methods, and because I select my own hides, tan harness leather, make harness from that leather and sell direct to you, I save you five needless profits, as explained on page 10."

(d) "Needless Profit No. 1. The country buyer purchases the hides you have for sale. Then he sells them to some hide house at a profit. We save you that profit."

In the radio talks referred to above, the President of said corporation, respondent Kalash falsely states and represents as follows:

"Now folks, I want you to understand that I am positively not selling anyone else's harness made from anyone else's leather, but I am only offering you harness which is made in my own tannery, from leather which I have tanned myself, and have watched the process of the tanning every step of the way from the green hide to the finished leather here in my own tannery. Send in your order early, because I may not be able to make harness fast enough to supply you. Last year I had to return a great many orders with your money, because I could not tan leather fast enough from which to make the harness to supply the demand, and because I absolutely refused to ship a single set of harness to anyone that I did not make myself from my own leather here in my own tannery."

The statements and representations set forth are false and misleading. The respondent corporation purchases from manufacturers and others the greater portion of the merchandise which it sells, and of the merchandise which it manufactures, only a very small proportion is made from leather tanned in respondent's tannery. The respondent does not manufacture any horse collars or saddles. Respondent does not make the "rigid" or "merciless" test, or any test, except that of observation of the leather used in the manufacture of the harness sold by it; and respondent does not save to the customer, by its methods of doing business, the five profits, or any of them, claimed by it in its representations and statements contained in subdivision (c) and (d).

Each of the false and misleading representations made by respondents has the capacity and tendency to cause, and has caused, very many of the purchasing public to purchase merchandise from the respondent in and on account of their belief in the truth of such representation.

There are, among the competitors of the respondents, many who in nowise misrepresent their merchandise or the character of the respective businesses in any of the particulars included in the misrepresentations mentioned.

For more than two years last past the respondents have engaged in the acts and practices, under the circumstances and conditions, and with the results, all as in this complaint before set forth.

The above alleged acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER CALENDAR

Aug. 18-20—Maine Press Assn., annual convention, at Lakewood, Me.
Aug. 19-20—North Louisiana Press Association, Opelousas, La.
Aug. 20-25—National Association of State Press Field Managers, annual meeting, Detroit.
Aug. 22-24—Georgia Press Assn., annual convention, Eatonton, Ga.
Aug. 24—International Press, conference, League of Nations, Geneva.
Aug. 25—Florida Circulation Mgrs. Assn., first meeting, Orlando, Fla.
Sept. 5-17—Educational Graphic Arts Exposition, Grand Central Palace, New York.
Sept. 8-10—Montana Press Assn., annual meeting, Great Falls, Mont.
Sept. 9-10—Northwest Texas Press Assn., annual convention, Wichita Falls, Tex.

POLICE GUARD EVANSTON PLANT

A number of policemen were detailed by the Evanston (Ill.) force to guard the office of the Evanston (Ill.) News-Index as a precaution against possible attempts at violence following the discharge of 42 union employes last week. Allen D. Albert, publisher of the paper, said that he had received a number of threats from the men, whom he discharged, he declared, because they failed to reduce expenses. He hired non-union men to replace them.

EXTRA SUNDAY IN JULY MAKES LINAGE GAIN

LINAGE in New York and Brooklyn daily newspapers during July, 1927, exceeded that of July, 1926, by 80,824 agate lines. The 1927 total was augmented by an extra Sunday, having 5 against 4 last year. Gains were shown by nine of the 15 newspapers listed as follows:

Pages 1927	Pages 1926		Percentage of Total Space	1927	1926	Gain	Loss
1,212	1,186	American	8.5	933,646	853,246	80,400	.....
1,502	1,388	Herald Tribune	10.9	1,194,300	1,141,582	52,718	.....
1,988	1,726	Times	17.7	1,949,314	1,839,506	109,808	.....
1,184	1,228	World	10.7	1,179,900	1,200,534	.....	20,634
742	816	*Mirror (tab.)	1.5	152,178	228,500	.....	76,322
1,356	1,196	News (tab.)	5.2	568,244	469,534	98,710	.....
932	1,036	*Eve. Graphic (tab.)	1.9	211,420	239,066	.....	27,646
886	828	*Eve. Journal	6.7	733,600	801,094	.....	67,494
766	740	*Eve. Post	2.9	321,686	307,850	13,836	.....
618	656	*Eve. World	4.9	533,180	527,260	5,920	.....
818	842	*Sun	7.5	826,570	925,662	.....	99,092
584	548	*Telegram	3.8	421,550	401,336	20,214	.....
1,044	982	Brooklyn Eagle	10.9	1,197,846	1,157,092	40,754	.....
696	610	Brooklyn Times	3.5	388,086	450,456	.....	62,370
466	452	Standard Union	3.4	378,152	366,130	12,022	.....
14,794	14,234	Totals		10,989,672	10,908,848	80,824	.....
						Net Gain

*No Sunday edition.

	1927	1926	1925	1924	1923	1922	1921
American	933,646	853,246	887,186	961,338	1,058,268	821,004	776,996
Herald	.....	.....	.....	.....	759,996	826,554	834,722
Herald Trib.	1,194,300	1,141,582	1,002,686	774,238	630,440	636,486	666,268
Times	1,949,314	1,839,506	1,756,832	1,528,688	1,746,628	1,667,264	1,499,584
World	1,179,900	1,200,534	1,170,454	1,103,604	1,394,608	1,342,544	1,087,524
Mirror (tab.)	152,178	228,500	262,148	249,292	.....	.....	.....
News (tab.)	568,244	469,534	406,110	348,642	287,292	222,840	173,546
Graphic (tab.)	211,420	239,066	148,668	.....	.....	.....	.....
Eve. Journal	733,600	801,094	837,390	862,284	704,190	622,994	659,764
Eve. Mail	.....	.....	.....	‡.....	374,824	334,276	368,618
Eve. Post	321,686	307,850	281,358	255,382	236,594	246,014	388,370
Eve. World	533,180	527,260	537,752	437,056	483,776	438,664	500,418
Globe	.....	.....	.....	.....	†.....	417,700	443,160
Sun	826,570	925,662	858,650	744,158	665,332	557,662	466,860
Telegram	421,550	401,336	440,736	566,270	507,068	477,200	450,738
Brooklyn Eagle	1,197,846	1,157,092	1,120,024	1,119,056	1,150,116	1,119,746	1,018,548
Brooklyn Times	388,086	450,456	348,890	329,100	276,364	241,696	265,276
Standard Union	378,152	366,130	407,830	483,298	475,522	514,620	481,494
Totals	10,989,672	10,908,848	10,466,714	9,762,406	10,751,018	10,487,264	10,081,886

†Sun and Globe combined June 4, 1923; name changed to Sun March 10, 1924.
‡Telegram and Mail combined January 28, 1924; name changed to Telegram May 18, 1925.

EARLY EDITION ISSU BY PITTSBURGH PRE

"Metropolitan" Appears on Stree 9 A. M., Selling at 2 Cents—Po Gazette, Selling for 3 Cents, Won't Cut Price

The Pittsburgh Press on Aug. sued a morning edition appearing o streets shortly before 9 a. m. The is two cents per copy. The Press lishers announced that the mornin "Metropolitan" edition was in respon a popular demand. The price of the other morning paper, the recently m Post-Gazette, is three cents. No ch is contemplated in the price, despite lower rate at which the Press is sold.

Changes in personnel of the Pos zette are being made slowly and no de announcement can be made now, wit exception that W. U. Christman is tained as managing editor with F W. Merchant, former managing e of the Sun as assistant, and Ray Sp is retained as city editor.

GEORGE FRENCH APPOINTE

Will Handle American Part in Ger Press Exhibition

The American Committee of the ternational Press Exhibition, to be in Cologne, May to Oct., 1928, he luncheon conference Monday at the vertising Club of New York under chairmanship of John Clyde Oswal which George French was appoi Managing Director. Miss Lisa Ge was duly elected secretary. Victor der, New York Journal of Comm was elected treasurer.

Arthur Weiner, of the Atlantic & Art Corporation, New York, will as personal representative of Dr. E Esch, president of the International Exhibition, and Herr Weber of Lei

Mr. French was authorized to fo late plans for the representation of A ican publishing, advertising and gra arts interests at the Exhibition.

McGREGOR GETS CANADA MED

D. A. McGregor of the Vanco Province, won the gold medal offered the best editorial in Canadian daily n papers dealing with Confederation, purposes and achievements. Compet for second place was so close it was cided to give two silver medals. T were awarded to Charles Gautier Droit, Ottawa, and C. O. Smith, Cal Herald. The bronze medal, offered third place, was not awarded, the a tional silver medal for second place b substituted. The competition was under the auspices of the national c mittee for the celebration of the dian jubilee of Confederation. Judging of torials was left in the hands of the C dian Daily Newspapers Association.

BOWLES' SUCCESSOR NOT NAM

No successor has yet been name Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles president and treasurer of the Spring (Mass.) Union. Mr. Bowles died week in Barnstable, Mass., of a heart tack. He was a grandson of Sa Bowles, founder of the Springfield publican and his father was for sev years business manager of the Republi Following the acquisition of the Spr field Union by himself and other m bers of the Bowles family in 1926, miral Bowles became president and tr urer of the organization. He maintai a firm policy of non-interference editorial independence, whether or the editorial views expressed in the p lications agreed with his. He resigne 1926 as a director of the Republican a serving on its board since 1915.

NOW BAY CITY TIMES

The name of the Bay City (Mic Times-Tribune was changed Aug. 4 Bay City Daily Times, six days a w and Bay City Sunday Times for the S day issue.

BROUN, NOTED COLUMNIST, GOES ON STRIKE

lk-Out of New York World's Star Follows Suppression of Sacco and Vanzetti Column—Will Stay Out, Writer Says—Colleagues on Paper Expect Him to Come Back

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

'WOOD BROUN, who writes "It Seems to Me" for the New York and other papers through the l Syndicate, and is one of the most columnists in the country, went on this week. He refused to continue g his daily column because the l suppressed two articles he had n expressing his opinions on the -Vanzetti case.

liam P. Beazell, assistant managing of the World, who, in the absence erbert Bayard Swope, executive edi- suppressed the two columns issued llowing statement:

n Monday and Tuesday of this week rticles written by Mr. Broun were out by us in the exercise of our ial prerogative. As a sequence to we received a telegram from Mr. n on Tuesday evening reading: have decided to go on a permanent .'

'e have had no further communica- from him."

. Broun, interviewed by this writer is 85th street home, declared he t what he said when he used the "permanent." At the World it confidently predicted that the nist would return to his column n a week. Mr. Broun is under con- to the World and has two more to serve. The contract entitles the paper to the writer's exclusive ry work, and it is understood that r. Broun attempts to write for other cations before the contract expires ction suits will be brought similar hose successfully prosecuted when iam Raldolph Hearst took Tom ers, the cartoonist, away from the ld and gave him work at higher pay he New York American.

r. Broun, preparing for legal con- ncies, has placed the matter in the s of his attorney, Morris L. Ernst. he suppressed columns were described Mr. Broun as "mild" compared with columns he wrote on the Sacco- zetti case on Friday and Saturday of week. The Friday column, de- ed by Broun's followers as a classic ewspaper writing, is reproduced in in this issue of EDITOR & PUBLISHER. rought forth considerable favorable ment from readers.

nce Monday of this week, Mr. Beazell received personally more than 100 hone inquiries asking why Broun's Seems To Me" was missing from the r.

r. Broun had retained no copies of two columns which the World de- d to use, and he reconstructed the sday column, which he said was the t important, for EDITOR & PUBLISHER. he unpublished Monday column set n Mr. Broun's opinion that members he board which supported Gov. Fuller's sion in the Boston case, President ell of Harvard, President Stratton he Massachusetts Institute of Tech- gy and Judge Robert Grant were in r in throwing out the Madeiros con- ion on the ground that "a young fel- out on a murder" appeared confused his recollection of the locale of the th Braintree murder.

s Mr. Broun recalled it, the second pressed column began:

'm so prejudiced myself on the co-Vanzetti case that it is impossible me to give my unbiased opinions re- ling it. Yet I don't actually believe n biased. I think I am fair. If I am ing to admit this about myself, cer- ly it must also work the other way."

rom this premise, Mr. Broun de- ped the theme that it was impossible Presidents Lowell and Stratton and ge Grant to be unprejudiced. Klans- n, for instance, the columnist pointed never think they are prejudiced. nted that the three members of Gov. ler's board had disciplined minds and had doubtless, expressed honest and intelligent opinions, they could not be opinions without prejudice. The columnist also commented on the "Hairline" drawn by the Governor's committee in admitting that Judge Thayer was "guilty of indiscretions" in the course of the trial but in stating that these indiscretions outside the courtroom had no bearing on the Judge's decision. Mr. Broun declared that in his opinion this distinction was psychologically impossible.

Heywood Broun

Mr. Broun said he had talked a great deal with Robert Benchley, the writer, who in affidavits has told of some of the remarks made about the case by Judge Webster Thayer outside the courtroom. Mr. Broun had concluded, after hearing Benchley, that from the evidenct state of mind of the jurist it was likewise impossible for him to fail to be prejudiced.

A friend had referred Mr. Broun to a book Judge Grant had written in 1912, In the suppressed columns, Mr. Broun had quoted from this book. Judge Grant had written down some strong convictions on capital punishment, asserting that to his mind too many criminals were acquitted. He had also related an Italian episode in which he had been the victim. While in Rome at one time, it seems, his pockets had been picked.

Obviously, as Mr. Broun pointed out, the inference to be drawn from these quotations, was that Judge Grant might not be of an entirely unbiased mind, consciously or subconsciously, toward convicted murders, radicals, and Italians in general.

Mr. Broun had had a previous fight with the World over the play jury system which the newspaper advocated at the time of an uproar over allegedly smutty plays on Broadway. Mr. Broun is opposed to all censorship and said so in his column. An inner-sanctum storm followed the waves of which were only quieted by the oil of an agreement providing that thereafter Mr. Broun would not differ "violently" with the editorial page opposite which his column is printed daily, he said.

At the time, an attempt was made to get Mr. Broun to agree to leave any subject alone, which the World supported, and which he could not support. He said this week that he never agreed to this and has shown in his column he was in disagreement with World policies on several occasions since. He has not been in "violent disagreement," however, he contended.

"Certainly my columns were not in violent disagreement with the editorial policy the World held toward the Sacco and Vanzetti case several months ago," Mr. Broun said. "There has been, however, a change in the World's policy in the last few days."

By one of the editors this change was described as toward a "milder attitude." The editorial council was responsible. The editorial council is made up of Ralph Pulitzer, editor, Walter Lippman, editor of the editorial page, F. D. White, general manager, and either Herbert Bayard Swope, executive editor, or W. P. Beazell, assistant managing editor. An editorial was prepared on Gov. Fuller's decision, and this council moved to have it "toned down."

"I want you to emphasize," he said, "that I am enough of a newspaper man to know that a newspaper must have a continuing editorial policy. I realize that I can't thumb my nose at the World's pet projects. It would be too much to expect a paper to harbor an outlaw who would utterly repudiate whatever it said.

"Nor should I be allowed to libel anyone. Or if the World were boosting Al Smith for president, I agree that I should not every day in my column attack Smith as a poor candidate.

"But I contend that in a column headed 'It Seems to Me,' and signed by 'Heywood Broun' this is Heywood Broun speaking and not the World. We have discussed this frequently, and I still cannot agree with Ralph Pulitzer that a newspaper should be an 'organic unit.' In making it plain that the column is what Heywood Broun says, I certainly am not putting the force of the paper behind my opinions. I am speaking as an individual.

"Granted there should be limitations to a column of opinion, I believe that the limitations should be eexrcised only in the most flagrant cases. I would concede it was a flagrant case if I continued to hammer away daily against the views expressed on the editorial page. But the World is a liberal paper, I am not generally on the opposite side."

Mr. Broun told of "frequent notes" he received from Mr. Swope the executive editor, terming such and such a phrase as "unfortunate."

"I disbelieve wholeheartedly in the theory that a newspaper gets readers only by pleasing them," Mr. Broun continued. "In my opinion the only fatal thing is to bore a reader."

One of these notes with Mr. Swope's comment of "unfortunate," concerned the Methodist colony of Ocean Grove, N. J. Mr. Broun said in his column that he didn't like Methodists.

Mr. Swope objected immediately, and cautioned his columnist not to indict a whole sect, saying it was very bad for the World, very bad, and that it would alienate a lot of readers.

To Mr. Broun this argument slushed like applesauce. The Methodists, he insisted, were fanatically dry and the World was fanatically wet. Moreover the Methodists knew this. Their press agent in Washington rather frequently sends out broadsides attacking the wet World. Certainly the mere knowledge that Heywood Broun didn't like Methodists could do no more harm than already was done in alienating Methodist affections. This was Mr. Broun's argument, when he discussed this note with Mr. Swope. There was then no strike.

On Sunday of this week he expected he would keep on as a columnist for many a moon. He was spending the week-end in the country and sent in his copy by friend and messenger. It arrived late, but Mr. Broun has been late before. On Monday there was no column by Heywood Broun in the World.

WORLD ADVISES READERS OF ITS STAND

ON Friday this week the World published the following statemet on Mr. Broun's strike:

The World has always believed in allowing the fullest possible expression of individual opinion to those of its special writers who write under their own name. Straining its interpretation of this privilege, the World allowed Mr. Heywood Broun to write two articles on the Sacco-Vanzetti case in which he expressed his personal opinion with the utmost extravagance.

The World then instructed him, now that he had made his own position clear, to select other subjects for his next articles. Mr. Broun, however, continued to write on the Sacco-Vanzetti case. The World, thereupon, exercising its right of final decision as to what it will publish in its columns, has omitted all articles submitted by Mr. Broun.

Ralph Pulitzer,
Editor, The World.

He telephoned Mr. Beazell.

"What's the matter, Bill?," he asked. "I was afraid I was a little late."

Mr. Beazell allowed the confessed tardiness was correct. They had other copy in the office to fill the column and had decided not to "re-make," when Mr. Broun's arrived. And Mr. Beazell added:

"We think it would be well if you turned to some other theme than Sacco and Vanzetti. There's bound to be an awful lot of that in the paper anyhow, and another discussion by you would help."

Broun said he would try.

He reflected on this injunction. Was there too much about this fishmonger and peddler in the papers? Was he boring his readers? He thought not. When he sat down to write his column, his mind was so full of the case he felt so strongly about it that he could write nothing else, he explained. Mr. Broun for some time has been working at home. He has rarely been seen in the Pulitzer building lately. He went down to Park Row on Monday, however, and took his column with him. He talked to Beazell.

"I'm so het up on this subject," he told his editor, "that I just had to write about it again."

Then the World exercised its editorial prerogative. Mr. Beazell explained he had used his own judgment when he first suggested it "would be well" for Mr. Broun to take up another subject. At a subsequent meeting of the council, members of that body agreed Mr. Beazell had taken the correct stand and stood behind the order that eventually muzzled the noted columnist.

Mr. Broun did not reach his decision to send his telegraphed strike notice hastily. It was the advice of Ruth Hale, his wife, to keep submitting a piece every day on the Sacco-Vanzetti case, whether they used it or not. By so doing, Miss Hale reasoned, her husband was fulfilling his contractual agreements.

But Mr. Broun saw an end to this celebrated cause coming.

"I do not want to go on working for a paper on which the limitations are so finely drawn," was his final decision.

"If the World restrains me from writing," he laughingly said, "I may go on the stage, or I may paint."

Mr. Broun's column of Aug. 5, one of

(Continued on page 26)

NEWS MAN WILL FLY IN GERMAN PLANE

Hubert R. Knickerbocker, Berlin Correspondent, Universal Service, Passenger on Junkers Ship—Other Newspapers Help

Newspaper men and newspapers these days are filling their quota ably as aids to the latest mode of transportation and the most modern of industries, aviation. Near the head of the list of individuals must be placed the name of Hubert R. Knickerbocker, Berlin correspondent of the Universal Service, who has willingly accepted the assignment which gives him the opportunity of being the first newspaperman to participate in an attempt to fly across the Atlantic.

H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

Two Junkers planes, each carrying a passenger, will take off soon from Dessau, Germany, for a non-stop flight to New York. Knickerbocker will be one of the passengers on the Europa, which recently broke the world's flight endurance record. The story he writes will be distributed by King Features Syndicate.

Other projected newspaper enterprises for the benefit of aviation and circulation include: "Old Glory" Hearst plane to be piloted by Lloyd Bertaud and James D. Hill; and the Courtney flight in the "Whale" sponsored by the North American Newspaper Alliance; Jack Frost's participation in the Dole race from the Pacific Coast, as pilot for the San Francisco Examiner; and the offer announced this week by the Philadelphia Bulletin of $25,000 prize to the flyer who first flies from Europe to Philadelphia.

INSPECT STATES' AIRPORTS

Toledo Blade Men Tell New Navigation in Word and Picture

One of the most unusual newspaper goodwill tours in recent years was that conducted by Walter W. Schramm, news editor, and Norman C. Hauger, head of the photographic staff of the Toledo (O.) Blade. The tour, which was by airplane, covered Michigan and Ohio, and the newspaper party stopped at most of the important airports in the states.

The pilot of the Blade flight was George O. Wells, owner and manager of the Standard Aircraft Company, Toledo. During publication of the series of stories written by Mr. Schramm about their trip, which were accompanied by many illustrations by Mr. Hauger, the Toledo city council appropriated $15,000 for construction of a municipal airport and signed a three-year lease on a tract of 210 acres, to be used as a temporary landing field, which, officials say, is to be one of the best in Ohio.

IOWA CITY IN NEWSPAPERS

Two-Year $20,000 Advertising Campaign Starts in 24 State Papers

IOWA CITY, Ia., July 30.—A two-year newspaper campaign, inspired by the Iowa Daily Press Association publicity endeavor, has been launched by Iowa City business interests to advertise the state university town as "Iowa's ideal home city." A fund of $20,000 will be required for the campaign, which will be confined to state papers and a few middle western papers. The first series of advertisements, which will run over a period of nine weeks, appeared this week in 24 state papers. The next broadside will be launched in the spring.

ROTO ADVERTISERS SPENT $40,000,000 IN FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1927

Fifty-seven of 67 Sections Printed Show Gains Over Same Period of 1926—Total Linage Ran 30 Per Cent Ahead of Old Record

MORE than $40,000,000 was spent by advertisers during the first six months of this year for space in rotogravure sections of the nation's newspapers, according to figures furnished EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week by the Gravure Service Corporation, New York. This constitutes a new high record for this branch of the advertising business, it was explained.

There are 67 newspapers in the country publishing Saturday or Sunday rotogravure sections, and only 10 out of the total showed losses in the period from Jan. 1 to July 1, the announcement of the corporation stated.

The total linage of 1926 for the first six months was 7,902,479, while this year these figures shot up to 10,274,275, a gain of 2,371,796 lines. This gain was divided into 729,074 lines of local advertising and 1,486,395 lines of national.

Coincident with this Gravure Service Corporation announcement, it was learned that General Motors Corporation was about to start a $500,000 campaign in 44 rotogravure sections, promoting Fisher bodies. This campaign was reported to be only a forerunner of further use that G. M. C. intended to make of the newspaper's picture medium.

So far during the year, other advertisers who have begun buying space in rotogravure sections include: the Prudential Life Insurance Company; Cliquot Club Ginger Ale; Hickok Belt; Fatima Cigarets, Lucky Strikes; Califc Prune Growers' Association; Amer Stove Company; National Carbon C pany, for Pyrofex; Bradley Kni Mills; Middishade Suits; Fifth Av Corset Company; and Hamilton B Carpet Sweeper.

Other big exclusive roto advert are the Cohen, Goldman Comp makers of Knitex clothing, and C makers of beauty preparations. Coty nearly every rotogravure section in country consistently, and is a he buyer of space at Christmas time. the last three years the makers of Kn clothing have used rotogravure sect exclusively, through the Federal Ad tising Agency, New York, and is gai what are described to be remarkable sults.

During the last year, the Gravure S ice Corporation reports, eight newspa have added rotogravure sections.

DETAILS OF GRAVURE LINAGE, JAN. 1—JUNE, 1927-1926

Newspapers	1927 Linage Local	National	Total	1926 Linage Local	National	Total
Birmingham News	27,605	99,311	126,916	2,103	83,071	85,174
Fresno Bee	14,203	29,826	44,029	(First Issue May 1926)
Long Beach Press-Telegram	93,831	13,657	107,488	111,800	2,051	113,851
Los Angeles Times	130,536	183,050	313,586	81,900	172,788	254,688
San Francisco Chronicle	98,497	165,494	263,991	128,660	154,826	283,486
Denver Rocky Mt. News	60,810	78,450	139,260	10,870	45,430	56,300
Hartford Courant	53,206	43,194	96,400	56,065	36,266	92,331
Waterbury Republican	38,968	13,831	52,799	30,011	14,742	44,753
Washington Post	82,341	57,566	139,907	59,607	40,798	100,405
Washington Star	91,222	134,429	225,651	94,932	105,692	200,624
Miami News	68,256	27,181	95,437	(First Issue Jan. 1926)
Atlanta Constitution	54,208	54,712	108,920	36,190	36,302	72,492
Atlanta Journal	47,497	117,103	164,600	46,246	103,453	149,699
Chicago Daily News	89,856	57,358	147,214	128,439	37,413	165,852
Chicago Tribune	34,701	393,385	428,068	No local	304,741	304,741
Peoria Journal-Transcript	89,222	35,266	124,488	34,426	17,472	51,898
Ft. Wayne News-Sentinel	31,843	24,738	56,581	No record
Indianapolis Star	45,785	147,717	193,502	8,313	100,249	108,562
South Bend News Times	2,254	21,826	24,080	16,702	14,938	31,640
Des Moines Register	48,064	133,820	181,884	62,526	82,696	145,222
Wichita Eagle	32,256	26,635	58,891	48,524	27,936	76,560
Louisville Courier-Journal	59,111	111,880	170,991	89,251	82,409	171,660
Louisville Herald-Post	77,647	22,724	100,371	(First Issue May 2, 1926)
New Orleans Times-Picayune	14,020	112,522	126,562	29,782	91,079	120,861
Baltimore Sun	123,188	134,852	258,040	110,104	96,229	206,333
Boston Herald	138,447	197,675	336,122	159,706	224,173	383,879
New Bedford Standard	32,851	20,727	53,578	53,112	15,134	68,246
Springfield Republican	54,366	37,297	91,663	69,275	36,606	105,881
Detroit Free Press	15,792	104,076	119,868	38,234	100,454	138,688
Detroit News	19,642	172,746	192,388	24,556	196,004	220,560
Minneapolis Tribune	67,201	144,550	211,751	63,188	99,739	162,927
Minneapolis Journal	30,918	61,485	92,403	20,460	43,193	63,653
St. Paul News	124,054	39,046	163,100	125,118	26,894	152,012
St. Paul Pioneer Press	40,138	111,524	151,662	37,870	75,726	113,596
Kansas City Journal Post	56,900	48,659	105,559	43,463	78,015	121,478
Kansas City Star	59,622	131,842	191,464	(First Issue Sept. 1, 1926)
St. Louis Globe Democrat	12,021	107,679	119,700	20,751	104,245	124,996
St. Louis Post Dispatch	24,668	206,808	231,476	20,272	137,760	158,032
Omaha Bee	2,857	70,000	72,857	15,008	50,813	65,821
Newark Call	130,862	105,304	236,166	154,421	87,560	241,981
Albany Knickerbocker Press	11,492	43,669	55,161	13,623	43,362	56,985
Buffalo Courier-Express	71,738	118,863	190,601	27,072	68,042	95,114
Buffalo Times	70,452	39,083	109,535			72,989
New York Evening Post	140,033	13,115	153,148	46,109	13,793	59,902
New York Times	179,659	246,600	702,760*	198,583	295,059	493,642
New York Herald Tribune	120,572	150,274	270,846	113,188	152,968	266,156
New York World	17,527	101,339	118,866	26,402	106,316	132,718
New York Daily News	10,514	142,313	152,827	(First Issue Oct. 10, 1926)
Rochester Democrat & Chronicle	65,801	70,047	135,848	83,384	62,698	146,082
Syracuse Herald	68,676	48,162	116,838	68,873	22,918	91,791
Syracuse Post-Standard	17,990	33,587	51,577	3,591	26,759	30,350
Cincinnati Enquirer	43,778	140,630	184,408	53,354	91,266	144,620
Cleveland News Leader	8,694	47,530	56,225	12,628	37,310	49,938
Cleveland Plain Dealer	40,152	196,194	236,346	34,038	170,911	204,949
Youngstown Vindicator	23,793	15,897	39,690	(First Issue Nov. 27, 1926)
Toledo Times	94,599	25,910	120,509	(First Issue Nov. 7, 1926)
Philadelphia Inquirer	11,442	132,447	143,889	14,275	55,492	69,767
Philadelphia Public Ledger	29,534	159,147	188,681	61,957	173,518	235,475
Providence Journal	83,207	90,828	174,035	83,499	86,932	170,431
Memphis Commercial Appeal	69,839	110,705	180,544	28,021	68,488	96,509
Nashville Banner	49,875	53,626	102,501	2,243	29,343	31,586
Houston Chronicle	41,860	80,584	122,444	51,030	71,638	122,668
Houston Post-Dispatch	53,410	36,652	90,062	(First Issue Sept. 1926)
Richmond Times-Dispatch	48,916	59,122	108,038	64,827	39,648	104,475
Seattle Times	9,184	157,304	166,488	12,628	112,028	124,656
Milwaukee Journal	42,186	141,747	183,933	44,205	93,589	137,794

*New York Times total includes lineage in suburban tabloids.

"IT" IN U. S. ADS SEL FRANCE

Continentals Captivated by "Inta ible Quality" Says Paul Loui Hervier, of Paris Evening Intransigeant

Is it the "it" in American advert ments that fascinates Continental E peans, even though they have no kn edge of English?

Paul Louis Hervier, secretary-gen of the Paris' Evening Intransige thinks so. He said as much the ot day when the Crowell Publishing C pany acted as his interpreter. He sai

"Perhaps this is the 'it' of which Am cans talk so much, and which, I un stand, means an intangible quality compels—well, attention at least.

"However, whether partly aimed Europeans or not, the effect of these vertisements has been an interesting st to me and I have found numerous stances where actual changes in natio customs can be traced directly to th This may not always have meant di sales of American wares but it meant least the demand for goods similar those advertised and thus a new dra ing upon American markets for r terials."

From this beginning (with the lead written) the "Newspaper Service B reau" of the Crowell Publishing Co pany, which gets out magazines, c tinued for two neatly and solidly ty written pages.

Mr. Hervier spoke politely ab American magazines in general and T American Magazine and Woman's Ho Companion in particular.

And at the top, the Newspaper Serv Bureau, pleasant name for press age had explained to the Editor:

"The following summary of Mr. H vier's report on the influence of Americ advertising in Europe is submitted to y as a contribution of general intere showing the influence and scope American advertising. It seems likely be useful in emphasizing to readers t importance and dignity of the advertisi columns."

NOW SALT LAKE TIMES

The East Salt Lake Times, Salt La City, Utah, has dropped the word "Eas and will hereafter be known as the S Lake Times. The paper has moved larger quarters in the Sugar House se tion of the city and is spending sever thousand dollars on new mechanic equipment and on enlarging its news d partment.

TRIES OUT NEW ROLLER

The Cleveland Plain Dealer is exper menting with a rubber roller manufa tured by the Goodrich Rubber Compan of Akron, O. The composition of th roller is said to be much harder than commonly used. The makers claim th it will wear longer, withstand very h weather, will hold its shape and elim nate much roller washing. The roller tried on two presses which run off th woman's and dramatic section.

GENEVA PRESS PARLEY ATTRACTS 60 DELEGATES

ooper Says A. P. Has No Government Connections and Seeks No Favors—Japanese Will Ask Reduction of Cable Rates to Europe and America

IXTY delegates from 36 different countries of the world are converging Geneva for the second International ess Conference, scheduled to be held ler the auspices of the League of tions, beginning Aug. 24.

From New York this week sailed Kent oper, general manager of the Asso- ted Press; R. P. Scripps, president of Scripps Howard Newspapers, and omas L. Sidlo of counsel of that or- nization; and Seiichi Uyeno, managing ector of the Osaka Asahi and the kyo Asahi, with K. Kitano, the New rk correspondent of those Japanese wspapers. Sailing last week were Karl Bickel, president of the United Press, d George Parker, editor-in-chief of the ripps-Howard Newspapers.

M. Koenigsberg, president of Interna- nal News Service and Universal Serv- , sails for Europe, Saturday, to at- d the Conference.

David M. Church, foreign news di- ctor of International News Service, led for Europe Wednesday aboard the rengaria.

After the close of the Geneva confer- ce, Mr. Church will visit the Euro- an bureaus of International News rvice. He will also call on the new ents added by International News rvice within the last few months in ague, Vienna, Budapest, Barcelona d Madrid.

Before sailing Mr. Cooper issued a atement to the effect that there was n ntest between the Associated Press and e United Press involved in the confer- ce. The United Press has been sending t stories signed by Ed L. Keen, its uropean manager, declaring that the nited Press was fighting for an "open or" news policy opposed by official overnment agencies with which the As- ciated Press was allied. Keen's stories ere based on a resolution placed before e first conference last year by Roy W. oward, chairman of the board of the cripps-Howard Newspapers.

Mr. Cooper's statement follows:

"I was not at the Geneva conference f the news agencies last year, but I was ld that at that conference there was a eclaration, to which no objection was ced, that absolute equality of treat- ent should be observed in the distribu- on of official government news to all gencies. If this is the case I cannot nderstand the inspiration of any ex- ressions of doubt as to the probability of ny adverse action this year upon last ear's declaration.

"So far as the Associated Press is con- erned, of course it has no government onnections and never has had, and it ever has asked and does not ask any referential treatment from any govern- ent."

Reduction of cable rates will be sought y the Japanese delegation, Mr. Uyeno old EDITOR & PUBLISHER. Mr. Uyeno as appointed delegate to represent all apanese newspapers, while other fellow ountry-men who will attend the con- erence are M. G. Date, director of the apanese Associated Press; and S. Uyeda, f the Nippon Dempo Tsu Shin Sha hich is closely allied with the United ress.

"If cable and wireless rates are re- uced there will be increased interchange f news and consequent broader under- tanding between countries," Mr. Uyeno eclared.

"It requires between four and five ours to get messages between New ork and Tokio and about three hours rom London, and we pay the highest ate in the world. To send urgent mes- ages from New York to Tokio costs s as high as $2.75 a word.

"We are also interested in the ques- ion we understand is before the con- erence of granting newspaper men in- ernational or diplomatic privileges."

Other suggestions will aim at safe- guarding the integrity of the press and the profession. Only journalists with the most unqualified credentials will be en- titled to the exceptional advantages sought from governments. Publicity-men, "moochers" and others who come to Europe with a "letter of introduction from the publisher of the Monthly Star" of Blankville, seeking "reserved seats" in press galleries already overcrowded with working journalists will receive short shrift.

The provisional agenda as drafted by the preparatory committees during the past year is as follows:

1. Press Rates:
   - (a) Telegraph.
   - (b) Telephone.
   - (c) Wireless telegraph.
   - (d) Wireless telephone.
2. Coding of Press Messages.
3. Improvement of Communications.
4. Transport of newspapers.
5. Postal subscriptions to newspapers.
6. Protection of News.
7. Professional facilities for Journalists.
   - (a) Travel tours.
   - (b) Schools for Journalists.
   - (c) Scholarships for Journalists.
   - (d) Double taxation of Journalists living abroad.
   - (e) Reductions of steamship and railway fares.
   - (f) Passport visas for Journalists.
   - (g) Identity cards for Journalists.
   - (h) Repressive measures against Foreign Journalists (expulsion.)
   - (i) Equality of treatment for Foreign Journalists.
   - (j) Facility for enquiry afforded Journalists.
8. Censorship in Peace-time.
9. Information on the latest technical improvements of interest to the Press.

(Wireless telephony, television, etc.)

The calling of the Conference signals a great success for the League, in that the original proposal of M. Yanez, Chilean delegate to the 1925 Assembly, was confronted with many difficulties.

M. Yanez proposed: That the League Council consider the desirability of summoning a committee of Press Experts, representing the Press in different countries in order: (1) to enquire into the means of ensuring more rapid and less costly transmission of Press news with a view to reducing the risks of international misunderstanding. (2) to discuss all technical problems the solution of which in the opinion of experts would be conducive to the tranquilization of public opinion in various countries.

It was due to the initiative and energy of M. Hymans, formerly foreign minister of Belgium, and member of the League Council that the plan materialized. When M. Hymans was succeeded by M. Vandervelde, present foreign minister of Belgium, the latter pressed the venture with equal sagacity and enthusiasm.

"The Chilean proposal is undoubtedly a bold one," declared M. Hymans in discussing it at the time. "The press, like all great powers, is rightly jealous of its independence. We must therefore approach the vast and delicate problem raised by this resolution with great circumspection. I wish to make it clear at the outset that the League does not wish to interfere in the affairs of the press and that it will only interest itself in them if the journalists themselves consider that its assistance is of value."

That was the spirit in which the League approached the undertaking. And in that spirit journalists, publishers and press association officials from a score of countries aided in the preparations. Among the Americans participating in the preliminary work were Roy W. Howard, of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers; Ed L. Keen, European manager and Henry Wood, Geneva eorrespondent of the United Press; Elmer Roberts, European manager and Joseph Sharkey, Geneva correspondent of the Associated Press; the Anglo-American Journalists Association, of which Wilbur Forrest, of the New York Herald Tribune, was president at the time. Lord Burnham and other prominent British publishers have taken an active interest also.

In adopting the Hyman's Report and authorizing the calling of the Conference, the last Assembly also clearly defined the part the League was to play. It noted:

"In certain cases the League of Nations can undoubtedly do a great deal to assist co-operation between the Governments and the press. Although an aggregate of private enterprises, the press is frequently obliged to have recourse to various government services. For example, it depends in a large measure on the governments for the transmission of news by telegraph, telephone, cable and radio-telegraph; it also depends in every country upon the national legislation in all questions connected with authors' rights, transport rates, etc. In directions like these the friendly assistance of the League of Nations might often be of great value."

An indication of how complete has been the preparation can be gained from the fact that representatives of sixteen of the largest press agencies attended the first session. This was followed by a meeting in Geneva of representatives of sixteen European press bureaus, from as many countries, while lastly the various Journalists Associations gathered here to formulate the claims of the newspaper profession.

For the program of the conference all that was necessary was to draw up an agenda based upon the results of the preparatory work.

Among the requests that will be made, if the conference follows the lead of the Preparatory Committee, are:

Priority of press telegrams over ordinary messages; reduction of rates by all governments for press communications by telegraph, telephone and wireless or cable.

Establishment of international conversations with a reduction of fifty per cent in current rates, with priority for press communications over ordinary private conversations; reduction of fifty per cent on urgent rates, with priority for urgent press communications over urgent private communications.

In regard to coding the Conference will recommend:

"That the accredited representatives of the press be allowed to use an appropriate code, in whole or in part, at ordinary press rates, for the sending of press news by wireless on the understanding that the code be communicated in advance to the telegraph companies . . . . . that unauthorized persons be prevented from utilizing wireless for press news."

The proposals for the "protection of news" have not yet been definitely formulated, but the League Secretariat is said to be preparing a memorandum on this subject.

The journalists, especially those engaging in international assignments, have asked several advantages, chiefly of a nature to facilitate their work. They urge exemption from double taxation, freedom of transit from one country to another without the vexatious delays of passport and visa and customs formalities; an internationally recognized document of identity which will be accepted by postal and telegraph administrations of the International Postal Union; and the least possible censorship restrictions hampering their work in times of peace.

That the Conference will confine itself to the agenda is not probable. Many interesting suggestions have been made by various publishers, journalists, and press organizations, and "regional" agreements, between bordering countries or groups of countries, will undoubtedly be formulated at Geneva, with the object in view of fostering international relations.

The Roumanian delegation has suggested a scheme whereby scholarships be extended by various countries to journalists of other countries in order that they may become personally acquainted with conditions. It is not improbable, that in the future every telegraph and cable editor on every large international newspaper, will have as a preliminary course of training, a personal acquaintance with the countries wherein news which he edits, originates.

CENTRE OF BRITISH AD CONVENTION

Sellers and buyers of advertising to the number of more than 300 were represented at the recent British advertising exhibition which was a part of the annual Advertising Association convention.

BREAKING THE STORY OF GEN. WOOD'S REFUSAL OF PRESIDENCY IN 1920

Getting Blind Tip from Senator Four Years Later, Newspaper Man Got Detailed Confirmation from Son—Story Received Wide Play

By EDGAR MELS

IN the millions of words written as obituary notices for Leonard Wood, there is not a line referring to his greatest act—to the finest thing done by an American politician—the renunciation of the Presidency of the United States!

Yes, Leonard Wood refused to become President. For this doctor-soldier, whom Pershing would not permit to lead a unit in France—this dubiously successful governor-general of the Philippines, declined the nomination for President at the Chicago convention of 1920.

The writer of this is a Democrat and dislikes Republicans cordially, but he believes that as a man, Wood stands out in striking contrast to his fellows—Republican and Democratic. For Wood could have had the Presidential nomination—equivalent to election—if he had made a verbal agreement to turn the Teapot Dome oil leases over to Jake Hamon and his colleagues.

Of course, the gentle, or otherwise, reader, will ask how the writer knows all this and what proof he has. Such a query is fair and shall be answered in detail and in chronological order. Incidentally, it makes an interesting story—a story behind the story. The first intimation I had that Wood had decided to be right rather than President, came to me early in February, 1924. A Democratic Senator, with vitriolic tongue and an amazing faculty for getting at the bottom of things, phoned me to come to his office in the Senate Office Building in Washington. He wasted no time.

"Mels," he exclaimed the moment I entered his office, "Leonard Wood refused the Republican nomination at Chicago in exchange for the Teapot Dome oil leases. The offer was made by Jake Hamon. Now get out of here."

"But, Senator—," I exclaimed, but the Senator waved me out and then began the three hardest weeks' work I have ever done. Of course, I notified my New York office and next day received word that Wood was away from Manila and would not return for a week. Hamon was dead. His wife, Clara Hamon, had remarried and was somewhere in Southern California. So I got a list of delegates to the 1920 convention, and of alternates, as well as politicians and leaders. I read and reread this immense list until I got pop-eyed. Whichever way I turned there was a wall of something akin to reticence. With childlike blandness, I was told to forget the story—"it could never be proven."

I trailed a clue to New York. It proved to be nothing. Disgusted, I returned to Washington, arriving there at just ten at night. I took a taxi to my modest hotel. We drove along Pennsylvania avenue and had just reached Tenth street when my sleepy eyes beheld, blazoned forth in electric lights atop a theatre:

LEONARD WOOD, JR. PRESENTS:

I have no idea what young Wood presented. "Over there!" I howled at the driver, and he, sensing something unusual, whirled his machine around, just escaping crashes with a street car, two automobiles and a Ford.

"Wait till I come out," I shouted, "if I stay all night." I dashed into the theatre lobby. I sent my name in to young Mr. Wood. Evidently business was not good, because he appeared delighted to see a newspaper man. I introduced myself. I made a speech which Demosthenes and Bryan would have envied. I pleaded with young Mr. Wood to place his father back on the political map as the greatest of Americans, who would rather be right than President. I dangled publicity for his theatrical venture before his eyes. I pleaded. I cajoled. I was ready to knock his block off. There was hope, despair, murder and mayhem in my heart.

Leonard Wood, Jr., proved a gentleman and a scholar. He admited the truth of the story. He told me that Hamon had approached his father when Lowden and Gen. Wood were deadlocked; when Harding was looming in the offing; when Daugherty's fine hand was weaving its spell. Yes, Hamon had made the proposition.

"And what did your father say?" I queried, trying hard to still my thumping heart, for I was face to face with the biggest story of the year.

"All I know," said young Wood, "is what he told me and my mother. He came back from the conference purple with rage. According to his story, he replied to Hamon:

"'I am an American citizen. I am an American soldier. I'll be damned if I betray my country. Get the —— out of here!'

"And, according to my father, Hamon wasted no time."

I had the story; but I needed the written o. k. of young Wood to make it stand up, for men have a habit of denying words when they see them in print. So I explained to him that I had taken no notes—I had become so interested in the story that I forgot all about it. As a matter of fact, taking notes is fatal in an interview—it makes the person interviewed interview-conscious. I asked to write the story on the Wood typewriter. Permission was given. I wrote. I wrote deliberate misstatements. Then I handed five typewritten sheets to Wood, asking him to correct the manuscript and to o. k, each page. He grew suspicious.

"Why each page? Why not the top or the bottom?"

I explained that some one—myself perhaps—might so alter the pages as to ruin him. He began to read. He expostulated.

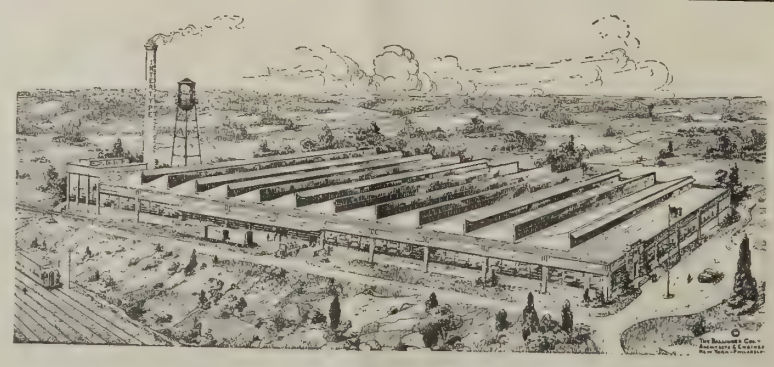
"It's full of mistakes," he said, and he began to erase and interline—and I had the story cinched, for his own handwriting attested to its authenticity. Finally each page was signed with his initials. I rushed out in indecent haste. I dived into the waiting taxi. I took the midnight train back to New York. The home office yelled with joy when they saw the story. They had found Clara Hamon, who confirmed her husband's share in the transaction. A few days later came a cable from Manila, stating that General Wood refused to comment on the story "at this time."

And on March 6, 1924, the sixty daily papers of the North American Newspaper Alliance carried the story—to have it copied by every paper in the United States the next day. What did I get out of it? A mere $700 for a one-column story!

QUEEN FAINTS IN ARMS OF A. P. CORRESPONDENT

"THE Queen has fainted in Mills' arms again!"

M. N. Stiles, foreign editor of the Associated Press, made this ejaculation this week when he read the cable dispatch from Bucharest containing the interview obtained by James Mills with Queen Marie of Rumania.



"It is a standard joke in the A. P. office," explained Stiles, "that when the Queen feels emotional she calls for James."

Mills, recently assigned to the Vienna bureau of the Associated Press, re-opened after several years during which this capital was covered by local correspondents, has had several important interviews with Queen Marie. Durthe war he obtained a leave of absence and entered Red Cross work in the Balkans. It was then that he became acquainted with Her Royal Highness, and she has favored him since with a number of exclusive stories.

CHANGES IN DENTON, TEX.

As successor to Will C. Edwards, who recently became publisher of the Washington (D. C.) Herald, R. J. Edwards, formerly of Fort Worth, has been named general manager of the Denton (Tex.) Record-Chronicle and president of the corporation which publishes the Denton paper. R. J. is a brother of Will C. Edwards.

INTERTYPE TO BUILD ITS OWN HOME

New Intertype factory, Harrison, N. Y.

THE Intertype Corporation has completed its plans for the building of a large new factory at Harrison, N. Y., a suburb of New York City. The corporation owns 43 acres of land near the railroad station. On this plot will be erected a modern building covering about four and a half acres.

As shown architect's drawing shown above, the building will be a one-story brick structure and its attractiveness will be enhanced by appropriate landscaping. Provision has been made for recreation grounds, with baseball field, tennis courts, handball walls, etc.

The building will include an assembly auditorium with more than 1,000 seats. It will also contain facilities for moving pictures, dancing, basket ball and volley ball, a modern cafeteria, library, shower and locker rooms, and a hospital.

Neal Dow Becker, president of the Corporation, when interviewed on the subject, said:

"Since the organization of the Intertype Corporation in 1916, with its principles of standardization in manufacture and its policies of consideration in dealing, its sales have steadily increased.

"The executive offices now located at 1440 Broadway, New York, and the two factories in Brooklyn will be combined in one building in Harrison.

It is planned to begin building operations soon and the new factory will be in operation by Sept. 1, 1928.

CHINESE EDITOR SLAI IN VANCOUVER WAR

President and Employes Shot b Caller, Who Also Dies in Paper's Office—No Halt in Publication

A political feud which started in Va couver's Chinatown Aug. 7 claimed t lives of Louis Man Har, president an editor of the Morning News, city Ch nese daily newspaper and special com missioner of the Vancouver branch of th Chinese National League, Wong Par typesetter and writer for the News, an a Chinese believed to be Wong Sue Sang, of Kamloops, B. C.

The three died following a shootin affray in the offices of the News, issue in the Chinese National League head quarters. Police stated after investiga tion that they believed the affair was direct result of the recent split in th ranks of the Nationalist party. The au thorities said they were informed tha Louis Man Har was seated in his offic on the mezzanine floor when Wong Sue Sang entered and requested to see th editor.

Wong Park, one of the dead men, wa seated in the front office with a reporte and Mak Ya Shee, a sub-editor. Sue Sang was told to go upstairs, which h did.

Violent argument between the editor and his visitor was heard by the three men in the business office, but they paid little attention until they heard a shot ring out and looked up to see Suey Sang taking aim with a revolver above the railing of the mezzanine floor.

As Wong Park rose and turned to flee, a bullet from the assassin's gun struck him in the back. Entering the place, the officer found Wong Park dying on the first floor, a bullet having entered his back on the left side. On the balcony floor Louie Man Har was found on the floor with a bullet hole through from the left temple to the right side of the skull, a second bullet lodged farther down in the left side of the head, and a third in his left knee. On his desk was found an automatic 25-calibre pistol of Spanish manufacture, with one shell discharged.

In the northwest corner of the balcony office was the dead body of Wong Suey Sang, lying over an English 38-calibre revolver with five discharged and one undischarged cartridge in the cylinder.

Evidence that the newspaperman's code that "the paper must go to press" exists among the Chinese was given by the youthful Wong, the reporter, who fled for his life.

When the excitement of the shooting began to die down he approached Detective McNeil and pointing to the large pools of blood on the office floor, said:

"Is it all right for us to clean up? You know we must publish in the morning."

SUIT WITHDRAWN

W. R. Hearst, Jr., Drops Libel Action Against Los Angeles Record

The libel suit of William Randolph Hearst, Jr., against the Los Angeles Record Publishing Co., was withdrawn Aug. 6, in superior court, by mutual consent.

The suit arose over a news report published in the Record June 10, 1926, regarding an automobile accident. Young Hearst's name appeared in the news item because it was thought that the automobile involved had been previously rented by him from the Cadillac agency.

TO WED RUSSIAN PRINCESS

Lorimer Hammond, of the Chicago Tribune foreign staff, will marry Alexandra P. Lebedoff, the daughter of the late Prince Peter Kropotkin, Russian revolutionary, author and scientist. Hammond spent some time in Russia in journalistic work. Mme. Lebedoff was born in London, where her father was in exile, but subsequently returned to Russia as the wife of Boris F. Lebedoff, from whom she obtained a divorce in Moscow in 1920.

I. T. U. WANTS ARBITRATION PACT WITH A. N. P. A.

Convention Rules Local Union's Order of Reinstatement Must Be Complied With By Foreman Until Reversed By Executive Council or Convention—Howard Wing Rules Indianapolis Meeting

By RICHARD P. OVERMYER
(Indianapolis Correspondent of EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 11.—The International Typographical Union today took a definite step in the direction of International arbitration agreement through resolution adopted at the Union's Diamond Jubilee convention here.

CHARLES P. HOWARD

The resolution as reported favorably by the committee on resolutions and adopted almost unanimously as follows:

"Resolved, that further attempt be made to obtain an arbitration agreement between the union and the American Newspaper Publishers Association or any other responsible organization of employers, such an agreement to be according to the laws of the union in effect:

"1. Provision be made against unreasonable delay in determining issues.

"2. Provision be made against accumulation of excessive cost of arbitration proceedings.

"3. In so far as practicable, arbitration to be confined to hours and wage questions.

"4. That established working conditions not be submitted to arbitration.

"5. That the International Typographical Union laws relating to hours, wages and working conditions must not under any consideration be made subject to arbitration whether or not such laws are included in the original proposition of the local unions.

Charleston, S. C., was selected for the convention city of the International Typographical Union for 1928.

An unexpected turn was taken Thursday in the negotiations centering about the status of the Mailers Union, when a resolution which would have eliminated the mailers' president from his post on the I. T. U. executive council was reported unfavorably by the laws committee.

The convention on Wednesday adopted a new rule in regard to disputes regarding labor conditions in the mechanical departments of newspapers, which vitally affects publishers and workmen. The rule was adopted after a stiff battle and after a roll call vote was taken to put the delegates on record, at the demand of Delegate James J. Hoban of Cleveland, O.

The new rule provides that in case of discharge of an employe by a publisher, "when the subordinate union, following an appeal, reinstates a discharged member, the order of reinstatement must be complied with by the foreman until reversed by the Executive Council or a convention; provided, when a subordinate union has made specific provisions in its contract for reference of controversies over discharge of members to a joint agent, the dispute shall be decided as provided in the contract."

Adoption of the new rule regarding discharged employes followed a day of "give and take" battling between the two opposing forces in the union ranks. The progressive forces, headed by President Charles P. Howard, emerged victorious in each contest over the administration delegates, who still maintain a hold on union policies through control of the executive council.

President Howard, through the strength of his forces in the convention, was upheld in his actions prior to the convention by decisive votes. The most telling victory scored by the Progressives was when President Howard's action in discharging twelve representatives of the union some months ago, over the protest of the Executive Council, was sanctioned by adoption of a resolution to that effect.

The differences existing between the two factions in the organization were given an airing again during the afternoon session when Progressive forces put through adoption of a change in the laws regarding publication of the union official publication, which provides that the editor of the Typographical Journal must furnish space in the magazine where the President and other officers of the union may express their views without its being censored or edited by the editor of the publication. The Typographical Journal is edited by John W. Hays, secretary-treasurer of the Union and a member of the administration wing of the union, opposed to the policies of President Howard.

A number of minor changes in the laws of the union proposed by various delegates were rejected by the convention on recommendation of the laws committee. One of the important changes in the laws was one which changes the date of the annual convention from August to the second Monday of September. The new date will become effective for the 1928 convention. The delegates also adopted a resolution in support of the sesquicentennial celebration at Vincennes in 1929 celebrating the capture of Port Sackville from the British by George Rogers Clark.

The entire morning session was taken up with debate over the question of whether the convention would support President Howard in his discharge of the twelve union representatives. The debate brought members of the Executive Council, the president himself and various members of the convention to their feet in defense of their own actions or of their respective leaders.

The entire question resolved itself into one of the date when terms of office of appointees of one administration ended and the question of supervision over the business affairs and personnel of the printers' organization. Mr. Howard asserted it was his opinion that appointees terms ended with the term of office of the administration under which they were appointed, and held that the Executive Council has no authority over the personnel of the organization and must concern itself solely with the business affairs of the union. He asserted the executive council is empowered to remove representatives only for cause. Each of the speakers stressed the fact that he was not at odds with his opponents personally.

The opposing forces termed the action of the President as an effort to gain a "one-man" control of the organization, which supporters of the resolution declared it "better to have good rule by one man than poor rule by four."

The twelve representatives were discharged by Mr. Howard one week after he took office in Nov., 1926, and after Howard asserted the Executive council had held secret and illegal meetings which he felt would embarrass his administration. The meetings were explained by members of the Executive Council as having been held when Mr. Howard refused to call a meeting.

Mr. Hoban declared the question of power to discharge representatives should be answered in an amendment to the constitution and asked for a referendum on the question.

Secretary Hays said that the incident with Mr. Howard was the first instance when he was denied the privilege of voting and added that after serving 18 years in the union he felt that "he should not have his rights overridden." An effort to have the resolution sent back to the committee was ruled out of order and the aye-and-no vote was called, resulting in a victory for the supporters of President Howard. The vote was permitted to stand. Although a charge was made that persons on the sidelines and in the galleries had voted. President Howard warned spectators that they must not participate in the voting.

The victory of the resolution gave another instance of the control which the progressive forces wield in the convention. This control was maintained throughout the day in every question that came before the convention.

Another clash between the opposing forces was precipitated when a resolution was reported which directed the auditors of the union to have each subordinate union report the names of members who had not paid old-age and mortuary assessments, and the amounts they owe. This action followed an order of the executive Council eliminating members not actively engaged in the printers' trade from paying these assessments, following court action in New York.

The progressive forces of the union contended that the order affected only those inactive members of the union who were unable to obtain employment and not those who were "inactive-active" members. As a result of adoption of the resolution all members who retain active membership in the union but who are not engaged in the trade must pay old age and mortuary assessments.

A double warning to the officers and membership of the International Typographical Union to force political factionalism into the background marked the opening session of the organization.

One of the warnings extended the olive branch to members of the faction opposing James M. Lynch, former president of the union, who recently was defeated in his race for re-election, and urged delegates to avoid "petty political squabbles and recriminations." Mr. Lynch now is confined in a hospital at Syracuse, N. Y., and his message to the convention was read at the opening session.

The other warning came from Daniel J. Tobin, international president of the teamsters' and truck drivers' union, and a personal friend of Mr. Lynch, who advised the delegates to the typo gathering to "get rid of" anything that was holding back the union. Mr. Tobin's remarks brought a sharp retort from Charles P. Howard, international president of the typographical union.

Mr. Lynch was president of the union from 1900 to 1914 and had previously served as vice-president. He was defeated for re-election in 1926 when the union membership took issue with him on his policy regarding old age pensions of the union. The previous plan had been to dispense the pension to members 60 years old with a working card of 20 years, but Mr. Lynch's administration advanced the figures to 25 years of work and 65 years of age. The present convention was expected to take action on a referendum on the question.

The administration-progressive wrangle broke out again after the convention had been called to order after numerous protests on seating of delegates had been made. A large portion of the protests were made regarding members of the mailers' union, at whom the force of the progressive battle was directed in the convention.

All these protests were referred by the chair to the credentials committee, but members of the opposing faction, fearful that the committees might have a personnel that would prevent administration delegates from being seated, succeeded in having a resolution adopted requiring the credentials committee to report tomorrow morning.

James J. Hoban of Cleveland, O., who is looked upon as a leader of the administration forces on the convention floor, took the lead in the fight against unseating delegates. Once during the session, when he announced that a meeting of the administration forces would be held last, he received an ovation from administration followers. It was necessary for the Chair to pound the gavel repeatedly to stop the demonstration.

President Howard received an ovation from the delegates when he advanced to take the gavel presented him by Arch D. Hinch, president of Indianapolis local No. 1. The delegates stood and cheered for more than a minute.

Addresses of welcome were made during the morning by Mayor John L. Duvall, T. N. Taylor, president of the Indiana Federation of Labor; James C. Shanessy, general president of the Barbers' International Union; Mr. Tobin and Mr. Hinch. Each of the speakers referred to the place Indianapolis holds in the labor world, with the number of international headquarters located in this city.

A promise that the Indianapolis Mailers' Trade District Union No. 10 will oppose any move to be ousted as an affiliated unit of the International Typographical Union and will fight for its property rights and fair and equal treatment was sounded Saturday night by Charles N. Smith of Brooklyn, N. Y., president of the mailers' union, at a dinner held at the Elks Club. Mr. Smith, who also is a third vice-president of the International Typographical Union, declared that as leader of the mailers he will fight for their cause as long as they back him.

The dinner was attended by delegates to the mailers' convention, and several officers of the International Typographical Union and delegates to the typographical convention. Seth R. Brown of Los Angeles, Cal., first vice-president of the International Typographical Union and John W. Hays of Minneapolis, Minn., secretary and treasurer of the organization, spoke and offered their services in assisting the mailers to solve their problems.

Mr. Smith critized the "politics" played by Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union, in affairs of the union, especially when dealing with matters affecting mailers. A recent "walk-out" which Mr. Smith directed in Dallas, Tex., was handicapped by the delay of the national headquarters in sending regular weekly pay checks, he said. This was because of the policy pursued by Mr. Howard, Mr. Smith said.

"The mailers don't want to get out of the typographical union," Mr. Smith said. "We have been affiliated with it for 35 years and we love it. We feel that they still want us to associate with them. But when they turn on us, misrepresent us and bite us, it is our duty to fight for our property rights.

"It seems that there are certain politicians within the I. T. U. who would destroy this organization to gain their political aspirations. Eventually the printers and the mailers will place poliitics out of the organization, if necessary."

The other important matter to come before the mailers' convention was the proposal that postal rates of 1920 be restored on second class matter by Congress. At the business session Friday A. S. Nance of Atlanta, Ga., chairman of the postal committee, reviewed his appearance in Washington some time ago, at which time a plea for the restoration of the 1920 rates was made.

Mailers wish the present rates reduced to the 1920 scale in order that more second class matter will be sent through the mails which in turn insures steady employment for members of the union. Mr. Nance said the organization was supporting the request of the American Newspaper Publishers Association in the matter.

HUNTINGTON PAPERS CONSOLIDATED

Advertiser and Herald-Dispatch United Under New Company Including Both Old Owners—Evening Herald Quits

The Huntington (W. Va.) Herald-Dispatch and the Huntington Advertiser were consolidated under a single ownership effective with the Aug. 8 issue, following several weeks of negotiation beteen Dave Gideon, president of the Herald-Dispatch and the Evening Herald, and J. H. Long & Sons, owners of the Advertiser. The Evening Herald, started in March of this year, has been discontinued. The two papers, Herald-Dispatch, morning, and Advertiser, evening, will be sold in combination.

Luther T. Long

Beginning Sunday, Aug. 15, the Sunday Herald-Dispatch and the Sunday Advertiser will be combined into a single paper under the name of the Herald-Advertiser. Palmer, Dewitt & Palmer handled the transaction for the owners, with Herman Suter on the ground.

Under the plan adopted, both Huntington newspapers will retain without change their established identities. The Herald-Dispatch will support the principles of the Republican party, while the Advertiser will continue as a Democratic newspaper.

Both newspapers will be printed from the same plant, that of the Advertiser, which is believed to contain ample room for the combined mechanical plants and the full staff of workers from both papers.

Edward H. Long

A new corporation has been formed known as the Huntington Publishing Company. Officers are: J. H. Long, president; Dave Gideon, vice-president; Edward H. Long, treasurer. The foregoing together with Luther T. Long and Sol Birke constitute the board of directors.

Announcing the consolidation, the management stated in part:

"This community of interests was devised to meet the constantly mounting costs of newspaper publication, by eliminating duplication of effort and expense, and especially the waste in maintaining two large and costly newspaper printing plants in Huntington, either of which is capable of producing the local papers. The economies possible in plant operation and in other directions will solidify the position of these newspapers, provide means for their steady improvement, and likewise result in economies for their readers and advertisers. * * *

Walker Long

"This new publication arrangement is in direct line with a very definite trend in the newspaper field throughout the country. Within the past two years a number of cities have witnessed like mergers which have worked out to the decided advantage of owners, readers and advertisers. As illustrations we point to the merging under a single management of all the daily newspapers in the following cities: Springfield, Mass; Trenton, N. J.; Elmira, N. Y.; Des Moines, Ia.; Amarillo, Tex.; Laporte, Ind.; Middletown, N. Y.; and Fairmont, W. Va. In Pittsburgh four papers merged into two last week and two papers of Clarksburg adopted this plan during the month of July.

Early in the negotiations just concluded, it was agreed by the local publishers that there were too many newspapers in Huntington, with consequent hardship on owners, readers and advertisers. In evolving a plan for correcting the local situation it was decided to consolidate the local papers in a way that would work to the advantage of owners and the public alike. * * *

"The plan further provides for combining the business office, advertising and circulation staffs of the two old organizations into a single unit of a size and experience that will render still more efficient service. In carrying out this phase of the merger it is the intention to retain as many as possible of the employes formerly operating these newspapers. This work will be under the direction of Luther T. Long as general manager and Edward H. Long, treasurer."

Col. J. H. Long

Dave Gideon

SALISBURY TIMES SOLD

Employes Take Over Maryland Daily, Weekly and Job Plant

Sale of the News Publishing Co. of Salisbury, Md., publisher of the Salisbury Times, daily, and the Wicomico News, weekly, to Alfred T. Truitt and Charles J. Truitt, who have been manager and editor, respectively, has been announced. The purchase includes the building in which the plant is located, together with the equipment, including that of a job office. The consideration has not been made known.

The publications will be changed from independent Republican to Democratic. The Times was established Dec. 3, 1922, as an evening paper. Recently a morning edition was added, with Associated Press service on both editions. The Wicomico News was established 42 years ago and is one of the most influential weeklies on the Del-Mar-Va peninsula.

The new owners, the Messrs. Truitt, are cousins. Both are natives of Salisbury.

ALL IN THE DAY'S WORK?

While James H. Newton, reporter for the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram, was covering the story of a serious accident, he was informed that a critically injured victim would have to have an immediate blood transfusion to save his life. Newton volunteered at once, and shortly afterward, having finished the assignment, he was on an operating table beside the patient. The next day Newton was back to work as usual.

FOUR PROMISE REFORM TO TRADE COMMISSION

Advertising Practices Held Misleading Will Be Stopped—Pen Maker Will No Longer Try to Control Retail Prices

The Federal Trade Commission on July 31 announced four stipulation proceedings under which four companies promised to stop alleged false and misleading advertising practices, and a fifth in which a company agreed to stop trying to control the retail prices at which the goods it manufactured were sold.

Two of the four orders resulted from advertising malleable or cast iron as "Cast Steel," "High Grade Special Steel," and the like. Another firm advertised itself as a manufacturer of knitted goods when it was only a jobber, the Commission stated.

A watch-making company was directed to stop calling one of its cases "Gold-Filled" when it did not come up to the regulation trade requirement for such quality.

The order resulting from an attempt to stop price-cutting, was directed against a manufacturer of fountain pens and mechanical pencils, who, it was said, announced set retail prices and "made it known generally" that goods would not be sold to wholesale or retail dealers who failed to maintain these prices he had decided were right.

COMMON OWNERSHIP DENIED

Scranton Republican Refutes Report of Lynett Interest

As a result of repeated rumors that the Scranton (Pa.) Republican was owned by E. J. Lynett of the Scranton Times, the former newspaper recently published an editorial announcement denying that there was any ownership connections between the two journals. The editorial said the entire stock of the Republican was controlled by Col. L. A. Watres and that while he and Mr. Lynett are close friends, neither has any connection with the rival publications. The Republican is a morning and the Times an afternoon newspaper.

THEY WERE LUCKY!

All of the graduates of the department of journalism at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J., who were ready to begin work for newspapers after the commencement of the university in June have obtained positions, according to a report made by Prof. Allen Sinclair Will, director, to Rudolph E. Lent, Passaic News, chairman of the New Jersey Press Association committee which is co-operating with the department. These graduates have been engaged on the staffs of newspapers in New Jersey.

PAPERS JOIN TO FIGHT RAISE IN TAXES

Washington (N. C.) Daily and Two Weeklies Meet Aldermanic Move by Threat to Withhold Publicity

Three Washington (N. C.) newspapers the Daily News, the Progress and the Beaufort County Record, are at odds with Washington's city administration. The Progress and the Record are weeklies.

Late in the spring when the city fathers were busy drafting the list of special privilege taxes charged for doing business, they decided to increase taxes on the newspapers. As the chairman of the ordinance committee naively put it, "we didn't think the papers were paying enough."

So the board of aldermen voted to raise the tax on dailies from $25 to $50 and on weeklies from $10 to $25. At the next meeting of the board, W. D. W. Bishop, publisher of the Daily News, filed a written protest which was pigeonholed. At the meeting held Aug. 1, the papers were represented by their publishers, Bishop, Carl Goerch of the Progress and J. J. Johnson of the Record, who made their dissatisfaction known in no uncertain terms.

Threats of reprisal by combining to raise the rate on city advertising and refusing to publish any items requested by city officials as news were heard. The aldermen decided to reconsider and referred the tax back to the proper committee. The committee on Aug. 4 heard all the publishers and will report back to the board in September. It is reported the tax will go back to the old figures.

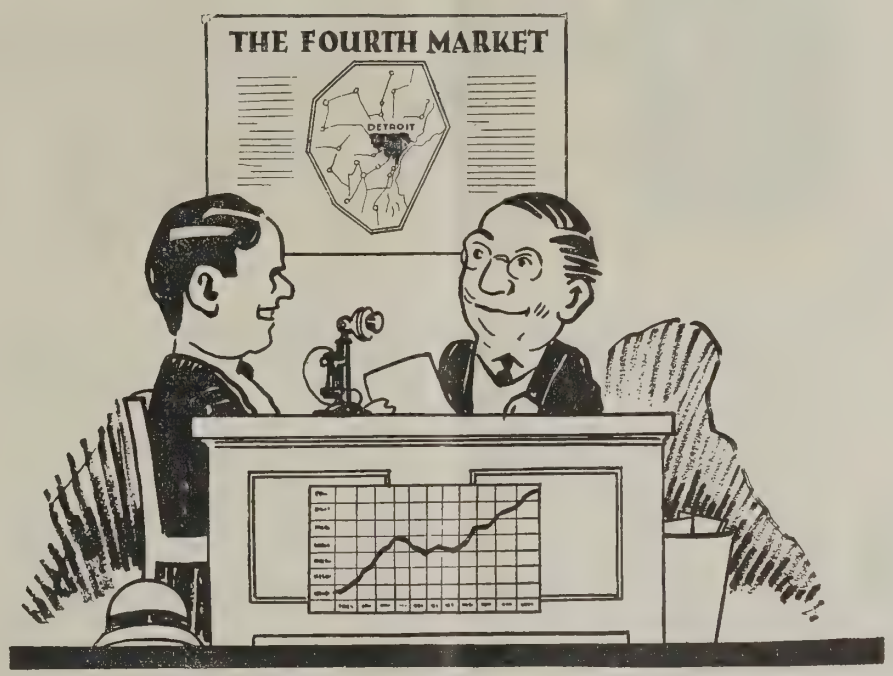
Publisher Bishop reported that Washington's tax as revised, was so far as known the highest on papers in North Carolina.

NEW COMMUNITY FUNDS

Florida Cities Include Publication Space in Their Publicity Budgets

Various advertising budgets are just now being completed in Florida. The St. Petersburg budget is perhaps the largest so far disposed of definitely. Out of a tax revenue for publicity and tourist entertainment of approximately $125,000, $45,000 is to be used for the purchase of advertising space in recognized mediums and $18,000 will be used for literature, a total of $63,000, or approximately half of the total tax revenue, which will be used for advertising, as that term is used by people in the advertising business.

The community tax for publicity and tourist entertainment in Orlando will yield a little more than $70,000, and of this amount $15,000 will be invested in advertising. The present Orlando plan embraces the use of approximately $10,000 toward the support of a local radio broadcasting station, among other things.



PRINTING ENGINEERS TO MEET

Engineering in the graphic arts is to be discussed at a national meeting luncheon at the Hotel Commodore, New York, on Sept. 14 during the Graphic Arts Exposition. The meeting is being held under the auspices of the printing machinery division of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. On the local committee of arrangements for the luncheon are Edward Pierce Hulse, Chairman; Edward E. Bartlett, William M. Kelly, W. E. Wines, James J. Phalen and John H. Williams.

WINS "U" SCHOLARSHIP

Glenn J. Degner of Owatonna, Minn., is the winner of the Rhodes Clay scholarship at the University of Missouri, Columbia, having been designated for the $400 award because of his scholastic leadership among approximately 1,350 members of the freshman class at the Missouri state educational institution. Mr. Degner, who is studying journalism at Missouri, returned to a position on the staff of the Owatonna Journal-Chronicle for the summer.

When in Detroit Do As Detroiters Do!

In 1926 The Detroit News Carried 2,324,000 More Lines of Local Merchants' Advertising Than in 1923. While the Second Evening Paper Carried 140,000 Lines Less in 1926 Than in 1923 . . . . . .

This increasing concentration of local merchants advertising in The Detroit News is the result of cash register tabulation.

There is no guess work about local merchants' advertising. Each day witnesses a complete checking up of the previous day's advertising and each year sees the appropriation figured scientifically on so much profit per dollar spent.

You can bank on local merchants' choice of a medium. They're on the ground. They not only know by the infallible index of the cash register how each newspaper produces, but they also know from personal experience which newspaper is read in their own home town.

The Detroit News for more than 54 years has been Detroit's home newspaper. It has the greatest circulation in Michigan and reaches the greatest number of homes. Fully 80% of its circulation is delivered by carrier.

Not only the housewife but the master of the house reads The News and among these are the small dealers, the proprietors of local stores, the jobbers and the executives through whom you expect to sell your merchanise to Mrs. Final Consumer.

When in Detroit do as Detroiters Do is a good axiom for any advertiser or manufacturer to follow, for The Detroit News has been a leader for years in every class of advertising dependent on home reading for results. It carries more local, more national and more classified advertising than any other Detroit newspaper because it has been found the most productive medium in its field.

The Detroit News

For 54 Years Detroit's HOME Newspaper

354,000 Sunday Circulation 321,000 Weekday Circulation

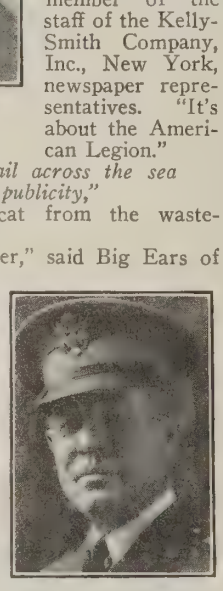
AD POST OF AMERICAN LEGION GROWS AS BACK-TO-PARIS MOVE BEGINS

Advantages Offered at Home, Not Lure to Travel, Is Tonic to Membership Lists, Leaders Claim—Employment Bureau Opens with Miller in Charge

IN the newspapers, headlines read: "Legion Vanguard Starts to Paris—Officials Leave to Establish Headquarters for Convention Beginning Middle of September."

And the telephone rang in the office of EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

"I've got a good story for you," said Frank Miller, important member of the staff of the Kelly-Smith Company, Inc., New York, newspaper representatives. "It's about the American Legion."



JAMES A. BREWER

"Steamships sail across the sea
Look out for publicity,"

Sang the office cat from the waste-basket.

"I'll be right over," said Big Ears of the staff. "If it's press agentry, I'll expose 'em," he hissed through his whiskers.

GEN. M. D. BRYANT

But when Mr. Miller began talking the hiss wandered back to the whiskers, and stayed there a voice howling in the jungle. Mr. Miller is spokesman for the New York Advertising Men's Post of the American Legion and also a vice-commander. Other officers are James A. Brewer, Seaman Paper Company, Commander; Gen. Mortimer D. Bryant, Bryant, Griffith & Brunson, New York special representative; Herbert Shaeffer, space buyer for the William H. Rankin Company, an advertising agency; and George A. Woodward of the Cuneo Press, Inc., vice-commanders.

HERBERT SCHAEFFER

When gentlemen and ex-soldiers like these set out to do good and help their "buddies" something is accomplished. That was what Mr. Miller wanted to talk about.

Said Mr. Miller to EDITOR & PUBLISHER:

"It is the advantages we have to offer and the good we do at home that is tonic to the membership lists of the American Legion, Advertising Men's Post. This week we organized a free Employment Bureau, for instance."

FRANK MILLER

Big Ears counted off on his hands and feet the newspaper men and advertising men he knew were looking for work. Finished with fingers and toes he started on his buttons. Completing the count his sigh of relief boomed out like the Leviathan whistle.

"I happen to be in charge of this free Bureau," continued Frank Miller. (The Kelly-Smith office is on the fifth floor of the Graybar building. In answering this advt., don't mention our name.)

GEORGE A. WOODWARD

Now Mr. Miller is a small man. His private office is moderately large. He is in danger of being swamped. (Bring life preservers when you come.)

"The other day," continued this courageous ex-soldier, "a trade paper publisher called me up. He wanted a man and was willing to pay $140 a week to start. Not bad, eh? Another call was for four young men just out of college. Pay $75 per week. Still another——"

"Hold!" sobbed Big Ears. "Save yourself and the Graybar building before it is too late."

Thus Mr. Miller's written announcement appeared in this reverse style:

"The Advertising Men's Post of the American Legion enjoys a membership of more than 350 young men engaged directly or indirectly in the business of advertising. The post has a department constituted to serve publishers, advertising agencies and national advertisers, in fact any organization desiring help. The post has available at all times advertising managers for publications or national advertisers, advertising solicitors, copy men, contact men, as well as circulation managers and assistants. This department is in charge of Frank Miller of Kelly-Smith Company, Inc."

There were other things Mr. Miller discussed. A weekly luncheon at the fraternity club, good feed for $1, a speaker thrown in, and acquaintances that count.

A projected liaison with the Advertising Men's Post of Boston for exchange of job and other information.

A. N. P. A. IS PHONE TARGET FOR QUESTION-FIENDS

"WAS 'Fatty' Arbuckle favorably received when he returned to the movies?" was one of the many questions this week asked L. B. Palmer, manager of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. It was a Long Island member asking over the telephone. Mr. Palmer suggested they call one of the movie critics on a New York paper.

Mr. Palmer doesn't claim to be an Ask Me Another King. But the A. N. P. A., he said, is certainly a target for funny questions.

"People call us up to ask the baseball scores; for inside dope on prize fights; for tips on the ponies; and for the telephone numbers of well known New York advertising agencies, to mention just a few of the queries we get," Mr. Palmer said.

A smoker held recently and attended by 1,400.

A sizeable sum raised for Mississippi relief.

Two thousand poppies sold on "Poppy Day."

Gift made to children of killed detective.

"It is our plan to help our buddies, no questions asked," Mr. Miller concluded.

"Supposing an advertising man comes to us. He has lost a job. He has a wife at home and two children. He'll get on his feet again. We know that. We know his type of man. He needs $200 to tide him over, does he? All right. Here's the money. No, don't sign any I. O. U. Pay it back when you can, old man. Good Luck to you."

Big Ears sailed out of Mr. Miller's office on a sob.

"Hey!" called out Mr. Miller.

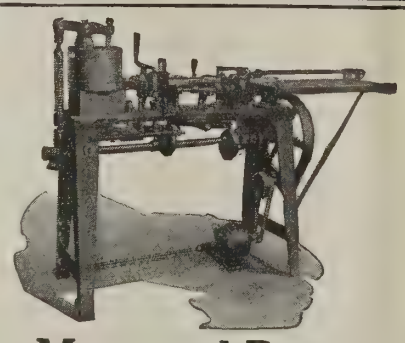
"I want to give this card to you. It belongs to Charles Baum."

The words grew fainter and fainter. "He works for . . . the Cunard. He will be host this week to a lunch on Thursday on board the steams Caledonia, one of the ships the boys . . . take . . . going back . . . to Fra . . . for the American Legion conv tion."

No. Baum didn't write this story.

HOOSIERS FORM NEW PRESS GROUP

Twenty-four Newspapers of Less Th 10,000 Circulation Organize as Indiana League of Home Dailies



Twenty-four Indiana newspapers rep sented by Scheerer, Inc., met at Indi apolis Aug. 4, and formed the Indi League of Home Dailies, on lines simi to those of the Michigan League Home Dailies, organized in 1920.

It is planned to hold at least 4 meeti each year for round table discussions shop and office problems applying papers of 10,000 circulation or less; better promotion and co-operation w national and local advertisers, also, p moting the fact that the small city m kets of Indiana cannot be covered cept by using the local daily newspap The organization will make market s veys proving these points.

Officers of the Indiana League Home Dailies for the coming year a Geo. L. Saunders, Bluffton Banner president; S. B. Boyd, Washing Democrat, vice-president; H. Edmu Scheerer, Chicago, secretary-treasurer.

CHANGES IN WEEKLY CHAIN

The Stuben County News, Inc., h purchased the Canisteo (N. Y.) Chronic and will continue publication of the pa as a part of the chain of publications the Steuben News. Publication of t Sanona Review has been discontinu and the Stueben News chain now inclu the Hammondsport Herald, Bath Pla dealer, Addison Advertiser and Canist Chronicle.

More and Better Leads—Slugs—Rules

IN any quantity and any length, the Elrod produces leads, slugs and rules that withstand dry mat pressure or other conditions. There are no welds nor air pockets—every strip is solid.

Its speed and its simple, automatic operation make the Elrod a most economical method of producing quality material. Put the Elrod to work in a small corner and watch it cut your costs for spacing material, plain rule borders, slugs, leads, etc.

Ludlow Typograph Company
2032 Clybourn Ave., Chicago
Boston—New York—Atlanta—San Francisco

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

Making Newspapers More Effective

The big cry in advertising circles today is how to make existing media more effective. Give your newspaper advertisers a more attractive medium. Give them typographic design that contains pulling power—that places buyers in a receptive mood. Do that and you gain their lasting confidence.

The Ludlow system of composition is considered by the majority of leading newspaper executives to be a strong factor in the creation of successful advertising.

It is a system that brings more revenue into the business office, promotes harmony and efficiency in the composing room, and increases the selling power of the display advertisement.

Let us tell you in detail how the Ludlow will meet your own requirements.

Ludlow typelines are slug-cast from hand-set matrices in sizes up to full-width 72 point caps and lowercase, and even 84 point caps. No mold or machine changes required.

Ludlow Typograph Company

2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago, Illinois

Boston: 470 Atlantic Avenue
New York: 63 Park Row
Atlanta: 41 Marietta Street
San Francisco: 5 Third Street

LUDLOW QUALITY SLUG COMPOSITION

More than 195,000 Daily

CHARACTER QUALITY AMERICA FIRST! ENTERPRISE ACCURACY

Los Angeles Examiner

AN AMERICAN PAPER FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE — THE GREAT NEWSPAPER OF THE GREAT SOUTHWEST

"Greatest Salesman in the West"

More than 425,000 Sunday

Daily — August 13, 1927 — 10¢ Sunday

INEAGE RECORDS SHOW WIDE EXAMINER APPEAL

ITY OF OVER 100,000 ADDED TO READERSHIP IN SINGLE YEAR!

NANCIAL GAINS FOR SIX MONTHS LEAD ALL

ILING up increases in Banks and Financial advertising at an unprecedented speed, overwhelming all npetition by constant proof of its verful effectiveness in making sales, e Los Angeles Examiner at the end of first six months of 1927, was hot on trail of a 100,000-line gain in this hly important classification.

ts actual progress was 97,811 lines, increase that exceeded the net gain banks and financial advertising of L the other newspapers in Los geles, by 58,005 lines! It is the only wspaper in this fifth greatest American rket that showed a growth in financial vertising in every one of the first six nths of this year!

"Class" Appeal Galore!

And this was not the only classification licative of how The Examiner reaches well-to-do, able-to-buy, quickly-reonsive audience of this territory. The ne figures reveal some other interesting tistics. For example, in the Electrical pliance field, Jewelry, Musical Instruents, Radio, Real Estate, Building aterials and Toilet Requisites advering—all appealing directly to those who ve the cash and spend it—The Exiner carried a greater volume of adrtising than any other Los Angeles per, from the merchants on the ground no know where their results are coming om.

We're proud of that record in "class" lvertising, but equally as proud of our monstrated capabilities to "sell it to weeney." We carry more net paid musement advertising in Los Angeles an any other newspaper; more local verage, men's clothing and tailoring, ntists, cafes and transportation lineage. In the morning field, alone, we hold nnants also, the June records show, in tal automobiles, motorcycles and accesries volume; cloaks and suits; sporting ods; and dancing schools.

Analyze these facts for woman-interest; men's interest; class or mass appeal: hey're all there! In a newspaper as interesting as The Examiner they cannot lp but be!

adio Stabilized, Says Editorial

THE owner of a radio receiver need not fear that the set purchased yesrday or last week or some months ago ill soon become obsolete," said an edirial in a recent issue of The Los ngeles Examiner. "The radio industry out of its swaddling clothes. . . The dustry has become as stabilized as that the automobile or any other, and there e not going to be any revolutionary anges."

All of which is helpful toward setting e public's mind at rest, and is a job of uth-carrying that The Examiner is glad do for the good of the whole industry.

54 Miles of Building in Los Angeles in Year

BUSINESS is good at the Los Angeles Building Department.

According to the 1926-1927 fiscal year report compiled by J. J. Backus, superintendent of buildings, a total of 36,762 building permits were issued in this city during the twelve-month period ending June 30.

The total value of these permits aggregate $118,037,797.

An idea of the amount of buildings erected during the year may be conveyed by considering these buildings as placed one against the other, without allowing for the different stories. The total frontage would be 813,106 feet, or approximately 154 miles.

This year has again shown considerable activity in the erection of dwellings and apartment houses. Fifty-three and seven-tenths per cent of the total valuation was expended for this type of construction.

Long Beach—In The ExamineRegion!

LONG BEACH, city of over 140,000 population, and a part of The ExamineRegion, (in which The Examiner provides an 87% coverage 52 Sundays a year, and concentrates nearly 80% of its daily circulation) is one of the most prosperous communities in The West. Signal Hill, famous oil producing center, is at Long Beach, and pours a lavish flow of wealth into the hands of thousands of stockholders in its wells. Long Beach is a nationally known playground, and its growth in the past 10 years has been phenomenal!

$7,000,000 Firestone Co. Plant Coming to L. A.

REPRESENTING an investment of more than seven million dollars and to employ 2,500 persons, the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company will immediately erect a huge new manufacturing plant in Los Angeles on a 40-acre tract.

Announcement of the Firestone plant comes close upon the heels of B. F. Goodrich Tire and Rubber Company's plant, which was obtained by the Chamber of Commerce and which will be built at a cost of $6,000,000.

The fact that the Firestone officials insisted on a forty-acre tract is some indication of the size of the proposed plant.

All types of Firestone products will be manufactured in the Los Angeles plant, it is declared.

READER-POPULATION INCREASES RESULTS

A NEW city of more than 100,000 population! . . . an Alhambra, a Santa Barbara, a Culver City, Fullerton and Beverly Hills combined! . . . a golden shower of new dollars—from 97,000,000 to 130,000,000 of them a year!

That's what The Los Angeles Examiner hands to its regular advertisers at the end of June, 1927, as just ONE dividend of many on its growth since the first half of 1926.

A year ago we were selling space on a basis of 175,000 daily, and 395,000 Sunday circulation. Today we sell it with a guarantee of 195,000 daily, and 425,000 Sunday, though we are actually delivering to the advertiser, according to the average daily and Sunday circulation for the first 6 months of 1927, 198,307, and 427,253.

Whole City Annexed!

In other words, we've added over 23,000 families daily. That's a good-sized city. The U. S. Government says we average 4.5 persons to the family, so we've added, for our daily advertisers, 103,500 consumers, and they're the kind of consumers with lots of money to spend, for in this—the fifth greatest American market—the individual yearly income is larger than anywhere else in the world.

To the Sunday advertiser, we've been a little more generous. He finds himself doing business, through the Examiner, with 29,406 more families this year than last; with over 130,500 NEW consumers, who earn $144,463,500 every 12 months and own enough automobiles to provide every third person with his own car!

Ordinarily, to reach a new city of 100,000 population, a merchant has to build another store, stock it with costly merchandise, make new advertising contacts and build up an organization and a consumer-acceptance. The Examiner in Los Angeles provides a quicker, better, easier and much less expensive course than that!

The highest-priced newspaper in Los Angeles, yet with the largest morning and Sunday Circulation by far!

LEDGER CAMERA MAN WINS PHOTO PRIZE

Picture of Lens-shy "Lone Wolf" Snapped Through Courtroom Door Held Best News Feat—Prize to Be Annual

John Smith, a news photographer on the staff of the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger, has just been awarded a prize cup for having made what the Philadelphia News Photographers' Association decided was the "best news picture of the year."

The trophy is awarded annually by Sydney Hutchison, chairman of the Athletic Committee of the University of Pennsylvania, and is bestowed through the news photographers' organization, which makes the final selection. Smith is the first winner of the award, which will be made each year hereafter.

"Lone Wolf" snapped at last. Famous dry agent who wouldn't pose for picture, fell when John Smith's lens caught him through the gap of a courtroom doorway.

The picture for which Smith was awarded the prize is reproduced on this page of Editor & Publisher. It was taken through an open door in one of Philadelphia's courtrooms where the noted "Lone Wolf" Asher was on trial for beating to death a saloonkeeper whom he had involved in prohibition law violations.

Asher was a prohibition "spy." He never would pose for a picture. Finally he was arrested and put on trial. For days the photographers "dogged" his footsteps, but obtained no picture. Asher didn't want the bootleggers to get a line on his looks and he used every effort—successfully—to evade photographers.

Then came the trial and Smith was directed to "get" Asher. He stayed on the job several days. Finally, he edged up against a side-door of the courtroom—a door through which the jury marched for its verdict deliberations. He set his camera and waited. Finally, one of the court attaches opened the door a few inches and snap! went the bulb on the camera.

Fortunately for Smith, the "Lone Wolf" was ideally located in relation to the camera. It made a good "shot," showing Asher directly in the center of the picture giving testimony at the trial.

Asher was acquitted and died later in the Middle West.

ADDRESSES WANTED

Alfred Alexander
R. O. Dudley
Victor H. Williams
Edward M. Franey
Ben Hibbs
Virginia Roehl
R. L. Stout

"WE" AND THE CUP THAT "WE" WON

John Smith and his camera collaborated in working day and night to land the "Lone Wolf's" picture for the Philadelphia Public Ledger. The cup which rewarded their patience and skill poses with them.

PHILADELPHIA DAILY OFFERS AIR PRIZE

Bulletin Will Give $25,000 to Aviator Making First Non-Stop Flight There From European Capital—One Plane Enters Contest

Philadelphia, August 12.—The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin has offered a prize of $25,000 to the aviator making the first non-stop flight from a European capital to Philadelphia. The offer was made in a letter to Hollinshead N. Taylor, chairman of the Pennsylvania Aeronautics Commission, which is to have charge of all details. The flight is to be made before August 4, 1928.

The prize offer was hailed with enthusiasm by aeronautic experts here and elsewhere, who declared it should result in a trans-Atlantic flight with this city as its objective in the near future, as several planes are now being groomed for a westward flight across the ocean.

The Evening Bulletin on Aug. 11 printed this announcement from John Gunther, its correspondent at Paris:

"The Farman Bluebird will compete for the $25,000 prize offered by the Philadelphia Bulletin. Its pilots, Leon Givon and Pierre Corbu, have been instructed to set their course for Philadelphia instead of New York when the big plane takes off.

"The French Aero Club and the Federation Aeronautique International have agreed to have official commissionaires on hand at Le Bourget to seal the barographs, plumb the tanks and otherwise officially certify the start."

The "Bluebird" is scheduled to take off from Le Bourget within the next few days and a number of other entrants are expected to make Philadelphia their goal.

Wide approbation has come to the Bulletin from people interested in aviation.

Following is the text of the letter to Mr. Taylor as chairman of the commission:

Gentlemen:

We hereby agree to place in your hands as The Philadelphia Bulletin prize a sum of $25,000, to be awarded by you to the first aviator to fly from a European capital without stopping to the city of Philadelphia, within a period of a year from this date. The designation of the exact landing field and all similar conditions to be left in the hands of your commission.

Sincerely yours,
The Evening Bulletin.

There is certainly Some Publisher Who will want this man

Because in his fifteen years' experience as business manager of medium sized papers he has achieved results that few men can boast of. A thoroughly unusual ability in building advertising linage, a complete knowledge of the business office from every angle and a spotless personal and business record form a combination with appeal. Here is an opportunity for the right publisher to add strength and dignity to his staff and to head off that droop to his linage out of the ordinary references. Business or advertising managership—whichever offers the most money and greater opportunity. Address Box C-893, Editor and Publisher.

CHICAGO TO COAST BY AIR

M. C. Meigs of Herald Examiner Uses Planes for Business Trips

M. C. Meigs, publisher of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, made a business trip to California and back to Chicago by airplane. He left Chicago July 30, flying to San Francisco in a plane of the Boeing Air Transport, which combines passenger and mail carrying. He visited San Francisco and Los Angeles. From the latter city he flew to Salt Lake City in a ship of the Western Air Express, and transferred there to a Boeing plane for the completion of the flight.

M. C Meigs

Mr. Meigs was enthusiastic about the new mode of travel, for comfort, speed and enjoyment.

"The speed of the flight—less than a day from here to the coast—speaks for itself," he said. "It is as safe as riding on a street car. The scenery, viewed from the air, is beautiful beyond description, particularly over the mountains and the desert."

CLIPPER SHIP METHODS—

That's what you're using.

The wet plate process of making negatives was discovered back in the Clipper Ship days—when it took a month or more to cross the ocean. Yet many of you are still using this same slow method of turning out negatives.

"What's good enough for my grandfather is good enough for me," may be the safety-first way—but it never got "WE" across the Atlantic.

When we tell you that many of the largest firms in the photo reproduction trade are now making 200 negatives a day by the Contrasto Process at average saving of $.65 in the cost of each negative, considering quantity production, some of you are going to scoff. But so did the clipper ship captains about ocean steamships and thousands Doubting Thomases prophesied the failure of a transatlantic flight.

Frankly we are asking for an argument. Will you give us one? Write for our side of the story. "The Final answer to the Wet and Dry Question." A booklet which gives the complete details of the Contrasto Process.

These two line illustrations were made with Contrasto Strip Film Negatives, by the Hill Reproduction Company, New York.

NEGATIVE PAPERS — CONTRASTO — PROCESS FILMS

POLYGRAPHIC COMPANY OF AMERICA, INC.

Sales Offices:
237 Lafayette Street
New York, N. Y.

Rochester, N. Y.

Branch Office:
14 E. Jackson Blvd.
Chicago, Ill.

See our exhibit at the National Graphic Arts Exhibition.

The Georgian-American Keeps Straight Ahead!

Again The Georgian-American has amassed the largest total gain in Advertising. July figures show that The Georgian and Sunday American not only had the largest total gain, but that The Georgian-American is the only paper to show gains in Local, National and Classified totals.

The Georgian-American Alone Gains in All Totals

July Advertising Gains and Losses

	*Georgian-American LINES	Journal LINES	Constitution LINES
LOCAL	29,904 Gain	5,292 Gain	3,136 Loss
NATIONAL	3,164 Gain*	22,050 Loss	70,238 Loss
CLASSIFIED	16,030 Gain	378 Loss	4,718 Loss
TOTAL	49,098 Gain	17,136 Loss	78,092 Loss
AMERICAN WEEKLY	11,284 Gain	1,176 Gain	7,980 Gain
GRAND TOTAL	60,382 Gain	15,960 Loss	70,112 Loss

*Hearst Publications and Cosmopolitan Productions Excluded.
Sunday Magazine and Rotogravure.

Advertising In The Georgian-American Means More Sales

"The Fastest Growing Newspapers in Atlanta"

RODNEY E. BOONE
General Manager National Advertising

F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson
Publisher

Mr. Rodney E. Boone
9 East 40th St.
New York City, N. Y.

Mr. Addison Chapeck
326 W. Madison St.
Chicago, Ill.

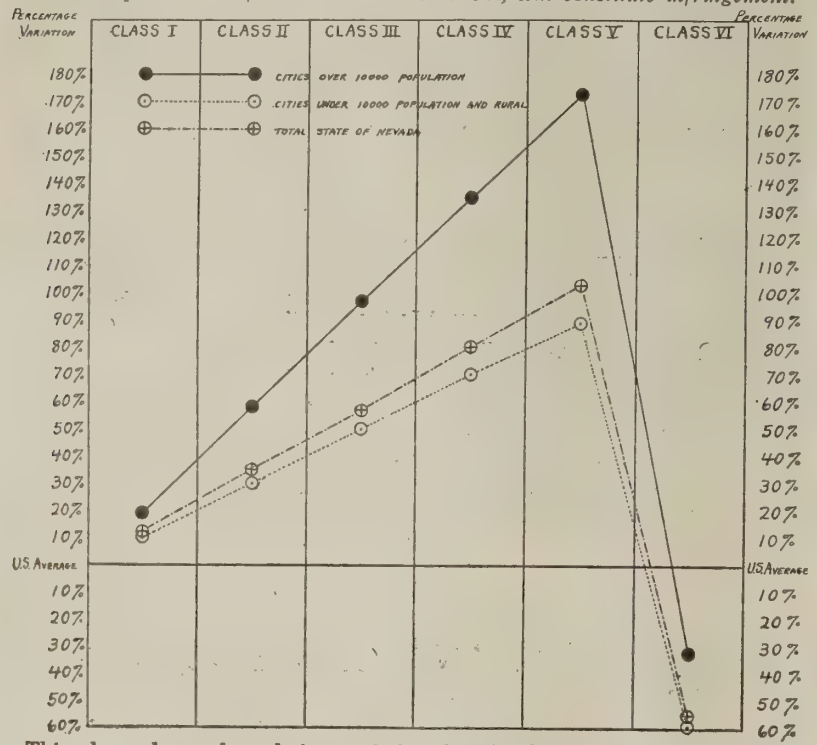
Mr. Franklin S. Payne
2412 Book Tower Bldg.
Detroit, Mich.

Roger M. Reynolds
Advertising Director

Mr. F. H. Druehl
136 St. Paul St.
Rochester, N. Y.

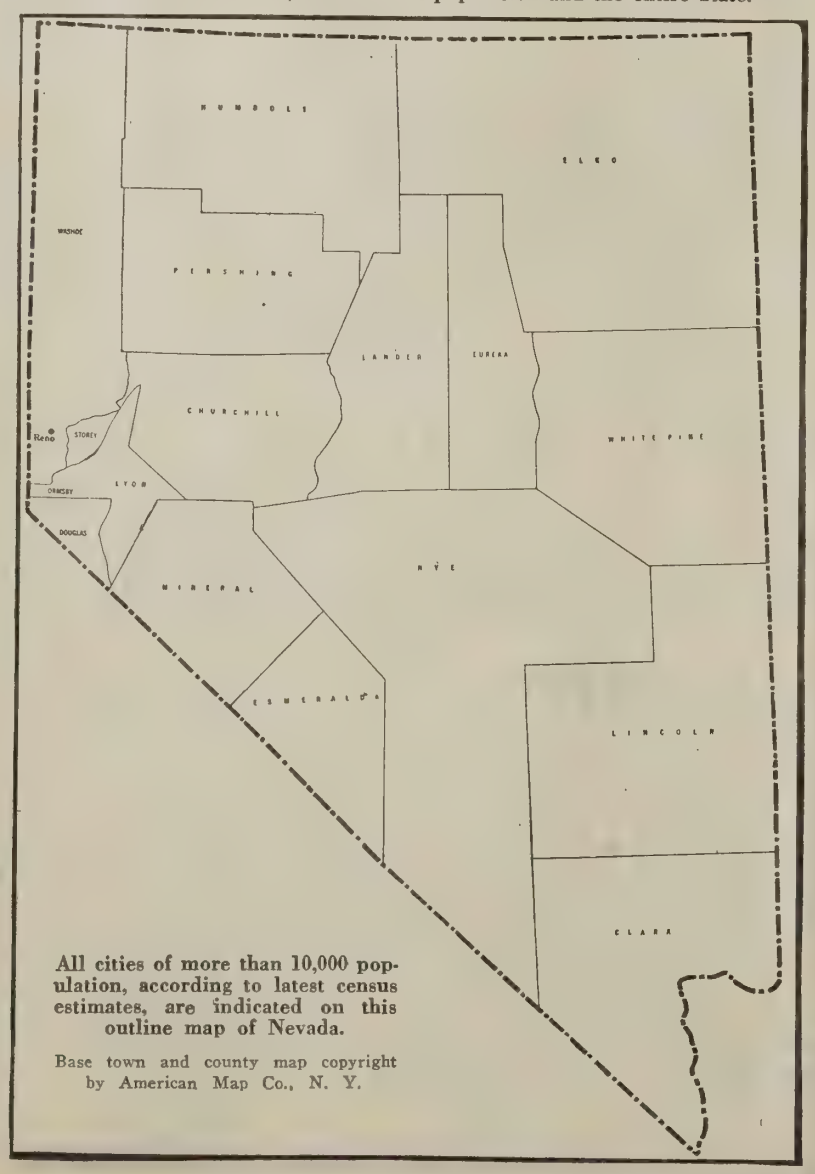
Mr. L. F. Barnard
554 New Eng. Press Bldg.
Boston, Mass.

Mr. F. M. Van Gieson
541 Monadnock Bldg.
San Francisco, Cal.



Mr. K. J. Nixon
84 Marietta St.
Atlanta, Ga.

KEY TO CONSUMER BUYING ABILITY



Statistical Rating of Nevada Counties and Cities for Products of General Appeal, in Six Major Classes of Quality and Cost—An Original Simplified and Tested Formula from Basic Data

By NELSON H. SEUBERT

Copyright 1927 by Editor & Publisher Company. All rights are reserved and reproduction of these results, in whole or in part, without written permission of Editor & Publisher Co., will constitute infringement.

This chart shows the relative variation for the State of Nevada above or below the United States average for cities of 10,000 or more population, cities of less than 10,000 and rural population and the entire State.

All cities of more than 10,000 population, according to latest census estimates, are indicated on this outline map of Nevada.

Base town and county map copyright by American Map Co., N. Y.

BUYING POWER ANALYZED BY PRODUCT CLASSES FOR NEVADA

Note: Figures below represent percentages of U. S. total carried out to four places: To use, mark off four places and insert decimal point.

Counties in bold face capitals—Cities in capitals and lower case

	CL No. 1	CL No. 2	CL No. 3	CL No. 4	CL No. 5	CL No. 6
NEVADA	759	915	1071	1226	1382	308
CHURCHILL	48	45	42	39	36	9
CLARK	53	59	66	72	78	23
DOUGLAS	16	19	23	27	30	12
ELKO	72	87	103	118	133	30
ESMARALDA	20	21	22	23	24	2
EUREKA	12	15	18	21	24	5
HUMBOLDT	32	37	42	46	51	10
LANDER	15	20	25	30	35	12
LINCOLN	18	18	18	18	18	2
LYON	39	41	44	46	48	4
MINERAL	15	15	15	15	15	2
NYE	59	74	89	104	119	23
ORNSBY	19	20	20	20	21	6
PERSHING	24	27	30	33	36	9
STOREY	14	19	23	27	32	5
WASHOE	206	278	350	423	495	122
Reno	132	175	218	260	303	75
WHITE PINE	97	120	141	164	187	32

FIGHT NEWS ON SCREEN

Stay-at-home fans of the Dempsey-Sharkey fracas read the A. P. ringside account on a screen rigged in the Brockton (Mass.) Times office. A stereopticon machine was used, throwing the typewritten paragraphs in bold relief on a sheet hung from the corners of the big plate glass window.

GUTHRIE, OKLA., RAISING FUN

Guthrie, Okla., is raising a $10,0 fund with which to advertise the city the town nearest the Logan county fields. Starting as a $2,500 fund, amount was oversubscribed $600 the fi day. The fund quickly reached $6,0 and is expected to reach the desired to in a few days.

A BIG FACT

tells more than all the little facts which go to make it up.

Los Angeles Times

is delivered to more homes and is more used by all classes of advertisers than any other newspaper in its field.

For first 6 months of 1927, the Los Angeles Times printed NATIONAL ADVERTISING 2,289,938 agate lines, LOCAL DISPLAY ADVERTISING 6,443,276 agate lines, CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING 4,407,620 agate lines—more of each than any other Los Angeles newspaper.

Eastern Rep.: WILLIAMS, LAWRENCE & CRESMER CO.
360 N. Michigan Blvd., CHICAGO - 285 Madison Ave., NEW YORK
Pacific Coast Rep.: R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market St., SAN FRANCISCO - 3322 White Henry Stuart Bldg., SEATTLE

NUMBER THIRTEEN OF A SERIES

THE DISTINGUISHED NEWSPAPER

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

Little Things Can Be Made to Count

THERE is no component of the daily newspaper smaller than a classified advertisement. Even the shortest news item takes more space, often it receives more considerate preparation, yet a classified advertisement is by no means insignificant. It is one of those little things that can be made to count.

On The Distinguished Newspaper, classified advertisements have been made to count for a good deal. First off, its publishers concluded that the users of these small ads sought but one thing—replies. This demand presupposed more readers, and so, to capitalize on their existing circulation, they made their classified columns as readable as possible to insure their daily perusal.

The two pages next following show the result of this effort. They show just how readable and attractive the classified pages of The Distinguished Newspaper have been made by the exercise of care in typographic treatment, by the use of legible types and tasteful display.

But there is still another way in which these little ads have been made to count. Increased replies per advertisement have made The Distinguished Newspaper a valuable classified medium and enabled it to increase its linear rate in proportion. This added profit is rendered even larger by the economies in the paper's policy of employing Linotype composition throughout its pages.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

LINOTYPED IN THE CASLON OLD FACE SERIES

319.51

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

4 Situations Wanted—Male

Advertising or Sales

CONNECTION OFFERING REAL OPPORTUNITY—wanted by Annapolis graduate with post graduate degree in business administration from Harvard. Has had 4 years of executive experience as naval officer, 2½ years of business experience in sales and advertising, 1½ of which were in executive capacity. Address A 42, Distinguished Newspaper.

Assistant to Executive

Young married man who just completed 3-year contract in South as executive in charge of sales and production for large steel products company, desires connection as assistant or junior executive in Anywhere or vicinity. Address A 67, Distinguished Newspaper.

COST AND PAY ROLL ACCOUNTANT—Married man with 6½ years' experience, including general office and production work; excellent references; salary secondary to good opportunity. Address A 59, Distinguished Newspaper.

EXECUTIVE

of high standing, broad executive experience as managing partner of large wholesale business 15 yrs.; age 41; ability proven by former success, seeks responsible connection in executive capacity. Address B 6, Distinguished Newspaper.

JUNIOR EXECUTIVE

seeks connection as assistant to executive, with responsible manufacturing concern; well balanced, past experience with practical problems and management; college graduate; resourceful and readily adjustable to new situations. Address A 45, Distinguished Newspaper.

MANAGER—Married man seeks position as manager of high class hotel or apartment house. Can furnish best of references from former employers in same line. Address A 50, Distinguished Newspaper.

OFFICE MAN—Age 33, 15 years' experience in credits, collections and bookkeeping; now available for responsible position offering opportunity. Address A 70, Distinguished Newspaper.

SALES EXECUTIVE—Man with mechanical ability and extensive experience in direct and mail sales, seeks position selling or in sales promotion department. Now employed. Address A 47, Distinguished Newspaper.

Sales Manager and Organizer

A high caliber master sales manager, who knows how to hire and train the producing kind of salesmen; backed up by 15 years of successful experience and can furnish the very highest credentials of past performance. B 3, Distinguished Newspaper.

SECRETARIAL—Married man, 35 years old, 10 years' secretarial and assistant department head, desires position with real opportunity. Some sales promotion experience. Address A 39, Distinguished Newspaper.

SHOE BUYER

Ex-store owner of proven ability in the better-grade field wants to connect as buyer-manager in department or retail store in town of 75 to 300 thousand population where the work is hard and the hours are long and money is scarce; acquainted with all markets; just sold 2 stores of my own and am ready to start at once; age 28, married; will go to any section of the country on good proposition. Address A 63, Distinguished Newspaper.

Young Man, Age 30

Thoroughly experienced in all angles of the cash or credit business, seeks permanent connection with a reliable firm. Salary secondary consideration; A-1 credentials. Address B 9, Distinguished Newspaper.

UNIVERSITY GRADUATE—Seeks minor executive position with future; 2 years' sales and general office routine experience; married; age 25. Address A 38, Distinguished Newspaper.

5 Situations Wanted—Female

ARCHITECT'S ASSISTANT—Young woman, 23, wishes temporary or permanent employment in architect's office; 2 years in technical college; tracing, some drafting and rendering in color and black and white. Address A 53, Distinguished Newspaper.

BEAUTY SHOP APPRENTICE—All around operator, efficient Eugene waver, wants to locate in Anywhere for winter. Phone Central 7890.

COLORED HOUSEWORKER—Can cook or do laundry; half or whole days, $8-$12; home nights. Phone Pacific 4533.

COOK—Excellent cook desires position with small American family on North side; best references; $25. Address B 4, Distinguished Newspaper.

[illegible] wants country place for [illegible] type of experi-

6 Help Wanted—Male

ARTIST—Letterer; also man for scenic work on show window background. Fifth floor, 99 5th St., Anywhere.

ASSISTANT MANAGER

Man to qualify as assistant manager for large corporation; good income from start, plus remarkable opportunity for future; must be over 30. See Mr. Davis Jones, Room 405, Post Office Bldg.

BELTMAKERS—Experienced transmission belt pressman; familiar with outside work; steady work and good pay for right man. Baker, 439 Main St., Anywhere.

BENCH HAND—Young man, familiar with automobile repairs, to fit wrist pins; write stating experience and salary expected. Address A 41, Distinguished Newspaper.

BILL CLERK—Quick and accurate at figures, neat penman; excellent opportunity for advancement. Write, giving full details as to past experience. Address A 84, Distinguished Newspaper.

BOOKKEEPER—Assistant, having comptometer machine experience; none others need apply. Call Unity Baking Co., 75 Center St.

BOOKKEEPER — Experienced; Polish preferred; good opportunity; references required. Apply 413 Main St., Anywhere.

BOYS—Excellent opportunity in old-established dry goods commission house for intelligent Christian boy about 17; experience unnecessary. Reply in own handwriting, stating age, education, religious affiliations, salary expected and phone number. Address A 57, Distinguished Newspaper.

Boys Wanted

FOR PLEASANT OUTDOOR WORK
Not over 16 years; references required; good salary and chance for advancement to those who make good. Address B 2, Distinguished Newspaper.

CARPENTERS—Screen hangers, experienced men only; steady work. Metal Weather Strip Co., 198 Center St.

CARPENTERS—Three carpenters for frame and trimming work. 4th St., between Jackson and Hayes Aves., Anywhere.

COLLECTOR—Now employed with a large furniture installment house and has a big following, who wishes to earn additional money. A great opportunity awaits the right man. Apply Joseph White, Main Arcade.

COLLECTOR—Live man to handle Jersey and Brooklyn routes; regular accounts; can earn $30 per week. See Mr. Alexander, 520 Post Office Bldg., between 9 and 12.

DRAFTSMAN

Mechanical designer, experienced small and medium automatic machinery, jigs, fixtures and gauges; state age, experience, nationality, salary expected. Address A 65, Distinguished Newspaper.

DRIVER—Experienced in linen supply or laundry preferred but not essential; A-1 reference required. Everready, 413 Main St., near Carman.

DRIVER-SALESMAN—Butter and egg route, house to house; Ford car; salary $22 a week and 3 per cent. Call Shadybrook Farms, Old Oak Ridge Rd.

DRUG CLERK—Junior, experienced salesman, toilet articles, patent medicines. Apply Dr. Carpenter, Drugstore, 115 Main St.

ELECTRICAL CONTRACTOR — Dealer has splendid opportunity for a young man experienced in store and for small repairs and lamp alterations; state complete experience. Address A 87, Distinguished Newspaper.

ELEVATOR MECHANIC—For care and upkeep of elevator, signals and elevators in modern building; state qualifications and salary expected in first letter. Address A 55, Distinguished Newspaper.

FOREMAN—Take complete charge stitching and tucking plant, also know how to make samples and set machines; only those who have complete knowledge in this line and have held similar position need reply. Address A 40, Distinguished Newspaper.

GALVANIZING

SHOP FOREMAN TO TAKE FULL CHARGE OF SHOP
MUST BE EXPERIENCED ADVISE SALARY EXPECTED AND EXPERIENCE
ADDRESS A 74
DISTINGUISHED NEWSPAPER

MECHANIC

for modern office building with low pressure steam plant work, minor repairs throughout building and care and upkeep of high speed elevators and elevator signals; must reside on premises; state qualifications and salary expected in first letter. Address B 8, Distinguished Newspaper.

MAN WANTED

Man wanted, over 25, preferably married, for a responsible position with an established New York financial institution; no experience necessary; every applicant will be interviewed; [illegible] use a man who speaks Italian. [illegible] only.

7 Salesmen Wanted

CANVASSERS

$5 A DAY SALARY—PLUS COMMISSIONS
Staple commodity and firm of well established reputation. Experienced canvassers can make twice as much in commissions as their salary. Must have good appearance, be hard, faithful workers, and have clean records. Permanent positions and assured future for those who qualify. Apply between 9 A. M. and 9 P. M., Monday.
THIRD FLOOR, MAIN ARCADE, AT 4TH ST.

CANVASSERS AND SALESMEN—Good opportunity with large corporation, pleasant outdoor work under the supervision of crew manager with automobile; liberal commission. See Mr. Reese, 400 Main Street, between 8.30-9.30 A. M.

SALESMEN

DRAWING ACCOUNT
EXPERIENCE UNNECESSARY
Wonderful opportunity to earn real money. Call 9 to 12 only, Room 314,
POST OFFICE BUILDING
ASK FOR MR. BARSTOW

SALESMEN REAL ESTATE

SOMETHING NEW OUT OF THE ORDINARY BIG MONEY
See Mr. Stanley
9-11 A. M. and 5-7 P. M.
CITIZENS' BANK BUILDING
ROOM 407

SALESMEN

FULL OR PART TIME
PERSONALLY SIGNED LEADS ADVANCES
BIG COMMISSIONS
ATTRACTIVE DEVELOPMENT IN A LIVE COMMUNITY NEAR ANYWHERE
FULL CO-OPERATION BY EXPERTS
SEE MR. KELLY
417 CENTER STREET
CALL BETWEEN 10 AND 12
AND 2 AND 4 ONLY

SALESMEN YOUNG MEN

I have openings for two men to sell vacuum cleaners through table demonstration in Anywhere's largest department store; experience unnecessary; income $30 to $40 at start; 9 A. M.; no other time.
ASK FOR MR. McNULTY
ROOM 617, HOTEL LIVINGSTON

8 Male Help—Agencies

High Grade Positions!

3 SALES ENGINEERS	$250-300
COPYWRITER, dept. store exp.	$150
SALES CORRESP., plumbing supplies	$225
CORRESPONDENT-SUPERVISOR	$50
ASST. CR. AND COLL. MANAGER	$175
HOTEL AUDITOR, some public	$200
STENOGRAPHER-SECRETARY	$150-175
STENO. AND CLERK	$25-30
TYPIST BILLER	$25-30
RECORD CLERK, neat penman	$110-125
FILE CLERK, 40 yrs. old	$22-25
JR. CLERK, high school grad	$18-20
ASST. BOOKKEEPER	$20-25
CLEARING HOUSE CLERK	$90
PAYG. AND RECVG. TELLER	$125-140
BOYS, office and errands	$65-75

Salesmen! Salesmen!

PAINTS AND VARNISHES	$200 and exp.
FIRE EXTINGUISHERS	$200-250
CREAMERY MACHINERY	$3,000-5,000
ADVERTISING	$200 and exp.
3 GROC SPECIALTY MEN	$175-200

Guaranteed Service

324 POST OFFICE BUILDING

PERSONALIZED SERVICE

SALES MGR., redi-cut houses	$6-$7,000
SALES CORRES., expd., some college	$30-35
DEVELOPMENT ENGR., conveyors	$300
MECH. ENGR., rolling mill exp.	$300
[illegible] analysis, tests	$175
	$125

THE DISTINGUISH

Answer
ten-tho

There is no to classified a ably compose arranged and played. Her achieved with
No. 5, the m
faces, and v
Vinne Outl
Condensed C
cal arrangem classification nience and gained by s headings i

The Distingu

9 Help Wanted—Female

ADDRESSERS, previous experience a ough knowledge of list compiling a essential. Apply 9 A. M., Jones & Ba 5th St.

ARTIST, student, capable all arou painting, studio furniture, decora start. 214 Main St., one flight.

BINDERY GIRLS, experienced coun jogging, printing factory. $15 to s floor, 376 Center St.

BOOKKEEPER (ASSISTANT),
GENERAL OFFICE WORK; EXPE
GOOD OPPORTUNITY. Address A tinguished Newspaper.

BOOKKEEPER'S assistant; know stenography, experienced; must accurate and willing worker; $18; perience in detail. Address B
guished Newspaper.

CASHIERS, NEAT,
WITH CAFETERIA EXPERIE
CHANCE FOR ADVANCEM
ENTREE CAFETERIAS
317 MAIN STREET

CASHIER, who understands kee and can typewrite; give experien
Arcade Restaurant, Main Arcad

CLERKS

17 TO 25 YEARS OF A
NO BUSINESS EXPERIENCE N
HOURS 9.00 A. M. TO 5.00
SATURDAY 9.00 A. M. TO SPLENDID OPPORTUNI
FOR ADVANCEMENT
ALL HIGHER POSITIONS
FILLED BY PROMOTI
APPLY
EMPLOYMENT DEPART
CENTRAL TELEPHONE CO
313 5th STREET

DRESSMAK

Woman handy with needl pable of making minor a steady work, good pay; hal urday.

Davis & Da

...he
...
...olies
...ead-
...ently
... dis-
...y is
...Ionic
...f text
...of De
...Gothic
...nabeti-
...ndexed
...conve-
...splay is
...fication
...l Bold.

Newspaper

elp Wanted—Female

WAITRESS

xperienced girl for busy tearoom- it; must be thoroughly familiar with Sunnybrook Tea Room, Old Oak oad.

Women (three)

$5 day start; commissions; advance- arnest workers over 25, earning big outside selling new women's garment; ent; short hours; 5-day week. 275 t., Anywhere.

LADY, good appearance, to assist executive; no selling; willing to be experience unnecessary. See or "Director," Suite 204. Main Arcade.

YOUNG WOMEN

AGES 16 TO 27
INEXPERIENCED, FOR CLERICAL POSITIONS
GRAMMAR SCHOOL GRADUATES
STEADY WORK
ALARY PAID WHILE LEARNING; NCREASES AT FREQUENT INTER- ALS; PROMOTION TO HIGHER OSITIONS; VACATION WITH PAY; MEALS AT LOW COST.

Mars Insurance Co.

MAIN AND CENTER STS.

Female Help—Agencies

High Grade Positions!

TENO. SECTY. hotel exp., coll. ed.	$200
TENOGRAPHER, South Side	$100
STENOGRAPHERS	$90-110
TENO. DICTAPHONE OPERATOR	$115
TENO., small office	$110
TENO., only girl	$125
TENO. BKKPR.	$100
TENO. AND CLERK. A-1 firm	$30
TENO. SWITCHBD. OPERATORS	$150
ECRETARY, newspaper exp.	$35
ECRETARY, engrg. and mnfg. exp.	$25
YPIST CORRESP. S. Side. sm. ofc.	$25
ASST. BKKPR. and BILLER	$85
TYPIST	and $35

10 Female Help—Agencies

GOOD OPENINGS TODAY

STENO.-SECY.—Legal exp.	$30
STENOGRAPHER	$125
STENO.; lumber firm	$27
STENO.	$25
STENOGRAPHER—North Side	$22
STENO.-CLERK—Hat company	$22
TYPIST-POLICY WRITER	$90
E. F. BILLER	$23
COMPT. OPERATOR	$100
DICT. OPER.—Tech. exp.	$110
2 BURR. BKKPRS.—Bk. exp.	$100
BOOKKEEPERS AND CLERKS
2 BKKPRS.-STENOS	$30-35
2 BOOKKEEPERS	$23-25
ASST. BKPR.—Ins.	$90
CLK.—Cleaners and Dyers' Store exp.	$20
CLERK-TYPIST—Order writing	$20
CLERK-TYPIST	$20
CLERK—Neat penmanship	$65
SWTBD. OP.—TYPIST-Some sten.	$25

No registration fee or advance payment
CALL EARLY TODAY. OPEN AT 8 A. M.

GUARANTEED SERVICE

324 Post Office Building

11 Instruction

Automobile Mechanics

It only requires determination and action on your part to be earning, in a few months, the biggest wage or largest salary paid to any class of skilled help. The automobile trade is always hunting for such help. The question of pay is second to ability. We can train you in 3 MONTHS to start in one of these good-paying positions. Your advancement will depend entirely upon yourself. Previous experience is not necessary.

In order to fully understand and appreciate how much we can do to help you—you should pay us an inspection visit.

Complete Shop Course of thorough scientific training on ENGINES, STARTING,

LIGHTING, REAR AXLES,
IGNITION, BATTERIES, ETC.

It will inspire you to see scores of ambitious men in training in what is said to be the most cheerful and the best equipped technical auto-training institution to be found anywhere.

Day and evening classes now being formed. Easy payments gladly arranged. We help to place graduates. If you cannot call, write or phone Main 5000 for free illustrated catalog.

Anywhere Auto School

514 Main Street
Open All Year Round
Classes Now Forming

BEAUTY SPECIALISTS
Earn $30 to $75 Weekly

For $50 (our special course) you will learn to become a beauty specialist under the most expert teachers; $10 will start you, the balance conveniently, and you can help pay it from week-end positions we furnish while learning; day and evening classes; call, write or phone for free booklet.

Beauty Institute

The School of Individual Instruction
Main Arcade

DANCING LESSONS

LEARN TO DANCE NOW

Take a few private lessons, day or evening; class practice evenings at 8 and Sunday afternoon.

TANGO STUDIOS

477 MAIN STREET

Traffic Management Offers Big Future

If you are uncertain about the future, and your present job does not seem to be leading anywhere, why not look into this interesting and profitable work?

Traffic Management is a real job; pays real money—$3,000 to $10,000 yearly—and its field is rapidly growing. There is a place for you in Traffic Management when you are ready.

It will cost you nothing, involve no obligation to investigate. Ask for our 95-page book which explains everything fully and tells you how you can quickly qualify for a Traffic Management position in your spare time.

UNITED SCHOOLS Anywhere Office

313 Post Office Building

13 Apartments to Let Furnished

WARRINGTON ARMS
STANLEY RD. AT WARRINGTON AV.

Your inspection is invited to this new 15-story fireproof apartment hotel, located in the finest section on the North Side. Practically all of the apartments command unobstructed view of the lake and the golf links. The apartments, two and three rooms in size, consist of a large living room, dining alcove, kitchenette, dressing rooms, with roll-away bed and bath.

FURNISHED OR UNFURNISHED

The entrance to the building is through a spacious and attractively furnished lobby, where such conveniences as drug stores, tea-room, commissary, and beauty parlor and valet shop can be found.

Our prices range from $70 to $160 per month, including gas, electricity, and mechanical refrigeration.

Manager at building at all hours, or call

STANLEY 4600

NEW BUILDING
Garden Terrace Apts.

FIREPROOF AND SOUNDPROOF

1-2-3 room kitchenette apartments; refrigeration; handsomely furnished; complete hotel service; all outside light; view overlooking lake; bus to door; moderate rates. 1565 Warrington Av., Stanley 3535.

NEW BUILDING

2-3-4 ROOMS

423 MORROW STREET

2 ROOMS, $90 AND UP
WITH BEDROOM, $120 AND UP

Beautifully furnished, including complete equipment of linens, dishes, silverware, and glassware.

Ample closet space; all tiled bath with tub and shower.

GAS, LIGHT, AND REFRIGERATION FREE

PHONE STANLEY 6000

AVALON
456 STANLEY RD.

In the beautiful Harbor district. Its character is the keynote of our success. It has brought us guests of stability.

An environment of select refinement, yet rates well within your reach. Unusually attractive kitchenette.

$75 up. Beautiful lobby; elevator serv. Everything furnished, including linen, silver, dishes, and glassware.

Live where living is a year around pleasure. Under personal supervision of Mrs. Carpenter, Stanley 5475.

TWO=O=ONE

FARRINGTON BOULEVARD
OUR FEW REMAINING
3-4 ROOM
FURNISHED AND
UNFURNISHED APTS.
AT REDUCED RENTALS
Gas, Light and
Refrigeration Free
Maid Service and Valet

PHONE AURORA 1430

14 Apartments to Let
Unfurnished

520-526 STANLEY RD.

2-3-4 ROOMS

Fronting park and lake; within easy walking distance of golf links, tennis courts and bathing beaches; kitchenettes, in-a-dor beds, private tile baths with built in tubs; spacious closets; bus and surface within 1 block; $60-$80.

Caldwell, Carter & Bowen

N...

1-2-3 ROOMS

Attractive light rooms, overlooking country club and lake. Good closet space, door beds, Pullman kitchens, electric refrigeration; light ... free. Near bus. Immediate possession. ... 470 Stanley Road.

14 Apartments to Let Unfurnished

2, 3, AND 4 ROOMS

Furnished or Unfurnished
UNUSUAL ATTRACTIONS
MARLBOROUGH COURT

Half block from station, 2 blocks from bus line, 3 blocks from bathing beach; kitchenettes of enameled steel; optional double or twin beds; light and gas free.

REASONABLE RENTS
AGENT ON PREMISES
417 Marlborough St.

TO RENT—565 Morrow St., 8-room apartment. Newly decorated throughout. All new electric fixtures. Must be seen to be appreciated. Keys at 1st floor.

15 Stores and Offices

OFFICE OFFERINGS

POST OFFICE BUILDING
MAIN AND CENTER STS.

3-room corner suite, large offices; best in the bldg. Also a few single rooms.

MAIN ARCADE

Top floor, daylight space. Up to 2,600 ft., ideal for clerical or architect. Will divide. Attractive rent.

BLATCHFORD BUILDING
400 CENTER STREET

Offices $30 and up

We can supply your needs in some of our buildings.

JUSTIN F. STOREY, Agent
329 Main St. Main 6700

Citizens' Bank Building

NEW MODERN BANK BUILDING in the most thriving community in Anywhere
100 per cent Retail Location

READY NOW

LARGE DRUG STORE location. 30x55; SMALLER STORES, ideal for Shoes, Ladies' Ready to Wear, Chain Stores, Gents' Furnishing, Meat Market, etc. Rentals $125 and up.

See Agent Today at 314 Marlborough St.

The Anywhere Builders

Main 7890

TO RENT—324 Morrow St. Large, light store with basement. Apply Martin Tyler, 320 Morrow St.

BATES BUILDING

Main St. at Marlborough

Entire upper floor containing 5,000 sq. ft.; suitable for architects, attorneys or general offices. Daylight on four sides; fireproof bldg. and modern in every respect; will divide; lease to suit at reasonable rental.

ARTHUR L. MASTERSON & CO.
Phone Central 5643

TO RENT—STORE—267 Stanley Road; near station; best business block in Oak Park; only 1 store left; business is good here. Ask the merchants. Your success is assured. The rent is right. George Snyder & Co., Owners, Post Office Bldg., Phone Main 6543.

16 Houses for Sale

A REAL HOME

OWNER LEAVING FOR N. Y.

Restricted block, lot 40x150; 5-room bungalow. French windows; breakfast room, southern exposure; sun parlor; hot water heat; room for 2 bedrooms on 2d floor. 1 car garage, heated; cash, $5,000. Owner, Stanley 7070, 1800 Warrington Av.

10-ROOM BRICK HOME

Lot 50x180, marble fireplace, silver-plated lighting fixtures; walls canvased; beautifully landscaped and near park; advantages of city and advantages of country; brick garage attached; sickness compels owner to sell immediately.

Caldwell, Carter & Bowen
1400 Warrington Av.
Stanley 4000

FOR SALE

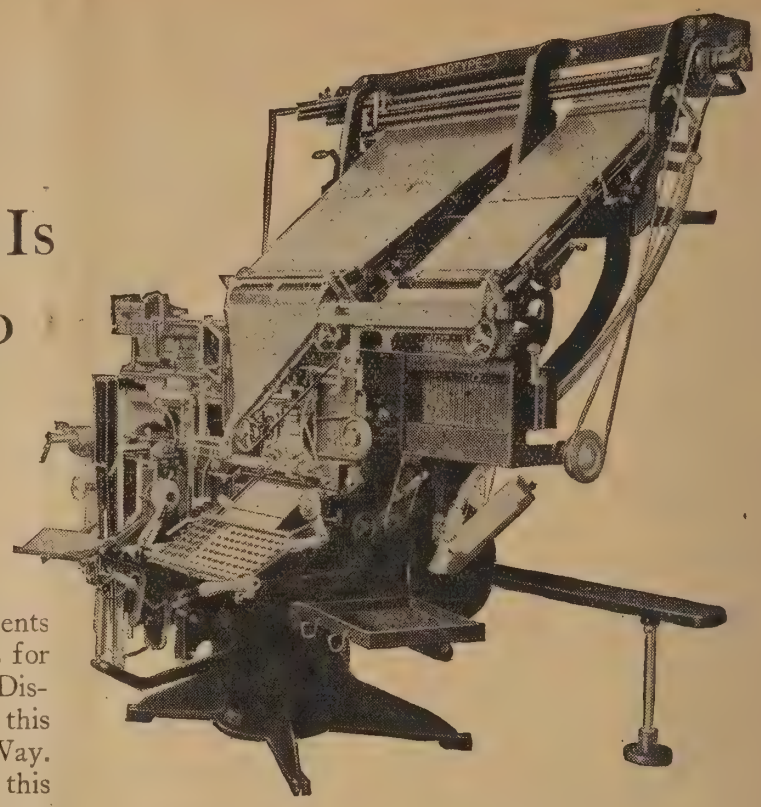
IF YOU ARE LOOKING FOR A HOME or homesite on the North side, see us first. We have something that will fit your bankbook and satisfy you, too.

Close to churches, schools, and transportation.

JUSTIN F. STOREY, Agent
389 Main Street Main 6700

FOR SALE

...BRICK BUNGALOW— ...bath, enclosed ... take as low ...hurches and



JUSTIN F. ..., Agent
389 Main Street Main 6700

SACRIFICE

... trim through-

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

The Linotype Way Is the Certain Way to Attractive, Legible Classified Ads

GETTING classified advertisements read is as essential as getting insertion orders for the ads themselves. The publishers of The Distinguished Newspaper have successfully met this situation; met it by following the Linotype Way.

The two pages foregoing show just how this has been achieved. They exhibit the attractiveness of Linotype outline faces, especially designed to afford attention-getting display at the same time they maintain the page's even tone. They demonstrate, too, the extreme legibility of Ionic No. 5 even in a solid setting, and show how a line of Ionic caps attain sufficient display to obviate the use of more than one face or size in the composition of classified text.

In short, these pages show how The Distinguished Newspaper, with the aid of Linotype equipment, has made little things—classified advertisements—count.

12 Pt. DeVinne Outline with Italic (12△108)
CLASSIFIED advertisin
CLASSIFIED advertisin

14 Pt. DeVinne Outline with Italic (14△52)
CLASSIFIED advert
CLASSIFIED advert

18 Pt. DeVinne Outline (18△183)
CLASSIFIED adver

24 Pt. DeVinne Outline (24△141)
CLASSIFIEDa

CLASSIFIED FACES on Linotype Matrices

12 Pt. Gothic Condensed Outline (12△125)
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING S

18 Point Gothic Condensed Outline (18△247)
CLASSIFIED ADVERT

5½ Point Ionic No. 5 with Bold Face No. 2 (5½△42). Set 14 lines to the inch.

CREDIT MAN—Seven years in charge of credits for the Blackwell Oil Company form a background of experience that will prove valuable to any concern and particularly to one selling to garages, service stations or large industrials. Capable through past experience to take charge of all office details. Available immediately. H. L. Brown, 475 Park Avenue, Anywhere.

10 Pt. Condensed Outline, one-letter (10△101)
CLASSIFIED advertising shows lar

12 Pt. Condensed Outline, one-letter (12△69)
CLASSIFIED advertising sho

18 Pt. Condensed Outline (18△75)
CLASSIFIED advertising

24 Pt. Condensed Outline (24△99)
CLASSIFIED ADV

30 Pt. Condensed Outline (30△53)
CLASSIFIED ADV

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

SAN FRANCISCO · CHICAGO · NEW ORLEANS · CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

REPRESENTATIVES IN THE PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

[PRINTED IN U.S.A.]

URT JAILS DRY CHIEF FOR CRITICISM

naker, Head of Indiana Anti-loon League, in Contempt by 3 to 2 Vote for His Report in "American Issue" liana, for almost a year rocked from dary to boundary with startling ges of political corruption, found a topic for general discussion this when the Rev. Edward S. Shu-r, state superintendent of the Anti-on League and for a quarter of a cen- a leading figure in prohibition work, found guilty by the state Supreme t of contempt, sentenced to the state l farm for sixty days and also fined ie vote of the Supreme Court was 3

ie conviction was based on statements by Shumaker in his 1925 report in American Issue, Anti-Saloon League n, criticizing the Supreme Court and ging inefficiency in the attorney gen- s office in the handling of liquor vio- n cases.

ontempt action against Shumaker, E. Martin, and Ethan A. Miles, neys for the league, was instituted by ur L. Gilliom, attorney general, some ionths ago. Martin was convicted but not sentenced, as he is not in the city, e Miles was acquitted.

ie court made its decision late in the noon of Aug. 5 and and the two men sentenced next morning before a ed courtroom. The Indianapolis Star more than a dozen pictures of prin- s in the case on the morning of the and devoted about two and a half s to the decision, a history of the case a biography of Shumaker. The News Times, evening papers, gave the case t an equal play Saturday afternoon. ntiment all over the state was more ed up by the decision than on any one ect since the Stephenson exposé. rch conferences, the W. C. T. U. and ganized admirers of Shumaker by the e came to the front with offers to pay enalty and assurances of support.

Methodist meeting near Lafayette ted a lengthy resolution condemning court's action and sixty preachers nteered to each serve a day of Shu- er's sentence.

nat the Indiana Supreme Court had asked to inaugurate contempt pro- ings against the editor of the Indian- is Times, the editor of the Indian- is News and "persons who made state- ts," but had refused to act, was re- ed Wednesday in the statement of ge Clarence W. Martin in his dis- ing opinion in the Shumaker case.

dge Martin, quoting from four edi- ls and one news article from the es and two editorials from the News, ared that Shumaker's criticisms of the t in his 1925 report in the American e, Anti-Saloon League organ, were by comparison, and that the court "straining at a gnat and swallowing mel."

hen asked about the matter today ge Martin refused to say who made suggestion that the court take action. f Justice Julius Travis said the tion had not been presented to the t.

dge Martin's opinion said in part: Statements in both news and editorial mns, more critical of the decisions work of this court than the American e articles, recently have appeared in public press, yet this court, upon hav- the suggestion made to it, did not with approval the institution of con- pt proceedings against the persons who e the statements or the papers which ted the following articles and edi- als."

dge Martin then quoted the articles uestion. The first was a news article n the Times in which Philip Zoercher Chairman John J. Brown of the state d of tax commissioners were quoted riticising the court's decision in regard ax refunds. The second quotation by ge Martin was an editorial from the Times regarding the pay of state legislators.

Two editorials from the News demanding that the Supreme Court grant a rehearing in the legislative pay case were quoted by the judge. In them the decision of the court was referred to as a "silly blunder," which was underscored by Judge Martin. Next came an editorial from the Times quoting the plea of Attorney General Arthur L. Gilliom for a rehearing of the same case. The judge underscored the attorney general's sentence which said "The constitution can not be thus bartered away."

An editorial from the Times concerning the delay in rendering decisions was the final exhibit given by Judge Martin.

McLAUTHLIN RETIRES

Advertising Head of Walter Baker & Co. Tendered Farewell Reception

Associated with the Walter Baker & Co., Boston, Mass., nationally known cocoa and chocolate manufacturers, for more than 30 years as advertising director, Wallace H. McLauthlin on retiring from business, was tendered a reception by representatives of a large percentage of newspapers and periodicals of importance throughout the country at the Boston Athletic Association, Boston, recently.

McLauthlin, one of the old school of advertising men, started in the business 38 years ago. He will spend most of his time at his summer estate at Cochituate, Mass.

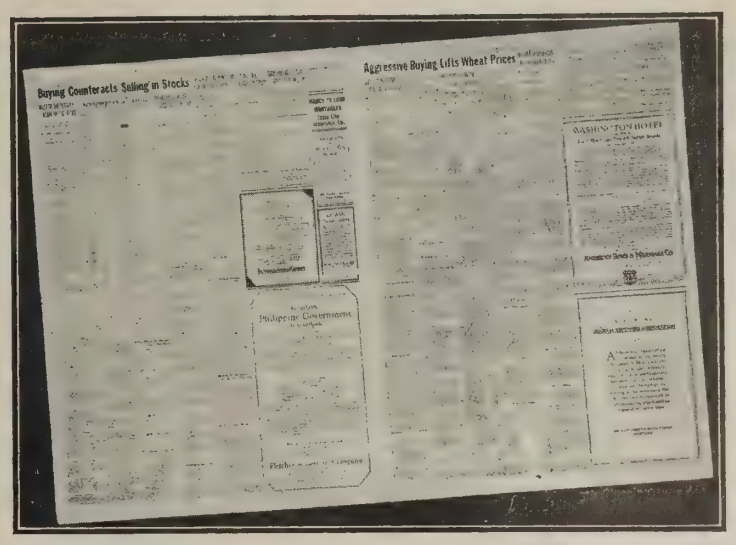
COTTON CO-OPS DROP PUBLICITY

South Carolina newspaper publishers are rejoicing over the fact that the South Carolina Co-operative Cotton Growers Protective Association, has decided to buy advertising space in newspapers, instead of sending out publicity disguised as news.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

DECISION FOR PRISK

To Editor & Publisher: In your issue of Jan. 15, 1927, you published an article reciting certain charges made by Belle McCord Roberts, minority stockholder, against the controlling directors of the Long Beach Press-Telegram Publishing Company, it being alleged that certain moneys the Press-Telegram Publishing Company had invested in Press-Telegram Building Company stock had been misappropriated. In a later issue you published an article from me giving the facts in the case in which I made the statement the plaintiff's interests in both companies were identically the same, that no injustice had been done plaintiff, and that there could be but one outcome when the case came to trial—complete vindication of the defendants. Recently (July 26) when the case came to trial it was thrown out of court, the defendants finding it unnecessary to call any witnesses. Judge Downs of the Superior Court, in rendering his decision, declared the plaintiff had failed entirely to substantiate her charges.



That justice may be done those who were unjustly charged with a serious offense, and suffered injury through the publication of the charges in Editor & Publisher, I ask you to give space in your valued journal to this communication.

Respectfully,
W. F. PRISK, President.
PRESS-TELEGRAM PUBLISHING COMPANY
Long Beach, Cal.

PLAINFIELD'S ADVERTISING

To Editor & Publisher: Upon page 12 of the July 23 issue, in the article dealing with community advertising, in the list of cities, Plainfield, N. J., has been omitted. Plainfield has launched a three-year national advertising campaign with an appropriation of $75,000. They are using practically all of the recognized mediums, such as newspapers, magazines, bill boards, etc.

L. W. Lowerre,
Joseph E. Hanson Co., Newark, N. J.

The NEWS Breaks Another Space-Buying Precedent!

IN a number of large cities, the leading morning paper carried, in 1926, three times the financial advertising linage of the leading evening paper.

But in Indianapolis it's different! In 1926, The INDIANAPOLIS NEWS, with its six evening issues a week, carried 15% more financial linage than the 7-day morning paper in Indianapolis.

Here, again, The NEWS breaks a space-buying precedent. . . . Another example showing the strong preference for the greater daily circulation, the greater city coverage, and the greater advertising prestige offered by The INDIANAPOLIS NEWS.

The INDIANAPOLIS NEWS
sells The Indianapolis Radius

FRANK T. CARROLL, Advertising Director

New York: DAN A. CARROLL, 110 East 42nd St.
Chicago: J. E. LUTZ, The Tower Bldg.

SAME SERVICE, AND MORE, AT HALF THE COS

Newspaper Campaign Demonstrated by Ad Bureau of A.N.P.A. to Give Infinitely More Coverage Far Lower Cost and Less Duplication Than List of Eight Leading Magazines

ALLEN B. SIKES, director of research of the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, is author of a booklet entitled "Coverage and Costs" issued under an Aug. 6 date by the Bureau. Permission this week was granted by William A. Thomson, director, to EDITOR & PUBLISHER to reproduce a portion of the book. It follows:

An advertiser with whom the bureau has been working, is spending his appropriation exclusively in eight women's magazines. He makes a product sold in grocery stores that would come under the general classification of "household supplies."

Discussing his sales and distribution problem, he made the statement that about 90 per cent of his business was done in between 150 to 175 cities of this country. He was anxious to see a comparison between the cost and the coverage of his current magazine advertising in the sections where the bulk of his business is done and similar figures to show what newspapers could offer him.

The bureau undertook to make such a comparison. Of course, it was not able to name individual newspapers, this being contrary to its rule. It did, however, base its calculation upon a study of 188 newspapers (chosen anonymously) circulating in and about the cities where the advertiser asserted that 90 per cent of his consumer sales occur.

The eight magazines being used by the advertiser are as follows: Ladies Home Journal, Pictorial Review, McCall's, Designer, Woman's Home Companion, Good Housekeeping, Woman's World, and Modern Priscilla. The circulation of these magazines in the zones where the bulk of the advertiser's business is conducted was considered as a basis for comparison of the magazine field with the newspaper field. This was done despite the fact that the national circulation of the magazines is sold to advertisers only in its entirely.

In order to arrive at relative costs, it was determined to make a comparison of a 10,000-line campaign in the 188 newspapers, as against ten single page advertisements in each of the eight women's magazines. Such a comparison seemed eminently fair since the space provided permitted the advertiser to have adequate representation at the most promising selling seasons of the year without being obligated to appear every month. It might have been thoroughly fair to magazine advertising to compare it with newspaper advertising on a line for line basis, but the Bureau, wishing to avoid all suggestion of bias, decided to provide for more than 50 per cent more newspaper space than would be used in the magazine campaign. This provision, while calling for smaller single insertions in the newspapers than in the magazines, provided very obviously, for a schedule of greater frequency than the current magazine program.

The bureau's analysis dwelt at length upon comparisons of size and effectiveness of newspaper and magazine advertisements and offered the following:

"In this connection, it should be remembered that a magazine page is about equal in area to one-quarter of a newspaper page. An advertisement occupying a full magazine page may thus be compared with one occupying one-quarter of a newspaper page because a page advertisement in a 200-page magazine occupies the same proportion to the total space in that publication as a one-quarter page advertisement would occupy in a 50-page newspaper number."

In the bureau's calculations, black and white copy in both media was taken as the basis of comparison. The number of families in the United States as shown by official figures and the number of families in each zone was also used for comparative purposes.

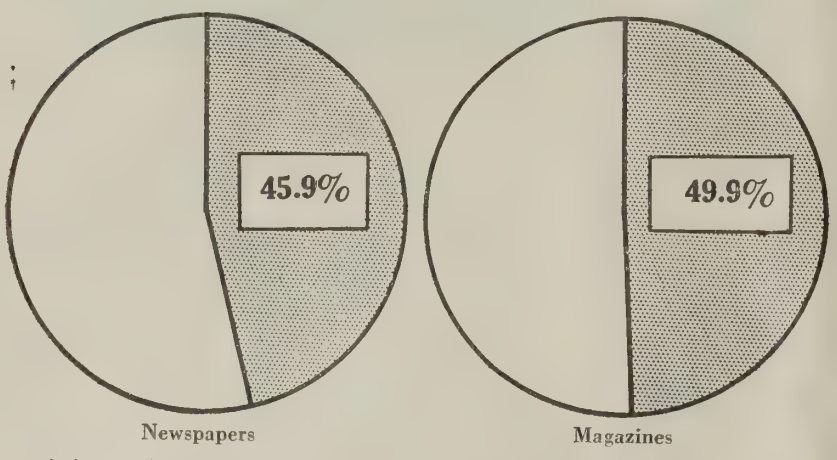
The 10,000 lines in the 188 newspapers entailed a total cost of $248,000 to reach a circulation of 12,068,416. The ten-page magazine campaign in the eight publications mentioned above, figures out $490,181 to reach a circulation of 13,107,967. Thus the cost of the newspaper campaign was about $20.56 per thousand of circulation reached and the cost of the magazine campaign was $37.20 per thousand circulation.

But when the circulation figures of newspapers and magazines are considered, a very interesting question comes up, that is, the question of duplicated circulation.

Various surveys have shown that the average women's magazine reading family reads anywhere from four to sixteen magazines per month. One women's magazine in an effort to show the needlessness of employing other women's magazines in a campaign claims to duplicate the circulation of every other worthwhile women's magazine 50 per cent. Still another reputable group of magazines in an exhaustive survey revealed that one magazine in this study duplicates the circulation of another 68 per cent.

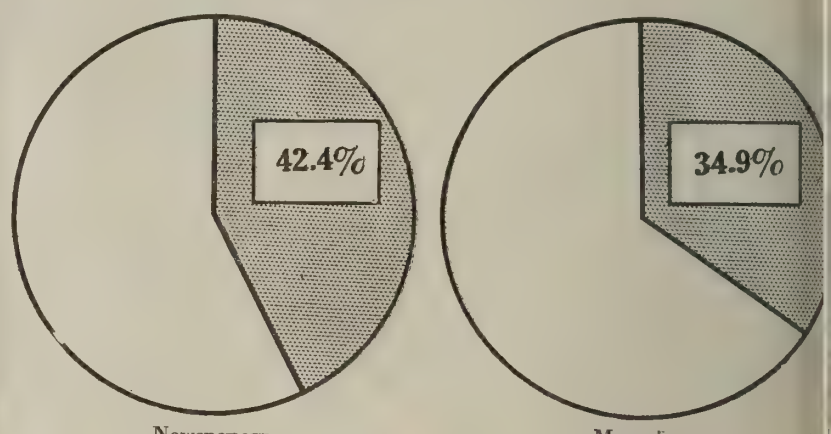
In the course of its investigation, the bureau questioned an experienced advertising man on this point and the latter replied:

"I believe that three of these magazines cover at least 65 per cent of the women's magazine readers. I should say there was between 35 per cent and 40 per cent duplication between the eight magazines used in this study."



To be conservative in this analysis, the bureau took 30 per cent off the circulation of each magazine in each zone to allow for duplication. This percentage is undoubtedly less than the percentage of duplication that actually exists.

Of the 188 newspapers used to this study, it was found that 29 were sold at a combination rate with 29 others. This would undoubtedly indicate some duplication of circulation among 58 newspapers. The Bureau accordingly reduced the circulation total of the 58 newspapers by the same figure it had used in estimating magazine duplication, 30 per cent. When these calculations for duplication were made, it reduced the newspaper circulation to 11,158,638, or a figure equal to 42.4 per cent of the total number of families in the United States.



When duplication among the magazines is considered, however, it reduces their coverage to 9,175,576 families or 34.9 per cent of the total number of families.

The allowance for duplication gives the magazines 7.5 per cent less coverage than the newspapers.

NATIONAL COVERAGE
(Not considering duplication)

NATIONAL COVERAGE
(When duplication is considered)

Again there is a variation when the calculations are reduced to figures for zones.

It was the opportunity for frequency of insertion that the newspaper campaign would allow that the Bureau stressed at some length. Newspapers appear each day. The magazines used in the comparison are published only once a month.

The 10 pages of magazine advertising would give an advertiser 131,079,676 impressions of his advertisement. On the other hand, the 10,000 lines of newspaper space could be split up according to the specific needs of each market. On this point, the bureau said to the advertiser:

"Should you wish your newspaper advertising to appear frequently throughout each of the ten months of the campaign, a judicious use of medium size and small reminder copy would make this possible. A schedule combination could be worked out which would consume about 1,000 lines during each month of the ten months' campaign, giving you at least eight insertions per month. This program would depend largely upon skillful copy treatment.

"These eight advertisements a month for ten months would provide 80 direct contacts with the 12,068,416 newspaper circulation, while the magazine campaign would provide only ten direct contacts with its 13,17,967 circulation.

"Furthermore, the 80 newspaper advertisements would appear in 80 newly published newspapers each one of which carries with it a renewal of reader interest.

"In other words, between the publication dates of the ten magazines which the advertiser would use monthly, eight new newspapers would carry your message to the newspaper readers, each new newspaper offering an opportunity to catch the reader's interest while it is keen.

"And finally, 80 insertions mean the amazing total of 965,473,280 impressions of the newspaper advertisement as compared with 131,079,670 impressions of the magazine advertisements.

"Should you wish to cut up a 10,000-line newspaper campaign into quar page advertisements, you would have contacts with the 12,068,416 newspa circulation through 15 newly publis newspapers, or a total of 181,026,240 pressions of your advertisement (appro mately 50 per cent more than the 1 $79,670 magazine impressions).

"It should also be borne in mind t the magazine campaign we are consid ing costs $490,181 with which we are co paring a newspaper campaign reach approximately the same numerical culation, costing $248,200, or practica one-half the magazine cost.

"Should you wish to use the 10,000 li on a page a month basis to permit three times a week insertion, you mi proceed as follows:

"The first week run one 500 line vertisement with two 75-line reminder a vertisements run on alternate days.

"The second week one 400 line adv tisement followed by two 75-line adv tisements as in the first week.

"The third week repeat the sched carried in the first. The fourth, repe the schedule carried in the second. T campaign would provide an intensive se ing effort for four months during the ye and would permit 48 contacts with t consuming public."

The study is even more vivid wh reduced to charts. These visualize cove age and cost not only in the country, b in each of the zones into which t country was subdivided.

For the purpose of this national stud the total number of families in t United States, 26,255,564, was taken as base unit.

If no question of duplication is co sidered, the 188 newspapers studied rea 12,068,416 of these families and the magazines reach 13,107,967.

The percentage these circulations be to the total number of families in t United States is indicated in the abo circles.

Take the very conservative figure 30 per cent as the allowance of duplic tion from magazines and their total ci culation drops to 9,175,576.

Allowing the same percentage for newspapers of the 188 which may sho duplication in circulation, the newspap figure becomes 11,158,638.

The percentage as compared with t total number of families in the Unit States changes as indicated.

The total cost of the suggested cam paign per thousand circulation would b

In Newspapers, $20.56.

In Magazines, $37.20.

The figures quoted above give the re ative cost of each campaign per thousa circulation without considering the que tion of duplication.

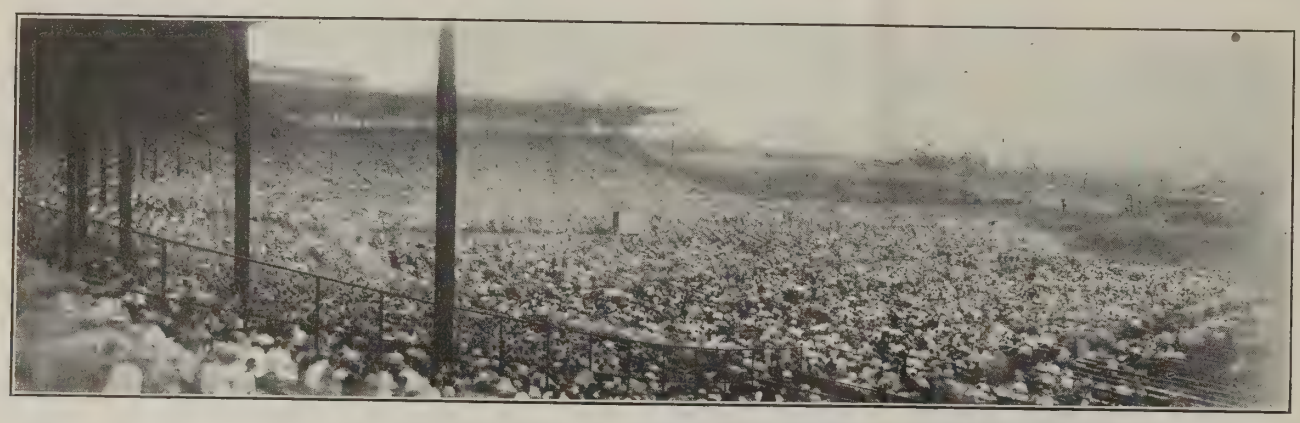
The total magazine cost is $490,181 a the total newspaper cost $248,200.

"KOHLER MAGAZINE REELS FOR GREATER PRODUCTION"

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS
HAS PURCHASED

72

KOHLER
MAGAZINE REELS



"THE KOHLER SYSTEM"

KOHLER BROTHERS
ENGINEERS AND MANUFACTURERS

CHICAGO
WRIGLEY BUILDING NORTH

NEW YORK
EVENING POST BUILDING

KANSAS CITY STAR GIVES PARTY TO 60,000 CELEBRATING FIRST YEAR OF STAFF OWNERSHIP

View of great throng which celebrated first anniversary of Kansas City Star's new ownership

THE Kansas City Star celebrated its first year of staff ownership Aug. 5 with a large part of Kansas City joining in the celebration.

More than 60,000 people were guests of the newspaper at an entertainment staged at Muehlebach field, the Kansas City baseball park, and an additional 20,000 were unable to secure admission.

The entertainment consisted of the presentation of "The Rough Riders," a motion picture of "super" proportions, a motion picture comedy, a band concert, and a display of pyrotechnics. Everything was free. The arrangements for the monster gathering were completed in such detail that the crowd was handled with great facility, traffic jams were avoided, and not a single accident was reported. The success of this detail was largely due to the numbers of staff men from the Star's editorial and business office, who personally supervised the police and ushers in caring for the crowds.

Seats had been provided for 43,000 people. These were soon filled and an additional 17,000 were admitted to find places on the terraces and walls of the park. Hundreds stood in the rear of the grandstand and in the back of the playing field throughout the two and a half hours of the entertainment.

Doors to the park opened at 6 o'clock, though the audience began to assemble outside the walls in the middle of the afternoon. The actual show lasted from 8 until 10:30 o'clock.

The Star announced its party through a series of full page ads and a number of news stories and feature cuts in the daily paper. This material all announced the "birthday party" for August 3. As that day approached bad weather set in and it was necessary to postpone the event two days. However, the town had been convinced of the magnitude of the entertainment awaiting it and attendance did not suffer.

One note of good taste in the party was a complete absence of any self-glorification or propaganda on the part of the host. A single subtitle at the opening of the picture read:

Welcome!
We Hope You Will Have A Good Time.
—The Kansas City Star.

In selecting "The Rough Riders" for this occasion the Star obtained a film peculiarly appropriate. The newspaper's constituents were familiar with the editorial association of Theodore Roosevelt with the Star and the response with which they greeted the appearance of the character of the late president on the screen indicated that he has lived as a great American figure in the minds of the community.

The projection of the picture before so large an audience was an event in the history of American amusement enterprises, according to representatives of the Paramount Famous Lasky corporation who assisted in staging the party. One screen served the entire gathering. This expanse of white canvas was 50 by 40 feet and is believed to be the largest screen ever erected in the United States. By an elaborate arrangement of distances and lenses, clear figures from four to six times the size of those in an ordinary picture theater were cast. The subtitles were easily legible to those in the back of the grand stand who were more than 500 feet away from the screen.

Both motion picture features were given a musical interpretation by a brass band of 125 pieces. The band played a concert before the picture program began.

Immediately following the feature picture the band struck up "The Long, Long Trail," and a large reproduction in colored fire of J. N. Darling's celebrated tribute to Roosevelt was lighted at the end of the field. As this was concluded another set piece duplicating the American flag was lighted, the band played "The Star Spangled Banner," in which the audience joined, bringing the unique "birthday party" to an impressive conclusion.

PLANS NEW DAILY

D. A. Grean of West Point, Miss., has taken over the Hempstead County Review Printing Company, Conway, Ark., which Curtis Cannon has been operating and is installing additional equipment. He may begin publication of a daily paper in the near future.

CELEBRATES 87th BIRTHDAY

The Pulaski (N. Y.) Democrat is this week celebrating its 87th anniversary. It is one of the oldest weekly newspapers in New York state and is one of the oldest business concerns in Pulaski. Byron G. Seamans has been editor since 1895.

TELLS PUBLIC OF FIGHT ON BILLBOARDS

Springfield Republican Describes Effort to Rid Mohawk Trail of Signs Within Sight of Road or Public Park

The billboard nuisance and the steps which have been taken to combat it along the famous Mohawk Trail in the Berkshires of Massachusetts were brought sharply to public attention in an illustrated feature story occupying page 1 of the magazine section of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican of Sunday, Aug. 7.

Due credit is given John E. Dwyer, outdoor advertising inspector of the Massachusetts Public Works Department. Working under a law seven years old, which restricts billboard advertising on any public way or on private property within public view from any highway, public park or reservation, Mr. Dwyer this summer launched a campaign against glaring signs along the Trail.

Law enforcement being in the hands of the county commissioners, their men went along the trail, notifying property owners that billboards on their land which did not conform to the regulations, must come down. The commission asked permission to trespass on the property for the purpose of tearing down the boards and when, in a few cases, this permission was refused, a writ setting a specific time for the removal of the signs was issued, and proved effective. Many offending boards were removed.

The campaign was successfully started, but it was blocked when several big advertising firms got together and secured an injunction against the state which prevents their signs being taken down until the case has been tried in court. There the issue now stands. Mr. Dwyer believes that eventually the case may go to the Supreme Court through a series of appeals.

COOLEY RESIGNS EDITORSHIP

E. H. Cooley has resigned as editor of the Great Falls (Mont.) Leader.

NEA Service newspictures are always on top of the news—or ahead of it.

NEA Service, Inc.,
1200 West Third Street
CLEVELAND, OHIO

The insignia that represents GOOD service.

Over 400 newspapers discovered a simple and practical solution to their checking proof problems, when they accepted our NEW and Complete Checking Proof Service. Under this plan the Publishers' office is relieved entirely of all detail work.

Less expensive—
Greater results.

(Two months' trial test offer)

The Advertising
CHECKING BUREAU Inc.
79 Madison Ave. NEW YORK — 538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO

Certified Stereotyping is Simplified Stereotyping

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION
340 Madison Avenue New York, N.Y.
For wet mat printing with DRY MAT facility — use CERTIFIEDS
MADE IN U.S.A.
MADE IN CERTIFIED DRY MATS THE USA

THERE IS A SIZE OF INTERTYPE IDEAL NEWS FACE FOR EVERY REQUIREMENT

The Ideal News face is cut in 5½ Point, 6½ Point, 7 Point and 8 Point. It is now being cut in 10 Point.

Here is a range of sizes for use from the most compact classified to feature stories.

Look at the one-line specimens that are shown below. Read a column of the 8 Point specimen. . . . The Intertype Ideal News face has been endorsed by publishers and optometrists throughout the country because Intertype designers have preserved faithfully the easy-reading characteristics of a familiar face that readers have been accustomed to for years.

5½ Pt. Intertype Ideal News
THE INTERTYPE consists of a single basic unit with equipment which m

6½ Pt. Intertype Ideal News
THE INTERTYPE consists of a single basic unit with equipme

7 Pt. Intertype Ideal News
THE INTERTYPE consists of a single basic unit with equip

8 Pt. Intertype Ideal News
THE INTERTYPE consists of a single basic unit with equi

8 Point Solid

It has been said that "all reading demands an effort." To produce a type for newspaper use which can be read almost without effort is a problem which has engaged the attention of Intertype designers for several years.

The solution of this problem resulted in the production of the Intertype News Series. This new series is meeting the unqualified approval of all those who believe that types should be made for the needs of the newspaper reader.

The qualities which make the Intertype News Series easy to read are not free from the usual mannerisms of the standard newspaper type faces. The Intertype News Series conforms to the familiar and friendly design to which the majority of newspaper readers are accustomed, and yet gives a clearness to print which is not to be had by the use of ordinary light-face type.

It's Like an Old Friend

Intertype established the fact that easy-to-read type is familiar type. Unfamiliar type quickly tires the eyes. Intertype then set about to improve familiar type. The changes from old standards were, in most instances, not of great importance, but most of them were in directions that have heretofore been avoided by type-makers.

The hairlines of Intertype News

8 Point, One Point Leaded

It has been said that "all reading demands an effort." To produce a type for newspaper use which can be read almost without effort is a problem which has engaged the attention of Intertype designers for several years.

The solution of this problem resulted in the production of the Intertype News Series. This new series is meeting the unqualified approval of all those who believe that types should be made for the needs of the newspaper reader.

The qualities which make the Intertype News Series easy to read are not free from the usual mannerisms of the standard newspaper type faces. The Intertype News Series conforms to the familiar and friendly design to which the majority of newspaper readers are accustomed, and yet gives a clearness to print which is not to be had by the use of ordinary light-face type.

It's Like an Old Friend

Intertype established the fact that easy-to-read type is familiar type. Unfamiliar type quickly tires the eyes. Intertype then set about to improve familiar type. The changes from old standards were, in most instances, not of great importance, but

8 Point, Two Point Leaded

It has been said that "all reading demands an effort." To produce a type for newspaper use which can be read almost without effort is a problem which has engaged the attention of Intertype designers for several years.

The solution of this problem resulted in the production of the Intertype News Series. This new series is meeting the unqualified approval of all those who believe that types should be made for the needs of the newspaper reader.

The qualities which make the Intertype News Series easy to read are not free from the usual mannerisms of the standard newspaper type faces. The Intertype News Series conforms to the familiar and friendly design to which the majority of newspaper readers are accustomed, and yet gives a clearness to print which is not to be had by the use of ordinary light-face type.

It's Like an Old Friend

Intertype established the fact that easy-to-read type is familiar type. Unfamiliar type quickly tires the eyes. Intertype then set about to im-

Intertype matrices will run in other slug-casting machines

Write nearest branch for larger specimens

Standardized INTERTYPE TRADE MARK

Designed in 5½, 6½, 7 and 8 Point

INTERTYPE CORPORATION: New York 1440 Broadway; Chicago 130 N. Franklin St.; Memphis McCall Bldg.; San Francisco 560 Howard St.; Los Angeles 1240 S. Main St.; Boston 80 Federal St.; London; Berlin

BROUN, NOTED COLUMNIST, GOES ON STRIKE

(Continued from page 5)

the two described as "extravagant" by the World, follows:

"When at last Judge Thayer in a tiny voice passed sentence upon Sacco and Vanzetti, a woman in the court room said with terror: 'It is death condemning life!'

"The men in Charlestown Prison are shining spirits, and Vanzetti has spoken with an eloquence not known elsewhere within our time. They are too bright, we shield our eyes and kill them. We are the dead, and in us there is not feeling nor imagination nor the terrible torment of lust for justice. And in the city where we sleep smug gardeners walk to keep the grass above our little houses sleek and cut whatever blade thrusts up a head above its fellows.

"'The decision is unbelievably brutal,' said the Chairman of the Defense Committee, and he was wrong. The thing is worthy to be believed. It has happened. It will happen again, and the shame is wider than that which must rest upon Massachusetts. I have never believed that the trial of Sacco and Vanzetti was one set apart from many by reason of the passion and prejudice which encrusted all the benches. Scratch through the varnish of any judgment seat and what will you strike but hate thick-clotted from centuries of angry verdicts? Did any man ever find power within his hand except to use it as a whip?

"Gov. Alvan T. Fuller never had any intention in all his investigation but to put a new and higher polish upon the proceedings. The justice of the business was not his concern. He hoped to make it respectable. He called old men from high places to stand behind his chair so that he might seem to speak with all the authority of a high priest or a Pilate.

"What more can these immigrants from Italy expect? It is not every prisoner who has a President of Harvard University throw on the switch for him. And Robert Grant is not only a former Judge but one of the most popular dinner guests in Boston. If this is a lynching, at least the fish peddler and his friend the factory hand may take unction to their souls that they will die at the hands of men in dinner coats or academic gowns, according to the conventionalities required by the hour of execution.

"Already too much has been made of the personality of Webster Thayer. To sympathizers of Sacco and Vanzetti he has seemed a man with a cloven hoof. But in no usual sense of the term is this man a villain. Although probably not a great jurist, he is without doubt as capable and conscientious as the average Massachusetts Judge, and if that's enough to warm him in wet weather by all means let him stick the compliment against his ribs.

"Webster Thayer has a thousand friends. He has courage, sincerity and convictions. Judge Thayer is a good man, and when he says that he made every effort to give a fair trial to the Anarchists brought before him, undoubtedly he thinks it and he means it. Quite often I've heard the remark: 'I wonder how that man sleeps at night?' On this point I have no first hand information, but I venture to guess that he is no more beset with uneasy dreams than most of us. He saw his duty and he thinks he did it.

"And Gov. Fuller, also, is not in any accepted sense of the word a miscreant. Before becoming Governor he manufactured bicycles. Nobody was cheated by his company. He loves his family and pays his debts. Very much he desires to be Governor again, and there is an excellent chance that this ambition will be gratified. Other Governors of Massachusetts have gone far, and it is not fantastic to assume that some day he might be President. His is not a master mind, but he is a solid and substantial American, chiming in heartily with all our national ideals and aspirations.

"To me the tragedy of the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti lies in the fact that this was not a deed done by crooks and knaves. In that case we could have a campaign with the slogan 'turn the rascals out,' and set up for a year or two a reform Administration. Nor have I had much patience with any who would like to punish Thayer by impeachment or any other process. Unfrock him and his judicial robes would fall upon a pair of shoulders not different by the thickness of a fingernail. Men like Holmes and Brandeis do not grow on bushes. Popular government, as far as the eye can see, is always going to be administered by the Thayers and Fullers.

"It has been said that the question at issue was not the guilt or innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti but whether or not they received a fair trial. I will admit that this commands my interest to some extent, but still I think it is a minor phase in the whole matter. From a Utopian point of view the trial was far from fair, but it was not more biased than a thousand which take place in this country every year. It has been pointed out that the Public Prosecutor neglected to call certain witnesses because their testimony would not have been favorable to his case. Are there five District Attorneys, is there one, in the whole country who would do otherwise?

"Again Prof. Frankfurter has most clearly shown that the prosecution asked a trick question in regard to the pistol, and made the expert seem to testify far more concretely than he was willing to commit himself. That was very wrong, but not unique. Our judicial processes are so arranged that it is to the interest of District Attorneys to secure convictions rather than to ascertain justice, and if it would profit his case, there is not one who would not stoop to confuse the issue in the minds of the jurymen.

"Eleven of the twelve who convicted Sacco and Vanzetti are still alive, and Gov. Fuller talked to them. He reports somewhat naively that they all told him that they considered the trial fair. Did he expect them to report, 'Why, no, Governor, we brought in a verdict of guilty just out of general depravity'?

"But now there has been a long and careful sifting of the evidence in the case. It is ridiculous to say that Sacco and Vanzetti are being railroaded to the chair. The situation is much worse than that. This is a thing done cold-bloodedly and with deliberation. But care and deliberation do not guarantee justice. Even every venerable college President in t country tottered forward to say 'guilt they could not alter facts. The tragec of it all lies in the fact that though Southern mountain man may move mo quickly to a dirty deed of violence, h feet are set no more firmly in the pa of prejudice than a Lowell amblir sedately to a hanging.

"I said of Calvin Coolidge that I ac mired his use of 'I do not choose,' b he was dealing with a problem whol personal and had every right to withhol his reasons. For Gov. Fuller I can't sa the same. These are the lives of othe with which he is dealing. In his fairl long statement he answers not a sing point which has been made against t justice of the conviction. The deliber tions of himself and his associates we secret, and seemingly it is his intentic that they shall remain secret. A gentl man does not investigate and tell.

"I've said these men have slept, b from now on it is our business to mak them toss and turn a little, for a cr should go up from many million voice before the day set for Sacco and Va zetti to die. We have a right to be against tight minds with our fists an shout a word into the ears of the o men. We want to know, we will know 'Why?'"

All for One

An Advertisement of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company

A SLEET storm descends, carrying down trees and wires. A wind turns outlaw and blows down a pole line. Or some swollen river rampages through a circuit of destruction.

But wherever angry nature attacks the Bell Telephone System there are repairmen trained to meet the emergency, and everywhere trained in the same schools to the use of the same efficient tools. Supplies of surplus equipment and materials are kept at strategic points whence they may be rushed by train or truck to the devastated area.

Throughout the Bell System, all construction and practice are standard, so that men and supplies, when necessary, may be sent from one state or company to another.

There are twenty-five Bell Companies, but only one Bell System—and but one Bell aim and ideal; stated by President Walter S. Gifford as:

"A telephone service for this nation, so far as humanly possible free from imperfections, errors and delays, and enabling anyone anywhere at any time to pick up a telephone and talk to anyone else anywhere else in this country, clearly, quickly and at a reasonable cost."

248,765

was the average net paid daily circulation of The Baltimore Sun (morning and evening issues) for the month of

July, 1927

The average net paid circulation of THE SUNDAY SUN per Sunday for the month of July, 1927, was 195,542.

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

The GIRL WHO PLAYED SAFE

by HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR

Claudia Merrill lived in a small town.

She was younger and prettier than her sister, and it wasn't her fault when her sister's fiance caught her in his arms one night on the porch.

But the older girl's jealousy drove Claudia from Main Street to New York, where she tried to make a living by writing.

How she met Clifford Doran, who showered her with expensive gifts, but who could not win her, and how she finally chose true love instead of money, is excitingly told in her latest love-problem serial of Greenwich Village and New York society life.

By Hazel Deyo Batchelor

In 60 Installments

LEDGER SYNDICATE

Philadelphia, Pa.

Members of the United Press are well represented at every "news front." In the foreground of the accompanying photograph are H. R. H. the Prince of Wales (left) and Premier King of Canada (right). Between them is Morris DeHaven Tracy, United Press staff correspondent.

UNITED PRESS

What the Auto
platemaking
Pressroom wi
Another revo

te has done for
New Wood
o for printing.
on is at hand.

EDITORIAL

READING NOTICES

SOME weeks ago EDITOR & PUBLISHER suggested that advertising managers of newspapers urge the good old fashioned "reading notice" on advertisers and agents who insist upon the insertion of press agent offerings. From our correspondence we gather that a number of managements are following this suggestion. It is making some linage for them. The method is very simple. When a press agent offering is received the words should be counted as if for a reading notice and a computation made for one-time insertion. The advertiser should then be notified that the paper will be glad to insert the notice, marked advertising, for the price named.

It seems a pitiful waste that so much good advertising copy as that which is being produced by press and advertising agents should be merely tossed into the scrap baskets. Advertisers evidently want these utterances read by the public and, except for the grafters who are out for something for nothing, many would be willing to pay the reading notice rate, when newspaper managements are firm in demanding that the stuff appear as advertising.

It might not be amiss to inform some of the agents who insistently demand free space, on the theory that the publisher desires to accommodate those who often buy space, that it is wholly unethical to publish advertising in news columns and that it is also a bit of a fraud on Uncle Sam who charges a higher postal rate for advertising than for editorial matter and expects publishers to credit honestly all advertising material.

Westbrook Pegler has succeeded in selling a story to Liberty on alleged sport news grafting but beyond asserting that it does and doesn't exist, that sports men may be both clean and dirty, and beyond casting general reflections of doubt, Mr. Pegler "doan say."

CURTAIN FOR McNAUGHT'S

THE promising little magazine called McNaught's Monthly rang down the final curtain of publication with the August number and in a statement to subscribers its editors say that the four-year experiment in producing this periodical taught them that "the people do not want opinion, or interpretation, and that they do want pictures and entertainment." The editors are also convinced that the public is impressed by bulk and evidences of financial strength and cannot take seriously a small periodical which strives chiefly to feed the minds of its readers, rather than sell widely and make money for its publisher.

We wonder if this opinion is based on fact. Certainly McNaught's was never designed for the thoughtless rabble that is so easily impressed by bulk, gregariously follows any bizarre leader and delights to bask in the reflected glory of financial strength. It was rather designed for the minority of discriminating, intelligent, liberal and earnest people who do crave information, are appreciative of interpretation and are tolerant of the opinions of others. It is incredible that this minority is not sufficiently large to handsomely support a magazine, or a dozen of them, irrespective of the conventional forms of entertainment.

We believe that newspaper editors will agree with us that the market for interpretative news is very much alive and that editorial opinion, when vigorous, intelligent and leading is as strong an asset in the field as it has been in 20 years.

It is our feeling that McNaught's never lived up to its early promise. It was a free magazine and in a position to take some leadership in the liberal field. But it usually spoke in whispers. It carried some good stuff from some able writers but in the large sense did not use its freedom or demonstrate character which would create active and repeated demand for copies.

And the answer to this is found in the statement of the editors who admit that the magazine was a side-issue and was regarded as an interference with other responsibilities. They also admit that the magazine was not strongly pushed or advertised. Therefore we cannot agree that the failure of the venture may properly be traced to the causes that the editors have assigned.

For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.—St. Matthew, VII; 8.

CREDIT TO THE PRESS

THE fair and impartial manner in which the daily press of the country, with but a few notable exceptions, has handled the Sacco and Vanzetti situation in recent months is a rebuke to those who contend that our newspapers have become so commercialized that editors no longer dare to publish news that is obnoxious to the so-called "ruling class" and that impartial opinion, based on the fundamentals of truth and honor, is prostrate.

The American press has given to the people a fair statement of the facts surrounding this extremely serious and bitterly controversial criminal case. There has been no news development, of which we are aware, that has not been honestly presented to the reading public. The official statements have been published in their entirety. The reporting has been careful and the presentation of the matter, by and large, has followed the best traditions of the journalistic code. Editorial opinion has been most carefully considered. Editors who have believed with the jury, judge, governor and his advisors that the evidence was sufficient for conviction have plainly declared that the law should take its course, without respect to the world-wide agitation in favor of the men. Equally outspoken were editors who conscientiously believed that there was a reasonable doubt, that the governor should have supported his views with evidence rather than assertions and that no judge who had been criticized as having been guilty of "a grave breach of official decorum" should have been permitted to rule on the final pleas.

Boston and New York newspaper men were first to give to the public the facts in regard to doubts in the case. The chief editorial writer of Boston Herald received a Pulitzer prize for his courageous exposition of the questionable facts. Many other newspapers took up the issue and the discussion went on for months and was so complete that it seems incredible that anyone looking for the facts could not have found complete satisfaction in news columns and also a spirited opinion controversy in editorial columns.

At the eleventh hour, when Gov. Fuller was being asked by new counsel for the accused to act on a plea for an additional respite, at least two great newspapers, New York World and Springfield Republican, issued editorial leaders addressed to the Governor petitioning him to stay the executions out of respect for the opinion and conscience of a large portion of the civilized world that a reasonable doubt existed. Springfield Republican took up certain portions of the evidence in the case and also the report of the Governor's advisory committee and made such a strong point out of the committee's condemnation of the trial judge for a grave breach of official decorum that it seemed incredible that the Governor would not heed it. The editor pointed out that the conduct of the judge alone warranted a commutation of sentence to life imprisonment and exclaimed, "The Commonwealth's record should be without a single blemish, without a self-inflicted scar."

A few years ago when Attorney General Palmer started his so-called "radical" raids so many newspapers entered into the spirit of that infamous piece of political witch-chasing that the reputation of the American press suffered heavily. The folly of it has since been revealed to every sensible newspaper man. We rejoice that in the bitter Massachusetts tragedy, fraught with grave dangers to the reputation of our democracy, the American press in general stood for principle and honor and free discussion that the people might know.

WHAT THINK YOU?

WHAT are the great problems which confron newspaper publishers today? This questio was put to a publisher of a middle-west cit recently and he made an interesting and novel re sponse, which we quote herewith hoping that the si points raised will stir a response from readers. Th publisher said:

"I regard the following as the principal problem confronting the newspaper publisher of today: (1 Indifference of the public to worthy editorial effor referring especially to the editorial page.

"(2) Cynicism of those who are not indifferent.

"(3) Lack of moral courage on the part of asso ciates in the profession who, seeing the public's atti tude, do not strive to correct the situation by worth effort. Rather, they yield to it and let their news papers become mere conveyors of news, money grab bers, even getting money dishonestly.

"(4) Propaganda, in all its forms, which not onl absorbs money that could and should be spent i legitimate advertising, but worms its way into th columns of publications, hurting them editorially.

"(5) Biggest problem of the press, on the whol is the great prosperity of the country which not onl gives great strength to strong publications, enablin them to overwhelm the weaker, but contributes t the general delinquency of the public in regard t public affairs.

"(6) Low average level in moral character o editorial men."

Friends are to the newspaper or advertising man what goods on the shelf are to the merchant.

JAPANESE CALLER

A CALLER at EDITOR & PUBLISHER office durin the week was Seiichi Uyeno, managing directo of Asahi, the great Japanese daily which published both at Tokio and Osaka. Mr. Uyeno wa enroute from Japan to Geneva where he will atten the League of Nations press conference.

Two famous Japanese families have owned an operated the Asahi for more than a century, employ ing at present more than 3,000 persons. The pape subscribes to all services and also maintains its ow correspondents in the chief cities of the world.

Asahi is one of the world's most enterprising pape and only recently produced as a supplement an editio titled "Present Day Japan," done in English, profuse illustrated in colors and gravure printing and co taining quite the most elaborate exposition of fac concerning Japanese industry, art and commerce th has come to our notice. This supplement was distrib uted among Americans in various fields of activit

---

Let the story tell itself.

STEP BY STEP

THERE is no end to the gentle art of compromi when principle is lost sight of in favor of e pediency. In England, following the war, matr monial scandals became so ugly and smelly in th press that the bigwigs decided that the world migh get a "false impression" of modern society and pre ently the Judicial Proceedings Act was passed pro hibiting newspapers from printing any of the testimon in divorce proceedings, though they might continu to state that a named individual, of stated addres had brought suit for divorce on specified ground There has been an active demand ever since.

It is not astonishing now to learn that the lawye and influential clients in the English divorce cour still are dissatisfied with the suppression privileg that the law affords them. They seek to have su pressed the names and addresses of divorce litigant In other words, the press must be wholly silence in reference to matrimonial litigation. Certain Eng lish newspapers have stated recently that variou tricks are being employed to obtain complete secre in the divorce courts, sometimes with judges assis ing. In one case the papers were withheld from th reporters and to prevent a newspaper man from ge ting the identities of the litigants by attending th trial the witnesses wrote their names and address on slips of paper and handed them to the judge.

PERSONAL

LBERT H. Baker, president of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, is on the cific Coast, visiting his son, Alton, who ently acquired a daily paper in Eue, Ore., and another son, Frank, pubier of the Tacoma Ledger.

Curtis B. Johnson, publisher of the rlotte (N. C.) Observer, left several s ago for New York, from which port expected to sail for Europe for a rt vacation.

Paul Block, president of Paul Block, ., attended the opening of the Ziegfeld lies in Boston last week, with Mayor nes J. Walker of New York.

William M. Glenn, publisher of the lando (Fla.) Sentinel, and Mrs. Glenn, d L. E. Reagin, publisher of the Sara- Times, sailed last week on the nch liner De Grasse for a six weeks' to Europe.

. G. Kelly, editor and publisher of the lla Walla (Wash.) Bulletin, is in nolulu on a vacation trip.

William J. Robertson, former editor of Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening, written a book entitled "The Chang- South," which is to be published, ly in the fall, by Boni & Liveright, w York.

Col. Theodore Townsend, editor of the lford (Del.) Chronicle, figured in an omobile collision a few days ago near banon, Del. Both cars were badly ecked and the occupants shaken up, none was seriously hurt.

Col. James C. Wickes, editor and pubher of the Dover (Del.) State News, few days ago was presented with a tary button, set with a diamond.

H. H. Hudson, publisher of the Titusle (Fla.) Star-Advocate, recently rened from a three weeks' trip with his nily to Baltimore and Cleveland. He s formerly with the advertising dertment of the Cleveland Press.

Andrew A. Strauch, aged 73 years, eran editor of the Chadwick (Ill.) rion, was stricken while on a train route to Chicago and when he arrived re was taken to a hospital. His conion this week was reported to be ious. He has been editor of the Clari- since 1898.

Joe Leonard, editor and publisher of Gainesville (Tex.) Daily Register, s been announced as winner of the $75 st prize offered by the Gateway Club El Paso, following the Texas Press sociation convention in that city, for best story written about El Paso.

Dr. Charles R. Skinner, former editor the Watertown (N. Y.) Times, celeated his 83rd birthday, Aug. 3. Dr. inner was for years a prominent ure at the state capitol in Albany where served as correspondent, and later a islator and legislative librarian. As member of Congress, he proposed the w which now provides for the use of cial delivery stamps in U. S. mails.

Charles E. Hewitt, manager of the nawanda (N. Y.) News, was reected a member of the local board of ucation for a third term.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

L. ZALK will resign as manager of the promotion and advertising servdepartments of the St. Paul Dispatch d Pioneer Press and will become protion manager of the Columbus (O.) Dispatch Sept. 1.

H. H. Fris, general manager of the Phoenix (Ariz.) Gazette, is visiting in uthern California.

Alfred T. Ward, assistant treasurer of e Chicago Tribune, is spending his cation in southern California.

R. A. Reeder, assistant publisher of e Miami (Fla.) Daily News, is vacaning in Tennessee.

Gordon Nye has been appointed protion manager of the Miami (Fla.) ily News, succeeding Robert E. Murly who is now handling special advertising. Mr. Nye was formerly promotion manager of the Chicago Evening American.

A. A. Young, office manager of the Miami (Fla.) Daily News, is on a three weeks' holiday in New York City and northern cities.

Mary Cahill, for the greater part of the past four years with the syndicate department of the Chicago Tribune, has been transferred to the Public Service office as secretary to Hugh Donaldson. She also has charge of the Educational Information bureau.

Ray A. Washburn, recently in charge of the Eastern branch of the Chicago Tribune business survey, is now doing advertising promotion work on the New York Herald Tribune.

R. R. Johnston, who recently joined the national department staff of the New York Herald Tribune, was formerly with the Woman's Home Companion and Colliers'.

Victor B. Johnson, formerly advertising manager of several New York stores, and previously national account executive of the Street Railways Advertising Company, has joined the local advertising staff of the New York Herald Tribune.

David R. Hirsch, formerly assistant to L. L. Heaton, classified advertising manager of the New York Herald Tribune, is now a member of the local department.

Clifford A. Burgett, formerly of the Chicago Tribune, has joined the books department of the New York Herald Tribune.

J. H. Apeler, formerly in charge of advertising of the suburban roto tabloid sections of the New York Times, is now on the advertising staff of the New York Herald Tribune magazine.

Joseph F. Lazar, formerly on the auto section of the New York Times, has joined the New York Herald Tribune national department.

Bertram Moyer, formerly with the New York Times, is now on the New York Herald Tribune book section.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

PAUL BELLAMY, managing editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, is spending his vacation with his family in Boston, Springfield and other New England cities.

Lester R. MacLellan of the Boston Advertiser photographic department and president of the Press Photographers' Association of Boston, has returned after serving for two weeks as official photographer at the C.M.T.C. at Ft. Adams, Newport, R. I.

Curtis Shattuck has joined the staff of the Juneau (Alaska) Daily Empire as reporter.

James Haberlin, formerly telegraph editor in Binghamton, N. Y., has joined the copy desk of the Springfield (Mass.) Union.

D. D. Weldon, formerly of the Corpus Christi Times, has joined the staff of the San Antonio Evening News.

Louis P. Rosenthal, former member of the Watertown (N. Y.) Standard staff, now manager of the American bank in

(Continued on page 32)

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

FIRST a printer's devil at the age of fourteen, then for several years a full-fledged craftsman; then a bicycle-riding news gatherer; finally city editor and ultimately managing editor, the climax of approximately 25 years of service (now about 44 years) on the Davenport (Ia.) Democrat — such are the high spots in the newspaper career of Ralph W. Cram.

RALPH W. CRAM

The phrase, "bicycle-riding" news gatherer needs, perhaps, some amplification. It was in 1889, when the city of Davenport was still in the large village class and the Democrat was beginning to spread its wings to soar farther afield in the daily newspaper class that Mr. Cram became the paper's first reporter, as reporters are known today. To facilitate news gathering, the youngster was equipped with a bicycle and for some time his beat (the whole town) was covered therewith.

His able handling of news and his ability to make friends commended Mr. Cram to the owners of the paper and in 1903 he was made city editor. Five years later he stepped into the editor's chair where he has been ever since.

Although Mr. Cram is widely known and quoted as a writer of pertinent, wholesome and optimistic editorials, he is still a reporter at heart and for many years has attended events at national news centers, chiefly national conventions of both the Republican and Democratic parties, to write for his paper.

As one of the founders of the Davenport Aero Club, official observer for the Aero Club of America and vice-president and Governor for Iowa of the National Aeronautic Association, he is recognized as one of the leading civilian authorities on aviation in the country. He has participated as an observer and passenger in several cross country flights and national air tours, and is the author of numerous articles and booklets on flying in its various phases.

WILL ROGERS DAILY DISPATCHES

ONE OF THE MOST POPULAR AND CERTAINLY THE TIMELIEST FEATURE APPEARING IN THE PAPERS TODAY.

SENT EVERY NIGHT PRESS RATE COLLECT

JOIN THE LONG LIST OF REPRESENTATIVE PAPERS PUBLISHING THIS SERVICE. WIRE US COLLECT.

THE McNAUGHT SYNDICATE, INC.

V. V. McNITT, President — Times Bldg. New York, N. Y. — CHARLES V. McADAM, Vice-President

FIRST BIRTHDAY Sept. 19

The page not yet a year old but already being used by exactly 50 papers.

Since so many papers running strips don't have comic sections the page ranks as an astounding success right along with the Ella Cinders strip which is already in 126 papers.

ELLA CINDERS PAGE

By Bill Conselman and Charlie Plumb

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr., General Manager — Earl J. Hadley, Associate

150 Nassau Street, New York City

Note: The strip started only June 1, 1925.

(Continued from page 31)

Managua, Nicaragua, visited friends in New York and Watertown this week on a motor tour with his wife and sister.

J. Henry Fannan, of the South Bend Tribune staff, is now on the copy desk, Indianapolis Star.

Alan Craig Faith, on the staff of the Pacific Builder & Engineer, Seattle, for two years, has joined the Cordova (Alaska) Times as editor.

Max Hahn of the copy desk of the Toledo Blade, author of "Outlines of Science," has returned to work after a vacation spent in the East, mostly in New York.

Clyde E. Knox of the copy desk of the Toledo Blade has returned to work after having spent wo weeks at his summer cottage on Crotch Lake, near Sturgis, Mich. Mrs. Knox accompanied him.

Fred L. Norris, formerly of the Toledo Blade and the News-Bee, has returned to the copy desk of the Blade after having been engaged in a publicity campaign in the eastern part of the United States.

Edward Sothern Hipp, dramatic critic of the Newark Sunday Call, has returned from a vacation to the Thousand Islands.

Sanford Barnett and James I. Rush, of the suburban staff of the Newark Evening News, have returned from their vacations in the South.

Henry Hicks, formerly of the San Jose (Cal.) Mercury-Herald, has joined the editorial staff of the Eureka (Cal.) Humboldt Standard.

Gerald J. Mullany, of the editorial staff of the Eureka (Cal.) Humboldt Standard, will attend the American Legion convention at Paris on September 19 to 23. He will attend the World's Series baseball games on the return trip.

Charles McLean, who left the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch to become associated with the New York American, will be a companion of Bert Acosta in the national air derby to be run from New York to Spokane, Wash., in September. McLean was a second lieutenant in aviation during the World War. When Miami, Fla., was devastated by a storm last year, he was the first man to reach the stricken zone with anti-toxin, flying there as a representative of the Times-Dispatch.

Fred G. Usilton, editor of the Kent News, weekly printed at Chestertown, Md., has been elected president of the Kent County Savings Bank of that town.

Theodore E. Buell, formerly managing editor of the New Haven Union and at one time connected with newspapers in Bridgeport, Hartford, Trenton and Atlantic City, is now on the staff of the Asbury Park Press, conducting a column entitled "Boardwalk Banter."

Theodore Lucas has been added to the staff of the Asbury Park Press. He is a Wesleyan University alumnus.

C. A. Morton, formerly of the Boston Transcript, has joined the editorial staff of the Toledo News-Bee.

C. A. Stevens, formerly of the Washtenaw Post, Ann Harbor, Mich., is on the copy desk of the Toledo News-Bee.

Eli Ives (Ike) Collins of the Jersey Journal, Jersey City, is on vacation in Branford, Conn., at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rodman Collins.

Rev. Harvey M. Eastman, columnist and Slatersville (R. I.) correspondent of the Woonsocket (R. I.) Call, and also pastor of the Slatersville Congregational Church, is taking a summer course at the Union Theological Seminary, New York.

John L. Powers, copy desk, Worcester (Mass.) Post, is acting managing editor in the absence of Clarence L. Wilson, who is on a leave of absence.

Irving Sussman, member of the art department of the New York Evening Graphic, sailed for Europe last week with Mrs. Sussman. He plans to visit Paris. Rome, and Berlin as well as his parents in Horodel, Poland, whom he has not seen for six years. Mr. Sussman is known chiefly for his composite photographs, created in co-operation with Harry Grogin.

Joseph R. Farrington, managing editor of the Honolulu Star Bulletin, has been vacationing in Los Angeles, Cal.

John R. Aborn of the Providence (R. I.) Journal staff, and Miss Helene Cecelia Hesse of Providence have announced their engagement.

John S. Thorpe of the New York Evening World staff, has been made editor of the Municipal Business Men's Magazine. This journal is issued quarterly and is concerned with matter that appeals to business men. The publication office is at 154 Nassau street, New York. Mr. Thorpe retains his connection with the Evening World.

MARRIED

MISS ELEANOR McCORMICK STONE, granddaughter of Melville E. Stone, for 26 years general manager of the Associated Press and now its counselor, to Dr. James William Toumey, Jr., at York Harbor, Me.

Francis C. Mahoney of the editorial staff of the New Bedford (Mass.) Standard, to Miss Lucy B. Leonard at New Bedford recently.

Lloyd E. Thorpe, editor of the Seattle (Wash.) Pulp and Paper Magazine, to Miss Berenice duRae, former secretary to the School of Journalism at the University of Washington, in Seattle, July 28.

Garry A. Willard, 2d, associated with his uncle, Garry A. Willard, in publishing the Boonville (N. Y.) Herald and Willard Press, to Miss Mary Skinner of Hammonton, N. J., Aug. 6.

John H. Griffin of Holyoke, Mass., staff reporter on the Boston Herald, to Miss Alice L. Barry, English instructor in the Peabody (Mass.) High School in Peabody, Aug. 3.

Alphonse M. Link, state editor of the Dubuque (Ia.) Telegraph-Herald, to Miss Valerie E. Sindelar, of Protivin, Ia., Aug. 3.

Charles E. Goff, of the Des Moines (Ia.) Register Tribune engraving department, to Miss Fay McRae of Des Moines, Aug. 3.

Charles W. Moore, of the Des Moines (Ia.) Register-Tribune editorial department, to Miss Gertrude Gamble, of Des Moines, in Evanston, Ill., Aug. 3.

H. D. Meister, publisher Yoakum (Tex.) Daily and Weekly Herald, to Miss Aloysia S. Overbay at Gonzales, Tex.

Carey Beasley Taylor, former telegraph editor of the Asheville (N. C.) Citizen and Savannah (Ga.) Press, and Miss Annie Lee Pope, July 18 at Winston-Salem.

Wilbur Morris, a reporter on the Springfield (O.) News, Miss Gladys Scarff at Springfield.

Robert W. Barros, Jr., composing room force Worcester (Mass.) Telegram-Gazette and Miss Marguerite Moge of Worcester at Worcester, July 19.

Ralph W. Newell, reporter Keene (N. H.) Sentinel, and correspondent for Boston and Worcester papers, to Miss Margaret B. Mann, at Woodsville, N. H., July 26.

Howard S. Benedict, of the advertising department of the Sioux City (Ia.) Tribune to Miss Helen Metz, in Sioux City, July 30.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

FT. MADISON (IA.) EVENING DEMOCRAT, 12-page section greeting Department of Iowa, American Legion Auxiliary at its annual convention.

The Worcester (Mass.) Evening Post, Vacation Tours and Summer Resorts, special section, 16 pages.

The Worcester (Mass.) Evening Post, Summer Financial Section, 12 pages, July.

REJOINS HER PAPER

Faye Lewton Ashman has rejoined the staff of the Alliance (O.) Review as society editor. For a number of years before her marriage she was a member of the editorial staff.

MORAL:—BURN THOSE DISCARDED LEADS

By MERRILL V. NIPPS
Kansas City Journal-Post

THIS no doubt is treason. It would never have been told if they had left my typewriter alone. But because it is a good machine with an electric fan in front, they are wearing it out, these reporters, writing news.

But unknown to them I have been saving my revenge. I have saved all the crumpled and torn sheets of paper they have agonized over in writing the "lead" of their stories. Mostly I find them in little piles behind the typewriter, with the writer's name at the top and a line or half a line of the borning story, discarded with many a groan and curse.

Who can say whether it was an overripe cantaloupe or a trip by the packing houses that caused a reporter to start a story of a baseball game thus:

"Whence come these odors on the morning breeze that kisses all the flowers, stirs the trees?" Verbatim, that is, and what a thought, what a thought!

Or consider the case of the baritone reporter who began his story of an early morning fire,

"O please play for me that sweet melody Called Doodle di doo, Doodle di do."

Only to discard his plagarism as he remembered what city editors are prone to say of fire stories that start in so

Who can say what thoughts cour through the mind of an assistant editor who seized my machine and star his story "William Po—" and jerked the sheet with a sizzling glare before even found out the subject of his course.

Then there are those reporters have studied journalism and whose le tell who, what, why, when and wh with a few ifs and buts thrown in good measure.

When the pile of wadded and fra paper behind the typewriter overflo they decide to leave out the hero's c nection with the father-in-law of poleon's grandson so the lead can kept on one page.

The office boy is an old offender he confines his efforts to the one "Now is the time for all, etc.," wh gives him good practice and gives boss the impression he is busy.

Truly the man who spoke of liter efforts must have been thinking of n writers and the reader of their finis works may get a keener pleasure fr his reading if he will remember that fore the finished product was print dozens may have "died aborning."

FLASHES

Sun spots didn't cause all of America's disturbances last year. Damp spots helped some. Vancouver (B. C.) Sun.

* * *

An eighty-two-year-old man has married a seventy-two-year-old woman whom he kissed more than fifty years ago. There's a conscience for you! Russel Crouse, New York Evening Post.

* * *

"Pole Plans Flight Here."—Headline in the Evening Post.

Thus saving Commander Byrd a lot of trouble. Frank Sullivan, New York World.

* * *

A Nevada rancher has had his left eye knocked out by the cap on a bottle of root beer. There would have been a moral to the tale had it happened to have been a bottle of home brew. Salt Lake Tribune.

* * *

It is claimed that a new searchlight will pierce a dense fog twenty miles. It might be useful as an aid to clear thinking. Florence Herald.

* * *

August Heckscher, 79, philanthropist, says vigorous slapping of the body adds to long life. Depending, too, on whom you slap. Tom Sims, La Salle (Ill.) Post-Tribune.

KANSANS HEAD GROUPS

Brown, Rogers and Flint Serving Officials

With the election of Maynard Brown, associate professor of industr journalism at the Kansas State Agric tural college, to the presidency of

C. E. ROGERS

PROF. M. BROWN

American Association of College Ne Bureaus, three national journalistic ganizations are headed by Kansas edu tors. Prof. C. E. Rogers, head of the partment of journalism at Kansas St Agricultural College, is now serving president of the American Association Agricultural College Editors, while t American Association of Schools and D partments of Journalism is headed by N. Flint, head of the Kansas universi department of journalism.

FOR PROMPT SERVICE

TYPE

BORDERS ∞ ORNAMENTS ∞ BRASS RULE

Printers' Supplies

KELLY PRESSES • KLYMAX FEEDERS • PAPER CUTTERS
HAMILTON WOOD AND STEEL EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING OUR AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT

Carried in stock for prompt shipment at the following Selling Houses of the

AMERICAN TYPE FOUNDERS COMPANY

Boston	Baltimore	Pittsburgh	Cincinnati	Kansas City	San Francisco
New York	Richmond	Cleveland	St. Louis	Des Moines	Portland
Philadelphia	Atlanta	Detroit	Milwaukee	Denver	Spokane
	Buffalo	Chicago	Minneapolis	Los Angeles

INTERNATIONAL PAPER CO.

Two Outstanding Newspapers

New York Herald Tribune
and
Chicago Daily News

are now using INTERNATIONAL SUPEROTO
Exclusively, for the printing of their

ROTOGRAVURE SECTION

The New York Herald Tribune has used International Paper Co. Superoto exclusively since January, 1927. The Chicago Daily News has used International Paper Company Superoto exclusively for nearly three years.

INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPANY

Main Sales Office:
100 East 42nd Street, New York City
Branch Sales Offices:

BOSTON CHICAGO PITTSBURGH ATLANTA PHILADELPHIA

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

Homer C. George With Ledger Syndicate—Big Battle of "Ghosts" in Chicago—Wilson Feature to Start Sept. 25

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week by the Ledger Syndicate that Homer C. George, formerly with that organization and later with Johnson Features, has returned to its staff of sales representatives. Mr. George started with the Atlanta Constitution, and was later with the Birmingham Age - Herald, Memphis News and the Hearst papers in Chicago and New York. He spent several years with Klaw & Erlanger in the theatrical business before turning to syndicate producing and selling, first with King Features. He produced a number of features and placed several stars, notably Barney Oldfield, Walter Camp and William W. Roper. He has attained some fame as a sporting writer and has contributed to numerous magazines. He has given much study and time to editorial and circulation problems and has many friends among editors and publishers.

HOMER C. GEORGE

Reporters, known as ghost-writers, will stage their battle in the press section and will go into training with Dempsey and Tunney before the Chicago fist fight of millionaires on Sept. 22.

Champion Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey have been signed by King Features Syndicate, Inc., to cover their own fight.

"Both men," says the syndicate," will send daily stories from their training camps and on the night of the fight they will tell how and why they either won or lost."

"The Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson," by Ray Stannard Baker, serial rights of which are being distributed by the D. P. Syndicate, will start Sept. 25th, and will continue in Sunday and daily instalments for forty-three days, ending Sunday, Nov. 6.

Publication in book form will follow in the week of Nov. 7th.

The rights have been sold to cover nearly all the states of the United States and overseas as far away as Manila.

George W. Finley, promotion manager of King Features Syndicate, will leave next week for a short vacation at Shore Acres near New Bedford, Mass.

The Ullman Feature Service of Washington, D. C., has inaugurated a weekly aviation service.

Jimmy Murphy, creator of "Toots and Casper," is recovering at Polyclinic Hospital, New York City, from an operation for appendicitis.

The new golf series written by Tommy Armour, open champion of both the United States and Canada, is being released this week by King Features Syndicate, Inc. Armour has signed to write three articles a week for a year.

Gaar Williams, cartoonist for the Chicago Tribune, recently took a two weeks' fishing trip to Hudson, Ont.

Life Story of Bartolomeo Vanzetti was gathered and made into a feature by Miss Barbara Burlar for the New York Graphic.

Madame Helene Lupescu, for whom Prince Carol sacrificed the throne of Rumania, has written the story of her affair for the Famous Features Syndicate, New York. The story was obtained by Leslie Fulenwider, the syndicate's president, who is now in Paris. It will begin in serial form in newspapers early in September.

Edward N. Dolbey, Jr., has returned to the staff of the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate. He will start on a selling trip to the Pacific Coast Aug. 15, expecting to make every city west of Chicago and return about the middle of December.

Arthur J. Lafave, member of the field staff of the Metropolitan Newspaper Service, was married recently to Miss Florence Carr, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. R. Carr of Los Angeles, in the Little Church of the Flowers.

OLD PRINTER WINS MEDAL

Gold Award Goes to Printer, 95, on St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Philip F. Coghlan of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch has been awarded the gold medal offered by the Educational Graphic Arts Exposition for the oldest active printer in the country. Mr. Coghlan, who is 95 years old, has been actively engaged in his trade for 79 years, the last 44 of which have been spent in the composing room of the Post-Dispatch.

Working on the same floor with him is his son Philip C. Coghlan, 72, who has been a printer 40 years. The elder Coughlan was a Second Lieutenant in the 40th Missouri Regiment in the Civil War. He has eight grandchildren and 17 great-grand children.

The Graphic Arts Exposition will be held at the Grand Central Palace, New York, Sept. 5-17.

Other medals will be awarded to J. C. Graham of Marvell, Ark., who is 86 years old; William G. J. Perry of Malden Mass., who is 87 years old, and William H. Bates of Pekin, Ill., who has spent 74 years in the composing room.

Largest Circulation
and
Largest Volume of Advertising
of any Daily west of the Missouri river
LOS ANGELES
EVENING HERALD
REPRESENTATIVES
Chicago, JOHN M. LEDERER, 910 Hearst Bldg.
San Francisco, A. J. NORRIS HILL, 610 Hearst Bldg.
New York, HERBERT W. MOLONEY, 604 Times Bldg.

TWB
IF YOU WANT TO GET
MORE LOCAL DISPLAY
WITHOUT EXTRA COST
WRITE OR WIRE
THOS. W. BRIGGS CO.
Columbian Tower Building
MEMPHIS, TENN.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

Two Thousand Requests in 24 Hours Received for City Directory Classified Department Issued in Albany—Ready-Reference Cost Guide—A Bulletin Board on Classified Page

IN less than 24 hours after announcement of publication had been made, more than 2,000 requests were received for copies of a novel city directory issued by the classified advertising department of the Albany (N. Y.) Knickerbocker Press and Evening News. Statement that the edition was limited brought an early deluge of applications. The directory, first of its kind published in the city, contains 240 pages and includes a numerical telephone directory so that a person knowing a number may readily ascertain the name and address of the party. The directory also includes an alphabetical list of live business firms and an alphabetical list of streets; their locations and the lowest house number on each street.

A large number of Albany firms are advertised throughout the pages of the directory and, in the back, an alphabetical index to these advertisers is provided. The directory was published as a follow-up to a five-page classified advertising supplement of business houses about a month ago.

A ready reference cost guide for classified advertisements is being published as a daily promotion feature of the Glen Falls (N. Y.) Times. A table, occupying a space four columns wide by four inches deep, calculates the cost of small-ads from two to twelve lines for a single insertion, three insertions and six insertions. The main idea of the table is incorporated in the heading: "Advertise 6 Times—Costs Less—Produces Best."

A feature of the classified page of the Binghamton (N. Y.) Sun is a space 8 columns by 6 inches, "The Binghamton Real Estate Board Daily Bulletin." The first two columns are used for general promotional copy. In the other s columns there is a mild use of disp cuts allowed. Across the bottom is line—"The above properties are 'M tiple-Listed' with all board member Multiple listing means multiple selling also on the classified page is a forr "Write your ad now on blank below, n to the Binghamton Sun"—the bl gives rates for each number of lines 1 day, 3 days and 6 days

"Have you called on your local m teachers to build up this classificatio asks the New England Newspaper A ciation.

Music teachers, the association po out, are already planning their wi tutoring. Now is the time to arra for regular advertising to start just fore school openings.

PLANNING LABOR WEEKLIES

The Florida Labor News Compa Inc., publishers of a Tampa labor pa plans publication of two new la weeklies in the state, one at St. Pet burg, the other at Orlando. Both wil initiated with special numbers on La Day.

CALIFORNIA PAPER MOVES

The North Long Beach (Cal.) A has moved its office and plant from 5 Long Beach boulevard to 5373 L Beach boulevard, where it will have la quarters.

PRINTING PATENT FILED

Among patents filed with the state New York and made public this w was a printing-telegraph-exchange sys by Donald B. Perry of Yonkers, N. Y

Classified—

"From an advertiser's viewpoint, your splendid cooperation and interest you show in your 'Situation Wanted' advertisers is highly appreciated and is one of the outstanding reasons why Editor & Publisher stands out as the best medium to let one's wants be known, through its Classified columns, to the newspaper world and be assured of good results.

"I am negotiating for a position on an—Ohio, paper which was the outcome of my ad in Editor & Publisher. Should this position not mature, I will renew my ad for another three weeks."

The above is an extract from a letter received by the Manager of Classified Service from a recent advertiser.

Editor & Publisher Classified has established a record as a result-producer. The above and many other letters prove our claim.

Classified Service
EDITOR & PUBLISHER

National Press Building Opens September One

RENTAL COMMITTEE
J. FRED ESSARY, BALTIMORE SUN, CHAIRMAN
LOUIS LUDLOW, COLUMBUS DISPATCH, PRESIDENT NATIONAL PRESS CLUB, EX-OFFICIO
JAMES R. ELLERSON, JR. OF ELLERSON & WYATT, REAL ESTATE CO, RENTAL MANAGER
IRA E. BENNETT, WASHINGTON POST
H. O. BISHOP, NATIONAL REPUBLIC
RAYMOND CLAPPER, UNITED NEWS
GEORGE W. CONER, WASHINGTON POST
GEORGE E. DURNO, INTERNATIONAL NEWS
FRED A. EMERY, UNITED STATES DAILY

RENTAL COMMITTEE
E. W. BARLEMAN, CINCINNATI ENQUIRER
STEN HALL LARSE, UNITED STATES CHAMBER OF COMMERCE
W. EGULD LINCOLN, WASHINGTON EVENING STAR
EDGAR NARSMAN, ST. PAUL DISPATCH
AVERY C. MARKS, JR. WASHINGTON TIMES
LORENZO W. MARTIN, LOUISVILLE TIMES
CARL D. RUTH, CLEVELAND NEWS
JAMES O. PRESTON, SUPT. U. S. SENATE PRESS GALLERY
WILLIAM J. SHOWALTER, NAT. GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY
FRANCIS STEPHENSON, ASSOCIATED PRESS
EVERETT C. WATKINS, INDIANAPOLIS STAR

National Press Club

Washington,
July 31, 1927

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO
RENTAL COMMITTEE
706 WESTORY BUILDING
WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mr. Louis Ludlow, President
The National Press Club,
Washington, D.C.

My dear Mr. Ludlow:

I feel that it will give you satisfaction to know and be able to communicate to the Club the fact more than one hundred and sixty newspapers and periodicals already are represented in the National Press Building. Their correspondents have signed leases for quarters in the Club's new home, although the building will not be formally opened until September 1.

There are very many more Washington correspondents who have asked us to reserve space for them, some of whom have forwarded their leases to their home offices for approval.

Sincerely yours,
J. Fred. Essary
Chairman, Rental Committee, National Press Club.

One Hundred and Sixty-six Newspapers Have Now Leased Quarters in New Home of National Press Club

National Press Building, 14th and F Streets, Washington, As It Appears Today—Constructed and Owned by the National Press Club, It Covers One Acre of Land, One Block East of U. S. Treasury and One-Half Block North of Pennsylvania Avenue and Proposed New Department of Commerce and Other Government Activities.

THE LIST TO DATE

Affiliated Press Service
Atlanta Journal
Albany Knickerbocker Press
Albany News
Albany Times Union
Asbury Park Press
Atlantic City Press
W. H. Atkins, (Special Writer)
American Machinist
American Machinist (European Edition)
Birmingham News
Baltimore Sun
Berliner Tageblatt
Boston Herald
Buffalo Evening News
Bus Transportation
Boston Traveler
Baltimore Evening Sun
Bridgeport Post
Cincinnati Times Star
Cedar Rapids Gazette
Columbus Dispatch
Cincinnati Commercial Tribune
Christian Science Monitor
Coal Age
Coal Age News
Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering
Cleveland News
Construction Methods
Camden Courier
Charleston News & Courier
Charles B. Dodds (Special Writer)
Davenport Democrat
Davenport Times
Denver Post
Dayton Herald
Dayton Journal
Dallas Times-Herald
Des Moines Register
Detroit Free Press
Detroit Times
Elmira Star Gazette
Elizabeth Journal
Exchange Telegraph Company (London)
Editor & Publisher (New York)
Engineering & Mining Journal
Engineering News Record
Electric Railway Journal
Electric World
Electrical Merchandising
Electrical West
El Automobile Americano
Fort Worth Star Telegram
Edward T. Folliard (Special Writer)
Fort Wayne News Sentinel
General Press Association
Hudson Observer
Houston Chronicle
Harrisburg Patriot and News
Haverhill Evening Gazette
Havas News Agency (French)
Industrial Engineer
Ingenieria Internacional
Indianapolis Star
Ithaca Journal News
Jamestown Morning Post
Jersey City Journal
Kile, O. M. (Special Writer)
Kiplinger Washington Agency
Knoxville Journal
Knappen Ulm News Service
Lynchburg News
Frank B. Lord (Special Writer)
Louisville Herald-Post
Lancaster New Era
Louisville Appeal
Louisville Courier Journal
Little Rock Democrat
Louisville Times
Milwaukee Sentinel
Mayflower Publishing Company
Meriden Morning Record
Miami Daily News
Miami Herald
Miller, John P. (Special Writer)
Milwaukee Journal
Montgomery Advertiser
Muscatine Journal
Newark Star Eagle
New York Evening Post
New York Morning Telegraph
New Orleans Times-Picayune
New York Herald Tribune
New Orleans Tribune
New Orleans Item
New Castle News
New Britain Herald
Nashville Banner
Norfolk Ledger Dispatch
Virginian-Pilot
Omaha Bee
Ohio State Journal
Pittsburgh Post
Pittsburgh Sun
Philadelphia Public Ledger
Philadelphia Evening Ledger
Patches Publishing Company
Philadelphia Inquirer
Philadelphia Evening Bulletin
Patterson Press Guardian
Perth Amboy News
Passaic Daily News
Poughkeepsie Star
Power
Radio Retailing
Richmond News-Leader
Roanoke Times
Rochester Journal
Rochester Times-Union
Richmond-Times Dispatch
San Antonio Express
Sandusky Register
Dr. Wm. J. Showalter (Special Writer)
Savannah Press
Spokane Chronicle
Springfield Union
Springfield Republican
Salem Evening News
Savannah Morning News
Springfield Daily News
Scranton Journal
St. Paul Dispatch
St. Paul Pioneer Press
St. Louis Star
St. Joseph News-Press
San Francisco Chronicle
Santiago Tribune (Cuba)
Stantiago Union (Cuba)
Santa Ana Register
Schenectady Gazette
Syracuse Herald
Tampa Telegraph
Toronto Star
Tulsa World
The American Automobile
Toledo Blade
Toledo Times
Troy Record
Tacoma News-Tribune
Tacoma Ledger
Trenton State Gazette
Trenton Evening Times
Uniontown Herald
Utica Observer Dispatch
Wall Street Journal
Uthai V. Wilcox (Special Writer)
Otto Wilson (Special Writer)
Worcester Telegram
Wolff News Agency (German)
Wilmington Morning News
Wilmington Evening Journal
Wilmington Every Evening
Waterloo Courier
Watertown Times
Wichita Falls Times
York Dispatch

WOMEN IN ADVERTISING AND JOURNALISM

Bang! Bang!—It Is Miss Woodward Wielding Gavel as Georgia Press Head—Two Traditions Smashed—New Puzzle Editor in New York

ONE tradition will explode another when Emily Woodward, editor of the Vienna (Ga.) News, is elected president of the Georgia Press Association at its annual meeting in Eatonton, Ga., Aug. 22-24. Everybody knows Miss Woodward will be the new titular head of the Georgia press. It is traditional for the first vice-president to step up and grab the gavel from the retiring chief. In taking office Miss Woodward will smash another tradition, which had it that only men should boss the editors of Georgia.

Emily Woodward

Miss Woodward has been vice-president of the association for four years, two as second vice-president and two as first vice-president. Up to her election to a vice-presidency the association had never had a woman officer. It is anticipated from this time forward that there will always be a woman on the board because of excellent work Miss Woodward has done and because there are several very active women editors in Georgia who are thoroughly capable of assisting in directing the affairs of the Association which is one of the oldest and most active in the United States. Miss Woodward has been in the newspaper business for a number of years. She and her brothers own the News and they have made a success of it. The next president of the Georgia Press Association has taken a very active interest in Georgia affairs, both before and since the women were given the right of franchise in the state. She has served on several local boards at home and has been prominent in political and other affairs throughout the state. She is said to be thoroughly in touch with conditions in Georgia.

Frances Schiff, formerly Columbia correspondent for the New York Herald Tribune, has been appointed Puzzle editor of that paper. Miss Schiff is a graduate of the June, 1927, class of the Columbia School of Journalism, where she was appointed alternate for the Pulitzer Travelling Scholarship in 1927. She is also a member of Theta Sigma Phi, the women's national journalistic fraternity.

She was at one time on the staff of the Up Town News, a New York weekly, and has been assistant editor of Elite Styles Magazine and a free lance feature writer for metropolitan papers.

Miss Schiff was the second woman ever to be appointed Columbia correspondent by the Herald Tribune, the first one having been Miss Dorothy Ducas, who is now a member of the reportorial staff.

Miss Alberta Rountree, who has been a member of the editorial staff of the Eureka (Cal.) Humbodt Standard for the past three months, has resumed her duties as women's editor of the Daily Californian, publication of the University of California.

Mrs. G. W. Baird of the Dallas Semi-Weekly News was elected president of the Texas agricultural writers' conference held in connection with the annual short course at the Agricultural & Mechanical College of Texas, College Station. Mrs. Bess Woodruff, Mineral Wells Index, was elected vice-president and Miss Ardis Phillips, Greenville Messenger, secretary.

Miss Mary Jane Smith, formerly connected with the business department of the Los Angeles Examiner, has joined the classified group of Cleveland Plain Dealer employes.

"HEAT LIGHTNING SWEAT"

"Thar's Rain in Them Clouds," Said Runyon—Hoosier Prophet All Wet

In his "Highlights in Sports" column one morning last week W. Blaine Patton, sports editor of the Indianapolis Star, carried the following story regarding Damon Runyon, noted newspaper man:

The other night we motored Damon Runyon, noted sports writer, out to the Fort Harrison Punch Bowl, and on the way to the arena he observed frequent flares of lightning. Steve Harter was along and Damon peeped from the window and said:

"Boys, it looks as if we are going to get wet and there will be no fights."

Harter came back: "No! No! There isn't a chance. That's only heat lightning. You've been cramped up under those skyscrapers in New York so long you don't know and haven't seen enough rain clouds to distinguish the difference between real lightning and heat flares."

About twenty minutes later when the bottom of the sky fell out at the ringside Runyon blinked through his dripping glasses and turned to Steve and remarked: "Say, you alleged 'Big Shot' From the West,' what I want to know. is this lightning rain or heat lightning sweat?"

PUBLICITY MAN SUES

Shumaker Wants $56,000 from Maine Community Developers

Seeking $56,120.23 and interest alleged due for salary at $50,000 a year as advertising and publicity manager, Frederick W. Shumaker of New York has brought suit against the Lucerne-In-Maine Community Association in the Sufford County (Mass.) Superior Court in the sum of $100,000.

Shumaker claims that he worked for the Maine concern from Oct. 1, 1925, to Dec. 24, 1926, as advertising and publicity manager and that he has been paid only $7,179.43 and has also made some disbursements in behalf of the defendant.

BUSINESS WRITING TAUGHT

"Writing for Business," a new course, will be offered in the Medill School of Journalism, Northwestern University, this fall, under the direction of Joseph W. Hicks. The course will be given in the evening classes on the new McKinlock campus in Chicago. Mr. Hicks is managing editor of Byllesby Management executives' magazine of the Byllesby Engineering and Management Corporation. The course deals with the editorial problems of class, technical and trade papers, writing of commercial and market news stories, preparation of house organ material, editing house organs and writing of articles on business investigation.

The Rich and Expansive San Antonio Market is covered only by

San Antonio Express
Every Morning and Sunday

SAN ANTONIO EVENING NEWS
Every Evening ~ Except Sunday

These two great newspapers have steadily gone forward in advertising lineage year after year. During the five years from 1922 to 1926 inclusive, they have gained 4,842,068 lines. For the six months of 1927 they carried 10,293,944 lines as compared with the corresponding period of 1926, which was 9,605,125 lines, making a gain of 688,819 lines.

This splendid record of San Antonio Express and San Antonio Evening News is an evidence of the appreciation of local as well as national advertisers of their value as advertising mediums in reaching the people of San Antonio and Southwest Texas. For successful business men, as are these advertisers, do not go on increasing advertising appropriations that will not bring satisfactory results.

The figures given herein testify eloquently to the high opinion San Antonio business men have of the Express and Evening News:

First 6 months 1927	10,293,944
First 6 months 1926	9,605,125
Gain	688,819

1926	19,544,428 lines.
1925	17,692,535 lines.
1924	16,774,932 lines.
1923	15,703,227 lines.
1922	14,702,360 lines.

Why New York State Ranks First With National Advertisers

Why shouldn't it rank first when it offers so many outstanding advantages as a market. In the first place, consider the consuming power. Over 11 million people must be fed, clothed, must have shelter and must be amused.

When you convert these demands into sales the total volume of purchasing power runs into billions of dollars. But, the most important part about the New York State Market is that the people living within the State are known to be the greatest buyers in the country.

So great and so diversified is the wealth, that there is a market for practically every commodity or product made and used the world over. The advertiser not only reaches the quantity buyer but the quality buyer as well.

Regardless what the advertising appeal may be, there is always sufficient response in the New York State Market to obtain profitable results. Therefore, no matter what your product is, how cheap or how expensive, whether for the mass or for the class, your logical mediums are the New York State dailies listed below.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
Albany Evening News.....(E)	44,444	.13	.13
Albany Knickerbocker Press.....(M)	35,073	.12	.12
Albany Knickerbocker Press.....(S)	57,820	.17	.17
Amsterdam Recorder-Democrat .....(E)	7,845	.04	.04
††Auburn Citizen-Advertiser Journal...(E)	10,295	.065	.055
Brooklyn Daily Eagle .....(E)	77,991	.24	.24
Brooklyn Daily Eagle .....(S)	90,532	.24	.24
Buffalo Courier Express.....(M)	110,686	.22	.22
Buffalo Courier Express.....(S)	161,164	.30	.30
Buffalo Evening News .....(E)	149,773	.25	.25
Buffalo Evening Times .....(E)	109,285	.21	.21
Buffalo Sunday Times .....(S)	128,158	.21	.21
Corning Evening Leader .....(E)	9,029	.05	.05
Elmira Star-Gazette Advertiser...(E&M)	34,213	.11	.11
Geneva Daily Times.....(E)	5,627	.04	.04
Gloversville Leader Republican.....(E)	7,177	.035	.035
††Ithaca Journal-News .....(E)	7,711	.05	.05
Jamestown Morning Post .....(M)	11,705	.04	.035
Mount Vernon Daily Argus.....(E)	9,866	.05	.05

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
Newburgh Daily News .....(E)	12,506	.06	.06
New Rochelle Standard-Star .....(E)	8,458	.04	.04
The Sun, New York .....(E)	265,440	.65	.60
New York Times .....(M)	375,249	.80	.784
New York Times .....(S)	653,427	1.05	1.029
New York Herald-Tribune .....(M)	289,674	.6435	.624
New York Herald-Tribune .....(S)	366,220	.693	.672
New York World.....(M)	302,199	.595	.58
New York World .....(S)	593,383	.72	.58
New York Evening World.....(E)	305,746	.505	.69
Niagara Falls Gazette .....(E)	21,817	.07	.07
Port Chester Item .....(E)	5,065	.045	.035
Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise....(E)	13,411	.06	.06
Rochester Times-Union .....(E)	73,856	.21	.20
Troy Record .....(M&E)	22,426	.07	.07
††Watertown Standard .....(E)	17,825	.07	.07

 A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1927.
†† Government Statement, March 31, 1927.

BUILDING NEWSPAPER CIRCULATION

Believes He Has Plan for Metropolitan Carrier Systems—Fancy Diver Does Stunts for Daily—Big Men Were Former Cleveland Newsies—How About a Golf Tourney?

EDWIN T. JONES of New York believes that the carrier system of delivery may be operated in the world's largest city as well as in other metropolitan centers where it has not yet been attempted, or else has been tried without success.

"Individual ownership is, in my opinion," he said, "the only successful method to be adopted to bring about a system of delivery that will prove perfectly satisfactory to the reading public and profitable and of increasing circulation value to the newspapers. Operation of its own system by a newspaper would prove troublesome, in a measure unsatisfactory, and the expense would be enormous.

"District your territory and assign a reliable man for each district. Let him realize this district is his property, that he is conducting and building up a business for himself. In this way he will give to your readers a perfect distribution and at the same time establish for yourself, a subscription selling force which can only result in increased circulation. District ownership should also do away with the extra delivery charge which is in force by all newsdealers.

"A few months after the late Joseph Pulitzer purchased the New York World he remarked in the presence of Jim McGuffen, his business manager, and myself that he would willingly spend $100,000 to put into operation a carrier delivery system in New York and Brooklyn, but he went on to say, the newsdealer condition in New York and Brooklyn for so many years makes the proposition I am afraid a hopeless one, and thus a cherished ideal was put on the shelf and forgotten.

"The carrier delivery system, however, I feel confident, can be successfully operated in Greater New York, and I am looking forward to the day when one of our New York papers will permanently install this system."

Cleveland newsies a few days ago had a big outing at Luna Park, a summer amusement resort. It was the twenty-seventh annual picnic of the Newsboys' Protective Union and 600 members were present. Several very prominent Clevelanders were among the former newsies present. These included Harry L. Davis, who was three times elected mayor of Cleveland and served one term as governor of Ohio; Common Pleas Judge Samuel H. Silbert; Municipal Judge Alva A. Corlett; Appellate Judge John J. Sullivan; County Clerk George Wallace; O. P and M. J. Van Sweringen, the two brothers who are building the $60,000,000 union terminal station in Cleveland, developing a $50,000,000 exclusive residential district around Cleveland and control the Clover Leaf, C. and O., Erie, Pere Marquette, Nickel Plate, and Hocking Valley railways and are seeking to form the new 10,000 mile "Greater Nickel Plate" railroad merger; F. M. Bramley, Frank B. Carpenter, and other prominent lawyers; and Joseph Laronge, one of the biggest realty operators in the city. City Manager William R. Hopkins was umpire of the baseball games.

The first Indianapolis junior golf tournament will be held Aug. 25 under auspices of the Indianapolis Star. In addition to a large silver trophy to the individual winner of the meet the Star will award three gold medals to the winning team. The tourney is limited to three players from each of the ten courses in Indianapolis and will decide not only the city individual junior championship but the club championships as well.

The tournament is limited to players under twenty years old and will be for thirty-six holes of medal play. Eleven prizes will be given altogether, the others by members of local golf clubs and sporting goods stores.

As a feature of its swimming promotion stunt, the Binghamton (N. Y.) Press has engaged Miss Helen Meany, champion amateur diver of the United States, to give exhibitions at a public carnical August 17.

A boat trip on a United States Naval Militia submarine chaser was one of the features of the annual Watertown (N. Y.) Times picnic for carrier boys last week at Sackett's Harbor. The outing began at 7 o'clock in the morning, the boys returning to the city in time to deliver the afternoon papers.

Ronald C. Bishop, circulation manager of the Concord (N. H.) Monitor-Patriot, left this week for his parental home in Lawrencetown,, N. S., where he will spend his summer vacation.

The automobile department of the Chicago Daily News is awarding Trail Hitters' emblems to motorists making a journey of 2,000 miles or more and writing a short account of the journey for the Daily News. The paper will also give twelve cash prizes for the best stories of trips taken this year. The contest closes in November. James Braden is automobile editor of the Daily News.

Samuel L. Snapp, employe of the Buffalo Evening News circulating department, was badly shaken up and bruised recently when the engine of the airplane in which he was a passenger went dead and the plane fell 100 feet.

ZOO'S TURN FOR A BOOST

Toledo Blade, Seeking Bigger and Better Menagerie, Will Buy Leopards

Enlargement of the municipal zoo at Toledo, O., is the object of a campaign now being conducted by the Toledo Blade. The campaign was started by the newspaper offering to buy, for whatever price the trustees of the zoo decided was proper, a pair of Indian leopards.

The early stages of the campaign were featured by the offer of a group of Toledo citizens to pay for construction of a house for the cat animals in the exhibit, to cost $100,000. That was quickly followed by an offer from a community chamber of commerce in the city to buy a pair of black panthers.

The object of the campaign is to obtain donations of animals by citizens or organizations and the formation of a permanent animal fund, which will enable the trustees to take advantage of any offers to sell rare specimens needed or wanted by the zoo.

EDITS TWO PAPERS

Charles W. Smith, editor of the Pilot-Enterprise of Oyster Bay, L. I., has been named editor of the North Hempstead (L. I.) Record. Both papers are owned by Col. Lloyd C. Griscom, former Ambassador to Italy.

RISELEY IN AUTO CRASH

J. H. Riseley, of R. Hoe & Co., and members of his family, were badly shaken up in an automobile accident near Kingston, N. Y., July 31. Mr. Riseley's mother suffered a broken collar bone.

"REP." APPOINTED

The Pueblo (Colo.) Chieftain has appointed the William J. Morton Company, New York and Chicago, to represent it in the national advertising field.

A Message to . . .
NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS

What About Your Linage Increases this Winter?

You are hoping that business this Fall and Winter will show an increase over 1926. You are probably sharpening up your spurs right now, so that you can "ride" the display department good and hard.

But what kind of constructive assistance are you providing for your advertising men — local and national?

Wouldn't you like to know something of the results that other publishers have had?

Knight Certified Market Studies

increase newspaper advertising on a sound basis. Knight Service is more than a mere study of the families in a newspaper market; more than an audit of the human values behind circulation. It is a thorough course of constructive work with your display staff, with your local merchants and with your national offices—based on a knowledge of the market gained through bonded investigators.

In more than sixty American markets Knight Service has built linage on the right basis. Such markets as

Chicago Washington Tampa
Harrisburg Altoona Houston

have been studied by Knight auditors. Let us send you a list of publishers who can report their experience with us. Whether you need us now or not WE WANT YOU TO KNOW US.

CERTIFIED MARKET STUDIES

To Western Publishers

Charles E. Knepper, vice-president of the Knight Organization, is now in Western territory convenient for calling on any Western publishers. If you would like to discuss details of our successful work in American newspaper markets, Mr. Knepper will call on you without placing you under the slightest obligation. Write or wire this office.

EMERSON B. KNIGHT, Inc.
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

Lyddon & Hanford Co. Represented in British Isles—J. C. Bull, Inc., Will Open Offices in New York Sept. 1—Robertson Heads Procter & Collier

THE Lyddon & Hanford Advertising Agency of New York and Rochester now represented in the British Isles y H. Stuart Menzies, Stuart Advertising gency, Limited, Kingsway House, ingsway, London, W. C. 2. Mr. Menes is notable for his successful conduct i many national and international adertising accounts in England. The reources of Mr. Menzies' organization as ell as his writing ability are now availble to our present or prospective clients.

J. C. Bull, Inc., will open offices as n advertising agency at 101 Park Avenue September 1. For thirteen years Ir. Bull has been vice-president and irector of Frank Presbrey Company. Before that he was advertising manager f Scribner's Magazine, acting in the ame capacity with Everybody's Magaine. Just out of Harvard in '92, Mr. Bull became a reporter on the New York World. He was later with the Mail and Express and the Tribune, and then beame associated with the late Frank A. Munsey and was managing editor of Munsey's Magazine.

With Frank Presbrey Company he handled a number of national accounts —among them American Express, Rogers & Gallet, and Goodman & Suss. He was engaged especially in travel and resort advertising, including the Florida East Coast Railway and Hotels, Canadian Pacific Hotels, Swiss Federal Railroads, Seaboard Air Line Railway, Southern Railway and the Bowman-Biltmore Hotels.

Associated with Mr. Bull in the new agency are K. J. Bull, Page Butt, Carlton H. Gilbert and L. F. Cameron.

C. M. Robertson has been elected president and treasurer of the Procter & Collier Company, Cincinnati advertising agency.

Walter R. Howell has resigned from Dodge Brothers, Inc., to become vice-president and account executive of Burton, Bigelow, Inc., Buffalo advertising agency.

C. P. Clark has started an advertising business under his own name at Nashville, Tenn. He was formerly with the Ralph H. Jones Company, Cincinnati, O.

C. B. Fraser has been made vice-president in charge of production of Burton, Bigelow, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

Harry C. Macdonald has become president of Walker & Co., outdoor advertising firm, Detroit, to succeed the late Harry Walker. Mr. Macdonald has been with the Walker organization twenty-five years. He was president of the Painted Outdoor Advertising Association before its consolidation with the Poster Advertising Association into the Outdoor Advertising Association of America in 1925. He is a member of the O. A. A. A. executive committee, and for several years has been vice-president of Walker & Co. Other officers of the company are William T. Walker, son of the former head, vice-president; E. A. Winchester, secretary, and E. P. Bayne, treasurer.

WITH THE GENERAL ADVERTISERS

Using Newspapers to Reach Retail Trade—Lucky Strike Shows Great Sales Increase—Receivers Appointed for Servel Corporation

NEWSPAPERS are being used to reach the retail trade by the National Spring & Wire Company, Grand Rapids, Mich. For the present the schedule is limited to the Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland districts. The Allan G. Miller Company, Grand Rapids advertising agency, is handling the account.

American Tobacco Company has announced a 30 per cent increase in sales on "Lucky Strike" cigarettes during the first six months of 1927 over the corresponding period of 1926. For a year now a special campaign has been made on this brand, handled through Lord and Thomas & Logan.

R. E. Murphy has been appointed advertising manager of the Mavis Corporation, Baltimore, market of Mavis Chocolate drink. He was at one time promotion manager of the Miami (Fla.) Daily News.

The Chrysler Sales Corporation announce the appointment of W. J. Mattimore as director of advertising and Cliff Knoble as his assistant. Mr. Knoble has been promoted from his former post in charge of creative work in the Chrysler advertising department. C. E. T. Scharps, former advertising director, has resigned to take up a position with the advertising agency of MacManus, Inc., Chrysler advertising counsel.

Arthur M. Holland, advertising manager of the End-O-Corn Laboratories, Inc., of Chicago, has resigned.

Receivers in equity were appointed last week for the Servel Corporation of Delaware, with offices at 51 East 42nd street, a holding corporation for other corporations engaged in the manufacture of electric refrigerators. At the same time receivers were appointed for two subsidiary corporations: the Servel Corporation of New York and the Absorption Refrigerator Company, Inc., of Newburgh. The receivers are Courtlant Nicoli and Frank E. Smith, under joint bond of $25,000 as receivers for the Delaware corporation and $10,000 joint bond for the other two.

Carl K. Hart, advertising and sales promotion manager of the W. A. Sheaffer Pen Company, has returned to his duties at Ft. Madison, Iowa, after a two weeks' vacation.

AD TIPS

Botsford Constantine Company, White Bldg., Seattle. Has secured account of Clark's Independent Ice Cream Company.

Nelson Chesman & Co., 1127 Pine street, St. Louis. Placing account for the Aurine Remedy Company, Chicago, manufacturers of ear remedy.

H. W. Kastor & Sons, 14 East Jackson Boulevard, Chicago. Placing account for the Brooks Rupture Appliance Company, Marshall, Michigan, manufacturers rupture appliances.

Lord & Thomas and Logan, Inc., 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Now handling account for the Electric Vacuum Cleaner Company, Cleveland, manufacturers of "Premier Duplex" cleaners. Also placing account for the Holeproof Hosiery Company, Milwaukee, manufacturers of "Holeproof" hosiery.

Koch Company, 432 Broadway, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Has secured account of the Globe Manufacturing Company, Sheboygan, Wisconsin, makers of all types of metal stampings.

Robinson, Lightfoot & Co., Inc., 1 Madison avenue, New York. Has secured account of the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities.

Philip Ritter Company, Inc., 225 West 34th street, New York. Has secured account of Francis Bannerman Sons, New York, manufacturers of military equipment.

Street & Finney, 40 West 40th street, New York. Now handling account for the William L. Gilbert Clock Company, Winsted, Conn.

Charles H. Touzalin Agency, Inc., 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Has secured account of the Kirsch Manufacturing Company, Sturgis, Michigan, manufacturers of "Kirsch" drapery and hardware.

"WITH WILE IN WASHINGTON"

Senator Borah and Frederic William Wile on White House Office Steps

DAILY,
BREEZY,
PERSONAL, COLUMN

By FREDERIC WILLIAM WILE

National and International Newswriter—Author—
Public Speaker—Political Broadcaster

Exclusive News
Independent Interpretation
Fearless Comment

Now Offered for

Daily Distribution Via Air Mail

FREDERIC WILLIAM WILE NEWS SERVICE
BOND BUILDING
WASHINGTON, D. C.

America's Most Thrilling Congress—Presidential Campaign of 1928—Are in the Offing—

TIE UP YOUR READERS—ON ATTRACTIVE TERMS—"WITH WILE IN WASHINGTON"

CARL HUNT IS DEAD IN ORLANDO, FLA.

Former Manager of A. A. C. W. Succumbs After Year's Illness—Was President of Florida Liquid Fruit Company at Death

Carl Hunt, 47, former manager of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, now the International Advertising Association, died at his home in Orlando, Fla., Aug. 6. He had been practically an invalid during the last year.

CARL HUNT

Mr. Hunt was born near Indianapolis and entered the newspaper business in that city when he was 21 years old. After five years on the old Indianapolis Sentinel, Sun (now the Times), and the News, he spent 10 years on the reportorial staff of the Indianapolis Star.

Retiring from the newspaper business, he started his own advertising agency, which he conducted until he became editor of Associated Advertising, the official magazine of the A. A. C. W. He became manager of the association in 1922, after he had been associated with the work for more than eight years.

Mr. Hunt was manager of the A. A. C. W. when it held its 20th annual convention in London in 1924. After that convention he announced his resignation from the national advertising group to accept a position as executive vice-president of the Orlando (Fla.) Chamber of Commerce.

After a year of strenuous work with this organization, he retired to organize and develop his own business as president of the Florida Liquid Fruit Company. While in Orlando, Mr. Hunt became connected with the Orange County Advertising Club and last year served as its president.

Mr. Hunt is survived by his wife and three sons, the eldest of whom was associated with him in business.

ITALY TO INSURE JOURNALISTS

Death and Old-Age Benefits Provided by Mussolini Plan

Arnaldo Mussolini, brother of the Italian premier, presided over a commission July 28 appointed to provide insurance for newspaper men.

The commission drafted a plan which would allow families of newspaper men 6,000 lire upon their death or a similar sum when the worker reached the age of 60 years. A small premium would be collected to support the scheme.

Obituary

W. V. R. Powis, 75, formerly in charge of the advertising department of the Munsey newspapers in New York City, publisher of the Poultry Keeper and Farm & Fireside, died Aug. 1 in St. Joseph's Hospital, Elgin, as a result of injuries he received in an auto accident in that city a week ago. In recent years Mr. Powis had devoted his attention to the operation of his experimental farm.

Jose Labrador Vinals, publisher of La Correspondencia, San Juan, Porto Rico's oldest daily newspaper, died there July 28 after a short illness.

Margaret Eulalie Averill, infant daughter of Harry Averill, editor and publisher of the Mt. Vernon (Wash.) Daily Herald, and Mrs. Averill, died in Seattle Aug. 1.

Rev. Frank L. Hayden, 76, of Seattle, former newspaper man, died recently in Seattle. He had for 15 years managed Middle West papers, among which were the Council Bluffs Republican and the Omaha Globe.

Jacob Shoff, 50, for 30 years employed in composing rooms of Lead (S. D.) newspapers and recently a linotype operator for the Lead Call, was found dead near the home of his sister, Mrs. R. S. Crosbie, at Milford, Ia., Aug. 4, with a bullet through his head. It is believed he slipped as he was returning to the home and that his gun was accidentally discharged.

Mrs. Mary Wheeler, 76, mother of Roger B. Wheeler, of the editorial staff of the Brockton (Mass.) Times, died at her home in Bridgewater, Mass., recently.

Hermann Pfaefflinn, 80, former editor of the Rochester (N. Y.) Daily Abendpost, died recently.

Mrs. Edith Sessions Tupper, magazine and short story writer, died Aug. 3 at Freedonia, N. Y. She acted for many years as special correspondent for several newspapers, including the Chicago Tribune and New York Times.

Frank H. Stevens, 64, president and treasurer of the firm of Wild & Stevens, Boston, Mass., manufacturers of printers' rollers, died at the Hotel Beaconsfield, Boston, recently.

Robert Davidson, for many years a reporter on the old Albany (N. Y.) Journal, and lately with the Schenectady (N. Y.) Union-Star and Albany (N. Y.) Sunday Telegram, died Aug. 8.

Henry Lowry, 87, Civil War veteran, connected in various capacities with the Ballston (N. Y.) Journal for forty years, died Aug. 6 in Ballston Spa.

MRS. PULITZER'S FUNERAL

Funeral services will be held in New York Saturday for Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, widow of the New York World founder, who died in Deauville, France, July 29.

UNUSUAL NIGHT FOR 25 FLIGHT REPORTERS

Even the Moon Came Up, as News Men Braved the Briny to Watch Chamberlin Fly From Leviathan

Some 25 newspapermen are recuperating from Clarence D. Chamberlin's flight by airplane from the Leviathan to Curtiss Field and thence to the Teterboro, N. J., airport.

Each of the 25 struggled from the friendly embrace of the kindly bed, mixed bicarbonate of soda, drank the potion, and sat down to think over the marvel of man's mastery over sea and air.

They had left Pier 36, N. R., shortly before dawn, aboard the destroyer Wilkes, which had seen better days in the navy but is now of the U. S. Coast Guard.

The night was dark, but stars dotted the open spaces in the sky, as the Wilkes led the Leviathan up the bay, cutting the black water into phosphorescent spray, some of the ten photographers sang in parts. That is, each sang the part of a song he knew. The reporters chatted merrily. Everybody was happy.

Hours passed. The bay became the ocean. The Wilkes, like an old horse let out to pasture, began to prance.

Suddenly, Eddie, the dean of photographers, left the songsters and sauntered over to the port rail to observe the beauty of the sea. Soon the remaining nine joined him. Then the reporters straggled, one by one. The night was very unusual. Even the moon came up.

Dawn broke. Fog, then rain, then lightning, then wind and a real sea followed. The Wilkes drew up near the Leviathan. At 6.10 the newspapermen, wrapped around stanchions or draped like question marks over the railings, saw Chamberlin come out on the runway. Evidently he had enjoyed a good rest.

Soon the motor of the biplane began to roar. The reporters weakly raised pencils and noted that Chamberlain soared gracefully from the deck at 8:14.

"How can I take pictures through a green fog?" queried Eddie, dean of photographers.

He had just been carried on deck by two stout, able seamen.

Chamberlin waved, jauntily from the cockpit of his plane as he dipped and looped, zoomed and Immermanned over the destroyer.

But the newspapermen could barely see him through the strange green fog.

All was silent on the good ship Wilkes, which continued to cavort along the waves like a sporty old horse in the pasture.

ARTHUR T. WALKER

Arthur T. Walker, who died suddenly this week, inherited the New York Globe in 1922 as a part of his $15,000,000 legacy from the Searles estate. He sold the paper in 1923 to Frank A. Munsey.

first! in OHIO

Dispatch Sets the Pace

During the first six months of 1927 The Columbus Dispatch carried more paid advertising than the second Columbus paper by 4,639,750 agate lines.

For years The Columbus Dispatch has enjoyed the distinction of being first in Ohio in paid advertising volume.

NET PAID CIRCULATION

City 60,216
Suburban 28,937
Country 24,525

Total Circulation 113,678

Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

CLINE SYSTEM
CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO. CHICAGO

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control is used by

Elkhart Truth
Elkhart, Ind.

Ask them about it

CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO.
Chicago: 111 West Washington Street
New York: 47 West 34th Street
San Francisco: First National Bank Building

A Greater Volume of Women's "Specialty Shop" Advertising

was placed in The New York Times in seven months of this year than in any other New York newspaper, morning or evening. The total was 753,948 agate lines.

The character of its censored, trustworthy advertising, and the high quality and number of its readers combine to make The New York Times the most productive advertising medium in the greatest market in the world.

The New York Times

The Place to Push Sales—

Kansas—made unusually prosperous this year by excellent crop yields—offers an attractive market to persistent advertisers.

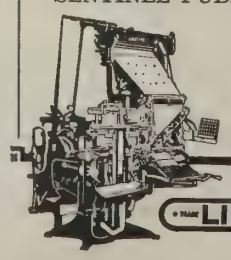
The Topeka Daily Capital—thoroughly covers Topeka and its big trading radius. The only newspaper with a circulation throughout the State.

Included in primary distribution campaigns by leading national advertisers.

40,000 Guaranteed Circulation



Published by Arthur Capper
Topeka, Kansas

From the Linotype Mailbag

"That's Some Service"

"I want to thank you for the prompt service on motor pinion ordered a short time ago. I telegraphed you at about 9 o'clock in the morning, and at 7 A. M. the next day received the pinion. That's some service and I want you to know that the Sentinel appreciated it very much. We are Lino Boosters."

SENTINEL PUBLISHING CO.
Holland, Mich.

LINOTYPE

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's

Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns

Are Covered Completely by
THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon

THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle

Both Members of A. B. C.

Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

Have you a friend in Kansas City

Ask him if he doesn't read The Kansas City Star

APER'S PICNICS KEEP MEMORIES GREEN

olks Group Around Their Home-Town Standard at Weekly Parties Staged for Various Towns by Toledo News-Bee

A series of community goodwill stunts cently inaugurated by the Toledo (O.) ews-Bee has proved the most popular its summer affairs, says Harold Place, litor.

The plan is to have a picnic in Toledo ch week for persons who have moved the city from nearby towns. Last eek's picnic was for the people in oledo from Defiance, O., and the one efore that was for Findlay (O.) folk ho had moved into the larger city.

Good crowds of Toledoans were on and for the picnics, but, in addition to em, caravans of automobiles from the wns represented brought former friends nd neighbors of the celebrants in to take art in the outing.

This recreation program is being supplemented by a series of street parties or various communities in Toledo. In ese sections, streets are roped off or dancing and roller skating, to music urnished by the News-Bee. Other entertainments are provided by the newspaper and the gatherings have been so uccessful that one section has decided o have such a meeting every week.

PUBLISHERS CO-OPERATE

Committee Will Advise New England Council on Publicity

A committee representing the New England Daily Newspaper Association as been appointed to co-operate with the New England Council and will act in an advisory capacity, particularly, to the committee on public relations and community organization, of which Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Manchester (N. H.) Union and Leader, and New England representative of the Hearst organization, is chairman.

The members are George F. Booth of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram-Gazette, chairman; Allison Stone of the Providence (R. I.) Journal and Bulletin; Julius Matthews of the Biddeford (Me.) Journal; David W. Howe of the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press; Frank E. Sands of the Meriden (Conn.) Journal; and John A. Muehling of the Manchester Union and Leader.

NEWSPAPER "INTERNESHIP"

To the Boston (Mass.) University journalism department falls the honor of being the first journalism school in the country to adopt the requirement of a year of "interneship" before the awarding of the bachelor of journalism degree. Students entering in the fall will be affected by the change, being required to have a year of practical experience in addition to four years at college before graduation. Prof. Harry B. Center is head of the department. Sigma Delta Chi, the national newspaper fraternity, voted last fall in favor of such a requirement which Prof. Center states was part of the original plan for the course at Boston University.

NEW IOWA SCHOOL HEAD

Dr. Frank L. Mott of the department of English of the University of Iowa has been named director of the school of journalism of the University, succeeding the late Dr. C. H. Weller. Dr. Mott is of a newspaper family and has been a practical newspaper man throughout his life. His father published the What Cheer Patriot, the Tipton Advertiser and later the Audubon Republican. Dr. Mott joined the University faculty five years ago, after having been instructor at Simpson college.

PAPER CO. OFFICE MOVED

The St. Maurice Valley Sales, Limited, has moved its New York office from 342 Madison avenue to 420 Lexington avenue.

ELECTRIC LIGHT INDUSTRY MEMBERS SYNCHRONIZING THEIR AD PLANS

Equipment Concerns Place Seasonal Drives—Chairman of Association Believes Other Retailers Might Co-operate to Get People Buying by the Calendar

HOW the electric light industry is synchronizing its advertising plans on a schedule basis was explained this week in an announcement made by J. E. Davidson, past president of the National Electric Light Association and now chairman of the Commercial National Section of the association.

Manufacturers are continuing to advertise their products and the power companies are advocating the appliances with the same energy that has characterized their customary commercial campaigning, Mr. Davidson explained, but now the efforts of these two groups are being synchronized on a schedule basis.

"Each month of the year has been designated for a special drive on a particular appliance or kind of equipment," he said. "For instance, convenience outlets will be emphasized in September, electric heaters and portable lamps in October, Christmas gifts in November and December, waffle irons and toasters in February and appropriate items for the rest of the year. All who merchandise these wares, whether they are actually within the electrical industry or not, are urged to secure greatest sales volume by co-ordinating their local advertising with the national drives of the manufacturers.

"More extensive use of electric home appliances is recommended by the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Under the leadership of their President, Mrs. John L. Sherman, these groups are localizing efforts to raise the standards of living for the women of America and urging electric servants as important means to that end. A national survey was conducted some time ago that has led them to impress upon their members the value of such equipment.

"When the plans for these concurrent advertising campaigns were being formulated some manufacturers were queried on the desirability of co-operative advertising. The interest that was immediately manifested has resulted in many member companies of the National Electrical Manufacturers Association giving assistance and suggestions. Previous campaigns have demonstrated that the public is constantly becoming better informed of the desirability of owning electrical appliances. Selling was more easily accomplished, it was found, when national advertising was followed up by local campaigns by the electric companies. It is now intended that this supplementary work of the concurrent advertising plans shall be of material assistance to many power and light companies in all sections of the country."

Mr. Davidson expressed his belief that electric light and power companies would do well to enlist the co-operation not only of electrical dealers in this work but also of other retailers, such as department, drug, furniture and hardware stores, that stock these appliances, so that in each locality all engaged in the merchandising could co-operate to the same end. He also said that the power companies would do well to advise these other retailers that the central stations would like to assist them in their selling plans and work in with their merchandising as far as practicable.

The program of concurrent advertising for 1927-8 has been incorporated in a Plan Book issued by the headquarters of the National Electric Light Association. Suggestions are made for layouts and copy, as well as house-to-house drives and window displays. The general outline of the year's activities is given with samples of advertisements that have proved productive in former months. A number of sales helps also are given, showing how the local companies may follow up the national campaign with local advertising and merchandising.

While it is realized that such advertising will not fit into the individual plans of all companies in every part of the country, it is hoped by the Merchandising Section of the association that the schedule will prove general enough to be of assistance to all power and light companies. Sufficient agreement has already been reached on the program to assure a definite measure of co-operative effort for the remainder of this year and the Merchandising Section feels assured that the effort will have more adherents as it progresses.

It is not expected, however, that the items pushed during certain months of the year will not be sold during the rest of the time. Such a procedure, it is pointed out, would not be successful merchandising. The concurrent campaigns are intended merely as added promotion during certain months, backed up by consistent sales effort during the rest of the year. Not only will the power companies benefit from the national advertising of the manufacturers, but the manufacturers will in turn be assisted by the efforts and follow-ups of the local dealers and the central stations.

WISCONSIN DAILY SOLD

Howard A. Quirt and Frank E. Noyes have purchased the Marshfield (Wis.) Daily News as another link in their chain, which now consists of three dailies. Other papers they own are the Ironwood (Mich.) Globe and the Marinette (Wis.) Eagle-Star.

TOTTEN WITH SYNDICATE

Hal Totten, baseball and football announcer for WMAQ, the Chicago Daily News radio station, has been made assistant manager of The Daily News Syndicate. He will give up his work as Chicago schools reporter for the paper, but will continue on the radio staff. The syndicate has begun to distribute features used in the Daily News.

JOINS CLEVELAND AGENCY

George Walker is now with the H. L. Stuart Company, Cleveland advertising agency.

This is Ionic No. 5 Ionic No. 5

This is Roman No. 2 Ionic No. 5

The two lines reproduced above were photographically enlarged from two seven point slugs, the upper line set in Ionic No. 5, the lower in No. 2.

A Larger Lower Case Gives Ionic No. 5

Greater Legibility

LOWER CASE LETTERS almost as high as the capitals accompanying them—there is the explanation of Ionic's exceeding legibility. The proportion is purposely large because Linotype designers heeded the fact that small characters compose fully three-quarters of the average newspaper column. They produced an easy-reading font by giving greatest attention to its most read portion.

Not only did these designers make the ratio between Ionic's lower case and capitals greater than that of the average roman face. All descenders were shortened, capitals were heightened, and even more body added to the lower case. Into this large framework they built elements making for the maximum legibility.

And the result? Ionic No. 5 has no hairlines—there is practically no difference between the light and heavy strokes. Ionic serifs are sturdy. They are shorter, too, so space that formerly went between letters is now put inside the letters themselves. This, with the greater body size, brings about an even distribution of the "light spaces" in word or line. Light comes through this new face; not around it.

In short, Ionic No. 5 is "all letter." Its great readability won immediate favor with newspaper readers, its mechanical advantages immediately attracted newspaper publishers. These two considerations combined explain its amazing popularity—tell why more than 465 papers have already adopted Ionic No. 5, the legible text face.

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY
BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

530.27.3-B

LINOTYPED IN GARAMOND AND NARCISS

By MARLEN PEW

SINCE his retirement as editor of London Times, following the death of Lord Northcliffe, American newspapermen have been generally out of touch with Wickham Steed except as he may occasionally appear in his role as editor of The Review of Reviews. Wickham Steed belongs by natural inclination to the daily press. In some respects he registers as a super-journalist. He is more serious than most American newspaper men and is distinctly of the type that is not only eager to report passing events but to participate in them and, as he has written of himself, "help things forward on the road I thought right." Twenty-five years ago this man abandoned a prospective financial career to fit himself for journalism. He worked in Berlin, Paris, Rome and Vienna as a foreign correspondent and then returned to London, an expert in European affairs and in such political problems as the bimetallism movement, giving to the latter such close study as to make his word authoritative around the world. Joseph Pulitzer once sought Steed for New York World but they could not agree that circulation was the principal object of editorship and when Steed declined a large salary offering, Mr. Pulitzer, Steed says, "thought me a fool." Through his intimate contacts with the governing powers of the leading European nations Steed became convinced in 1913 that a world war was inevitable and when it broke in fury he expressed no surprise but rather a "sense of relief." Steed profoundly influenced Northcliffe for several years, but I have been told that they were occasionally in rather violent opposition on certain policies. Steed has his weaknesses, such as certain race and religious intolerances, but by and large stands out as one of the interesting journalistic figures of the age. Recently, in London, he addressed a gathering of newspaper men in terms which neatly sketched his philosophy as a publicist. We have found his remarks entertaining and pass them along to the Shop Talk circle.

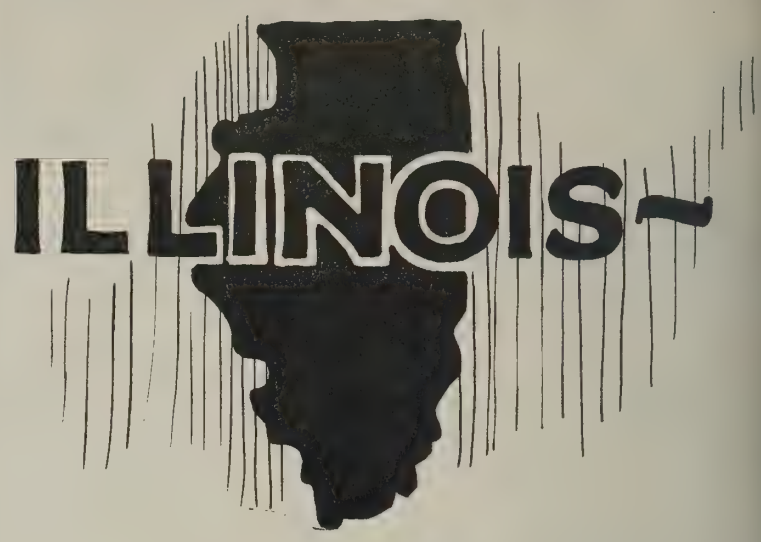
* * *

MR. WICKHAM STEED, speaking: The question of the moral responsibility of the press is less simple than it may seem. The newspaper "industry" is peculiar because it deals in what are sometimes called "human values." All the forests that are cut down to make the wood pulp that is turned into newsprint; all the oceans of sable fluid that ink the metal cylinders that impress the printed word on to the whirling rolls of paper; and all the millions of pounds spent on advertising space depend upon the manipulation of the real raw material of the newspaper industry, which is the public mind. When "the power of the press" is talked of, what is meant is its presumed ability to fashion the thoughts and to stir the emotions of men and women by presenting to them facts and fancies in one way rather than in another. The "public mind" is conceived as a substance infinitely malleable, passive, submissive, ready to yield to any kind of treatment. This idea is very far from the whole truth. The press can act upon the public mind, but the public mind, or what journalists imagine to be the public mind, acts even more powerfully upon the press.

* * *

SOME time ago a wealthy newspaper owner was speaking to an audience of working men. The views he expressed were lofty and his sentiments noble. When he had finished, one of his hearers asked how he could say what he said, and still publish the kind of newspaper he publishes. The answer, which sounded more cynical than it was meant to be, ran: "We give the public what it wants." The public wants several things, but above all it wants emotions. In this country, at any rate, it loves to be amused or thrilled, and hates to be preached at. It does not mind being taught provided that there is no evident school-mastering in the process. It is eager for news, for something new, something to talk about. When there is no news, that is to say, nothing out of the ordinary, it calls a newspaper dull and looks out for livelier sheets. Hence the first commandment in the journalistic decalogue: "Thou shalt not be dull."

* * *



DULLNESS means loss of circulation, loss of circulation means loss of advertising power, loss of advertising power means loss of the revenue that fills the gap between the selling price of a newspaper and the cost of producing it—and most newspapers in this country receive from the agents who distribute them to the public little more than the cost of the blank paper on which they are printed. This is why most newspapers try to be interesting, if not lively. This, too, is why some of them act upon the principle once laid down by a celebrated newspaper owner who was also a great journalist: "Vice is news and virtue isn't." He meant that vice is looked upon as the exception, as something out of the ordinary, and, therefore, as news; while virtue is presumed to be something so common that everybody takes it for granted. But this principle, unless it is kept within bounds by the consciences of newspaper proprietors and journalists—strange to say, some of them have consciences—may be very dangerous.

* * *

IN a sense it is true that every country has the newspapers it deserves; yet it is equally true that the public taste can be degraded by newspapers that habitually play upon its lower qualities. The temptation to do so is strong. Today, when big newspapers cost tens of thousands of pounds a week to produce, and advertisers have to supply the greater part of the revenue, circulation has become a very important consideration. News is not always easy to get, especially the so-called "exclusive news," which puts one newspaper ahead of others in the race for circulation, because the whole world is covered by a network of news agencies that distribute the same news to scores and hundreds of newspapers. Therefore newspapers seek to attract readers by dressing up their news in an attractive form, by employing skilled or witty writers to comment upon it and, occasionally, by offering advantages that have nothing to do with journalism proper, such as insurance against accidents or death. They have also been known to indulge in "stunts." "Stunts" may be defined as attempts to arouse public interest by methods out of proportion to the real value of the subject dealt with.

* * *

JOURNALISTS are under no illusions as to the conditions under which they labor. They know that their livelihood depends upon the favor of the public, and the prosperity of their paper. They know also that the public is not invariably high minded and that newspaper proprietors and editors who wish their undertakings to be commercially successful are prone to "give the public what it wants." Working journalists also view with anxiety the growth of the modern tendency to organize newspapers more and more on a commercial basis and to pay more heed to the earning of profits than to the dissemina-

Nearly 50% Of Illinois' Families Are Income Tax Payers

There are approximately 1,205,113 literate native white families in the State of Illinois. According to the last available census figures, 676,489 families filed income tax reports.

Since income tax returns are always good indicators of buying power, it appears conclusive that the people of Illinois must earn good incomes. What other outstanding facts then can favor the national advertiser more than the fact that these people have sufficient money to buy.

With plenty of money in Illinois, all you need is to call the attention of your product to the consumer. If your product is right, if your campaign is properly planned and placed in the newspapers listed below, the logical result will be volume sales.

	Circulation	Rates for 2,500 Lines	Rates for 10,000 Lines
Alton Telegraph .....(E)	11,035	.05	.05
†Aurora Beacon-News .....(E)	19,440	.07	.07
Belleville Advocate .....(E)	6,840	.03	.03
†Chicago Daily Journal .....(E)	125,007	.26	.24
Freeport Journal-Standard ....(E)	9,791	.05	.05
†Joliet Herald News .....(E)	20,107	.07	.07
†Matton Journal Gazette .....(E)	5,857	.04	.04
Moline Dispatch .....(E)	12,292	.05	.05
Monmouth Daily Review Atlas (E)	5,574	.035	.035
Peoria Star ....(S) 23,872....(E)	31,103	.085	.07
Waukegan Daily Sun .....(E)	5,666	.035	.035

A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1927.
†Government Statement, March 31, 1927.

pf good news and sound views. This ncy leads towards the formation of e newspaper trusts in which the s are very largely held by the public e. An individual proprietor may have gh sense of the dignity of his news-, but it is questionable whether a investor in newspaper shares would r that they should yield him only 5% is money because the paper is con-d with restraint and public spirit, or ther he would rather have 20% from per eager to tickle the public palate e cost of decency and right-minded-this question many journalists do ot see at present any satisfactory an-. The best of them are certainly ists. They work for the love of their g under conditions that are often and their task is never finished. are not, as a rule, commercially ed, however great may be the busi-s profit that is made out of their efforts. The scent of printing ink is as incense to their nostrils, and the sight of the rough-printed slips, which they call "galley proofs," may be quite enough to make them forget that they themselves are galley slaves. They may seek, by association with each other, and by an international union of associations, to lessen the difficulties with which they have to contend and to add security to a livelihood that is too often insecure. When they meet in conference they are glad to find touch with their fellow craftsmen from other lands—but they often feel doubt whether the fine things that are said of them and the fine things they say of themselves are really the things that count in the rough and tumble of their daily lives. In the present condition of the world, understanding and goodwill among the craftsmen who, day in, day out, mold the opinion and sway the feelings of nations, are truly worth striving after.

* * *

—AND IN WALKED A PRESS AGENT

By A. R. BIRD

R no particular reason, W. L. Jones, managing editor of the Evening Ga-, who was accustomed to having his addressed to him in terms of uire," took a trolley to the office that ning instead of driving his own car. fact that he was a little later than l did not worry him even for a mo-. He had enjoyed to the extreme an ual morning nap—the bed felt partic-y comfortable that morning—and wed this with a cup of coffee and a rite cereal that likewise were particu-palatable that morning. The world all sunshine and he was in it.

nlike previous occasions when he ced that mode of travel, he found his sparsely settled and had no trouble nding and retaining his seat for the e distance to the office. Funny thing, car, but he mused only a moment. grind of another day's work lay d of him and it offered no pleasant cipation, to say the least.

happened that the elevator was there n he arrived and he did not have to until it returned from the top floor, was his usual fortune. Regardless he rest of the day, things were break-his way at the start.

hen he entered the editorial rooms, a tled exclamation was clearly audible, he gulped as he glanced at the floor. was clean and void of the inevitable of paper, "copy" and exchange edi-s. His spirits rose keenly and he ed a cheery "good morning" to the e who seemed to be in unusually good its. He was chatting with a favorite rter and did not notice another slip o his desk which happened, so the lat-always averred, to be nearest the door ss the room, and immediately assume appearance of having written several ies before the boss showed up.

he chief's eye glanced at a paste pot a head writer's desk. It was full. ther observation disclosed the aston-ing fact that all of the pots were full the desks remarkably tidy. Out of corner of his eye he saw a reporter w a piece of waste paper directly in-he basket. Others followed in quick ession and his amazement grew as y piece went true to its mark.

uring this time, he had been so baffled he did not observe the air to be clear exhilirating. Even "Red," the vete-a sports editor, whose big lips had rwn to fit and inevitably associated with cigarette, was not smoking. This first tacted his attention and he scrutinized room. Not a single reporter or edi-was smoking and their desks were of match stems, ashes and butts, and e of these articles reposed on the floor. t was too much to comprehend. His d was in a whirl. Never before had many things happened in such rapidity his. He gave himself a light but effec-pinch to see if he were dreaming the ossible, but feeling the pain, he con-ded he was awake and the events real. ulling himself together for the day's rk, he started for home, leaving the routine of the day's work at the discretion of the staff.

Later, when he had been revived and regained sufficient strength to move, he started for home, leaving the routine of the day's work at the discretion of the staff.

MASCOT OF TEXAS PRESS

THE above shows "Miss Madera," a six weeks' old black bear—mascot of the Texas Press Association—eating an ice cream cone from the hand of her keeper, Fred I. Massengill, publisher of the Terrell Daily Tribune.

"Miss Madera" was captured in the Davis mountains, sixty miles south of Pecos, Tex., and was presented to the association by Lee Starling.

To Journalistic America

Vancouver, B. C.
August 4, 1927.

You will be interested in the attached editorial from my paper, The Vancouver Sun, because it deals with a subject vital to every newspaper man.

If Wright Brothers had listened to all that engineering science told them, where would flying be today; if the Army and Navy Departments had had the promotion of it, where would flying be today?

And if the newer knowledge of nutrition and health mechanics is left in the hands of medical men to promote, is there any possible chance of it ever reaching the people?

The medical attitude of attempting to permanently silence any individual or newspaper who questions their medical program of serumization and human mutilation, is one which, I submit, in this enlightened day and age can hardly be listened to.

Sincerely,

R. J. CROMIE,
Owner and Publisher
Vancouver Sun.

NATURE VS. THE KNIFE

MR. FISHBEIN, in Hygeia, the medical house organ, protests against The Vancouver Sun giving its readers plain commonsense health information from Dr. Tilden, Dr. Frank McCoy and that rapidly-growing school which advocates natural health methods in place of the knife.

People have been eating themselves INTO ill-health and disease and are just waking up to the fact that they can, through short, sensible fasts and proper food, also eat themselves OUT of ill-health and disease. The McCoys and the Tildens are showing people how, and that is what is making the Fishbeins mad.

Serums and surgery as a means of health are on the defensive and no one realizes that better than Mr. Fishbein. Most surgical operations are uncalled for and unnecessary, but commercialized surgery on the scale it is being carried on in this country today is a hideous crime. The French Revolution took only four thousand lives over a period of two years, but commercial surgery is taking annually tens of thousands of victims. If you doubt this, just check up on the numbers who are carried out on hospital dead-wagons in your city every month as a result of unnecessary surgical operations. Trace back the history of these cases and find how many times they were previously operated on. You will also find in almost every case there was a lack of right living, a lack of health knowledge and of simple body mechanism, and you will see where a little health knowledge along the lines of exercise, diet and right living would have probably saved those lives.

But medical doctors have intolerantly resisted the giving of health knowledge to the masses. Why? Possibly the following letter, written to Doctor Frank McCoy by a medical doctor in Denver, explains the reason:

> "If every family based its life habits upon the articles published under your name each day in our Denver newspaper, we medical doctors would soon have little to do."—Dr. W. V. Gage, M.D., Metropolitan Bldg., Denver, Colo.

Must newspapers be compelled to withhold from the public useful health information simply to keep a few medical Fishbeins in business?

Are the editors of this continent to be silenced while thousands of lives of our readers are being taken by the black magic of serums and unnecessary surgery?

The medical doctors have arrogated to themselves the right to do the public's health thinking, just as the Church and State in the past demanded the right to do the public's religious and political thinking. Can newspaper editors tolerate this outrage on public freedom, especially when the public want and need this health information, written, not from the old medical angle, but from the newer and commonsense point of view?

This phase of a newspaper's obligation to its readers was never more plainly and courageously stated than by EDITOR & PUBLISHER in an editorial dated July 2nd, which read:

> "Preach the gospel of right living and sensible diet and don't be to sure that the medical doctors of your city know it all."
>
> "When a newspaper is fighting for the physical up-building of its city, it is only functioning a primary duty."

Replacing serums and surgery with natural living is in line with evolution, while the present medical craze for serums, poisonous pus, and surgical mania, is too remindful and shows little advance on its ancestry of, first, Voodooism, then Witchcraft, and latterly the Indian "Medicine Man." In a few years it will be as hard to "sell" the public an operation as it is today to sell them the efficacy of the old Chinese formula of drinking tiger's blood for strength or cockroach dung to develop cunningness.

There is only one real doctor—Nature. There is only one medicine—right living. Many medical doctors know and secretly preach this doctrine, but the Fishbeins are in control of the medical machine and their closed mind and intolerant attitude have forced the press of the country to take steps to protect the public.

For this reason, when the editor of The Vancouver Sun or any other editor advances commonsense health ideas like those of Dr. Frank McCoy—written, not in Greek or Latin, but in plain English—that can be easily absorbed and understood and followed to the health advantage of the public, we feel we are giving a long overdue and much needed public service to our readers.

(Reprint from The Vancouver Sun.)

HOW COMBINATION NEWSPAPER SPACE IS SOLD LOCALLY AND NATIONALLY

(Continued from page 3)

Name of Newspapers	Issued	SOLD AS UNIT In National Field	SOLD AS UNIT In Local Field	SOLD SEPARATELY In National Field	SOLD SEPARATELY In Local Field
ILLINOIS
Charleston News	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Peoria Journal-Transcript	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
INDIANA
Evansville Courier & Journal	(me)	....	....	Yes	Yes
Hartford City News	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
Hartford City Times-Gazette	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
Lafayette Journal-Courier	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
Peru Chronicle-Journal	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
Portland Commercial-Review	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
South Bend News-Times	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
IOWA
Davenport Democrat & Times	(e)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Des Moines Register & Tribune-Capital	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Sioux City Journal	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
KANSAS
Hutchinson Herald & News	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Manhattan Chronicle & Mercury	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Wichita Eagle & Evening Eagle	(me)	Yes†	Yes	Yes	Yes
KENTUCKY
Louisville Courier-Journal & Times	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
LOUISIANA
Baton Rouge State Times & Advocate	(em)	Yes	....	No	....
New Orleans Item & Tribune	(em)	Yes*	No	Yes	Yes
MARYLAND
Baltimore Sun	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Baltimore American & News	(me)	Yes	No	Yes	Yes
Frederick News & Post	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Hagerstown Herald & Mail	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
MAINE
Lewiston Sun & Journal	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
Portland Press-Herald & Express	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
MASSACHUSETTS
Boston Globe	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
Boston Advertiser & American	(me)	No	No	Yes	Yes
Boston Herald & Traveler	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Lawrence Tribune & Eagle	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Lowell Courier-Citizen & Leader	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
New Bedford Standard & Mercury	(em)	Yes	Yes	No	No
Springfield Republican, News & Union‡	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Worcester Telegram-Gazette	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
MINNESOTA
Minneapolis Tribune	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
Red Wing Republican	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
St. Paul Dispatch & Pioneer Press	(em)	Yes	No	No	Yes
MISSOURI
Joplin Globe & News-Herald	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Kansas City Journal & Post	(me)	No	No	Yes	Yes
Kansas City Star	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Sedalia Capital-Democrat	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
MONTANA
Billings Gazette	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
Missoula Missoulian & Sentinel	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
NEBRASKA
Lincoln Journal	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
Omaha Bee-News	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
Omaha World-Herald	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
NEW HAMPSHIRE
Manchester Union & Leader	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
NEW JERSEY
Atlantic City Press & Union	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
Camden Courier & Post-Telegram	(em)	Yes	Yes	No	No
Trenton State Gazette & Times	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
NEW MEXICO
Albuquerque Journal	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
NEW YORK
Auburn Citizen & Advertiser-Journal	(e)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Albany Knickerbocker Press & News	(me)	No	No	Yes	Yes
Elmira Star-Gazette & Advertiser	(em)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Troy Record	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
NORTH CAROLINA
New Bern New Bernian & Sun-Journal	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Winston-Salem Journal & Sentinel	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
NORTH DAKOTA
Fargo Forum	(me)	Yes	No	No	Yes
Grand Forks Herald	(me)	Yes	Yes	No	No
OHIO
Dayton Journal & Herald	(me)	Yes	No	Yes	Y
Circleville Herald	(me)	Yes	....	No
Findlay Courier & Republican	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
Portsmouth Times & Sun	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
Urbana Citizen & Democrat	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Washington C. H. Herald	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Xenia Gazette & Republican	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Zanesville Times-Recorder & Signal	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
OKLAHOMA
Blackwell Tribune-News	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
Enid Eagle & News	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Frederick Leader	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Muskogee Phoenix & Times-Democrat	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Oklahoma City Oklahoman & Times	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
Okmulgee Democrat & Times	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Tulsa World	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
PENNSYLVANIA
Greensburg Review-Tribune	(me)	Yes	....	No
Harrisburg Patriot & News	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Hazleton Plain Speaker & Standard-Sentinel	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Lancaster Intelligencer & News-Journal	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Meadville Republican & Tribune-Republican	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Pottsville Morning Paper & Republican	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Philadelphia Public Ledger	(me)	Yes*	No	Yes	Y
Stroudsburg Record & Times Democrat & East Stroudsburg Press	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Uniontown Herald & Genius	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Warren Mirror & Times	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Washington Observer & Reporter	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Williamsport Sun-Gazette & Bulletin	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
RHODE ISLAND
Providence Journal & Bulletin	(me)	Yes*	No	Yes	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
Charleston News-Courier & Post	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
SOUTH DAKOTA
Aberdeen American & News	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
TENNESSEE
Johnson City Chronicle & Staff-News	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Memphis Commercial Appeal & Evening Appeal	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
Nashville Tennessean	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
TEXAS
Abilene Reporter & News	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
Amarillo News & Globe	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
Austin American Statesman	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
Beaumont Enterprise & Journal	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Dallas News & Journal	(me)	Yes*	No	Yes	Y
El Paso Times & Herald	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
Fort Worth Star-Telegram & Record-Telegram	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
Galveston News & Tribune	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Lubbock Avalanche & Journal	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Marshall Messenger & News	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
San Antonio Express & News	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
Texarkana Gazette & News	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
VIRGINIA
Bristol Herald-Courier & News-Bulletin	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Danville Register & Bee	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Lynchburg News & Advance	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Newport News Press & Times-Herald	(me)	Yes	....	No	..
Roanoke Times & World-News	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
Staunton Leader & News-Leader	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
WEST VIRGINIA
Bluefield Telegraph & Sunset News	(me)	Yes	....	No	..
Clarksburg Exponent & Telegram	(me)	Yes	No	No	Y
Fairmont Times & West Virginian	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
Huntington Herald-Dispatch & Advertiser	(me)	Yes	....	No	..
Wheeling Intelligencer & News	(me)	No	No	Yes	Y
WASHINGTON
Olympia Olympian & Recorder	(me)	No	No	Yes	Y
Yakima Herald & Republic	(me)	No	Yes	Yes
WISCONSIN
Eau Claire Leader & Telegram	(me)	Yes	Yes	No
WYOMING
Casper Herald & Tribune	(me)	Yes	Yes	No

* Either paper may be bought separately, with special rate for same copy in both papers.
† Evening Eagle may be bought separately, but Morning Eagle space is sold only in combination with Evening Eagle.
‡ Combination rate covers insertion in Morning Republican, Evening News and Morning and Evening Union.

PRACTICES VARY WIDELY IN "ALL-DAY" PAPERS

(Continued from page 3)

tions that many of the combinations started. Combinations breed best in two-paper towns, where both papers have been losing money or making very little.

"And the money saved by the publisher is passed on to the advertiser i indirect, but none the less importan ways. Outstanding is the market feature The combination offers the advertise complete coverage with the opportunity o maximum return for one rate. Secondly the papers resulting from consolidation and combinations are as a rule, fa superior to the old competing papers which spent money in useless, bitter busi ness warfare, and now swing that money f the editorial department for the pur-ase of better news facilities and fea-ns.

After all, the most important thing
n advertiser can buy from a newspaper e reader-interest and the reader-condence it possesses. A paper strengthened y combination can cultivate these de-rable assets, more fully than ever was ossible in the days of competition. If n advertiser buys space in a paper which possesses the confidence of its readers, n advertiser's campaign will be a suc-
ss whether that paper is an individual orning paper, evening paper or a com-nation.

Reader confidence is something which alties by advertisers and loss of busiss cannot destroy. It is something a per has every right to put a high value on when making a rate-card."

n example cited of an actual com-nation was where there were a morning n an evening paper operating under fferent ownerships in one small town.
was a costly business, and one of the s, the evening paper in this particular e, was not making enough money to and and purchase the type of feature public was accustomed to demand. It s lacking in financial news, for one ng. It could not afford to put on a man's page, and its magazine features re weak. The morning paper publisher eupon started an evening edition to sold with the original paper in com-nation. Because he was able to oper-e with a smaller staff than his com-etor and because of other mechanical conomies, he was able to buy the type f feature that insured reader-interest, to re sure that his paper was served by e best available financial news services, e to cover in an adequate manner the l important local news of his field.

he publisher of the combination paper s able to sell his morning and eve-ng paper at a charge considerably less an the price of both of the old-estab-shed papers together, but, of course, at mewhat more than the single rate al of the separate papers. The com-etor made much of this increase and contracts from all the local adver-
sers who boycotted the new evening per of the combination. But this was ase where strength told. Within six nths the local boycott was broken the morning paper's reader-con-nce, passed on to its evening edition,
t up an unbeatable combination.

he general trend pointed out by ulations gathered by EDITOR & PUB-
SHER to fewer and stronger units in-ites, perhaps, that the country in en sections and as a whole is still over-spapered. That, at least, is the argunt behind some of the combinations.

fore importance, however, is attached
the assertion that by virtue of com-nations, newspaper circulations in given mmunities may be controlled. As an mple, an all-day newspaper publisher see to it that his morning paper sold chiefly in the suburbs and surnding country districts while he will ss city sales for the evening paper.

wo main objections frequently voiced advertisers individually and as organzions is the fact that many, although all of the combinations, are "enced."

hus when John C. Long, secretary the advertising committee of the Na-nal Automobile Chamber of Commerce, rted his direct mail campaign against mbinations late last month, he objected what he said was "compulsion to buy articles when only one may be ded," adding his conviction that this re rise to "an uneconomic situation."

Ready answers to this sort of reason-are available from all-day-paper kers.

"In the first place," said one, "can a mbination paper be considered as two icles any more than the evening paper a metropolitan center, which gets out bull-dog at breakfast time and prints adily through the day and closes with baseball final at seven or so in the ning."

"Why should they object because we ce them to buy our morning and evening paper at one rate?" asked another. "Certainly they realize that we are not willing to divide our circulation and sell only one part of it at a time. They cannot buy 500,000 of the Saturday Evening Post's total circulation. Like the S. E. P., we cannot operate unless our advertisers purchase all of our circulation. Cost of publishing a newspaper is based largely on the circulation, and naturally enough advertising rates are likewise established on the same basis.

"If an advertiser forces a paper to sell his circulation separately, that advertiser will get separate rates, and they will be higher for the service rendered."

Another cry against the combination is the well-known shout of "duplication."

"But," say some of the all-day paper men, "duplication is advertising. The only way an advertiser could possibly avoid duplication would be for him to insert his copy once, and once only, in one medium.

"There would be no use for advertising at all if it was not for duplication and reiteration. 'Castoria' never changes its copy year in and year out and the company manufacturing this medicine was sold recently for millions of dollars.

"The same is true of Douglas shoes. W. L. Douglas, before he died, was quoted as saying once: 'I don't care what you think of my copy or where you put it. It sells my shoes.'"

One argument, not stressed previously in this article, was emphasized particularly by one representative.

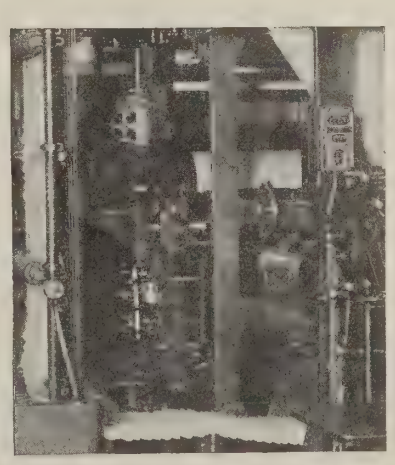
"If the combination paper has accomplished anything worth while," said this gentleman, "it has reduced the destructive competition so common in newspaper space selling. In combinations you will find papers have gotten together to operate a constructive campaign to sell

The boy on the street

knows his customers choose the sheet with the "Latest News"

"Tribune, Times, Post"—which one will this approaching customer choose? His choice and that of his kind, determines circulation—"ad" lineage—your paper's profit and prestige.

A newspaper's real competition exists at the newsstand. You can make your sheet preferred at the stand by getting late news on the street first.



Getting last minute news on the stands ahead of your competitors is somewhat a matter of mechanical equipment.

Cutler-Hammer Control on the presses reduces starting, stopping and running of motor driven presses to the simple pushing of buttons on conveniently located control stations.

Men and motors are fully protected—C-H Control eliminates those disastrous motor failures that make the sheet late on the street.

C-H Dispatch Conveyors take the papers from the presses and deliver them to the mailroom tables—No Fly Boys—no delay—just a steady stream of papers going to waiting trucks.

If you want to speed up the sheet—beat competition at the newsstand—get in touch with C-H engineers. Let them figure with you on cutting the time between composing room and the street.

Press-room of the "Morning Call", Allentown, Pa. In addition to the C-H Master Control Stations, note the C-H Conveyor which takes the papers from the press to the distribution room.

CUTLER HAMMER
Press Room Efficiency Depends on Electrical Control
Pioneer Manufacturers of Electric Control Apparatus
1203 St. Paul Avenue
MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN

CUTLER HAMMER
Press Room Efficiency Depends on Electrical Control

their market to the advertisers. They are saving themselves considerable sums of money, spent in destructive salesmanship, and are investing it in improved service to readers and to advertisers, making their properties more profitable to themselves."

As presented for EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week by Arthur H. Ogle, secretary of the Association of National Advertisers, the main objection of this body to the combination or all-day paper follows:

"The case against enforced combination newspapers seems so clear to the national advertiser that I find it difficult to examine the situation in a purely judicial manner. The advertiser's objection to enforced combinations is based on what appear to be the most obvious grounds and it is difficult for him to understand why a publisher is willing to disregard these factors which seem so sound to the man who is buying the advertising.

"Briefly, here are the points of objection in the advertiser's case:

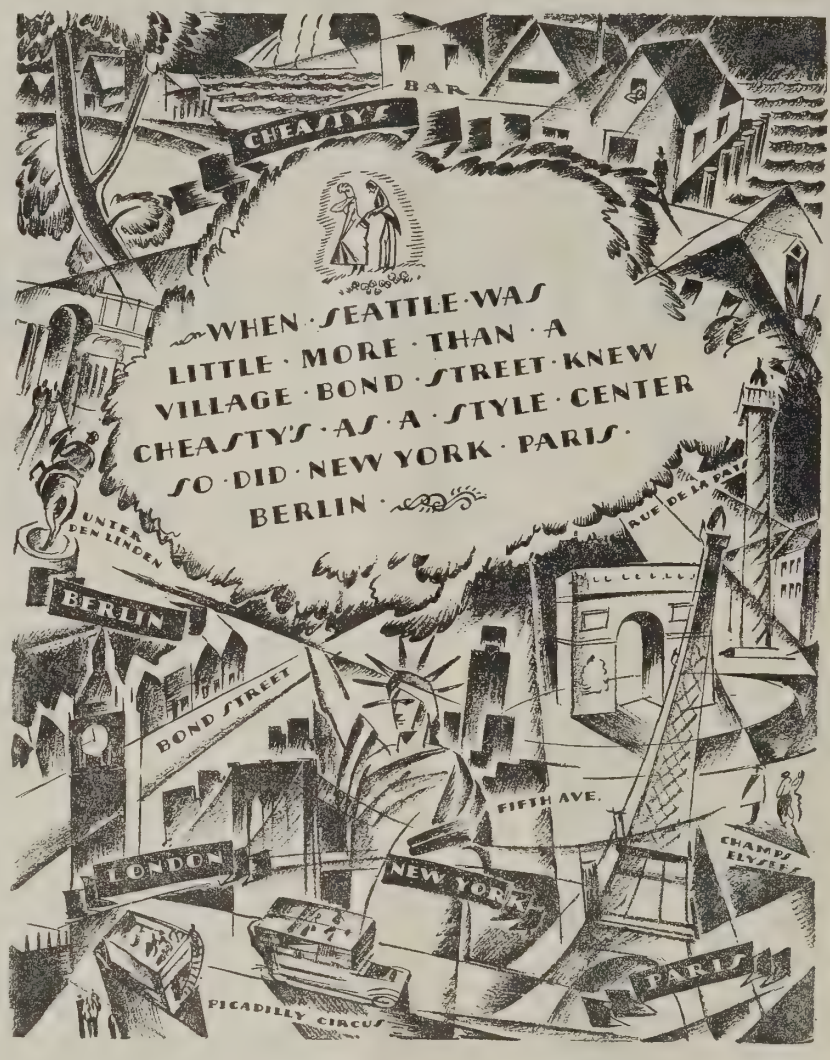
"1. He is deprived of the right of choosing his own advertising media although in most cases no such fraternalistic attitude is taken toward the local advertiser.

"2. He is forced to buy two units of circulation instead of one even though there may be a high percentage of duplication and even though his potential sales in the territory affected cannot by any conceivable means be immediately increased to a point which will justify the expenditure involved.

"3. He is frequently deprived of his ability to make a choice between afternoon and morning papers.

"4. He is frequently forced to buy advertising in a 'weak sister' which he would not consider buying alone, simply because the publisher sees in this a method of bringing the 'weak sister' through the nursing period without a casualty.

"Even though the normal advertiser is a patient sort of fellow who is willing to have a good many of his rights trampled on before he gets very hot about it, I think it is becoming increasingly apparent to some publishers of enforced combination newspapers that he can be kicked just so far down the hill before he rises up and begins to retrace his steps with a sturdy stride.



"But all the indignant protests and heat generated in an argument over the unfairness of such a situation are quite apart from the economic considerations involved. The most convincing reason why combination rates should not be forced on advertisers is an economic one and it is perfectly logical that, at a time when nearly every advertising interest has as its problem of major concern an increase in returns from the advertising dollar, advertisers should resent the ill-judged action of a few publishers who seem to be hampering progress by requiring unjustified advertising expenditures.

"In support of this feeling on the part of advertisers I need only remind the publishers of enforced combinations that if they force an advertiser to buy two papers, when he can only afford to buy one, they are forcing him to one of several alternatives, any of which is contrary to the principles of sound business development. Either he must spend too much to get his business in that territory, thus increasing the cost of distribution, or he must use a second rate medium, or he must neglect the territory entirely.

"In some letters I have had from publishers recently, I have noted hurt protests that all enforced combinations are not alike, and should not be thrown under the same criticism. This or that publisher contends that his combination consists of two leading papers. The case is quite different, he contends, because he is giving the advertiser a lower rate for the two than he could get if he bought them separately. The case is different, to be sure, but the fundamental principles are the same: the advertiser is denied the power of selection, and such denial brings in its wake most of the evils previously mentioned, regardless of the merit of the publications involved.

"The thing we like to do least of all is to question the motives of those with whom we do business, for the most satisfactory kind of business is that which is based on mutual trust, confidence, and cooperation. But I do know from my contacts with advertisers that most of those who have investigated this subject are inclined seriously to question the motives of those publishers who deny them the power of choosing their own media by forcing them to buy combinations of two or more newspapers. Possibly after all this is one of the most serious effects of the entire situation. Arbitrary decisions breed indignation and distrust, yet we are all in the business of trying to make advertising more productive and we should be pulling together toward this common goal. Whatever brings about a questioning of motives is a reactionary influence. Isn't it just possible that publishers who ponder the advisability of establishing forced combinations might do well to take the buyers of advertising into their confidence and consult with them before taking a step so obviously subject to criticism?"

COPY THE DETERMINING FACTOR IN SUCCESS OF CLOTHIER'S NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

"Advanced" Newspaper Copy of Seattle Clothier

THE value of the newspaper as an advertising medium for the retail clothier and furnisher was ably defended and stressed by Ray E. Bigelow, of Cheasty's, Seattle, one of the leading clothiers of the Pacific Northwest, at the recent ninth annual convention of the Washington-Idaho Retail Clothiers' & Furnishers' Association, held at Tacoma, Wash., attended by many clothiers from the states of Washington and Idaho.

Mr. Bigelow, a large user of newspaper space in Seattle, in an original, appealing manner, practices what he preaches. He pointed out to the gathering that "newspaper advertising is just as good a medium as it was twenty-five years ago, but the results depend on the advertising."

The kind of copy which the clothier uses, his message, and the way that message is presented, has its direct influence on results. Cheasty's of Seattle, now completing their fine new home, which is a testimonial to their successful methods, is using at present a type of cubist art and original lettering and drawings for the present pre-view opening campaign which it is conducting in the Seattle newspapers, as may be glimpsed from the accompanying illustrations.

The question of the use of local newspaper space by the retail clothier in each community of the states of Washington and Oregon was made the subject of an open forum discussion at the meeting, with the valued and successful experience of Mr. Bigelow being advanced, who indicated that it was the "kind" of advertising copy which counted most.

"NEWSPAPER WEEK" SET

Event Inaugurated Last Year by I.A to Be Repeated Jan. 16

"Newspaper Week" held for the time last year under the auspices of International Advertising Association the Association of Newspaper Advertising Executives, will be repeated year, Earle Pearson, I. A. A. mana announced this week.

The week of Benjamin Frank birthday, Jan. 16, is the date set. M ber clubs of the I. A. A. will be vided with programs during this w focusing attention on the newspaper an advertising medium. Harvey Young, Columbus Dispatch, and president of the A. N. A. E., will operate in the program plans.

Other "days" or "Weeks" will sponsored by the I. A. A. for the busi papers, the agricultural publishers, door and poster groups, window disp and financial advertisers.

EMPLOYERS DINE MAJ. BERRY

George L. Berry, president of the ternational Printing Pressmen and sistants' Union, was the guest of ho at a reception in the Hotel Severin, dianapolis, Aug. 8. Hilton U. Bro chairman of the board of the Indianap News, was in charge. Prior to the ception a dinner was held at the E Club for members of Indianapolis loc of the union. Other guests were Brown, Howard P. Savage, national co mander of the American Legion; Cur Hodges of the News, James A. Stu and Frank Eckert of the Indianap Star, W. A. Mayborn and Boyd Gurl of the Indianapolis Times, A. R. Kli and Benjamin Pigman of the Indianap Post, Harvey Kelly of the Americ Newspaper Publishers Association a Arthur D. Pratt, representing the Unit Typothetæ of Indianapolis and the lo pressmen's union.

Used Presses to Fit Your Needs

Fully guaranteed

Write us

THE DUPLEX
PRINTING PRESS CO.
Battle Creek
MICHIGAN

GRAHAM BROTHERS TRUCKS SOLD BY DODGE BROTHERS DEALERS EVERYWHERE

SERVICE
THE CHARLES PARTLOWE COMPANY
America's Largest Circulation Building Organization
RESULTS COUNT
OCCIDENTAL BLDG. INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

CIGARETTE WAR WILL BOOST THE LINAGE

Keen Competition in 20 for 15-Cent Class, Aided by Auto Fight, May Prevent Sag, Thinks Cone— N. Y. Special

Keen competition in the 20 for 15 cents cigarette field and an automobile price war between Ford and General Motors this fall may save newspapers from taking a loss over last year in national linage.

E. S. Cone

E. S. Cone, of Cone, Rothenburg & Noe, newspaper representatives, who made this prediction this week, based it on a study of his own books, a knowledge of advertising contracts now on schedule, and an old-time advertising man's opinion of what must happen if Ford expects to introduce a new low-priced car to the public in opposition to "The Most Beautiful Chevrolet."

"'Old Gold' cigarettes have had a whirlwind success," Mr. Cone said. "Introduced first through New England newspapers, the New York territory was opened, and other markets are following. Lennon & Mitchell, advertising agency, is placing contracts in every publication worthy of the name of newspaper. It is easily a $1,000,000 campaign. What is the result? The P. Lorillard Tobacco Company has purchased a factory in New Jersey and is remodelling it and building new factories elsewhere.

"The advertising copy on this account has made a hit. It has the goods. I know, because I used to write patent medicine advertising in the old days, and that certainly sold the bottles.

"The old medicine ads I got out showed a picture of a man his face all screwed up in pain and his hand on the small of his back. My how it ached! Then just below was the same man, his face wreathed in smiles. Cured! And how? Through my medicine.

From the ads readers got to believe that they would be cured. We used to argue that a cure was 90 per cent faith. That argument hasn't been knocked dead yet.

"'Old Gold' has recaptured that old idea. 'Not a Cough in a Carload' is its slogan. It hasn't been used before for cigarettes. It's original and clever. But the idea isn't new. Readers of the advertisements will get to believe that they won't cough after smoking 'Old Gold' cigarettes. If they do cough they will set it down to a cold in the head, a tickle in the nose, or a weak stomach. By the same reasoning there probably isn't a cough in a carload of any other cigarettes. But I like 'Old Gold.' I've been sold on their mildness. Here, have one."

Came the pause of two conversationalists lighting up.

"Lucky Strike was already hard at it before this new cigarette came into the ring," continued Mr. Cone, his head wreathed in smoke clouds. "'Lucky's' discovered newspaper space through Lord & Thomas and Logan. Chesterfield is buying heavily as another big contender in the 20 for 15 cent field. And another entrant is rumored. Nobody knows the name or the company yet, but the report is pretty strong. . . ."

"I was looking over our books the other day. Figured out the average gain was 32 per cent for the 12 months of 1926. But do you know how that gain fell? Thirty per cent in the first six months and two per cent in the last six months.

"This year, despite the flood, the same newspapers from Jan. 1 to July 1, 1927, only lost six per cent compared with the same period last year. The flood worked both ways. It scared off some and brought on others.

"I believe that gains will be made during the last six months of this year that will offset the loss of the first six. Tobacco and cigarette advertising is double this year what it was last. And in the papers are stories of a new Ford car to be completed Sept. 1. Ford and General Motors are scheduled for a battle that certainly will be reflected in the advertising columns."

NEW PLANT AT RESEDA

The Reseda (Cal.) Banner will build a new newspaper home on Canby street. A. E. Hartman is publisher and owner.

MACGREGOR WITH PRICE

Acme Newspicture Man Working for New Studio

Peter A. MacGregor has left the photographic staff of Acme Newspictures, Inc., and is now on the staff of Price Studios, operated by Jack Price, formerly of the New York World, and the staff photographer of EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

MacGregor only recently returned from Germany, where he went with Mrs. Clarence Chamberlain when she cossed to join her aviator husband. While abroad he flew over four countries without passport. He also made an arrangement to handle publicity for Thea Rasche, German aviatrix. Before joining Acme, he worked for Underwood and Underwood and the United Press.

U. P. RE-ROUTES WIRES

The Illinois state leased wire circuit of the United Press has been re-routed to include the three U. P. bureaus which supply news service within the state. Chicago, Springfield and St. Louis, the latter serving Southern Illinois, are, by the new arrangement, all sending stations on the Illinois circuit. Twenty-three newspapers are on the U. P. Illinois state wire.

Telegraphed Pictures In Your Own Office On Your Own Machine From Anywhere When You Want Them Via

The New Telepix

An Improved Model of the First Machine to Prove Successful in Transcontinental Transmission of News Photographs.

The Telepix Association

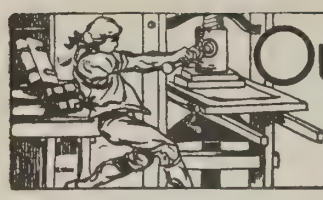
A Virtual "Associated Press" for Wired Picture Transmission is Now in Process of Organization. It Will be a Membership Corporation, Formed Under the Laws of the State of New York.

The New Telepix occupies less than two square feet of floor space.

¶ The Telepix Association has made an exclusive contract with the Telepix Corporation of America, a New York Corporation, to supply The New TELEPIX solely to the newspapers represented by its members.

¶ The New TELEPIX uses for transmitting telegraph wires—the most economical and efficient of all mediums. The average transmission time is about 20 minutes. The cost per picture averages $3.00 per 1,000 miles.

¶ The initial coast-to-coast circuit is expected to be ready for operation to carry pictures of the Dempsey-Tunney championship fight.



¶ A morning or evening paper franchise still may be open in your city. Wire or write today for details of Charter Membership and for the lease rate on The New TELEPIX for your paper.

¶ Applications will be considered in the order of their receipt.

TELEPIX CORPORATION OF AMERICA

Executive Offices

116 East 56th Street New York City.

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

WILLIAM EDLIN has put out a little pamphlet entitled, "A New Idea in Journalism." He begins by saying that America is essentially a newspaper country, but that its press has become thoroughly commercialized.

He is especially bitter toward the tabloids. This type of journalism is, to quote his words, "dragging into the gutter those newspapers which assume to have a good reputation." He expresses about the same thought when he says that the success of the tabloid "is undermining the very foundation of the once decent moulders of public opinion." The astonishing thing to him is that "so-called decent newspapers are seemingly indifferent to the operations of the pornographic tabloid." Such indifference is not born of contempt, for "these standard size newspapers are compelled to flatter the tabloid by imitating it more or less."

The pamphlet has something to say about the Kip-Rhinelander trial, the Browning-Peaches scandal, the Hall-Mills trial, and the Snyder-Gray murder case. On the advertising side, the American newspapers constitute "A huge bill poster singing Hallelujahs to the gods of merchandise."

The new idea, suggested by the title, is the founding of a daily newspaper without advertisements. To quote from the pamphlet: "The intelligent, independent thinking reader must be trained to pay directly out of his own pocket for his newspaper."

* * *

THE present week seems to be an open season for taking shots at the newspaper. The leading editorial in the New Republic for August 10 is headed "Tainted News in Peace." It deals with the role the press is playing in international relations in general and with the Geneva Conference in particular.

The editorial does have a sort of happy ending. For in speaking of the conference of journalists which will meet at Geneva beginning Aug. 24, it says that the chief subject for discussion will be the resolution which aims to break up official control of news. But even here it hints that possibly some action will be taken to rescind this resolution which was passed in a similar meeting about a year ago, and "which was largely adopted as a result of the efforts of Roy Howard of the United Press." The editorial concludes with a statement in detail of the resolution.

* * *

THE mutiny among newspapers readers is the subject of a little chat by E. W. Howe in the current issue of his monthly magazine. "Long experience in the business," says Mr. Howe, "has convinced me that newspapers are not popular."

Mr. Howe then adds that he is of the opinion that the fault is not all on one side. He mentions how a man once threatened to kill him on the ground of having been hounded for years. The facts were that Mr. Howe had not mentioned the man at all but the latter had seen other people pleasantly mentioned by name in Mr. Howe's paper and so thought he was being persecuted by not having personal mention of himself.

One reason given by Mr. Howe for the unpopularity of newspapers is that those who are mentioned, resent not being mentioned more frequently, and those that are not mentioned at all are particularly furious over the omission.

Among the incidents mentioned by Mr. Howe to prove the point, is the discussion that was broadcast from a radio station in Chicago on the topic, "Do present-day newspapers exercise more harmful than beneficial influence on the community at large?" The twelve thousand people who heard this discussion were invited to send in ballots. These ballots according to Mr. Howe, were two to one against the newspapers.

Whether it is true, as charged, that publishers might print better newspapers at less expense, please their patrons better, and make more profit, Mr. Howe frankly admits that he does not know. He does express surprise that such is the contention of a surprising number of people. He expresses wonder that newspaper publishers do not discuss this question more among themselves, since their readers are becoming more mutinuous.

Mr. Howe concludes this chat with the assertion that in three countries, liberty of the press, so highly regarded in America, has been wiped out. Why? He believes that this question is well worthy of the serious attention of newspaper makers.

* * *

THE telephone bell rang in the country home of Robert T. Morris. A reporter, at the other end of the wire, wanted to say that he could not be present that day at a meeting of horticulturists because several important things were going on in town.

The retort of Dr. Morris, a naturalist and a horticulturist, was a series of articles which he contributed to The American Nut Journal—a literal and not a figurative periodical. These he has now collected into a volume, "Editorial Silence" (The Stratford Company).

"Editorial Silence" reminds me very much of my favorite nut. The shell easily splits into two halves. The first, Doctor Morris calls the "Prologue"; the other, the "Postlogue." The meat between these two halves—part two of the book—is entitled "Princes and Presses." The flavor of the meat is thus described by Dr. Morris, "Details of human achievement rather than those of human error should be chosen by news editors for front page display." Here's the volume in a nutshell.

Part of the shell is made up of a quotation which Dr. Morris said that Julian Mason, editor of the New York Evening Post, made at the press convention at Columbia University, "The newspaper profession is bum business." Dr. Morris, in speaking of his playmates, schoolmates, and collegemates who have entered the newspaper business, quotes one of them as having remarked that he would have to degenerate for ten years before he could be fitted into position in the newspaper office and that it was too long a time to wait.

A little farther along in the volume the author speaks of stepping up to a newsstand in a city where he was not familiar with the local papers. He received in response to his inquiry as to which was the most responsible, "Oh! They all spend their time kidding the public." The newsdealer, according to Dr. Morris, employed the right word.

Here is a bit of meat that clings to the shell of the Prologue:

> Have news editors no daughters who are still innocent? Have they no sons of whom they are proud? Do they like to bring to the hearthstone news which would be injurious to their own sons and daughters? If the news is not suitable for their own families would its preparation for fine sons and innocent daughters of other people not belong to malice aforethought? How about that?

Here is another bit clinging to the same shell:

> I happened to be spending a few days at a hotel with an official of a great railroad. He observed that one of the waitresses was reading the Literary Digest in spare moments. He made it a point to get over to her table at some of our meals—engaged her in conversation and upon leaving said to her, "I have a place for you in my office in New York." Had she been reading a sensational newspaper in spare moments neither one of us would have taken the trouble to find out if she was or was not ordinary in her occupation. We would have assumed that she was ordinary.
>
> Overheard in the train: "I want to make an investment with Johnson but he reads the Daily Blank or at least has it in his pocket and I do not like to trust that class of mind."

Dr. Morris is positive that there is only one newspaper of large circulation in this country that is wholly free for ideal management and that the condition obtains for that newspaper because of a sectarian protection. The London Times "which recently developed a list to lar-

Readers with BUYING POWER

THE New York Sun's large, responsive circulation of over 265,000, is concentrated among people of moderate and more than moderate means—people who have money enough to spend not only for the necessities of life, but also for the comforts and pleasures of life.

Because they are frequently leaders in their communities, the readers of The Sun exercise a marked influence on the buying habits of others.

The Sun
NEW YORK

The World

These two newspapers offer the most powerful all-day service in New York available as a unit under a single contact. The 600,000 DAILY WORLD — EVENING WORLD readers constitute a highly concentrated force to be reckoned with in any campaign designed to effect distribution in Greater New York.

The Evening World
Pulitzer Building, New York
Tribune Tower, Chicago

Buffalo, The Wonder City of America
Buffalo—a profitable Market for Advertisers

Sales in Buffalo are splendid for advertising goods. Employment conditions excellent, retail and other business thriving. One newspaper will put your story over to 83% of the people—that paper is the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS
Read in 4 out of 5 Buffalo Homes

EDWARD H. BUTLER
Editor and Publisher
KELLY-SMITH COMPANY
Representatives
Graybar Bldg. New York, N. Y. — Tribune Tower Chicago, Ill.
Atlantic Bldg. Philadelphia — Waterman Bldg. Boston

The largest evening paper circulation in Baltimore

151,059
May, net paid

May, 1927, sets a new circulation record for daily papers in Baltimore.

The NEWS, with its May net paid circulation of 151,059, enjoys a margin of 24,141 copies over that of the Evening Sun, its nearest competitor.

You reach more of Baltimore through the

BALTIMORE NEWS

Largest circulation of any daily paper in the South

After All

It's not so much how many read your story as how many put credence in it.

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD

Goes not only into the homes but also into the hearts of 150,000 substantial families daily.

Second Largest Morning Daily in Philadelphia

Always Reliable

in
Detroit—

Free Press circulation reaches 31,000 more than the total number of families owning their own homes.

The "Free Press"
"Starts the day in Detroit"

With a stable, uninflated, liberal pursed circulation productive of greater advertising returns at lower cost.

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE
of the
INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION

Can supply you with competent circulation men of capacity and ability capable to take entire charge of your department or to fill important posts in the department.

Address the Secretary-Treasurer please, Mr. Clarence Eyster, care Star Building, Peoria, Ill.

ıoard, is now getting back on even keel .gain" because the pumps have thrown ɔut the bilge water. The paragraph re-:ording this opinion closes with this ad-nonition, "Other papers please copy."

Passing from the London Times to the New York Times, Dr. Morris makes this :omment:

In the New York Times of July 8, 1925, there s a report of the meeting of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association at Asheville. Mr. Adolph S. Ochs urged them in accordance with his customary spirit and ideals to remem-ɔer that in our country the press as a whole s independent and honest, free from the :harge of venality. He told editors that they nust be ever watchful that this reputation be ɔreserved and deserved. He advised publishers against the wild chase for numbers in the natter of circulation and against appeals to the reading public through features which might ɔverburden the newspaper and prove a blemish ɔn its quality. He expressed the opinion that a large percentage of feature matter in which newspapers so largely indulge, would be found ɔn careful investigation to have very little appeal to the public.

But to get right to the kernel, the trouble with American journalism, according to Dr. Morris, is that it does not devote enough space to the culture of nuts—the kind that grows on trees, although it produces a large crop of the other kind. He says:

It seems to me that it would be news for people to learn that in the piney woodlands of Alabama and Georgia pecan growers can now ride about in limousines to their various plantations.

It seems to me that it would be news if farmers in general were informed that they might raise the mortgage on the farm by raising nut crops for which the demand exceeds the supply. Many years must elapse before the market equilibrium in the field of agriculture is reached.

It would not be news perhaps to be told that one may stand on the beautiful hills at Williamstown and look over thousands of acres of unoccupied woodland almost every acre of which could be made to support at least two people in comfort while two babies were coming.

Dr. Morris features this idea again and again in "Princes and Presses" and sticks this to the other half of the shell, "The Prologue":

The Northern Nut Growers held their annual meeting in St. Louis in September, 1925. Hon. Frank H. Wielandy of that city knows about almost everything good that is going on in this country but when introducing one of the speakers at a luncheon of the Kiwanis Club he said that previous to this meeting he had no conception of the magnitude of the nut business or of the quality and character of the men who were interested in the subject. He had not previously known that carloads of whole trainloads of nuts and nut products went rumbling back and forth upon the railroad tracks of his own state. The whole world would know what Mr. Wielandy discovered if the newspaper press of this country were to give as much publicity to this sort of discovery as it will give to the next scandal in high life.

Much of the material in this volume may be safely passed over in editorial silence, so far as I am concerned. To many of his criticisms of American newspapers, I am tempted to say by way of reply, "Chestnuts!"

Here and there through the volume, however, may be found real meat for those who edit and make American newspapers. The following quotation illustrates exactly what I mean:

It is as difficult to dynamite tradition out of the newspaper office as it is to blast sectarian theology out of a religionist. Furthermore, stockholders look to the counting-house department. Destructive news must be made to clutch the mind of the moron in order to compel the owner to expel pennies. A trip on the subway in New York will furnish an object lesson during the morning and evening rush hours. It will be observed that "news" belongs largely in lipstick category.

We may find some hope in the fact that editors are on the defensive against a public which criticizes their taste in the selection of news material.

At a meeting of editors in New York recently, one of them said that no matter how much the public might complain, the fact was that the press reflected in ink the actual happenings in human life. I presume that this was an honest expression of opinion and that the editor simply needs to be informed.

I will inform him that his reporters are haunting the police courts instead of mingling in assemblages of the Boy Scouts. I will inform him that his reporters are playing up mysteries and crime instead of following up the work of the Camp Fire Girls. In other words, his reporters are skimming from the beautiful molten gold of actual life the dirty dross. This is what they are reflecting in ink and calling life.

Almost immediately following the quotation just made is this paragraph:

If some visitor from Mars were to alight upon this earth and read the scareheads of the average newspaper press he might hurry back to his cold planet again in order to skedaddle from a world which appeared to be chiefly occupied in bad behavior.

Some people, including possibly the author of "Editorial Silence," need a course in how to read a newspaper. If some visitor from Mars should read our newspapers, he would for the most part, get the wrong impression of what is going on so far as our planet is concerned. It is the unusual, as every newspaper man knows, that gives value to a news story. The usual and the routine seldom has great interest. The visitor from Mars would learn about every railroad train that met with a wreck. But of the trains that departed and arrived on schedule time, he would see nothing in the press. Of the clergy who are giving their lives to the service of their fellowmen, the visitor from Mars would learn little. But of the clergymen who have clandestine love affairs with members of their choir, of the salesmen who take along other men's wives on their selling trips, of the bank presidents who accuse their wives of infidelity, of the college presidents who are opposed to the teaching of evolution—of these the visitor from Mars would hear enough, and to spare, in American newspapers.

But the whole trouble is that the visitor from Mars did not know how to read his paper. The same thing is true of some of the carping critics of the American press.

* * *

ADVERTISING managers should be interested in "Typographical Standards" recently published by the advertising department of the New York Times. Prepared under the supervision of Ben Dalgin, chief of the advertising production department of that paper, it sets forth those standards which have not been effect for five years. The volume is published, so the preface says, "to explain clearly typographical standards of the Times and with a hope that the movement for the betterment of newspaper advertising columns may gain impetus from it."

In addition to the technical typographical regulations, the volume takes up black masses, borders, the different effects obtained by the use of Ben Day tints, the method of estimating the reduction of engravings, advertising terms, the uses of matrices in newspaper advertising, line cuts and half tones, etc. It concludes with a discussion of rotogravure advertising copy.

* * *

THE article listed first on the cover of The Nation for August 10 is "If Darrow had been a Journalist." It is an anonymous article but the editor of the Nation says that the author is "the editorial head of a newspaper generally regarded as among the ten or a dozen most important in the United States." No bets on the authorship will be accepted.

Here is what the author says of himself:

I who write this am an editor whose period of active service coincides almost exactly with that of Darrow. At one time—and that the crucial moment in his career—our political and social convictions were almost identical. He has grown more radical and could easily afford to; I have grown more conservative—I admit it ruefully to myself—under the persistent economic pressure of journalistic conditions. Among my fellows on the press I am looked upon as one whose lot has been easy, whose career has been influential, whose expressions have been radical, and whose present status is that of success. But when I look back on a lifetime of repression I wonder that some American Freud has not turned his attention to the effect of systematic repression of honest thought upon what should be a great, liberal, and influential profession. Surely it is not only the suppressed libido that distorts and tortures the maturer years of man.

Speaking of the opportunities for youth in the newspaper business, the author of this article in the Nation makes the following observation:

The youth who is planning to adopt daily journalism for his life's work should do so only with a clear understanding that the chances are strongly against his ever being able to use his calling as a means of impressing his own convictions on even a small section of public opinion. If he shall come to own his own paper he can do so to his heart's content—provided the responsibilities and profits of proprietorship do not incline him to adopt the views of the business community as his own. Or he may be fortunate enough to secure a connection with a newspaper the policies of which accord with his own opinions—against this the chances are as infinity to one unless his own opinions are those of Babbitt. The prudent course, measured by worldly standards, is for him to accept at the outset the fact that he accepts employment—as a lawyer accepts a retainer—to defend not his own views but those of his employers, however repugnant the latter may be to him.

The only opportunity for the young man with a burning message seems to be to send his contribution to the Nation or to the New Republic. But if he does this he becomes, to quote the article in the Nation, "suspect in the daily sanctums."

STORE NEWS FOR SPRINGFIELD

Merchants' Circular to Be Issued from Remodeled Garage

The Springfield Shopping News, advertising publication of the Springfield Merchants, Inc., will be published in a remodeled garage building that once housed 70 automobiles, according to plans which have been filed with the municipal building department. Estimated cost of the alterations is set at $2,000. Several linotypes and other modern printing equipment soon will be installed in the garage building. A date for the first issue has not yet been determined.

FRED RUNDE TO WED

Fred J. Runde, general manager of the Fourth Estate, a newspaper trade journal, has announced his engagement to Miss Ruth Daly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Daly of Brooklyn. No date has been set for the ceremony, but it is expected it will be held in October.

IN some cities, the "leading" newspaper may have merely a few hundred more circulation than its competitor. The Press has 40,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two evening newspapers combined—and 35,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two Sunday news papers combined.

THE PITTSBURGH PRESS

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Member of the A. B. C.

If Quality
of circulation is your first consideration.

The Evening Star
With Sunday Morning Editions
Washington, D. C.

will have your preference—same as it has the preference of practically everyone in the National Capital.

The Star's circulation is home circulation—both quality and quantity—the kind that counts most with advertisers.

N. Y. Office—110 E. 42nd St.
Dan A. Carroll

Chicago Office—Tower Building
J. E. Lutz

ADVERTISERS who understand the Iowa situation know from experience that the consumers' market there cannot be properly sold without the use of newspapers in these twenty-one key cities.

IOWA DAILY PRESS ASS'N
DAVENPORT, IOWA.

Ames Tribune
Boone News-Republican
Burlington Gazette
Burlington Hawk-Eye
Cedar Rapids Gazette
Centerville Iowegian & Citizen
Council Bluffs Nonpareil
Davenport Democrat & Leader
Davenport Times
Dubuque Telegraph-Herald
Fort Dodge Messenger & Chronicle
Fort Madison Democrat
Iowa City Press Citizen
Keokuk Gate City
Marshalltown Times-Republican
Mason City Globe-Gazette & Times
Muscatine Journal & News-Tribune
Oelwein Register
Oskaloosa Herald
Ottumwa Courier
Sioux City Journal
Sioux City Tribune
Washington Journal
Waterloo Courier
Waterloo Tribune

NEW OFFICES
GRAYBAR
BUILDING

On and after August 1st the new offices of this organization will be 1823 Graybar Building, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York City.

S. P. WESTON, INC.

Newspaper Buildings, Production, Operation Surveys, Valuations.

420 Lexington Avenue, New York

Over 260,000 Homes in Michigan served by Booth Newspapers

The Grand Rapids Press
The Flint Daily Journal
The Saginaw News Courier
The Kalamazoo Gazette
The Jackson Citizen Patriot
The Bay City Times Tribune
The Muskegon Chronicle
The Ann Arbor Times News

National Advertising Representatives

I. A. KLEIN
50 East 42nd Street
New York City

J. E. LUTZ
6 N. Michigan Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

ROTO-GRAVURE
Sections for Newspapers & Magazines
STANDARD
Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

PAWNEE BILL
by
HERMAN EDWIN MOOTZ

GRIPPING TALE of INDIAN LIFE

Thrilling 60,000 word story of the ONLY LIVING SCOUT.

LOVE ROMANCE of FRONTIER DAYS

The Last Real Story of the Red Man in 32 instalments.
Released Now.
Illustrated by exclusive photos never before published from the collection of Major Gordon W. Lillie (Pawnee Bill).

44 Cities Closed.
Yours may not be.
Wire your order.

GRAPHIC SYNDICATE, Inc.
350 Hudson Street, New York, N. Y.

ROYALTIES RULED AS "UNEARNED INCOME"

Internal Revenue Bureau Holds Money from Books Sold to Publishers Is Not Earned — Ruling Called Unfair in New York Times Editorial

Royalties received by authors are classed as "unearned income" in a recent ruling of the Internal Revenue Bureau, bringing forth an editorial protest from the New York Times, which insists that the decision discriminates against authors unfairly. The Times editorial reads:

However sound in law may be the Internal Revenue Bureau's ruling that royalties received by authors are "unearned income," they are sure to feel that this decision discriminates against them unfairly. The Internal Revenue Bureau apparently divides into three classes the product of pens: First, journalistic or other work paid for on a time or space basis; second, books contracted for in advance by publishers; third, books the right to publish which an author sells. The first two categories are deemed by the Treasury officials to represent work the income from which is earned. Income from the third is "unearned."

Professional writers find such a distinction difficult to understand. Upon analysis it means that if their routine labors are for daily or serial publication, they have "earned" their income. But if they are for serial payment—i. e., on a royalty basis—the income is unearned. A strict construction of this ruling would seem to indicate that if the author is paid a lump sum, instead of in proportion to sales, he has earned his income, whereas if he waits for the semi-annual accounting with his publishers he has failed to earn his income.

It has always been the privilege of the Treasury Department to make cast-iron rulings interpreting the law. Those who have time and money may contest unfavorable decisions. But the mass of taxpayers, including the majority of authors, are unable to do so. Hence their only redress is to have the apparent injustice discussed. It is not for them to question the validity of the legal opinion that a piece of writing of the sort contemplated in this case, namely, a book that has not been contracted for by a publisher, is the author's property and that royalties received from it "are paid for the use or sale of the property." But the proper valuation to be set on this property and the question whether, when royalties decline (as usually happens) the value of the author's property can be said to have depreciated, so that he may claim any deduction on this account—these things are fairly debatable.

In such matters common sense and fair play cannot wholly be ruled out. The Internal Revenue Bureau might as well decide that the income of a painter whose works are exhibited for a price is unearned, whereas that from paintings paid for in full is earned. It may be true that some authors do not deserve even what they earn. But the Treasury is taking upon itself the task of drawing fine distinctions which may be good law, but which are bound to be unfair to the members of a supposedly honorable and usually underpaid profession.

COLLEY IS ILL

Reginald Colley, former field representative of the International Advertising Association, is recovering from a serious operation at the Naval Hospital, Brooklyn. Before joining the I. A. A. Mr. Colley was in newspaper work on the advertising staff of the Fargo (N. D.) Forum.

JOURNALISM FOR TEACHERS

New York State College to Resume Courses Dropped 4 Years Ago

Journalism classes will be revived this fall at the New York State College for Teachers at Albany, N. Y. Instruction in journalism was abandoned as a regular college subject four years ago. Revival of the study is being made by the staff of the State College News, undergraduate weekly, and the work will be designed to train "cubs" for the paper and also train students as faculty advisers to high school publications.

Three courses will be taught in the editorial department and one in the business department. Miss Elizabeth Phetteplace, of Norwich, associate managing editor of the News, will teach an elementary course in news writing. Copy reading and headline writing will be taught by William M. French, managing editor, and Miss Margaret Steele, college reporter for the Albany (N. Y.) Times-Union.

Business methods and how to get advertising; the psychology of soliciting; advertising makeup and collection will be taught by Miss Katherine Saxton, business manager. The courses have the endorsement of the college administration. Albany daily editors have offered the services of newspaper offices and staffs to aid the students.

Supplies and Equipment

GOSS
STEREOTYPING MACHINERY
Carried in Stock

Fastest, most easily operated, most accurate and durable flat casting box you can buy. Perfectly balanced. New design lock-up bar allows for quick change when regulating thickness of casts. Positive quick lock-up at four points on box with one lever movement. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

Important Savings in Stereotype Machinery

16-page Scott 2-plate wide Newspaper Press with 20 H.P. motor and complete stereotype equipment

20-page Duplex Metropolitan Model Newspaper Press, with complete stereotype equipment

2-ton Goss Stereotype Metal Furnace with gas burner

50 Stereotype Chases, eight column

1 Hoe Heavy Duty Saw

Send for complete list of Newspaper and Printing Equipment

THOMAS W. HALL COMPANY
575 Washington Street, New York

Drive and Control for Newspaper Presses

A representative installation on a Duplex press, just completed, is that of two 100-h.p., a-c. equipments on a 6-unit Duplex press at the Tampa, Fla., Times. This is a repeat order.

GENERAL ELECTRIC

INVISIBLE EXPENSE

When your blankets are old and worn out, they cause poor printing and many delays, due to the sheets breaking.

Complaints from readers on late delivery and loss of sales.

Rebates to advertisers for poor printing.

Excessive waste paper and extra expense for power and light.

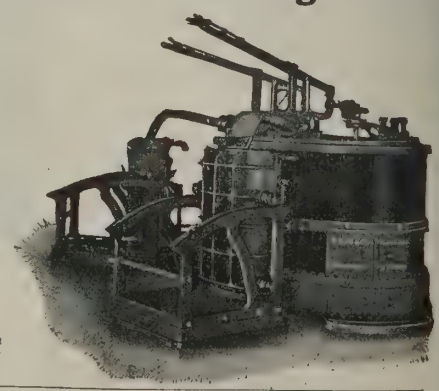
The saving in these items of Invisible Expense for one week will buy a new set of blankets.

You cannot afford to lower your efficiency by false economy.

New England Newspaper Supply Co.
Worcester, Mass., U. S. A.
Cable Address NENSCO, Worcester.

Rebuilt
GOSS & HOE
PRESS
BARGAINS
ALL TYPES
SEND for LIST
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.
CHICAGO – NEW YORK – LONDON

Modern
Composing Room Furniture



as made by us will speed up production and reduce costs—a real saving in your Pay Roll. Are you interested? If so, consult your regular dealer in printers' supplies or write us direct.

Do it now!

HAMILTON MFG. CO.
TWO RIVERS, WIS.

The Quickest and Best Casting Unit

Hoe Stereotype Furnace with Hoe Equipoise Curved Casting Moulds and Pumps.

If it's a Hoe, It's the Best

R. HOE & CO., INC.
504-520 Grand St., New York City
Sharon Bldg. SAN FRANCISCO
7 So. Dearborn St. CHICAGO
Pere Marquette Bldg. NEW ORLEANS
7 Water St. BOSTON

Keep your message before your clients and prospects. The EDITOR & PUBLISHER is your ever-present salesman.

Employment—Equipment—Services

EDITOR & PUBLISHER Classified Advertising Information RATES

SITUATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .50 per line
3 Times — .40 per line
ALL OTHER CLASSIFICATIONS
(Cash with Order)
1 Time — .75 per line
4 Times — .60 per line

Minimum space charge at same rate per line per insertion as earned by frequency of insertion. Minimum Contract space, three lines. The Editor & Publisher reserves the right to classify, edit or reject any advertisement.

ADVERTISING

General Promotion

Do You Want More Local Advertising put us to work for you selling our "Worthwhile" features. Write F. G. Hogan Syndicate, Lincke Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind., or Kane, Pa.

Supplies

Folding Sheets for Art work and Benday effects. Bourges Service, Inc., 144 West 32nd Street, New York.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Brokers

Chas Paper in South for $15,000, or two-thirds interest for $10,000. Established high-grade publication with fine opportunity. Chance for advertising man. Harris-Dibble Co., 345 Madison Ave., New York.

Mid-West Grade Properties in Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Arkansas, both daily and weekly; exclusive listings; no damaging publicity; personal service in every deal; special attention to financing. All matters absolutely confidential. High grade newspaper properties for sale. Clyde H. Knox, 851 Board of Trade Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

Real Opportunities Evening and Weekly publications. Evening papers, exclusive fields: California, North Carolina, South Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Wisconsin. All paying handsome dividends. Also some very desirable weekly papers. J. B. Shale, Times Bldg., New York.

Newspaper Interest Wanted

Publisher - Editor - Manager, experienced in editorial, business and other departments, who has just built up and sold successful daily, seeks new connection. Young, energetic, resourceful. Would consider investment or temporary salary arrangement. C-869, Editor & Publisher.

Service

Let Out of Town Concerns. You can secure all the advantages of a New York address, including the services of established, fully furnished and equipped offices, where your interests, enquiries, callers, literature, mail, or samples will be intelligently and properly handled, for a nominal annual charge. Address (by letter only) Suite 1004, at 1841 Broadway (Columbus Circle), New York City.

CIRCULATION

Promotion

Circulation—When quick, additional circulation tonnage becomes necessary, remember that over twenty years in this one line of endeavor is your proof against experimenting. Write or wire. Pacific Coast Circulation Service, Bell Block, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Circulation Builders—Blair & Austin, 1504 Century ave., Reading, Penn. Originators of Salesmanship Club Campaigns.

Be the Man Who's Had One! In over 20 years of nation-wide experience, we have proved ourselves always able to produce greater results per dollar expended. Our circulation building campaigns, large or small, have all expert management and attention. Address us now, care of The World-Herald, Omaha, Nebr., or at any office at Box 288, Waterloo, Iowa. Myers' Circulation Organization.

Superior Circulation Builders—The W. S. Kendall Company, 104 North Bailey Ave., Louisville, Kentucky. The circulation-building organization that has set the standard for aggressive, successful circulation campaigns for nearly twenty years.

The World's Largest Circulation Building Organization—The only circulation-building service in Newspaperdom furnishing publishers' affidavits of the exact results of its every campaign. The Charles Partlowe Company, Occidental Building, Indianapolis.

Dolls at Christmas, 30 inches tall, at $3.00 each. Four large Eastern papers used over 5000 each last year on the same plan you would give a wagon. Over 200 successful offers last season. Order a sample to-day. Copy, mats and instruction for operating offer. B. Pinkney, Baby Alice Dolls, 307 Sixth Ave., New York, N. Y.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Salesman wanted to sell Travel and Resort Advertising on commission basis. Also want woman to sell advertising to exclusive women's shops. Excellent opportunity on well-known daily. C-895, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Advertising Salesman with five years' experience and an excellent record wants opportunity to increase linage for sound newspaper. Has had merchandising experience that inspires constructive promotion work. Employed but available on reasonable notice. C-861, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Executive, ten years' experience in newspaper, corporation, agency and direct mail advertising, desires permanent connection in city of 15,000 or over, with live newspaper or growing concern. A hard worker. Age 34, married, personable. Write C-872, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor, thoroughly experienced in all phases, layout, copy, long-term special pages. A money maker for newspaper in Middle West or Pacific Coast. Inquiry will bring you full story and photo. C-874, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager, age 29, married, college education; aggressive;, excellent personality, seven years advertising experience, splendid record. S. M. S. Hartwell, Chronicle Telegram, Elyria, Ohio.

Advertising Solicitor—A two-fisted, conscientious, hard worker with initiative, wants to make a permanent connection with opportunity. Age 39, executive ability, eight years in present field. C-886, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager, executive and salesman. Fifteen years' experience Metropolitan newspapers. Also agency experience. 36; married. C-885, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager, available, owing to a change of ownership. Added 50% to profits in one case, 33% in another. Go anywhere on daily five to ten thousand circulation. L. H. Kletzien, Bucyrus, O.

Cartoonist of great ability and reputation, with fifteen years' experience on large Eastern daily doing Editorial page cartoons, desires position with paper or syndicate, preferably in the East. C-859, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager—Capable, reliable and resourceful; 20 years' experience on all classes of dailies; absolutely familiar with all details. Reference furnished. C-871, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager, experienced, desires connection. Reasonable salary. References. H. M. Wheeler, 340 W. 31st St., Sarasota, Fla.

Circulation—Young married man with successful record on four publications, who has made intensive study of circulation system, promotion and finance, and who has successful record in sub-executive positions on three publications in different parts of the country, and an excellent record in two years' circulation management on New England newspaper under most adverse conditions, is seeking a location with a paper that will afford him a definite opportunity for personal progress and of permanence. Changes made in position have been for purposes of advancement, and has never left a position except of his own accord. For a connection with the right publication, is willing to make some salary sacrifice at the outset. In position to assume new connection at once and willing to pay one-half of expense in going for interview. Correspondence invited from publishers in cities of 150,000 or less, and assurance is given that letters will be held strictly confidential. C-809, Editor & Publisher.

City Editor on small daily desires position as editor or assistant editor on neighborhood or suburban paper. Can invest some cash. C-883, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager in city with over 100,000 population. Have had seven years' experience on large metropolitan newspapers in Middle west and can furnish unusual references as to ability and personality. C-887, Editor & Publisher.

Composing Room Foreman or Superintendent wishes a permanent position; can give reference as to ability, character and reliability; experienced in large and medium plants; 14 years in one place. Address C-868, Editor & Publisher.

In Any Capacity—College graduate, 25, desires to connect with daily newspaper in or near New York. Two years' business experience. C-882, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor of daily, city 60,000, seeks new location. 30, married, hard worker, successful record. C-891, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Mechanical Superintendent, three years' experience afternoon paper, city of thirty thousand, wants to make change. C-865, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Advertising Executive seeks new connection. Now employed by a foremost eastern daily. Thoroughly experienced in newspaper advertising management; splendid record as builder of national and local linage. Age thirty-four, married, excellent address and appearance; twelve years diversified experience newspaper advertising. Introductory reference: James W. Brown, Publisher of Editor & Publisher. Complete list with first letter. C-851, Editor & Publisher.

News Executive—Editorial writer of wide experience; competent to take complete charge of news and editorial end; A-1 references; now employed; seeks permanent connection in South, East. Address C-876, Editor & Publisher.

News Executive and Writer, exceptional experience, free September 1. College man, 37, married. Nine years' newspapers from reporter to managing editor, seven years Associated Press, two years United Press. Organizer and developer of news staffs. Puts accuracy, fair play ahead of sensations. Understands money comes from business office. Address C-866, Editor & Publisher.

Pressroom Foreman or Superintendent wishes a permanent position. Can give references as to ability, character and reliability. Experienced on all classes of Flat Bed, Rotary Magazine and Newspaper Presses, electrotype and stereotype plates. Prefer the East. Address C-894, Editor & Publiher.

Reporter with two years' experience, college graduate, desires change in location. Mid-west state preferred. Can handle any kind of news. C-892, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter—Four years' street and desk experience; 24; employed; will go anywhere. C-890, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter—Desk Man, seven years' experience, four with present employer. All beats. On desk for last year. Seeks change soon. Age 25. Address, C-888, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter—Photographer—25; four years' experience, all beats, desk; employed; seek position with future, anywhere. C-889, Editor & Publisher.

The Door to Opportunity!

The Classified Service of EDITOR & PUBLISHER is the door to opportunities in the advertising and publishing fields.

Always An Opportunity!

The problem is to locate it. A man can go from door to door looking for it or he can invest a small amount of money in a Classified Ad in Editor & Publisher. This publication has a record as a result-producer.

Publishers read our Classified in their search for Executives, Services, Used Equipment and Supplies, and they write to Classified Service asking help in filling their requirements.

CLASSIFIED SERVICE

Editor & Publisher

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Equipment for Sale—Two sixty H.P. web press drives, direct current, 220 volts, with Cutler-Hammer control boards; push button control, eight station boxes. These controls have been used about one year and every part is in first class condition. Reason for selling is consolidation of two papers. Was used on an octuple press. Will make an attractive price if taken at once. Delivery near Boston. Address C-884, Editor & Publisher.

For Sale: Goss Monitor Perfecting Press with motor. Lately overhauled; guaranteed first-class condition. 7 or 8 columns. Mat roller, casting box and stereotype outfit complete. Must be sold at once. Can give terms. Globe-News, Amarillo, Texas.

For Sale—One complete photo-engraving plant. Miles Machinery Co., 64 West 23d St., New York.

Job Presses, Paper Cutters, Wire Stitchers, etc.—A complete line. Overhauled and guaranteed machines at bargain prices. Easy terms. Hoffman Type & Engraving Co., 114 E. 13th St., N. Y. City.

Printers and Bookbinders:—Two Revolution Presses, Drum Cylinder Presses, Power Paper Cutters, Lever Paper Cutters, Colts and Universal Presses, Chandler & Price Presses, Golding Jobbers, New Style Gordon Presses, C. & P. Presses, with Miller Feeder, Multi Color Presses Folders, Punches, Perforators. Wire stitchers Numbering Machines, Standing Presses, Embossers, Shears, Proof Fresses, at greatly reduced prices and upon most liberal terms American Type Founders Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

Used Goss Mat Roller for wet mats only, for sale cheap. The Goss Printing Press Co., 153 So. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

SUPPLIES

Metal

Standard Linotype, Stereotype and Monotype metal at substantial discounts when purchased in ton lots or over. Let us quote you. American Alloys Company, 1939 East Sergeant St., Philadelphia.

CONSOLIDATION

The merging of newspaper interests is a subject that has received special study and investigation by this firm for nearly 17 years. It is a big subject and requires considerable technical knowledge, both as to valuation and operating methods. When properly organized, the results are never disappointing.

We have been factors in many important consolidations, sales and appraisals.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

IF YOU ARE SEEKING a position in any department of newspaper work, our Individual Service Plan will show you the way. It is bringing good results for our clients. Let us tell you about it.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
SECURITY BLDG. SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Newspaper Properties Bought, Sold and Appraised

All negotiations confidential

PALMER, DEWITT & PALMER
Business Established in 1899
350 Madison Ave. New York
Pacific Coast Representative:
M. O. Moore, 515 N. Canon Drive. Beverly Hills, Calif.

DOLLAR $ $ PULLERS

One Dollar will be paid for each idea published. Send clipping for payment.

NOW is the right time to start advertising oil heating for next winter. Get local dealers to co-operate on a campaign, a page to run each week. In center of page run copy telling of the general advantages of oil heating. Around this center box run ads of the local dealers.—Norman B. Terry, St. Louis, Mo..

In a two column box on the classified page the Providence (R. I.) Journal once in a while reminds its advertisers of the necessity of getting the classified ads in early. A clock face is shown with the lettering, "Phone Dexter 2800 before 6 o'clock tonight to have your classified ad in tomorrow's Journal."—D. P., Fall River, Mass.

Several Seattle advertising agents are adopting the policy of placing copy in newspapers on Mondays rather than at the end of the week, believing that due to lack of pressure their copy receives more attention.—C. M. L., Seattle, Wash.

The real estate page in the Chicago Daily News runs a picture of a downtown corner as it was 20 or 30 years ago, and underneath a picture of that same corner today. There is much difference in the pictures and they excite much comment among the readers. This could also be used by real estate men to show how property rises in value. Many of these corners, now improved with skyscrapers, were cabbage patches fifty years ago.—Joseph Fay, Chicago.

Thursday has been set aside by a small Ohio town paper as "Best Buy Day"—a day upon which the paper runs advertisements censored by a committee on sales arrangements. The majority of the stores in the town enter their "Best Buys" on this day and the first "Best Buy Day" netted the paper three extra pages of advertisements.—A. J. B., Columbus, O.

Some eating places find it good business to serve customers with all they want of food accessories—such as radishes, sliced pickles, bread, etc. Make out a list of local places of this sort and get them to use ads on a page in your paper, headed "All You Can Eat of——"—Frank H. Williams, Santa Ana, Cal.

A special "sampling" method used by a West Virginia newspaper has, according to the circulation manager, proved most effective. The columns of the newspaper are watched carefully each day by a clerk and whenever an item of any consequence concerning some person in a suburban city is used, a sample copy of that issue, marked, is mailed to the subject. The plan has brought in a number of direct subscriptions.—B. A. T., Springfield, O.

HUNCHES

One Dollar will be paid for each idea published. Send clipping for payment.

HOW big is the second-hand clothing business in your city? How many such stores are there in town? How many suits and overcoats do they clean and patch and then resell during a year? Do you know that certain elements of the citizenry wear only cast-off clothes? One of your clever reporters can find a darn funny story here if he goes after it by interviewing your local dealers in "hand me downs."—David Resnick, St. Louis, Mo.

A story that never lacks warmth and popularity is one that takes in the local marriage bureau. Have a reporter visit the office of that worthy institution and interview the head relative to the number of licenses issued this year over last, his opinions for the change if there is any, amusing escapades of those visiting the bureau, etc. Your cartoonist can draw some good illustrations for the feature and the result will be a worth while story of more than casual interest.—C. E. Pellissier, Boston.

The St. Louis Star runs each week an interesting feature called "Twenty-five Years Ago and Today." Prominent citizens are featured with a short history of their life in St. Louis. At the head of each article are two photographs of each individual, one photograph taken recently and the other taken 25 years ago.—Norman B. Terry, St. Louis, Mo.

A good way to arouse enthusiasm and interest in your paper among the sportsmen is to sponsor a fishing contest. The Fall River (Mass.) Herald-News is now conducting its second annual contest, starting Aug. 1 and ending Sept. 30, with at least three prizes in each of two divisions, the angler pulling in the largest bass and the one catching the largest pickerel. All bona-fide entries are carefully weighed and registered and any one person may make as many entries as desired. The only restriction is that entrants must be residents of Fall River.—D. P., Fall River, Mass.

Papers which make it a point to appeal to the housewife would be interested in the latest stunt of the Worcester (Mass.) Post. The Post is giving $300 in prizes weekly for the best recipes, using a coupon.—Bob Sibley, Worcester, Mass.

Considerable agitation has arisen over the efforts of a Massachusetts trolley system to have abolished the law providing for half-fare for school children. Much of the storm comes from trolley officials who believe in the 19-year-old state law. What's the situation in your community on this subject?—D. P., Fall River, Mass.

PAPER PAYS FOR COURSE

Cleveland Press Financing Journalism Instruction of School Editor

Miss Helen Driscoll, school news editor of the Cleveland Press, is taking a summer course in journalism at Columbia University, her expenses being paid by the Press.

"It is my theory that when you have a good newspaper man or woman on your staff," explains Ted Thackrey, editor of the Press, "it is the economical and wise thing to invest in further training them for important work on your newspaper. In the case of Miss Driscoll, specifically, we feel that she has indicated an exceptional aptitude for her particular type of newspaper activity, and inasmuch as the summer vacation has resulted in reduction in volume of school news, we felt that it would be both to her best interests and ours to finance her studies at Columbia University.

"What applies to Miss Driscoll in her special field applies so far as we are concerned to all other members of our staf The abstract economic aspect of th matter itself is the basis of our willing ness to assume this expense, which in th long run is relatively minor compare with the big returns of these dollar invested."

BANQUET TO McLAREN FOX

A. P. Chief Operator of South Hon ored by Virginia Colleagues

The Goodfellowship Club of Virgini tendered a banquet August 7 at the Rich mond Hotel to McLaren Fox, of Atlanta chief operator of the Southern division o the Associated Press. The followin officers were elected: President, C. L Johns, Richmond, Va.; traffic representa tive, vice president, W. S. Smith, of New port News; secretary-treasurer, Frank E Stuart, of Richmond.

The Goodfellowship Club is composed of the traffic personnel of the Associated Press.

What Do You KNOW ?

A Great Questions and Answers Feature

New Questions Daily

King Features Syndicate, Inc.
New York City

Why I'm the Modern "Don Juan"
By LORD BEAVERBROOK
The Admitted Lover of a Thousand Beautiful Women

The nobleman accused of having loved, wooed, won and hogswoggled numerous beautiful women, maids, widows, debutantes,— yes, even grandmothers — and obtained several million dollars from them. Now in prison in New York, on charge of swindling women of their fortunes and held for further investigation as to his operations the world over. Wanted by authorities and has a record in nearly every state in the Union as well as in Canada.

A STORY FROM THE PEN AND OVER THE SIGNATURE OF THIS GREAT WOOER.

Thirty daily installments—Released about September 1.
Illustrated by pictures furnished by Lord Beaverbrook.

WIRE YOUR ORDER

Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
350 Hudson St. New York

Space is space—but the BEST Classified Advertising publicity justifies its daily appearance in your newspaper

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building, Philadelphia

INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE
leads in Original Exclusive Features
on
World Spot News
63 Park Row New York City

IF YOU ARE MISSING
THE
NORMAN HAPGOOD
Daily Articles
On National Events
Write to us for Full
Information on a
Really Great Service
UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE
WORLD BLDG., NEW YORK

We Supply
WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED
FICTION
Daily One-Column Mat Features
Weekly Special Articles
Serials
Ask Us for Samples
The O'Dell Newspaper Service
55 Fifth Ave., New York City

IT WILL PAY YOU TO HIRE TRAINED MEN

Ambitious young men, schooled in every branch of the newspaper or magazine field, may be secured to fill that opening on your publication by simply making your wants known to the Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity.

No Charge To Employers

Avail yourself of this free service to replenish your staff whenever the occasion requires. Write or wire John G. Earhart, 836 Exchange Ave., Chicago, Ill., and he will put you in touch with the right man.

Reports of Increased Business from the South—

Manufacturers whose business increased in the first quarter of 1927, over the same period of 1926.

Certain-teed Products Corp.	29.7%	Inc.
Kelly-Springfield Tire Co.	158%	"
Truscon Steel Co.	18%	"
L. C. Smith Typewriter Co.	10%	"
Monroe Calculating Mche. Co.	35%	"
The Maytag Co.	200%	"
Frigidaire Corp.	50%	"
Elliott Addressing Systems	10%	"
Columbia Phonograph Co.	71%	"
Stromberg Electric Co.	12½%	"
Whitehead & Hoag Co.	39.1%	"
Milwaukee Tool Co.	86.6%	"
J. I. Case Thresh. Mchn. Co.	10%	"
Yarnell-Waring Co.	18½%	"
Fuller Brush Co.	18%	"
Gerrard Wire Tying Ma. Co.	33.72%	"
Waters & Waters Mfg. Co.	33-1/3%	"
Structural Slate Co.	30%	"
Miller-Bruant-Pierce Co.	70%	"
Miller Rubber Co.	33-1/3%	"

me people are always attempting to belittle the uth's progress and prosrity. They consider it rely as a flash in the pan. ey try to show that with v priced cotton and with recent floods, the South in a throes of a business mp. If that were true, uld all these manufacturr listed above have been le to increase their busiss to such proportions.

When such prominent organizations can increase their business in the first quarter of 1927 anywheres from 10 to 200% over the same period of 1926, the idence is conclusive that the progress and prosperity of the South is continuing on the upgrade. are in this prosperity. Plan your advertising campaign in the South and let the newspapers listed re help you.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
ALABAMA
*Mobile News-Item (E)	13,141	.05	.05
*Mobile Register (M)	23,326	.08	.08
*Mobile Register (S)	34,630	.10	.10
FLORIDA
†Daytona Beach News-Journal (ES)	9,083	.065	.065
*Lakeland Register (E)	7,055	.04	.04
†Miami Herald (M)	44,668	.11	.11
†Miami Herald (S)	48,751	.12	.12
*Orlando Sentinel (M&S)	10,105	.06	.06
*Pensacola News and Journal (E&M)	9,389	.07	.07
†St. Augustine Record (E&S)	3,972	.04	.04
*St. Petersburg Independent (E)	12,874	.065	.065
*Tampa Times (E)	27,813	.08	.08
*Tampa Tribune (M) 41,400 (S)	53,248	.10(.14S)	.10(.14S)
*West Palm Beach Post (M)	12,081	.07	.07
GEORGIA
*Augusta Herald (E)	14,190	.05	.05
*Augusta Herald (S)	14,797	.05	.05
†Macon Telegraph (M)	25,011	.08	.08
†Macon Telegraph (S)	25,011	.08	.08
*Savannah Morning News (M), 21,766. (S)	22,691	.06(.07S)	.06(.07S)
KENTUCKY
*The Lexington Leader (E)	19,739	.07	.07
*The Lexington Leader (S)	19,772	.07	.07
†Paducah Sun (E)	9,695	.04	.04

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
NORTH CAROLINA
*Greensboro Daily News (M)	30,066	.08	.07
*Greensboro Daily News (S)	33,311	.09	.08
*Salisbury Post (E)	7,718	.04	.04
SOUTH CAROLINA
*Columbia State (M)	23,096	.08	.08
*Columbia State (S)	25,242	.08	.08
*Greenville News & Piedmont (M&E)	36,285	.11	.11
*Greenville News (S)	25,199	.08	.08
*Spartanburg Journal (E)	4,471	.05	.05
*Spartanburg Herald (M) 6,943 (S)	9,048
TENNESSEE
*Chattanooga Times (M)	31,623	.10	.10
*Chattanooga Times (S)	31,078	.10	.10
†Memphis Commercial Appeal (M)	103,168	.18	.18
†Memphis Commercial Appeal (S)	136,115	.25	.25
*Nashville Banner (E)	59,574	.11	.11
*Nashville Banner (S)	59,843	.12	.12
VIRGINIA
*Danville Register and Bee (M&E)	15,660	.06	.06
*Danville Bee and Register (E&S)	20,919	.07	.07
*Newport News Times-Herald (E)	8,394	.05	.05
*Newport News Daily Press (S&M)	5,777
*Roanoke Times & World News (M&E)	27,321	.08	.08
*Roanoke Times (S)	16,912	.07	.07
*Staunton News-Leader (M), Leader (E)	7,064	.035	.035

* A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1927.
† Government Statement, March 31, 1927.

THE MOUTH

THIS mouth consumes all that 750,000 people can eat. It requests all that 750,000 people can wear. Its speech is most often prompted in making purchases by what is advertised in The Washington Star.

The Washington trading area is half again the Capital's population. Virginia and Maryland, in a 25-mile radius, buys in Washington.

FREE SERVICE to Agency and Advertiser

Request any dealer distribution data, survey service, consumer statistics that will help you plan your campaign through the

TRADE FACTS DEPT.

of

The Evening Star
WITH SUNDAY MORNING EDITION
WASHINGTON, D. C.
Member of The Associated Press

Eastern Representative
Dan A. Carroll
110 East 42nd Street
New York, N. Y.

Western Representative
J. E. Lutz
1110 Tower Building
Chicago, Ill.

In the first 7 months of 1927

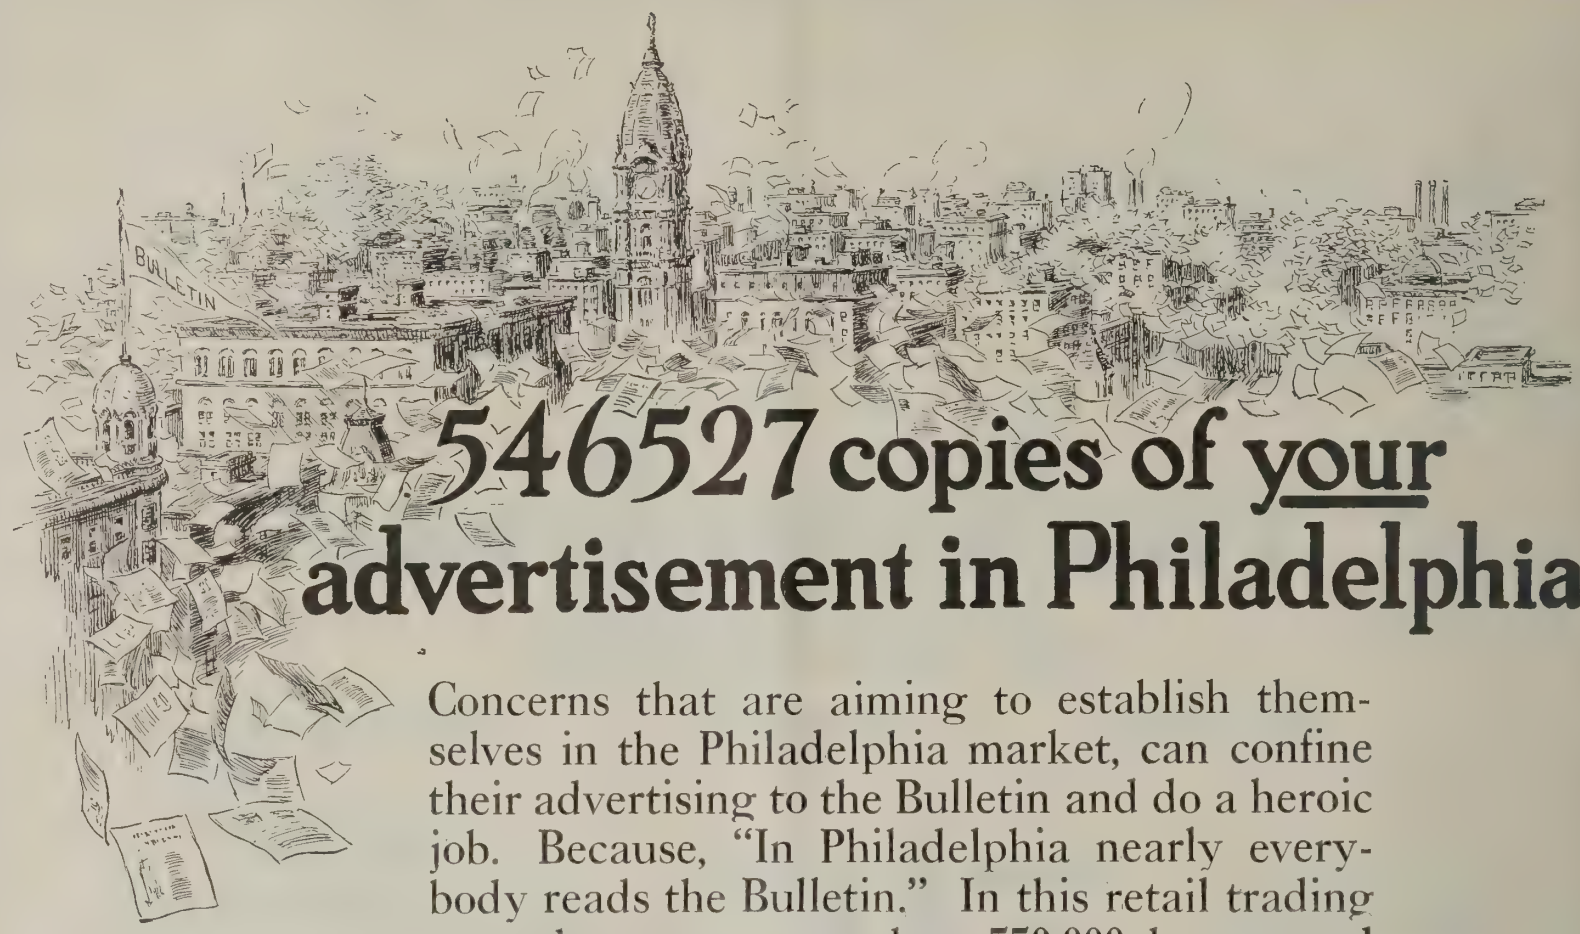
THE SUNPAPERS

OF BALTIMORE

Morning Evening Sunday

carried over 70% of the department store lineage of Baltimore

When Baltimore merchants back up their opinion of the Sunpapers with their money - - - - - that's the highest praise.



JOHN B. WOODWARD
Bowery Bank Bldg.,
110 E. 42d St., New York
GUY S. OSBORN
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago
C. GEORGE KROGNESS
First National Bank Bldg.,
San Francisco

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

MORNING EVENING SUNDAY

Baltimoreans Don't Say "Newspaper"—They Say "SUNpaper"

546527 copies of your advertisement in Philadelphia

Concerns that are aiming to establish themselves in the Philadelphia market, can confine their advertising to the Bulletin and do a heroic job. Because, "In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads the Bulletin." In this retail trading area there are more than 550,000 homes and the Bulletin averages *546,527 copies! And that's the whole story in a nut shell.

DOMINATE PHILADELPHIA } Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

"The Evening Bulletin is sold on its merits as a newspaper; no prize, premium, coupon, guessing contests, or other methods of artificially stimulating circulation have been used."

New York . . . . . 247 Park Avenue (Park-Lexington Building)
Chicago . . . . . Verree & Conklin, Inc., 28 East Jackson Boulevard
Detroit . . . . . C. L. Weaver, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 321 Lafayette Boulevard
San Francisco . . . . Thomas L. Emory, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 681 Market Street

*Audit Bureau of Circulation's report of net paid daily average circulation for the six months ending March 31, 1927.

April, 1927, 557,090, May, 565,147, June, 552,608 copies daily.

(Copyright 1927, Bulletin Company)

Member of Associated Press

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication, by The Editor & Publisher Co.
J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1700 Times Building, 42nd St., at Broadway,
New York. Telephones, Bryant 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056. Charter Member Audit Bureau
of Circulations. Member Associated Business Papers Inc.

Vol. 60 NEW YORK, AUGUST 20, 1927 No. 13

Increasing Circulation Revenue Best Road To Profits, Is Ridder Theory

Net Profits Usually Parallel Circulation Income, N. Y. Publisher Finds in Survey of Ten Dailies—Says Many Proprietors Living in "Fool's Paradise"

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

A CHARGE that newspaper publishers generally have been living in a "fool's paradise" for the last 10 years was made this week by Victor H. Ridder, co-partner in the firm of Ridder Brothers, operators of a growing chain of daily newspapers. It was Mr. Ridder's contention that, in the mad and successful scramble for linage that has characterized the last decade, many newspapers have completely overlooked the importance of their subscription revenue. If this source of publisher-income is not kept up to a reasonable point, he reasoned, an astonishing number of papers will find themselves pushed from black into red at the first real advertising set-back.

Mr. Ridder obtained the facts from which he reached his conclusions through studies he has carried on in connection with newspaper purchases his firm has contemplated.

While he does not advocate any general increase in the charges made by newspapers to readers, nor does he care to predict any slump in advertising, it is his opinion that "in this year when most cities show a linage loss the question of income from circulation is going to grow more and more important."

"Taking it for granted," he said, "that the average publisher wants to make money, and certainly this is not open to criticism, it seems that most of them overlook a perfectly good bet in not getting a good price from readers for their newspapers," Mr. Ridder said.

"Why will a publisher spend thousands of dollars on a campaign for circulation in the hope of adding a few thousand readers and then try to get back his expenditure by raising his advertising rates, if he can?

"The weakness of newspapers which do not make money is almost invariably found in the small return their circulation brings them. Publishers have been inclined generally to organize their newspaper budgets on the basis of large advertising linage and when an advertising slump comes it doesn't take long to cross the 'twilight zone' between black ink and red. The publisher who wants to insure his profits had better start educating his readers to a point where they will be willing to pay a fair price for the cheapest product they buy each day.

"Publishers have generally been spending the last 10 years in a 'fool's paradise.' If we ever get a really extended advertising setback there will be a sad awakening among the group which is making its profits in the twilight zone. I would call this zone the 20 per cent advertising zone; that is the newspaper publisher whose profits are not more than 20 per cent of its advertising gross. Such a paper faces trouble the minute it loses advertising.

"Let us, for example, take two evening newspapers of 30,000 circulation, the conditions on which I have in mind. Both carry about 4,000,000 lines a year and each gets about eight cents a line. Their advertising revenue, therefore, is about $320,000 a year.

"One paper is sold at an average price of two cents after paying carriers' and newsdealers' commissions. The income from this source amounts to $600 a day or about $187,000 a year. The gross income of this publisher totals $507,000 and his profit is 22 per cent or $110,000 per year. In other words he can face a reduction of one-third of his advertising before he owes himself anything.

"The publisher of the other paper is getting one cent net for his circulation. He tells me his people won't stand for an increase. I asked him if he had ever tried to get more and he said, 'No, but I know they wouldn't.'

"If we ever run into an extended advertising slump, I am going in hopefully to see that publisher. Some day his newspaper will belong to Ridder Brothers. His advertising gross is $320,000 a year. His circulation income adds only $94,000 a year to this, leaving him a profit of $18,000 a year. A drop of just six per cent in advertising income ends this man's dream.

"These two examples do not represent extreme cases. There are many similar situations.

"I also have the feeling that when advertisers begin to reduce their appropriations the paper with lower subscription rates is going to get the cut first."

Mr. Ridder recently received from a firm of newspaper accountants a list of 10 newspapers with their 1926 gross income figures. These figures show, he pointed out, that newspapers make profits in direct proportion to their circulation income per centage.

"I am drawing attention to this list," he said, "because it crystallizes the experience of publishers during a year when advertising was good and in this year when most cities show a linage loss the question of income from circulation is going to be more and more important."

The list shows a newspaper with a paid circulation of 15,000 with gross business amounting to $246,000. Of the sum, advertising was responsible for 80.28 per cent and subscriptions for 19.72 per cent. The net profit of this paper amounted to 19.95 per cent, showing only a slight fractional difference from the percentage of the gross revenue of the circulation department. Incidentally it cost this newspaper 12.82 per cent of its operating expenses to obtain its 15,000 circulation. On its budget there were two departments that cost more to run, the composing room which accounted for 16.01 per cent of the total; and the stereotype and press room which cost 22.12 per cent. The circulation cost included mailing.

A second paper with 16,000 circulation showed a gross of $379,000 of which 83.92 per cent was obtained through sale of the advertising columns and 16.08 per cent through subscriptions. Again showing the close relation between the circulation revenue and the net profits was the fact that the latter was 14.71.

An even closer co-relation obtained in the percentages of a third paper with 19,000 circulation, doing a gross business of $445,000 in 1926. This paper obtained 25.62 per cent of its revenue from sale of the paper to readers and its profit percentage was 22.66 per cent. The advertising revenue amounted to 74.38 per cent.

Another newspaper grossed $598,000 in 1926 with the same circulation, 19,000. Seventy-nine and four tenths per cent of

(Continued on page 34)

PERCENTAGE OF NET PROFIT TO GROSS REVENUE OF TEN DAILY NEWSPAPERS, BASED UPON RESULTS FROM OPERATIONS FOR A TWELVE MONTH PERIOD ENDING DECEMBER 31st, 1926

	(1)	(2)	(3)	(4)	(5)	(6)	(7)	(8)	(9)	(10)	Averages
PAID CIRCULATION.....	10,000	15,000	16,000	19,000	19,000	20,000	21,000	22,000	38,000	40,000	22,000
†GROSS REVENUE	$140,000	$246,000	$379,000	$445,000	$598,000	$617,000	$434,000	$415,000	$598,000	$694,000	$456,600
PERCENTAGE OF GROSS REVENUE
Advertising	77.83%	80.28%	83.92%	74.38%	79.04%	78.11%	89.08%	87.57%	72.79%	75.29%	79.83%
Subscription	22.17	19.72	16.08	25.62	20.96	21.89	10.92	12.43	27.21	24.71	20.17
Total Gross	100.00%	100.00%	100.00%	100.00%	100.00%	100.00%	100.00%	100.00%	100.00%	100.00%	100.00%
Operating Expenses:
Editorial	15.27%	8.73%	11.03%	10.23%	8.88%	8.05%	16.62%	15.82%	13.69%	10.40%	11.87%
Advertising	12.19	10.36	6.88	8.97	10.36	6.71	14.74	15.63	12.20	11.44	10.95
Circulation (includes mailing)	15.38	12.82	6.12	9.07	9.13	11.40	9.68	10.01	19.84	18.20	12.17
Composing	22.12	16.01	13.80	11.75	13.43	13.33	20.34	18.78	14.24	13.24	15.70
Stereotype and Press.....	24.23	22.12	20.10	23.06	19.48	18.75	21.67	23.34	31.38	27.17	23.13
General	8.49	7.63	25.21	11.94	17.43	10.30	9.62	9.71	4.32	3.42	10.81
Depreciation	3.27	2.38	2.15	2.32	2.44	2.07	3.74	3.70	1.34	1.20	2.46
Total Operating Expenses...	100.95%	80.05%	85.29%	77.34%	81.15%	70.61%	96.41%	96.99%	97.01%	85.07%	87.09%
*NET PROFIT FROM OPER'S..	*.95%	19.95%	14.71%	22.66%	18.85%	29.39%	3.59%	3.01%	2.99%	14.93%	12.91%

* Indicates loss. † Gross revenue represents income after deducting newsdealer and agency commissions.

MEXICO DEPORTS U. S. CORRESPONDENT AFTER HOLDING HIM IN PRISON

De Courcy of New York Times Given No Reason for His Arrest, Detention and Exile—Believes Government Offended by Material He Sent to His Paper

STRICT censorship is now in force in all Central American countries except Nicaragua, Joseph De Courcy, New York Times correspondent, reported from Laredo, Tex., Aug. 13, after he had been deported by the Mexican Government from his post in Mexico City.

De Courcy declared he had been given no reasons why he was deported, but he understood it was because he had sent to the Times a circular printed by the Department of Gobernacion, which openly called on Mexicans and foreigners who disliked the United States to take part in the official boycott. The circular was published by the Times.

De Courcy told the story of his deportation in a dispatch from Laredo, Tex., published in the Times, Aug. 13. He said that on account of the censorship no real information on conditions in Mexico is permitted to be sent either by wire or mail. The story he told of his arrest follows:

"Tuesday night last week, at 9 o'clock, while in search of news, I visited the Hotel Regis, where I was met by detectives, one of whom informed me that Col. Delgado, chief of the Secret Service of the Department of Gobernacion, wished to see me at once. He advised me to visit Delgado's office before Delgado left, as it was an affair of no little importance. In spite of the insistence of the detective, I managed to get the American Embassy on the telephone and warned it of the arrest.

"Finding it useless to resist, I followed the detectives, both of whom were armed with heavy pistols hanging from well-filled cartridge belts, down Avenue Juarez for several blocks to a corner where the detectives engaged an auto to outdistance possible friends of mine wh might be following.

"Driving down one block, the automobile turned into police headquarters, where I was told to get out and to go into the office. At the same time the detectives laughed and said: 'Well, we fooled your friends.'

"Passing through the main yard of the police headquarters, I followed the detectives upstairs to the room of the second in command of the detective squad. No questions were asked of the police beyond how I spelled my name. I was then told to follow a guard.

"In spite of my demands for an explanation of the charges against me, I was compelled to follow the guard without knowing officially what they were, and I am still in ignorance of the official reason for my arrest and expulsion from Mexico.

"I was led into a large room with yellow walls marked with many bullet holes. Three small stools and one desk made up all the furniture in the room.

"When I asked the armed guard who stood at the door where the prisoners were supposed to sleep, I was calmly told on the floor, which was covered with dirt. When I protested I was informed that I was incomunicado and would not be permitted to speak to any one or to send any messages.

"When I demanded the right to inform the American Embassy, I was told that the Gringoes could all go to hell, as Mexicans were running their own affairs.

"On Wednesday morning I realized that the situation was getting desperate and that unless the embassy located my whereabouts things would be serious. I got a note out to William Folger of the United Press, notifying him of my arrest and requesting him to inform the embassy.

"Slowly the day passed. I was torn with anxiety for my family, my wife and three children, who were totally unaware of my fate. I paced the floor, realizing that unless the note had been delivered my chances of seeing daylight again were slim.

"About 4 o'clock in the afternoon I heard Mr. Lane's voice in the corridor asking to see the Times reporter and the answer from the chief of the detectives that the Times correspondent was not held in that part of the Police Department and that they had not seen the reporter.

"Refusing to take no for an answer, Secretary Lane pushed his way into the room where I was being closely guarded.

"Mr. Lane stated that he had appealed to the Foreign Relations Department, which had answered that it knew nothing of my arrest, that it was in Col. Tejada's department and, therefore, the Foreign Relations Department was unable to assist in locating me. After much talk, Mr. Lane said, he convinced the Foreign Relations Department that it was its duty to locate any American citizen when the American Embassy requested it.

"After a few minutes' talk with me Mr. Lane left, saying he was returning to the Foreign Relations Department in order to try to stave off my expulsion and that he, personally, did not believe that Col. Tejada would go to extremes.

"About 7:30 o'clock Wednesday night I heard voices again in the corridor. Pushing past the guard, I found my wife sobbing at the door. The officials had deliberately lied to her four times, saying that I was not in that department.

"Finally a friend of my wife, a Mexican of determined character, managed by a bluff to get her into where I was imprisoned.

"After a few minutes' talk with me my wife left to get a grip with clothes, but she was assured by the officials that no expulsion was being thought of and that I would be in the same room the next day.

"At 8 o'clock Wednesday night two detectives from the Department of Gobernacion, armed to the teeth, came in and ordered me to follow them down to the street, where a small automobile was waiting. My questions as to where the party was going were met with silence, broken only when nearing the Colonia Railway station by the orders of José Gonzalez, chief of the party, to the driver to take the road to Tacuba, six miles outside Mexico City.

"Gonzalez said the train would be taken at Tacuba in order to prevent my friends and family from seeing me, as he had strict orders to prevent my conversing with any persons until I arrived at Laredo.

"But reporters of the United Press and the New York World and E. MacFarland from Washington were a bit more clever than the Government officials expected. When the newspaper men failed to see me at the station they took a train with my family to Tacuba, where I had an opportunity to kiss my children goodbye.

"Just as the train started my 9-year-old boy climbed into the second-class coach and grasped me by the legs, and in tears cried out that he was going with me, for if I went alone I would be killed. The train having started, I was forced to bring the child to Laredo.

"The trip to Laredo was devoid of incident. The seats in the second-class car were hard and uncomfortable, but I was pleased at my escape from a worse fate and was contented. Arriving at Laredo, the train was met by the American Vice-Consul, who had arranged all matters with his unusual skill and attention.

"Contrary to expectations, the officials at the border were friendly, probably due to the fact that the head of the service and myself had cooperated in the Bruce Bielaski kidnapping case several years ago."

EDITOR'S ASSAILANT IS CONVICTED

Member of Band Which Flogged H. M. Flanders of Soperton (Ga.) News Given Three to Five Years

(By telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

SOPERTON, Ga., Aug. 18.—Raymond Lee, Treutlin County resident was given a term of three to five years in prison by Judge Escol Graham, following the defendant's conviction on a charge of assault with intent to murder connected with the flogging of H. M. Flanders, editor of the Soperton News on Feb. 25.

This was as the jury recommended. When asked if he wished to make a statement, Lee said: "Judge, I want to say they have the wrong man and I hope they get the right one some time." He thanked the court when sentence was passed.

His wife, a frail woman, sat by his side, as did his son Joe, when sentence was pronounced.

The defendant's attorney filed motion for a new trial. Flanders was stopped in his automobile last February by several masked men and severely flogged. His assailants objected to his editorials against other moonshining. There will be trials of the defendants later.

INSTALLS NEW PRESS

The Antigo (Wis.) Daily Journal recently installed a new Goss rotary press and new sterotyping equipment.

BERLIN WANTS I. A. A. MEET

German advertising leaders shown with H. H. Charles of New York. (Left to right): Prof. Prenzel, G. Birnbaum, Mr. Charles, Dr. Kauffmann.

I. A. A. INVITED TO MEET IN BERLIN

German Association Sends Invitation to This Country Through H. H. Charles —American Decortated by French Officials

An invitation to American advertising men to hold the 1929 convention of the International Advertising Association in Berlin was brought back to this country this week by H. H. Charles, president of the Charles Advertising Service, New York. Mr. Charles has returned from six weeks spent in England and Europe. He represented C. K. Woodbridge, president of the I. A. A., at the British advertising convention, and afterward toured Germany, France and Switzerland. In Paris he was awarded the Ordre du Merite of the Agricole by the French Minister of Agriculture. He is already a Chevalier of the Legion d'Honneur, a decoration he received three years ago.

The German invitation was addressed to President Woodbridge and was signed by C. Birnbaum, managing director of the Ala Advertising Agency, Berlin; Prof. H. K. Frenzel, editor of International Advertising Art; Dr. K. Kauffmann, advertising counsel of New York and Berlin, and H. K. Rose, secretary of the Verband Deutscher Reklamefachleute, the German Advertising Association.

The signers of the invitation offered to co-operate in every way in making an I. A. A. convention in Berlin a success. They told Mr. Charles they would send a big delegation to the convention to be held next year in Detroit.

Mr. Charles' agency specializes in financial and agricultural advertising, and it was for his work for agriculture that he was decorated this time by the French Republic. The Ordre du Merite of the Agricole was instituted by a degree of July 7, 1883. In order to be admitted one must have been actually engaged in agriculture for 15 years, or else have rendered service which, in one way or another, helped agriculture.

In 1924 Mr. Charles was decorated as an officer of the Legion of Honor following the Wembley A. A. C. W. convention.

NEW BRANCH PLANT FOR N. Y. TELEGRAM

Scripps-Howard Daily Will Open Auxiliary Office with 12 Goss Units This October—Management Expects to Speed Up Distribution

Work is now being rushed on an uptown auxiliary mechanical plant for the New York Telegram, Scripps-Howard newspaper. Harold Hall, business manager, expects the installation will be complete some time in October. Increased circulation, he said, necessitated the expansion, which he expects will greatly speed up the Telegram's distribution and add more readers.

For the branch office the Telegram has leased more than 6,000 square feet of the Kymson Building, now nearing completion on 10th avenue and 34th street. The lease represents virtually all of the first floor with a loading platform on 33d street. The original press installation will consist of 12 16-page Goss printing units and three pairs of folders. The newspaper has also purchased new autoplate equipment from the Wood Newspaper Machinery Corporation.

A feature of the stereotype equipment unique to New York, will be use of the immersed heating units of the General Electric Company, a system whereby the metal is melted by electrically heated fingers trust down into the pot.

Work of preparing the ground floor for the daily was slowed up somewhat by the fact that the newspaper required about 14 feet headroom and the building has been laid out with only 13. This necessitated further excavation in bedrock.

Space will be conserved by placing of the electrical control room, etc., on a mezzanine.

PRESIDENT'S PRESS CONFERENCES "INNOCUOUS"

Little "Spot" News Obtained But They Serve to Reveal President's Mind, Says Correspondent in Analyzing News Men's Contact With Nation's Chief

By J. FRED ESSARY
Chief, Washington Bureau, Baltimore Sun

Following, in part, is an address delivered by Mr. Essary at the press symposium, Institute of Public Affairs, held recently at the University of Virginia.

WE are the eyes and ears of the country at Washington. It is largely upon our reports of what transpires in the White House, in Congress and in the executive departments, that the public relies for its information as to the activities of the federal government, information upon which that great public bases its judgments. This involves a very grave responsibility on our part and demands of us scrupulous fairness and as near literal accuracy as may be possible in the matter which we spread daily before our readers.

It is because of the colossal influence upon the nation at large of the government and of the interests that revolve about it in Washington, that the American newspapers have found it necessary to maintain more than 500 active telegraphic correspondents in the National Capital, to say nothing of another regiment of writers for magazines, trade papers and religious publications.

It is comforting to us to know that there is literal and absolute freedom of the American press in its relations with the Federal Government insofar as any actual, implied or attempted control may be exercised over what we write in Washington, is concerned.

This means that every Washington correspondent may write at any time anything that impresses him as legitimate news, subject only to those confidences which he must respect and subject to certain rules which may be laid down as to direct quotation of the President, for example, rules which if he accepts, he is honor bound to observe.

Neither Congress nor the Administration has any right, or presumes to have any, to discipline any correspondent. except when one of these rules may be violated.

Such discipline, as is imposed, is laid upon the members of the Corps by the Corps itself. Under an act of Congress the two press galleries of Congress are placed under the absolute control of a Standing Committee of Correspondents which committee passes on the credentials of all newspapermen seeking admission. Rules are laid down that these men must have no personal interest in any pending legislation, must represent no outside interest, particularly a chamber of commerce or stock exchange, and must in all instances be telegraphic correspondents. If one of our number is engaged in any press agenting, he must post the fact on the gallery bulletin board and must identify his client. Beyond those few regulations, we are free to observe and write what we please regarding congressional activities.

Because of the controversy that flares up from time to time over what is described as inspired publicity at the White House and over the relationship of the press to the President, it might interest you to know the exact truth regarding that relationship, how it is maintained and how it results.

In recent years the White House has assumed a greater degree of news importance than in the more distant past. A President who takes seriously his role as party chieftain, along with his duties as Chief Executive, becomes the fountainhead of congressional as well as administration policies. This was true of Roosevelt, of Wilson and, in a sense, of Taft and Harding. It is essentially true of President Coolidge. We have come, therefore, to look to the White House for more and more of that information which is necessary to us, if there is to be an intelligent understanding of the measures upon which we must comment.

To facilitate this, there has grown up a system of press conferences with the President. They were initiated, in a small way, by Col. Roosevelt. He adopted a a plan of calling in certain of the correspondents when he had anything important to impart to them and once in a while, as for instance, when he launched his first conservation Congress, of calling in the entire Corps.

President Taft went his predecessor one better in that direction. Before entering the White House he had been Secretary of War and had found much profit and some enjoyment in his press conferences in the War Department. He arranged to meet us in a body once a week. Mr. Wilson went even further, when he first went to Washington, and increased the press conferences to two a week. When the World War came, however, he found it desirable to abandon these conferences and they were never renewed by him.

President Harding revived the conferences, two a week, and President Coolidge has kept them going.

Until the middle of the Harding term these semi-weekly sessions at the Executive Offices were free and easy. They were attended by all the accredited correspondents who cared to be present and by certain visiting editors of foreign journalists who went as our guests. Questions were propounded without any restraint whatever and were answered or not by the President, just as he felt inclined. This crossfire between the head of our government and representatives of the press was a matter of particular interest and some astonishment to foreign newspapermen, I might say, men who would never dream of catechizing so important an official of their own governments.

Then there came the Harding slip in connection with the Disarmament Conference when he mistakenly answered a question as to the application of one of the treaties to the mainland of Japan. This greatly embarrassed him and embarrassed the whole Disarmament Conference and, as you will recall, he felt impelled to issue a formal statement retracting what he had said.

This break caused a complete change in the intercourse of the press with the President. Instead of submitting verbal questions to the Executive, some of them premeditated, others propounded on the spur of the moment, we were told that all queries must be submitted in writing and should be in the President's hands fifteen minutes before the conference. This was to enable him to ponder his replies and to decide in advance what questions he should answer and what he should ignore.

The conferences have never been the same since. The correspondent has been placed at a disadvantage, in that his question may be passed over by the President, without anyone but the questioner and the questionee knowing about it. In other words, the proceeding is largely ex parte, so to speak, and to that extent decidedly unsatisfactory to many of us.

Mr. Coolidge has hedged his conferences about with other restrictions, moreover, for which he has been widely criticized. He declines to permit us to quote a question which he has failed or refused to answer. We may not even refer to such a question. He does not even relish the quotation of a question which has been responded to. In fact, he has reduced his conference results to a somewhat innocuous line.

From the very beginning it has been a rule of Presidents that they must not be quoted directly by the press in answer to inquiries or otherwise, unless specific authority is given. I stand for that rule fully and sympathetically, even though in doing so I find myself in a conflict with very many of my colleagues. These colleagues believe that the President should be willing to assume full responsibility for what he may say that is intended for publication and not unload all of that responsibility on the press.

Also many of my associates go even further and insist that if the President is not willing to be quoted after his press conference, then these conferences become a farce and should be abolished. They add that as matters now stand the President gains the benefit of inspired publicity, but puts himself in a position to repudiate with or without qualm, anything that may be printed which embarrasses him or looks different to him in print, than he expected.

With at least two of these views, I heartily disagree. In the first place, as I have already indicated, I do not think it is incumbent upon the President to stand for a quotation or a series of quotations when he may reply to questions submitted to him by the press. I do not believe that he could afford to do this. If twice a week he were quoted on every conceivable matter brought to him by ourselves, from the location of bathing beaches in the District of Columbia to the disarmament at Geneva, he would become in the eyes of the country and of the world, just a presidential babbler. He would be a laughing stock in every foreign capital and in most of the editorial offices at home. He must protect his dignity and prestige.

Mr. Coolidge has gone so far in that direction as to kill the convenient "White House Spokesman." That fictitious character was set up by many of the newspaper men in Washington and was quoted systematically by them when actually they were quoting the President. Mr. Coolidge lately took exception to this, and while I cannot reveal even in this discussion, how it came about, without violating a confidence of the White House conference, it is no secret that the Spokesman is now dead and will probably never be resurrected.

How are Washington correspondents to give that authority to Presidential news, therefore, you may ask, when the President may not be quoted nor even a White House Spokesman? Are we to assume all responsibility for what Mr. Coolidge, for instance, may say, and divide none of that responsibility with the source of our news?

Not at all. For my part I have found plenty of devices which serve me when I want to charge a given piece of information to the White House, not one of which so far, has been demurred to by the President. I can say, as I have said scores of times, that "the White House today announced, etc." Or that "It can be stated with White House approval." Or the "President authorized," etc, etc. These phrases have appeared in every American newspaper over and over and will continue to appear and I can assure you that in every instance they are used to carry views or announcements made directly to the Corps of Correspondents by the President of the United States, himself.

Nor do I, for one, argue that in any event, the press conferences at the White House should be abandoned. They serve a highly useful purpose. They are distinctly to my advantage as a working journalist at the Capitol, by giving me twice each week a slant on the President's mind. I am able to sense some of his mental processes and to acquaint myself with his attitudes. This is helpful to me in interpreting Administration policies even if it does not always give me concrete themes upon which to write. I may go to five or six of these conferences and come away without a scrap of what we call "spot" news, but at least I have some intimate close-up of what the President is thinking or the lines he may eventually take or given policy.

All this, moreover, is of value to our readers and our clients—our actual bosses. It is our obligation and our business to give them the best line of information at all times and upon all subjects

(Continued on page 35)

BRITISH EDITORS NOW TOURING CANADA

Members of the British Newspaper Party, now visiting Canada, snapped on board the SS. Montrose, following the run from Liverpool to Quebec. Seated in center, (left to right): Mrs. E. W. Davies; Mrs. Woodhead; E. W. Davies, general secretary of the Newspaper Society; Arthur Grime, of the Yorkshire Post; Captain E. Landy, Commander of the Montrose; J. S. King, president of the Newspaper Society and leader of the visiting party, wearing his badge of office; A. B. Lyne; W. Brown, Hon. Secretary, Greater London Press; Mrs. Browning Lyne; Mrs. J. G. Bate, of South Africa; Mrs. MacKay; Hugh MacKay, of the Liverpool Post.

MILWAUKEE JEWELER'S EDITORIAL CHAT IN PAID SPACE WIN CUSTOMERS

Uses Will Rogers Style of Comment in Small Space to Compete with Large Advertisers—Runs His Selling Advertising Separately

By JOHN G. BAKER

A CONVICTION that the small specialty shop has little chance to compete with larger stores in newspaper display advertising turned a Milwaukee jeweler into an "editorial writer."

GEO. W. CHATTERTON

Perhaps he is the highest-paying editorial writer in American newspaperdom for he spends something like $1,600 a year to get his views on prize-fights, politics or people before his fellow - citizens through advertising columns.

That jeweler is George W. Chatterton, seventh in line of the same name and grandson of the George W. Chatterton from whom Abraham Lincoln bought his wedding ring in Springfield, Ill.

Twice a week during the summer and three times a week in the winter months, "Chats by Chatterton" are a regular feature in the advertising columns of the Milwaukee Journal. The subjects of the "chats" are anything in the news or Mr. Chatterton's views on almost any subject at all—except jewelry. His business is mentioned rarely and then only in a most incidental way.

The purpose behind this type of advertising is manifold but it is aimed primarily to build confidence in the store and the personality behind it, Mr. Chatterton. He is convinced that it accomplishes this purpose well.

"I wanted to get a human contact with my customers," Mr. Chatterton explained. "I wanted them to feel that they know me and that, as a business man, I'm interested in sports, civic enterprises and the events of the day as well as in making money and selling jewelry. So I just write these ads as I would talk to a friend who dropped into the store."

The "chats" never appear in the display advertisements for his store, although he still uses display space and "price advertising" as formerly.

"I tried running editorials in my display ads but it didn't work," he told me. "Unconsciously, readers connected up those comments with the effort to sell jewelry in the ad. I dropped the plan after running two or three that way."

But he was of the opinion that display advertising of the size and frequency which a specialty store was able to afford could not compete in its attention-getting with that of the larger stores, particularly the department stores.

"There was a time when a double-truck in color in the Saturday Evening Post was such a novelty that it was talked about from one end of the country to the other, but now it's an every week affair and gets no more than passing notice. A few years ago, a full page ad in a newspaper was so unusual that the advertiser could be sure that it would arrest attention and cause comment. Now, unless a store takes six pages or more I never hear the advertisement mentioned. I decided that the small advertiser would have to do something striking, something very out of the ordinary to attract attention to the small space which his budget would permit."

That is the way Mr. Chatterton summed up the situation as he saw it.

And he still had the urge to express his opinions, to boost some of the things he thought worth while for Milwaukee, to talk about his Montana cattle ranch where he and his brother raise blooded Herefords, to tell about his golf scores and his bowling matches. About that time Will Roger's daily comments became a regular front page feature in the Milwaukee Journal—and that clinched the idea.

Mr. Chatterton questioned hundreds of his customers to find if they were reading Roger's squibs and was satisfied that the majority followed them regularly.

"I decided that they were reading Rogers," he said, "because Rogers wrote just as he talks. I decided that if I could write as I conversed with my friends, folks would read what I had to say, providing that it wasn't too evident that I was trying to sell them something."

One day V. A. Corrigan, a jeweler in Houston, Tex., whom Mr. Chatterton had known when Chatterton was a salesman for the Illinois Watch Company, dropped into the store. Chatterton told him about his idea and Mr. Corrigan suggested the name "Chats by Chatterton." The plan was complete.

Following is a sample chat, run in one column space about 4 inches deep:

"I got a great kick out of the 1927 Wisconsin State Bowling Tournament at Racine. I have been practicing that darn game for twenty years. I'll bet I have spent several thousand dollars on the alleys. Finally I landed in the money in this tournament. I won Six Dollars—two hundred and ninety-ninth prize. There were more than three hundred entered. Got all puffed up and thought I was good. Immediately bowled Billy Sixty three games for Two Dollars a game and it took me just those three games to lose what it had taken me twenty years to win. Well, anyway, I am still a young man, guess I will go back and start another twenty years of practice."

The "chats" have been appearing as an entity now for about a year and a half and Mr. Chatterton is satisfied that they have brought about one result sought for, at least. They have made him known to thousands. People come into his store whom he has never seen before and address him as if they had known him for years. Mr. Chatterton recounts some amusing consequences:

"Wherever Mrs. Chatterton goes she is introduced or classified as 'the wife of the man who writes those chats.' My hardest task has been to convince some of my business friends that I am paying good money to put the chats in the newspaper and am not being paid by the paper for contributing them. And I've learned to sympathize with men in the editorial department of a newspaper. About every so often someone comes to me to give me a wonderful suggestion for a 'chat' which turns out to be nothing more than an advertisement that he should be paying for."

From careful inquiries, Mr. Chatterton estimates that about 80 per cent of the 5,300 active "accounts" in his store read his chats more or less regularly. Whether this form of advertising has brought a commensurate share of new business to his store is not so certain in his mind. But he is satisfied that they have helped to build confidence, to dispel some illusions about the credit jewelry business and to spread his name.

"There's only one thing I have to be careful of," he added, "I like to take a dig at some institutions and some folks occasionally in these chats and that sort of thing always backfires. You can't afford to have people speak unfavorably of you just to have them speak of you. There was never a more untrue statement than 'Every knock is a boost' so far as advertising is concerned."

MISS TOWNSEND APPOINTED

Miss Elizabeth Townsend, of the Century Printing Concern, Philadelphia, has been named publicity chairman of the Philadelphia Club of Advertising Women.

LAST HAND SET PAPER PASSES ON LONG ISLAND

THE day of the hand-set newspaper on Long Island, N. Y., is finally to disappear. The Long Island Traveler, 56 years old, published at Southold, L. I., will soon install a typesetting machine, it was announced recently by the weekly's new owner and editor, Russell L. Davidson.

In "modernizing" the paper, Mr. Davidson also said that he will install a telephone. Assemblyman Joseph N. Hallock, until recently owner and editor of the Traveler, would not give way to such modern conveniences, such as a typesetting machine, telephone, steam heaters, or numerous other modern appliances. Mr. Hallock used to set most of the type by hand himself.

BURKE SELLS OUT HIS OHIO INTERESTS

Disposes of Elyria Chronicle-Telegram and Bucyrus Telegraph-Forum to Purchase Santa Ana Register

J. F. Burke, former State Senator of Ohio, bought and sold a newspaper this week.

On Aug. 15 the sale of his Elyria (O.) Chronicle-Telegram to A. C. Hudnut was announced. Mr. Hudnut has been associated with him in publishing the paper for the last three years. The consideration involved in this transaction was said to be $250,000.

Announcement was also made of the purchase by Mr. Burke of the Santa Ana (Cal.) Register from J. T. Baumgartner for a consideration reported to approximate $750,000.

Mr. Burke recently sold the Bucyrus (O.) Telegraph-Forum to R. C. Hoiles of Lorain, also publisher of the Mansfield News. The price of this sale was said to be $150,000.

Senator Burke served in the Ohio State Senate two terms and was gubernatorial aspirant four years ago. He will locate in California. Sale of property made through Los Angeles office of the H. F. Henrichs Agency, of Litchfield, Ill.

NEW HALL-MILLS SUIT

Second Action Started Against Hearst by Trial Defendants

Three of the defendants in last summer's Hall-Mills murder trial have brought a second libel suit against William Randolph Hearst, asking for $1,500,000 damages.

Complainants in the libel action are Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, Henry Carpenter and Willie Stevens. Henry Stevens is not taking part in either suit.

The first was brought by the same three for the same damages against the New York Mirror, while Mr. Hearst and the New York Journal are defendants in the second.

DAILY GIVES SCHOLARSHIPS

Two girls, daughters of employes of the Chicago Daily News, were awarded the Daily News scholarships of $1,000 each for 1927, the first year they have been offered. Walter A. Strong, publisher of the Daily News, instituted the two annual scholarships early this year. Those eligible are young men or women employed by the Daily News part time during their senior year in high school and children of employes. The 1927 winners are June Elizabeth Potter, 17, daughter of Stephen A. Potter, a member of the composing room staff, and May Joan Bunting, 16, daughter of John T. Bunting, Jr., of the display advertising department.

E. A. BRISTOR BUYS INTO PASSAIC DAILY NEWS

Former Part Owner of Herald Now Publisher of New Jersey Paper —No Personnel Changes at Present

Emmett A. Bristor, formerly editor and publisher of the Passaic (N. J.) Daily Herald, has purchased a substantial stock interest in the Passaic Daily News, and is now publisher of that newspaper it was announced this week.

E. A. BRISTOR

George M. Hartt, who has been associated with the Daily News since 1896, and has been its editor since 1901, continues in that capacity.

Rudolph E. Lent, who has been with the Daily News since 1919, will remain for the present in his position as general manager.

No changes have been made, nor are any contemplated, in the policy or personnel of the organization, it was stated.

Mr. Bristor came to Passaic in 1915 from the Washington (Pa.) Observer and Reporter and purchased the Herald from the estate of the late Congressman Robert G. Bremner, being associated with Charles R. Long of the Chester Times, Robert L. McLean, Sr., of the Philadelphia Bulletin, and William C. Sproul, of Chester, later Governor of Pennsylvania.

Later, when the World War came on, with the assistance of Arthur S. Hughes, a local company was formed consisting of James H. Walden, General Bird W. Spencer, Dow H. Drukker, Mr. Hughes, and Mr. Bristor, which bought the interests of the Messrs. Long, McLean, and Sproul in February, 1918. General Spencer and Mr. Hughes afterward sold their stock to the Messrs. Walden and Drukker.

Mr. Bristor continued to be the active head of the Herald until his retirement in August, 1925, and is now a member of its board of directors, and the owner of the largest block of common stock in that company.

CONFER ON RATE BOOK

North Carolina Publishers' Committee Meets in Charlotte

Newspapers of seven North Carolina cities were represented in Charlotte, N. C., Monday, when the executive committee of the North Carolina Press Association met to discuss plans for putting into effect proposals adopted at the recent association convention.

These plans include the printing of a state advertising rate book, which would carry a complete survey of the buying power of the state as a whole and of the various counties. The printing in pamphlet form of the North Carolina publication laws also were discussed.

Members in attendance included J. W. Atking, Gastonia; Miss Beatrice Cobb, Morganton; A. L. Stockton, president, Greensboro; A. C. Huneycutt, Albermarle; T. J. Perkins, Lincolnton, and Carey Dowd, Jr., Charlotte. B. Arp Lowrance, field secretary, also attended.

REPORTERS WANT SHELTER

Reporters covering baseball games at the Polo Grounds New York are starting a movement to have the press box shifted to the covered upper deck. The present hangout is on the ground level, accessible to dugouts and players, and pleasant in sunny weather. When it rains it is something else again. The fact that judging plays from an elevation might be easier for the scorers than from a "worm's eye" vantage is another reason for elevating the writers.

BROUN SAYS FAREWELL TO NEW YORK WORLD

Columnist Stands Pat on Refusal to Continue His Columns and His Pay Stops—Pulitzer Says Writer Is Taking "Witch's Sabbatical"

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

HEYWOOD BROUN has written his farewell to the New York World.

In a column published in that paper Wednesday of this week, the noted columnist explained in detail just why he had concluded he must break with the newspaper he had served for six years, because of the suppression of his opinions in the Sacco and Vanzetti case. In the same issue of the World, Ralph Pulitzer, editor, maintained his right to edit what Broun wrote, declared he had never directed him to "write a single word against his conscience," and insisted that the World still considered Broun "a brilliant member of its staff, albeit taking a Witch's Sabbatical."

But to EDITOR & PUBLISHER, Mr. Broun declared it was goodbye and not au revoir. In the final column of Aug. 17, he wrote:

"By now I am willing to admit that I am too violent, too ill-disciplined, too indiscreet to fit pleasantly into the World's philosophy of daily journalism. And since I cannot hit it off with the World, I would be wise to look for work more alluring."

The word "alluring" may have been selected on advice of counsel. Mr. Broun's contract with the World, which still has nearly three years to run, contains a paragraph to the effect that if he finds more alluring work the World will be willing to cut down its demand on Mr. Broun's literary output, cutting down his recompense in proportion. The former columnist would like the "demand" cut down to nothing, since he has already received official notice from Mr. Pulitzer that in accordance with Paragraph V of the contract payments on his salary have been stopped. But if that is impossible, he is willing to write one or two columns a year to fulfill his contractual agreements.

At the moment Mr. Broun does not expect to be a newspaper man until the contract expires, if then. His lawyers have advised him that he cannot be enjoined from contributing to the magazines.

Meanwhile, there is talk of a weekly magazine to be called, probably, Heywood Broun Says. Friends have promised Mr. Broun financial backing for such a venture, which he described this week as being still in a "visionary stage." If it does become an actuality, it will be a magazine without a political creed, Mr. Broun said, telling the public what newspapers sometimes fail to tell, and expressing the unbridled opinions of its editor, Mr. Broun.

"It is true that I never was directed to write anything against my conscience for the New York World," Mr. Broun declared to EDITOR & PUBLISHER. "I never have been told what I should write, but it can be argued that an order to be silent contains the elements of dictation.

"Of course, I don't want to have an opinion on every subject that comes up. But it seemed to me as my column was constructed that if an important event was in the news and I had nothing to say about it I was doing a disservice to my readers.

"Any important news case must carry significance beyond the mere factual incident. This significance is expressed in opinions, another word for which is propaganda. The editorial page of the World was making of the Sacco and Vanzetti case an opportunity for publishing propaganda for a future reconstruction of the Massachusetts courts and for present mercy. It was fine to try and save these two men from the chair, but I thought it was even greater to try to bring about a state of mind whereby the whole case could not be duplicated.

"Mr. Pulitzer says the function of a writer is to write and an editor to edit. That is true enough. But it depends how that editing is done. A writer won't be happy in writing if he disagrees wholly with his editor.

"Naturally a writer cannot stand by every comma and live or die for every period. My columns were changed on the World and I was glad of it. I have always been copyread. It has been helpful for me when the copyreader has changed a clumsy or an awkward phrase or has caught me being too violent or unfair. No one objects to wise editorship.

"One of the sad truths of newspaper work is that a lot of the editing is not done by the editors or the copyreaders but by the reporters and writers themselves. Sometimes, because this is so, a paper doesn't get what it wants, but what the reporter thinks it wants.

"I know of a case of a New York reporter assigned one day to the federal courts. A man was under arrest under suspicion of being an anarchist.

" 'Are you an anarchist?' a detective asked.

" 'No,' the suspect replied.

" 'Well, you believe in anarchy, don't you, you ——— ——— — ———?'

"And after the operative had punched a few times, the suspect admitted he did. The story as written for the newspaper was that a man who admitted he was an anarchist had been arrested.

" 'Why didn't you write the story of the way the detectives manhandled the poor fellow,' I asked. 'That sounds like a darned good story to me.'

" 'Oh, I couldn't do that!' was the reply. 'You see, I was just substituting. If I told that story, it would get the regular Federal court man in dutch. He would lose some good contacts and would get scooped on other stories.'

"Thus reporters make themselves their own censors. They have friends and contacts which, while often helpful, are sometimes destructive. Perhaps newspaper men shouldn't stay too long on one beat. Perhaps it is wise for them to take the tip cops give and 'Move along.' "

Mr. Broun is ending, for the time being at least, 20 years of work on daily newspapers. He started working for the New York Telegraph in 1908 on vacation during his junior year at Harvard. He worked for the Telegraph until 1912 when he joined the staff of the New York Tribune. He was a correspondent with the A. E. F. for the Tribune during the world war.

He wrote sports chiefly for the Tribune, and after he joined the World in 1921 he wrote sports and drama for that paper, too, in addition to his column. He only gave up these extra duties two years ago to devote himself exclusively to "It Seems to Me."

"I've had a swell time as a newspaper man," Mr. Broun said this week.

"Whether or not it was good for me to stay so long at the job I am not so sure. While newspaper work is good training for a writing man it also has its drawbacks. When a newspaper man gets an idea in his head he is inclined to let it go. If a man wants to write books and plays I believe it may be best to get the ideas in the head and let them age in the wood, as it were, before letting them go.

"But there is the advantage of compulsion in newspaper work. There are deadlines to meet. You have to write. You don't put it off as you do when you are facing the rather rubber deadlines of the magazines.

"I know I shall certainly regret that I am no longer a working newspaper man. Something is sure to come up that I will want to talk about quickly and there will be no place for me to talk from."

COLUMNISTS STIRRED TO TALK SHOP BY HEYWOOD BROUN'S "STRIKE"

Edward Hope Coffey and Jay E. House Ponder Case—Former Sympathetic, Latter Prefers Silence When Personal Views Differ with Paper's Policy

HEYWOOD BROUN'S action of last week in declaring himself on a permanent strike from the New York World because that paper declined to continue publishing his opinions on the Sacco-Vanzetti case brought forth comment from two other columnists this week.

Mr. Broun declared he was "enough of a newspaper man to know" that he couldn't thumb his nose at the World's pet projects, but contended that in a column headed "It Seems To Me" and signed by Heywood Broun, Heywood Broun was speaking and not the World.

Edward Hope Coffey, who uses his first two names in signing his column "The Lantern" on the New York Herald Tribune declared himself in sympathy with Mr. Broun, while Jay E. House, columnist of the Curtis-Martin Newspapers in New York and Philadelphia, offered it as his opinion that Mr. Broun very probably ought not to be permitted "to make a sucker out of the World."

Mr. Coffey wrote in part:

"We are at one with Mr. Broun in his contention. We believe that any department in which an individual expresses and signs an opinion is quite apart from the opinion of the newspaper. The newspaper, to be sure, sponsors the man, presents him to its readers; the newspaper has hired him because it believes his opinions, or his way of expressing them, will interest its readers.

"But it surely does not think that he believes all that traditions and politics and countless other things oblige it to believe; and it just as surely does not think that it believes all that heredity and environment have led him to believe.

"We, for instance, think that a Boston terrier is the finest pet a man can have; we have reason to doubt that the Herald Tribune's policy allows it to agree with us without reservation. We believe that the Long Island mosquito is the most vicious and persistent and numerous insect pest in the land; the Herald Tribune, as a unit, may prefer the Adirondack black fly for the championship.

"What of it? Can't the public understand that ours is the opinion of a young fellow employed to fill one column of perhaps forty-two eight-column pages, and that the Herald Tribune's belief comes from the organization that brings together three hundred and thirty-six times as much reading matter, and has for nearly a hundred years?

"The answer is no. The public can not.

"When we express an opinion, it is to a great many readers 'an article in the Herald Tribune.' To many of those who notice that it bears our signature, it is something 'the paper let him print' hence an opinion sponsored by our employers.

"It is all very complicated. If a writer is to be interesting, he must write about things that interest him; if he is to be vigorous, he must express opinions that he holds vigorously; if he is to earn the money his paper pays him, he must, upon occasion, bash its policy squarely in the eye. Which is confusing, annoying and not to be encouraged.

"Our private belief is that too much fuss is made about the expression of opinions by newspapers and their employes. Nobody is moved by the opinions expressed. The only readers who consider them seriously at all are rival editors, and they consider them as opinions. . . .

"But we would better not go into this idea too thoroughly. It probably conflicts with the policy of the paper."

Mr. House said in part:

"Two or three times every year we get into a row with the great American public over the moot question whether a newspaperman writes what he pleases. The row always has its genesis in a letter from some customer—usually a casual customer—who, displeased at something that appears in the column, attributes our attitude to orders from the boss or to a wish to curry favor with him. For some reason, and we are too polite to say what we think the reason is, the voluntary critic never can get it into his head that we have a mind of our own and that when we seriously take a position on any matter of public concern we actually believe what we write. He always assumes that we are writing under orders and that we do so because our bread and butter is at stake. To this stricture we reply with some heat, and then the row dies away for a little while, only to be fanned into new life when we cross a voluntary critic by agreeing with the newspaper on which we are employed.

"Just now the desk is littered with letters of exception to our recent statement that we write without any direction whatsoever and have always done so. For two reasons, it seems impossible to make the layman understand the situation in the average newspaper office. One is because the human mind is what it is. The other is that the answer to the question in controversy is yes and no. Certainly a newspaper staff is under direction. Every institution must have direction. Somebody must shape the policy of a newspaper and somebody does so. But no newspaperman is asked or expected to write that which he does not believe. Very often we are at odds with the policy of this newspaper. But when we are we do not try to make it look like a sucker by saying so. As Babe Ruth would put it, we leave it lay. We doubt that a good conscientious newspaperman should bite the hand that feeds him. We have our ethics, such as they are.

"One critic cites the case of Mr. Heywood Broun as proof of the fact that newspapermen must write to a pattern. Mr. Broun, as many know, recently has been having an argument with his newspaper, the New York World. We think Mr. Broun's case proves our thesis. On two consecutive days Mr. Broun was permitted to express his personal opinion in what the editor of the World mildly describes as 'extravagant fashion' on a matter in controversy. Then he was asked to write something else. Apparently he declined to do it, and his stuff was eased out of the paper. Should Mr. Broun have been permitted to go on making a sucker of the World? We doubt it."

"BUGS" BAER IS BACK

Returns to New York American After Several Months' Absence

The "Welcome Home" sign was hung out on the New York American last week, when Arthur "Bugs" Baer returned to his former place, the left-hand top column of the first page of the second section.

Baer has been out of the American for several months. He is under contract with Mr. Hearst, but discontinued writing copy because, it was reported, he didn't like the way his column was set up by the American.

WORLD-WIDE PROTECTION OF NEWS AS PROPERTY SOUGHT AT GENEVA

Sixty Delegates at International Press Conference, Under League, to Consider Proposed Legislation—Lord Burnham to Preside

By ALBIN E. JOHNSON

(By Cable to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

GENEVA, Aug. 17.—Establishment of property right in news on a world-wide scale is the outstanding addition to the agenda of the League of Nations International Press Congress, the original text of which was printed in EDITOR & PUBLISHER last week. Enactment of legislation will be urged in all participant countries along lines of which the following is a brief summary:

Agencies, newspapers, and other undertakings whose established purpose is collection and distribution of news shall have a temporary right in such news.

The term "news" shall include information of any kind the value of which depends upon its novelty and not on the form in which it is presented.

No newspaper or news agency may publish any news without the authority of the enterprise which obtained said news in its regular manner, if it was through this enterprise that the newspaper or agency for which it was not intended gained knowledge thereof directly or indirectly during the transmission of the news after its receipt.

The protection thus provided on news should extend to all news transmitted from one place to another, whatever its character or method of transmission.

If within a specified period, news has become public property in any given place, it may be freely reproduced by the newspapers of that place.

Newspapers and news agencies cannot transmit before its publication news which came to their knowledge in which they do not have special rights.

Exclusive news is protected for specified periods.

Penalties are provided for violation, and civil responsibility is as well as liability to damages.

It is specified that extracts from articles may be reproduced unaltered upon the following conditions:

That it has been possible to gain knowledge of the article from the newspaper office following publication, or from proofs communicated by the publishing office, and that the source of the article be quoted.

Reproduction in extenso of articles shall be allowed after a certain number of hours have elapsed following the appearance of the paper, with the reservation that no alteration be made and that the source be stated.

The drafted law in no way affects rights of authorship claimed by virtue of existing legislation.

This proposal will come before the 60 or more delegates representing countries from all parts of the world at their meeting here Aug. 24, following the organization of the conference. Lord Burnham, proprietor of the London Daily Telegraph and chairman of the Newspaper Proprietors' Association, has been appointed president of the conference by the League council. Vice-presidents will be elected by the conference in the regular manner.

The list of delegates now available is subject to modifications and substitution of alternates' names in case the designated representatives are unable to attend. Acceptances have been received from the directors of the following government press bureaus who have been invited as assessors: Germany, Belgium, Finland, France, Lithuania, Netherlands, and Roumania.

In addition to the Americans who will take an active part in the conference, many newspaper men from the United States are expected to be present as spectators as scores are now sojourning in Europe. A delegation from New Zealand is also looked for as well as a number of representatives from the Irish press.

Additional assessors include: M. G. Bernhard, editor-in-chief of the Vossiche Zeitung, president of the International Journalists' Association; Albert Julien, Petit Parisien; M. Reitman, treasurer-general of the Union de la Presse Internationale, Zurich, and president of the Federation Internationale des Journalistes of Paris.

Delegates invited include:

Germany—Dr. H. Mantler, director Agence Wolff; Dr. Martin Carbe; Prof. J. F. Wolff, editor Dresden Neuesten Nachrichten; Director of the Social Demokratische Pressedienst; Gen. Bovollmachtiger, des Verlages Rudolph Mosse; Direktor von Boetticher of the Verein Deutscher Zeitung Verlagen.

Argentine—Jorge Mitre, La Nacion, Buenos Aires; Manuel Roigt, correspondent of La Nacion; Dr. Ezekiel Paz, Ramon da Franch, La Prensa.

Austria—M. Benedikt, director of the Neue Freie Presse, Vienna;

Belgium—Victor Roessel, director of Le Soir, Brussels.

Bolivia—Alcides Arguedas.

Bulgaria—Ivan Poeff Platchkoff, director of Mir, Sofia.

Brazil—Oscar Carvalho, director of Agence Americana.

Great Britain—Lord Riddell, News of the World; Alfred King, manager of the Exchange Telegraph, Ltd.; Lord Burnham, Newspaper Proprietors' Association; the Manager of Reuters, Ltd.

India—K. C. Roy, Associated Press of India, Delhi.

Australia—A. C. C. Holts, general manager of the Melbourne Argus.

South Africa—Thomas W. Mackenzie, editor of the Friend, Bloemfontein.

Canada—Frank Carrel, vice-president of the Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph.

Chile—M. Yanez and M. Agustin Edwards.

China—Kung Chen Kom, editor Eastern Times, Shanghai.

Colombia—Eduardo Santos, director of El Tiempo, Bogota.

Cuba—Jose Rivero, director of Diario de la Marina, Havana.

Denmark—Eric Svarre, editor Kobenhavn, Copenhagen.

Santo Domingo—Arturo Pellerano Sarda, editor Listin Diario, Santo Domingo.

Spain—Toronato Luco de Tena, director of A. B. C., Madrid; Nicolas Maria de Urgeoiti, president El Sol, Madrid; Jose Escofet Vilamasana, director of Vanguardia, Barcelona.

United States—Karl A. Bickel, United Press; Kent Cooper, Associated Press; M. Koenigsberg, International News service; Robert P. Scripps, George B. Parker, Scripps-Howard Newspapers, Cleveland; Louis Wiley, New York Times.

Finland—Prof. Nevalinna, president of the Press Association.

France—Andre Meynot, administrator of Agence Havas; M. Denaleche, director of the Journal des Debats; Henry Simond, president of the National Association of Journalists; Maurice Sarrault, Dépèche de Toulouse.

Greece—M. Kyron, director of Hestia, Athens.

Guatemala—Dr. Virgilio Rodriguez Beteta, president of the Journalists Association.

Hungary—Joseph Voszi, director of Pester Lloyd, Budapest.

Italy—Gustavo Nesti, director general of the Agencia Stefani; Pietro Canconi, Corriere D'Italia; Guillio Barella, Fascist Editors Association and director of Popolo d'Italia, Milan.

Japan—Genichiro, manager of the Nippon Shimbun Rengo Tsushinsha; Sekiso Uyeda, special director of Nippon Dempo Tsushinsha; Seiichi Uyeno, director of the Asahi, Tokio and Osaka.

Norway—Rolf Thomassen, editor Tidens Tegn, Oslo.

Holland—M. Nygh, director of the Rotterdamsche Nieuwe Courant.

Peru—Oscar Miro Quezada, director of El Comercio, Lima.

Poland—Pierre Gorecki, director of the Agence Telegraphique Polonaise, Warsaw.

Portugal—Eduard Schwalbeck, director of the Diario de Noticias, Lisbon. B. da Veiga, director of O Jornal, Lisbon.

Roumania—Alexandre Mavrodi, editor Viitorul, Bucharest.

Jugo-Slavia—Vladimir Ribnikar, director Politika, Belgrade.

Sweden—Sten Dihlgron, editor Dagens Nyheter, Stockholm.

Switzerland—Dr. Ludi, Agence Telegraph Suisse; M. Chapuisat, director Journal de Geneve.

Czecho-Slovakia—Karel Klima, editor Lidove Noviny, Prague.

Turkey—Al Seddin Bey, director of the Agence d'Anatolia; Safet Bey, Press Bureau, Angora.

Uruguay—Hector Gomes, director Manana, Montevideo.

Russia—Maurice Menkes, director of the Agence Tass; directors of Pravda and of Isvestia, and the director of Ekonomitcheskaia Zizn, Moscow.

EDITORS TRY FRENCH COOKING AND WINES

Party of 25 Sees Paris After Stay in London—Turn Down Free Offer to Visit Deauville

By TOM WALLACE
Editorial Writer, Louisville (Ky.) Times.

PARIS.—Paris received with open dining room doors the group of American editorial writers touring Europe under the wing of the Carnegie Foundation for International Peace "to make a clinical examination" of post war conditions. The crowd came over from England fed, but not fed up, and found it interesting to sample French cooking, with little change in wines, since the English haut bourgeoisie, who constitute the aristocracy, or a large part of it, in political life, buy their wines discriminatingly.

The Americans were surprised, rather than disconcerted, to learn on arriving in Paris that some of the English newspapers had published articles indicative of the view that the American group had been bagged by the British and had committed itself as agreeing to everything said by them on the subject of the Geneva conference. One commitment upon which that view was placed was, possibly, a humorous speech by Marshall Ballard of the New Orleans Item—at a luncheon given by the Institute of Journalists, at the Criterion restaurant—in which he proposed a fourth term, after the then assumed-to-be-forthcoming third term, for Calvin Coolidge. He advocated, after the fourth term, a Coolidge dynasty which would form alliance by marriage with the British royal house and cement relations between the two countries forever.

After his speech Mr. Ballard was congratulated by an elderly British woman who, with tears in her eyes, expressed the hope that such a development might occur, and by a gentleman who said he hardy believed it possible, but that it was a great idea.

The Americans agreed before arriving in London not to express themselves one way or another on international relations, and they do not feel that they did so in England in making polite responses to dinner speeches, or in interviews, beyond saying that the British and Americans should always be friends.

An early development in Paris was an offer, through a well known American writer of fiction, from the hotels of Deauville, of a free trip, to and through that famous resort, for the entire editorial party, "without publicity or expectation of publicity," in recognition of the enormous amount of free advertising the American press has given Deauville.

The invitation was valued by many members of the party, but was declined as one which would divert the editors from the proclaimed purpose of their tour. It was declined by individuals as well as by the group, although the invitation was open to any number of men who might wish to accept it.

AD MAN GETS "LINDY" MESSAGE SCOOP

A. Schaefer of Ft. Wayne Journal Gazette "Kidnaps" Finder of Greeting Dropped from Air by Flier

For the news staff of any newspaper "scoop" a contemporary, or for the adv tising department to show a clean pair heels to the opposition in pursuit of exclusive piece of copy, is looked upon an everyday feat and occasions no s prise. But for the advertising dep ment to "scoop" the news-room of contemporary is undoubtedly one for book.

It remained for A. Schaefer, adver ing director of the Fort Wayne (In Journal-Gazette, to bring about this usual coup.

It all happened when Col. Lindber enroute to Detroit from Indianapolis, v scheduled to cut a few capers above F Wayne's airport. Previously it had b announced that "Lindy" would drop message while passing over, presuma at the airport. Consequently the ne staffs of both local papers were centr ized at the point where the message v scheduled to be dropped.

But even the most elaborate prepa tions of a city editor are apt to go wr and in this instance they failed co pletely.

"Lindy" appeared as scheduled, right the noon hour, but failed to confine maneuvers to the vicinity of the airp circling instead about the business sect of the city. On his final round, flyi very low, he was seen to drop somethi over the side of his plane, aimed in general direction of the court house.

Standing in a group of Journal-Gaze employes, Schaefer was the first to serve the message dropping, faintly d tinguishable by a bit of yellow ribbon tached to the canvas covering. Off to flying start, he returned within a f moments arm-in-arm with the finder the coveted prize, in this instance an ag gentleman who seemed somewhat bewi ered by the honor so suddenly thrust up him.

With Schaefer directing, the Journ Gazette advertising staff was mobilized prevent the evening newspaper from g ting in touch with the finder of t message. Just how successful was t "kidnapping" is demonstrated by a co parison of the stories appearing in t two newspapers. The evening newspap could only say that a message had be dropped, while the Journal-Gazette repr duced the actual message, together wi a picture of its finder.

McGAHAN A MAJOR

Washington Correspondent Promoted Officers Reserve Corps

Included in the list of promotions the Officers Reserve Corps of the Unit States Army announced by the War D partment last week was that of Paul McGahan, of the Washington bureau the Philadelphia Inquirer, to be a Maj of Infantry.

Major McGahan began his milita career as a private in Headquarte Troop of the Seventy-Ninth Divisi during the World War.

As the member of the National E ecutive Committee of the American L gion from the District of Columbia D partment, of which he is a past Depar ment Commander, Major McGahan wi sail for France on the Leviathan on Sep 10 for the annual convention of th American Legion.

MICHIGAN PAPERS MERGED

The Eaton Rapids (Mich.) Revie published by Henry F. Harris and th Eaton Rapids Journal have been pu chased and merged as one publication b Robert D. Gifford and Murray J. Ma tin. The consolidation was brought abo through Len W. Feighner, field secretar of the Michigan Press Association.

RIDDERS WITH OWENS BUY ST. PAUL PAPERS

Dispatch and Pioneer-Press Sold by Blandin for $5,000,000—Newspaper Chain Operated by Three Young New York Brothers Growing—How They Judge Dailies They Buy Is Told

THE Ridder Brothers with Leo E. Owens, general manager of the New York Journal of Commerce, a Ridder paper, have purchased the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer-Press from C. K. Blandin, who intends to retire from newspaper work and devote his time to his paper mills at Grand Rapids, Minn.

C. K. Blandin

A sum between $3,000,000 and $3,500,000 was paid for the property, according to reliable report. The purchase includes all assets, plant, and good will of morning, evening and Sunday papers.

And thus growth is chalked up for another American newspaper chain, because the Ridder brothers, with associates, now own five daily and two Sunday newspapers. In addition to the three St. Paul acquisitions Ridder papers are: the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung and Herold, daily and Sunday, in which they have as associates Julius Holz and Felix Arnold; Jamaica-Long Island Press, six-day evening paper; and the New York Journal of Commerce and Commercial, six-day morning.

Bernard H. Ridder, eldest of the three brothers, left New York for St. Paul on Wednesday evening of last week with the expectation that he would make the formal announcement of the purchase of the Blandin papers in that city on Friday evening, Aug. 12. The announcement eventually was made Sunday, Aug. 14.

A new publishing company has been formed to succeed the Blandin interests with Victor Ridder as president; L. E. Owens, vice-president; Joseph Ridder, treasurer; and Bernard Ridder, secretary. All four will be listed as publishers of the paper. Mr. Owens, a native of that section of the country, will move from New York to be resident publisher, while the Ridder twins and their elder brother will spend their time in turn in St. Paul.

For several months the purchasers have been flirting with the St. Paul proposition. Negotiations reached an active stage July 5. Then the New Yorkers with Mr. Owens stepped out to the Northwest to see exactly what Mr. Blandin had to offer. It was rather generally known that Mr. Blandin was ready to sell. The Ridders were not alone in their bidding. Frank Gannett, who operates a group of upper New York State dailies, and marched in and out of the South last year, was one of those anxious to essay St. Paul. Two other unidentified groups figured in the pre-sale talk.

The dotted line was passed two weeks ago Aug. 3 with the Ridders and Owens signatures down as purchasers. A technicality of Minnesota law held up formal announcement. As the Ridders would have preferred to play their cards, in fact no announcement would have been made until Monday or Tuesday of this week.

But a good hand will out; so will a good story. St. Paul newspaper men got wind of what was going on. At the time of change of ownership staff disorganization is an ever present possibility.

"Never let a good man go," is a Ridder by-word.

Thereupon, came B. H. Ridder's hurried trip cross-country to the offices of the Dispatch and Pioneer Press to assure the workers:

"There is no change of staff or policy contemplated."

In New York a staff change was announced. Alexander Sharton will succeed Mr. Owens as general manager and secretary of the Journal of Commerce. Mr. Sharton had early training in the Ridder shop. From 1912 to 1918 he was on the Staats-Zeitung, which he left to join the Butterick publications. He was vice-president of the E. T. Howard Company, an advertising agency, when he rejoined the Ridders on the Journal of Commerce.

Financing of the St. Paul deal will be undertaken by Wells, Dickey & Co., Minneapolis bond house, the Merchants Trust Co. of St. Paul and Shields & Co., New York. The actual sale was direct without the assistance of newspaper brokers. The announcement was immediately made that Omara and Ormsbee would continue to represent the Dispatch and Pioneer Press in the national advertising field.

A new issue of $2,700,000 Dispatch-Pioneer Press Company 6 per cent sinking fund debentures maturing on Sept. 1, 1942, was offered this week by Wells-Dickey Company of Minneapolis, the Merchants Trust Company of St. Paul, and Shields & Co., New York.

The company reported earnings for the five years and six months ended on June 30, 1927 of $548,378 annually or 3.3 times the annual interest requirements on this issue which constitutes its only funded debt.

The debentures will be followed by $1,000,000 7 per cent preferred stock, $650,000 7 per cent second preferred, and common stock representing a cash investment of $1,000,000 by the owners.

In New York, the Ridders announced their satisfaction on entering the St. Paul market territory, a region they complimented highly for enterprise, present prosperity, the promise of future development, and expressed their pleasure in having associated with them Mr. Owens who grew up in this section. Mr. Owens, resident publisher and partner said:

"There is no part of the United States which offers such vast possibilities for growth as does the Northwest. As publisher of the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press an opportunity will be given to me to play a small part in the development of a greater Northwest. It is with a deep sense of satisfaction that I turn my eyes homeward."

Of equal interest with the transfer of an important northwestern daily is that this transaction represents growth to the newest of newspaper chains and a meteoric advance in the careers of a group of young men.

A little more than a year ago, Bernard Ridder, 43, and his twin brothers, Joseph and Victor, 40 years old, were known only as the publishers of one German-language newspaper in New York, the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung. They were threatening then to enter the English-language field. (All are of American birth and descent; their family having lived here 100 years.) Few considered their threats seriously.

Then, with William Hofmann, an executive on their German paper, they spent nearly a quarter of a million dollars in June of 1926 for the Jamaica-Long Island Press. This paper, hovering between red and black at that time, has, it is claimed, become a veritable gold mine under Hofmann management and Ridder direction.

Bankers listened readily when the Ridder co-partnership again intimated they felt growing pains. On Jan. 1 this year they presented themselves with a New Year's present in the form of the New York Journal of Commerce merged with the New York Commercial. The Ridders were pyramiding their purchases. A mere $200,000 deal gave way to $2,500,000, the sum that with an A. P. membership, which later sold for $500,000, figured in the New York financial paper transaction. Now it is $5,500,000 for two papers in St. Paul.

The Ridders have no intention of stopping where they are. St. Paul is one floor upwards in their skyscraper ambitions. Other papers will be added to this Ridder chain as fast as practical Victor Ridder said this week to Editor & Publisher.

"We felt that there was opportunity for further expansion of our newspaper holdings," Victor Ridder said. "This latest purchase is in line with our policy to obtain high-grade properties wherever we can with assurance of profit.

"We have the greatest confidence in the future of St. Paul and the Northwest and confidently expect to give the people of that section a newspaper of which they can be justly proud, a newspaper which will be a force for the good of its community and region.

"It is our financial theory that the newspaper is the best investment there is in the realm of securities, because the newspaper is panic-proof. Nothing hinders a newspaper from expanding or contracting with the business cycle, retaining the while its percentage of profit. A newspaper may be deflated as well as inflated.

"Our chief interest in newspapers is a commercial interest. We have no political aspirations. Nothing is more ruinous to a newspaper than for its publisher to have political aspirations. We have never had any party affiliations, so there is never a thing for us to foreswear in politics.

"We will continue to be on the outlook for papers like the Pioneer Press and Dispatch. These are papers of the type we prefer. They are papers with a fine past and a future that beckons. The reputations of the Dispatch and Pioneer Press are national. Situated in a growing territory, we believe the possibilities of their development are limitless.

"When we consider the purchase of a paper we first ask ourselves: 'Is this paper alive, or is it dead?' This cannot always be determined at a glance. If it looks lively we examine it more closely to decide whether we can increase its income or reduce expenses in order to be sure to make our financing a safe proposition.

"As a working price for negotiations we usually figure on a sum that is six or seven times the yearly profit or the profit we believe we can make. There is no deep logic behind our selection of the six or seven. But there is a practical reason. If we buy a paper at a price so reached, we know that it affords us an opportunity of not only paying the interest on the purchase price, but also of paying amortising so that we will have the paper free in a fixed number of years.

"There is one other vital element in the purchase of a newspaper, we believe must be considered. That is competition. Where there is strong competition, the purchase price must be cut considerably.

"Plant and equipment plays a secondary part in any newspaper transaction. Developments of the printing industry require frequent discarding of mechanical appliances. The word 'modern' sticks truthfully to a newspaper plant less than 10 years.

"Were the New York Times to be sold tomorrow, its enormous property holdings in the heart of the world's largest city would play a relatively small part in the transaction. It is goodwill a man buys when he buys a newspaper. And by goodwill is meant what that paper is capable of earning in the future."

The Ridder family has been in the newspaper publishing business in New York for more than half a century. Herman Ridder, the father of the present owners of the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung and Evening Herold, began publishing a German Catholic weekly in New York called the Katholisches Volksblatt in 1875. He became owner of the Staats-Zeitung in 1889. All three of his sons were born in New York and attended Columbia University.

Bernard Ridder was first to enter newspaper work, receiving his early training on the Brooklyn Eagle. In January, 1905, he became connected with the Staats-Zeitung. Victor followed his older brother on that paper, joining the staff in May, 1905.

Joseph Ridder, graduated from Columbia with the class of 1906, as a mechanical engineer, and immediately became associated with his father and brothers on the German language daily. His first work was to superintend the removal of the paper from its old plant on the site of the Municipal Building to its present home.

When Herman Ridder organized the International Typesetting Machine Company in 1912, now the Intertype Corporation, Joseph Ridder was appointed general manager of the firm, continuing in that capacity until 1916. Then he returned as a director of the Staats-Zeitung, in charge of production.

On the death of his father in November, 1915, Bernard Ridder was elected president of the Staats-Zeitung and has held that office continually since, becoming president of the Staats-Herold Corporation on the amalgamation of the Staats-Zeitung and the German Herold.

Victor Ridder has always been prominent in affairs of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the Publishers' Association of New York City. He is at present chairman of the technical schools committee of the A. N. P. A., and a member of the legislative committee of the local publishers group.

Sixteen years ago in the class of 1911, Leo E. Owens graduated from the University of Minnesota with the degree of Mechanical Engineer. Today this young man, just thirty-eight years old, returns to the scenes of his early boyhood as Publisher of the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press. The intensive training which has fitted Mr. Owens for the position which he is to occupy here began before he entered college. After his graduation from the high school in Eau Claire,

(Continued on page 34)

NEW OWNERS IN ST. PAUL

B. H. Ridder — Joseph Ridder — L. E. Owens — Victor Ridder

I.T.U. VOTES AGAINST SEVEN-HOUR DAY; WOULD DISSOLVE MAILERS' UNION

Closing Sessions, at Indianapolis Marked by Victories for Progressives—William Green Speaks—Adopt New Rules for I. T. U. Publication

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 15.—Voting down a proposal to go on record in favor of the seven-hour day and acting upon a number of other proposals relating to the internal affairs of the organization, the International Typographical Union terminated its seventy-second session at the Indiana National Guard Armory here last Friday night.

The three-hour business session to clean up various details came after delegates in the afternoon had heard William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, sound a warning against political strife and internal factionalism. The closing hours of the convention brought consistent victory for the progressive forces of the union.

While considerable discussion ensued on the seven-hour day proposal submitted by Delegate Hermann of Atlantic City, N. J., the vote of the convention on the unfavorable report of the shorter workday committee was overwhelmingly against action at this time. Members of the committee spoke in favor of their report, declaring they did not believe the time propitious for such a definite stand, although they favored shorter hours.

The International Typographical Union succeeded in establishing the eight-hour day 22 years ago.

More than a score of proposals acted on by the committee on laws, the committee on finances and returns, the committee on shorter workdays and the committee on appeals were put to the convention for vote. Virtually all proposals were reported unfavorably by the committees. Among these was a proposal to pay the salaries of twelve representatives who were discharged by President Charles P. Howard last November, but continued to serve after four members of the executive council had told them the president's action was illegal. The committee reported unfavorably on the proposal but the report was lost.

In his closing address President Howard urged the delegates to carry back to the local unions a spirit of harmony and full understanding of the actions of the convention.

The breach between the two opposing factions of the International widened further by action taken Friday to dissolve the Mailers' International Union, and by giving further support to President Howard, leader of the progressive faction, but members of the typographical union signed a truce in the afternoon only long enough to hear Mr. Green deliver a brief address, and then renewed their battle.

Mr. Green's address, in the main, was an appeal for further organization of the laboring men and women of the country.

The well-worn fight between the administrationists, who are the followers of ex-president James M. Lynch, and opposed to the policies of the party in power, and the progressives, who follow the leadership of President Howard, was given airing one after the other during the session Thursday. The fight was renewed immediately upon convening of the session, when the progressives, over the vigorous opposition and protests of the administration members, succeeded in adopting a resolution which dissolves the mailers as a trade district union and brings them into the typographical union upon the same basis as printer members. The effect of the resolution will be to give the printers opportunity to vote for the president of the mailers' union, who serves as third vice-president of the I. T. U., and member of the executive council. This power has long been sought by the progressive faction of the I. T. U.

The resolution, which is a proposed amendment to the I. T. U. constitution, must be submitted to a referendum vote of the entire membership of the international, and members of the administration faction expressed doubt of its being sanctioned in the membership referendum.

The fight threatened to break again in the afternoon, but administration members, conceding the power held on the convention floor by the opposing forces, contented themselves with a vote of protest. This was when a resolution was adopted which places the executive council of the union under the complete control of the president of the international. The members of the executive council are administration in their political make-up, while President Howard stands alone as a progressive in that body. The resolution provided that vice-presidents of the union shall "be under the direction and control of the president." This exempts only John W. Hays, secretary-treasurer, and an administrationist, from the progressive domination.

The convention left to the discretion of the president a proposition which would prevent members of the printers' union from working in mailing rooms after their work had been completed in the composing room.

The convention in rapid order, over the objections of mailer members, voted down two resolutions which would have given printer members of the union a voice in the affairs of the mailers' union by permitting them to vote for the mailers' officers. These were offered as compromises over the action taken in the morning session when the mailers' union was disrupted as a trades union.

The resolution adopted in the morning session, while aimed particularly at the mailers' union, since it is the only trade district union in the I. T. U., prohibits the organization of any such district union within the international in the future. A roll call vote on the proposition revealed a decided gain in strength of the progressive forces and a corresponding loss by the administration's, when the resolution was adopted by a vote of 299 to 191. The fight over the resolution was one of the most bitter of the 1927 convention, equalling in interest the effort of the printers to divorce themselves from the international in Thursday's session.

William E. Towne of New York, member of the laws committee, charged that the question before the convention was one of whether a bloc of a few votes could sway the policies of 70,000 printers. There had been a time, he charged, when 3,000 mailers could dictate the policies of the I. T. U., by combining with other members of the printers' organization.

"This is a political move," A. S. Nance of Atlanta, Ga., declared, opposing the resolution. "You may pass this resolution in this convention, but you never can control the votes of the mailers. It is a move whereby 73,000 printers will select the president of the mailers and cram him down the throats of 3,000 mailers."

Charles N. Smith of New York, president of the mailers, disclaimed any political activity on the part of the mailers with any group within the I. T. U.

William Reilly of Dallas, Tex., member of the laws committee, and a progressive, declared the mailers had been working with the administration wing, and declared the resolution was only for the best interests of the organization.

Another move of the progressive forces to break the strength of the administration faction was seen in adoption of the report of the committee on the Typographical Journal, which criticised John W. Hays, secretary-treasurer of the union, and editor of the publication.

The report of the committee recommended that Mr. Hay's censorship over the columns of the Journal "be broken," to the end that "freedom of the press in our own organization should be accorded all departments." The report also directed Mr. Hays to prepare "a financial report that could be understood with intelligence by every member of the union," and recommended that Mr. Hays be instructed to keep the publication of the magazine within the money allowed.

The resolution also endorsed the purport of a proposition previously adopted, which provides that the president of the international shall be given a column in the publication, over which the editor shall exercise no censorship.

The report was adopted with a surge of "ayes" which overshadowed the almost feeble "noes" of the administration group.

Deciding to repeal that part of the by-laws concerning divorced women automatically being dropped from the rolls of the organization, the Women's Auxiliary to the International Typographical Union adopted a committee report to that effect and moved that the change be voted on at a referendum of the entire auxiliary.

Mrs. W. E. Jones, of Chicago, chairman of the committee on laws, read the report and recounted the difficulties and dissatisfaction that arose from the divorce clause. The question was raised when the Houston (Tex.) Auxiliary took an appeal from the president's ruling expelling a member when she became divorced from her husband. The president was upheld in her ruling, but the law on which the ruling was based was immediately placed before the committee on laws for repeal.

The convention is the largest ever held by the Auxiliary, it was said. Besides the 31 appointed delegates, 50 more attended the sessions.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER CALENDAR

Aug. 20-25.—National Assn., of State Press Field Managers, annual meeting, Detroit.

Aug. 22-24.—Georgia Press Assn., annual convention, Eatonton, Ga.

Aug. 24.—International Press Conference, League of Nations, Geneva.

Aug. 25.—Florida Circulation Managers Assn., organization meetting, Orlando, Fla.

Sept. 5-17.—Educational Graphic Arts Exposition, Grand Central Palace, New York.

Sept. 8-10.—Montana Press Assn., annual meeting, Great Falls, Mont.

Sept. 9-10.—Northwest Texas Press Assn., annual convention, Wichita Falls, Tex.

Sept. 12-15.—Financial Advertisers Assn., annual convention, West Baden, Ind.

Sept. 15-17.—Washington Press Assn., meeting, Wenatchee, Wash.

AGENCY SUES OKLAHOMANS, INC.

K. C. Shelburne Alleges $7,145 Due on Advertising Contract

K. C. Shelburne, of the Shelburne Advertising agency, has filed suit in the Oklahoma County district court against Oklahomans, Inc., for $7,145 alleged due on advertising contract.

In his petition Shelburne claims he made a contract with the state Chamber of Commerce in April, 1926, to launch Oklahomans, Inc., and to conduct an advertising campaign to raise money.

Shelburne says he spent $37,032.96 to raise $104,000. Refund was to be at the rate of 25 per cent on membership dues, orders for advertising contracts and literature. Shelburne was to have exclusive control of all advertising purchased by the organization.

Difficulties with Col. W. S. Key, general manager of the organization, resulted in a break after Shelburne had received $24,500 for his work.

The board of directors of Oklahomans, Inc., canceled the contract. Colonel Key claimed the agency made excessive charges for its work. The Tulsa World and Harlow's Weekly of Oklahoma City led a campaign against Key and he resigned, effective in September.

No successor for Key has been chosen.

N. Y. TELEGRAM NAMES LISTER CITY EDITOR

Co-Author of "Spread Eagle" Move from Brooklyn to Take Desk on Scripps-Howard Paper — Prefers Newspaper to Writing Plays

Walter Lister is now city editor of the New York Evening Telegram, Scripps Howard newspaper. He held that same desk last on the Brooklyn Times but had previously had experience on newspapers of the Scripps-Howard organization in other cities. With George S. Brooks he is co-author of "Spread Eagle" a play debunking war that had a successful run this season on Broadway.

WALTER LISTER

Mr. Lister left Denison University in Ohio when he was 18 to enlist in the army. He served in the World war for two years, seeing service at the front in France with the 37th Division artillery.

After the armistice he became a government student at Poitiers University in France where he met Brooks. They did some "serious drinking" together there, Lister said, and then he returned to this country and was graduated from Brown in 1920. With the intention of becoming an English teacher, Lister took post-graduate work the next year at Harvard, but at its completion, instead of presiding over a classroom he joined the editorial staff of the Batavia (N. Y.) Daily News.

From this paper he went to the Cleveland Press, of which, at the time W. L. Sturdevant, his present editor in New York, was managing editor. After 13 months on the Press he was transferred to Houston, Tex. to be managing editor of the Press. He held this position for nearly three years before resigning and coming East to work on the Brooklyn Times.

In addition to the play, Mr. Lister has written a number of short stories published in the popular magazines and an article on Jean Lafitte, which recently appeared in the American Mercury.

"I would rather be a newspaper man than a playwright," he declared this week. "A playwright's job is like playing the races. It's big gamble and one doesn't often win."

APPEALS FOR CLEMENCY

Mrs. Enwright Visits Governor and Parole Board for Husband

Mrs. Frederick W. Enwright, wife of the former publisher of the defunct Boston Telegram, later Telegraph, and her daughter Eleanor, again for the third time Monday appealed to Governor Fuller for clemency for her husband who is serving an eight month sentence for criminal libel of former Mayor James M. Curley of Boston. In the absence of the Governor, Mrs. Enwright saw Herman A. MacDonald, the governor's secretary. Mrs. Enwright also called on Frank A. Brooks, chairman of the State Board of Parole.

He told her the Board had taken no action on the petition for Enwright's parole other than to take it under advisement. Enwright is eligible for parole should the board feel willing to give it to him. He was sentenced April 11 to serve eight months. He was recently transferred to Tewksbury Prison Camp from Charles Street Jail, Boston.

WILL ROGERS NIGHT

The National Press Club will give a reception to Will Rogers at the Washington Auditorium, Saturday, August 27.

HOME FOR NEWSPAPERMEN NEARER REALIZATION

Legal Difficulties Surrounding $3,500,000 Estate Left by James Gordon Bennett Being Cleared Away —Present Income Goes to Annuitants

By L. J. DE BEKKER

IT may be some years before nearly $3,500,000 now in sight will be available for the "James Gordon Bennett Memorial Home for New York Journalists," provided for in Mr. Bennett's will, can be established, but the money is in possession of the Guaranty Trust Company, securely invested, and of the income, some $20,000 a year is now being expended in caring for aged and infirm newspapermen. What the Actors Fund has done for the theatrical profession, what the Authors' Club, thanks to the Carnegie endowment, is able to do for some literary men, and the Authors' League of America for others of the literary craft, what, in fact, the former owner and editor of the New York Herald wished to be done for the newspapermen, in a larger and broader way, is only a matter of years.

Commodore Bennett left his residuary estate for this purpose, and when the late Frank Munsey bought the property, paying for it $4,000,000, it seemed that the Commodore's dream was certain of realization. But Mr. Munsey paid only $1,000,000 of the purchase price in cash, and the notes for the balance, drawing good interest, it is true, were not paid until the New York Herald was merged with the old New York Tribune when the Mills-Reid purchasers paid the notes in full. That left the trustees of the Bennett estate with something over $4,000,000, but there were many claims unsatisfied, and certain litigations were pending which threatened to eat up a great deal of money. With all obligations settled or discharged, there remained a trifle less than $3,500,000 to be devoted to the Memorial Home, but, unfortunately for the newspaper men, under Commodore Bennett's will, a number of annuities were charged against the estate, payment of which as a first lien, has taken the greater part of the income, and not until these annuities have lapsed through death or surrender, will it be possible to carry the Commodore's ultimate purpose into effect. How many years that will be is a question that would fall within the province of the actuaries, in the case of an insurance company, and in this instance, there is no one to make such an estimate. It is axiomatic, however, that annuitants are long-lived. None of the beneficiaries under the Bennett will in the matter of annuities are needy, and few are young. The possibilities of death or surrender are therefore in favor of the newspapermen.

Among these annuitants are Mrs. Maud Gordon Bennett, whom Mr. Bennett married late in life, and who was then Baronne de Reuter, widow of the founder of the famous European news service which bore his name. She receives a yearly allowance of $50,000, besides an income of 100,000 francs per annum which the Commodore thought necessary for the upkeep of her home in Paris. Her son, Baron Ronald de Reuter, Commodore Bennett's stepson, receives an income of $20,000 a year, Mrs. Norah Ricardo, of London, England, receives $10,000 a year, and an equal sum goes to Countess Paul d'Araman (Henriette d'Araman), of Lauzanne, Switzerland. To other annuitants yearly payments are made ranging in sums from $2,000 to $5,000 a year, the total mounting to $142,500.

Although the work thrown upon the Guaranty Trust Company has been stupendous, to quote one of the trustees, its labor has been given gratuitously, and it has neither sought nor received remuneration of any kind. Heavy taxes were paid to the U. S. Government, but Robert W. Candler, legal adviser of the estate of James Gordon Bennett, has labored assiduously to have some of these taxes refunded. Mr. Candler's firm, Jay & Candler, were for many years counsel for the New York Herald. The directors of "The James Gordon Bennett Memorial Home for New York Journalists Corporation," organized to take care of the residuary estate, and bring the Memorial Home into being at the earliest possible moment, are Mr. Candler, Rodman Wanamaker, Francis H. Sisson, and Merrel P. Calloway, vice-presidents of the Guaranty Trust Company, and Robert E. Livingston, director of information and advertising for the Consolidated Gas Co. of New York. Mr. Livingston was connected with the New York Herald for twenty years while the Herald was owned by Commodore Bennett.

It is a peculiar fact that James Gordon Bennett was one of that small minority of millionaires who lived in horror of the day when his fortune might slip through his fingers, that before death came to him, he would be penniless. He did not die penniless, but although his income from the Herald had at one time been $1,000,000 a year net, as revealed in court proceedings, he might have done so, had he lived a few years longer; and it is certain that when the will was made he did not realize how small the residue to be devoted to his favorite project would be.

During his later years Commodore Bennett had been in ill health, and when the will was made, was in a far better financial position than at the time of his demise.

There was a noticeable change in Commodore Bennett's condition, mentally and physically, when he last visited New York, a few months before his death, according to an old Herald man, who knew him well. He did not realize or admit that the one thing which was closer to his heart than anything else, or than any person, for that matter, the New York Herald, was not in as satisfactory a condition financially as it had been, and that the circulation of the paper had shrunk materially. To Bennett, who had controlled the Herald for nearly half a century, the Herald was still what he had always believed it to be, the leader of all newspapers. The paper's advertising had drifted away, and was being divided between the World and the Times, and when Mr. Munsey purchased it there were many unpaid bills to be considered and settled. Some of these were for large ammounts. Due to deaths and other causes, there have been changes in the personnel of the Bennett executors, and to the numerous questions as to the possibilities of realizing the Memorial Home there has been until now no definite answer.

Mr. Livingston, however, points out that during 1926 there were 47 beneficiaries of the small income left from the trust fund after annuities already referred to had been paid, and that each of these beneficiaries received a monthly check ranging from $20 to $60, according to his needs, the total revenue thus expended being for the year, $20,474.60. Some of the men now being aided are old fellows who had served the New York Herald for long periods of years, thirty or forty, in some cases. All of these payments are made after careful investigation by the directors. It is to be noted, however, that most of them are not, in the strictest sense, newspapermen at all, having been employed in the mechanical departments of the paper, most of which are unionized, the unions themselves taking exceedingly good care of their aged and infirm members.

On Bennett's eccentricities a tradition has grown up which some day may be available in book form. One of these traditions relating to the "Lysistrat" shows that the Commodore was always bent upon educating his guests with innocent merriment. At the time when the solar plexus blow was new to the prize ring, the Commodore decided that they must be shown the actual blow, and being an amateur at boxing, and rather vain of his skill, he caused a sixteen foot ring to be set up in the main salon of the yacht, which had been stripped of its furnishings for that purpose. The Commodore gave a demonstration in person, his sparring partner being no less a personage than his butler. This man, grown beefy with easy living, had been quite hefty with the gloves as a young man, but he could never muster up the courage to hit Mr. Bennett as hard as he doubtless at times would have liked to. The Commodore pummeled his butler in good fashion, and finally, to the great joy of his audience, knocked him out with the solar plexus blow. It is said that the butler was afraid to come to for half an hour after the administration of this veritable coup de main.

On the occasion of one of his visits to New York the Commodore invited Eddie Flynn to meet him at Delmonico's for a business talk, and the editor found his chief there, seated at a table, promptly at the appointed time. The Commodore ordered a bottle of his favorite champagne, and when there was a delay in serving it, pushed his way through a crowd of men lined up against the bar, and said in stentorian tones: "I ordered a bottle of champagne 15 minutes ago, where is it?"

"You would have thought he had ordered a case," commented a small chap standing near the Commodore, and quite loudly enough to be overheard. The Commodore drew back, and was preparing to swing on him, when he was lifted off his feet by an uppercut on the chin, and took the count.

Mr. Flynn, reasoning fast, decided that it would never do for him to be a witness when his revered chief was knocked out, even in Delmonico's, so he beat a hasty retreat, and in due course was seated at his desk in the Herald office when a summons was brought to him from the big boss.

"Weren't you with me in Delmonico's this afternoon, Mr. Flynn?" the Commodore queried.

"Yes," was the partly truthful reply. "We discussed some business matters for a few moments, and then you started toward the bar, and I assumed that our conference was at an end, and came back to the office."

"Who hit me?"

"What do you mean, Mr. Bennett? Did anyone strike you?"

"Yes, and I want to know who he was. It was a knockout. Get out and learn what happened to me, and report back as soon as you can."

Eddie Flynn took his hat, and after a decent interval away from the Herald Building, returned with the information that the Commodore sought. He had been knocked out by Billy Edwards, a ring figure of that day.

"What, the lightweight!" the Commodore exclaimed with delight. "Bring him here right away. I want to see him." What the Commodore might have felt had he been knocked out by an ordinary man may be guessed, but in this case, it was a distinction. The pugilist was escorted to the Bennett sanctum by Eddie Flynn. It was the beginning of a beautiful friendship.

It is a matter of record that the Commodore was once offered $15,000,000 for the New York Herald, and that he refused it.

It is a fact, however, though not of record, that he really sold the paper after a long night session, to Hermann H. Kohlsaat, of Chicago, and at his own price. The contract of sale was actually signed, but the next day Commodore Bennett sought Mr. Kohlsaat, and begged off. He said that he had had a sleepless night, and that he had come to realize that the Herald was so large a part of his life that to part with it would kill him. On that Kohlsaat tore up the contract of sale.

To many rumors of impending sales of the Herald, Mr. Bennett had a stereotyped reply: "The Herald is for sale, and may be bought at any time by anyone for three cents."

"EUROPA'S" RETURN SPOILED SURPRISE PARTY

When the Junkers plane "Europa" was forced to return to Dessau after starting for the United States, it spoiled a surprise party planned for Mrs. H. D. Knickerbocker of Chicago, whose son, Herbert R. Knickerbocker, Berlin correspondent, of Universal Service, was a passenger on the plane. The news man had not been home for years, and his father, Dr. H. D. Knickerbocker, shown at the left above, and two brothers, R. C. and E. H., planned to surprise their mother when he arrived in Chicago after the trans-ocean flight.

JULY LINAGE OF 37 CITIES SHOWS 4 PERCENT LOSS

LINAGE carried by 153 newspapers in 37 American cities during July, 1927, ran 4 per cent behind that of July, 1926, even with an extra Sunday to help this year's linage, according to the following figures gathered by the New York Evening Post Statistical Department and EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

SUMMARY OF ADVERTISING BY CITIES

37 cities listed — 8 show gain — 28 show loss
153 papers listed — 59 show gain — 90 show loss
4 no comparison

	1927	1926
New York	10,989,672	10,908,848	80,824 Gain
Chicago	5,931,603	6,128,904	197,301 Loss
Philadelphia	5,167,175	5,526,833	359,658 Loss
Detroit	4,122,902	4,611,572	488,670 Loss
Cleveland	3,058,425	3,261,150	202,725 Loss
St. Louis	3,079,380	3,388,120	308,740 Loss
†Boston	5,049,330	5,188,306	138,976 Loss
Baltimore	3,644,976	3,973,636	328,660 Loss
Los Angeles	6,178,105	6,265,259	87,154 Loss
Pittsburgh	4,493,665	4,611,838	118,173 Loss
†Buffalo	2,628,452	2,724,855	96,403 Loss
San Francisco	4,011,980	4,350,132	338,152 Loss
Newark	1,350,306	1,489,922	139,616 Loss
Milwaukee	2,521,961	2,499,950	22,011 Gain
Washington	3,777,176	4,113,736	336,560 Loss
Cincinnati	3,077,700	2,988,900	88,800 Gain
New Orleans	3,273,751	3,561,339	278,588 Loss
Minneapolis	2,432,782	2,539,001	106,219 Loss
Seattle	2,792,454	2,656,920	135,534 Gain
Indianapolis	2,701,818	2,746,095	44,277 Loss
Kansas City	2,774,652	2,906,352	131,680 Loss
Rochester	2,979,851	2,774,748	205,103 Gain
Portland	2,374,316	2,416,330	42,014 Loss
Memphis	2,344,279	2,381,099	36,820 Loss
Atlanta	1,671,089	2,412,450	.....
†Denver	2,297,130	1,872,976	424,154 Gain
Providence	2,251,754	2,408,366	156,612 Loss
Columbus	3,103,361	3,196,423	93,062 Loss
†Louisville	2,421,754	3,011,252	589,498 Loss
St. Paul	1,976,184	2,130,898	154,714 Loss
Oakland	2,061,136	2,145,906	84,770 Loss
†Omaha	1,434,664	1,543,479	108,815 Loss
†Birmingham	2,336,894	2,445,282	108,388 Loss
Richmond	1,605,982	1,775,788	169,806 Loss
Dayton	2,660,448	2,480,058	180,390 Gain
Houston	2,634,744	2,483,348	151,396 Gain
†Des Moines	1,365,308	1,675,682	310,374 Loss
Totals	118,549,535	123,603,991	5,054,456 Loss

†Note references under individual newspaper linage of those cities.

NEW YORK

	1927	1926
American	933,646	853,246	80,400 Gain
Herald Tribune	1,194,300	1,141,582	52,718 Gain
Times	1,949,314	1,839,506	109,808 Gain
World	1,179,900	1,200,534	20,634 Loss
*Mirror (Tab.)	152,178	228,500	76,322 Loss
News (Tab.)	568,244	469,534	98,710 Gain
*Evening Graphic (Tab)	211,420	239,066	27,646 Loss
*Evening Journal	733,600	801,094	67,494 Loss
*Evening Post	321,686	307,850	13,836 Gain
*Evening World	533,180	527,260	5,920 Gain
*Sun	826,570	925,662	99,092 Loss
*Telegram	421,550	401,336	20,214 Gain
Brooklyn Eagle	1,197,846	1,157,092	40,754 Gain
Brooklyn Times	388,086	450,456	62,370 Loss
Standard Union	378,152	366,130	12,022 Gain
Totals	10,989,672	10,908,848	80,824 Gain

CHICAGO

	1927	1926
*Daily News	1,356,948	1,482,414	125,466 Loss
Tribune	2,110,020	2,135,685	25,665 Loss
Herald-Examiner	907,386	848,985	58,401 Gain
*Post	356,019	399,762	43,743 Loss
*American	906,540	921,381	14,841 Loss
*Journal	294,690	340,677	45,987 Loss
Totals	5,931,603	6,128,904	197,301 Loss

PHILADELPHIA

	1927	1926
Inquirer	1,398,300	1,437,900	39,600 Loss
Record	704,400	677,700	26,700 Gain
Ledger	1,003,001	1,025,123	22,122 Loss
*Evening Ledger	861,474	971,010	109,536 Loss
Bulletin	1,200,000	1,415,100	215,100 Loss
Totals	5,167,175	5,526,833	359,658 Loss

DETROIT

	1927	1926
News	2,082,528	2,410,366	327,838 Loss
Times	904,624	981,526	76,902 Loss
Free Press	1,135,750	1,219,680	83,930 Loss
Totals	4,122,902	4,611,572	488,670 Loss

CLEVELAND

	1927	1926
Plain Dealer	1,294,425	1,285,800	8,625 Gain
News-Leader	796,575	883,575	87,000 Loss
*Press	967,425	1,091,775	124,350 Loss
Totals	3,058,425	3,261,150	202,725 Loss

ST. LOUIS

	1927	1926
Post-Dispatch	1,501,080	1,605,520	104,440 Loss
Globe-Democrat	997,500	1,002,000	4,500 Loss
*Star	357,600	479,400	121,800 Loss
Times	223,200	301,200	78,000 Loss
Totals	3,079,380	3,388,120	308,740 Loss

BOSTON

	1927	1926
Herald	1,088,499	1,040,894	47,605 Gain
Globe	1,115,567	1,090,222	25,345 Gain
Post	806,387	794,824	11,563 Gain
Advertiser	353,659	355,277	1,618 Loss
*American	357,031	347,251	9,780 Gain
*Traveler	846,723	836,937	9,786 Gain
*Transcript	481,464	511,540	30,076 Loss
*Telegram	.....	211,361	.....
Totals	5,049,330	5,188,306	138,976 Loss

Telegram discontinued November, 1926.

BALTIMORE

	1927	1926
Sun	1,215,575	1,220,984	5,409 Loss
*Evening Sun	1,070,515	1,298,938	228,423 Loss
American	482,056	485,021	2,965 Loss
*News	606,884	626,643	19,759 Loss
*Post	269,234	342,050	72,816 Loss
Totals	3,644,976	3,973,636	328,660 Loss

LOS ANGELES

	1927	1926
Times	1,904,644	1,940,316	35,672 Loss
Examiner	1,737,851	1,695,239	42,612 Gain
*Express	704,900	717,724	12,824 Loss
*Herald	1,210,370	1,340,122	129,752 Loss
*Record	388,682	391,664	2,982 Loss
News	231,658	180,194	51,464 Gain
Totals	6,178,105	6,265,259	87,154 Loss

BUFFALO

	1927	1926
Courier	780,438	706,921	73,517 Gain
Times	865,687	906,476	40,789 Loss
*News	982,327	1,111,458	129,131 Loss
Totals	2,628,452	2,724,855	96,403 Loss

SAN FRANCISCO

	1927	1926
Chronicle	877,240	875,196	2,044 Gain
Examiner	1,436,764	1,395,096	41,668 Gain
Bulletin	387,842	539,462	151,620 Loss
*Call	723,898	869,106	145,208 Loss
*News	586,236	671,272	85,036 Loss
Totals	4,011,980	4,350,132	338,152 Loss

MILWAUKEE

	1927	1926
Journal	1,269,003	1,305,139	36,136 Loss
S. T. & A. M. S.	566,852	486,140	80,712 Gain
*Leader	138,270	197,386	59,116 Loss
*Wisconsin News	547,836	511,285	36,551 Gain
Totals	2,521,961	2,499,950	22,011 Gain

*No Sunday edition.

WASHINGTON

	1927	1926
Star	1,911,326	1,979,373	68,047 Loss
Post	695,398	794,161	98,763 Loss
*Evening Times	520,199	612,185	91,986 Loss
Herald	477,739	524,422	46,683 Loss
*Evening News	172,514	203,595	31,081 Loss
Totals	3,777,176	4,113,736	336,560 Loss

CINCINNATI

	1927	1926
*Post	678,300	728,400	50,100 Loss
*Times-Star	992,400	1,010,700	18,300 Loss
Enquirer	1,143,300	987,000	156,300 Gain
Tribune	263,700	262,800	900 Gain
Totals	3,077,700	2,988,900	88,800 Gain

NEW ORLEANS

	1927	1926
Times-Picayune	1,410,465	1,542,076	131,611 Loss
Item	762,225	807,020	44,795 Loss
States	640,264	707,065	66,801 Loss
*Tribune	460,797	505,178	44,381 Loss
Totals	3,273,751	3,561,339	287,588 Loss

MINNEAPOLIS

	1927	1926
Tribune	981,901	1,063,575	81,674 Loss
Journal	1,036,555	1,079,021	42,466 Loss
*Star	414,326	396,405	17,921 Gain
Totals	2,432,782	2,539,001	106,219 Loss

SEATTLE

	1927	1926
Times	1,247,848	1,176,588	71,260 Gain
Post-Intelligencer	936,264	801,654	134,610 Gain
*Star	513,450	547,918	34,468 Loss
*Union-Record	94,892	130,760	35,868 Loss
Totals	2,792,454	2,656,920	135,534 Gain

DENVER

	1927	1926
News	720,210	458,528	261,682 Gain
*News	533,070	1,047,368	165,990 Gain
Post	1,043,850	367,080	3,518 Loss
Totals	2,297,130	1,572,976	424,154 Gain

Times changed to Denver Evening News November 22, 1926.

PROVIDENCE

	1927	1926
Journal	767,356	747,066	20,290 Gain
*Bulletin	905,733	982,621	76,888 Loss
Tribune	297,488	345,596	48,108 Loss
*News	281,177	333,083	51,906 Loss
Totals	2,251,754	2,408,366	156,612 Loss

COLUMBUS

	1927	1926
Dispatch	1,559,523	1,633,707	74,184 Loss
Journal	642,876	629,133	13,743 Gain
*Citizen	900,962	933,583	32,621 Loss
Totals	3,103,361	3,196,423	93,062 Loss

LOUISVILLE

	1927	1926
Courier-Journal	1,004,117	1,022,123	18,006 Loss
Herald-Post	233,409	†561,299	327,890 Loss
*Times	827,674	933,711	106,037 Loss
*Post	356,554	494,119	137,565 Loss
Totals	2,421,754	3,011,252	589,498 Loss

Herald-Post morning edition discontinued with issue of March 5, 1927. †Includes 302,105 lines of morning issue.

ST. PAUL

	1927	1926
*Dispatch	654,360	739,172	84,812 Loss
Pioneer	709,534	737,688	28,154 Loss
News	612,290	654,038	41,748 Loss
Totals	1,976,184	2,130,898	154,714 Loss

OAKLAND

	1927	1926
Tribune	1,370,278	1,402,184	31,906 Loss
*Post-Inquirer	690,858	743,722	52,864 Loss
Totals	2,061,136	2,145,906	84,770 Loss

OMAHA

	1927	1926
World-Herald	878,465	859,971	18,494 Gain
Bee-News	556,199	367,248	188,951 Gain
News	.....	316,260	.....
Totals	1,434,664	1,543,479	108,815 Loss

News combined with Bee February 7, 1927.

BIRMINGHAM

	1927	1926
Age-Herald	512,722	‡620,830	108,108 Loss
News	1,378,174	1,325,394	52,780 Gain
*Post	445,998	499,058	53,060 Loss
Totals	2,336,894	2,445,282	108,388 Loss

‡Sunday Age-Herald merged into Sunday News, June 1, 1927; includes 215,194 in four Sunday issues.

RICHMOND

	1927	1926
*News-Leader	832,692	997,318	164,626 Loss
Times-Dispatch	773,290	778,470	5,180 Loss
Totals	1,605,982	1,775,788	169,806 Loss

DAYTON

	1927	1926
Journal	597,870	520,408	77,462 Gain
News	1,291,766	1,185,254	106,512 Gain
*Herald	770,812	774,396	3,584 Loss
Totals	2,660,448	2,480,058	180,390 Gain

HOUSTON

	1927	1926
Chronicle	1,111,334	1,115,100	3,766 Loss
Post-Dispatch	935,060	852,432	82,628 Gain
*Press	588,350	515,816	72,534 Gain
Totals	2,634,744	2,483,348	151,396 Gain

DES MOINES

	1927	1926
Register	635,579	547,973	87,606 Gain
*Tribune	729,729	706,846	22,883 Gain
*Capital	.....	420,863	.....
Totals	1,365,308	1,675,682	310,374 Loss

Daily Capital discontinued with February 12, 1927, issue.

INDIANAPOLIS

	1927	1926
*News	1,308,312	1,398,414	90,102 Loss
Star	1,013,709	922,893	90,816 Gain
*Times	379,797	424,788	44,991 Loss
Totals	2,701,818	2,746,095	44,277 Loss

ATLANTA

	1927	1926
Constitution	.....	804,060	.....
Journal	1,065,365	1,063,048	2,317 Gain
Georgian-American	605,724	545,342	60,382 Gain
Totals	1,671,089	2,412,450	.....

KANSAS CITY

	1927	1926
Journal	421,606	454,159	32,553 Loss
*Post	328,713	383,736	55,023 Loss
Star	1,295,346	1,280,628	14,718 Gain
*Star (morning)	728,987	787,809	58,822 Loss
Totals	2,774,652	2,906,332	131,680 Loss

MEMPHIS

	1927	1926
Commercial-Appeal	1,120,770	1,224,853	104,080 Loss
*Evening Appeal	583,324	.....	.....
*News-Scimitar	.....	579,985	.....
*Press	.....	576,261	.....
*Press-Scimitar	640,185	.....	.....
Totals	2,344,279	2,381,099	36,820 Loss

PITTSBURGH

	1927	1926
*Chronicle-Telegraph	802,130	815,836	13,706 Loss
Gazette-Times	745,542	741,720	3,822 Gain
Post	754,362	749,896	4,466 Gain
Press	1,672,931	1,692,306	19,375 Loss
*Sun	518,700	612,080	93,380 Loss
Totals	4,493,665	4,611,838	118,173 Loss

NEWARK

	1927	1926
Ledger	.....	.....	.....
*News	1,350,306	1,489,922	139,616 Loss
*Star-Eagle	.....	.....	.....
Totals	1,350,306	1,489,922	139,616 Loss

PORTLAND, ORE

	1927	1926
*News	437,710	440,216	2,506 Loss
*Telegram	.....	.....	.....
Oregonian	993,482	1,059,016	65,534 Loss
Oregon Journal	943,124	917,098	26,026 Gain
Totals	2,374,316	2,416,330	42,014 Loss

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

	1927	1926
Democrat & Chronicle	1,317,993	1,226,819	91,174 Gain
Journal-American	738,440	647,846	90,594 Gain
*Times-Union	923,418	900,083	23,335 Gain
Totals	2,979,851	2,774,748	205,103 Gain

American weekly not included.

No Sunday edition.

WHEN YOU COVER A REVOLUTION TAKE A TOP HAT ALONG, I.N.S. MAN ADVISES

O. D. Tolischus of Berlin Bureau Recounts Difficulties Encountered in Covering Vienna Riots and Death of King Ferdinand—Faced Revolvers of Guards

GETTING the news under the muzzles of machine guns, being held up with revolvers in the pit of the stomach, riding in the pilot's seat of a bucking airplane, battling past ugly-tempered mobs and suavely-mannered but suspicious censors, and winding up by attending a king's funeral in a full dress suit and top hat—these were some of the experiences of O. D. Tolischus, Berlin correspondent of International News Service during the two weeks recently when the Viennese revolt and the death of King Ferdinand of Rumania chose to happen right on top of one another.

"When you go to cover a revolution, be sure to take along your soup and fish and topper," Tolischus writes EDITOR & PUBLISHER, "The story will show why.

"It was on July 15 and I was just polishing off a dish of hors d'oeuvres at a luncheon of the American Club, preparing to take notes on the speech of Julius Klein, America's director of foreign trade, when a page called me to the telephone. Walter Dietzel, mainstay of our German service staff, was calling. 'Revolution in Vienna, Ministry of Justice burning,' he said. I rushed to the office.

"Alfred Tyrnauer, our Vienna correspondent, had already shot through a brief message with the meat of the story. Tyrnauer started filing just about the time the first flames flared up from the Justice Ministry and kept up a steady stream of bulletins to London and Berlin direct from the scene of action. Then he had a hunch—namely that in the confusion which began to seize the city, stacks of telegrams might be delayed or lost entirely. He jumped to the telephone, got through to Berlin quickly and in five minutes rapid talking had more information into the Berlin office than reached either Berlin or London by telegraph for the next three hours.

"Dietzel immediately compressed the stuff into short bulletins, turned them over to the filer and then got London on the phone. Again the telephone was quicker than the telegraph. Tyrnauer kept to the phone all afternoon, sending bulletins on the progress of the battle, and by 3 p. m. I was able to get off a 'lead all' that cleaned up the story.

"My typewriter was still hot when I had to dash out of the office to the railroad station. Apparently I was the only correspondent to get off on the night train for Vienna. We got stuck at the border, held up by the general strike which had broken out in Austria over night, and which had crippled trains, telegraphs and telephones. Still, we beat other outside correspondents into Vienna by about 12 hours.

"'We' were Robert Hartmann, Berlin manager of International Newsreel, and myself. We were routed out of our comfortable sleepers at 4 a. m. as the train was pulling into the little German border town of Passau. Excited, frightened people were milling about the station. The wildest rumors were floating about. Vienna, it was said, was in flames, civil war had broken out, street battles were raging all through the city, hostile armies were marching on the capital. Knowing the worth of border rumors from previous experiences, I restrained myself from putting any of this on the wire, and looked for an automobile.

"It was a job of persuasion and diplomacy to get one, for the drivers knew that with a general strike on, every moving car was looked upon as a 'scab machine.' But we got one.

"It was a fast ride, even if it took eight hours. A good part of the time we spent persuading socialist guards searching us and our car for arms not to drive a hole through our stomachs. We reached the beleaguered city about 3 p. m. A two-hour ride about the town, within sound of rifle fire which reached our ears intermittently, speeding past machine guns and pulling up hard in front of barricades or the bayonets of the guards, stopping only long enough to snap a picture and interview whoever was available from both rival camps, and Hartmann had his newsreel and I material for my first eye-witness story, including an authentic count of the dead and injured.

"Then came one of those things that cause European correspondents to lose their hair before their time. Hartmann immediately started off for a dash to the border to get his pictures out. He took my story with him to file it at the nearest working telegraph station. But his car broke down and he didn't get out of Austria till the next morning. All I got for my trouble that day was a call-down from New York for wasting cable tolls on Sunday. But I didn't hear of that till later.

"Fortunately, Tyrnauer had dashed off with his story of the day to Bratislava, in Czechoslovakia, and L. Aletrino, the I. N. S. correspondent in Prague, was also shooting all the stuff he could get into Berlin. There H. R. Knickerbocker and Laura Patrick, of the Universal Service staff, worked day and night to forward these stories and whatever else was available to New York and London.

"Sunday morning, I got off another batch of dispatches, including the first official statement from the commander-in-chief of the Socialists Guards, through the pilot of a German Lufthansa plane who was flying home. Lufthansa pilots and the I. N. S. staff are old friends from the days of Chamberlin and Levine. Then the other correspondents began arriving from Berlin. They had reckoned on beating the trains by flying to Vienna, but fog held them up and they did not get to Vienna until the next day. I was congratulating myself, little knowing that my first story was still stuck on a country road somewhere in Austria. By Sunday night I had had time enough to size up the situation to get off the first flat statement that the revolt had spent itself and that the strike would be called off soon. It was.

"Monday came, some more hard luck. Tyrnauer left Vienna in an auto for Bratislava carrying his and my dispatches. His automobile, moving along at 50 miles an hour, was passed by another car. Tyrnauer thought he was being beaten and urged his driver to step on it. Just then, the other car shot across the road, careened, turned into the ditch, and Tyrnauer had to shift from the role of correspondent to that of Red Cross man. Two women were dead and a man fatally injured. Tyrnauer took them to the nearest house, procured medical assistance, and spelled out his name, profession, address and the name of his grandmother to the gendarmes who had to have witnesses to the accident. He started off again two hours late—too late almost for the afternoon papers, but as Tyrnauer explained when he came back: 'What could I do?'

"That evening the Austrian radio began working again and the transmission of the news ceased to be the biggest part of the job.

"Just as I was settling down to clean up the tag ends of the story, hoping also to get a glimpse of the Vienne of 'wine, women and song,' in came the flash that King Ferdinand was dead.

"My reaction, after sending off the news, was to dash to the Franco-Roumanian airplane office. 'Alles besetzt,' said the girl at the desk and shrugged her shoulders. When I started to get violent, she called the manager. He also shrugged his shoulders. When a Viennese shrugs his shoulders, you might just as well give up.

"So I took the night express for Budapest and went to the office of the same airplane company there. 'Alles besetzt,' of course, but I learned that a crate of guinea pigs was waiting to be shipped. Adding a passenger fare to the freight charges enabled the company to start off a special plane and the guinea pigs and myself arrived in Bucharest in four hours flying time. It takes 24 hours by train on which the other correspondents were sitting. I arrived just in time to get out the first news of Ferdinand's political testament in which he barred Carol from the throne and to view the king's body laid out in state in Cotroceni Palace. But by the time I got through it was way past midnight, and I hadn't eaten anything since I had gulped down two fried eggs on the flying field in Belgrade at noon. But Max Perlman, the Universal Service correspondent in Bucharest, my guide and mentor there, said: 'Nothing doing. State of siege.'

"We knocked in vain at various restaurant doors for a handout. Finally, we drove out into the country, where a summer restaurant proprietor listened to our pleas—for a good price—and served us a sumptuous meal in a dark corner of his garden, away from the bayonette sentry patrolling the road. I hate to think what would have happened to us if the sentry had found us and possibly mistaken us for Carolist conspirators, but at the moment I was too hungry to think. Having started out at first to find a revolution, I found myself utterly unequipped for the sartorial exigencies of a royal funeral. Balkan funerals in general and royal ceremonials in particular prescribe full dress suit and top hat. I thought woefully of the shining topper which I had bought in Stockholm last November for the wedding of the Belgian crown prince and which was now resting dustily in my closet in Berlin. There was nothing else to do. I had to hire a whole outfit, and in a long-tailed claw, hammer and a topper that shone like a headlight I sallied forth with Max, similarly attired, to cover the funeral. Still, our outfit wasn't so worse. Boldly we drove up to the palace and boldly we walked in. The guards apparently thought we were high diplomats. They saluted. And so we took part in the funeral ceremonies in the palace as the only representatives of the world press.

"Because we had to submit every dispatch to the censor before sending it, I stayed behind and got off the story of the procession in Bucharest, while Perlmann went along with the special funeral trains to Curtea de Arges where the body was laid to rest. Max pulled the beat of his life when, taking his top hat in his hand, and tucking his long coattails in his belt, he vaulted over fences and sprinted over corn fields to reach the head of the procession in Curtea de Arges, dashing into the cathedral before the guards could stop him. He was the only foreign or Rumanian correspondent present at the actual burial ceremonies. A moment after the last member of the royal family had left Max was on the phone giving the the details. Thereby we were enabled to get our story off long before other correspondents who came back to Bucharest by auto could file their stuff.

"Immediately afterwards I had to leave to confer with our client papers in Budapest, Vienna, and Prague regarding extension of our European service. Toward the end of the week I was back in Berlin in time to draw up and sign the contract giving the Hearst newspapers the right to send the first flying correspondent across the Atlantic in the Junkers transatlantic planes.

"And then I got barred from making the flight myself because of ten pounds—weight, not Sterling.

"Can you beat that for luck?"

OCCUPIES NEW PLANT

The Fremont (O.) Daily Messenger recently moved to its new one-story plant at 111 South Arch Street. A new Duplex press and other new equipment has been installed. A 36-page New Home edition was published Aug. 11.

WITH PIANO COMPANY

Lionel Thompkins has been appointed advertising director of the American Piano Company, New York. He was formerly with the Chicago Daily News.

LIBERALISM DEAD IN U. S., SAYS McNITT

Public Doesn't Want to Think, Says Publisher of Recently Suspended McNaught's—Asks Pleasure and Excitement

Only those who have tried publishing serious reviews and magazines can appreciate the difficulties which stand in the way, in the opinion of V. V. McNitt, who announced a few days ago the suspension of McNaught's Monthly. This is his story:

"I began publishing in January, 1924, with the idea that there might be a public for a temperate liberal review, seeking the exact truth and catering to no class prejudices. I cherished the belief that the true American spirit is fine, not gross; that the great majority are not yokels and shallow dollar- and pleasure-seekers but well-meaning and sincere folk of an idealistic turn; that in a land where there is plenty of incomplete and inexact and perhaps biased information even in the so-called intellectual journals, there might be a welcome for a review striving first of all for unprejudiced observation.

"Before the first year had ended it was clear that liberalism was for the time being practically dead, and that there was no call for unexcited analysis. As a people we seemed since the war to have come to hate liberalism (vide the unpopularity of Wilson's ideas of social reform), and to love excitement and exciting treatment of topics at issue. A liberal review was as superfluous as a temperance tract in a bootlegger's hangout. Those who do not know the facts as well as I do may argue that a sturdy voice of leadership would have brought readers in clamoring thousands. Well, maybe, but I think not for a magazine of temperate liberalism. If there is anything the public desires less than liberal reviews today, it is leadership. It wants Coolidge and all the pleasant and comfortable things that Coolidge stands for.

"Although it was clear in 1924 that McNaught's had chosen an unpromising line, I kept on anyway and gave the venture every minute of time and every dollar I could spare. The best efforts of our lives and our keenest enthusiasms are often given to forlorn hopes, and it is an ironic joke that while we are putting in every ounce we can, the onlookers are apt to say: 'Well, if you would only try, you might get somewhere. What you are attempting is ridiculously easy. Just print better stuff and the readers will flock to you.'

"Better stuff! How is an editor to get powerful articles for his review if he doesn't pay for them liberally? And when his review has no advertising revenues and he is paying his own losses instead of passing the hat, how can he be expected to astonish the world in each issue? At that, McNaught's had the devoted co-operation of a number of writers of high ability, and Silas Bent was good enough to tell someone who told me that in three and a half years it never printed a dull article.

"It cost us $5 to obtain one new subscriber for a year at $1.50. The cost of obtaining annual subscribers for the $4 and $5 magazine runs from $8 to $12 each, I am told. About 60% of such subscribers renew at the end of a year (our average renewal rate for all classes of subscribers was 70%, so the actual cost to McNaught's for durable subscribers secured by mail solicitation was $8.33 each. Figure out how long it would take to make the subscription list self-supporting on such a basis, and how much it would cost to build a big list.

"The times are not favorable for serious periodicals. No review published in this country pays its way, and only two or three of the quality magazines are truly profitable. With only deficits before him, how may an editor compete for the work of outstanding writers?

"McNaught's was a lot of fun, anyway, and some day I shall keep an engagement with myself to come back in daily or weekly journalism and put my experience to profitable use."

MANUFACTURERS OF PAVING BRICK LAUNCH CO-OPERATIVE CAMPAIGN

Newspaper Space Being Used to Reach Public—Three-Year Program Adopted—More Papers to Be Added as Plan Progreses, Association Manager States

NEWSPAPER columns are now carrying tested advertising copy on brick for paving roads and streets.

JOHN W. BREYFOGLE

The schedule which started recently is to cover three years' time, at the end of which period it is believed that it will have established itself on such a profitable basis that its continuance will take on the permanence of brick itself, according to John W. Breyfogle, general manager of the National Paving Brick Manufacturers Association. Mr. Breyfogle is also publisher of the Olathe (Kan.) Mirror.

For many years brick has been sold for paving purposes without the impetus of advertising. Its ability to withstand traffic and weather with little or no maintenance work was widely known among city engineers. Municipal and other officials also usually see the economy with little explanation needed, but with the property owner it is different. He is anxious to get as low a first cost pavement as possible, often allowing that point to over-balance the cost of frequent repairs. The story of brick pavements had to go to the general public.

The Potts - Turnbull Advertising Agency Chicago, was chosen and the problem put up to its executives. A newspaper campaign was decided on. The story of brick pavements was then analyzed, boiled down, sifted to the simplest, baldest sequence of facts. Then the copy men set about putting this into advertising.

When the first piece of copy was in type, 50 proofs were pulled and sent to the superintendent of schools in a rural community of about 400 people. Intentionally a school in a town so small that it contained no hard-surfaced roads or streets was chosen.

Into the hands of each sixth, seventh and eighth grade pupil, both boys and girls, went a proof of the brick advertisement. Each was told to read it carefully, three minutes being allowed for that purpose.

The proofs were then collected and the teachers went on with the regular school curriculum.

Thirty minutes later paper was passed out on which the children were told to write, in their own words, their recollections of the ad. After the teachers had used these papers to grade their charges in the combined lesson of memory and English thus given, the papers were sent along to the advertising agency.

One outstanding fact was clear immediately. These country boys and girls, ten, eleven and twelve years old, had gotten the idea—in fact had absorbed and remembered almost every essential point in the semi-technical copy. True, they stumbled over at least one point, and since practically all barked their shins on the same word, the copy was immediately rewritten to make that point clear. The copy had said that vitrified paving brick was waterproof—a primary requisite for a lasting pavement. "Vitrified" to some meant the name of a manufacturer. Others thought it referred to paving brick made especially for streets and not usable on country or residential roadways. The fact intended, that all paving brick are burned till the clay begins to fuse and changes to a non-absorbent mass, did not get over.

Some among the brick makers and agency men still felt that a process so common as vitrifying must be known and understood by practically all adults, even though to children it was unfamiliar. So an inquiry was started among grown-ups. Varied and ingenious were the answers and dexterous was the stalling which resulted. It took very few interviews to confirm the fact that people did not know much about vitrification, or even what the purpose of that process was.

The rewritten copy went much better, and seemed to justify the release of the first advertisements with a predetermined surety that they would be grasped.

This paving brick copy is now appearing in newspapers throughout the territory best covered by the brick plants of the country. It is planned that it will be increased gradually from point to point until ever community becomes familiar with the facts concerning brick paving.

Paving brick is perhaps the newest entry i nthe field of co-operative advertising.

The industry is now embarked on a three-year program reaching out to all the millions who pay for and use our roads. The campaign as planned will penetrate to every taxpayer, through his own local newspaper, in good sized space consistently spread over the year.

COMPARATIVE PRICES BANNED DURING SALE

Muskegon Merchants Adopt Advertising Code for September Event —Superlatives Also Barred

A unique code of ethics has been prepared and will be followed in advertising for a general sales event to be held in Muskegon, Mich., Sept. 20 to 24, under the name "Muskegon's Million Dollar Merchandising Week."

All mention of comparative prices will be eliminated from the advertising of Muskegon merchants who are cooperating in the event, according to the code adopted by the retail department of the Greater Muskegon Chamber of Commerce.

By comparative prices, are meant such terms as "made to sell for," "$50 value," "worth $50," "formerly priced at" or "originally sold for" less than the price listed for the five-day sale, those who framed the code explained. Statements which suggest reductions or fractional savings also are banned along with such unqualified terms as "the greatest sale in America," "lowest prices in the city," "biggest bargains," "unmatched values" and statements such as "never before" and "elsewhere."

It is further provided by this unusual code of advertising ethics that every statement in the special advertising in connection with the sale be so clear as to preclude any doubt or misrepresentation. "For instance," the code states, "if items are seconds, advertise them as seconds, and the same with factory rejects and other inferior grades of merchandise."

If there is a definite and limited number of items offered at a certain price, the number must be stated. Thus, if there are five items in a group at a certain price, this will be stated, rather than advertising that there is a special price on groups including various values.

Wilbur A. Bennetts, advertising manager of the Muskegon Chronicle, was a member of the committee and instrumental in framing this code of extraordinarily clean advertising principles for the special sale.

MOWRER BACK IN U. S.

Paul Scott Mowrer of the foreign staff of the Chicago Daily News is back in the United States with his family and headed for a dude ranch in Wyoming. Mowrer, who is Paris correspondent of the Daily News, is on a two months' vacation.

FIELD SUCCEEDS WHEELER

Named Assistant to Mrs. Meloney on Herald Tribune Sunday Magazine

Richard L. Field has been appointed assistant to Mrs. William Brown Meloney, editor of the New York Herald Tribune Sunday Magazine, to fill the vacancy created by the recent death of Capt. Curtis Wheeler. Capt. Wheeler, an experienced army flier, was killed on July 6, while flying in an old plane at Pine Camp, New York. He had been in training as a member of the New York National Guard and had gone up on an observation flight with Lieutenant Carl Sack. Lieutenant Sack was also killed.

RICHARD L. FIELD

Mr. Field has been a member of the magazine staff since its reorganization under the direction of Mrs. Meloney in the fall of 1926. Prior to that he had been assistant night make-up editor of the Herald Tribune. When Will Bradley was called in to lay out the new magazine, Mr. Field was coached by him, and he has been in charge of make-up ever since.

He is a member of the 1920 class of Johns Hopkins University. After graduation he joined the staff of the Baltimore Sun, where he worked as reporter, copy reader and night city editor for four years. From the Sun he went to the Baltimore American as swing man, and left the American for six months to work in New Orleans on the Item and on the Tribune. He returned to the Baltimore American for a time, and in April, 1926, joined the Herald Tribune.

Richard S. Dodson has joined the staff of the magazine, and will aid Mr. Field with make-up and editing.

SUGGESTS CRIME REMEDY

Press Should Paint Criminals in True Colors, Says Speaker

"If the press would paint the criminal in his true colors, it would do more for the suppression of crime than all the court reforms ever attempted," Judge Archie Dabney, of Charlottesville, Va., declared in addressing the recent conference on press relations at the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs, at Charlottesville.

"Let the court reporter show the criminal as he is, not a hero or a martyr, but a degenerate, a diseased creature, if not abnormal at least subnormal, and a weakling without manly vigor to resist temptation to do wrong," he said. "The reporter should appeal to the sporting instinct of the public by showing that the criminal is one who has taken unfair advantage of his victim."

Victor Rosewater, former editor of the Omaha (Neb.) Bee, who led the conference discussion, told of the growth of newspapers in the United States.

Jacksonville, Florida—
135,000 Population; 35,000 Families

22,111 Families
(Each a Times-Union Subscriber) represent an untouched
RADIO MARKET

OF the Times-Union's city family of 27,941, only 5,830 own radios, thus there is a potential market in Jacksonville alone for 22,111 radio sets.

In comparison, it is noticed that 13,568 of these families have talking machines—8,832 have pianos—13,129 have telephones—18,837 use electricity—11,201 own their homes.

Applying the same ratio to the total daily circulation of 50,640, the potential market for radios among Times-Union readers is shown as 36,431 sets.

The City of Jacksonville broadcasts a daily program over WJAX, its municipal station; WJAX is hooked up with the National Broadcasting Company's Blue Network. There are 20 retail and 5 wholesale radio outlets in Jacksonville.

Further details of radio markets and any market data you wish will be provided on request.

The Florida Times-Union
JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

Radio Page Daily
12 cents a line (50,640 circulation)

Radio Section Sunday
15 cents a line (63,430)

The IOWA NEWS

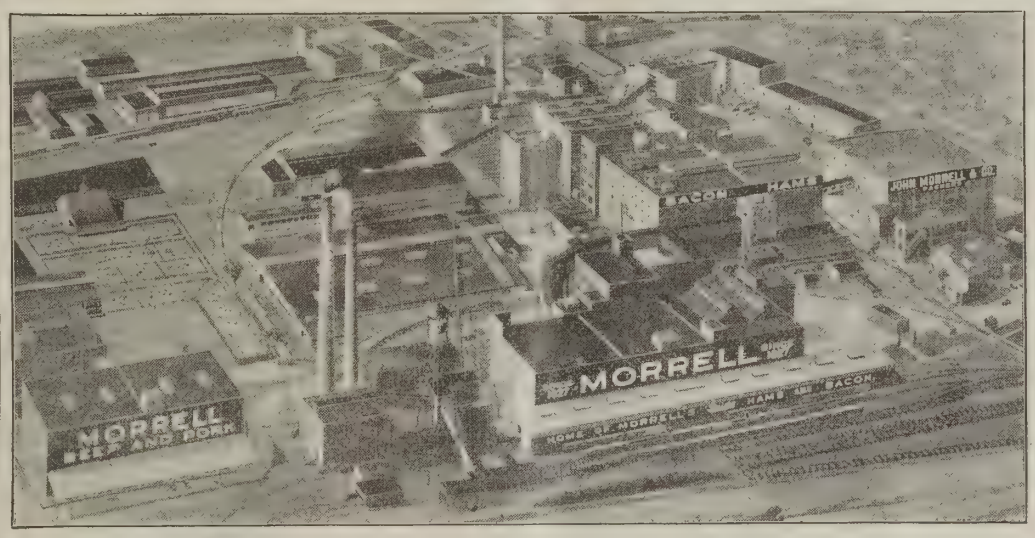
Vol. 1, No. 5 August 20, 1927 Price, Two Minutes

MEAT PACKING INDUSTRY GROWS

Iowa Leads in Urban Electrification

99.7% CITY HOMES CAN HAVE CURRENT

Power Valuable in Promoting Industrial Progress



With electricity available to 99.7 per cent of its urban population, Iowa leads the nation in the electrification of its towns and cities, according to a statement recently issued by Joe Carmichael, director of the Iowa committee on Public Utility Information.

Of Iowa's 922 cities and towns, 882 have electric energy and none of the forty towns still to be electrified has a population of more than 300.

The importance of electric power to Iowa industry is indicated by the extent to which it is already being used for industrial purposes. A survey on January 1, 1927, shows that 82.3 per cent of the industry of the state is electrified. The national average is 66 per cent.

In the past fifteen years the electric energy generated in Iowa has increased 346 per cent—from 96,210 kilowatts in 1912 to 430,461 kilowatts in 1926. Practically all of the generating capacity added since 1922 has been in electric light and power stations for home and industrial use.

ONE OF IOWA'S 23 PACKING PLANTS

The plant of John Morrell & Co., at Ottumwa, recognized as one of the largest independent packing plants in the United States.

Net Profit On Hogs Increases

Ames, August 20. Cost accounts kept by twenty-one farmers in Iowa county in 1925 and 1926 show that hogs were more profitable in 1926 than in the preceding year and that it cost about a dollar a hundred less to produce a hundred pounds of pork in 1926 than it did in 1925.

Average profit for the group was $843 in 1926 as compared with an average profit of $752 during 1925.

ADVERTISERS who understand the Iowa situation know from experience that the consumers' market there cannot be properly sold without the use of newspapers in these twenty-one key cities.

IOWA DAILY PRESS ASSOCIATION
DAVENPORT, IOWA

Ames Tribune
Boone News-Republican
Burlington Gazette
Burlington Hawk-Eye
Cedar Rapids Gazette & Republican
Centerville Iowegian & Citizen
Council Bluffs Nonpareil
Davenport Democrat & Leader
Davenport Times
Dubuque Telegraph-Herald and Times Journal
Fort Dodge Messenger & Chronicle
Fort Madison Democrat
Iowa City Press Citizen
Keokuk Gate City
Marshalltown Times-Republican
Mason City Globe-Gazette & Tribune
Muscatine Journal & News-Tribune
Oelwein Register
Oskaloosa Herald
Ottumwa Courier
Sioux City Journal
Sioux City Tribune
Washington Journal
Waterloo Evening Courier
Waterloo Tribune

GRAIN AND PASTURES SHOW IMPROVEMENT

Government Report Indicates Better Crop Outlook

Iowa crops made favorable progress during July, according to the government monthly crop report. Indications are that the Iowa corn yield will reach 359,839,000 bushels this year. This estimate, although below the 1926 total production of 413,000,000 bushels, is well in advance of estimates made earlier this year when plowing and planting were delayed by the weather. Then, too, the 1926 crop was raised on an acreage 224,000 acres larger than the present season's acreage.

The oat crop, 82 per cent normal, is 9 per cent more productive compared with the 196,187,000 bushels produced last year.

Both winter and spring wheat will likely yield normal this year with the former crop 10.3 per cent ahead of last year's crop and the latter 15.4 per cent in advance of the 1926 production. The estimated winter wheat crop this year is 8,160,000 bushels and spring wheat 645,000 bushels. The winter wheat crop of 1926 was 7,310,000 bushels and spring wheat for the same year was 554,000 bushels.

In spite of the fact that the pastures suffered from drought in July, their condition is the highest that it has been in three years. A good alfalfa crop is expected, as the condition of this crop on August 1 was the best it has been on this same date since 1924. Barley is nearly three points above the ten-year average condition.

IOWA PLANTS KILL 35% OF IOWA HOGS

Twenty-three Packers Help to Handle Pork and Beef Crop

FORESEE DEVELOPMENT

Heads of Industry Note Trend to Locate Plants in Iowa

Definite trend of American business to shorten the distances over which raw materials must be moved, is reflected in the growth of the packing industry in Iowa.

Although the annual production of Iowa packing plants is still far below the production of livestock on Iowa farms, it has been steadily gaining for the past five years, and is now around $200,000,000 a year.

Iowa today has ten government inspected plants, and thirteen smaller plants, bringing the total to twenty-three. Two plants have been added since 1921.

The improvement of road conditions, and the increase in shipments of hogs and livestock by truck, have been a distinct advantage to the packing industry in Iowa. Last year, of the 10,701,856 hogs marketed by Iowa farmers, Iowa packers used 3,593,850, or slightly more than 35 per cent, and it is predicted that this percentage will increase from year to year.

The importance of Iowa in meat packing is sometimes overlooked, because plants are not confined to one or two centers, as is largely the case in Nebraska, Missouri or Illinois. Iowa's ten government inspected plants are located in eight different cities, as follows:

Sinclair & Company, Cedar Rapids.

Morrell & Company, Ottumwa.

Rath & Company, Waterloo.

J. Decker & Sons, Mason City.

Iowa Packing Company, Des Moines.

Dubuque Packing Company, Dubuque.

Kohrs Packing Company, Davenport.

Swift & Company, Sioux City.

Armour & Company, Sioux City.

Cudahy Packing Company, Sioux City.

Smaller plants are located at Davenport, Dubuque, Fort Dodge and Muscatine.

SOVIET CENSORSHIP BECOMING MORE REASONABLE SAYS BROOKLYN WRITER

Copy Carefully Scanned But Little Deleted He Reports—Films Seized With Promise of Their Return—Censors Courteous But Firm

By E. K. TITUS
Editorial Staff, Brooklyn Eagle

WHILE travelling across Siberia this summer on a news pilgrimage for the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, I tried to get some photographs. Soviet newspaper men in Peking had assured me that "Anything could be taken except bridges." So I went boldly ahead.

At a little station near Lake Baikal, I snapped a Russian soldier. He told the station master, and at the next station, Irkutsk, a polite interpreter approached with the words: "You will have to give up your films."

The Bolshevik soldier entered my compartment, and there was nothing to do but come across.

"We will develop them and see if there is anything harmful," he said. "If they are safe, we shall send them on to you in Brooklyn." I am still confidently waiting to receive them.

The Soviet censorship on news is, like many things in Russia, quite illogical. Unfavorable news about the country keeps slipping out through Riga, Berlin and Harbin. People do not believe favorable news, because they think it has been garbled by the censor. If the truth were known, conditions in Soviet Russia are not half as bad as Americans believe them to be. By abolishing its censorship system altogether, the Soviet government would therefore lose nothing, and would gain much in the confidence of the world.

Joel Shubin, who once lived in Brooklyn, near Brooklyn Bridge, and "read The Eagle every day," had charge of going over all news material while I was there.

"You can go anywhere, do anything you like," he told me.

This was true. I was not interfered with at all, except for the one camera incident. But I had the greatest difficulty finding an interpreter, and finally gave it up, having been told that these chaps were often afraid to work for a newspaper man thinking they might be held responsible for his writings. Regular Moscow correspondents of course, all have interpreters, but they must do some searching to find them.

Anna Borisova Goldfarb, Mr. Shubin's assistant, was handling the actual work of censoring news cables. She is a robust girl of 28 years, with fair hair and a smooth pair of shoulders. She smiles delightfully but firmly.

"Oh no, I could not possibly let that pass by," she said, deleting a two paragraph cable with a blue pencil. She had not been on the job long, and inclined to be over-conscientious in her work.

When I left the country at Vigossovo, every last bit of paper in my suitcase was scanned. The customs officials broke open sealed envelopes containing calling cards, carefully regarded the pages of a German grammar, searched through a sheaf of blank copy paper. They were eminently dignified and courteous, of course, did not search my person, and took nothing away from me.

The censorship, one must admit, is becoming more and more reasonable every year. A chap who went in there right after the revolution told me every bit of printed matter was removed from his bags. They even took a pack of playing cards away, he said, thinking perhaps that the king of hearts might be a Russian general and the ace of spades a diagram of the Kremlin!

Every sheet of mail copy I sent from Moscow reached its destination.

Russians read everything they can lay their hands on. Even small stations in Siberia had their news stands with brilliantly colored periodicals, covering everything from politics and finance to love and humor. The poor travelers in Russian "hard," or third class, carried regular libraries and read from morning to night. American magazines are not admitted except when brought by travelers. The Russians scanned with avidity brilliantly colored motorcar advertisements in the few magazines I brought in. They admired America and wanted to learn.

The wall newspapers are in great vogue. They are generally mimeographed or typewritten sheets pasted on the walls of railroad stations or other public buildings. Local cartoonists embellish them with grotesque representations of the much despised Sir Austen Chamberlain wearing his monocle, or of greedy capital represented as a fat man with big fierce teeth showing.

FOSTER SUCCEEDS BROWN

M. Stratton Foster, owner and publisher of the Clarksville (Tenn.) Leaf-Chronicle has been named advertising manager of the Nashville Tennesseean, succeeding Capt. Enoch Brown Jr., who is now vice-president in charge of advertising on the Memphis Commercial-Appeal and Evening Appeal. Mr. Foster is the son of the late Edgar M. Foster, business manager of the Nashville Banner for 35 years. Frank Goodlett of Clarksville becomes manager of the Leaf-Chronicle while Mr. Foster retains his ownership and supervision.

NAMES CONFUSED

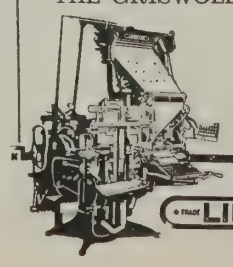
A similarity of names has resulted in Harry W. Doremus of the Rudolph Guenther-Russell Law, Inc., advertising agency receiving condolences on the death of his wife. He wishes to advise that his wife, Mrs. Ella E. Doremus, is in her usual good health.

RICHARD S. WOOD DIES

Richard S. Wood, 56, formerly advertising manager of the old New York Globe, died at his home in White Plains, Aug. 13. At his death he was president of the Stephenson Distributing Corporation, New York.

PICKS BEAUTY WINNER

The Elizabeth (N. J.) Times recently picked a Miss Elizabeth for entry in the Atlantic City Beauty Contest. The Times determined to send a girl from that city after it disclosed that last year's Miss Elizabeth was a Newark girl. John W. B. Mitchell, managing editor of the Times, had charge of the local contest.



A fall campaign in newspapers to promote the products of the Pennsylvania Rubber Company, Jeanette, Pa., is promised by the J. Walter Thompson Company, appointed to direct the account.

From the Linotype Mailbag

"Delighted with It"

"The new Ionic arrived and we have it working every day. Delighted with it, as it gives The American a much neater appearance. Have had several people come and tell us they are delighted with the change."

THE GRISWOLD AMERICAN
Griswold, Ia.

LINOTYPE

DEEMS TAYLOR AN EDITOR

Deems Taylor, former music critic for the New York World, and composer of "The King's Henchmen," given at the Metropolitan Opera last season, has accepted the post of editor-in-chief of the weekly illustrated magazine, Musical America. He will take up his new duties immediately, and will publish his "Declaration of Intentions" in the next issue.

BIG SUM PAID LLOYD GEORGE FOR DAILIES

British Statesman Paid Nearly Three Million Pounds for London Chronicle and Allied Papers

By Allan Delafons
(London Correspondent, Editor & Publisher)

London, Aug. 9.—Eight hundred thousand 7 per cent first preference shares are offered for sale in London by the Daily Chronicle Investment Corporation, Ltd., as part of the purchase price of the London Daily Chronicle and its allied newspaper undertakings. The prospectus states that Mr. Lloyd George the famous statesman, has sold his 616,504 ordinary shares of £1 each, in Allied Newspapers (1918), Ltd., to the Corporation for £2,900,000 of which £1,750,000 was to be paid in cash and £1,150,000 to be settled by the allotment to him of ordinary shares in the new company to that value.

The agreement between Mr. Lloyd George and the purchasing company is that the papers owned by United Newspapers (1918), Ltd., (which include the Daily Chronicle, the Sunday News, the Edinburgh Evening News, the Yorkshire Evening News, and the Doncaster Gazette), shall continue to be published in the interests of the Liberal Party, and that for a period of ten years, the directors of the new company shall be the directors of the old.

The capital required by the new undertaking is £3,050,000. The directors are the Marquess of Reading, (chairman of United Newspapers (1918) Ltd.,) Sir David Yule and Sir Thomas Cotto (also directors of the former company), Sir Charles C. Barrie, and Major-General Sir Robert Hutchison.

EDITOR PRODUCES MOVIE

Adam Breede, editor and publisher of the Hastings (Neb.) Tribune, has just finished production of a motion picture entitled "The Live Dud." He wrote the scenario around Hastings characters, used Hastings talent entirely in the cast, and directed and produced the picture-play himself. "The Live Dud" is being shown in Hastings now, and Mr. Breede reports having received bids for it from distributors and exhibitors elsewhere.

PHOTO DEPT. REORGANIZED

Reorganization of the photographic department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph now under Hearst management has been completed by Charles Tebbs, of the New York Journal. New camera have been obtained and new equipment for the dark room and studio. Everet Glasgow remains in charge.

New England's Second Largest Market.

An Optional Combination Rate

The Providence Journal

and

The Evening Bulletin

are published by the same company in the same building. This is sane business and an economical saving. Advertisers benefit by this economy.

The circulation of these newspapers is sold separately and not in a forced combination, so there is comparatively little duplication between them.

For illustration, the combined daily net paid circulation of these papers for June, 1927, was 112,884, while the net paid circulation of the July 4th issue of The Providence Journal (The Evening Bulletin was not published on this date) was in excess of 102,000.

Display advertising in these newspapers is sold separately but local and national advertisers are given an opportunity to buy the combined circulation at a decided saving—a matter of economy.

The Providence Journal-Bulletin optional combination rate represents the best advertising buy in the concentrated Rhode Island market and enables advertisers to reach a very great majority of English speaking homes in this state at a minimum cost.

Providence Journal Company
Providence, R. I.

Representatives

CHAS. H. EDDY COMPANY
Boston New York Chicago

R. J. BIDWELL COMPANY
Los Angeles San Francisco Seattle

GOOD WORK
GOES INTO IT

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

GOOD WORK
COMES OUT
OF IT

"They allow me three thousandths variation . . . but I make them RIGHT"

This particular adjustment does not call for extreme accuracy as accuracy goes in the Linotype factory. Three thousandths of an inch—the thickness of a sheet of No. 16 bond—is close enough for all practical purposes, but this man scorns any such tolerance. He likes to see his micrometer barrel come to a stop precisely on the mark. That spirit, carried through every Linotype operation, has had much to do with building up the Linotype's reputation for long life and trouble-free operation.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY
BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED
NEW ORLEANS TORONTO, CAN.

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

S. J. Sennett
Machinist in Charge
Chicago Daily Tribune

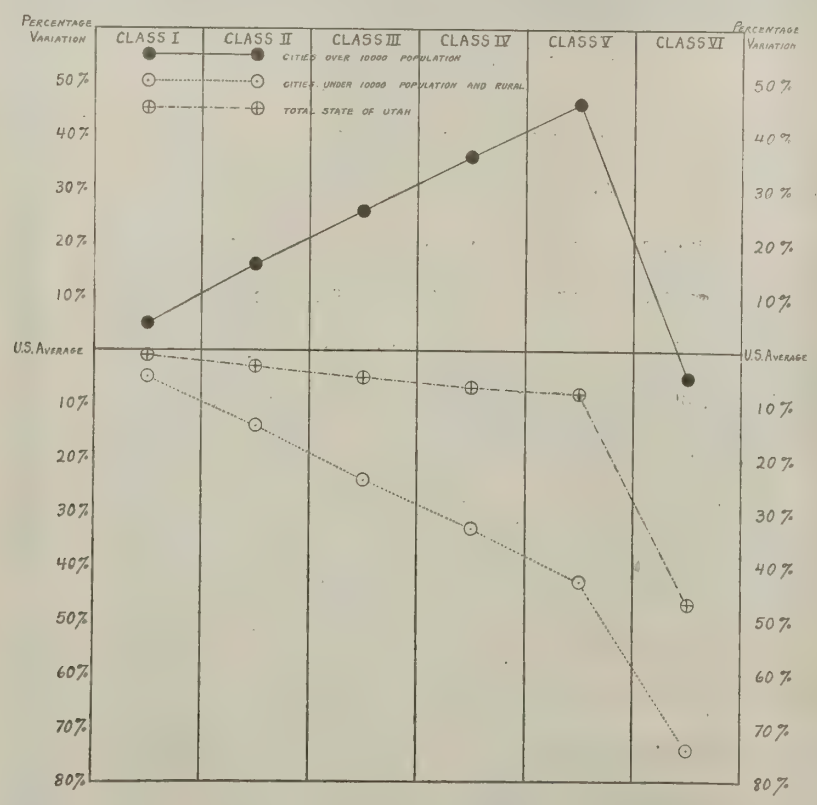
. . . . "Along in the middle of May of this year the Chicago Daily Tribune ordered two Model 8 Linotypes to add to its battery, which now numbers sixty-one Linotypes. These two Linotypes were placed on the floor on the morning of May 30 and erected without trial as time was limited. The machines ran successfully that night and at all other times since then without any adjustments being made. I think this is a remarkable achievement of manufacture and shows the skillful work of the Brooklyn factory."

LINOTYPED IN GARAMOND AND GARAMOND BOLD

KEY TO CONSUMER BUYING ABILITY

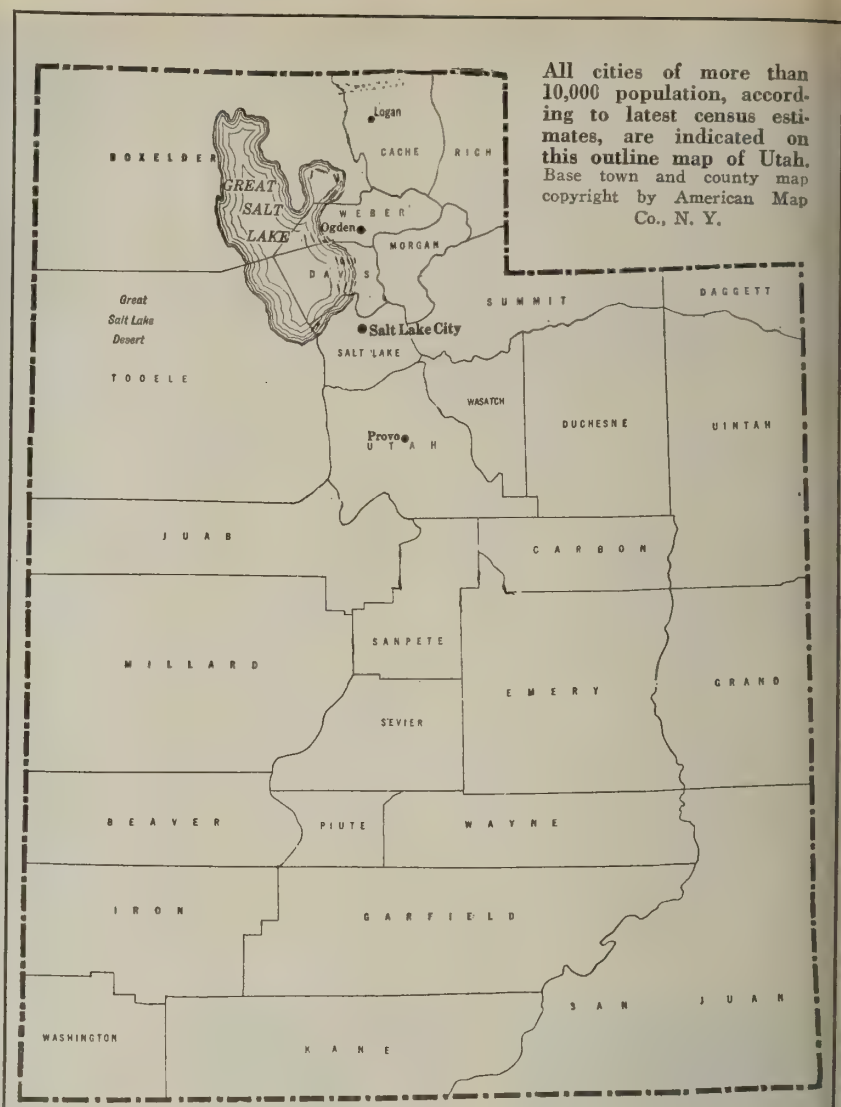
Statistical Rating of Utah Counties and Cities for Products of General Appeal, in Six Major Classes of Quality and Cost—An Original Simplified and Tested Formula from Basic Data

By NELSON H. SEUBERT



Copyright 1927 by Editor & Publisher Company. All rights are reserved and reproduction of these results in whole or in part, without written permission of Editor & Publisher Co., will constitute infringement.

BUYING POWER ANALYZED BY PRODUCT CLASSES FOR UTAH



Note: Figures below represent percentages of U. S. total carried out to four places: To use, mark off four places and insert decimal point.

Counties in bold face capitals—Cities in capitals and lower case

	CL No. 1	CL No. 2	CL No. 3	CL No. 4	CL No. 5	CL No. 6
UTAH	4291	4210	4129	4048	3967	2276
BEAVER	45	42	39	35	32	5
BOX ELDER	177	150	123	96	69	19
CACHE	240	206	172	137	103	44
Logan	89	82	76	69	62	20
CARBON	188	225	261	297	334	39
DAGGETT	4	3	2	1	1	0
DAVIS	101	88	75	62	49	42
DUCHESNE	87	70	53	35	18	10
EMERY	63	54	44	34	25	7
GARFIELD	43	34	25	16	7	5
GRAND	17	16	16	15	14	2
IRON	56	47	38	29	20	6
JUAB	81	74	67	60	53	40
KANE	18	15	12	8	5	2
MILLARD	95	80	64	48	33	10
MORGAN	22	19	16	13	10	6
PIUTE	27	22	16	10	5	7
RICH	16	13	10	7	4	5
SALT LAKE	1614	1763	1912	2060	2209	1569
Salt Lake City	1225	1371	1517	1663	1809	1280
SAN JUAN	32	25	19	12	5	7
SAN PETE	146	121	97	73	48	30
SEVIER	99	82	65	48	31	11
SUMMIT	67	66	66	66	65	14
TOOELE	70	70	70	69	69	11
UINTAH	77	64	52	39	26	16
UTAH	350	305	260	215	170	90
Provo	96	92	88	83	79	38
WASATCH	46	39	32	25	18	12
WASHINGTON	62	49	37	24	11	7
WAYNE	18	15	11	7	4	2
WEBER	435	460	484	508	533	261
Ogden	342	379	416	452	489	237

This chart shows the relative variation for the State of Utah above or below the United States average for cities of 10,000 or more population, cities of less than 10,000 and rural population and the entire State.

All cities of more than 10,000 population, according to latest census estimates, are indicated on this outline map of Utah. Base town and county map copyright by American Map Co., N. Y.

In Oklahoma City...

98% of the people read the Daily Oklahoman, Oklahoma City Times . . . or both!

In the Oklahoma City Market...

outside of Oklahoma City, 41% of the people read one or both of these two biggest newspapers in the state!

. . . and remember, the Daily Oklahoman and Oklahoma City Times serve a trading area of 724,628 able and ready-to-buy people!

Circulation Daily, 151,135; Sunday, 91,724

The DAILY OKLAHOMAN
OKLAHOMA CITY TIMES

Represented by E. KATZ SPECIAL ADVERTISING AGENCY, New York, Chicago, Detroit, Kansas City, Atlanta, and San Francisco

Can You Believe Your Eyes?

Read each of the columns below. Have you ever seen a news face that was as easy on the eyes? Let your eyes be the Judge. . . . Even set solid, this Intertype IDEAL news face has sufficient white space around each letter and between lines so that you can read without extra effort. There is a size of Ideal News for every purpose. . . . Write for larger specimens.

5½ Pt. Intertype Ideal News
THE INTERTYPE consists of a single basic unit with equipment which m

6½ Pt. Intertype Ideal News
THE INTERTYPE consists of a single basic unit with equipme

7 Pt. Intertype Ideal News
THE INTERTYPE consists of a single basic unit with equip

8 Pt. Intertype Ideal News
THE INTERTYPE consists of a single basic unit with equi

8 Point Solid

It has been said that "all reading demands an effort." To produce a type for newspaper use which can be read almost without effort is a problem which has engaged the attention of Intertype designers for several years.

The solution of this problem resulted in the production of the Intertype News Series. This new series is meeting the unqualified approval of all those who believe that types should be made for the needs of the newspaper reader.

The qualities which make the Intertype News Series easy to read are not free from the usual mannerisms of the standard newspaper type faces. The Intertype News Series conforms to the familiar and friendly design to which the majority of newspaper readers are accustomed, and yet gives a clearness to print which is not to be had by the use of ordinary light-face type.

It's Like an Old Friend

Intertype established the fact that easy-to-read type is familiar type. Unfamiliar type quickly tires the eyes. Intertype then set about to improve familiar type. The changes from old standards were, in most instances, not of great importance, but most of them were in directions that have heretofore been avoided by type-makers.

The hairlines of Intertype News

8 Point, One Point Leaded

It has been said that "all reading demands an effort." To produce a type for newspaper use which can be read almost without effort is a problem which has engaged the attention of Intertype designers for several years.

The solution of this problem resulted in the production of the Intertype News Series. This new series is meeting the unqualified approval of all those who believe that types should be made for the needs of the newspaper reader.

The qualities which make the Intertype News Series easy to read are not free from the usual mannerisms of the standard newspaper type faces. The Intertype News Series conforms to the familiar and friendly design to which the majority of newspaper readers are accustomed, and yet gives a clearness to print which is not to be had by the use of ordinary light-face type.

It's Like an Old Friend

Intertype established the fact that easy-to-read type is familiar type. Unfamiliar type quickly tires the eyes. Intertype then set about to improve familiar type. The changes from old standards were, in most instances, not of great importance, but

8 Point, Two Point Leaded

It has been said that "all reading demands an effort." To produce a type for newspaper use which can be read almost without effort is a problem which has engaged the attention of Intertype designers for several years.

The solution of this problem resulted in the production of the Intertype News Series. This new series is meeting the unqualified approval of all those who believe that types should be made for the needs of the newspaper reader.

The qualities which make the Intertype News Series easy to read are not free from the usual mannerisms of the standard newspaper type faces. The Intertype News Series conforms to the familiar and friendly design to which the majority of newspaper readers are accustomed, and yet gives a clearness to print which is not to be had by the use of ordinary light-face type.

It's Like an Old Friend

Intertype established the fact that easy-to-read type is familiar type. Unfamiliar type quickly tires the eyes. Intertype then set about to im-

Intertype matrices will run in other slug-casting machines

Write nearest branch for larger specimens

Standardized INTERTYPE TRADE MARK

Designed in 5½, 6½, 7 and 8 Point

INTERTYPE CORPORATION: New York 1440 Broadway; Chicago 130 N. Franklin St.; Memphis McCall Bldg.; San Francisco 560 Howard St.; Los Angeles 1240 S. Main St.; Boston 80 Federal St.; London; Berlin

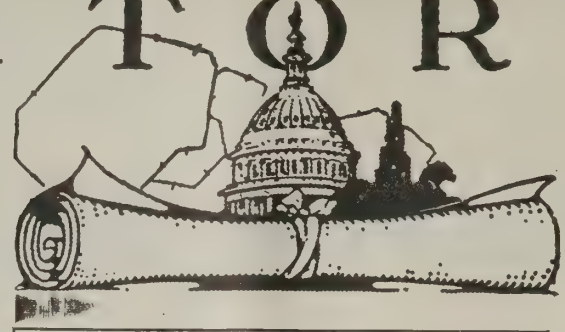
EDITORIAL

COMBINATIONS

NATIONAL advertisers have for 30 years purchased magazine space, buying in bulk, a million, or a million and a half, or maybe two millions and a half of circulation which went to some places where their goods might be bought and to many where their goods could not be given away. They have paid fancy prices for color and premiums for position and meekly said "Yessir" when the magazine publisher declared that his space could not be used unless a given number of pages was contracted for. These arbitrary conditions prevail in magazine advertising and we have yet to hear a cogent protest against them from national advertisers, either as individuals or as members of their Association.

Certainly no such complaint was ever raised against these conditions, some of them palpably uneconomic, as has lately been launched against the growing tendency among daily newspapers in a city to sell their space on an all-day unit basis, charging one rate for space in both morning and evening editions. The Association of National Advertisers has for several months attacked the idea as discriminating against the national advertiser, forcing him to buy circulation which he does not need and cannot use, and thereby increasing the cost of the nation's distribution.



It would be vain to assert that this development in the newspaper industry is 100 per cent sound, or that it is being universally developed along lines which will best serve both the publisher and the public. No one yet knows. The idea is not new, in that a few newspapers have followed it for more than 40 years, but its present development is a thing of the last five years and for many of its exponents, it is still experimental.

There is no question, however, that the compulsion which irks national advertisers arises largely from their own prejudices and the all-day idea, whether or not it belongs among the eternal verities, may yet have the good result of informing buyers of space that all newspaper circulation, if properly used, can produce inquiries that lead to sales. The generalities that women read only afternoon papers, or that morning papers are the only media for financial advertising are probably as accurate as most sweeping rules of their kind; they may have been true 20 years ago, but the buying and reading habits of Americans today cannot be measured by the old standards.

These prejudices still live and they are far more unreasonable and arbitrary than the antidotes provided by the newspapers. The combination newspaper affords the advertiser an opportunity to reach readers to whose existence he is blind, and at a rate which is usually a bargain better than any offered in the advertiser's copy. In well-developed newspaper combinations, the circulation-distribution of the several editions is controlled to keep duplication at a minimum and to provide intensive and extensive coverage throughout the newspapers' territory.

Local advertisers are not under the compulsory restriction in more than half of the combinations now operating in the United States, principally for the reason that many retail firms do not draw their business from all parts of the circulation territory. The retailer as a rule has one shop in the centre of publication; the national advertiser's wares may be bought at half a dozen places in the big city and in shops in each of the smaller towns to which the newspaper circulation reaches. In situations where the trading territory is geographically "tight," the general rule is that both national and local advertisers buy space on the combination basis. There exist exceptions to this, of course, but we believe that the developments of the next ten years will follow the principle laid down in this paragraph and that advertisers will come to accept it as economic and beneficial.

Meanwhile, we think of the man who strained at the gnat and swallowed the camel, and we get a wee titter at the advertisers who buy without a murmur magazine bulk under hide-bound regulations, but split the well known welkin with their organized wailing when newspaper publishers set foot on a new path to economic solidity.

Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill.—St. Matthew, V; 17.

AT GENEVA

SCENERY and signposts are changing along the roads by which news travels from its sources in every corner of the world to the retina of the newspaper reader in almost every other corner. The old roads, like American city streets, are developing a traffic problem. Only a few regions of the globe are still remote to the extent that New York was remote from Moscow a hundred years ago and the most geographically distant world capitals are nearer each other today than New York and Philadelphia were in 1827. We don't yet stride across oceans as a boy leaps a brook, but the hour when we will do so approaches at a pace unparalleled in the development of international communications.

Every month sees an increase in the mileage of wire devoted to the transmission of news to the newspapers of the Americas and the daily file to these journals of news originating in foreign capitals approaches in volume the total press association report received by many of the greatest newspapers a few years ago. Two poor Italians are convicted in Boston of a crime under circumstances which to many indicate a doubt of their guilt, and the tale of their fight for justice is news for seven years in every place where the printed word can be read. The war debts of France to America, Germany to France, Montenegro to Britain can provoke a discussion among commuters whose normal conversation is of bridge hands and cactus dahlias.

We are getting to know each other better around the world; possibly we are on the path to prove with Charles Lamb that we can't hate one whom we know. The answer to that is largely in the hands of the men who meet next week at Geneva in the second conference of press association directors under the auspices of the League of Nations. Through their fingers flows the daily stream of the world's news, to be transmitted as an impartial, yet interesting, record of events, or to be colored and polluted for the advantage of hidden national or commercial interests.

The past has seen both ideas in operation. The present is not without evidence that truth can still be perverted in the reporting of international affairs even in our own land. It is defensible neither on either nor practical grounds, and the first conference meeting last year under the leadership of Roy W. Howard, chairman of the board of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers, recorded itself in favor of giving absolute equality to all news services in the distribution of official government news. The agency with an official government connection or subsidy dating back to a period when such arrangements were accepted, has under that resolution no advantage over the agency whose principal interest is not the government service but the service of its newspaper clients and their readers. That is a sound basis of operations and the 1927 conference will be ill-advised to disturb it.

Establishment of property right in news is apparently one of the principal items on the present agenda, but it seems a vain dream to expect enactment of such legislation in the principal countries. In this country, where it is recognized, it rests not upon any specific enactment, but upon an interpretation of the general statutes by the United States Supreme Court. It may come eventually in other countries, but more pressing and practical phases of world communications need earlier attention.

If the conference can obtain abolition of peace-time censorship, can accelerate the transmission and lower the cost of cable and radio press messages, it will have earned the thanks of all concerned with news as an article of commerce and as a daily record of human life.

LITTLE JOURNEYS BY WIRE

ONCE upon a time, and that not a hundred years ago, newspaper editors and news service executives in this country thought of their transmission problems in terms of the distances between New York or Chicago and the point of publication. Europe was a fairly regular contributor to the day's budget; South American dates appeared occasionally; Asia, Africa, and Australia once in a while slipped into the news to remind us that they still held a major portion of the earth's dry surface.

The war changed all of that, but nine years ago there were many audible hopes that with Armageddon a thing of the past, the United States could go back to its old ways and habits of thought, especially in affairs journalistic. The hope has been vain. The old normalcy in newspapers is gone forever.

Consider the past eight months. China held the front pages with long cables at 27 cents a word, and often a much higher rate, for weeks on end and the tale of its succession of revolutions is still not told. A New York murder moved to the centre of the scene for a brief moment, driving China's warring legions to the side, but its reign was short-lived. Since May the eyes of America have been turned to the sky and scientists are beginning to wonder whether the neck of the coming generation will be built on a ball-and-socket joint.

Lindbergh's leap to the stars stirred this country as no other event has since 1918. News service correspondents and specials filed an unprecedented volume of copy from European points and "Lindy" is by no means yet a tired newspaper subject. Chamberlin and Levine, Byrd and his companions, have received almost equal press attention over the cables and the radio and a new element has been introduced into European expense accounts under the heading of airplane taxis for reporters at a rate which averages about a dollar a minute.

Now eyes are turned again across the Pacific for the second time within 60 days and trans-Pacific cable and radio tolls are again to the fore in news service offices. Then, the national air races will be held this year at Spokane and another heavyweight battle of the century is scheduled for Chicago. Verily, New York is no longer the centre of the American news universe.

There are merchants who make lavish expenditures of time and money to dress their windows beautifully for a few to see, meanwhile permitting typographical monstrosities to run in newspaper space for everyone to see.

NEW SCHRECKLICHKEIT

COMES Dr. Ivy Lee with a new explanation, or rather a new twist on an old explanation of how the great war was won. Germany lost, he says, not because the Allies were superior in the field of battle, "but because public support of the war and public confidence of the Hohenzollern Government crumbled in the homes behind the lines." Germany had everything but a public relations counsel. Ingenious and Ingenuous Ivy! The nation which hires you or one of your imitators when the next instalment of Armageddon is staged is assured of a stable public opinion and unshatterable confidence in government. The eagles of victory, grasping in their talons a scroll of press clippings, will find on its banners a permanent roost.

Mr. Pulitzer's "witch's Sabbatical" is a felicitous departure from the tired "A.W.O.L."

THOUGHT FOR TOMORROW

NEW and stimulating is the idea advanced by Victor F. Ridder that a newspaper is soundly prosperous when its net profit approximates its net circulation revenue. It is a rule of thumb which can be proven either true or false by equally plausible examples, but it is nevertheless a sensible compass direction for the operations of the future. If advertising revenue does not maintain its cumulative annual increases, the circulation department will be called upon for efforts which will produce more money as well as more readers. That will be healthy in more ways than one.

PERSONAL

JULIAN S. MASON, editor of the New York Evening Post, with Mrs. Mason and children, Barbara and Gray, were entertained last week by Cyrus H. K. Curtis, owner of the paper, at his summer home in Camden, Me.

Clark Howell, editor and publisher of the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution, and W. H. Cowles, publisher of the Spokane Spokesman-Review, and their wives, recently were guests of S. A. Perkins of Tacoma, publisher of the Olympia (Wash.) Evening Recorder and Morning Olympian, on a cruise of several days around the waters of Puget Sound on board his yacht, El Primero.

Mr. and Mrs. Richmond Temple of London, England, arrived in the United States recently on their way to California where they will spend several weeks. Mrs. Temple is a daughter of Milton A. McRae of the former Scripps-McRae newspapers.

Capt. Roland F. Andrews, editor of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram-Gazette, is passing his vacation at Nantucket, Mass.

Curtis B. Johnson, publisher of the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer, left recently for New York, to sail for Europe for a short vacation.

Hugh Bancroft, publisher of the Boston (Mass.) News Bureau, and Mrs. Bancroft and their two daughters, Jane and Jessie, returned recently to Boston on the Laconia following a six weeks' tour of England, France and Switzerland.

L. A. Wortham, editor of the Corsicana (Tex.) Daily Sun, has been in a Corsicana hospital as the result of severe injuries received recently when he was pinned beneath his overturned automobile. He is recovering.

Omar D. Gray, owner and publisher of the Sturgeon (Mo.) Leader, is spending several weeks in California.

D. W. Stevick, publisher of the Texarkana (Ark.) Gazette, who recently underwent a serious operation, is recovering.

Ralph Snyder, Gary (Ind.) Post-Tribune, publisher, has purchased the Gary Motor Truck Company for $45,000.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

C. J. TURNER, head of the national advertising bureau of the Spokesman-Review and the Spokane Chronicle, has been named chairman of the newspaper bureau of the Spokane Ad Club. Gus Roche, F. W. Martin, Glen Allen of the Chronicle; E. Z. Smith of the Spokane Valley Herald, E. E. Everett of the Spokane Press, J. J. Tierney of the Spokesman-Review, are also members of the committee.

Thomas Meegan, for several years in the business office of the Worcester (Mass.) Evening Post, has resigned to become assistant to the general manager of the Union City (N. J.) Hudson Dispatch.

H. P. Kelly has discontinued publication of the Advance at South Solon, O., and will devote all of his time to the Clarkesburg Star, which he started some months ago.

Raymond E. Ward, a member of the advertising staff of the Chicago Evening American for the past ten years, is in the Franklin Boulevard hosiptal in a serious condition. The exact nature of his illness has not been determined. Mr. Ward was stricken suddenly upon his return with his family August 12 from a vacation spent in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

GEOFFREY PARSONS, chief editorial writer of the New York Herald Tribune, who has been touring France with his family for several weeks, returned on the Ile de France Aug. 16.

John D. Wells, managing editor of the Buffalo Courier-Express, entertained the members of the Dunkirk-Fredonia Kiwanis club, recently.

D. A. McGregor, chief editorial writer, Vancouver Province, has been awarded a gold medal by the National Confederation Committee for the best editorial written on the subject of Canadian Confederation.

Harold A. Safford, managing editor of the Sioux Falls (S. D.) Argus-Leader the last six years, has resigned to become a member of the studio staff of WLS, Chicago radio station. Gordon M. Sessions, editorial writer on the Argus-Leader, has succeeded Safford.

Ed Meisburger has been promoted to city editor of the Kansas City Post.

Leonard Reeback, for the last five years a reporter on the Newburgh (N. Y.) News, has sailed for England, his native country, to visit his parents. He is making the voyage as one of the 150 newspapermen who will cover the American Legion convention. He is on leave of absence from the News.

Ellis Emmons Reed, editor in charge of the sporting editions of the Newark Evening News, is vacationing in western Pennsylvania.

C. O. Wantland has resigned from the San Antonio Express staff and is devoting himself to a magazine publication of his own.

Lawrence Gilman, music editor of the New York Herald Tribune, sailed last week for his annual vacation abroad. He was accompanied by Mrs. Gilman.

Alfred Walling, of the night editorial staff of the Newark Evening News, has returned from a vacation in New England.

Forest Lowry, city editor of the Salt Lake City Tribune, is back at his desk following an operation for acute appendicitis at the Latter-day Saints' Hospital.

Jacob Golden, former city editor of the Albany (N. Y.) Knickerbocker Press, has been appointed managing director of Proctor's vaudeville theatre at Troy, N. Y.

James Butterfield, formerly columnist on the Vancouver Province, has abandoned the publication of his weekly and is again contributing his "Common Round" column to the Province.

Joseph T. Coakley of Syracuse, N. Y., has joined the staff of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram.

A. B. Macdonald, former editor of Farm and Home, Vancouver, has joined the copy desk of the Vancouver Province.

Beverly W. Smith is covering for the New York Herald Tribune the Institute of Public Affairs conference now being held in Virginia.

Harry Clarkson, of the make-up staff, Newark Evening News, has returned from a week's sojourn at Ocean Grove.

C. D. Smith, formerly a member of the editorial staffs of several British Columbia newspapers, has returned from a long visit to Australia to become associated with the Victoria Colonist.

Recent additions to the staff of the New York Herald Tribune are Richard W. Dunlap and William T. Bissell.

Harold K. Humphrey, telegraph editor of the Shawnee (Okla.) Morning News and a lieutenant in the Officers' Reserve Corps, is spending his vacation in training at Fort Sill, Okla.

E. A. McSweeney, assistant to Arthur Clarke, Sunday feature editor of the New York Herald Tribune, has returned from a vacation in Bermuda.

Rev. Frederick A. Wilmot, religious editor of the Providence (R. I.) Journal, is covering the Lausanne World Conference on Faith and Order for the Journal.

Harry A. Weissblatt, formerly with the reportorial staff, Philadelphia Public Ledger, is now a member of the Trenton Times editorial staff.

Michael Strauss, assistant city editor of the Chicago Evening Post, is vacationing in Wyoming.

George Biggers, advertising manager of the Birmingham (Ala.) News, has returned to his home after a two weeks' vacation in Chicago.

Negley Farson, a member of the foreign staff of the Chicago Daily News, is the author of a new book, "Daphne's in Love," which will be published Aug. 19

(Continued on page 22)

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

FRANK J. REILLEY, the new business manager of the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Standard-Union, is a Westerner who came East.

FRANK J. REILLEY

The first newspaper position he ever held was on the Lake View (Ore.) News, where, in 1905, he worked on its old Franklin press. In the West he has also been connected with the business departments of the Los Angeles Times, Reno Nevada State Journal, San Francisco Examiner, San Francisco Herald, and Reno Evening Gazette. He was also manager of the Southwest territory for Sunset Magazine, with offices in Los Angeles.

It was in 1918 that he came to New York as a free lance. Prior to his recent appointment to the Standard Union he was on the business department of the New York Times, part of the time as secretary to Louis Wiley, business manager.

THE CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION, Inc.

Successor to Johnson Features, Editors' Feature Service and the Central Press Co. Combined services include the following outstanding features:

Washington correspondence, by Charles P. Stewart.
New York news correspondence, by Alexander C. Herman.
"Daybook of a New Yorker," by Burton Rascoe.
"Diet and Health," by Dr. Lulu Hunt Peters.
Serial fiction by Beatrice Burton.
"The Way of the World," editorial comment, by Grove Patterson.
"Kellygrams," by Fred C. Kelly.
Editorial cartoons, by Cargill and Thiele.
Sport cartoons, by Jack Sords.
Sport features, by Norman W. Brown and William Ritt.
"Skippy," cartoon strip by Percy L. Crosby.
"High Pressure Pete" cartoon strip by Swan, creator of "Salesman Sam."
"Etta Kett," cartoon strip by Paul Robinson.
"Goofey Movies," cartoon strip by Fred Neher.
"Figgers Family," cartoon strip by VEP.
"Old Home Town," cartoons by Lee W. Stanley.
Two-column cartoons by McBride and Robinson.
Woman's page features by Idah McGlone Gibson, Virginia Lee, Helena Rubinstein, Marjorie Rawlings, Florence Smith Vincent, and others.

News features and news pictorial services include four or five daily illustrated news stories from special correspondents, full daily page of spot news pictures, daily picture page to be run without cutting, once a week sport pictorial page, plentiful daily supply of sports halftone and line illustrations, copious morgue service, weekly illustrated obituary article for filing.

The new consolidated organization begins with a client list of 560 daily newspapers. The service is issued from the plant at 1435 East Twelfth Street, Cleveland, O. Eastern office in the New York Times building. The service is edited by Leslie P. Eichel. The business manager is Farris A. Flint, and the president and general manager is V. V. McNitt. Correspondence invited.

Startling New Facts of the War Behind the War

SPYING ON SPIES

A Series of Eight Authentic Articles, with the Grip and Dash of Mystery Fiction.

By

Charles Lucieto

An Ace of the French Secret Service Upon the Inexorable Game of Life and Death Within the Enemy Lines.

A Beautiful Woman the Most Dangerous Modern Spy—Wrecking the German Plan for a Dash through Switzerland — The Annihilating Vest-Pocket Bomb — The Ruse That Saved the Allies on the Sea.

Beginning September 18 with

"Fathoming German Secrets of War"

Wire Your Order Now!

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr., General Manager — Earl J. Hadley, Associate

150 Nassau St., New York City

(Continued from page 21)

by the Century company. The story was first printed as a serial in the Daily News. Farson is at present on his way to the Hebrides, from which he will send the Daily News a series of feature articles.

Edward Price Bell, foreign correspondent for the Chicago Daily News for more than 30 years, has started a new series of weekly articles for the Daily News in which he gives his interpretation of international affairs. The articles appear every Wednesday.

Walter W. Fuller, fraternal editor of the Detroit News, has returned to his desk following a six weeks' tour of Europe.

Robert J. Casey, originator of the popular "Vest Pocket Anthology," a humorous daily feature on the front page of the Chicago Daily News, will sail from San Francisco Sept. 13 on the first leg of a round-the-world voyage. The journey will be concentrated in the Orient, with the principal goal the recently discovered town of Angkor Vat, brought to light after having been hidden by jungle foilage since 1100 A. D.

Pablo S. Katigbak, a young Filipino on the staff of the Chicago Daily News, is learning American newspaper methods which he expects to put into practice when he joins the staff of the Manila Times, which is edited by his brother. Katigbak received an American education in elementary and high schools in the Philippines and is a graduate of the Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern University.

Tom Steed, formerly of the Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman, has been made head of the copy desk, Shawnee (Okla.) Morning News.

Edwin Gordon Lawrence, special writer for the Concord (N. H.) Monitor, and conductor of the "Poems for your Scrapbook" in the Boston Post, is soon to start on a literary pilgrimage to Great Britain.

Frank A. Hunt, Salt Lake City Telegram editorial staff, has taken a vacation trip to the Pacific Coast via airplane.

W. Clark Brockman has joined the staff of the New York Herald Tribune. Mr. Brockman has just returned from the Far East, where he spent three years. Prior to that time he was on the Columbia (S. C.) Record.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

CARTHAGE (N. Y.) REPUBLICAN-TRIBUNE. Fifth annual Exposition Week edition, Aug. 11.

Utica (N. Y.) Observer-Dispatch, 16-page special radio section on Sunday, Aug. 14 in tabloid form.

Mt. Vernon (Wash.) Herald, special 16-page Skagit County Fair edition, Friday, Aug. 5.

Aurora (Ill.) Beacon-News, Aug. 9, Central States Fair edition 48 pages, in addition to 16-page news section.

MARRIED

WILLIAM C. WISE, golf editor of the Los Angeles Times, to Miss Marion Benda, former Ziegfeld Follies girl, recently.

Harold M. Anderson, formerly of the advertising staff of the Miami Herald, now with the Washington (D. C.) Times and Herald, to Miss Isobel A. Stewart of Miami, recently.

Miss Dorothy Elizabeth Huske, editor of the Community News, Columbus, O., to Donald Ferguson Gayer of Cleveland.

David L. Kirk, city editor of the Spokane Chronicle, to Miss Florence Tigges of Lewiston, Idaho, at Spokane, Aug. 6. Mr. Kirk is a brother of the late William F. Kirk, New York feature writer and columnist.

Mrs. Lillian Fitch Krause, who succeeded her husband, the late George H. Krause, as publisher of the Elk Point (S. D.) Herald, to Orville Anderson of Chamberlain, S. D., recently.

John Howard Griffin of Holyoke, Mass., a reporter on the Boston (Mass.) Herald, to Miss Alice L. Barry of Peabody at St. John's church in Peabody, Aug. 3.

Roy D. Duchemin, night editor of the Sydney (N. S.) Post, and Cora Derbyshire of Glace Bay at Glace Bay, Aug. 3.

George Wheeler, editor of the Bell (Cal.) Industrial Post, to Miss Mildred Mackinson, Aug. 4.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

A BUILDING permit has been issued the Albany (N. Y.) Knickerbocker Press for remodeling a structure adjoining the newspaper office at a cost of $50,000.

Erection of the new home of the Cisco (Tex.) Daily News is expected to be completed by Sept. 15. A. B. O'Flaherty is pubilsher of the News; Tom S. Whitehead is editor, and W. H. LaRoque is advertising manager.

Los Angeles Daily Journal, official paper of the city and county of Los Angeles, recently moved into new and larger quarters at 121 North Broadway.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

C. C. BALES, editor and owner of the Davenport (Okla.) Dispatch has began publication of the Pearson Leader. T. H. Garris, of Davenport is editor and manager.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

REGINALD P. MITCHELL, who has been serving the Associated Press as Miami correspondent for two years, has been transferred to Atlanta.

Edwin Williams, son of Dean Walter Williams of the school of journalism, University of Missouri, has joined the New York staff of the United Press after selling his two Texas weeklies, the Marfa Big Bend Sentinel and the Presidio Border Times.

J. E. Helfert, for six years manager of the Milwaukee bureau of the United Press, has resigned to join the Beaver Dam (Wis.) Citizen.

Jack Richardson, manager of the Vancouver bureau of the Canadian Press, has returned to his duties after several months' leave of absence due to ill health, during which Percy F. Cooper acted in his stead.

J. Erwin Gifford, who has been night editor of the Associated Press bureau at Albany, N. Y., has been transferred to Buffalo.

A. W. Folger, correspondent of the United Press Associations in Mexico, has been ordered to Lima, Peru. He is completing a three-year tour of duty in Mexico and will be given a vacation before proceeding to his new post.

Jerome M. Strauss of the Los Angeles Times reportorial staff has joined Universal News Service in Los Angeles.

David Fernsler, chief of the New Jersey bureau of the Associated Press, is touring Euprope in the company of his wife. They are at present in Switzerland after visiting London, Holland and parts of Germany.

C. E. Honce, formerly early news editor of the Associated Press in Chicago, has succeeded Cecil K. Eastman as news editor. Eastman recently resigned to go to Orlando, Fla., where he will raise citrus fruit and dabble in literature.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

J. L. PASCHAL has purchased the interests of H. L. Case in the Wanette (Okla.) Times and also the Asher News.

C. W. Stinson of Lewiston, Mo., publisher of the Lewiston Record and the Maywood Missourian, has purchased the Monticello Journal from Mrs. Carrie Caldwell and Spencer Caldwell. The Journal is to be published at Lewiston.

Mack F. Denman, Farmington, Mo., owner and editor of the Bunceton (Mo.) Eagle, has sold the paper to H. R. Downs of Kansas City. The Eagle was founded 30 years ago by L. O. and W. L. Nelson.

La Plata (Mo.) Home Press, oldest newspaper in Macon county, has been sold by W. A. Prash, present owner, to Mrs. W. W. Henderson, of La Plata.

B. H. Mullins has purchased the Oakwood (Tex.) Oracle from J. Davis Rambo, publisher for the past five years.

R. H. Glenn has purchased the West Hollywood (Cal.) Courier from U. A. Rice and T. R. Browne, and changed the name to the Sherman Tribune.

Lincoln County Ledger, published at Star City, Ark., has been sold by W. A. Taylor, owner for the past few years, to James T. Wimberly, of Cabot.

ASSOCIATIONS

MISSOURI newspaper men will meet at Joplin, Mo., Oct. 20, 21 and 22 for the annual fall meeting of the MISSOURI PRESS ASSOCIATION, Charles L. Hobart, of the Holden Progress, president, announces Headquarters will be at the Connor hotel.

F. J. Gable is the new president of the KANSAS CITY ADVERTISING CLUB succeeding C. E. Griffin. Other officers installed recently were; B. H. Henthorn. vice-president; Miss Eleanor Gladdis, second vice-president; W. R. Snodgress, treasurer and H. M. Hanna, secretary.

OZARK PRESS ASSOCIATION will meet at Monett, Mo., Sept. 2 and 3, for the regular fall meeting. Philip Coldron, of the Joplin News-Herald, president has announced. Twenty-two counties in the Ozark region of the state are represented in the membership. Trips over the Ozarks are included in the program entertainment.

Tommy Hughitt of the Buffalo News sports staff and Gene Korzelius of the Buffalo Times sports staff came in with the prize winning scores in the weekly tournament of the BUFFALO NEWSPAPERMEN'S CLUB, Hughitt with a 41 took the low gross award while Korzelius 48-10-36 won the low net prize.

Editors of weekly newspapers in North Central Washington met in Wenatchee Sunday, August 7, to outline a part of the program being planned for the forty-first annual conference of the WASHINGTON PRESS ASSOCIATION to be held in that city Sept. 15, 16 and 17. Editors who attended the meeting were: Joseph Stoddard, Waterville Empire-Press, president of the Washington Press Association; Kenneth Kingman, Chelan Valley Mirror; O. M. Van Ommeran Cashmere Valley Record; O. H. Woody Okanogan Independent; and E. P. Murphy, Entiat Times.

SEATTLE PRESS CLUB was host to some fifty or sixty newspaper men from all over the United States who were in Seattle for the twentieth annual convention of the National Realtors Association, at a buffet supper Thursday, Aug. 11, and a dinner Friday, Aug. 12. At the Friday night dinner plans were laid for the formation of a nation-wide association of real estate editors.

A meeting will be held at Huntingburg, Ind., next month to effect a reorganization of the POCKET PUBLISHERS' LEAGUE, an organization of owners of weekly newspapers in southern Indiana, chiefly the First, Second and Third congressional districts, which flourished for many years but which has not met f the last several years. For many yea Ernest W. Pickhardt, editor of t Huntingburg Signal, was president the league.

Henry Justin Smith, managing edit of the Chicago Daily News, will be t principal speaker at the eighth ann convention of the IOWA HIGH SCHO PRESS ASSOCIATION, Grinnell, Iowa, D 2 and 3. Mr. Smith will speak "Genius on Newspaper Row." Gardn Cowles, Jr., managing editor of the D Moines Register, and Robert Y. Ke associate editor of the American Lumbe man, will be other speakers.

Eddie Trantor, a member of t Buffalo Courier-Express sports sta and Frank Dooley tied for first pr in the kicker's handicap tourname conducted by the Newspaper Me Association at Grover Cleveland pa recently. A large field competed in t first formal newspaper tourney of t season. Weekly events are in prospe

SCHOOLS

MISS Sara L. Lockwood, professor journalism at the University of M souri, and National President of Th Sigma Phi, honorary and professio fraternity for women in journalism, h sailed for Honolulu, where she will wo for several months on the Honolulu St Bulletin. Miss Lockwood is on leave absence from the University of Misso for two quarters.

FLASHES

When it is necessary to raise mon Europe always "sees America first." Worcester (Mass.) Post.

We Americans have many responsib ties: Next year we pick our Preside and one in Nicaragua.—Detroit News.

For the moment the trouble with m of the Europe-to-America nonstop flig seems to be the fact that they are a nonstart.—Russell Crouse in New Yo Evening Post.

The only thing that doesn't beco smaller when it is contracted is a debt Louisville Times.

"Live dangerously from Saturday Monday," advised the romantic Rob Louis Stevenson. How "R. L. S." wo have rejoiced in the automobile era Chicago Daily News.

A movement is on foot to merge t of the largest mail-order houses. If two catalogs are combined the postm will probably go on strike.—Minneapo Star.

In this day of labor saving devic why doesn't someone invent a note t will renew itself?—Worcester (Mas Post.

FOR PROMPT SERVICE

TYPE

BORDERS ∞ ORNAMENTS ∞ BRASS RULE

Printers' Supplies

KELLY PRESSES • KLYMAX FEEDERS • PAPER CUTTERS
HAMILTON WOOD AND STEEL EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING OUR AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT

Carried in stock for prompt shipment at the following Selling Houses of the

AMERICAN TYPE FOUNDERS COMPANY

Boston	Baltimore	Pittsburgh	Cincinnati	Kansas City	San Francisco
New York	Richmond	Cleveland	St. Louis	Des Moines	Portland
Philadelphia	Atlanta	Detroit	Milwaukee	Denver	Spokane
	Buffalo	Chicago	Minneapolis	Los Angeles

What is "THE FOURTH INGREDIENT"?

IN EVERY finished product there is visible evidence of three highly essential ingredients: Experience, Skill and Materials.

Not so apparent is the presence of "the fourth ingredient". For the reason that it constitutes the Code of the Manufacturer; the ideals to which he should hold; the character he chooses to vest in his product.

Besetting this "fourth ingredient" at all times is that Siren of Competition —Price. With alluring temptations of Orders, she beckons. The Manufacturer is placed in a quandary. To lower his prices, he must sacrifice something. Too often he succumbs by deviating from his Code.

"A bit less of quality here—a whit less of skill in the finishing there—no one will detect it—why not secure the Order?" He suppresses the "still small voice" of his Code—just this one time. But alas!—the ideal once forsaken, is easier to desert by further degrees. Unless the Manufacturer realizes it, soon his Code, the "fourth ingredient," the character of his wares, becomes a myth of better days.

NOT MERELY as a matter of Pride, but more in the exercise of sound business judgment for insurance of the future, "the fourth ingredient" in all Goss products has never been and never will be lowered in character, despite all inducement.

Instead, it is indelibly a provision of the Goss Code that standards be raised whenever the opportunity is presented. No Goss product will ever be changed, except to improve and better it. Sometimes a betterment reduces a price, but never will price reduce the quality of a Goss product.

Undeniably it requires courage, fortitude, belief in the future, to adhere at all times to so rigid a policy. But as we survey the results—our remarkable growth and enviable international standing today in this old industry of which we are a member forty-two years young—we feel no trepidation concerning the outcome in years yet to be lived.

When you ask us "What is your fourth ingredient?" we shall always be able to look you straight in the eye.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS COMPANY

Main Office and Factories, CHICAGO, ILL.

NEW YORK OFFICE
220 West Forty-Second Street

SAN FRANCISCO OFFICE
646 Call Building

The Goss Printing Press Company, of England, Ltd., London
Messrs. Edwards Dunlop Company, Ltd., Sydney, Sole Agent for Australasia

GOSS STRAIGHT GOSS HIGH SPEED LINE

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

Harold Matson Made M. E. of McClure Newspaper Syndicate—New Historical Feature by Yale Press—Angelo Patri Writing Sunday Feature

THE McClure Newspaper Syndicate announced this week the appointment of Harold Matson as its managing editor. Matson comes to his new post froom the Eugene MacLean Features, San Francisco, of which he was manager. However, he is not new to New York, having been there with NEA Service, Inc., and before that, in 1920, with the publishing firm of Thomas Seltzer, Inc., as its production manager.

HAROLD MATSON

Matson's newspaper experience started in San Francisco in 1915 with the Chronicle. In 1917 he went upstate to be editor of the Marysville Appeal; from there to Hawaii for the Hilo Tribune. In 1918 he joined the San Francisco Daily News, under Eugene MacLean, with whom he worked eight out of twelve years.

After his year with the Seltzer company he returned to San Francisco, later to be appointed editor of the Sacramento Star. He later rejoined NEA as manager of its Boston bureau, and from there went to San Francisco as manager of NEA's Pacific organization.

When Eugene MacLean withdrew from NEA Service, of which he was president, Matson went with him to organize the MacLean Features.

In the Yale University Press Historical-Commemorative Feature Series, the release for Sunday, Sept. 18, will be entitled: "The 'Sesqui' of Burgoyne's Defeat."

Mr. Edwin Muller, Jr., treasurer of the Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, has just returned from Paris on the Ile de France. While abroad he effected a reorganization of the staff of the Paris Fashion Service, with the result that the Cosmos Syndicate has sent out notice to newspapers that the signed articles from great creators of the mode will be supplied to papers regularly, as before, and that certain other improvements in the service have been made.

Angelo Patri, writer on child training, is preparing a new Sunday feature being offered by the Bell Syndicate, Inc., New York.

Frank J. Carmody is author of the new weekly aviation service being offered by the Ullman Feature Service, Washington, D. C. W. J. Voss, associate editor of the service, has returned to his desk following a motor trip through Virginia and a stay at Virginia Beach.

Miss Madeleine Dauphin, a member of the staff, who has been in France for the past six weeks on a business and pleasure trip, will return the early part of September.

Photographs are being gathered in France by the Famous Features Syndicate, Inc., New York, to illustrate "Madame Lupescu's Own Story," which it is now offering newspapers.

Dr. L. E. Bisch, neuropsychiatrist, is now writing for the Newspaper Feature Service Daily Magazine Page.

Eugene Sheffer who does the Ask-Me-Another Puzzles for King Features Syndicate had published on Aug. 12 his "Two-Way Question Book" which is a combination of Ask-Me-Another and Cross Word Puzzles.

C. Hawthorne of the editorial staff of Newspaper Feature Service has gone to Nova Scotia for a short vacation.

Chester Weil, assistant service manager of King Features Syndicate, is in Kansas City on a business trip. Tim Beacom, the "mechanical superintendent" of the King Features Syndicate, recently called on different newspapers in St. Louis, Missouri, Madison, Wisconsin, and Peoria and Chicago, Illinois.

CLEVELAND SYNDICATE MERGER COMPLETED

Central Press, Johnson Features and Editors' Feature Service Combined with V. V. McNitt as President and G. M.

V. V. McNitt, president of the McNaught Syndicate, Inc., New York, announced this wek that the merger of Johnson Features, Inc., New York, and Editors' Feature Service, Cleveland, with the Central Press Association has been completed in Cleveland. A new company has been organized, Central Press Association, Inc., of which Mr. McNitt is president and general manager. Other officers and directing heads of the new company are: Mary H. Rumsey, vice-president; George Barr Baker, chairman of the board of directors; H. W. Miller, treasurer; Farris A. Flint, business manager; Leslie P. Eichel, editor; LeRoy Miller, sales manager; William Davy, production manager.

The Central Press has taken over most of the features formerly handled by the other two services and the new and enlarged service is being issued from the former plant of Johnson Features in Cleveland, which was practically new at the time the merger was first announced last June. The plant of Central Press Association is being maintained as a job plant with H. A. McNitt, brother of Mr. McNitt, in charge.

Johnson Features, Inc., was organized early in 1925 by W. H. Johnson, who up to that time had been manager of the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate.

In January, 1926, Editors' Feature Service was organized with headquarters in Cleveland. Mr. Johnson acted as president and general manager of both services until his resignation in June.

In announcing completion of the merger of the three syndicates, Mr. McNitt said it would be the policy of Central Press to develop its own talent as the need arises and not seek new staff members from other syndicates.

"There is plenty of room for all in the syndicate field, and we do not plan a highly competitive campaign for talent," he stated.

Mr. McNitt was in Cleveland this week supervising the new service.

INDIANA VETERAN DIES

Samuel F. Winter, 92, thought to be the oldest newspaper man in Indiana died at Peru, Ind., after 78 years in the newspaper business. He had served on the Chicago Times, edited the Lafayette (Ind.) Journal, Huntington Democrat Xenia (O.) Journal and Peru Chronicle. He is survived by a son and daughter. Funeral services were held last Monday afternoon.

WHIFF OF THE SALT SEA

News Men Dine on Board Isle de France

New York newspaper and advertising men were guests at a dinner given by the French Line on board its newest steamship the Ile de France, on Aug. 17. M. Mogendre, the French Consul General, Herbert S. Houston, president of the Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, and Henry Sell, editor of the Delineator, were speakers. Clayland T. Morgan, advertising director of the French line, presided.

An eastern penitentiary has installed radio for its convicts. That settles it. We'll be good.—El Paso Times.

BACK TO "BOREDOM"

New York Dramatic Critics Return to Cover First Nights

New York dramatic critics returned to their newspapers this week and to what they are prone to call the "boredom" of covering first nights in Broadway theatres. The Broadway season is supposed to open on Labor Day, but it has a tendency to creep up on that date. Last year the opening was Aug. 6 and this year it was Aug. 15.

The critics generally had spent the dull summer season brightly. John Anderson, reviewer for the New York Evening Post, returned from several months abroad, spent in London, Paris, and Florence. He has written a book on the theatre called "Pieces of Eight-Thirty" which will be published Jan. 1.

Gilbert Gabriel, New York Sun, elected "King of the Critics" by Variety, theatrical weekly, rested in Munich, where he wrote a number of short stories for the magazines. Brooks Atkinson, New York Times, wrote a book on Thoreau, which is now on the press, while he was vacationing in his native New England.

Alexander Woollcott, New York World, played hookey from the 21st showing of Ziegfeld's Follies, preferring the quiet air of his summer home on the island he owns in Vermont. The first openings were reported for him by Allison Smith, who is the wife of Russel Crouse, columnist of the New York Evening Post.

Percy Hammond, New York Herald-Tribune, remained on his estate on Long Island, during the summer, while Burns Mantle, New York Daily News and Chicago Tribune, also spent most of his time at his home in Forest Hills, Long Island, preparing his "Best Plays of 1927."

DAILY SHORTENS NAME

A change in name has been announced by the Saginaw (Mich) News Courier, which will be known as the Saginaw Daily News in the future. News Courier was adopted as a result of a consolidation of Saginaw newspapers several years ago.

The Morning Telegraph

the leading newspaper in Theatricals, Turf, Finance and Motion Pictures, prints all of the day's worth while general news, with exclusive features covered by a great staff of special writers.

It has the largest professional circulation of any newspaper in the United States.

Getting Down To Brass Tacks

ON THE QUESTION OF SERVICE

WHAT have you to give advertisers who are clamoring for more effective advertisements? Newspaper men are naturally anxious to go the limit in order to increase linage and still make a fair profit, but advertisers want more substantial assistance, not just data and market reports.

A great majority of the leading newspapers have installed the Ludlow system of composition for ads and heads and find it extremely effective in actually improving the quality of their advertisements. An attractive appearance makes every ad more readable and stimulates sales. The improvement is reflected in greater advertising volume for the paper so equipped.

Send us a copy of your paper today and ask us how the Ludlow system of composition can be used to help you get more business.

Ludlow typelines are slug-cast from hand-set matrices in sizes up to 72 pt., full-width caps and lower-case, and even 84 pt. caps. No machine or mold changes required.

Ludlow Typograph Co.

2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago

Boston: 470 Atlantic Avenue — Atlanta: 41 Marietta Street
New York: 63 Park Row — San Francisco: 5 Third Street

LUDLOW QUALITY SLUG COMPOSITION

Industries are taking on new life in--- NEW ENGLAND---

Business is certainly on the upgrade in New England. Mid-Summer finds all the important industries in a very active state.

The textile business is showing a healthy increase, due to the increased demand for cotton cloth. As a result over 90% of the textile mills in the Fall River district are working on full time basis, some even running nights. Aviation is booming, the shoe and leather industry is running steady, and a number of idle plants are being put into production. Building continues to hold up well.

The largest of new industries to be built in New England at the present time is the four million dollar plant of the Lawrence Portland Cement Co., at Thomaston, Me., which will open for business the first of the year.

Now is the time for enterprising advertisers to start their campaigns to the consuming power of this industrious community, for money will be plentiful this fall, and retail business will be excellent.

Let these Newspapers listed below help you get started. They know the short cuts to quick and economical distribution.

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Attleboro Sun .....(E)	5,786	.03	.03
Boston Globe .....(M&E)	286,361	.50	.50
Boston Globe .....(S)	333,452	.55	.55
††Boston Transcript .....(E)	38,245	.20	.20
Boston Post .....(M)	394,851	.60	.60
Boston Post .....(S)	350,627	.55	.55
Fitchburg Sentinel .....(E)	12,069	.06	.045
Haverhill Gazette .....(E)	16,415	.065	.05
Lynn Item .....(E)	17,004	.065	.05
††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader ...(M&E)	20,621	.07	.07
New Bedford Standard Mercury .....(M&E)	32,607	.10	.10
New Bedford Sunday Standard (S)	29,262	.10	.10
North Adams Transcript.(E)	10,427	.05	.04
Pittsfield Eagle .....(E)	18,264	.05	.05
Salem News .....(E)	21,495	.09	.07
Taunton Gazette .....(E)	9,414	.045	.035
Worcester Telegram-Gazette (M&E)	99,207	.28	.25
Worcester Sunday Telegram (S)	52,740	.21	.18

CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Bridgeport Post-Telegram (E&M)	44,370	.15	.15
Bridgeport Post .....(S)	23,171	.10	.10
Hartford Courant .....(M)	33,017	.09	.09
Hartford Courant .....(S)	58,674	.13	.13
††Hartford Times .....(E)	56,077	.13	.13
Middletown Press .....(E)	8,560	.05	.03
††New Haven Register.(E&S)	48,507	.145	.135
New London Day.....(E)	12,293	.06	.045
††Norwich Bulletin .....(M)	12,842	.07	.05
Norwalk Hour .....(E)	6,429	.04	.04
††South Norwalk Sentinel..(E)	5,320	.04	.03
Stamford Advocate.....(E)	10,937	.05	.04
Waterbury Republican-American (M&E)	25,234	.08	.08
Waterbury Republican...(S)	15,903	.08	.08

MAINE—Population, 768,014

Portland Press-Herald Express, Sun & Telegram...(M&E)	59,356	.20	.16

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683

Concord Monitor-Patriot..(E)	5,773	.0375	.025
††Keene Sentinel .....(E)	3,980	.036	.023
Manchester Union Leader (M&E)	32,585	.15	.12

RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
††Newport Daily News....(E)	6,249	.0336	.0293
Pawtucket Times .....(E)	28,449	.08	.08
Providence Bulletin ....(E)	71,443	.20	(B).27
Providence Journal .....(M)	38,599	.12	(B).27
Providence Journal .....(S)	74,009	.20	.20
Providence News .....(E)	28,021	.08	.08
Providence Tribune .....(E)	21,162	.10	.09
Westerly Sun .....(E&S)	5,273	.03	.03
Woonsocket Call .....(E)	14,880	.05	.05

VERMONT—Population, 352,428

Barre Times .....(E)	7,282	.03	.025
††Brattleboro Reformer ...(E)	3,520	.035	.02
Burlington Free Press...(M)	14,265	.05	.05
Rutland Herald .....(M)	11,816	.05	.05
††St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record .....(E)	4,061	.03	.02

 A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, March 31, 1927.
†† Government Statement, March 31, 1927.
(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

CLAIM SACCO CABLES ENDANGER AMERICANS

American Association of Uraguay Sends Protest to U. S. Press Services— "Getting Facts Only" Says Rose

Citizens of the United States, resident in South America are in danger because of the excited state of public opinion aroused over the Sacco-Vanzetti case, according to cabled messages. The American Association of Uruguay cabled the Associated Press, International News Service and the United Press as follows:

"Montevideo, Aug. 12, 1927.

Manager, International News Service, N. Y.

Despatches published here accredited to American press agencies are almost entirely devoted to showing unfavorable aspects Sacco-Vanzetti case and are inflaming public opinion against Americans to the great detriment of American business interests and endangering lives of innocent people. Stop. We cannot believe you realize this fact. Therefore we urge your cooperation for protection for American lives and interests abroad Stop. This same cable forwarded to Associated Press, United Press.

American Association, Uruguay."

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States in the Argentine cabled endorsement of the message from Uruguay.

The American Manufacturers' Export Association, after quoting these cables, wrote to the three press association saying:

"We do not know that anything helpful can be done, but we would appreciate any views in connection with the subject of Overseas News Service which would in any way palliate these situations which occur with more or less intensity from time to time."

International News Service replied to Roy G. Owens, Secretary, as follows:

"It is disquieting to learn that agitation over the Sacco-Vanzetti case has reached such proportions that it endangers Americans abroad. It is equally disquieting to realize that it has endangered the lives of citizens at home.

"I do not see, however, that the American press associations can do anything to remedy the situation. Professing, as we do, to tell both at home and abroad simply the facts, without suppression, distortion or adornment, it would be utterly immoral for us to tamper with the news, even in the interests of our own personal safety or the safety of others.

"I suspect that the temper of foreign radicals has been lashed into a fury more effectively by the editorial comment and misplaced headline emphasis of their newspapers than it has by the sober recital of facts the American news agencies, keenly aware of their responsibility, have transmitted abroad.

Very truly yours,
MARC A. ROSE,
Executive Manager."

J. H. Furay, vice-president in charge of foreign news, of the United Press, did not answer the cable of protest direct. Instead, he instructed his Buenos Aires office to explain the situation to the protestants, telling them that the American press associations merely carried the news from Boston and expressed no opinions on the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

The Associated Press replied by cable, expressing a similar sentiment.

TWO PUBLISHERS FINED FOR CONTEMPT

Huntington, Ind., Men Printed Annexation Ordinance Through Carelessness They Tell Judge

Publishers of the Huntington (Ind.) Herald and Huntington Press were fined $10 each for contempt of court last Saturday on a charge of violating a restraining order to prevent the legal publication of an ordinance annexing College Park, a suburb. The violation was alleged to have been through carelessness. The defendants were Walter H. Ball, publisher of the Herald, and A. J. Wilhelm, publisher of the Press.

Judge Sumner Kenner of Circuit Court issued the restraining order on the petition of residents of College Park, who are almost unanimous in their opposition to the annexation project. The notices had been published before and according to attorneys if published the final time they would make annexation legal. The day after the judge issued the order both papers carried the notices, afterwards declaring through error.

The suit of C. W. H. Bangs, attorney for College Park, against the city will be heard Aug. 22. A remonstrance delays the annexation until after the hearing.

SAVING SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

The Chicago Daily News has taken the lead in an effort to save the Chicago Symphony Orchestra from being abandoned as the result of a wage dispute. The newspaper, with its own gift of $5,000, started receiving contributions toward a $30,000 fund from which the musicians are to receive an additional $10 each week, an increase over which they have been deadlocked for weeks.

COMPLETES NOVEL IN JAIL

Leonard Cline, former reporter on the New York World, has completed his latest novel, The Dark Chamber, much of which was written in jail at Hartford, Conn. He was indicted two months ago for the first degree murder in connection with the death of his friend, Wilfred Irwin, at Mansfield, Conn., May 16. The novel has a character named Wilfred Hough who commits suicide.

MAGAZINE MEETING SEPT. 20-21

The National Publishers Association has announced Sept. 20-21 as the dates for its eighth annual convention at Buckwood Inn, Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa. Arthur J. Baldwin of the McGraw-Hill Company is president of the group.

Obituary

JOHN P. CHRISTY, 90, for 11 years business manager of the Keokuk (Ia.) Constitution and for eight years foreman of the Keokuk Gate City company's job plant, died Aug. 11 in Cedar Rapids where he had made his home since his retirement several years ago. He began as a printer at the age of 15 and for over four decades was associated with pioneer newspapers in Iowa. Two daughters survive.

GEORGE C. MORGANSTERN, 47, for 20 years an Oklahoma newspaper man and oil editor of the Tulsa Daily World, died recently. Morganstern is credited with first having applied the name "Pussyfoot" to William W. "Pussyfoot" Johnston, noted prohibitionist.

ALBERT WYATT, 60, journalist, lecturer and at one time consul in Australia, died recently in a hospital at Houston, Tex., where he lived. Wyatt, whom rheumatism had made a cripple, had travelled around the world more than once in quest of health. Besides work with the Associated Press and on New York and San Francisco papers, he had done service for the Ceylon (India) Observer and other foreign papers.

DR. S. W. MOOREHEAD, 78, for many years editor of the Keokuk (Ia.) Gate City, twice mayor and former member of the faculty of the old Keokuk Medical College, died Aug. 11 following an attack of paralysis.

EDDIE BICKERS, 36, former press foreman of the Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune, died last week.

DAVID H. MOREHEAD, for many years a writer of poems for newspaper services, died recently at Bridgeport, Conn. He formerly lived in Utica, N. Y. One of his last verses appeared in the Boston Transcript about two weeks ago. Mr. Morehead was 62 years old.

RAYMOND J. FISH, pressman with the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, died Aug. 11, in his home at Sea Breeze.

EDWIN J. PILKINGTON, 23, of the editorial staff, Winnipeg Tribune, was drowned recently in York Lake, near Yorkton, Sask., when the canoe in which he was riding overturned.

MRS. M. A. CUTLER, wife of O. W. Cutler, newspaper publisher of Niagara Falls and Lockport, N. Y., died recently from the effects of a cerebral hemorrhage.

JOHN THEODULE VINCENT, 82, at the time of his retirement a few years ago a member of the composing room staff of the Boston (Mass.) Globe, died recently at his home at Somerville after a short illness.

WILLIAM B. CLARK, 86, chairman of the board of directors of the Aetna Fire Insurance Company, whose father was for several years publisher of the Hartford (Conn.) Courant, died at his home in Hartford Aug. 6. Mr. Clark worked on the Courant several years before entering the insurance business.

MATTHEW MORRIS HOWLAND, for several years an editorial writer on the Providence (R. I.) Journal and Bulletin, died at his home in Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 1 at the age of 77. His brother, Richard S. Howland, former editor of the Journal, survives him.

E. W. MCTAGGART, 33, formerly of the editorial staff, Vancouver Province, and latterly editor of the Vernon (B. C.) News, died in Vancouver recently.

JOHN H. LONGFELLOW, 55, a member of the editorial staff of the Seattle (Wash.) Daily Journal of Commerce, died suddenly of heart trouble Wednesday, August 3. For many years Mr. Longfellow was editor of the Pacific Builder and Engineer of Seattle. He had been on the Journal of Commerce staff for four years.

JAMES A. SUIT, aged 57 years, a former Washington newspaperman, died in the hospital of the National Soldiers' Home, at Hampton, Va., Aug. 13.

BUILDINGS
PLANT LAYOUTS
PRODUCTION OPERATION

An organization specializing solely in newspaper building design, manufacturing and production problems.

S. P. WESTON
Newspaper Buildings
Plant Layouts
Production, Operation
420 Lexington Avenue, New York

now
195,000 Daily
425,000 Sunday
and The largest home-delivered circulation of any paper in its territory
Los Angeles Examiner

THE MIRROR DELIVERY TO YOU AS AN ADVERTISER

This then is what The Mirror offers to you:

Daily Contact in the Home

City families	12,625
City consumers	53,908
Exclusive city consumers	40,565
Outer families	12,370
Outer consumers	56,655
Exclusive outer consumers	46,980
Total families	24,995
Total consumers	110,563
Total exclusive consumers	87,545

Such a universal acceptance of The Mirror throughout the trade area gives reason for an inspection of circulation methods. Examine the ABC report. The auditors show that no premiums or contests were used; canvassers were not employed; clubbing offers were not permitted; no artificial stimulus had any part in securing this audience for Mirror advertisers. The paper is bought on merit, because the family demands it.

Clearly it dominates the inviting Altoona market so far as home coverage is concerned.

THE ALTOONA MIRROR
Altoona, Pa.

Business Direct — Fred G. Pearce, Adv. Mgr.

Get in touch with the impulses that originate each week in the columns of

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

The Newspaper and Advertising Man's NEWS paper

Impulses that are making themselves felt in better informed, more efficient, more alert newspaper and advertising men wherever EDITOR & PUBLISHER is regularly read.

And do it NOW

while you can get with your subscription one of the very few copies left of the 1927 edition of EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S International Year Book.

This is a service without a parallel in the whole range of business paper publishing, and one that you are sure to appreciate, enjoy, profit by and USE throughout the year.

This Coupon will bring you into the EDITOR & PUBLISHER family at once.

A hearty welcome awaits you—both on our subscription list and in our offices; Suite 1700, Times Building, New York. When in the city and in the neighborhood of Times Square, drop in and use the facilities we have provided for the comfort and convenience of our good friends.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER,
Suite 1700, Times Building,
Broadway at 42nd St., New York, N. Y.

Send me EDITOR & PUBLISHER every week for a year, starting with the next issue, and including with my subscription the INTERNATIONAL YEAR BOOK and the MARKET GUIDE as they are published during the term of my subscription.

Enclosed is $..... in full payment. OR, I shall remit the subscription price on receipt of your bill, in 10 days or so.

Name .....

Local Address .....

CITY ..... STATE .....

Business Connection .....

Title or Position .....

Important confidenial information for our own files only.)

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: $4 per year—$4.50 in Canada, $5 in Foreign Countries. Shorter terms in proportion.

WOMEN IN ADVERTISING AND JOURNALISM

In a Woman Reporter's Hope Chest; Ione Quinby Lifts the Lid—A Bus Ride Into Moviedom—Miss Crosby to Edit the Bostonian

IONE QUINBY, reporter and feature writer of the Chicago Evening Post, opened the lid of her hope chest the other day, and permitted a peek at the contents. Inside were gifts from people she has interviewed as a newspaper woman—a knitted wash cloth from an old lady of 103 who helped her get her start in newspaper work; a luncheon set made by a girl "lifer" at Joliet penitentiary, and many others.

IONE QUINBY

Miss Quinby has been on the Post for the past six years. She has also written for the Consolidated Press and for True Confessions. At present she is working on a novel.

Miss Quinby's first interview was with the old lady of 103. She had, after many attempts, convinced W. A. Washburne, city editor of the Post, that she was worth a trial at least, and he gave her the feature assignment. She got the story and made a friend of the old lady and her start as a news writer.

Before joining the Post she worked as stenographer for a manufacturing concern and as an advertising copy writer.

When Miss Dorothy Fowler left her desk in a Toronto newspaper office as usual one night at five o'clock, and boarded the customary bus for her home, she did not know that fame and fortune were waiting for her in that bus. But this is just what happened, and as a result of that bus ride she has been chosen to play the star part in the first all-Canadian historical motion picture "The Policing of the Plains," which is being directed by A. D. Kean.

So interested was the director's daughter, Miss Louise Kean, when she saw Miss Fowler in the bus that she asked the young man whom she had seen talking with Miss Fowler for her name and address, and it was upon her later suggestion that Miss Fowler was sent for to come to Trenton, Ont., where in the Ontario Government studio the film is being made.

"She has proved a wonderful screen type, and will make a big hit in the picture," says Mr. Kean. Miss Fowler disclaims all previous screen ambitions, and said that her selection as a leading lady had come as a complete surprise to her.

Miss Katherine T. Crosby, formerly special writer and later women's page editor of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram, has been made managing editor of The Bostonian, a new magazine to be published at Boston, Mass.

Mrs. Charles L. Hobart, wife of C. L. Hobart, editor of the Holden (Mo.) Progress and president of the Missouri Press Association, is touring Europe and meeting personally for the first time friends of 30 years acquaintance.

While still Miss Julia Stewart Tripp of Topeka, Kan., she became interested in Volapuk, then a new international language invented by Prof. Johann Scheyler of Germany. This was in 1892. She became interested enough to keep up a correspondence with 19 persons in China, Austria, Italy, Switzerland. Bohemia, France, Belgium and Holland. Ten students kept up a correspondence with her until her marriage to Charles Hobart in 1902.

Since that time one, Douwe van der Sluis, of Alemelo, Holland, a musician and school teacher, kept up the correspondence. Later he mastered the English language and in later years used this altogether.

A year after Mr. and Mrs. Hobart were married Van Der Sluis married. When a son was born to the Dutch family he was named Julius after Mrs. Hobart. She has never seen her friends until this summer. The boy, now a man of 23, is assistant manager of a spinning mill in Holland.

Miss Harriet E. Fisher, for six years advertising manager of the Dunn-Taft Dry Goods Store, Columbus, O., has become account executive for the Miller-Knopf Advertising Agency at Columbus. She is a graduate of Ohio State University.

Miss Jennie Owens, for several years a columnist and writer for the El Dorado (Kan.) Times, has resigned to become city editor of the Junction City, (Kan.) Daily Union.

Mrs. Otis Carl Williams, formerly a reporter for the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram, has entered broadcasting work with the Telegram-Gazette's radio plant, Station WTAG. Mrs. Williams who was Miss Alice Stevens, is wife of the national advertising manager of the Telegram.

Miss Laura French, for many years connected with the Emporia Gazette as assistant to William Allen White, has been named associate editor of the Kansas Federationist, official organ of the Kansas Federation of women's clubs.

BUILDING NEWSPAPER CIRCULATION

Stimulating Friendships Between Carriers and Readers—Salt Lake City Deseret News Extends Truck Service—Three Days in Jail for Stealing Three Papers

THE Dallas (Tex.) Dispatch, follows the plan of stimulating a personal friendship between its route carriers and in this way better holds its subscribers. When there is a change in route carriers the readers concerned are notified of this fact by a circular letter and at the same time the new carrier is introduced to them by name, along with a few words about him.

A recent letter of this kind reads in part:

"'The King Has Abdicated—Long Live the King.'

"The 'King' of route carriers—Kelly Carraway—ofttimes called 'Red,' has been given a well earned promotion. Kelly has been made district manager with thirty-seven routes under his charge.

"Now comes Kelly's successor.

"A mighty good boy with a record almost equal to that of Kelly. He can't give better service than Kelly. That's impossible. But you will find it just as good."

"Roy, Kelly, and the Dallas Dispatch hope for a continuation of your good business."

So successful has the truck service proved to the Salt Lake City Deseret News as an aid to the circulation department in getting papers into the country towns, that the service has now been extended to towns in Cache Valley, Utah, about 130 miles from Salt Lake City.

The Deseret News tied up with the visit of Colonel Lindbergh, noted flier, by giving a life of Lindbergh to any boy or girl who secured a news subscription to the paper.

Stealing newspapers from a box maintained for readers of the Indianapolis Star proved costly for Dale Thompson, 18 years old, of Indianapolis and Delbert Good, 18 years old, of Plainfield, when they were convicted in Indianapolis Municipal court last week. Thompson, who had taken two papers, was sentenced to two days in jail, and Good, who took three, received three days as penalty. Each also was fined $

The Albany (N. Y.) Times-Union has changed its final edition from an 8 p. m. roll to 6. Racing, baseball and other sport and spot news are featured.

The Chicago Tribune is making a daily award of $10 to members of the Chicago Cubs team for exceptional service in the team's fight for the championship pennant in the National League. The Tribune also makes a weekly award of merchandise to the player doing the most meritorious work for that period of time.

A crowd estimated at 80,000 witnessed the sixth annual water carnival of Tribune Aug. 14 in the Lincoln Park lagoon. Spectators lined the banks of the lagoon on both sides for a mile and saw George Young, winner of the Wrigley Catalina river swim, in action.

The Moline (Ill.) Dispatch was host to 100 carriers at the Boy Scout camp near Silvis, Ill., Wednesday, Aug. 10, and carriers from nearly a dozen rural communities served by the paper were included in the party. A special street car carried the boys from the Dispatch office to the camp where an athletic program, games and contests were staged. Leonard Barland, Dispatch circulation manager, was in charge of the party.

Charles K. Blasser, circulation manager of the York (Pa.) Dispatch, is getting local clergymen to contribute "A Message to the Boys," which he is publishing in The Hustler, a monthly he issues for his carriers.

PUBLISHERS

This successful circulation building organization has instituted a new series which will interest publishers desiring additional circulation of a sound character which can be secured under the direction of their own circulation manager.

If desired we will conduct a thorough preliminary survey of your territory, which will indicate the number of potential subscribers available.

We will formulate a plan for a campaign—one to conform with your local conditions.

We will furnish you intelligent, energetic subscription salesmen with years of actual experience in the sale of sound, PERMANENT circulation.

Briefly, we will tell you how to get additional circulation and furnish you with the tools to get it.

And remember, everything handled by your own circulation manager without overburdening his department.

Wire or write immediately for complete details.

F. J. Marks Circulation Service
614 Park Bldg. — Cleveland, Ohio

Sales Service of Books in Switzerland

Important Swiss firm of publishers with private and trade connections (on commission) would undertake distribution of editions throughout Switzerland.

Apply No. W 6173 X Publicitas. Geneva, Switzerland

OUR POLICY

ONE SIZE
all mats 20″ x 24″

ONE QUALITY
only the best we can make

ONE PRICE
15c
order on standing

Certified Stereotyping is Simplified Stereotyping

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION
340 Madison Avenue New York, N.Y.

MADE IN CERTIFIED DRY MATS THE U.S.A.

For wet mat printing with DRY MAT facility — use CERTIFIEDS MADE IN U.S.A.

IRS. PULITZER LEAVES ESTATE TO HER SONS

lph, Joseph and Herbert Bequeathed esiduary Estate in Will Filed for Probate This Week—Servants and Charities Also Remembered

The will of Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, widow the founder of the New York World, fd for probate this week, leaves her riduary estate of unannounced value to e three sons, Ralph Pulitzer, editor of te New York World, Herbert Pulitzer, vo is now directing the New York fening World; and Joseph Pulitzer, tor and publisher of the St. Louis st-Dispatch. This included all the ck Mrs. Pulitzer held in the Pulitzer blishing Company of St. Louis, pubhers of the Post-Dispatch.

Mrs. Pulitzer, who died July 29 at auville, France, bequeathed $30,000 right to Ralph Pulitzer, who, with seph Pulitzer and John G. Milburn Manhasset, are named executors and stees. The will, dated Jan. 6 last, was fd by Carter, Ledyard & Milburn, atneys.

The publisher's widow left real estate rth "more than $10,000" and personal perty of like estimate. To her compion, Maud A. Macarow, Mrs. Pulitzer t $10,000 to be paid as soon as possible d made her the beneficiary of a trust nd of $190,000 provided she was in the ceased's service at the time of death. e interest of this trust fund will be id to her during life and all but $5,000 ll pass equally to the sons of Mrs. litzer upon the beneficiary's death, she ing empowered to dispose of the $5,000 her own will.

Mrs. Pulitzer bequeathed $10,000 each the New York Post Graduate Medical hool for its Children's Ward, and to e New York Association for the Blind. ese were the only legacies to institions. Six servants in the Pulitzer usehold for "at least two years" reive $1,000 each.

The will devotes considerable space to e enumerations of gifts of art works, luable laces and jewels to the testatx's children and grandchildren.

Ralph Pulitzer is to get all the Chise porcelain, books, furniture and other fects, excepting his mother's Whistler chings and a picture of a flock of sheep Rosa Bonheur; his own portrait by nartrain, his father's portrait by Sargnt, picture of "An Old Woman Choping Onions" by Gerald Dow, the painted nvas ceiling in the small drawing room No. 7 East 73rd Street and all other inting in said house "except those left others; an Italian silver ewer and platr, emerald and pearl necklace, silver lt toilet set and my old Saxe table decotion consisting of seven pieces."

Joseph Pulitzer inherits a diamond ra, two pearls and a diamond bracelet; bust of his father by Rodin, picture of n Old Woman" by Dinner, "Portrait a Young Clergyman" by Lawrence d a portrait of his father by Bonnat.

Herbert Pulitzer is left a diamond ooch, all old English silver, jewelry he d given his mother, a silver gilt tea t and two pearls, and Mrs. Pulitzer's ctire collection of Whistler etchings, his ther's portrait by Horowitz, his moth's portrait by Eichbaum and her death sk of Napoleon.

Mrs. Edith P. Moore of No. 7 East 6th Street, the decedent's daughter, gets welry, silverware and the "sugar bowls ich belonged to my grandmother, Hartte Worthington; my flounce of point Angleterre lace and my entire collection laces except those otherwise beeathed."

Mrs. Constance P. Elmslie of Colorado rings, Col., is left jewelry, a set of be, a corsage ornament containing three rge diamonds, and the following paintgs; picture of a Dutch landscape by von ouveur, picture of a little girl by Bont, a market scene in Hungary by Petkoffer and of a woman by Martin ea.

Mrs. Gladys Mann Pulitzer of the 73rd reet address, and Mrs. Elizabeth E. Pulitzer, of Clayton, Mo., daughters-in-law, inherit jewelry, Ralph Pulitzer, Jr., of Manhasset, a grandson, receives a portrait of himself by Lydia Emmett, Rosa Bonheur's picture of "A Flock of Sheep," all Whistler lithographs and a picture of "A Girl Knitting," by Millet.

Kate Davis Pulitzer, a granddaughter, also of Clayton, Mo., was bequeathed the widow's portrait by Sargent, antique silver and silver gilt, a China set, a silver teapot and sugar bowls which belonged to Mrs. Pulitzer's grandmother. When she attains the age of twenty-five, the granddaughter is to receive two long diamond chains. Eleanor Wickham Pulitzer, another granddaughter, gets a piece of Point de Venise lace and three silver gilt books by Lamarie.

The Museum of Art of St. Louis is bequeathed "my largest and finest set of old Venise Point de Rose lace."

Marie A. Macarow receives "my second largest brooch and a diamond bracelet set with three diamonds."

JOINS A. N. P. A.

The Eugene (Ore.) Guard has been elected to membership in the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

PUBLISHER'S HOME LOOTED

Brooklyn Standard Union President Robbed of $2,000 in Gifts

The home of Joseph J. Early, president and treasurer of the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Standard Union, was ransacked late last Saturday night by thieves who entered his apartment and escaped with about $2,000 worth of wedding presents, silver plate, and jewelry.

Mr. Early discovered the robbery upon entering his home early last Sunday morning, after a visit to Schroon Lake, N. Y.

EYESTRAIN ENDS . . .

The British delegation of trade-union representatives, who came here on Tuesday at the invitation of "The London Daily Mail" to study reasons for the disparity between the high wages and prosperous living conditions of the American worker and their own lower wage standards, gained considerable light in a tour of several industrial establishments in Brooklyn yesterday.

They were curious to know how it was that the average wage of the American toiler virtually doubled that of his British brother, and how it was possible for industries here to offer such fat envelopes to their employees and at the same time compete successfully in world markets.

After a study of the Brooklyn Edison plant and the factory methods of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company in Brooklyn, the delegates remarked that one of the vital reasons for the disparity was that the American worker was capable of producing and actually did produce more than the British toiler in a given time.

This he was enabled to do, they learned, because of the high standards of efficiency obtaining here, mass production methods, the utter perfection of organization for which the American industrialist seems always to be striving, and labor-saving devices evident on every hand.

The comments of the delegates were voiced by Sir Percival Phillips, special correspondent of "The Daily Mail," Fenton MacPherson, of the same newspaper, and William Mosses, J. P., who had a prominent part in the British Labor Ministry during the war.

Mr. MacPherson also noted that the welfare facilities offered by the American plant were much more elaborate than in England and that equipment and quarters were more beneficial. This was evidently the result, he observed, of the frequent scrapping of plants here to make way for expansion and development. His countrymen are loath, he said, to tear down a building that has served twenty years or more.

Mr. Mosses dwelt on the turnover capacity of the American employee. The average industrial worker here, he noted, was of as high moral type as his British confrere, and is much better equipped for his job both with respect to knowledge and tools. "There is no doubt," he commented, "that with this high rate of production the American worker earns his pay."

. . . . and
Easy Reading Begins
when you change to

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

IONIC No. 5

NOW
being used by 495 newspapers

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE CO.
BROOKLYN, NEW YORK
SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS
CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO
Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

LINOTYPED IN THE GARAMOND FAMILY, SPECIMEN IN 7 PT. NO. 2 AND 7 PT. IONIC NO. 5

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

David Lee Elected Vice-President of Charles C. Green Advertising Agency—Reese Joins Buchen Company—Chicago Agency Changes Its Name

DAVID D. LEE has been elected vice-president and director of the Charles C. Green Advertising Agency, New York. Mr. Lee has been associated with this same agency for the last three years. He is now succeeding the late Harry M. Graces. Previous to his present connection Mr. Lee was the senior partner with the firm of Lee and Williamson, publishers' representatives.

C. E. Reese has joined the copy staff of the Buchen Company, Chicago advertising agency. Until recently, Mr. Reese was editor of Gas Engineering and Appliance Catalog, and associate editor of Robbins Publishing Company paper.

Reed G. Landis of Chicago announces a change in the name of his advertising agency, from Arnold Joerns Company to Reed G. Landis Company, effective at once. Coincident with the change of name is the resignation of Mr. Joerns as president and Mr. Landis' election to that office. The other officers are: David D. Cooke, vice-president; and William J. Cleary, secretary and treasurer. The personnel of the agency staff will remain the same as before the change of name.

Edward H. Gardner, professor of business administration in charge of marketing and advertising of the University of Wisconsin, is spending a year's leave of absence on the staff of the Chicago office of the J. Walter Thompson Company.

T. J. Laurimore is now a member of the staff of the Stanley H. Jack Company, Inc., Omaha, Neb. advertising agency.

Harry Atlis has joined the art staff of L. Jay Hannah & Co., Chicago advertising agency.

G. Allen Reeder, Inc., now in the Graybar Building, New York, is handling the export advertising accounts of the Buxton Keytainer, William Schall & Co., Standard Varnish Works, Toch Brothers, and Fellows Medical Manufacturing Company.

L. R. Northrup, of Erwin, Wasey & Co., Chicago has been appointed chairman of the committee in charge of the annual convention of the American Advertising Agencies Association, which will be held in Washington, D. C., Oct. 26-27.

W. P. Lloyd, formerly art director of the Charles Daniel Frey Company is now with the Geyer Company, Dayton, in the same capacity. He has in the past been art director for Henri, Hurst & McDonald and H. K. McCann. Ray C. Beery, formerly copy chief of Ruthrauff & Ryan, Inc., of New York and author of various works on child training for parents and school teachers, has joined the staff of the same agency as an account executive. Mr. Beery was for a number of years advertising manager of the Beery School of Horsemanship. He is the author of standard works on schol discipline.

REPRESENTING THE NEWSPAPERS

E. J. TOOMY, for the past four years, connected with the advertising department of the Chicago Tribune and for the last two years working out of the Tribune's Eastern office on national business has joined the sales staff of the New York office, of the S. C. Beckwith Special Agency.

Prudden, King & Prudden has been appointed to represent the Rockville Centre (N. Y.) Nassau Daily Review in the national field.

Stephen F. Needham has joined the Chicago staff of Allied Newspapers, Inc. Mr. Needham was previously with the advertising staff of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Cone, Rothenburg & Noee, Inc., has taken over the representation of the New Bedford (Mass.) Times for the United States and Canada except the New England territory.

TRIP TO COLOGNE IS PRIZE FOR STUDENTS

Four Winners to Have Free Trips to International Press Exhibition Next Year—New Committees Named

Four American students of printing, advertising or journalism will be given free trips to Europe next summer to attend the International Press Exhibition in Cologne, George French, executive secretary of the American Committee, announced at a meeting of the committee at the Advertising Club this week. The offer has been made by Dr. Ernst Esch, president of the exhibition, and a contest, the exact nature of which has not yet been determined, will decide the winners.

Hugh O'Donnell, New York Times; Dr. James Melvin Lee, New York University; Frederick M. Feiker, Associated Business Papers, and James O'Shaughnessy, American Association of Advertising Agencies, comprise the contest committee.

Two students will be selected from high schools and two from schools of journalism.

James W. Brown, publisher of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, was named vice-chairman of the American committee.

Mr. French also announced the appointment of sub-committee chairmen to provide for participation in the exhibition of various branches of American advertising, printing and journalism. Victor F. Ridder of the Journal of Commerce and Mr. O'Donnell are joint chairmen of the Newspaper Committee; Gilbert T. Hodges, New York Sun and Frank A. Munsey Companies, Periodicals; John Clyde Oswald, New York Employing Printers Association; Production Machinery, Edward F. Bartlett, Bartlett-Orr Press, Printing and Typography; Frederick E. Melcher, Publisher's Weekly, Book Making, A. J. Powers, Powers Reproduction Company, Graphic Arts; Mr. O'Shaughnessy, Advertising Agencies; Philip L. Thomson, Western Electric Company, Advertising; Dr. Lee, Journalism; Mr. Feiker, Business Papers; Orlando C. Horn, Audit Bureau of Circulations. Mr. Ridder is treasurer of the American Committee and Dr. Lee assistant treasurer.

The committee will meet again on Aug. 29, at the Advertising Club of New York.

RACE EDITION BY PLANE

The Albany (N. Y.) Evening News has begun using an airplane to speed the delivery of its final, or pink, sporting edition to Saratoga Springs, during the annual racing season.

PLAN PILGRIMAGE TO HARRIS' BIRTHPLACE

Georgia Editors Will Honor Memory of Famous Southern Writer During 41st Annual Convention

Georgia editors will make a pilgrimage to the birthplace of Joel Chandler Harris, creator of the famous "Uncle Remus" stories, during their 41st annual convention to be held at Eatonton, Ga., August 22-24.

Putnam county, in which Eatonton is located, is one of the historic localities of the state, not only being the birthplace of Joel Chandler Harris, but also the home of the famous old Georgia paper, The Countryman, published by Joseph A. Turner, on his plantation nine miles from the railroad station. It was here that Harris began his apprenticeship as a printer and newspaperman.

The famous county got its name from General Israel Putnam, and the town of Eatonton was named after a Connecticut Yankee, General Eaton, who helped to win the wilderness from the Indians 150 years ago. William H. Seward, secretary of state in President Lincoln's cabinet lived in Putnam county as a young man and taught school there.

More than twenty speakers will address the convention, according to Ernest Camp, editor of the Walton Tribune, Monroe, Ga., president of the association.

William C. Wood, superintendent of the division of classification, post office department, Washington, D. C., will speak on the "Postage Laws and the Press."

Preston S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Company, will address the convention on "Building Georgia," and Rufus W. Weaver, president of Mercer University will talk on schools of journalism.

KANSAS CITY REALTOR BEST ADVERTISERS

Win First Prize at Seattle Convention—Systematic Community Advertising Urged by Speakers

Awards for the best newspaper advertisements in attractive campaigns for the last 52 weeks featured the recent convention in Seattle of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. An advertising resolution adopted by the body urges further systematic real estate campaigns of a community, institutional nature, throughout the nation.

The realty board of Kansas City, Mo., was awarded first prize in the class of newspaper advertising contest, for its outstanding achievement in the history of community realty advertising and the notable campaign setting forth home ownership and real estate investment. The realty boards of Thurston-Mason counties of the state of Washington, and those of Longview, Wash., Pocatello, Idaho, and Orlando, Fla., were given honorable mention in this contest.

Judges of the contest were Mrs. W. B. Wright, J. Fred Braid, and two members of the staff of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Homer Buckley and Wood Wright.

During the progress of the convention real estate newspaper editors got together at the Seattle Press Club and launched the movement to form a national association of the real estate editors of newspapers. At a complimentary dinner to 60 visiting newspaper men, representing the real estate sections of metropolitan papers, preliminary steps for the formation of the permanent national association of real estate editors were taken.

ADDRESS WANTED

The present whereabouts of W. Yonhill, a newspaper man, last heard from in Olympia, Wash., would be very much appreciated by his sister, Lyda Y. M. Feggan, Grace Hospital, Detroit, Mich.

REMINDS BAR OF ITS DUTY TO PUBLIC

Vincennes, Ind., Publisher Takes Lawyers to Task for Indifference to Political Corruption in State

In an "open letter" to the Indiana Bar Association through its president, James A. VanOsdol of Anderson, Thomas H. Adams, editor of the Vincennes Commercial and head of the press probe committee of the Indiana Republican Editorial Association, this week asked that body if it did not have "just as great a duty to perform as the press."

Referring to the charges of political corruption which he made nearly a year ago and which have resulted in a number of investigations over the state, Adams pointed out a "number of vital events that have penetrated the very soul of Indiana in the last two years" and asked the association "whether or not it is incumbent on the bar association to take cognizance of illegal and unfair practices with a view to regulating evil things that are going on."

Taking a fling at what he termed "the abject and picturesque staging of the Legislature" and the "illegally drawn juries," Adams inquired if "bar associations proposed to abandon the practice of law by books and resort hereafter only to trickery of the alleged 'do and don't' jury system and 'do and don't' Legislature."

Mr. VanOsdol acknowledged receipt of the letter and said he replied, but refused to make public what he said or whether he would take any action with the bar association.

BUILDING $250,000 PLANT

Construction Work Starts on New Home for Muskegon Chronicle

Work on the new home of the Muskegon (Mich.) Chronicle has been started by the Booth Publishing company. The contract was awarded recently to the Strom Construction company. The contract price was not announced, but it is expected that the two-story building will cost around $250,000. A building permit for the general contract placed the cost at $183,000.

The building is to be completed by Feb. 1, 1928, and it is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy about April 1.

The basement will furnish storage space and will house the heating plant. The press room, carrier boys' room and mailing room will be on the first floor at the rear. The main office, manager's office, advertising and circulation departments will be located on the first floor. The editorial rooms and composing room will be on the second floor.

The decision to erect a new home for the Muskegon daily is in accordance with the building program of the Booth Publishing company. The new home of the Jackson Citizen Patriot was completed recently. New homes have been built during the last few years for the Kalamazoo Gazette and the Flint Journal, and Saginaw Daily News.

JOINS OKLAHOMA SCHOOL

Professor John H. Casey of the school of journalism of the University of Missouri has been named as associate professor in journalism, University of Oklahoma, and will begin his duties early in September, H. H. Herbert, director of the Oklahoma school, has announced. At the same time a full curriculum in community and rural journalism and newspaper business management will start.

WORK STARTS ON PLANT

Sinking of caissons and breaking of ground for the new building of the Chicago Evening Post was started two weeks ago on Wacker drive and Fork avenue. The huge new structure, the first four floors of which will be occupied by the Post, is expected to be ready for occupancy by May 1, 1928.

JOINS NATIONAL ADVERTISER

J. Howard MacKay has joined the advertising department of the Procter & Gamble Company, Cincinnati.

WITH THE GENERAL ADVERTISERS

Postum Company, Inc., Buys Richard Hellman, Inc.—Campaign for Sonora Phonograph—Railroad Appeals to Motorists in Advertising Drive

POSTUM COMPANY, Inc., New York, of which Ralph Starr Butler is advertising manager, has entered into a contract with the controlling interest of Richard Hellman, Inc., whereby Postum will purchase the entire business and assets of the latter company.

On Aug. 12, the consolidation of the Postum Company and the Walter Baker & Co., Ltd., became effective. The Baker advertising is now under Mr. Butler's direction while the advertising agency of Barton, Durstine & Osborne is continuing to place the business.

A newspaper and magazine campaign is now being prepared by the Campbell-Ewald Company for the Sonora Phonograph Company, manufacturers of radio receiving sets and phonographs. The Sonora Company recently moved its general offices from New York to Saginaw, Mich., where its factories are located.

The Boston & Maine railroad has started a series of advertisements in newspapers adjacent to Boston, in its campaign to turn automobilists from traveling to work in their automobiles to the use of the railroad. The advertisements stress the points that one can reach Boston much sooner, enjoy smoother riding, rest during the trip and experience no parking difficulties. The ads have been inserted in newspapers within a radius of about 200 miles from Boston, and comprise different series for each week.

A decision absolving the Meadows Manufacturing Company of Bloomington, Ind., of charges of unfair competition with the Maytag Washing Machine Company of Newton, Iowa, was handed down by Judge Louis FitzHenry in federal court, Bloomington, this week. The Meadows answer to the Maytag bill of complaint was sustained in every particular. "The effect of granting the relief prayed in this bill would be to give the plaintiff gratuitously a monopoly more effective than that of the unobtainable patent in the ratio of eternity to 17 years," the court said, in summarizing a 38-page opinion, which covered volumes of testimony and evidence submitted during several weeks the case was before the court. "The evidence is sufficient to fix the responsibility for spreading of false and injurious propaganda against the defendant upon the plaintiff."

Two hundred and eight metropolitan daily newspapers and 29 magazines will advertise the products of the W. A. Sheaffer Pen Company during the fall campaign. The newspaper copy was to be released beginning Aug. 22. Carl K. Hart is advertising manager of the firm. He is scheduled to speak on the value of newspaper advertising before the Worcester (Mass.) Advertising Club, Oct. 12.

George O. Everett, formerly a member of the staff of Barton, Durstine & Osborne, Inc., New York advertising agency, has been appointed advertising director of A. B. Kirschbaum Company, Philadelphia, succeeding Walter C. Hellman resigned.

The executive committee of the Association of National Advertisers will meet at Cape May, N. J., next Thursday, Aug. 25.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

Classified Ads Obtained Settlers for Oregon Farms—A Realtor Looks at the Classified Page—Robert Dunn Resigns in San Antonio

USE of classified advertisements in newspapers of the middle west and south resulted in bringing of 2,600 families to the state of Oregon to settle the farms there, according to W. G. Ide, manager of the Oregon State Chamber of Commerce.

The cost per inquiry was about $1 each, Mr. Ide reported. The second year's advertising was much better; and the third year was still better, the cost being reduced from $1 per inquiry to 30 cents.

Ray Mackey, of the Ray Mackey Realty Company, San Antonio, Tex., a big user of classified advertisements, recently expressed his opinion on how the classified sections should be arranged.

"I believe," he said, "that no heading of an advertisement in the classified section should be in a larger or heavier type than the type used in the classification heading. For effectiveness I believe it should be considerably smaller. I believe the newspapers should be very strict and not run any advertisements except in the classification the wording of the advertisement calls for regardless of where the advertiser wants it. I believe that one reason the classified sections are not patronized more is because those who turn to it lose too much time in finding what they want.

"I believe the newspapers should use the display ads to help build up the classified section; to let those readers who are in the market for certain things know that that market can be satisfied in the classified section."

Robert I. E. Dunn has resigned as classified advertising manager of the San Antonio Express and Evening News.

Edgar M. Lazarus, formerly advertising manager of the Webster (Mass.) Evening Times, and more recently advertising manager of the Morristown (N. J.) Jerseyman has joined the classified advertising department of the Easton (Pa.) Express.

NEW CHRYSLER CAR

Advertising Columns Take on Atmosphere of Thriller Stories

Advertising columns of the newspapers these days are taking on the atmosphere of a thriller story. Business observers believe that a battle of automobile giants is scheduled for the fall, and the distant rumble as of gun carriages moving up for action, which is now being heard, is said to constitute the first chapter.

Announcement was made in advertisements this week that Walter P. Chrysler, president of the Chrysler Company, would make public on Saturday plans concerning "an entirely new motor car."

"Walter P. Chrysler, motor car manufacturer," read the advertisement, "has an announcement of importance to make regarding an entirely new motor car. It will be made public in the newspapers Saturday and Sunday."

Eleven hundred newspapers, with a circulation of 25,000,000, form the backbone of the campaign for the new Chrysler 72. MacManus, Incorporated, Detroit agency, is directing the accounts.

It is not yet known when the Ford advertisements will start coming from the offices of N. W. Ayer & Son in Philadelphia. Rumors speak of a delay. Previously it was expected that the schedule would start Sept. 1.

First in Circulation in Indiana
THE INDIANAPOLIS SUNDAY STAR

First in Circulation in Terre Haute
THE TERRE HAUTE STAR DAILY AND SUNDAY

First in Circulation in Muncie
THE MUNCIE STAR DAILY AND SUNDAY

USE ALL 3 Save 4 Cents

SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE
KELLY SMITH COMPANY
New York Chicago Boston Philadelphia

Alco-Gravure Incorporated (Indianapolis Only) New York—Chicago

RARIDAN NOW WITH BRUSH-MOORE PAPERS

King Features Ohio Business Representative Named Editorial Director —Worked with Moore in Cleveland

The Brush-Moore Newspapers, Inc., publishing in five Ohio cities, this week announced appointment of John Denny Raridan as editorial director with headquarters at the Canton Repository. Mr. Raridan leaves King Features Syndicate and its allied news telegraph services, International News Service and Universal Service, after more than seven years as business representative in Ohio and states in that territory.

JOHN D. RARIDAN

The personal and business lives of Mr. Raridan and Roy D. Moore, general manager of the Brush-Moore Newspapers, have been interwoven for more than 17 years, since the "good old days" on the Cleveland Leader where both were employed in the editorial department from 1910 almost until the Leader's consolidation with the Plain Dealer. Subsequently they were together on the St. Louis Republic and with King Features Syndicate.

Mr. Raridan's appointment follows closely upon the promotion of H. R. Schaffner from business manager of the Marion Star to general business manager of the Ohio group, completing executive organization under the direction of L. H. Brush, president and Mr. Moore, general manager. James C. Woods succeeded Mr. Schaffner as business manager at Marion.

Associated with Mr. Raridan in the coordination of editorial activities are the following managing editors of Brush-Moore Newspapers: Clyde Hovis, Canton Repository; N. Edward Worstall, Steubenville Herald-Star; Murray Powers, Marion Star; Frank R. O'Hanlon, East Liverpool Review and Ralph W. Hawley, Salem News.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

MR. SWING'S STORY

LONDON, Aug. 5.

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—The facts about the attack made on American correspondents at Geneva by the Foreign Office, and referred to in your issue of July 23, are as follows:—

Cesar Saerchinger of the Evening Post bureau called at the Foreign Office and was seen by one of the officials assigned to receive the press, (not the head of the Press Department). This official made certain criticisms of the American correspondents at Geneva. He further criticized someone whom I shall not name, and cautioned Mr. Saerchinger not to say that this particular criticism had emanated from the Foreign Office, adding: "Obviously it would not do for the Foreign Office to critize so-and-so." In the course of the interview, the official gave information about tonnage figures being used at Geneva, and cautioned Mr. Saerchinger not to quote them as coming from official sources. Both these cautions were scrupulously observed.

Mr. Saerchinger immediately telephoned the interview to me at the Evening Post office, and I was at pains to make sure that no restrictions had been put on him as to using the criticism of the American correspondents.

Subsequently the official at the Foreign Office complained to me that a well known rule had been violated in quoting the Foreign Office at all. For five years I have repeatedly (though usually indirectly) quoted the Foreign Office. I have never been rebuked for it.

The same official, moreover, told me he meant the material to be used and his objection was to the words: "foreign office." If the same statement had been published, ascribed instead to "official circles," he asserted, no objection would have been raised.

Now you quote Kent Cooper of the Associated Press as having heard from his staff correspondent abroad that the statement was made "in confidence," and F. T. Birchall, of the New York Times, explaining that he had checked the Swing dispatch and was satisfied that it was a "private conversation, and not a formal statement for publication." A. R. Holcombe of the New York Herald Tribune you also quote as saying on the authority of Harold Scarborough that "no statement had been given out by the Foreign Office attacking the American correspondents."

It is true that the Foreign Office repudiated the statement. The official in question subsequently told me he distinctly remembers cautioning Mr. Saerchinger several times not to use the criticism as coming from the Foreign Office. Mr. Saerchinger's memory is squarely to the contrary, and he made a complete report on that conversation within five minutes after it was held. As there were no witnesses present during the interview, this phase of the question resolves itself into a test of memory. This official has since written me agreeing that there had been a "misunderstanding."

My conviction is that the remarks made in the conversation were legitimately used. Even if I am mistaken, the worst charge there can be is that "official circles" should have been inserted in place of "foreign office" as the origin. And this does not imply the publication of a private conversation, nor the breach of confidence, as Mr. Cooper and Mr. Birchall would seem to charge.

I am sure they did not understand that they were being cited in a way that might appear to reflect on me, and that it was not your intention to use their statements to any such effect. They are much too experienced to jump at the conclusion, in a conflict of evidence with a government department, that it is the newspaper correspondent who must be in the wrong. I cannot believe they or you were aware there was any such conflict, because no effort was made by the New York Times and the New York Herald Tribune in London, to find out from me my version of what had taken place.

Anyhow, that is the history of the dispatch, and I shall be glad if you care to publish it. You speak of "that intangible line between private conversation and a statement for publication." In London the line is not only intangible, it actually moves. Remarks made in conversation, and not intended to be confidential, become private before a bewildered correspondent can defend himself from the appearance of treachery.

Yours very sincerely,
RAYMOND GRAM SWING,
London Correspondent,
New York Evening Post.

RADIO PRESS AGENT REPLIES

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: You can please some of the people all of the time, or all of the people some of the time. But you cannot please all the people all of the time. And there are a few that cannot be pleased at any time. This is my observation as an ex-radio editor, now press agent for Radio Station WGBS. New York.

A press agent's job depends upon two things. The first, of course, is to get his stuff printed. But said stuff must be beneficial to the station and its owners. It is difficult to stage a crime wave in a broadcast studio. If it were possible to break a story along the lines of "DIRECTOR OF STATION XYZ BEATS WIFE WITH OSCILLOGRAPH" or "RUTH AND JUDD BROADCAST DUET FROM STATION JAZZ" or even "SADIST CULT'S STRANGE LOVE RITES INVADE STATION QED" it would admittedly be interesting, from the newspaper standpoint. But even if such occurrences did transpire, the P. A. would be hired to keep the stories out of the paper rather than to get them in.

The first thing a P. A. does when he gets a job with a new station is to make the Grand Tour of the papers, gladhanding the boys. "What kind of stuff do you want, old man?" he asks each radio editor. And what is the reply? The answer is infallibly and invariably "Oh, just hand out the usual line."

The reason for such an answer is that radio editors (with only a very few exceptions) select their fillers to please the readers of the papers. And those readers would rather be told that a four-year-old colored boy is hopelessly enamored of Kitty McClinsky, the beautiful blue-eyed blonde who is hostess at station ABCD than that Miss McClinsky studied "under" John Doe, the world-famous coach. It does make more interesting reading, at that.

One story, in particular, that emanated from WGBS got a good break from the boys at the editorial desks. It started out like this:—

"The other day we asked a young lady, "Dearest, do you like marimbas?" And she replied, "Why, honeybunch, you know I've never tasted any." We thereupon told her to listen in on station WGBS at 9:00 P. M. Sunday . . . . etc., etc., ad desperandum"

And THEY USED IT. I don't know why, either, unless it was because it is the sort of nonsensical, damphool thing that is, now and then, relished by the wisest men.

But here is an invitation to all radio editors, whether they agree with the ideas set forth herein or not. Write to the author, Robert Eichberg, in care of Radio Station WGBS, Gimbel Brothers, New York City. Tell what kind of publicity you want to get and he will see that a consensus is compiled and published in such a manner that it should reach the publicity man of each important station in the country.

ROBERT EICHBERG

WRONG PRICES IN ADS

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: I have had an opportunity to read an article on page 14 of your July 9 issue purporting to contain the opinion of attorneys on the legal nature and obligation of a published advertisement of goods for sale at a price, and because the subject is of some interest I venture to write to you about it.

It seems to me that the article is as "inconclusive" as the discussion referred to at its beginning. The opinion begins by putting the question, "is the advertisement an offer or is it a mere solicitation for offers?"

The question is then solved, not by any process of reasoning or of demonstration, but merely by assuming the desired answer in the next to the last paragraph of the first column.

In this paragraph, however, occurs the phrase "under the above authorities." No authorities have been cited down to that point and only one appears in the whole article. My first guess is that in preparing the opinion for your publication something was omitted from it.

The opinion correctly states the basis of decision to be the intention of the advertiser. The existence of such an intention is a mater of fact, to be ascertained first from the conduct of the particular parties (which in this case probably means exclusively from the advertisement itself) and possibly beyond that, from the general custom of such advertisers. The opinion entirely fails to discuss the nature of this inquiry.

The discussion of special damages, in respect to the advertiser's duty to sell at the misstated price, is equally unenlightening. The general necessity for notice to the offendnig party is stated in the last paragraph of the second column. But it is obvious that the publisher has all the knowledge which is commonly necessary to charge a person in his position. From the copy furnished him by the advertiser he knows what the correct price is and from his own act he knows what the mistake is; and he is certainly aware of the common course of conduct pursued by his advertisers.

With respect to the case of Georgian Company vs. Bloom, 108 Southeastern 813 the Georgia Court did hold that an advertisement is "a mere invitation to enter into a bargain, and is not an offer." But this opinion is rested by the Court upon the Civil Code of Georgia 1910, Section 4106. That statute is not before me but I gather from American Digest, Volume 13A, Page 1812, where this case is cited, that the statute provides, perhaps among other things, "that there must be an identification of the thing sold." It might be assumed from this that an advertisement offering ten blankets at a price per each is a solicitation and not an offer, while an advertisement describing one blanket might have just the opposite effect; and this is probably not the true basis of distinction between the cases.

Yours very truly,
EDMUND R. BECKWITH.

NEA Service newspictures are always on top of the news—or ahead of it.

NEA Service, Inc.,
1200 West Third Street
CLEVELAND, OHIO

Whenever you see a dispatch signed by

David Lawrence

on national politics and economics you know the paper that prints it has exclusive city-of-publication rights to the dispatch of this member of

CONSOLIDATED PRESS

Have you Sent for Your Copy of The New York Times Manual of Typographical Standards?

Every one interested in good typography and newspaper production will find The Times Manual of Typographical Standards, the third edition of which has recently been issued, a book of practical usefulness and value. In 96 pages the practices of good advertising reproduction are explained; the handling of cuts and copy; matrices and electrotypes; the mezzograph screen; high-light halftone, etc.

J. W. Magers, Assistant to the General Manager of The St. Paul Dispatch, says: "In our opinion, this publication sets gauges which every newspaper publisher ought to have constantly before him. When the day arrives that the preponderance of newspapers in their typographic make-up approximate the standard you have set, there will be brought about a betterment in the handling of the printed word and illustrations."

SENT POSTPAID FOR $1.50

Address
The New York Times Co.
Times Square New York

INSURANCE AGENTS MAY ADVERTISE

National Body Is Developing Program Which Will Stress Ethical Standards and Help Local Agents Through Newspapers

The National Association of Insurance Agents has announced a plan for a joint advertising campaign which its executive committee is considering.

The advertising will feature the emblem of the association and will stress the ethical standards on which the members conduct their business and their ideals of service to clients and the public.

"The aim of any national advertising campaign for local agents," the association says in its announcement, "should be an economic investment by a group of men in productive publicity—a business and good-will builder. Our proposed service is to be rendered the members by the national association in response to their expressed desires. It will be available only to members of the state and national associations.

"The plan will call for a permanent electrotype that will leave generous space for the type copy which will change in each issue and be set locally. Illustrations, which are so helpful with timely messages particularly, will find ample room in the space left for changing copy.

"We bring this advertising program to the attention of the organized agents in the belief that it will help them in their business. It will do more. It will educate the public; it will drive home the necessity of agents in insurance and will create a greater demand for additional business through the American agency system."

AD TIPS

George Batten Company, 383 Madison avenue, New York. Placing accounts for the Watson Stabilator Company, Philadelphia.

Austin Bement, Inc., Wrigley Bldg., Chicago. Issuing contracts to newspapers on C. S. Dent Co., Detroit, Mich.

Blackett & Sample, 58 East Washington street, Chicago. Are issuing renewal contracts to a list of newspapers in the South on Wander & Co., Chicago (Ovaltine). Issuing renewal contracts to newspapers generally on Northern Paper Mills, Green Bay, Wis.

Henry P. Boynton Company, Union Mortgage Building, Cleveland, O. Is placing the account of the Euclid Chemical Company, Cleveland.

Glen Buck Company, 39 South La Salle street, Chicago. Is issuing renewal contracts to newspapers on the Shaeffer Pen Co., Fort Madison, Ia.

Burns-Hall Advertising Agency, 137 Second street, Milwaukee, Wis. Placing the advertising of James Heddon's Sons, Dowagiac, Mich., manufacturers of rods, reels, baits, tackle,, etc.

Capehart-Carey Corporation, 64 W. Randolph street, Chicago. Will direct the advertising of Baer, Eisendrath & Company, Chicago, bond and investment house.

Chambers Agency, 551 5th avenue, New York. Now handling account of the Keen Waving Company, permanent waving machines, New York.

Nelson Chesman & Co., 1127 Pine street, St. Louis, Mo. Is issuing renewal contracts to newspapers generally on Tonsiline Company, Canton, O. Issuing renewals to newspapers generally on A. H. Lewis Medicine Company, St. Louis.

Collins-Kirk, Inc., 750 No. Michigan avenue, Chicago. Handling the advertising of John F. Jelke Company, 759 So. Washtonaw avenue, Chicago, manufacturers of "Jelke Good Luck" margarine.

Dauchy Company, 9 Murray street, New York. Now handling account of the Engineers Service Company, New York.

Freeze & Vogel, Inc., 377 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee. Reported to have secured account of the Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Company, West Allis, Wis.

Philip Gray Advertising Company, 307 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Is placing the account of Tyrman Company, radio manufacturers.

Gorman Company, Inc., 49 West 45th street, New York. Appointed to direct the advertising of the Scutan Company, Inc., New York, for their product "Scutan," a waterproof paper for industrial use.

Charles C. Green Advertising Agency, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa. Appointed to take charge of the advertising of Arthur Perry & Company, Philadelphia.

Green & Van Sant Co., 401 Citizens National Bank Building, Baltimore, Md. Placing the advertising of the Sealright Company, Inc., Fulton, N. Y., manufacturers of Sealright Liquid-Tight Containers, etc.

Ralph H. Jones Co., 431 Main street, Cincinnati, O. Is issuing some copy on the Dalton Adding Machine Company (Rand Division) to a few newspapers in scattered points.

H. W. Kastor & Sons Company, 14 East Jackson boulevard, Chicago. Now placing the account of Grigsby-Grunow-Hinds Radio Company, Chicago.

Joseph Katz Company, 16 East Mount Vernon Place, Baltimore. Now handling account for the Gelfand Mfg. Company, mayonnaise, Baltimore.

H. K. McCann Company, National City Bldg., Cleveland, O. Is issuing schedules to newspapers on the Perfection Stove Company, Cleveland.

Eugene McGuckin Company, 1600 Arch street, Philadelphia. Placing account for the Philadelphia Storage Battery Company, Philco Storage Battery, Philadelphia, and the Aluminum Cooking Utensil Company, Wear Ever Utensils, New Kensington, Pa.

Matos Advertising Company, Bulletin Bldg., Philadelphia. Again making contracts with newspapers in various sections for T. J. Doyle, Philadelphia.

Lewis H. Mertz & Sons, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Is now placing the account of the Continental Scale Works, Chicago (Health-O-Meter).

Michaels & Heath, Inc., 420 Lexington avenue, New York. Has secured accounts of the John G. Paton Company, Inc., and the U. S. Mineral Wool Company, New York.

Morse Advertising Agency, 63-71 Milwaukee avenue, Detroit, Mich. Making up lists and placing advertising of the Herpicide Company, 63 Milwaukee avenue, W., Detroit, Mich., manufacturrs of "Newbro's Herpicide."

Morris-Harris Company, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Placing the account of the Reva Corporation, makers of a hair tonic, Chicago.

J. X. Netter, Inc., 67 West 44th street, New York. Placing account for Beneat Perfect Hair Dressing Company, New York.

New York Advertising Agency, 441 Lexington avenue, New York. Placing the account of the Mystic Cream Company, 2 W. Main street, Middletown, N. Y., manufacturers of "Mystic" vanishing cream and face powder.

Pratt-Moore Advertising Company, 1926 Ford Building, Detroit. Placing account for the Miracle Products Company, Detroit.

Quinlan Advertising Company, 35 East Wacker drive, Chicago. Placing the advertising of the Boyer Laboratories, Chicago (Cosmetics).

Sehl Advertising Agency, 360 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Issuing schedules to newspapers generally on Calumet Baking Powder Company, Chicago.

Sidener, Van Riper & Keeling, Inc., 1205 Merchants Bank Building, Indianapolis, placing the account of J. C. Haartz Company, New Haven, Conn., manufacturers "Duro Gloss" raincoats, sport coats, top material, top finish and top patches.

United Advertising Agency Inc. Fifth avenue at 33d street, New York. Will start an advertising campaign to introduce a new type of vanity case for E. & J. Bass, Inc., 339 Fifth avenue, New York.

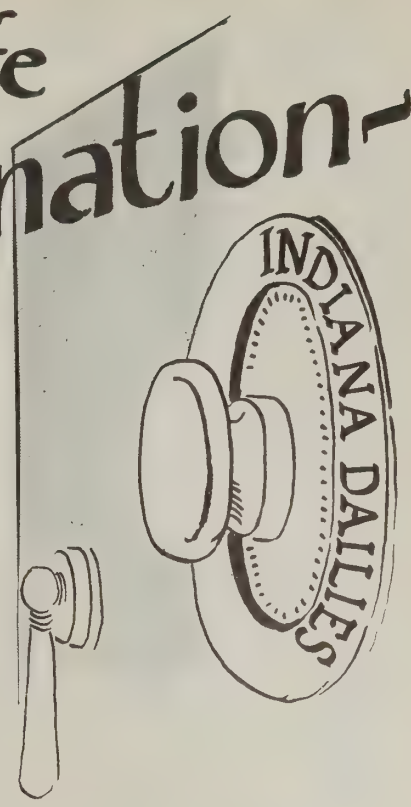
Whipple & Black, Inc., 2010 Washington Boulevard Building, Detroit. Placing orders with some Ohio papers for the Cope-Swift Company, safety washer dryer, Detroit.

ANOTHER MYTH SHATTERED

Ralph E. Renaud, N. Y. Evening Post, Comments on Sobriety in Foreign Field

American correspondents in Berlin do not get their news with the gossip as they drink beer at the Adlon bar, nor at the famous bars of Paris, London, Rome or Madrid.

Thus another myth was shattered, when Ralph E. Renaud, managing editor of the New York Evening Post, returned to this country last week from six weeks' tour of the Evening Post foreign bureaus, commenting on the sobriety of the American newspaper men in England and the continent.



"I just couldn't get Raymond Swing, our London man, to take a drink," said Mr. Renaud. "And I know Dorothy Thompson, who covers Berlin for us, never goes to the Adlon bar."

Mr. Renaud said the prohibition idea has spread abroad.

"I can remember," he continued, "when in this country you couldn't get out a paper unless everyone on the staff was drunk. That's all changed now, both in this country and in the foreign offices. In this office it is well known that only two offences of this sort are allowed. A man here goes out with his second flagrant drunk."

Mrs. Renaud accompanied her husband abroad. In France they engaged an automobile and motored through the southern part of the country.

The Safe Combination—

to Indiana's Buying Power

This combination of Indiana's daily Newspapers opens the way to reach the buying power of nearly 700,000 families. These families are highly industrious and intelligent, who live according to the highest standards of the average well to do American Families. They are the people who read their newspapers carefully in their homes, and who have been educated to the value of the advertised brand.

That they respond liberally to well directed and well placed advertising, is evidenced by the fact that every national advertiser of any importance who once enters this market, continues to cultivate it year after year by featuring his product in the newspapers listed below.

	Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Columbus Republican .....(E)	5,027	.03
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette .....(M)	38,539	.08
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette .....(S)	30,255	.08
Fort Wayne News-Sentinel.....(E)	44,217	.10
†Frankfort Times .....(M&S)	8,231	.04
Gary Evening Post-Tribune .....(E)	17,002	.06
Huntington Press .....(M&S)	5,058	.03
Indianapolis News .....(E)	130,079	.25
Lafayette Journal & Courier.. (M) 7,931 (E) 13,813	21,744	.06
††La Porte Herald-Argus .....(E)	6,839	.04
Marion Leader Tribune .....(M&S)	9,898	.04
††Shelbyville Democrat .....(E)	4,063	.25
South Bend News-Times..... (M) 9,858 (E) 18,288	28,146	.07
South Bend News-Times .....(S)	26,421	.07
South Bend Tribune...(S) 23,482...(E)	24,351	.07
Terre Haute Tribune .....(E&S)	22,973	.06

A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, March 31, 1927.
†Government Statement, October 1, 1926.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1927.

PORTLAND HONORS CURTIS

Will Be Honor Guest of Maine City on August 22

Cyrus H. K. Curtis, New York and Philadelphia publisher, will be guest of honor at a luncheon Aug. 22 to be given in Portland by the Portland (Me.) Chamber of Commerce.

The affair will mark the 15th anniversary of the presentation by Mr. Curtis to the city of Portland of the Municipal organ, second largest in the world. Mr. Curtis has just had several additions made to the instrument. A concert will be held following the luncheon.

Julian S. Mason, editor-in-chief of the New York Evening Post, who is spending his summer vacation at Small Point Beach, Me., will attend the luncheon.

Mr. Curtis last week gave $10,000 toward the $80,000 fund Maine is raising to advertise the state.

"JIMPLECUTE" TO DISAPPEAR

Oddly Named Texas Weekly to Become Daily Journal Sept. 1

S. A. Barker, formerly business representative of the United Press, has been appointed general manager of the Longview (Tex.) Daily News. Barker is a graduate of the Missouri School of Journalism. He has also been a staff correspondent for the Dallas News.

The Jefferson (Tex.) Jimplecute, a weekly, which is the third oldest newspaper in Texas, will be converted into a daily, the Jefferson Journal, on Sept. 1.

The Jimplecute was established in 1865 by the father of Miss M. I. Taylor, who "put the paper out" for 25 years, selling it to the Marshall News Messenger Publishing Company, Marshall Tex., last year.

The Jimplecute was named after an imaginary bug said to have fed on negroes shortly after the civil war.

RIDDERS WITH OWENS BUY ST. PAUL PAPERS

(Continued from page 9)

Wis., in 1906, Mr. Owens secured a position with the Minneapolis Tribune and worked for a year before entering college. During the four years of study at the university Mr. Owens continued in the employ of the Tribune and combined the theoretic knowledge gained in scientific classes with the more practical experience of a newspaper plant. This early training has proved an invaluable foundation for the rapid development of a newspaper career.

For six years after leaving the university Mr. Owens was a member of the Tribune staff and when the war broke out was in complete charge of the Department of Production. During the war Mr. Owens was an officer in a Flying Corps and was officer in charge of construction at Rich Field, Waco, Texas. After his war service, Mr. Owens joined the staff of the Louisville Courier Journal where he served for several years as Assistant to the Business Manager and also as Manager of Production.

The desire for a broader experience in the newspaper world led Mr. Owens to New York City where he joined the staff of the New York World. During the five years of his work at the World, Mr. Owens had an opportunity to demonstrate his rare knowledge of every branch of newspaper production. During the famous newspaper strike in September, 1923, Mr. Owens had the distinction of operating for two days and nights the only presses used in printing The World and Evening World. As a recognition of his unique services during the tense hours of the strike, Mr. Owens was sent abroad to inspect the color gravure equipment which was then in the process of construction in France for the New York World. Shortly after his return from Europe Mr. Owens was made Manager of Production for The World and continued in that capacity until January 1, 1927.

"SHOP TALK AT THIRTY"

MARLEN E. PEW, editor of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, and orator-in-chief of this department, last week dropped his feet from the table, stowed the corncob in a drawer, and set out on a three weeks' investigation into the hunger of fish in northern New York streams. Results of his research and other sprightly remarks will mark the resumption of Shop Talking after Labor Day.

Mr. Owens joined the Ridder Brothers as General Manager of the New York Journal of Commerce and Commercial when they purchased these papers January 1st. His association with them will continue in the joint ownership of the St. Paul Dispatch.

In the sixteen years that he has been climbing the ladder of experience Mr. Owens has been fitting himself to come back home as a leader in the work he loves and for which he has been so well trained. His highest ambition has been realized, for his life ambition has been to publish a paper devoted to the great Northwest, the country of his boyhood and university days.

Mr. Blandin, who now retires from newspaper work to attend to the Itasca Paper Mills of which he is president, is a native of the northwest, having been born at Iola, Wis., on April 2, 1873. He began newspaper work at 10 as a "printer's devil" in New London, Wis.

At 19 in St. Paul he purchased a printing outfit and started a paper at Sanborn, Minn. He also published his own small paper at Olivia, Minn., for three years, before spending a short time in the fruit and commission business. This last venture was not successful and he went to Minneapolis where he gladly accepted a job in the circulation department of the Minneapolis Tribune at $6 a week. His advance was rapid, and he soon became circulation manager.

Mr. Blandin first became connected with the St. Paul Pioneer Press in 1902 as circulation manager. He became business manager in 1910, and soon after George Thompson, editor and publisher of the Dispatch and Pioneer Press, died in 1917, he purchased one half of the shares held by Mrs. Thompson and was elected president. He acquired the Itasca Paper Company in 1916.

INCREASING SALES REVENUE BEST ROAD TO PROFITS

(Continued from page 3)

this came from advertising and the remainder, 20.96 from circulation. Net profits from operations equaled 18.85 per cent.

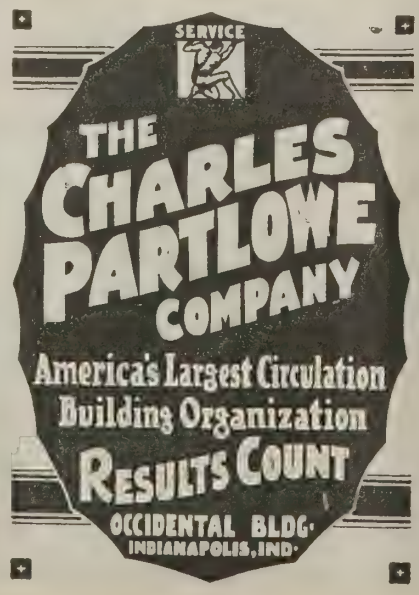
A fifth newspaper, having a circulation of 20,000, grossed $617,000 last year. Advertising accounted for 78.11 per cent of this amount, while the remainder, 21.89 per cent, was brought in by subscriptions. Net profits were 29.39 per cent.

"It seems to me that these figures show that newspaper publishers must begin to think of their profits in terms of increase in circulation revenue rather than exclusively in terms of advertising increase," Mr. Ridder continued. "While adding revenue to a paper by the linage route costs a deal of money, it realy doesn't cost anything in money or trouble to add to the profits by raising the price of the paper. Let a publisher raise his advertising rates, however, and he immediately involves himself in an expensive campaign.

"I know a newspaper within commuting distance of New York, for instance, the publisher of which right now is spending a considerable sum of money on a circulation campaign. At the present time his circulation is about 2,000 behind his competitor. He hopes to climb ahead and increase his advertising rates, thereby boosting his net profits. To me this seems a very round-about method. Discussing the subject with him, it was my suggestion that he charge more for his daily paper and increase his profits that way. But no. He prefers to be the largest paper in his town.

"This preference doesn't seem reasonable to me, especially in view of the fact that he is making a comfortable living out of his paper now. From figures he has shown me he could obtain a marked increase in his profits if he raised his circulation income by even a small percentage. If he could see it that way it would save him no little work and worry.

"Any increase in advertising would be, in my opinion, relatively unimportant in comparison with the increase in the net profit percentage he could obtain from raising his price to readers."



The average ratio between advertising and circulation revenue of the list of 10 papers reproduced with this article is 79.83 per cent advertising and 20.17 per cent circulation. Mr. Ridder said that he considered the ideal ratio was 40 per cent circulation and 60 per cent advertising.

"Of course local conditions vary, but I believe that ratio is generally possible. I have known of big profits obtained from papers running 50 per cent circulation and 50 per cent advertising," he said.

"It is possible, I know, in the case of a newspaper retailing at three cents a copy and wholesaling at two and a quarter cents on week days and retailing at ten cents on Sunday and wholesaling for seven cents. The waste comes in cut rates, excessive promotion, premiums, and highly paid solicitation."

TO AID FIGHT WRITERS

Sports editors of 200 newspapers have been invited, with their staffs, to use the news room of the Palmer House in Chicago during the period of the Dempsey-Tunney fight, which is to be staged in the Soldier Field Stadium, Sept. 22, and for the World Series games, if they are held in Chicago. Albert C. Fuller, manager of the news room, has asked to be advised of the number of men each paper will wish space reserved for, so that the necessary arrangements can be made.

Our Customers Write Our Ads

VISALIA, CALIF., DAILY TIMES SAYS—

"The DUPLEX MODEL 'A' Flat Bed Press is a reliable and dependable piece of machinery, with nothing complicated about its operation."

DUPLEX PRESSES

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS

Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

Automatic Stereotype Plate Handling Equipment, Automatic Roll Paper Lifts, Roll Paper Trucks, Track, Turntables, Switches, Bundle Lifts.

SOLD BY

The Cline Electric Mfg. Co.
Conway Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

The Capital Lift & Mfg. Co.
Manufacturers Columbus, Ohio

Industrial Center of the Inter-Mountain West—

SALT LAKE CITY

The value of manufactured products for 1926 was over $140,000,000 in the city itself —while that of Utah was over $250,000,000.

The Salt Lake Tribune

The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency
New York — Chicago — Detroit
St. Louis — Kansas City — Atlanta

M. C. Mogensen & Co., Inc.
San Francisco — Los Angeles
Seattle — Portland

Bridgeport
(Connecticut)

Per Capita Wealth $1,710.95

236,000 people within its 13 mile trading radius completly covered by the

Post Telegram

44,446 circulation — carries more local advertising than all other Bridgeport papers combined and eight times as much national advertising as its only evening contemporary.

National Representatives
GILMAN, NICOLL & RUTHMAN
New York, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco.

EW LATIN AMERICAN EWS SERVICE FORMED

r York Bureau Aims to Develop Sources—Material Is Free but Not Publicity, Backers Declare urther development of Latin Ameri- news sources will be one of the prin- l activities of the Pan-American In- nation Service, which recently opened es at 81-83 Fulton street, New York. he service has been established, ac- ling to C. C. Martin, its director- surer, to bring about closer contact a better understanding between the oles of North America and of South Central America.

The purpose of the bureau is to ac- int the newspaper readers of the three ericas with progress and development ll parts of the Western Hemisphere," Martin said. "The service is non- ctical and non-profit making, and it is in any sense a vehicle for free ad- ising or publicity.

Releases relating to Latin-America be disseminated to the newspapers the United States on educational, ntific, industrial, agricultural, bank- trade and other subjects. Releases ering United States activities of sim- nature, written in Spanish and Portu- se, will be sent to Latin-American rspapers.

The organization expects to be of nite value as a vehicle for giving ex- ssion to the views of prominent men non-political matters relating to the e Americas, and it offers its services ly to all nations of the Western misphere.

Particularly in the matter of trade in- nation, it is expected that constructive k will be accomplished by the service. ry effort will be made to provide the izens of Latin-America with informa- regarding trade outlets in this coun r and United States exporters will be ised fully of opportunities in the thern countries."

he men active in the organization e had close contact with Latin- erica for many years. The super- ion of the service is in the hands of . Martin and Colonel C. B. Smith, its retary.

he advisory committee consists of the owing men, all of New York: Frank Waterman, of the L. E. Waterman npany, Chairman; A. B. Dod, Owens ttle Company, E. B. Filsinger, Law- ce & Company, L. E. Freeman, Mom- & Freeman, E. J. Mehren, McGraw- ll Publishing Company, Inc., R. G. ens, American Manufacturers Export sociation, G. R. Parker, American Ex- ters and Importers Association, C. W. e, American Society of Mechanical gineers, Dr. J. T. Shotwell, Carnegie dowment for International Peace, W. Swingle, National Association of dit Men, Frank Van Leer, Jr., Na- nal Council of American Importers and aders, Inc., and R. S. Willis, Huxley, illis & Company.

OKLAHOMA MERGER

Three Clinton Papers Now Under Direction of W. K. Leatherock

Merger of all Clinton, Okla., newspapers into one corporation, the Clinton Publishing Company, was announced this week. The Clinton Daily News and the Clinton Chronicle and the Custer County Post-Dispatch, weekly, were acquired by the new corporation. The Post-Dispatch was merged with the Daily News and the name of the weekly publication was changed to the Custer County Chronicle.

W. K. Leatherock, who inaugurated the Daily News about two months ago, is president of the new corporation and will be publisher of both papers. J. N. McClure, who has been editor of the Post-Dispatch since May, is editor of the News under the new arrangement. Before coming to Clinton, McClure was connected with the Houghton-Mifflin Company at Boston, Mass.

W. B. Warren, who has been advertising manager of the News, will have charge of the advertising department on both papers.

Control of the new corporation will be in the hands of W. K. Leatherock and the Leatherock family, who have been interested in the publishing business in the Middle West for many years.

In connection with the consolidation, announcement was also made that construction of a new $25,000 home for the Clinton papers would be started in a few weeks.

TO STUDY ADVERTISING TREND

Charles W. Mears, counselor in marketing, Cleveland, will hold his third annual Newspaper Advertising Study in Cleveland, Sept. 15-16. The advertising situation will be analyzed for a group of newspaper business executives by Mr Mears.

CAPITAL PRESS CONFERENCES "INNOCUOUS"

(Continued from page 5)

upon which they are entitled to enlightenment. The White House press conferences, restricted though they are, work measurably to that end.

On the score of inspired publicity, presidential propaganda, I might put it, there is something that should be said. It is a favorite charge of editors who are frankly hostile to the man in the White House, that the Executive abuses the opportunity his press conferences give him, by feeding to the country only that line of information or of opinion most advantageous to himself. In a large sense this is true. Presidents do seize these opportunities. They do use them for all they are worth. By reason of them, they undertake to strengthen themselves politically or to make their policies more appealing. It is the human thing for them to do and no President with whom I have had contact as a journalist, whether Democrat or Republican, has been above this practice.

Besides, the President is exceptionally circumstanced to carry on this sort of campaigning. Whatever he says or whatever he does, no matter how trivial, it is looked upon by most newspapermen as news. His commonplaces and his platitudes get space which no other could hope for. The men assigned by their papers to report his activities naturally write whatever proceeds from him that might remotely interest the public. And the editors print it day after day, even though many of them inwardly revolt at it.

But it is by no means true that the corps of Washington correspondents lend themselves consciously or unconsciously day after day to Presidential designs in the matter of favorable publicity. It is our duty to know when we are being imposed upon by a seeker of inspired propaganda. If we do not know it, then we are unworthy to represent our papers in Washington. We ought to be sent back to the journalistic kindergarten for a little primary training in reporting.

Any one of us who cannot conscientiously abide by rules of a presidential press conference has the right to withdraw. The rules are admittedly one-sided. They are made by the man who runs the show. They handicap the rest of us, but we do not have to accept them. We can remain outside and it is a fact with which you may not be acquainted there are more than one of my associates who do remain outside, to exercise a greater freedom in what they write.

Although it is true that the relations between the press and the federal government are on a more satisfactory basis at the present time than ever before, with each side freely recognizing the rights of the other, it is by no means true that we live in a state of undisturbed brotherly love. Clashes are inevitable. Public men continue to resent many of the things we feel bound to print about them. Efforts are still made to restrain us or to divert us, and occasionally to draw and quarter us. Presidents occasionally bar an individual journalist from the White House and the executive departments as punishment for some real or fancied offence. Legislators castigate us once in a while from the floor of the House or Senate, but these things are not serious and merely reassure our editors and our readers of our independence.

Read in 4 out of 5 Homes In PEORIA

PEORIA JOURNAL-TRANSCRIPT

"The Try-Out Medium In the Try-Out City"

The World

These two newspapers offer the most powerful all-day service in New York available as a unit under a single contact. The 600,000 DAILY WORLD — EVENING WORLD readers constitute a highly concentrated force to be reckoned with in any campaign designed to effect distribution in Greater New York.

The Evening World

Pulitzer Building, New York
Tribune Tower, Chicago

The largest evening paper circulation in Baltimore

151,059
May, net paid

May, 1927, sets a new circulation record for daily papers in Baltimore.

The NEWS, with its May net paid circulation of 151,059, enjoys a margin of 24,141 copies over that of the Evening Sun, its nearest competitor.

You reach more of Baltimore through the

BALTIMORE NEWS

Largest circulation of any daily paper in the South

America's Complete Newspaper

NEW YORK Herald Tribune

Over 260,000 Homes in Michigan served by Booth Newspapers

The Grand Rapids Press
The Flint Daily Journal
The Saginaw News Courier
The Kalamazoo Gazette
The Jackson Citizen Patriot
The Bay City Times Tribune
The Muskegon Chronicle
The Ann Arbor Times News

National Advertising Representatives

I. A. KLEIN
50 East 42nd Street
New York City

J. E. LUTZ
6 N. Michigan Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

Have you a friend in Kansas City

Ask him if he doesn't read The Kansas City Star

IT WILL PAY YOU TO HIRE TRAINED MEN

Ambitious young men, schooled in every branch of the newspaper or magazine field, may be secured to fill that opening on your publication by simply making your wants known to the Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity.

No Charge To Employers

Avail yourself of this free service to replenish your staff whenever the occasion requires. Write or wire John G. Earhart, 836 Exchange Ave., Chicago, Ill., and he will put you in touch with the right man.

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

MENTION has been made of the fiction which Clarence Buddington Kelland has been contributing to the Saturday Evening Post about Don Oakes, editor and publisher of the Sugar Hollow Sentinel. Brief as my mention was, it brought me a letter from W. Bob Holland of the Miami Herald.

I feel quite sure that I am violating no covenances when I quote the following from Holland's letter:

> Those Kelland stories irritated me. I found on inquiry that few newspaper men noticed the sort of crook the hero was but when I called their attenion to his blackmailing proclivities they admitted that he had no idea of newspaper ethics or knowledge of the law.

Mr. Holland also encloses an editorial "Libelous Fiction" which recently appeared in the Miami Herald. This editorial raises some nice questions of newspaper ethics concerning the activities of the editor of the Sugar Hollow Sentinel. It is especially critical of the story where Editor Oakes wants to get hold of a rival weekly paper. Upon learning that the rival editor has sold 125 per cent of the stock of the paper to buyers who have purchased, simply because the paper was about to print something they did not want published, Oakes uses this information to run the blackmailing editor out of town. After the latter's exit, a seven-thousand-dollar bank account is turned over to the men who had been blackmailed in the buying of more stock than the paper had been authorized to issue.

Commenting on this situation, the editorial says:

> And thus, as Mr. Kelland makes Mr. Oakes boast, "I own this establishment, lock, stock and barrel, and it didn't cost me a red, auburn, cerise or otherwise cent."
>
> It is thus perfectly clear that the new owner is the same sort of despicable scoundrel as the man he run out of town by threat of imprisonment. And Mr. Kelland holds him up as a commmendable citizen, as a newspaper man of excellent habits and skill, as one who should be emulated. In previous stories this Oakes person had blackmailed a banker who had been making loans contrary to good banking principles and had obtained the county printing by suppressing news of the nefarious doings of a ring of politicians.
>
> Mr. Kelland and the editors of The Saturday Evening Post should know that newspapers, either daily or weekly, do not thrive on blackmail. They live by publishing news, not by suppressing it. Occasionally a crook gets hold of a newspaper and resorts to blackmail, but he usually goes to prison in a short time. And unless Don Oakes stops short in his blackmailing career he is headed for the penitentiary.

The question raised by Mr. Holland about newspaper standards is right to the point. Stories of successful crime are usually kept out of the Saturday Evening Post but in this instance, its editors seem to have been caught napping.

* * *

WILLIAM J. ROBERTSON, formerly editor of the Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening is the author of "The Changing South" (Boni and Liveright). This volume which is expected to appear early in October deserves mention in "Our Own World of Letters" not only because the author is a newspaper man but also because one chapter is devoted to the press of the South.

* * *

DIFFICULTIES in writing good retail copy is the subject about which Robert M. Barnett, at one time a copy writer with Macy's Department Store in New York City but now vice-president of the George L. Sullivan Company, chats in a current issue of The Journal of Retailing.

He warns against testing returns on newspaper advertising entirely by the song of the cash register. Many a good piece of copy, in his opinion, has failed to achieve its purpose of bringing people into the store because of unfavorable weather conditions.

Another difficulty is pointed out:

> Ever changing market conditions, too, bring about a change in selling methods. Merchandise which last season was a sure seller is this year a drug on the market. Mah-Jongg furnishes a splendid illustration of the futility of effort on the part of the copywriter. Almost by the time the average copywriter had learned the game thoroughly and was prepared to do some real copy about the joys of Mah-Jongg instead of merely re-hashing the manufacturers' announcement, the game was dead. The pen of a genius could hardly have sold enough sets to pay for shelf room.

Mr. Barnett then goes on to show that the copy slant of the manufacturer plays an important part in dictating what the copy writer of the store shall say in local newspapers. He frankly admits that the manufacturer's copy may have missed the biggest selling argument yet the retail copy must, in the newspapers, stick more or less to the lines drawn by the manufacturer or else lose the effect of what has been done in national advertising.

* * *

EARLY engravings in American newspapers are discussed somewhat in detail in the current issue of The Iowa Journalist—a monthly periodical published by the School of Journalism of the University of Iowa, Iowa City.

* * *

THE University of Pennsylvania has put out an interesting survey about the college man in journalism. In addition to statistics, personal opinions of newspaper executives are also given.

Here is a criticism of the school of journalism from an important managing editor in the East, "I have one criticism of the schools of journalism: they dwell so much on economics, foreign affairs, and the literary side of newspaper work, that it is difficult to get their graduates to take an interest in the city affairs that are of vital interest to our paper."

* * *

HARCOURT, BRACE & CO. announce for immediate publication "Journalism for High Schools" by William N. Otto, head of the Department of English, Shortridge High School, Indianapolis, Ind.

* * *

WORK has already been started on "The Dictionary of American Biography," according to an announcement made by The American Council of Learned Societies. Since 1924 this important work has been associated with the name of the New York Times because of a gift made that year by Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the Times. This gift of $500,000 toward the funds needed for publication, enabled the Committee of Management, representing the Council of Learned Societies, to go forward with the work. Until this gift came from Mr. Ochs, it looked as though the plan of publishing a work that would compare favorably with "The British Dictionary of National Biography" would have to be abandoned.

In spite of this handsome donation from Mr. Ochs, the Times takes no active part in the preparation of "The Dictionary of American Biography" and hence assumes no responsibility for the contents. When completed the "Dictionary" will consist of 20 volumes and will contain approximately 20,000 biographical sketches of men and women who have contributed to national progress in America. Up to the present time about half of the names to be represented have been tentatively selected.

The editor-in-chief of "The Dictionary of American Biography" is Allen Johnson who has his headquarters in Washington, D. C.

HORACE GREELEY is one of most picturesque characters in history of American journalism. Du his lifetime, he appeared more freque as a subject for the pen of the carto than any other man. Unquestionably, editorials have never been surpasse influence by those of any other Amer editor.

These facts, along with others, exp why the chapter on Horace Greele "Trumpets of Jubilee" (Harcourt, B & Co.) by Constance Mayfield Ro ought not to be overlooked in "Our World of Letters." This chapter is only one of the longest but one of most interesting and picturesque in entire volume. Greeley's connection various newspapers are given in gen and that with the New York Tribun particular.

But it is the personal character Greeley so graphically sketched in chapter that makes the volume interes to members of the working press.

Space is space—but the BEST Classified Advertising publicity justifies its daily appearance in your newspaper

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building, Philadelphia

The insignia that represents GOOD service.

Over 400 newspapers discovered a simple and practical solution to their checking proof problems, when they accepted our NEW and Complete Checking Proof Service. Under this plan the Publishers' office is relieved entirely of all detail work.

Less expensive—
Greater results.

(Two months' trial test offer)

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.
79 Madison Ave. NEW YORK — 538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO

If Quality
of circulation is your first consideration.
The Evening Star
With Sunday Morning Editions
Washington, D. C.
will have your preference—same as it has the preference of practically everyone in the National Capital.
The Star's circulation is home circulation—both quality and quantity—the kind that counts most with advertisers.
N. Y. Office—110 E. 42nd St. Dan A. Carroll
Chicago Office—Tower Building J. E. Lutz

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely by
THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
Both Members of A. B. C.
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

Detroit
Fourth Largest City
For most complete and economical coverage concentrate in one paper—
The Detroit News
Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

A NEW DEAL IN PITTSBURGH
America's fourth largest market
The Sun-Telegraph
Evening and Sunday
—The evening issue combining the former Evening Chronicle Telegraph and Evening Sun.
—The Sunday issue combining the former Sunday Post and Sunday Gazette Times.
National advertising representatives: Paul Block, Inc., 247 Park Avenue, New York; Century Bldg., Chicago; General Motors Bldg., Detroit; Little Bldg., Boston; Commonwealth Trust Bldg., Philadelphia.

After All
It's not so much how many read your story as how many put credence in it.
THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD
Goes not only into the homes but also into the hearts of 150,000 substantial families daily.
Second Largest Morning Daily in Philadelphia
Always Reliable

ray Greeley worked at his editorial desk thus described:

Bent over his high desk with his nose nearly uching it, he composed from three to four olumns a day and often more, listened to eports which he could deliver almost verbatim fterwards though he had not ceased to write, upervised details throughout the whole sheet, id often did not stir out of his chair from even in the morning until after midnight. moments of rage over mistakes he could t out a bellow which was plainly audible at ie American Museum half a square down Ann treet at the corner of Broadway, though his oice in its ordinary ranges was still husky id thin. If he could bawl in anger he also awled with jubilation; the Tribune office was noisy, nervous, highly stimulating place; that oice with its rapid changes was everywhere; reeley was an incessant talker. As a result f his shouting importunity riders—often re- ys of riders—were always posting from remote calities where events were clustering, bearing resh news for the Tribune. His tireless, rudging insistence sent a corps of printers lowly shuttling back and forth on the river oat to Albany during session of the Assembly, repared to set up the reporters' accounts on ie return voyage.

Here is a pen portrait of Greeley in ction in his legal tilt with the distinuished novelist, James Fenimore Cooper:

That touchy aristocrat had sued because of letter of Weed's which appeared in the ribune, with a few sentences of derogatory omment on the part of Greeley. Cooper won amages of two hundred dollars at a lively rial at Ballston Springs, at which each of the rotagonists spoke in his own behalf. Rushing ack to New York on one of his quick-driving rips, Greeley spread his account over twelve olumns of the Tribune; he rollicked through he story, mimicking the pompous Cooper and is even more inflated nephew, who had acted s counsel. In his long and pointed raillery ie sported with the picture of the "handsome Mr. Effingham," who in Cooper's "Homeward Bound" had unquestionably been the figure of Cooper himself. Tirelessly Greeley repeated he allusion; in the trial he had much of his rgument turn upon hypothetical questions of ppearances, inquiring whether he would be entitled to sue for libel in case Cooper pronounced him not handsome. With a heavy-anded thrust in rebuttal Cooper had replied hat in such a suit his course would be not to plead the general issue, but to justify. Greeley, missing nothing of the humor of this retort, set down the whole of it, weighty phrasing and all.

This jibe at Greeley's appearance leads the author of "Trumpets of Jubilee" to comment more in detail as follows:

Undeniably Greeley was absurd. Somewhere he had picked up an old light drab coat of Irish frieze and a battered hat of similar tone-less hue; the garments were long since out-dated; wearing them he looked more than ever the ruined ghost. Tall and gangling, he still stumbled as he walked, as though he were pushing forward on a blind errand. He was always rumpled, his pale silver-yellow hair awry under his singular headgear, his collar riding up or retreating from sight; but the phantasmal was belied by his full front glance from behind narrow spectacles, by the pursed and sudden smile which could transform his countenance into that of a happy infant.

The quotation just given possibly explains why it was so easy to put Greeley into a cartoon.

The incident about Cooper's libel suit against Greeley, however, is not complete in the volume. For that rollicking account printed in the New York Tribune, Cooper brought a second suit against Greeley. The latter this time did not defend himself but turned the case over to the distinguished lawyer. William H. Seward, who knew how to juggle cases at law so that the suit could be indefinitely postponed for trial. This second suit by Cooper against Greeley is one of the few cases where Cooper did not win the final bout in the courts. Neither did he lose. So far as I know, the case never came to trial. Cooper's libel suits against the Whig newspapers of New York almost deserve a book by themselves.

Read EDITOR & PUBLISHER Classified columns for results.

FIRST ETHICS CODE FOR PUBLICITY MEN DRAWN

Wisconsin Students of Propaganda Dissemination Adopt Rigorous Articles Governing Their Work

A code of ethics for publicity workers was drawn up by the students in "Educational and Social Service Publicity" at the University of Wisconsin school of journalism this summer. Students in the course had had both newspaper and publicity experience.

One of the outstanding points in the code of ethics was the statement that "no publicity man should submit an article to a newspaper that he would not be willing to turn in to his city editor if he were a reporter on the paper."

The belief was expressed in the code that the publicity man could assist the newspaper by discovering new fields and by stimulating news activities. Another section stated that the publicity worker should not attempt to display that which is fair and to hide that which is ugly.

The course was taught by K. E. Olson, who has had several years experience on metropolitan newspapers and in publicity work.

Following is the complete code adopted by the students:

1. We believe that because it is impossible for the newspapers to cover every phase of life there are great fields of knowledge and news that are untouched and will remain so unless those who are thoroughly capable of interpreting these fields are given an opportunity to do so.

2. We believe that publicity, if honestly done in a good cause, is a blessing to society and contributes to the sum of human knowledge and enjoyment.

3. We believe that publicity, if dishonestly done or representing a dishonest cause, is an evil and should be combatted by every member of the profession who is interested in fostering its constructive value to society.

4. We believe there is a legitimate field for publicity that has news, information or entertainment value for the newspaper reader, and insist that all publicity matter should be judged on the same scale of values as the rest of the material in the paper, and must make itself worthy of a place in the news columns only on its merits.

5. We believe that because the newspaper depend for its life on paid advertising it is unethical and dishonest to attempt to insert in news columns material which has no value to the newspaper or its readers and that benefits only the organization itself.

6. We believe that all publicity material must be absolutely true and must not attempt to display that which is fair and hide that which is ugly. If there is anything fundamentally wrong it is the publicity man's responsibility to see that this wrong is righted before attempting to give news to the public.

7. We believe that no publicity man should submit an article to a newspaper which he would not be willing to turn in to his city editor if he were a reporter on the paper.

8. We believe that publicity material must be honestly presented and without any attempt to conceal its source. The source should be plainly indicated so that there can be no misunderstanding as to its origin.

9. We believe that publicity material, to merit a place in the paper, must be not only interesting but intelligent.

10. We believe that the publicity writer can be a valuable aid to the newspaper in helping it to discover new fields which it could not otherwise reach, and in stimulating news activity through providing them with interesting material which will open up new fields for the reporter and provide opportunity for further research.

TAKES FOREIGN POST

Herbert R. Hyman Named Merchandising Chief of London Knitting Mills

Herbert R. Hyman, former newspaper man, who in more recent years has been identified with the advertising business, has just been appointed director of merchandising by the Keystone Knitting Mills, Ltd., of London, England. He will leave for Europe shortly to assume his duties with the large British hosiery concern.

For many years Mr. Hyman was connected with the editorial department of the Indianapolis Star. He acted as European correspondent for that paper prior to the war.

Upon returning to American, he became identified with the Bobbs-Merrill Publishing Company, of New York and Indianapolis, handling the sales promotional work in conjunction with the sale of Bobbs-Merrill publications.

Joining the Cole Motor Car Company as advertising manager, Mr. Hyman was responsible for the program which ultimately resulted in the creation of the once famous "Cole Aero-Eight."

When Charles M. Schwab and his associates acquired control of the Stutz Motor Car Company of America, Mr. Hyman was appointed advertising counsel by that company. Later he was then tendered a vice-presidency by the Homer McKee Advertising Agency, of Indianapolis, and was put in charge of the advertising of the Real Silk Hosiery Mills with the title of advertising counsel, a position which he held until his recent affiliation with the Keystone Knitting Mills, Ltd., of London.

NEW PRESS ORGAN

The Country Press published monthly by the Bruce Publishing Company, St. Paul, has been launched with J. R. Bruce president and F. M. McCabe vice-president. It concerns itself with problems of the small town publisher.

in

Detroit—

Free Press circulation reaches 31,000 more than the total number of families owning their own homes.

The "Free Press"

"Starts the day in Detroit"

With a stable, uninflated, liberal pursed circulation productive of greater advertising returns at lower cost.

Buffalo, The Wonder City of America

Buffalo—a profitable Market for Advertisers

Sales in Buffalo are splendid for advertising goods. Employment conditions excellent, retail and other business thriving. One newspaper will put your story over to 83% of the people—that paper is the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

Read in 4 out of 5 Buffalo Homes

EDWARD H. BUTLER
Editor and Publisher
KELLY-SMITH COMPANY
Representatives

Graybar Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Atlantic Bldg. Philadelphia
Tribune Tower Chicago, Ill.
Waterman Bldg. Boston

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE
of the
INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION

Can supply you with competent circulation men of capacity and ability capable to take entire charge of your department or to fill important posts in the department.

Address the Secretary-Treasurer please, Mr. Clarence Eyster, care Star Building, Peoria, Ill.

Largest Circulation and Largest Volume of Advertising of any Daily west of the Missouri river.

LOS ANGELES
EVENING HERALD
REPRESENTATIVES
Chicago, JOHN H. LEDERER, 910 Hearst Bldg.
San Francisco, A. J. NORRIS HILL, 610 Hearst Bldg.
New York, HERBERT W. MOLONEY, 604 Times Bldg.

first! in OHIO

Dispatch Sets the Pace

During the first six months of 1927 The Columbus Dispatch carried more paid advertising than the second Columbus paper by 4,639,750 agate lines.

For years The Columbus Dispatch has enjoyed the distinction of being first in Ohio in paid advertising volume.

NET PAID CIRCULATION

City	60,216
Suburban	28,937
Country	24,525
Total Circulation	113,678

Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO. CHICAGO — QUALITY, SERVICE, SALE — CLINE WESTINGHOUSE — CLINE SYSTEM

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control

is used by

Elkhart Truth
Elkhart, Ind.

Ask them about it

CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO.
Chicago: 111 West Washington Street
New York: 47 West 34th Street
San Francisco: First National Bank Building

ROTO-GRAVURE Sections for Newspapers & Magazines

STANDARD Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

TYPE METAL RESEARCH IS MADE PUBLIC

Findings of Government Printing Office Disclosed in Bulletin Issued by Mechanical Department of A. N. P. A.

Findings of the Government Printing Office on tests it has conducted on type metal were made public recently by the mechanical department of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, of which W. E. Wines is director.

In the handling of the metal, the report, written by E. O. Reed, chief of tests, shows the following necessary details in order to obtain the best quality:

1. The remelted metal must be carefully drossed and stirred in order to obtain satisfactory samples for analysis.

2. The addition of any metal or alloys to melted type metal should be made at a temperature of not less than 750°F. In order to introduce antimony into type metal it is alloyed first with either lead or tin.

3. In order to secure proper alloying, satisfactory means of agitation must be used. As a result of our investigations we use a block of green oak immersed in the metal and held near the bottom of the pot. This has proven very satisfactory and economical for agitating, purifying, and alloying the metal.

4. In order to remove small amounts of copper from the metal, especially linotype, it is our practice to allow the metal to partially solidify over night after correction. Any copper or unalloyed antimony present will tend to separate and come to the top as the metal is chilled. The metal is melted in the morning and the temperature raised to approximately 550°F. It is then carefully skimmed, without agitation, to remove the impurities which separated during the cooling progress. This effects a gradual reduction of the copper to about .05 per cent. Other methods using sulphur are also employed for this purpose.

5. Linotype and stereotype metal are poured at a temperature of approximately 600°F. and monotype metal at between 700°F. and 750°F.

6. All type metal alloys should be poured in water-cooled molds.

Our investigational and control work on type metals up to date indicate, that linotype metal, provided that it is not contaminated with excessive amounts of impurities, especially copper and zinc, and is not permitted to be overheated in use, will change very little in composition due to use, and that such metal can be re-used several times without appreciable change in composition. Although the metal in the Government Printing Office is analyzed daily, we would recommend checking of the composition of linotype metal in the average commercial plant about once a month, depending on its use.

However, it has been found that monotype metal should preferably be retoned after each use in order to maintain uniform quality. This is due to the fact that monotype metal is used at such a high temperature that there is more loss of tin and antimony by drossing. Monotype alloy is above the eutectic point for antimony, and all of the antimony is not chemically alloyed but a certain portion is a mechanical mixture. This free antimony tends to separate and comes to the top of the molten metal. It has been found that approximately two parts of antimony are lost to one part of tin. This is somewhat at variance with the prevailing opinion, which is that tin is lost to a greater extent than antimony.

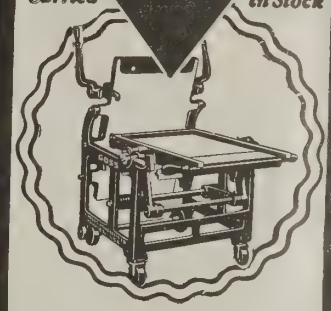
Owing to the fact that stereotype metal is poured at a low temperature, the change in composition in this metal due to re-use is about the same as with linotype metal.

The results of the work being done by the Testing Section of the Government Printing Office have clearly shown the value of technical work to the office itself and to the printing industry. The office will be pleased to co-operate with commercial printers of the country in technical investigations which will be of interest to the industry. The results of these investigations will be published for the benefit of all interested parties, Mr. Reed said.

SEEKING LOST FATHER

James H. Guilfoyle, Jr., city editor of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram and Worcester correspondent of the EDITOR & PUBLISHER, this week appealed to the New York Missing Persons Bureau, asking them to assist him in his search for his 67-year-old father, J. H. Guilfoyle, Sr., who disappeared from his home in Brooklyn last June 26.

COLUMNIST'S WIFE WRITES BO



Shelby Little, wife of Richard He Little, conductor of "A Line O'Type Two" in the Chicago Tribune, is author of a new book, "This to Th which concerns itself with chang words, one letter at a time, in the short number of changes. Mrs. Little is kno in the "Line O'Type" as Helen Her The book has an introduction by Little.

WRITES NEWSPAPER PLAY

Guy F. Lee, long a member of the st of the Chicago Tribune and now of New York Daily News, is the author "Tabloid," a play about present d journalism.

Supplies and Equipment

GOSS
STEREOTYPING MACHINERY
Carried in Stock

Fastest, most easily operated most accurate and durable flat casting box you can buy. Perfectly balanced. New design lock-up bar allows for quick change when regulating thickness of casts. Positive quick lock-up at four points on box with one lever movement. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

Modern
Composing Room Furniture

as made by us will speed up production and reduce costs—a real saving in your Pay Roll. Are you interested? If so, consult your regular dealer in printers' supplies or write us direct.

Do it now!

HAMILTON MFG. CO.
TWO RIVERS, WIS.

Drive and Control for Newspaper Presses

A representative installation, just completed, on a Hoe press is that of a 75-h.p., a-c. equipment at the Philadelphia News. This is a repeat order.

GENERAL ELECTRIC

SAVE A MINUTE

in packing a matrix and you will often beat the other fellow to the start.

Space Packing Felt that is soft, tears easily and stays put, will do it for you.

We manufacture it in four thicknesses—No. 25, No. 35, No. 40 and No. 50.

MOULDING BLANKETS all kinds.
Red and Blue Drying Blankets.
Prepared Matrix Paste.
The above are only a few of our specialties.

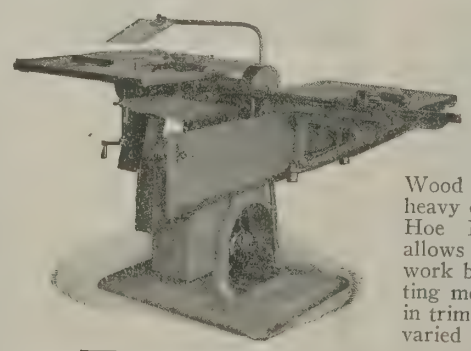
New England Newspaper Supply Co.
Worcester, Mass., U. S. A.
Cable Address NENSCO—Worcester

Rebuilt
GOSS & HOE
PRESS
BARGAINS
ALL TYPES
SEND for LIST
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.
CHICAGO – NEW YORK – LONDON

USED NEWSPAPER PRESSES

Scott 16, 24 and 32-Page Presses

GOSS 24 and 28-page presses good for black or color work, also Goss Sextuple.



HOE Pony Quadruple, Quadruple, Sextuple, Sextuple color Press, Octuple and Double Sextuple Presses.

DUPLEX Metropolitan Quadruple stereotype presses—print up to 32 pages.

Available for Early Delivery

WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY
Main Office & Factory.....Plainfield, N. J.
New York Office..Brokaw Bldg., 1457 Broadway
Chicago Office.....Monadnock Block

Hoe Combined Saw Table and Mono-Rail Trimmer

This Machine combines the advantages of the Hoe Pedestal Saw Table and the Hoe Mono-Rail Trimmer.

The Trimmer is supplied with either Style "A" Cutter Head for trimming Wood Blocks or Style "B" for extra heavy cutting on Zinc or Copper. The Hoe Patented Mono-Rail principle allows the Operator to follow the work beyond the Cutter Head permitting more speed and greater accuracy in trimming Wood or Metal Blocks of varied sizes.

IF IT'S A HOE, IT'S THE BEST

R. HOE & CO., INC., 504-520 Grand Street, New York City
7 South Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL.
Pere Marquette Bldg., NEW ORLEANS, LA.
7 Water Street, BOSTON, MASS.

Keep your message before your clients and prospects. The EDITOR & PUBLISHER is your ever-present salesman.

Employment—Equipment—Services

EDITOR & PUBLISHER Classified Advertising Information

RATES

SITUATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .50 per line
3 Times — .40 per line
ALL OTHER CLASSIFICATIONS
(Cash with Order)
1 Time — .75 per line
4 Times — .60 per line

Extra space charge at same rate per line for insertion as earned by frequency of insertion. Minimum Contract space, three lines. The Editor & Publisher reserves the right to classify, edit or reject any advertisement.

ADVERTISING

General Promotion

If You Want More Local Advertising put us to work for you selling our "Worthwhile" features. Write F. G. Hogan Syndicate, Locke Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind., or Kane, Pa.

Supplies

Folding Sheets for Art work and Benday effects. Bourges Service, Inc., 144 West 32nd Street, New York.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Brokers

Chas Paper in South for $15,000, or two-thirds interest for $10,000. Established high-grade publication with fine opportunity. Chance for advertising man. Harris-Dibble Co., 345 Madison Ave., New York.

High Grade Properties in Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Arkansas, both daily and weekly; exclusive listings; no damaging publicity; personal service in every deal; financial attention to financing. All matters absolutely confidential. High grade newspaper properties for sale. Clyde H. Knox, 851 Board of Trade Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

Three Desirable Weeklies—An opportunity for income with newspaper experience and moderate capital to purchase a group of three weekly publications in Eastern Pennsylvania which can be issued from the same plant and profitable to pay handsomely. Also very desirable weekly and job plant in New Jersey. J. B. Keller, Times Bldg., New York.

Newspaper Interest Wanted

Publisher - Editor - Manager, experienced in editorial, business and other departments, who has just built up and sold successful daily, seeks new connection. Young, energetic, resourceful. Would consider investment or temporary salary arrangement. C-869, Editor & Publisher.

Service

Out of Town Concerns. You can secure all the advantages of a New York address, including the services of established, fully furnished and equipped offices, where your interests, enquiries, callers, literature, mail, or samples will be intelligently and properly handled, for a nominal annual charge. Address (by letter only) Suite 1004, at 1841 Broadway (Columbus Circle), New York City.

CIRCULATION

Promotion

Circulation—When quick, additional circulation coverage becomes necessary, remember that for twenty years in this one line of endeavor is your proof against experimenting. Write or wire. Pacific Coast Circulation Service, Bell Block, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Circulation Builders—Blair & Austin, 1504 Century ave., Reading, Penn. Originators of Salesmanship Club Campaigns.

Talk the Man Who's Had One! In over 20 years of nation-wide experience, we have proved ourselves always able to produce greater results per dollar expended. Our circulation building campaigns, large or small, have all expert management and attention. Address us now, care of the World-Herald, Omaha, Nebr., or at any time at Box 288, Waterloo, Iowa. Myers' Circulation Organization.

Ruby Alice Dolls—Over 200 newspapers used them last year. Circulation increases ranged from 1,200 to 16,000 new readers. Price $3.00. Copy, mats, instructions. Order your sample today. Offer should start Oct. 15th. B. Pinkey, 307 Sixth avenue, New York City.

Circulation Builders—A Clean-cut, self-financing, personally conducted campaign that will make you more money now and for years to come; 20 years' experience. The Alward Syndicate, 453 W. 9th street, Erie, Pa.

Superior Circulation Builders—The W. S. Kenyon Company, 104 North Bailey Ave., Louisville, Kentucky. The circulation-building organization that has set the standard for aggressive, successful circulation campaigns for nearly twenty years.

CIRCULATION

Promotion

The World's Largest Circulation Building Organization—The only circulation-building service in Newspaperdom furnishing publishers' affidavits of the exact results of its every campaign. The Charles Partlowe Company, Occidental Building, Indianapolis.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Advertising Executive, exceptionally high class, wanted for a seven-day morning paper in the metropolitan district. A most exacting position with unusual opportunity. C-911, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Experienced, enthusiastic, aggressive, with fund of good ideas. Only daily in small New York State city. Tell your full story in first letter, which will be held in confidence. Times, Geneva, N. Y.

Correspondents—National Jewish Daily Wants Correspondents Everywhere. Jewish Daily Bulletin, 621 Broadway, New York.

Situations Wanted

Advertising—If you have live opportunity will produce results you want—increase linage and co-operation. C-897, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Capable, aggressive newspaper advertising man, twenty years' experience in all branches, desires permanent location in city of 100,000 or over. Letters of reference speak in highest terms of past work, ability and character. Located with such papers as Public Ledger, North American, Bulletin, Philadelphia; Washington Post. Married, 42. Morning or evening proposition. C-898, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Executive—Long experience in promotion of local, national and classified on metropolitan and suburban papers. Enviable record for constructive building, aggressive salesman and thorough organizer. Am seeking connection with publisher who needs a man of proven ability, initiative and a will to meet and overcome keen competition. Write for interview and record. C-905, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Executive, ten years' experience in newspaper, corporation, agency and direct mail advertising, desires permanent connection in city of 15,000 or over, with live newspaper or growing concern. A hard worker. Age 34, married, personable. Write C-872, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor, thoroughly experienced in all phases, layout, copy, long-term special pages. A money maker for newspaper in Middle West or Pacific Coast. Inquiry will bring you full story and photo. C-874, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager or Assistant to Publisher—Two and a half years' business and general manager of New York daily, where I made astonishing good record under trying conditions. Property I manage now on profit basis for first time in five years. Thoroughly understand all departments, including engraving. Successful record gained by hard work and perseverance. Savings in overhead and purchasing were enormous. Ownership conditions warrants seeking new connections. American, married, age 36, highest references. Will be available September 1st. Box C-896, Editor & Publisher.

Business Office position in newspaper office desired by young man. Has had 10 years' experience in Circulation, National Advertising and general office work. At present time in charge of national advertising and credit departments. Can furnish best references. C-909, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager—Capable, reliable and resourceful; 20 years' experience on all classes of dailies; absolutely familiar with all details. Reference furnished. C-871, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation—Young man, honest, steady, desires to connect with a live newspaper as street circulator, agent or route man. C-904, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation—Does your Circulation Department need a live wire? Young man of initiative, 7 years' newspaper experience, 4 years on metropolitan papers; thoroughly experienced in boy organization work of home delivery and news stand promotion work; desires paper in vicinity of N. Y. City. C-900, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Promotion Manager connected with combination paper, 100,000 circulation, forced to seek change. Married, family. Salary $60. References, personal interview. Wire R. C. Shelton, Telegram-Gazette, Worcester, Mass.

Circulation Manager—Morning, evening, Sunday experience. Available at once owing to recent merger. Thoroughly familiar with every detail carrier, dealer, mail promotion and office routine. Thirty-three years old, married, one child. Steady, reliable and not a floater. Can furnish first class references. C-902, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager, now employed, metropolitan daily, last 3 years. Experienced in organizing, training sales force, stabilizing costs, promotion plans and building up business. Member A. N. C. A. M; 11 years, classified and display, on four dailies, 20,000 to 180,000 circulation as salesman and executive. Has specialized on hard-to-sell propositions. Seeks connection with progressive Mid-west daily. C-907, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Classified Advertising Manager
Classified Promotion Manager

23 years' successful record, desires change from Northern city to West Coast or Southern newspaper. Member Newspaper Classified Manager's Association, 1909, took management Classified, second-string paper, city 150,000; built Classified from half-page to six pages within three years; 1921-1925, built Classified second-string paper, city 75,000, from 400,000 lines yearly, to 1,500,000; taking prestige and volume leadership from first-string paper having double the circulation; 1926, on second-string paper, 65,000 circulation, city of 250,000, reorganized department; produced average net monthly increase $4,000 over six months' period, while holding operating costs to same percentage as previous to taking charge. Was forced to leave position for same reason that had always given this paper a black eye on Classified, and made it hard to build reader-interest and reader-confidence. This was my refusal to accept and publish matrimonial and many other forms of fake, misleading, objectionable ads. Came to city where now employed last December, on agreement to manage Classified on second-string paper, but as they tied my hands to such extent that maximum production would be impossible, the deal fell through before I started. Interviewing the first-string opposition paper, was told there was no position open, so I made a position on this paper for myself, taking a pavement-pounder's job as salesman of new Classified contracts on straight commission, with thermometer at 40 below zero. January 1st to August 1st turned in 135 contracts for $10,000 new business; this being about 65 per cent of total new contract business of entire department. Had one prospect lead from office during all this time. My average weekly earnings have been $83 on this job. I am native of Illinois, age 41, married. Will accept $75 weekly salary, or salary and bonus, on one year's contract, giving full charge with free hand. Unquestioned credentials as to character, production records and ability. Start Oct. 15th or Nov. 15th. Would consider District Manager, contact man or in charge Real Estate or Automotive section on big paper. My first five years Classified apprenticeship were served on the largest St. Louis and Chicago dailies, beginning in 1904. C-901, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial and Paragraph Writer, experienced, displaced by wholesale merger, seeks new connection. Complete evidence of ability and proof of reliability. C-906, Editor & Publisher.

Editor—Some small daily publisher sadly needs my experience as editor and manager to build up his paper. C-899, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial—Experienced man of Eastern, Western and Metropolitan service, wide reading, extensively informed and able to write fluently, who has held desk and managerial positions, desires to make change from place now filled for temporary personal reasons to one with the advantage of utilizing his varied training and equipment. Especially strong on heads, news, make-up and purposeful editorial handling. Just the man for news editorship or managing editor in cities up to 100,000, either farming or industrial community. C-903; Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Advertising Executive seeks new connection. Now employed by a foremost eastern daily. Thoroughly experienced in newspaper advertising management; splendid record as builder of national and local linage. Age thirty-four, married, excellent address and appearance; twelve years diversified experience newspaper advertising. Introductory reference: James W. Brown, Publisher of Editor & Publisher. Complete list with first letter. C-851, Editor & Publisher.

News Executive—Editorial writer of wide experience; competent to take complete charge of news and editorial end; A-1 references; now employed; seeks permanent connection in South, East. Address C-876, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter—Ambitious woman, ten years' experience, wants job. Not afraid of work. Seven years present position. C-910, Editor & Publisher.

Telegraph Editor, fast and accurate, with seven years' experience reading copy, seeks desk vacancy with larger opportunity. C-908, Editor & Publisher.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Duplex—16-page tubular plate press, Goss Comet and several other good bargains in new presses. Griffiths Publishers Exchange, 154 Nassau St., New York.

For Sale: Goss Monitor Perfecting Press with motor. Lately overhauled; guaranteed first-class condition. 7 or 8 columns. Mat roller, casting box and stereotype outfit complete. Must be sold at once. Can give terms. Globe-News, Amarillo, Texas.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

For Sale—One complete photo-engraving plant. Miles Machinery Co., 64 West 23d St., New York.

Job Presses, Paper Cutters, Wire Stitchers, etc.—A complete line. Overhauled and guaranteed machines at bargain prices. Easy terms. Hoffman Type & Engraving Co., 114 E. 13th St., N. Y. City.

Printers and Bookbinders:—Two Revolution Presses, Drum Cylinder Presses, Power Paper Cutters, Lever Paper Cutters, Colts and Universal Presses, Chandler & Price Presses, Golding Jobbers, New Style Gordon Presses, C. & P. Presses, with Miller Feeder, Multi Color Presses Folders, Punches, Perforators. Wire stitchers Numbering Machines, Standing Presses, Embossers, Shears, Proof Fresses, at greatly reduced prices and upon most liberal terms American Type Founders Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

Used Goss Mat Roller for wet mats only, for sale cheap. The Goss Printing Press Co., 153 So. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

SUPPLIES

Metal

Standard Linotype, Stereotype and Monotype metal at substantial discounts when purchased in ton lots or over. Let us quote you. American Alloys Company, 1939 East Sergeant St., Philadelphia.

LEGAL

INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPANY

New York, June 29, 1927.

The Board of Directors have declared a quarterly dividend of Sixty Cents (60c) a share on the Common Stock of this Company, payable August 15, 1927, to Common Stockholders of record at the close of business August 1st, 1927.

Checks will be mailed. Transfer books will not close.

OWEN SHEPHERD,
Vice-President & Treasurer.

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

WANTED—Editorial Writer with daily newspaper experience for excellent position in Ohio-Indiana section. State age, education, political affiliations, positions held, present salary; and send clippings representing recent work. Mention our No. 959.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Newspaper Properties Bought, Sold and Appraised

All negotiations confidential

PALMER, DEWITT & PALMER

Business Established in 1899
350 Madison Ave. New York
Pacific Coast Representative:
M. C. Moore, 515 N. Canon Drive. Beverly Hills, Calif.

CONSOLIDATION

The merging of newspaper interests is a subject that has received special study and investigation by this firm for nearly 17 years. It is a big subject and requires considerable technical knowledge, both as to valuation and operating methods. When properly organized, the results are never disappointing.

We have been factors in many important consolidations, sales and appraisals.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

One Dollar will be paid for each idea published. Send clipping for payment.

UNDER the title of "Close-ups of Well-Known Business Firms," the Worcester (Mass.) Evening Post recently arranged a full page lay-out of classified display advertisements with numerous photos to break the reading matter.—D. P.

During late August and early September, when there is considerable moving, is a good time to sell a page of advertising to truckers and moving companies. The page can be run two or three times a week during the two or three weeks when most of the moving is going on.—U. S. V., Akron.

Midsummer Motorlog! This is a feature of a Northwest paper which promotes the sale of used motor-cars advertised in the classified columns. It graphically demonstrates how during the summer a car may be used to excellent advantage for week-ends and short vacations in touring, and enjoying woods, mountains and neighboring cities and towns, and directs the reader's attention skilfully to the classified columns.—C. M. L., Seattle.

There are always plenty of merchants in almost any city who are offering special goods to the farmers of their territory. These merchants should in addition to their regular advertising, use advertising space on the farm pages of the local papers for the purpose of attracting attention to these goods.—Frank H. Williams.

A School Section composed of all advertisers who have anything to sell to school children makes an interesting and profitable issue for both the advertiser and the newspaper. Can be made to include firms who sell the school board their supplies also. Parents take more than an usual interest in sending their children to school. The appeal of pride, economy, etc., can be stressed in the copy. —K. Parker, Kansas City, Kan.

The new smaller dollar bills will soon be on the "market." Why not suggest to some advertiser, tying this up with the idea that you can get more at this store with the smaller one than you can at other stores with the larger ones?—Thora Eigenmann.

The Boston Herald Traveler recommends to users of space in the real estate section the value of photos to illustrate their offerings. Through the medium of a small ad in that section they offer the services of their staff photographers to any prospective advertiser. A small fee can be charged for his services.—C. E. Pellissier.

HUNCHES

One Dollar will be paid for each idea published. Send clipping for payment.

DO your readers like to read humorous short items about events that happen in your own state? The state page can be brightened by a column such as is used in several Wisconsin papers "It's a Funny Old State." In one instance a cartoon heading was made of the state's outline—and it was that of a man laughing. —Karl Fischer, Indianapolis.

Who has the oldest newspaper in your city? It's an old stunt but one that is always good for reader interest. Present a year's subscription to the winner. Many stories in old papers are splendid features in contrast with present day life.—Davis O. Vandivier.

The Louisville (Ky.) Herald-Post publishes a feature entitled "A Fact a Day About Louisville." It deals with such subjects as hotel accommodations, police protection, railway facilities, agricultural development, and so on. Why don't you print a "daily fact" column about your town or city?—E. C. Hill.

The end of the vacation period for high school and college students is near. When they return to their studies, an interesting story to them as well as to others is an account of how some of them spent the summer. Students who earn part of their expenses during the summer months have a habit of engaging in odd kinds of work that most of us would not think of. Several St. Louis college men spent the summer working on a mule boat which makes regular trips between New York and Spain. They spent their time as valets to mules in order to earn their next year's tuition.—David Resnick.

Every one is interested in the weather. Why not a feature story on the strange, condensed code in which the weather bureau of your city receives the weather reports each morning at 7 a. m. The speed with which reports are received from all over the United States and Canada over a circuit held open for an hour especially for the weather service can also be interestingly narrated.—R. L., Milwaukee.

A good feature story can be written about the motor camps. Have one of your reporters spend the night at the local camp or camps and write his experiences, who he meets there and in general what he thinks of motor camping.—C. E. Pellissier, Boston.

A feature which was quite popular with the Wooster Daily Record readers was secured by writing to 25 representative citizens of the city of Wooster asking them to write a 150 word article on "Why I Like to Live in Wooster." While not all of them replied, several did so on their own initiative and for three weeks the Record had a splendid local feature.—Arthur Murray.

The Logansport (Ind.) Press runs a daily feature on page one entitled "Broadway at Noon." A reporter as conductor of the feature stands on the corner of the principal street in the city or walks up and down the street and notes activities of the various citizens. Readers of the Press look for the names in this column as eagerly as other newspaper readers turn to the column of the inquiring reporter. A clever reporter can make an admirable feature out of such a column.—D. Richardson.

A collection of some of the most humorous ordinances of a city 50 or 75 years ago will make a good summer feature. Many cities even had speed laws at that time, and the comparison is interesting, and affords chances for plenty of humor. Many of these old time ordinances had to do with customs and manner of living now unheard of.—W. P. Willey.

FOUR N. E. STATES ADVERTISI

Bullard Describes Promotion Activit in N. Y. Times Article

Four of the six New England sta now have publicity bureaus, accord to F. Lauriston Bullard, editorial wri for the Boston Herald, who descril how his section of the country was ing in for community advertising in article written for the New York Tim Aug. 14.

For the present year, Mr. Bulla wrote, Maine has appropriated $50,0 New Hampshire, $35,000, Vermo $15,000 and Rhode Island $7,500. Mas chusetts authorized a bureau, but forg to vote any money for it. Connecticu publicity bill failed to pass.

DAILY'S LAWYER SUSPENDED

M. A. Breckenridge, attorney for t Tulsa World, has been suspended frc the practice of law in Oklahoma for days because of a letter signed by Brec enridge which appeared in the Tul World May 1, criticizing the state s preme court of Oklahoma.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE
leads in Original Exclusive Features
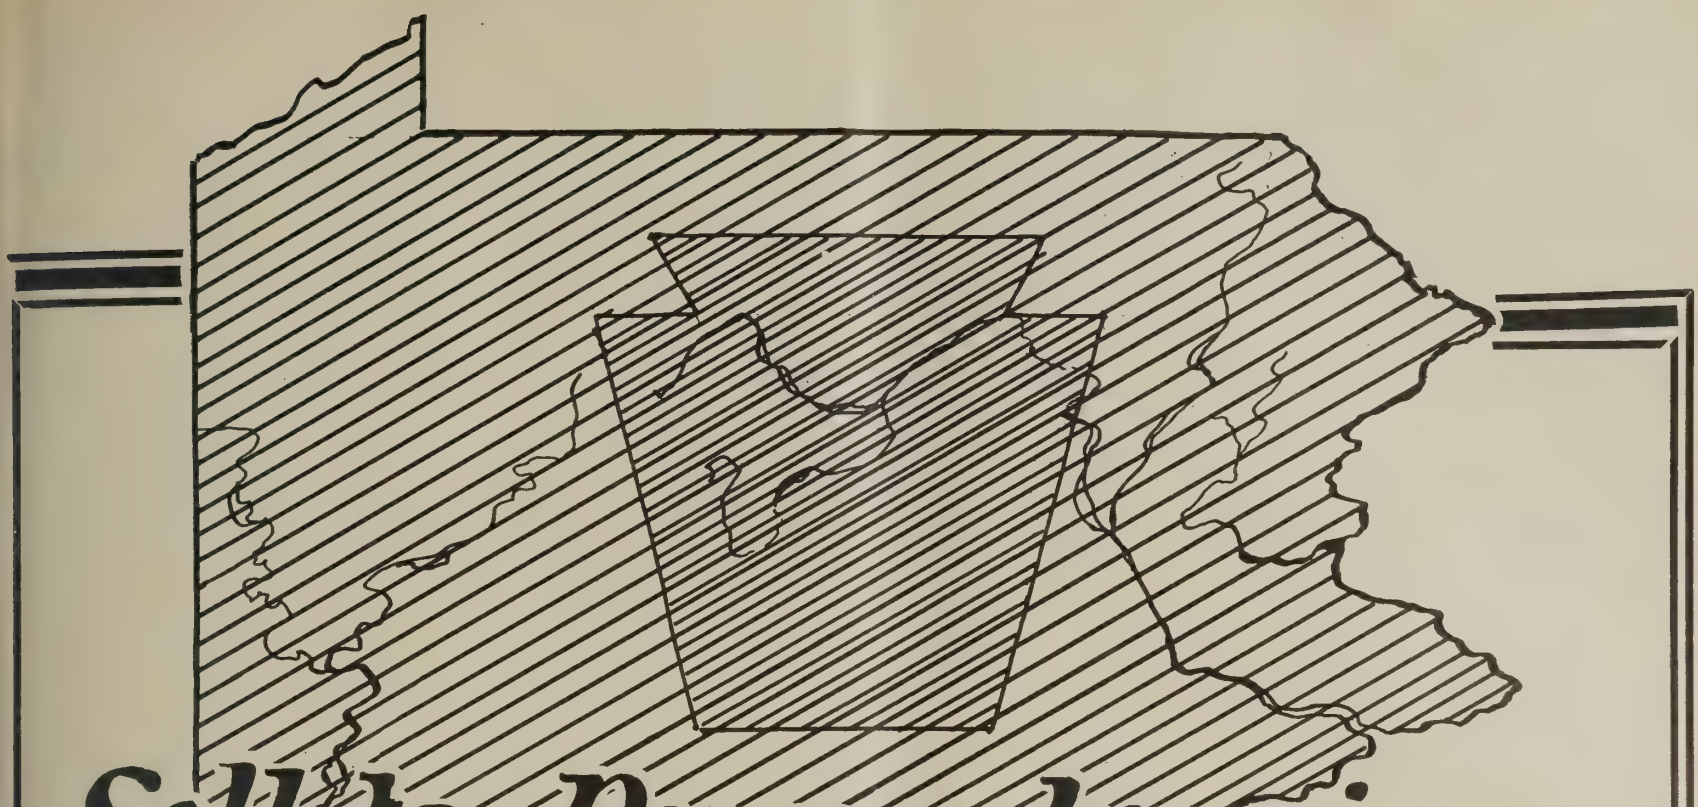
on
World Spot News
63 Park Row New York City

"Today's News Today"
UNITED·PRESS
Complete wire reports for evening, morning and Sunday newspapers everywhere.



What Do You KNOW ?
A Great Questions and Answers Feature
New Questions Daily
King Features Syndicate, Inc.
New York City

We Supply
WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED
FICTION
Daily One-Column Mat Features
Weekly Special Articles
Serials
Ask Us for Samples
The O'Dell Newspaper Service
55 Fifth Ave., New York City

WHAT YOUR FACE TELLS
by
Betty Morrison, Psy. D.,
Character Analyst, Vocational Adviser and Scientific Researcher
Over 40 papers using now. Some of the best in the Country. A daily feature. About 50 features ready, and then shipped daily.
Immediate Release—Wire Your Order
Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
350 Hudson St., New York City

IF YOU ARE MISSING THE
NORMAN HAPGOOD
Daily Articles
On National Events
Write to us for Full
Information on a
Really Great Service
UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE
WORLD BLDG., NEW YORK

Give Your Readers
"DAILY HEALTH TALKS
by Dr Frank McCoy
"The Mayo of Health Writers"
A health service that is different—home treatments without medicine or costly apparatus, based on a knowledge of food chemistry and the mechanics of the body
WIRE OR WRITE
McCoy Health Service
Brack Shops Building, Los Angeles, Cal.

Sell to Pennsylvania ~~~

A RESPONSIVE MARKET for the NATIONAL ADVERTISER!

The Keystone State is one of the most dominant markets for the national advertiser, for thru the newspapers you talk direct to its population, representing 10 million consumers, 95% of whom are literate and read English.

Over one million of these consumers work in Pennsylvania's large industries and earn over a billion dollars in wages.

In the agricultural districts, the farmers produce a half billion dollars worth of crops annually.

The Keystone State is known for its high average wealth, its high standards of living, its facilities for easy distribution and for full co-operation from the dealer.

If you are not getting your share of the business from this rich market, it's because you are not using the proper mediums judiciously. Consult the newspapers listed below. They can show you the way to greater sales.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Allentown Call .....(M)	33,300	.11	.11
Allentown Call .....(E)	23,638	.11	.11
††Beaver Falls Tribune .....(E)	7,141	.03	.03
††Bethlehem Globe Times ....(E)	14,147	.06	.06
††Brownsville Telegraph .....(E)	7,818	.04	.04
Chester Times .....(E)	19,742	.08	.07
††Coatesville Record .....(E)	6,866	.035	.03
Connellsville Courier .....(E)	6,012	.02	.02
Easton Express .....(E)	34,476	.10	.10
Erie Times .....(E)	30,594	.08	.08
††Greensburg Tribune Review.(EM)	14,800	.05	.05
††Hazelton Plain-Speaker ...(E) ††Hazelton Standard-Sentinel ...	20,582	.08	.07
Mount Carmel Item .....(E)	4,340	.0285	.0285

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Oil City Derrick .....(M)	6,903	.04	.04
Scranton Times .....(E)	43,000	.13	.12
Sharon Herald .....(E)	7,656	.0357	.0357
Sunbury Item .....(E)	5,922	.035	.035
Warren Mirror-Times .....(ME)	9,685	.043	.043
Washington Observer and Reporter .....(M&E)	18,130	.06	.06
††West Chester Local News ...(E)	11,941	.04	.04
Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader ..(E)	26,442	.08	.06
Williamsport Sun and Gazette & Bulletin .....(ME)	28,722	.09	.09
††York Dispatch .....(E)	20,131	.05	.05

A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1927.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1927.

SUNTIME
On Wall Street

A FEW minutes after the stock exchanges close for the day—it is Suntime on Wall Street.

As soon as the ticker stops, the Night Edition of The Sun goes to press and, in an incredibly short time, copies are being bought on the newsstands and read in the financial district.

Watch the sale of The Sun at any newsstand in the Wall Street district. Nearly five times as many copies are sold as any other evening newspaper appealing to financial men.

Financial men and investors prefer The Sun because of its completeness, timeliness and accuracy in reporting financial news. Its convenient, readable tables cover both the New York Stock Exchange and the New York Curb Market, the Bond Markets of both exchanges; unlisted securities, commodities and money.

The financial and business news in The Sun is well written and gathered from many exclusive sources. In the market reviews, the day's tendencies in trading are skillfully analyzed by experts.

Wall Street Prefers The Sun Because The Sun Best Understands How to Present Financial News to the Financial Man

The Sun

280 Broadway, New York

THIS ISSUE: ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF SYNDICATES AND FEATURES

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 — The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America — 1927

SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY.

MEMBER A.B.C. — MEMBER A.B.P.

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; Newspaperdom, March, 1892; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Advertising, February 7, 1925; Revised entry, Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916, at the ost Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Vol. 60. No. 14 — NEW YORK, AUGUST 27, 1927 — By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A. $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign — 10c Per Copy

Total Newspaper Advertising

in Greater New York in Agate Lines

FROM

JANUARY 1 TO JUNE 30, 1927-1926, INCLUSIVE

DAILY AND SUNDAY

Compiled by Statistical Department, New York Evening Post, Inc.

Pages 1927	Pages 1926		Percentage of total space	1927	1926	Gain	Loss
8,240	8,014	American	7.3	6,443,284	6,851,764	.....	408,480
9,872	9,478	Herald Tribune	10.9	9,655,694	9,642,818	12,876	.....
12,702	11,988	Times	16.8	14,954,094	15,251,876	.....	297,782
7,426	8,370	World	9.0	7,986,028	9,173,772	.....	1,187,744
5,546	5,216	*Mirror (Tab.)	1.9	1,618,945	1,810,890	.....	191,945
9,198	8,172	News (Tab.)	5.0	4,443,347	3,832,860	610,487	.....
6,022	6,784	*Eve. Graphic	2.0	1,788,632	1,847,878	.....	59,246
7,022	6,950	*Eve. Journal	8.2	7,297,046	7,725,458	.....	428,412
5,038	4,708	*Eve. Post	3.2	2,869,752	2,618,302	251,450	.....
4,718	5,056	*Eve. World	5.6	4,999,397	5,165,330	.....	165,933
6,572	6,448	*Sun	9.5	8,465,552	8,402,130	63,422	.....
3,836	3,726	*Telegram	3.4	2,994,071	3,055,086	.....	61,015
7,462	7,534	Brooklyn Eagle	10.2	9,027,445	9,359,124	.....	331,679
4,480	4,380	Brooklyn Times	3.8	3,387,276	3,720,052	.....	332,776
2,880	3,194	Standard Union	3.2	2,863,612	2,966,420	.....	102,808
101,014	100,018	Totals		88,794,175	91,423,760	.....	2,629,585 (Net Loss)

*No Sunday editio

	1927	1926	1925	1924	1923	1922	1921
American	6,443,284	6,851,764	7,162,104	7,808,098	6,153,872	5,668,330	5,236,928
Herald	.....	.....	.....	2,355,910	5,927,014	5,982,182	6,287,834
Herald Tribune	9,655,694	9,642,818	7,794,822	6,206,288	4,996,138	4,737,786	4,841,259
Times	14,954,094	15,251,876	13,587,396	13,293,132	12,582,026	12,079,894	10,930,804
World	7,986,028	9,173,772	8,355,936	8,600,114	9,255,570	8,243,470	7,345,998
Mirror (Tab.)	1,618,945	1,810,890	1,915,106	.....	.....	.....	.....
News (Tab.)	4,443,347	3,832,860	3,261,376	2,884,664	2,123,898	1,643,000	1,126,112
Eve. Graphic	1,788,632	1,847,878	942,732	.....	.....	.....	.....
Eve. Journal	7,297,046	7,725,468	7,751,838	7,475,876	6,794,786	5,970,288	5,383,034
Eve. Mail	.....	.....	.....	††612,782	3,214,534	3,055,906	3,223,622
Eve. Post	2,869,752	2,618,302	2,507,736	2,209,886	2,077,672	2,047,812	3,142,521
Eve. World	4,999,397	5,165,330	4,357,518	3,951,176	4,511,149	4,597,850	4,650,308
Eve. Globe	.....	.....	.....	.....	‡3,825,302	3,693,966	3,555,150
Sun	8,465,552	8,402,130	7,012,532	6,815,456	5,290,192	4,901,150	4,221,880
Telegram	2,994,071	3,055,086	3,562,044	4,824,983	3,438,312	3,516,492	3,430,878
B'klyn Eagle	9,027,445	9,359,124	8,577,076	8,804,036	8,289,030	7,789,578	6,829,310
B'klyn Times	3,387,276	3,720,052	2,518,888	2,389,888	1,934,896	1,762,750	1,621,564
Stand. Union	2,863,612	2,966,420	3,436,764	3,811,696	3,944,698	3,873,502	3,447,546
Totals	88,794,175	91,423,770	82,743,868	82,044,390	84,359,080	79,563,958	75,274,748

‡Sun and Globe combined June 4, 1923; name changed to Sun, March 10, 1924.
††Telegram and Mail combined January 28, 1924; name changed to Telegram May 18, 1925.

ANALYSIS of The News of New York and The Chicago Tribune shows that the only thing they have in common is features. Tribune features have built up the two largest circulations in America.

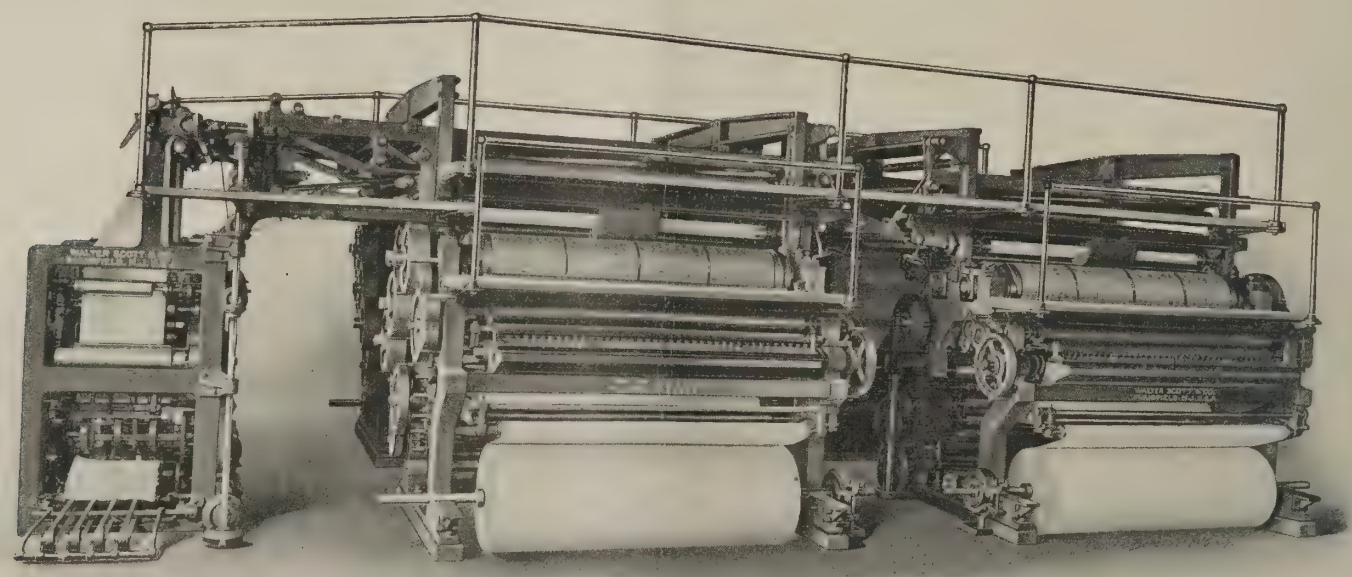
If you are uncertain of what this means to you in money, study the New York newspaper lineage chart. Advertising during the first six months of 1927 ran behind last year. In the New York field, eleven papers show losses—including two of the three tabloids.

But look at the record of The News! Where all but four papers lost, The News gained 610,487 lines. And advertisers paid the highest agate line rate of any American newspaper to get more than a million circulation daily.

And study the seven-year record of The News—its advertising lineage history. Starting from nothing in a highly competitive field over-crowded with papers, The News, using exclusively the features of The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate, had the most phenomenal rise in the history of journalism. The advertising chart shows that Tribune features build a responsive circulation.

The Features That Built The Two Largest Circulations In America Get Readers Responsive To Advertising

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room



Tribune features are the bulwark of the two largest circulations in America. The Chicago Tribune carries more millines of advertising than any other publication on earth. The News of New York gained more lineage in the first six months of 1927 than all other New York newspapers combined.

Publishers, your space is the most valuable asset of your newspapers. Are your features paying? It may be hard to tell. But when you buy Chicago Tribune features you are getting proven features—tested in the bitterest competitive conditions in America. They do the job in Chicago and in New York. And they will do it for you.

If you had to pay far more for these features, it would be worth it to know you are getting such tangible value to your paper. But Tribune-tested features cost no more than others.

Consider the growth and the prosperity of The Chicago Tribune and The News of New York (which have but one thing in common—Tribune features) and build up your own newspaper in the same way!

CHICAGO TRIBUNE Newspapers Syndicate
TRIBUNE TOWER . . . . . CHICAGO

SPEED WITHOUT SACRIFICE

Scott Presses are built to run faster than any press made. The printing cylinders are of solid forged steel in special roller bearings. They can be driven to the utmost without streaking. The ink feed remains uniform at all speeds. The automatic paper tension—the only automatic tension device known to press manufacture—assures correct register and reduces web breakage and paper waste to a minimum.

Scott Presses, in fact, embody every practical facility for high-speed output with none of the troubles, accidents, breakage, spoilage and waste that usually mar a high-speed run.

400 R.P.M.—48,000 per hour—you get those speeds from all Scott Presses and you get them from Scotts only.

Scott

"Multi-Unit" or "Straight-Unit" Presses

WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY

Main Office and Factory - - - - - - Plainfield, New Jersey, U. S. A.
New York Office - - - - - - - - - - - 1457 Broadway
Chicago Office - - - - - - - - - - - 1330 Monadnock Block

Cable Address: WALTSCOTT NEW YORK

B. Altman & Co.
Arnold Constable & Co.
Best & Co.
Bloomingdale Brothers
Bonwit Teller & Co.
Gimbel Brothers
James A. Hearn & Son
Lord & Taylor
R. H. Macy & Co.
James McCreery & Co.
Oppenheim Collins & Co.
Saks-Fifth Avenue
Saks-Herald Square
Franklin Simon & Co.
Stern Brothers
John Wanamaker

Manhattan Department Stores listed by the Statistical Department of the New York Evening Post

When New York Women Shop

ALL of these great Manhattan stores advertise in the Herald Tribune—and in only three other New York newspapers.

Stores such as these are responsible for New York's reputation as a shopping center. Their fashion representatives bring news from Paris, the European capitals, our own fashionable resorts.

They herald the new fashions; they announce that satin will be worn this Fall; that cut velvet is smart for sports wear; that the black suede shoe is returning to popularity.

America's multitudinous manufacturers send their finest products to be sold in New York—furniture, glassware, cutlery, napery, fabrics, jewelry, luggage.

Buyers search the surface of the globe, visiting far-away countries and remote towns for things of beauty or rare value to be offered to New York shoppers.

Today, magnified a thousand times, New York is the Bagdad of the Modern World.

Through the advertisements of New York stores, New York women are kept acquainted with this wealth of merchandise.

Whether they contemplate a morning's general shopping or the purchase of one important article, the advertisements in the Herald Tribune give them definite help and suggestions. When New York women buy, they consult the advertisements in the

NEW YORK Herald Tribune

A COMPLETE NEWSPAPER — NEWS and ADVERTISEMENTS

Only one plate or mat necessary for Philadelphia

For every advertisement you run in Philadelphia, make but one plate or mat and "slip" it to the Bulletin. The Bulletin does the rest. Because "In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads the Bulletin." In this retail trading area there are more than 550,000 homes and the Bulletin averages *546,527 copies! And that's the whole story in a nutshell.

DOMINATE PHILADELPHIA — Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

"The Evening Bulletin is sold on its merits as a newspaper; no prize, premium, coupon, guessing contests, or other methods of artificially stimulating circulation have been used."

New York . . . . . 247 Park Avenue (Park-Lexington Building)
Chicago . . . . . Verree & Conklin, Inc., 28 East Jackson Boulevard
Detroit . . . . . C. L. Weaver, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 321 Lafayette Boulevard
San Francisco . . . . Thomas L. Emory, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 681 Market Street

*Audit Bureau of Circulation's report of net paid daily average circulation for the six months ending March 31, 1927.

(Copyright 1927, Bulletin Company)

Member of Associated Press

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication, by The Editor & Publisher Co.
J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1700 Times Building, 42nd St., at Broadway,
New York. Telephones, Bryant 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056. Charter Member Audit Bureau
of Circulations. Member Associated Business Papers Inc.

Vol. 60 NEW YORK, AUGUST 27, 1927 No. 14

Government News the Property of All, Opinion of League Press Delegates

"Allied" and "Independent" News Services Agree in Early Resolutions at Geneva Conference on Open-Door Principle—Priority of Press Over Commercial Messages Approved

By ALBIN E. JOHNSON
(Geneva Correspondent of EDITOR & PUBLISHER.)

(By Cable to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

GENEVA, Switzerland, Aug. 25.—The open door as a news policy, giving all agencies and newspapers equal opportunity to obtain government news and the establishment definitely of what constitutes property right in news are the two biggest issues which will be fought out in the International Press Conference which convened here yesterday under the auspices of the League of Nations.

General agreement between the "official" agencies and the "independents" is presaged by the tenor of several resolutions introduced today by representatives of all shades of thought on the question of news ownership. Their purport is that no agency shall have exclusive property right in news pertaining to activities of governments.

It was understood when the conference opened that Reuters was prepared to grant the demand of the independent news agencies that equality in the dissemination of government news be recommended by the conference, but that other members of the "official" or "Allied" news agencies were determined to safeguard their existing privileges.

Karl A. Bickel, president of the United Press Associations, on Wednesday morning introduced a resolution, which was ruled out of order for the time being by the chairman, with the suggestion that it be brought up at a later session. Mr. Bickel's resolution, which covered all phases of the subject, was as follows:

"WHEREAS the original purpose of the resolution by Chile as unanimously adopted by the sixth Assembly for the convocation of the present conference was that the world press might aid in the promotion of that mutual understanding between nations which is one of the surest guarantees of international peace and

"WHEREAS three preparatory commissions that preceded this conference unanimously recognized that the press can best fulfill that mission by improved facilities that will permit the fullest and freest exchange of views and information between nations and

"WHEREAS two of the preparatory commissions that collaborated in the preparation of the agenda of the present conference, namely the Commission of Press Agency Experts and the Commission of Journalists, unanimously voted that one of the indispensable means to this end is absolute equality in the distribution and transmission of all governmental news as between official and independent telegraphic news agencies and newspapers and as between foreign and national journalists.

"THEREFORE, be it resolved that every question on the present agenda shall be considered and decided with the understanding that all governments of the world shall be asked to grant absolute equality between official and independent news agencies and papers and between national and foreign journalists. First in the distribution of all governmental news, second, in the matter of priority in transmission of press dispatches and the granting of press telephone calls, third, in telegraph, telephone, cable and wireless rates, and, fourth, in the treatment by censor whenever the national or international situation in any country may render censorship of press dispatches necessary."

The United States has the largest delegation, its seventeen members including Kent Cooper, general manager, with Charles Stephenson Smith, chief of the foreign service, and Joseph Sharkey, Geneva correspondent, for the Associated Press; Mr. Bickel, Ed Keen, vice-president; Edward J. Bing, Central European director, and Thomas J. Sidlo, legal advisor, representing the United Press; Robert P. Scripps and George B. Parker of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers, representing the "provincial press" of the United States; F. T. Birchall, acting managing editor of the New York Times, and Edwin L. James, Paris correspondent of the Times, representing the metropolitan press.

M. Koenigsberg, president and general manager, represented International News Service, his associates being David L. Church, James T. Williams, Jr., and Robert J. Prew.

Delegations from other countries include nine British, nine Japanese, seven Germans, four Russians, including the Tass Agency and the directors of Isvestia and Pravda, official Soviet newspapers.

What might be called the political line-up of the conference is following the old division between the agencies formerly called "official," now known as "Allied," and the "Independents." The former group, with some of which the Associated Press has reciprocal news agreements, includes among its score of members Reuters, Havas, Stefani of Italy, and Wolffs' of Germany. In the "Independent" group are listed the United Press, International News, and Universal Service of the United States; Radio Agency of France, Exchange Telegraph, Ltd., and Central News, Ltd., of Great Britain, and Nippon Dempo of Japan.

Resolutions were introduced Thursday by members of both groups dealing with the principle of property rights in news, all supporting the idea that official news should not be held exclusive. The final form in which this principle will be expressed will probably be determined at the Friday session.

Mr. Koenigsberg, of the International News Service, introduced a resolution declaring it a fundamental principle that public or common rights in news shall not be diverted to private ownership.

Mr. Bickel introduced an amendment to the proposed law on property right in news, a summary of which was printed in EDITOR & PUBLISHER of Aug. 20. The amendment provided that the application of such a law should never result in governmental news becoming the exclusive property of any newspaper or agency or individual.

Mr. Cooper, for the Associated Press, introduced a resolution reaffirming the principle of property right in news, but providing that "there shall be no property right at the source in official news emanating from governments."

The German delegation, including representatives of the Telegraph Union, Wolff Agency and the German Newspaper Publishers Association, in conjunction with the International Federation of Journalists and the International Union of Press Associations, introduced a project on property right in news, but exempted all news of an official character.

The Swiss Society of Newspaper Directors notified the conference that it supported the project for exempting official news from property right protection.

The conference unanimously adopted a resolution proposed by Sekizo Uyeda of Nippon Dempo, Tokio, urging immediate and widespread improvement of wire and radio communication between Europe, the Americas, and Oriental nations. Both Mr. Uyeda and Kung Chen-koo, of the Eastern Times, said lower press rates and better and quicker communications between China and Japan and the remainder of the world was a pressing necessity.

Lord Riddell offered a resolution demanding better wireless facilities between Geneva and the principal world capitals for the transmission of League of Nations news.

The conference met in the historic Hall of the Reformation, where the League Assemblies are held, with 125 representatives present, including advisors and delegates from 40 countries. Representatives of official press bureaus and 17 other news agency executives are acting as assessors. Lord Burnham, proprietor of the London Daily Telegraph, is the presiding officer and a steering committee of fourteen members in charge of the proceedings includes Mr. Bickel, representing the United States;

(Continued on page 18)

PRESS CLUB BUILDING NEARING COMPLETION

The newspaper men of the national capital will have one of the most beautiful clubhouses in the world when they move into this new building which is rapidly nearing completion. The structure is the National Press Club Building and is located in the heart of Washington's theatrical district. It is built on the site of the historic Old Ebbitt Hotel and when finished it will be one of the show places of the capital.

FORD ADS RUMORED TO APPEAR SOON

Date Set for Sept. 15 as Beginning of Campaign, with Predictions Based on Contract Orders Sent Out to Newspapers

Predictions are being made in trade circles that the Ford Motor Company of Detroit will begin advertising its new car in the newspapers around Sept. 15.

The predictions are based on mysterious contracts now being sent out to newspaper managers generally by N. W. Ayer & Son, Philadelphia advertising agency, which Henry Ford has appointed to handle the account said to have a $15,000,000 appropriation. The contracts specify merely "a client," the name of the advertiser for whom the contracts are sought being withheld. The contracts are for 1,000 lines or more space as ordered.

Virtually all newspaper contracts must be used within 30 days of issue or they become null and void. Some few dailies allow 60 days.

New York representatives are confident "a client" means Ford and look for the advertising to start next month.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER talked with agency officials by telephone, and they declined to discuss the mystery contract.

FEDERAL TRADE CASE TO RESUME SEPT. 6

Defendants Decline to Admit That Commission Has Jurisdiction in the Agency Commission Suit—Negotiations Fail

Following failure of defendants to negotiate with the Federal Trade Commission, hearings in the agency commission case will be resumed in Chicago, Sept. 6. Taking of testimony was postponed to that date last July 11.

In the interim the commission issued an order which made all negotiations hinge on the admission by the defendants, the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, the American Association of Advertising Agencies, the American Press Association and the Six Point League, that the federal body had jurisdiction in the cause.

An important contention of the defense has always been that the Federal Trade Commission had no authority in advertising matters as affecting agencies and publishers.

The order read as follows:

"(1). That the taking of testimony in this proceeding set for July 11, 1927, be and the same is hereby postponed until Sept. 6, 1927;

"(2). That the chief counsel of this commission (with such of his assistants as he may choose) be and they are hereby directed to enter into negotiations with such of the respondents herein as may care to participate therein, with a view to working out stipulations by which such respondents will agree to discontinue the practices established by the record; provided, however, that such respondents in their stipulations recognize the jurisdiction of the commission to the end that lack of jurisdiction may not thereafter be set up in opposition to the enforcement of the stipulations or any of them or any of the provisions thereof; and provided, further, that as a condition to such negotiations all respondents participating therein shall freely furnish to counsel for the commission any information and access to any and all records which such counsel may deem necessary, without condition as to the use of such information so obtained in case of failure of the negotiations.

"(3). That upon failure of respondents to negotiate on or before Sept. 1, 1927, a stipulation or stipulations satisfactory to the commission, its chief counsel shall proceed with all possible diligence to prosecute the case to a conclusion."

KELLER IN PITTSBURGH

Former M. E. of Lancaster New Era to Manage Post-Gazette

Paul Block, owner of the recently consolidated Pittsburgh Post-Gazette has appointed O. J. Keller general manager and treasurer of that newspaper.

Mr. Keller was formerly managing editor of the Lancaster (Pa.) New Era, which is also owned by Mr. Block. No successor has been named on the Lancaster paper.

Mr. Block with Herman Halsted of Paul Block, Inc., visited Pittsburgh last week. It was then that Mr. Keller took over the management of the new Block property.

No other important changes have yet been made on the staff of the consolidated paper, which is at the present time over-manned due to the merger of two distinct papers. The entire reorganization has been placed in Mr. Keller's hands.

PHONOGRAPH FIRM TO BROADCAST

Columbia to Give Programs Over 16 American and Canadian Broadcasting Stations—No Let-up in Newspaper Space

London dispatches this week announced that the Columbia Phonograph Company would shortly begin broadcasting musical programs over 16 American and Canadian stations. This company is controlled by the Columbia Gramophone Company, a British corporation, which owns the majority of shares in the American concern.

American advertising is handled through Hanff-Metzger, Inc., and officials of that agency in New York assured EDITOR & PUBLISHER that the broadcasting plans would result in no curtailment in Columbia's use of newspaper space. Columbia is at present a fairly consistent user of the newspapers, running 700-lines once or twice a month in a list of 25 cities. It was said that small copy might be added on newspaper radio pages telling about the programs to be broadcast.

When interviewed in London, Louis Sterling, managing director of the parent company, declined to say how much his company intends to spend on broadcast advertising.

"I hate to think of it, but it will be a lot," he declared.

TEXTILE TRADE PAPERS BAR AGENCY FEE

United Publishers Company's "Economist Group" Adopts New Schedule Effective Oct. 1—A. B. P. Disclaims Trend

A new advertising schedule, effective Oct. 1, on the basis of "no advertising agency commission" has been adopted by the textile papers of the Economist Group, members of the United Publishers Company. While the official announcement now being sent out only refers to the Dry Goods Economist, it is understood that the same rule applies also to other textile papers as well.

It was also stated that the Iron Age has never paid agency commissions and that the Class Journal does not. The Hardware Age pays commissions at present and no statement would be made as to whether a change in policy on this point was contemplated. These publications are all members of the United Publishers Co.

At the offices of the Associated Business Papers, Inc., it was stated that about 60 per cent of the members of the organization paid commission while 40 do not. There are no evidences of a tendency in either direction at the present time, it was also stated.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER CALENDAR

Sept. 5-17—Educational Graphic Arts Exposition, Grand Central Palace, New York.

Sept. 8-9—Montana Press Assn., annual convention, Great Falls, Mont.

Sept. 9-10—Northwest Texas Press Assn., annual convention, Wichita Falls, Tex.

Sept. 12-15—Financial Advertisers' Assn., annual convention, West Baden, Ind.

Sept. 15-17—Washington Press Assn., annual convention, Wenatchee, Wash.

Sept. 20-21—National Publishers Assn., annual meeting, Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa.

NEW HEARST PRESSES TO START SOON

First Units in Battery of Twenty Octuples in New South Street Branch to Be Operating Within Thirty Days

Some of the units of the Hoe press equipment being installed by the New York Evening Journal and the New York American in the new Hearst branch mechanical plant on South street will be placed in operation within 30 days, J. S. Healy, production manager, informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week. The full equipment will consist of 20 octuples of the balcony type, he said.

Mr. Healy returned early this month from a trip abroad during which he studied newspaper printing conditions in England, France and Germany. Since his return he has been experimenting with the methods for using dry mats as they have been developed by newspapers on the Continent.

The small-sized newspapers operated abroad make use of the dry mat an entirely different proposition than in this country, according to Mr. Healy. Speed is not considered so important by foreign newspapers either, and the dry mats as used in Germany require 10 minutes for preparation for which only 20 seconds is allowed in most U. S. plants.

CHANGES IN HUNTINGTON, W. VA.

J. B. Clendenin Remains as Managing Editor Following Merger

Recent merger in Huntington, W. Va., of the Herald-Dispatch, the Evening Herald and the Advertiser, with subsequent suspension of the Evening Herald, has resulted in the following news room changes: James B. Clendenin, who was managing editor of the Herald papers, continues as managing editor of the Herald-Dispatch; Richard L. Panhorst, city editor of the Evening Herald, becomes city editor of the Herald-Dispatch; Harold R. Pinckard, Sunday editor of the Herald papers, takes a similar post in the merged properties; Paul Hughes, city editor of the Herald-Dispatch, has resigned to join the copy desk of the Louisville Times; Gee Tee Maxwell, cartoonist, goes to the Birmingham Age-Herald; Joe Klasman, police reporter of the Evening Herald, joins the Advertiser staff; Marian Weller, feature writer, has removed to Syracuse, N. Y.

The Herald-Dispatch and Advertiser operate as separate units in the news room except on the Sunday morning edition.

PLAN 9th DISTRICT MEET

A meeting of the Ninth District of the International Advertising Association will be held at Lincoln, Neb., on Oct. 28-29, it was announced this week at I. A. A. headquarters in New York. Kendrick Ott of Lincoln is chairman of the district and is arranging the program. The Ninth District includes Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota.

NEW INDIANAPOLIS DAILY SUSPENDS

Evening Post Launched by Mayor Duvall and Associates Quits After Publishing for Eleven Days

The Indianapolis Post, Mayor John L. Duvall's newspaper, which started publication July 11, suspended publication Aug. 22. A sign on the door reading "Closed for Reorganization" greeted employes Monday morning.

Efforts to reach the mayor at his office for comment on a resolution passed by a committee of employes were unsuccessful. The mayor's office reported him at his farm near Princeton, Ind., for an indefinite stay.

The resolution recited that the employes were led to quit good jobs in Indianapolis and other cities to work for the Post upon assurances of Duvall and his associates that the paper was "adequately financed," and went on to attack the mayor. It ended by asking his resignation from that office.

The resolution was signed by J. E. Pigman, brother of Benjamin F. Pigman, general manager of the Post; Arch D. Hinch, president of Indianapolis Typographical Union No. 1 and James Harvie, a printer.

City Controller William C. Buser, secretary-treasurer of the Post Publishing Company and brother-in-law of the mayor, stated the owners had decided to sell stock, enlarge the plant and publish a Sunday morning in addition to a larger evening paper. He did not say when.

The last issue of the Post was published Saturday evening. Although it was the prevailing opinion among Indianapolis newspaper men that the paper was foredoomed to failure, suspension of publication came as a great surprise, since it was thought there was enough money behind the project to keep it running several months, even with the almost total lack of advertising.

The paper was established by Duvall and his associates primarily for the purpose of helping the Duvall administration, which has been having an exceedingly rough time. A strong campaign on the part of Duvall was defeated June 21, when voters of the city adopted the city manager form of government. Then early in July Duvall and Buser were indicted on seven counts charging malfeasance in office and false campaign expense statements. The latest development in the fight against the mayor was a resolution introduced in the city Council last week to impeach both Duvall and Buser. This resolution was referred to a special committee, which will report in two weeks. As four of the five members of the committee are Duvall men, it is considered unlikely they will report the resolution favorably.

Equipment in the Post plant in the Century building represents an investment of several hundred thousand dollars. Don C. Roberts, assistant city attorney and a close friend of Duvall's, is president of the Post Publishing Company, Mr. Pigman is vice-president and general manager and Mr. Buser is secretary-treasurer. A. R. Kling is editor of the Post.

First rumblings of discord came last week when several important employes were discharged, including the managing editor.

EDITOR'S HAT IN RING

Arthur H. Vandenberg, editor of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Herald in a speech delivered this week at Corunna, Mich., indicated that he will be a candidate for Republican nomination in 1928 to succeed United States Senator Ferris, a Democrat.

NEW EDITION IN MERIDIAN

The Meridian (Miss.) Star has started a morning edition, using the A. P. membership. The evening paper is being continued. J. H. Skewes is publisher.

MOTOR DELIVERY NO MENACE TO SMALL PAPERS

Country Weeklies and Semi-Weeklies Holding Their Own Against Inroads of Large City Dailies, State Press Field Managers Declare at Detroit Meeting—E. A. Bemis Re-elected President

(By telegraph to Editor & Publisher)

DETROIT, Aug. 24.—The annual meeting of the National Association of State Press Field Managers, which wound up its five day session at the Hotel Barlum tonight, concluded its meetings with addresses reflecting a most hopeful outlook for the next year, finding in Detroit a reflection of the recent upward trend in trade in every market that was indexed by the improved conditions of the automobile manufacturers.

Speakers discussed every phase of publishing, but the big question before the group was the possible effect of big city newspapers on smaller communities through increased facilities for speedy delivery.

However, as Len Fieghner, vice-president of the association, summed it up:

"The country weekly and semi-weekly newspapers no longer face extermination by the ingress of metropolitan dailies, but instead have established themselves more firmly in an individual field.

"The time was, and that only about five years ago, when it appeared the country newspaper faced oblivion because of the increasing transportation facilities throughout states permitting the wide distribution of large city dailies. It seemed obvious that residents of small villages and towns would prefer the advantages afforded by the larger papers, especially if they could be delivered to them the day of publication.

"Actual tests of the situation during the past five years with distribution facilities greater than they have ever been before, has proved that the country newspaper serves a field of its own. No matter what quantity of small town local news is covered in the pages of the nearest large daily, there are always the seemingly trifling news items of local interest, which mean so much to the small town residents and which can be found only in their local newspaper, reaching them weekly or semi-weekly. Many readers of the local paper are subscribers of the dailies, but the local paper still has its place.

"In the small communities of 200 or 300 population, newspapers have failed because of the close proximity of a better paper, not because of lack of attributes, but because of economic conditions. This is true, too, in larger communities where two papers, neither a profitable proposition, are operating. One is soon absorbed by the other for economic reasons. But the community publication is a fixed institution."

The 19 delegates to the fifth annual meeting of the association arrived in Detroit Saturday. Discussions of a technical nature regarding the advertising, legislative and economic problems of newspapers have filled most of the sessions, the multiplicity of which have forced delegates to meet as early as seven o'clock in the morning in order to conclude the business in time.

The general theme of the meeting has been the unification of advertising rates among the newspapers of the country and policies to bring such uniformity about have been under discussion since its opening. The annual election yesterday resulted in the re-election of the executives of the year before. They are E. A. Bemis, of Boulder, Col., president; Len Fieghner of Nashville, Mich., vice-president, and Ole Buck, of Harvard, Neb., secretary-treasurer. E. F. Tucker, of Denison, Ia., was elected to the board of directors to fill a vacancy left by the retirement of G. L. Caswell, of Iowa.

Among those attending the annual meeting as guests were John L. Meyer, editor of the National Printer-Journalist, Milwaukee; H. C. Hotaling, secretary, National Editorial Association, and Herman Roe, of Northfield, Minn., former president of the National Editorial Association, who has just returned from Norway where he has been making a study of newspaper and economic conditions with a group of 11 other American newspaper men. Charles M. Meredith, newly elected president of the N. E. A., also attended.

Delegates to the convention, besides Roe, Fieghner and Bemis, were Wil V. Tufford, Clinton, Iowa; Herbert Wood, Bangor, Mich.; Jay Shaw, Elmira, N. Y.; Harry Porte, Salt Lake City, Utah; George A. Riley, New York City; L. J. Ball, Toronto, Ont.; Henry Mitchell, Bemidji, Minn.; J. S. Hubbard, Columbia, Mo.; E. F. Tucker, Denison, Iowa; Elmo Watson, Chicago; Sam S. Haislet, Minneapolis; O. W. Little, Alma, Kas.; B. A. Lawrence, Charlotte, N. C.; C. H. Rowe, Columbus, O.; J. W. Weir, Elkins, W. Va., and George W. Cushing, Detroit.

There was considerable discussion of the practice of some manufacturers, especially in automotive lines, and their advertising agencies, of attempting to place national advertising at local rates.

This practice was declared to be unfair to the local publishers and will be discussed further by members and the board before the next meeting.

It was pointed out by Mr. Hotaling and other speakers that while the spread of the automobile had helped city papers to invade the territory of smaller publishers the test of time showed that there could be no actual competition by the big paper in the small community, and the latter was only looked upon as an auxiliary of the news service furnished by the home-town journal.

One of the most interesting contributions to the meetings was the address of Mr. Roe in which he discussed the European newspaper generally and the Norwegian press particularly. He described his trip with other publishers, through Norway, where they were afforded an opportunity to study publishing there at close hand.

In Norway, he said, the papers would fill the first seven pages solidly with news and then pile all the advertising into the last five pages.

"They have not fully learned the 'next to reading matter' gospel of the American advertiser and publisher," he said. "However, with American automobile firms constantly increasing their appropriations for foreign advertising the European journals are now beginning to break away from the old system and put the advertisements where those who are reading the news will see them at first glance.

Speakers expressed the belief that the meeting of the world's news agencies at Geneva, which began Aug. 24, would be one of the most important features of the whole program of the league, and looked for decisions promising greater speed and economy in the handling of news from all parts of the world. They also pointed out that the meeting promised to bring settlement to many questions regarding copyrights, newspaper mailing rates and other matters aside from the gathering and printing of news.

Thursday, Aug. 25, was set aside by the delegates for a day of visiting, the tour taking in the Ford Motor Company's plants and the newspaper plants of the city.

INTERNATIONAL BILLS PASSED

The Lower House of the Newfoundland legislature on Aug. 24 passed without amendment or revision the government bills which will enable the International Paper Company to begin extensive operations in the north of the colony. The bills have been sent to the Upper House for consideration.

TEN MILLION DOLLAR TEXTILE FUND GATHERED FOR ADS AND PUFFERY

Ivy Lee Represents Cotton-Textile Institute with Possible $480,000 Appropriation—Eight Co-operative Drives Under Way in This and Allied Fields

WITH the endorsement this week of the Clothing Manufacturers' Research Board of the Apparel Industry Committee's plan to expend $1,500,000 in three years for "publicity, educational work and advertising" in the men's wear field, eight such campaigns in various textile and allied fields are now underway. The total to be spent in the next few years will be approximately $10,000,000.

The most pretentious is that in the shoe industry with the National Shoe Retailers' Association formulating plans to spend $4,000,000 in four years starting about Jan. 1, 1928.

The present plan of this group is that the retailers will contribute approximately $1,500,000 and manufacturers and allied industries about $2,500,000. Contributions are to be made on the basis of one half of one per cent of the annual volume of business.

The apparel industry, which plans to spend $1,500,000 in three years, will exact 1/30th of one per cent of the gross annual business from its association members.

Ivy Lee is connected with the textile publicity in representing the Cotton-Textile Institute which in its charter signifies the intention to spend a certain sum for conducting a co-operative advertising and publicity campaign. So far Mr. Lee has handled the publicity which is paid for at the rate of 2 cents a spindle of each of the Institute members. About 24,000,000 spindles are so far represented in the Institute making a possible annual expenditure of this group for publicity of $480,000.

The Associated Knit Underwear Manufacturers have spent about $125,000 a year for the past three years in a co-operative educational and advertising campaign. This campaign will probably continue for some time and is financed through contributions by manufacturers and also from some yarn and machinery concerns.

A publicity campaign which has already exacted about $35,000 a year for the past three or four years is being conducted by the glove manufacturers. The Associated Glove Crafts, Inc., sponsored by the National Association of Glove and Mitten Manufacturers, is conducting this drive. Contributions are being made largely by manufacturers and in some cases some of the financing is done by leather manufacturers.

An appropriation of $150,000 a year for three years has been made by the Irish Linen Society to promote sales of Irish linen in this country. This campaign is now in its second year.

Two campaigns in which no stipulated sums have been allotted but which are either on or now being planned are those of the woolen and worsted industry and the International Association of Clothing Designers.

The woolen and worsted trades are considering a co-operative publicity drive but as yet no definite plan has been formulated. It is the purpose of the apparel trade to endeavor to get this group to join in their drive.

The designers' group have already been conducting a campaign to promote designer-made clothes.

BRITISH JOURNALISTS HOLDING MEETING

Institute of Newspaper Men in Session in Reading — Ralph Blumenfeld Slated for Presidency

(Special to Editor & Publisher)

LONDON.—Both working journalists and newspaper proprietors from all over England were to meet at Reading, Berkshire, on Saturday, Aug. 27, for the week's annual conference of the British Institute of Journalists. The business proceedings of the conference will take place on Monday, Aug. 29, Tuesday, Aug. 30, and Thursday, Sept. 1, and the other days of the week Aug. 27-Sept. 2 will be given over to social gatherings, and visits to various places in the neighborhood of Reading.

Ralph D. Blumenfeld, editor-in-chief of the London Daily Express, has been nominated for the presidency of the Institute by the London district, in succession to Charles Igglesden, editor of the Kentish Express, Ashford, Kent.

Apart from domestic problems a number of topics will be discussed by the Institute Conference, which are of general interest to newspapermen. A delegate from Birmingham is to put to the meeting a resolution deploring "the increasing tendency on the part of newspapers and other purveyors of news to foster an appetite for sentational items and an unduly intrusive interest in personal matters."

"Not only in the public interest, but also on behalf of the journalistic profession, many of the members of which, in the pursuit of 'stunts,' are being pressed to perform tasks which are inconsistent with honor and self-respect, the Conference considers it to be the duty of the Institute of Journalists to do all in its power to check the evils in question," the resolution reads. "It therefore calls upon the Council to take prompt action to expose, and, as far as possible to put an end to, objectionable methods in the collection and presentation of news and to protect those of its members who may be endangered by making a stand for the honesty and the dignity of their profession."

The Conference is also asked to record the gratitude of the Institute to the proprietors of newspapers and to those members of the profession who, by resolute adherence to sound and honorable methods, are endeavoring to maintain the good name of British journalism.

The subject of the proposed formation of one organization for British journalists, which is being considered in its preliminary stages by a joint committee representing the Institute of Journalists and the National Union of Journalists will also be discussed at the conference, and Mr. H. A. Taylor, of Newspaper Features, Ltd., chairman of the London District, will propose a resolution approving of the action of the Council in this matter.

COMPLETES 100TH YEAR

The Monticello (N. Y.) Republican Watchman has just completed a century of publication, during which time it has had only six publishers.

STAFF HOLDS STAG PARTY

With J. E. Bradley, general manager, acting as host, the annual outing of the Scranton Times employes was held recently at Montdale, Pa. About 150 men attended. E. J. Lynett, publisher of the Times, attended.

N. Y. WORLD BANS AD USING BROUN'S NAME

Copy From New Masses Refused by Bresnahan On Ground It Would Mislead Readers

Heywood Broun's name was barred from the advertising columns of the New York World by the management of that newspaper this week.

The former columnist of "It Seems to Me" fame who resigned from the World because two articles he wrote on the Sacco and Vanzetti case were suppressed, wrote an article for The New Masses, which the weekly magazine wanted to advertise. The following advertisement was submitted to the World:

"Read Heywood Broun on Sacco and Vanzetti, September Issue of The New Masses."

The advertisement was to occupy an inch of space on the page opposite the editorials, the page on which "It Seems to Me" was formerly published. In rejecting the copy, the insertion of which would have cost the New Masses $11.25, J. F. Bresnahan business manager of the New York World, wrote:

"We return copy herewith which we decline to publish because the advertisement is misleading in its implication that the New Masses is publishing an article written by Mr. Broun and rejected by the World.

"The World has never seen this article and has never had an opportunity to pass on the question of whether it was suitable for publication in the World or not.

"In any event we must decline to print this advertisement, although we have under our contract right given Mr. Broun permission to write articles for your paper, because we are advised that the acceptance of money for this advertisement might be prejudicial to our legal interests."

The article by Mr. Broun in the New Masses was entitled "'Good' and 'Bad.'" In it the writer advanced the thesis that "good men" were responsible for the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti. He declared that the good people in any community always cry out for a hanging, while it is only the "bad" who desire justice and mercy.

"One should not send gentlemen in smoked glasses to look for white flowers," was one quotation from the New Masses article.

On Thursday of this week, Mr. Broun formally signed a contract to write for The Nation, weekly published by Oswald Garrison Villard, former publisher of the New York Evening Post. Details of the contract were not disclosed, but Editor & Publisher was informed that lawyers for the Nation and Mr. Broun were confident no opening was left for a legal conflict with the New York World, which still holds a contract signed by its former columnist.

It was stated that Mr. Broun would write a page weekly under the standing head "It Seems To Heywood Broun," with the title of contributing editor.

The public announcement said that Mr. Broun would have full freedom of utterance regardless of whether his views coincided with The Nation's editorial policy.

N. Y. GRAPHIC TOUR ENDS

Bernarr Macfadden, publisher of the New York Evening Graphic, closed their second annual friendship tour under the auspices of the Graphic, Wednesday, Aug. 11, at a banquet in the Niagara Hotel, Niagara Falls, N. Y. It was attended by 113 members of the tour.

PRINTERS ASK INCREASE

Printers employed on the newspapers of Scranton, Pa., have presented their demands to the publishers. They are asking for a wage advance of $5 a week, time-and-half for all holidays and a seven-hour day. The present agreement between the union and publishers runs out in about a month.

EDWARDS GOES TO ATLANTA

Texan Named Publisher of Georgian and Sunday American

William C. Edwards, widely known Texas newspaper man and former publisher of the Washington Herald, has become publisher of the Atlanta Georgian and Sunday American, succeeding F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson, who recently resigned.

William C. Edwards

A native of Lawrence County, Ala., Mr. Edwards moved to Texas in his early youth, and 25 years ago established the Record-Chronicle at Denton. He remained in active management of the paper until recently, when he joined the Hearst organization on the Washington Herald.

CLEVELAND OFFICE MOVED

The Cutler-Hammer Manufacturing Company has moved its Cleveland office from the Guardian Trust Building to the Guarantee Title Building, suite 1905. The new office has approximately three times as much space as the former location.

ADVERTISING "LONG DISTANCE"

The New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. is conducting an advertising campaign throughout New England to tell the public the value of its telephone toll service.

PASTOR TO APPEAL

Hopes to Get Contempt Case Before U. S. Supreme Court

Attorneys for the Rev. Edward S. Shumaker, superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League, who faces a sentence of 60 days on the state penal farm and a $250 fine for contempt of the state Supreme court, have announced that they will appeal the court's decision to the United States Supreme court. Shumaker's alleged contempt was contained in an article in the Indiana edition of the American Issue, Anti-Saloon League organ, criticising the court and the attorney-general for lax liquor law enforcement.

The announcement came after the state Supreme court had quashed in quick succession three appeals, first, for an arrest of judgment; second, for a new trial, and third for a diminution of punishment. The court, however, agreed to allow Shumaker to remain at liberty on $1,000 bond until sentence is passed on Jesse E. Martin, Anti-Saloon League attorney convicted with Shumaker.

The new move will come either through an appeal for a writ of error to the Indiana Supreme court or appeal for a writ of certiorari to the United States Supreme court, it was said.

P. & A. EXPANDING ABROAD

H. B. Baker, general manager of Pacific & Atlantic Photos, Inc., is in Europe now reorganizing and enlarging the foreign service of the picture syndicate. He has appointed Joseph Wurzel, formerly his assistant, director of the European Service, succeeding Marcel Wallenstein, resigned. Wurzel has been with P. & A. since it was organized. Formerly he was with Underwood & Underwood.

MRS. HEARST TAKES FLIGHT IN "OLD GLORY"

The photograph, taken at Curtiss Field, Long Island, shows (left to right) Philip Payne, managing editor of the New York Daily Mirror, who is directing the New York to Rome flight for Mr. Hearst; Mrs. Bertaud, wife of the pilot; and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst and Lloyd Bertaud. Mrs. Hearst is thanking Lloyd Bertaud after she had taken a flight in the plane.

GIRL ARRESTED NEWSPAPER SUITS

Found at 3 A. M. in Offices of torneys for Paul Block and Toled Blade and Held in $25,000 Bail on Burglary Charge

A startling new angle to several s filed following the sale of the Tol (O.) Blade to Paul Block in June, 1 developed recently in the arrest of Do thy Polk, alias Dorothy Day, 27, Los Angeles and Detroit, who is h under $25,000 bail by Toledo police a hearing on a charge of burglary.

Miss Day was arrested at 3 a. Aug. 5 in the offices of Smith, Bak Effler and Eastman, Toledo counsel Mr. Block and the Blade. When qu tioned by a member of the firm who s prised her in the offices, she said she h been employed to obtain records perta ing to several suits in which Fred Buggie and H. S. Talmadge, former m agers of the Blade and the News (N. J.) Star Eagle, which also was pu chased by Mr. Block; Barton Smith a L. E. Eastman, members of the law fi of Smith, Baker, Effler and Eastma and Mr. Block were involved.

Miss Day identified herself as a dete tive, saying she had been brought Toledo from Los Angeles by a man gi ing the name of Walter Baker "to do job on which everyone else had fall down." She said that at a conferen after her arrival from the coast she w told to make the acquaintance of som one in the law office and in that way g the records in the cases under discussio The member of the firm who found h in the offices said she had open befo her a folder containing documents in t newspaper cases.

Two hearings have been held in effort to have Miss Day's bail reduce without avail. At one of the hearin she testified she had at one time work on the Detroit Journal "filling in" ar had appeared in a motion picture fil sponsored by the Journal. That w while Mr. Buggie was business manag of the Journal.

The suits in regard to which Miss Da said she was seeking information follow Suit by Mr. Block to recover a larg sum of money from Mr. Buggie and M Talmadge, alleged to have disappeare while in charge of the Star Eagle.

Suit by Mr. Block to recover from th same two men a large sum of mone said to have disappeared while they wer in charge of the Blade.

Suit by Mr. Buggie and Mr. Talmadg against the Blade Company to recove for cancellation of contracts which the had with the Toledo Blade, which, the said, had several more years to run.

Suit by Mr. Buggie against Barto Smith, chairman of the board of th Blade and a member of the law firm rep resenting Mr. Block and the Blade, i which he seeks to recover $250,000 charging slander.

Suit by Mr. Buggie for $250,00 against L. E. Eastman, member of the law firm representing Mr. Block and the Blade, charging slander.

Publication of Miss Day's alleged confession in the Blade has resulted in a new libel suit being filed against Mr. Block. Miss Day said that at the conference at which she was given instructions regarding her work in Toledo, F. S. Lewis, one of the Toledo attorneys representing Mr. Buggie, had been present. Publication of this fact in the Blade was the basis of a suit filed by Mr. Lewis against Mr. Block, in which the attorney asks $100,000, charging libel.

RECEIVER FOR DAILY

Anderson Ketchum of Greensburg, Ind., was appointed receiver for the Greensburg Democrat Company, publishers of the Greensburg Evening Times, following a hearing in the Decatur Circuit court at Greensburg Monday. The hearing was the result of an action brought by William B. Porter against the corporation and Will Chambers and Grace Chambers, asking for an accounting and appointment of a receiver.

1927 SEES DECREASE IN NUMBER OF SYNDICATES

Exclusive Annual Tabulation Shows Drop from 100 to 80—Newspaper Mergers Hard Blow to Many Firms—More Than 2,000 Features Offered to Editors

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

A SLIGHT reduction over last year in the number of features and the umber of syndicates catering to news-aper publishers is evidenced in the ourth annual directory of syndicate fea-ures presented by EDITOR & PUBLISHER this issue.

Exclusive of picture services, there are sted today in the EDITOR & PUBLISHER bulation 80 syndicates offering approxi-ately 2,000 different features for edi-orial selection. A list of 10 picture ervices increases the total listing to 90 s compared with a total of more than 00 published in last year's directory.

While there are several new entries nto the syndicate field, consolidations and uspensions have kept the total number own. It is becoming a more expensive roposition each year to buck established yndicate competition, and a number of entures have been forced out of the unning before they could gain their econd wind.

There are those old in the syndicate orld who are inclined to believe that he totals must be further cut. In their elief there are far too many firms seek-ng to place art and editorial copy in ne nation's papers. If the business is o continue profitable and economic, it their contention that the flood of cheap eatures on the market must be stopped. his over-supply of features, they claim proving injurious to the newspapers s well as to themselves.

"The market is being glutted," one old-mer said to EDITOR & PUBLISHER this eek. "The syndicate idea has been verdone and there must be mergers and onsolidations in the syndicate field just s there have been among newspapers."

Newspaper mergers of the past year ave hit the syndicates blow after blow. n one city where a big consolidation as effected a short time ago, one syn-icate alone lost an income of $525 a eek. Other syndicates also suffered as result of the same newspaper trans-ction.

On the other hand there are editors ho welcome a crowded syndicate field oping it will check excessive prices and rovide the variety needed to prevent the ppearance of complete standardization of ne daily press.

In any review of current syndicate ctivities, the picturization of news and eatures both through the medium of the amera and by pen and brush assumes aramount importance. The picture in-uence is felt all down the line of fea-ure offerings.

"Those snappers," as the Pig Woman n the Hall-Mills murder trial referred o the photographers, have been more ctive during this year than ever before n the history of giving the reading ublic what the editors think it wants. hese fast-darting terriers and terrors f today's journalism have been snapping t the heels of every big news story. taff men of Acme Newspictures, In-ernational Newsreel, Pacific & Atlantic hotos, and Times World Wide have lown more miles in the last several onths than the total of all the trans-ceanic flights. They have flown to get ictures and to transport them to news-aper offices. It has become a common ccurrences to telephone a picture from ew York to San Francisco and to radio r cable pictures from London to New ork. When Lindbergh, Chamberlin nd Levine, and Byrd and his crew were France the picture syndicates kept the ires hot with photographs for the pers.

The coverage of these and the awaiian flights appears to-date to be e brightest spot on an otherwise drab st six months of 1927 syndication. he New York Times and associated wspapers presented Lindbergh with out $100,000 for by-line stories of his venture and it is also understood that gh prices were obtained by the same agency for Chamberlin and Levine. Despite the fact that the pending flight of "Old Glory," the Hearst plane, piloted by Lloyd Bertaud, will represent the fourth trans-Atlantic hop of the season, Lt. Col. Guy T. Viskniskki of the Payne Syndicate, reported to EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week that he had sold the advance stories to 50 newspapers at high prices, and expected even better results if the flyers arrived safely in Rome.

Otherwise, syndicate editors admit that this year has been noteworthy for its dullness as far as the creation of new feature ideas is concerned. It has witnessed an attempt to superimpose the old-time question-and-answer fad on the quondam widespread popularity of the cross-word puzzle which still can be sold it is said, without high-pressure salesmanship. The game of "Guggenheim" was brought back to life by Milton MacKaye for the same purpose. "Laddergrams" were introduced by the Ledger Syndicate.

In the serial listings, some editors see the sexy stories giving way to more healthy tales of adventure and romance. This view, however, is not held in the Hearst offices, where the fiction board, made up of Ray Long, Morrill Goddard, M. Koenigsberg, Philip A. Payne, and Percy Shaw, are inclined rather to rotate, sending out one serial of sex interest and following it with adventure, then romance, before returning again to sex.

This fiction board is one of the most interesting developments of the present day syndicate field. William Randolph Hearst's idea in establishing it was for the purpose of discovering exclusive writers of newspaper fiction. It followed the success of Fremont Older, who, as editor of the San Francisco Call, gave Eleanore Meherin free rein to write her first fiction serial "Chickie," which, as originally produced had San Francisco as its locale, and, which changed its locale as it was sold to newspapers ir various cities throughout the country and even in China.

From this beginning such writers on other syndicates as Winifred Van Duzer, Robert Terry Shannon, Beatrice Burton, Barbara Webb, Virginia Swain and Anne Austin were given their first opportunities to write newspaper fiction, which could be adapted to any American city where it was sold. It has been an expensive undertaking for the syndicates with high priced promotion adding to the bill.

The "true story," so-called, of Macfadden origin still commands a big audience also, and some editors continue to be fascinated by the first person pronoun. Among the "Big I" stories of the immediate future are those yet to be penned by the ghosts of Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney, which find a ready sale, while Leslie Fulenwider, president of the Famous Features Syndicate, is soon returning from France bearing a manuscript in which Madame Lupescu, the playmate of Prince Carol of Rumania, will "tell all."

Among the thousands of different types of syndicate offerings now available, the so-called "funnies," comic strips and cartoons continue well in the lead as far as numbers are concerned. This division, provided with the separate heading of "Newspaper Art" in the EDITOR & PUBLISHER Directory, accounts, exclusive of fiction, for nearly one quarter of the entire output of syndicated material.

It seems indisputable that there is any other "art" more widely and happily accepted than the "comic strip." Nearly 150 artists are earning their livelihood by catering to this peculiar American taste, now popular even in the Orient and the South American countries.

The coiners of those expressive words "plop," "oof" and "zam" are today producing an amazing total of 146 different comic strips for the readers of American newspapers. By "strip" is meant a series of pictures the characters in which act out a joke or tell the chapter of a story.

During the past year the outstanding development in the strip industry has been the application of this type of pen and ink drawing to the picturization of the "classics." To Philip Payne, managing editor of the New York Daily Mirror, must go credit for this innovation. But he was merely refining on the pioneering work of J. Carol Mansfield. who drew an outline of history in strip form for the McClure Newspaper Syndicate in November, 1924.

Now nothing is too sacred for the "stripper," who produces series picturizing tales from Shakespeare, Bible stories, and the works of Charles Dickens. The largest number of such features are produced by artists in the employ of the King Features Syndicate, but it was the U. P. C. Syndicate and the World Color Printing Company which first essayed to make the Bible a subject for pens more accustomed to drawing in the Mutt and Jeff field.

Added to the 150 strippers there are at least three score cartoonists, who lay claim to greater dignity and to a more ancient background. And there is also a growing type of newspaper art, the small single column comic, captioned with one short wisecrack, which dates back nearly 20 years when George Matthew Adams introduced Kin Hubbard and his "Abe Martin" to the newspaper reading public.

This year's EDITOR & PUBLISHER survey shows a list of 48 single column comics.

The camera is beginning to threaten the comic stripper and the illustrator of newspaper serials. But so-far critics consider the bulk of the illustrative work done by photographers stuffy compared with the reckless dash of the line drawings. Mark Hellinger for the New York Daily News and the Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate, this year introduced his wisecracking photo-strip "Broadway," a New York column caught by a camera lens. He wasn't the originator of the photo-strip idea. Cameramen under Macfadden direction had been pioneers, and "The Antics of Arabella," a picture-strip handled by the Graphic Syndicate showing two chorines doing their daily dozen and cracking jokes with their joints is one of the oldest examples in this division.

At the present writing there is quite a flurry in the strip world over the picturization of the story of aviation.

While not so hot at inventing the new in 1927, the fertile minded syndicate editors rediscovered the old and refashioned it to suit the picture hungry tabloid-trained eyes of modern America. About a year ago, George Jean Nathan, writing in the American Mercury, speculated on the present whereabouts of the author of the Frank Merriwell stories, which he believed were read by more American boys than had read Huckleberry Finn. This editorial paragraph caught the eye of Fred S. Ferguson, president of NEA Service, Inc. Mr. Ferguson, a newspaper man, wasn't satisfied with wondering what had become of the author of the Frank Merriwell tales; he found him. The author was Gilbert Patten, who for 17 years had turned out a story of 20,000 words a week to be published in Tip Top Weekly and sold for a nickel. Mr. Ferguson signed a contract with Mr. Patten and on Jan. 20 of this year NEA Service, Inc., began selling a new strip called Jack Lockwill at Rocklack. In the literature sent out at the time Jack was described as the modern Frank Merriwell. Patten authors the text of the strip and the art-work is by Lawrence Redner.

Mr. Ferguson wasn't exactly breaking new ground with this new strip of his. He knew it would sell. A salesman had proved that to him. Jay Jerome Williams, formerly on the road for Bell Syndicate now publisher of the United States Daily, had previously perpetrated a "mild hoax" on the newspaper editors in order to introduce a boy's story strip. He took for himself the name of Edwin Alger, not to be confused, of course, with Horatio Alger, and under that name wrote the balloons for a strip called "Bound to Win" which expressed what he thought normal American boys liked to read. In selling his own work along with the other Bell features Williams described "Edwin Alger" as an elderly gentleman with snow white sideburns and courtly manner, who had raised four boys to maturity and knew all there was to know about boy psychology.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER FOURTH ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF FEATURES

General, Art and Sport Features—Directory of Authors and Artists—List of Syndicate Officers and Addresses

(Copyright 1927 by Editor & Publisher Co.)

GENERAL NEWSPAPER FEATURES

Interviews, Columns, Editorials, Women's Page, Radio, Serials, Etc.

A

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
A B C's of Contract Bridge (d) (½)	Murry Campbell	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Abe Martin (d) (1) (w) (½) (ill.)	Kin Hubbard	National Newspaper Service
Abie's Irish Rose (serial) (ill.)	Ann Nichols	United Feature Syndicate
About Broadway (w) (1)	Mark Hellinger	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
About Photoplays (w) (½)	"Klip"	Editor's Copy
Ad-Route, The (m) (booklet)	W. S. Ball	International Syndicate
Advancing World	Various	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
Advertising Mat Service (m)	Harry S. Bressler	Star Adcraft Service
Advice for Everybody (d) (⅛)	Mme. Hall Deane	Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Advice to Girls (d)	Annie Laurie	Newspaper Feature Service
Advice to the Lovelorn (3w) (1)		International Feature Service
Air News Service (w) (1)	Carl B. Butman	Washington Radio News Service
Airplane Models (d) (1) (ill)	Paul Edward Garber	Science Service, Inc.
All Star Short Stories (d) (½)		Ledger Syndicate
Almanac (d) (¼)	Special	NEA Service, Inc.

(Continued on page 8)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER FOURTH ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF FEATURES

(See Key to Symbols on Page 9)

(Continued from page 7)

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Almanac of Today in History (d) (¼)	E. M. Henderson	Register & Tribune Syndicate
America, The Land of Opportunity (⅓)	Julius H. Barnes	King Editor's Features
Anderson's Theatrical Column (w) (1)	John Anderson	Post Syndicate
Andrew and Imogene (d)	Roe Fulkerson	McNaught Syndicate
Answers to Questions (d)	Frederic J. Haskin	Haskin Information Bureau
Army News (d) (½)	Vivian Lee Tillman	Army-Navy News Service
Around The Radio Bial (d) (¼)		Audio Service
Art and Needle (d) (1)	Nita Grey	International Syndicate
Articles (d)	O. O. McIntyre	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Ask Me Another (dw)	Lucien Esty and Justin Spafford	Bell Syndicate
Ask Yourself (d) (¼) (ill.)		Science Service
Auction Analyzed (w) (1)	Wynne Ferguson	Bell Syndicate
Auction Bridge (d) (½ illus.)	Milton C. Work	National Newspaper Service
Auction Bridge (d)	Whitehead	Republic Syndicate
Automobile Feature Articles (w) (1)	William Ullman	Ullman Feature Service
Automobile Letter (w) (1)	J. E. Shipman	International Feature Service
Automobile News (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Auto Page (w) (f.p.)	Klein and special	NEA Service, Inc.
Aviation Articles (serial) (1-ills.)	Various	National Newspaper Service
Aviation Features Articles (w) (1)	F. J. Carmody	Ullman Feature Service

B

Babson Article (w) (1½)	Roger W. Babson	Publishers Financial Bureau
Baby Elephant Campaigns		Eastern Newspaper Service
Baby Mines (filler) (d) (3¼)	Paul Pim	George Matthew Adams Service
Background of Events (3w)	Paul V. Collins	Paul V. Collins Editorial Syndicate
Background of Foreign Affairs (w)	Henry Kittredge Norton	NEA Service, Inc.
Barbs (d) (⅛)	W. M. Braucher	NEA Service, Inc.
Beatrice Fairfax Articles (3) (1)		International Feature Service
Beautiful Home (3w)	Various	Editors Syndicate
Beauty (dw)	Antoinette Donnelly	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
"Beauty" (d) (½)	Mme. Qui Vive	King Features Syndicate
Beauty Art (w) (¾)	Lois Leeds	Ledger Syndicate
Beauty and Health (d) (½) (ill.)	Edna Kent Forbes	George Matthew Adams Service
Beauty Hints (d) (⅛)	Edna May	Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Beauty Hints (d) (½)	Special Writers	NEA Service, Inc.
Beauty Service (d) (½)	Lois Leeds	Ledger Syndicate
Beauty Spots (3w) (½)	Anne Jordan	Newspaper Feature Service
Beauty and You (w) (ill) (1¼)	Viola Paris	United Feature Syndicate
Beauty, Your (3w) (¾)	Mme. Jeritza	Premier Syndicate
Beckley's Corner	Zoe Beckley	Famous Features Snydicate
Bedtime Stories (d)	Thornton Burgess	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Bedtime Stories (d) (½)	T. W. Burgess	Associated Newspapers
Behaviorism and Our Work (w) (serial) (¼)	Dr. John B. Watson	King Editors' Features
Bible Feature (d) (⅓)	Dr. Alvin E. Bell	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Bible Stories (w) (¾)	Dr. Shailer Mathews	National Newspaper Service
Bible Study (w) (½)	R. W. Thompson	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Big Sister Talks (3w) (½)	Lucy Lowell	International Feature Service
Birthday Club (d)	Staff	Republic Syndicate
Book Nobody Knows, The (w)	Bruce Barton	Bell Syndicate
Book Reviews (w) (⅓)	Fanny Butcher	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Book Review (w) (2)	NEA Book Survey	NEA Service, Inc.
Boys and Girls Page (w) (fp)	Miscellaneous	Associated Editors, Inc.
Braintester (word game feature) (w) (1)	Dr. Winston Mitchell	National Newspaper Service
Bridge Problems (w) (¾)	Milton C. Work	National Newspaper Service
Bright Bits (d) (¼)		Keystone Feature Service
Broadway (w) (1)	Bushnell Dimond	Newspaper Feature Service
Broadway's Current Successes (w) (5) (ill.)		George Matthew Adams Service
Bugs (w) (2)	Don Wooton	NEA Service, Inc.
Building and Flying Model Airplanes (d) (1) (ill)	Paul Edward Garber	Science Service, Inc.
Burroughs Nature Notes (d) (⅓)	Questions and Answers	Houghton Mifflin Company Syndicate Bureau
Business Day by Day (d) (2) Ill)	Ralph F. Couch	Couch Publishing Co.
Business News Service (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Business News Service (d)		Ledger Syndicate
Business Review (w)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Business Review (w) (⅓)	Wilfred Cousins	King Features Syndicate
Business Review Service (30p.)	Staff	Cambridge Associated, Inc.
Business Service (dw) (½)	John T. Flynn	U. P. C. News Services, Inc.
Business Weather, The (w) (1)		Publishers Financial Bureau

C

Cambridge Business News Service (d) (⅛)	Staff	Cambridge Associated Inc.
Camera News (w) (fp.)		International Syndicate
Canadian Features	Staff	Dominion News Bureau, Ltd.
Canadian History Day by Day (d) (⅛)	Fred Williams	Star Newspaper Service
Can You Answer This One (d) (⅓)	F. B. Warren	Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Capital Gossip (w) (1)	Maxine Davis	Capital News Service
Carlyle's Column (d) (½)	John Carlyle	Associated Newspapers
Card Index Cooking Recipes (d) (2)		U. P. C. News Service, Inc.
Carroll's Dispatches (d)	Raymond G. Carroll	Post Syndicate
Cartoons, Dot (d) (2)	George Bell	Bell Syndicate
Cartoons (sport) Al Demaree (d) (1)	Al Demaree	Publishers Syndicate
Catholic Radio Features (d) (¼)		Audio Service
Chevrons (d) (2)	Leonard Nason	Bell Syndicate
Chats with Girls (dw)	Doris Blake	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Character Close-ups (d) (1)	Geo. W. Spayth	Ledger Syndicate
Cheerful Cherub (d) (2¾) (filler)	Rebecca McCann	George Matthew Adams Service
Child Training (4w) (¾)	Lamar Matthews	International Feature Service
Children's Animal Stories (d)	El Comancho	Republic Syndicate
Children's (w) (f.p.)		World Color Printing Co.
Children's Cut Outs (d) (2)	Will Pente	National Newspaper Service
Children's Features	Ramon Coffman	Publishers Syndicate
Children's Page (w) (fp)		International Syndicate
Children's Page (w) (fp)		National News Service
Children Stories (Natural History) (dw) (⅓)		Eastern Newspaper Service
Christmas Cartoons		Eastern Newspaper Service
Christmas Stories		Eastern Newspaper Service
Chum Chats (d) (½)	Betty Clift	Payne Syndicate, Inc.
City Editors Service (d) (½)	Miscellaneous	Associated Editors, Inc.
Classified Promotion (m) (25 pgs).	Harrison C. MacDonald	Publishers Syndicate
Classics in a Motor Car (w)	H. C. Witwer	King Features Syndicate
Classics in Slanguage (w)	H. C. Witwer	King Features Syndicate
Classified Radio Programs (d) (¾)		Audio Service
Cobb's Then and There Series (w) (3) (ill.)	Irvin Cobb	Bell Syndicate
Column "We Women" (d) (½)	Betty Brainerd	Associated Newspapers
College Humor (w) (¼, ⅓, fp) (ill)	Miscellaneous	Bell Syndicate
Column (humorous) (d) (1)	H. I. Phillips	Associated Newspapers
Come To Church page (d) (fp)	J. L. Keys	Keys Religious News Service
Condensed Radio Program (d) (½)		Audio Service
Confessions of Authors (w) (¼)		Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Conning Tower, The (column) (d) (1)	F. P. A.	New York World Syndicate
Convention News (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Cook-Coos (d) (1½)	Ted Cook	King Features Syndicate
Cooking Recipes (w) (½)	Staff	Columbia Newspaper Service
Cookery (dw)	Jane Eddington	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syn
Correct English (d)	Mrs. C. B. Jorden	Ledger Syndicate
Cozy Corner Stories (w) (¾)	Aunt Susan	Columbia Newspaper Service
Cross Word Puzzles (5w)	Various	Associated Newspapers
Cross Word Puzzles (dw)		Bell Syndicate
Cross Word Puzzles (d) (2)	G. W. White	Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Cross Word Puzzles (d) (2)		International Syndicate
Cross Word Puzzle (d)		King Features Syndicate
Cross Word Puzzles (d) (2)	Walter B. Gibson	Ledger Syndicate
Cross-word Puzzle (d) (2)	Staff	NEA Service, Inc.
Cross Word Puzzle (d) (2)	Staff	New York World Syndicate
Crossword Puzzles (d) (2)		Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Cross Word Puzzles (w) (3)		Premier Syndicate
Current Radio (d) (2)	A. C. Lescarboura	International Syndicate
Curtain Rises, The (w) (1) (Theatrical)	George Halasz	Continental Features

D

Daddy Duck in Wonderland (⅓) (ill.)	Uncle George	Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Daddy's Evening Fairy Tales (d) (¾)	Mary Graham Bonner	Western Newspaper Union
Daily Fashion Articles (⅓)		Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Daily Mirror of Washington (d) (½)	Clinton W. Gilbert	Ledger Syndicate
Daily Puzzlette (d)	Alan S. Foster	Ledger Syndicate
Dare Interprets the Mode (dw)	Dare	Associated Newspapers
Daybook of a New Yorker (d) (½)	Burton Rascoe	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Deb Days (serial) (ill) (d) (⅓)	Little Mabie	Ledger Syndicate
Debs's Diary (d) (⅓) (ills.)	Earl Reeder	National Newspaper Service
Dempsey, Jack—Signed Stories (d) (¾)	Jack Dempsey	King Features Syndicate
Detective Stories (w) (fp)		Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syn
Developing a Pleasing Personality (w) (serial) (¼)	Dr. W. W. Charters, U. of C.	King Editors' Features
Dial Diary, The (w) (¾)		Ullman Feature Service
Diana the Huntress (Serial) (ill)	Vida Hurst	United Feature Syndicate
Diary of a New Father (d) (½) (w) (2)	Bob Dickson	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Diet & Health (d) (⅔)	Dr. Lulu Hunt Peters	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Diet Talks (d) (2)		U. P. C. News Service, Inc.
Dog Hill Paragrafs (d) (ill.)	George Bingham	George Matthew Adams Service
Dog Stories (w)	Albert Payson Terhune	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Domestic Science (3w) (½)	Hannah Wing	International Feature Service
Dorothy Dix Service (d) (1)	Dorothy Dix	Ledger Syndicate
Dot Cartoons (d) (2)	George Bell	Bell Syndicate
Dot Puzzles (d) (1)	Elsa Kaji	International Syndicate
Dramatic News and Reviews (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Duke and the B. and C. (w) (qp) (ill.)	Bakrak	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd
D-X Radio Programs (d) (¾)		Audio Service

E

Earthquake Reporting Wires (occasional) (¼)	Staff	Science Service
Economy Kinks (dwm) (⅓)	L. B. Robbins	Houghton Mifflin Company Syndicate Bureau
Editorial (d) (½)	John Carlyle	Associated Newspapers
Editorial (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Editorial (d)	Robert Quillen	Publishers Syndicate
Editorials (w)	Bruce Barton	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Editorials (d) (½)	Norman Hapgood	United Feature Syndicate
Editorials (w) (2)	H. S. Sims	Editor's Copy
Editorial Articles (d)	Dr. Frank Crane	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Editorial Filler (w) (1)		Ullman Feature Service
Editorial Paragraphs (d)	Robert Quillen	Publishers Syndicate
Editorial Paragraphs (w) (1)	H. S. Sims	Editors' Copy
Editorial Research Service (w)		Editorial Research Reports
Editorials on News	Various	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
Efficient Housekeeping (d) (½)	Laura A. Kirkman	George Matthew Adams Service
English Fiction (d) (serial)	English Novelists	United Feature Syndicate
Etiquette (d) (½)	Anne Singleton	United Feature Syndicate
Etiquette (d) (¾)	Katherine de Peyster	Premier Syndicate
Etiquette (w) (qp)	Persis Standish	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd.
Etiquette Hints (d) (¼)	Helen Decie	Ledger Syndicate
Evening Story (d) (1700 wds.)		Associated Newspapers
Evening World Daily Feature Service (d)	Staff	New York World Syndicate
Every Day Law Cases (d)	"Counsellor"	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Everyday Poems (d) (125)	George Elliston	Associated Newspapers
Everyday Questions & Answers (d)	Dr. S. Parkes Cadman	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Every Man a Successful Public Speaker (w) (serial) (¼)	Harry Collins Spillman	King Editors' Features
Exploit & Adventure (w) (fp) (ill)	Explorers, Adventurers and Writers	Metropolitan Newspaper Service

F

Fables in Slang (w) (1½) (ill)	George Ade
Famous Composers (2w) (¼)	Cozette Douglass	Newspaper Feature Service
Famous Foods (d) (⅓-ill)	Mable S. Richards	National Newspaper Service
Famous Monuments	Hendrik Van Loon	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Farm and Garden (dw)	Frank Ridgway	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd.
Farm Gossip (w) (1)	Dr. L. S. Wolfe	Editor's Copy
Farm Page (w) (f.p.)	Staff and Special	NEA Service, Inc.
Farming & Finance (w) (1)		Publishers Financial Bureau
Fashion (w) (f.p.)		World Color Printing Co.
Fashions	Various	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
Fashions (w) (f.p.)		International Syndicate
Fashions (dw)	Corinne Lowe	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd.
Fashions (w)	Ruth Stuyvesant	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Fashion Chat & Home Craft (w) (fp)		National News Service
Fashions, Daily (d) (1)	Marie Belmont	International Feature Service

(Continued on page 40)

FEATURE AND PICTURE SYNDICATES OF UNITED STATES AND CANADA

Name	Address	Editor	Manager
George Matthew Adams Service	250 Park ave., New York	Jessie A. Sleight	B. Pascale
Allen Feature Service	440 Riverside Drive, New York	Mary Elizabeth Alle	J. B. Wallach
Associated Editors	440 S. Dearborn st., Chicago	W. Boyce Morgan	J. Abegg
Associated Newspapers	270 Madison ave., New York	W. P. Sarver	H. H. McClure
Associated Press Feature Service	383 Madison ave. New York	L. C. Stratton	N. A. Huse
Audio Service	326 W. Madison st., New York	Joseph Fischer	V. E. Storey
Bell Syndicate, Inc.	154 Nassau st., New York	Douglas Silver	H. M. Snevily
Cambridge Associates, Inc.	174 Newbury st., Boston, Mass.	S. L. Sholley	Aaron M. Jones
Capital News Service	National Press Building, Washington, D. C.	Maxine Davis	Maxine Davis
Central Press Assn	1435 E. 12th st., Cleveland, O.	Lester Eichel	V. V. McNitt
Chicago Journal of Commerce	12 E. Grand ave., Chicago	Arthur A. Judd	Arthur A. Judd
Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate	Tribune Tower, Chicago		Arthur W. Crawford
Christy Walsh Syndicate	570 Seventh ave., New York		Christy Walsh
Paul V. Collins Editorial Syndicate	Star Bldg., Washington, D. C.	Paul V. Collins
Columbia Newspaper Service	799 Broadway, New York	T. A. Webb	T. A. Webb
Continental Features	145 W. 45th st., New York	George Halasz
Couch Publishing Company	521 Bond Building, Washington, D. C.	Ralph E. Couch	Ralph E. Couch
Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate	70 5th av., New York	Ethel Paine	Herbert S. Houston
Current News Features	520 Star Building, Washington, D. C.	H. R. Baukhage	H. R. Baukhage
C. P. Syndicate	Garden City, L. I., New York	Ralph H. Graves	Ralph H. Graves
Devil Dog Syndicate	154 Nassau st., New York
Dominion News Bureau, Ltd.	275 Craig St. W., Montreal, P. Q.		W. E. Hopper
Eastern Newspaper Service	457 Stuart st., Boston, Mass.	James Dempsey	Lee Lamar
Editors Copy	Orangeburg, S. C.	Hugo S. Sims	Hugo S. Sims
Editors Syndicate	5 East 57th st., New York	I. V. VanDyck	C. L. Rogers
Famous Features Syndicate	1819 Broadway, New York	K. S. Garden	K. S. Garden
Gilliams Service	32 Union Square, New York	Walter Dantzher	F. F. Gilliams
Graphic Syndicate, Ind.	350 Hudson st.	E. H. Gauvreau	T. O. Davidson
Handy Filler Service	141 Drumm st., San Francisco
Haskin Information Bureau	Washington, D. C.	Marie Watts	F. J. Haskin
Heinl Radio News Syndicate	405 Insurance Bldg. Washington, D. C.		Robert D. Heinl
Herald Tribune Syndicate	225 W. 40th st., New York		Harry Staton
Holmes Feature Service	135 Garrison ave. Jersey City, N. J.	G. R. Holmes	M. E. Dollard
Houghton Mifflin Company Syndicate Bureau	2 Park st., Boston, Mass.	W. B. Pratt	W. B. Pratt
International Feature Service	241 W. 58th St., New York	Jack Lait	M. Koenigsberg
International Syndicate	1508 Guilford ave., Baltimore, Md.	R. Maurice Miller	R. Maurice Miller
Jersey Feature Service	319 21st st., Union City, N. J.	Irving A. Brody	L. J. Hershdojer
Keyes Relgious News Service	Peru, Ind.	J. L. Keyes	J. L. Keyes
Keystone Features Syndicate	1211 Commonwealth Bldg., Philadelphia	A. S. Freed	L. L. Young
King Features Syndicate	241 W. 58th st., New York	Alexander Black	M. Koenigsberg
Ledger Syndicate	Independence Square, Philadelphia, Pa.	John E. Watkins	J. E. Watkins
McClure Newspaper Syndicate	373 4th ave., New York	Harold Matson	Clinton Brainerd
McCoy Health Service	Bracks Shops Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.	Dr. Frank McCoy
McNaught Syndicate	1475 Broadway, New York		V. V. McNitt
Eugene MacLean Features	827 Folson st., San Francisco, Cal.	Eugene MacLean	Eugene MacLean
Metropolitan Newspaper Service	150 Nassau st., New York	Earl J. Hadley	Maximilian Elser, Jr.
National Feature Service	4035 New Hampshire ave., Washington, D. C.	E. Parker
National News Service	3721 N. 17th st., Philadelphia, Pa.	S. A. Silberman	Milton R. Jacobs
National Newspaper Service	326 W. Madison st. Chicago, Ill.		John Dille
NEA Service, Inc.	461 Eighth ave., New York 1200 W. Third st., Cleveland, O.	Herbert W. Walker	Fred S. Ferguson James W. Dean
Newspaper Feature Service	241 W. 58th st., New York	D. C. Hawthorne, S. Bushnell	M. K. Dimon
New York World Syndicate	63 Park Row, New York		F. B. Knapp
Odell Newspaper Service	55 5th ave., New York	Edith Odell	Edith Odell
Post Syndicate	75 West st., New York	J. E. Watkins	J. E. Watkins
Payne Syndicate	154 Nassau st., New York		Guy T. Viskniskki
Premier Syndicate	241 W. 58th st., New York	Florence McIntyre	M. Koenigsberg
Publishers Financial Bureau	Babson Park, Mass.	C. F. Hayes, Jr.	E. O. Hood
Publishers' Syndicate	20 No. LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill.		Eugene P. Conley
Register and Tribune Syndicate	Des Moines, Ia.	Henry P. Martin, Jr.	Henry P. Martin, Jr.
Republic Syndicate	15 E. 26th st., New York		E. S. McClure
Science Service	21st and B sts., N. W., Washington, D. C.	Edwin E. Slosson	Watson Davis
Service for Authors, Inc.	551 Fifth ave., New York City	Leo Margulies	Hamilton Thompson
Standard Editorial Service	Star Bldg., Washington, D. C.	W. J. Voss	Herbert S. Hollander
Star Newspaper Service	18 King street, West Toronto-2	David B. Rogers	Kenneth A. McMillan
Thompson Feature Service	128 W. 31st st., New York		A. L. Fowle
Superior Feature Service	288 Graham ave., Paterson, N. J.	Doris E. Drawbridge	Ralph W. Maxwell
Tillman Army News Service	Washington, D. C.	Vivian Lee Tillman	Lieut. Stephen F. Tillman (Ret.)
Ullman Feature Service	Star Building, Washington, D. C.		William Ullman W. E. Schaaff
U. P. C. News Service, Inc.	243 W. 39th st., New York City		John T. Flynn
United Feature Syndicate	World Bldg., New York City		Howard Wheeler
Washington News Service	*3207 Cleveland ave., N. W., Washington, D. C.		Carl H. Butman

*(After Sept. 1st, at 884 National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.)

Western Newspaper Union	Chicago, Ill.	Wright A. Patterson	H. H. Fish,
Woman's National News Bureau	*1523 L st., N. W. (*After Sept. 1st at National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.)	Washington, D. C.	Dorothy Shumate
Woman's Page Copy	Plymouth, Indiana	Mrs. Florence	Riddick Boys
World Color Printing Co	701-703 Lucas ave., St. Louis, Mo.	Roswell Messing	R. S. Grable
World Wide News Service, Inc.	101 Milk st., Boston, Mass.	J. J. Bosdan

EDITORIAL RESEARCH

Editorial Research Reports	839 17th st., Washington, D. C.	Richard M. Boeckel, Cleveland Perkins	Burt P. Garnett

NEWS SERVICES

Associated Press	383 Madison ave., New York	Kent Cooper
Canadian Press	106 Bay st., Toronto, Ont.	J. F. B. Livesay
Chicago Tribune Service	Tribune Tower, Chicago	A. W. Crawford
Consolidated Press Association	Star Bldg., Washington, D. C.	H. R. Baukhage
Evening Post News Service	75 West st., New York	J. E. Watkins
International News Service	63 Park Row, New York	M. Koenigsberg
Kent Press Service	St. Louis, Mo.
New York Allied Press Bureau	Times Bldg., New York	Francis S. Beane
New York World News Service	63 Park Row, New York
United Press Associations	63 Park Row, New York	Karl A. Bickel
Universal Service	63 Park Row, New York	M. Koenigsberg

TRADE PRESS PICTURE SYNDICATES AND NEWS SERVICES

King Editors' Features	1170 Broadway, New York	A. Rowden King	A. Rowden King
Universal Trade Press Syndicate	522 5th ave., New York	L. V. Roehl	M. S. Blumenthal

PHOTOGRAPHIC SERVICES

Acme News Pictures	461 Eighth ave., New York City	R. P. Dorman	R. P. Dorman
Associated Press Picture Service	383 Madison ave. New York		N. A. Huse
Bain News Service	255 Canal st., New York City	J. Walter Smith	George G. Bain
Foto Topics, Inc.	265 W. 54th st., New York City		Harold Stein
Fotograms News Photo Service	129 E. 27th st., New York City	Alexander Starlight	P. Trenchard Jones
Ewing Galloway	15 E. 40th st., New York City		Ewing Galloway
Keystone View Co.	91 7th ave., New York City		H. W. Sidricks
Henry Miller News Pictures Service, Inc.	519 13th st., N. W., Washington, D. C.
Pacific & Atlantic Photos, Inc.	25 Park Pl., New York City	Arthur A. Sorenson	H. B. Baker
Price Studios	Salmon Tower Bldg., 11 W. 42nd st.		Jack Price
Underwood & Underwood, Inc.	242 W. 55th st., New York City		G. J. Kadel

Key to symbols: (d) daily; (w) weekly; (d-w) daily and weekly; (2-w) twice a week; (3-w) three times a week; (ill.) illustrated; numbers and fractions of numbers in parentheses indicate size of features in columns; size of small features of ten indicated by numbers of words, thus (125); (hp) half-page (fp) full page; (s) Sunday.

A. P. MAN WINS GOLF MEET

150 News Writers Compete in Chicago Tournament

One hundred and fifty golfers competed in the fifth annual Chicago Newspapermen's golf tournament sponsored by the Yellow Cab and Motor Coach Company last week at the Tam O'Shanter Country Club.

W. H. Bailey of the Associated Press, with a low gross of 41-43-84, won the trophy which will become the permanent possession of the first three-time winner. Jack Hoag of the Chicago Evening Post followed in second place; J. H. Forrest of the Evening American took low net with 85-18-73 and F. J. Hogan of the Daily News with 99-25-74 was second. Harvey Woodruff of the Tribune won the left-hand prize, shooting a record score for high gross.

Several women reporters were among the prize winners. Miss Peggy Doyle of the Herald and Examiner won the putting contest with a score of 28. Miss Virginia Smiley, Miss Carol Frink and Miss Harriet Dillon, all of the Herald and Examiner, were second, third and fourth, respectively.

REVIVES INDIANA WEEKLY

Raymond S. Brown, owner and publisher of the Columbus (Ind.) Evening Republican, has resumed publication of the Columbus Weekly Republican, which he suspended during the World War.

$500 NEWSPAPER TEST AD CAMPAIGN INCREASED LOCAL SALES 40 PER CENT

Success of Milwaukee Test Influenced Malted Milk Firm to Place Copy in Other Cities—Aims at Home Consumption—Shaker Offered as Premium

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

A $500 TEST campaign in one western city led to a 40 per cent increase in one year in sales of Thompson's "Double Malted" Malted Milk and is behind the current invasion of the East by the Thompson's Malted Food Company of Waukesha, Wis., with a sizable newspaper campaign.

The winning advertising appeal was found only after two previous attempts which turned out to be "flops." One of the earlier efforts had been to use newspaper advertising to build demand on drug store soda fountains in the face of lower-priced strongly intrenched competition. The other failure had been a tryout of "patent medicine" type of copy.

Thompson's newspaper copy offering free shaker with each one pound purchase to encourage home use of product.

Undaunted by these set-backs, L. A. Thompson, the president of the company, decided to keep on trying and local newspaper advertising formed a comparatively inexpensive laboratory in which to experiment. The outcome was an introductory premium plan combined with an appeal to the home market.

The company puts out, among other products, a prepared chocolate malted milk which sells for more than any competitors. In spite of this, its malted milk is served at a large number of soda fountains throughout the country. Competition had obtained a firm hold on the business in malted milk as a baby and invalid food as well as soda fountain trade. It was by going past these markets, and after sales to the home for results that Thompson made his greatest progress.

Statistics indicated that a large proportion of all the school children in the United States drink too little milk. And so, in aiming for home sales, the Wisconsin company has made a special bid for chocolate malted milk to be given children in order to encourage them to do more milk-drinking.

Since the company's product may be dissolved in cold milk without an electric mixing device, it occurred to the management to try out a premium in the form of a shaker which is indispensable for home milk shakes. A small shaker was offered free with a pound can of the chocolate malted milk at 60c or a full-sized shaker with a five-pound can. It was stated that the shaker, which is solid aluminum was a 25c retail value.

The first month $500 was put into advertising in Milwaukee. Many dealers stocked the goods and devoted window displays to it, and sales began to move upward.

The company followed the plan of opening with modest copy and gradually working up toward the larger units, instead of vice versa.

From week to week, the concern perfected its method and put it to the test in various centers—then began to multiply it rapidly out West.

One decision, reached after experiments, was not to try to call on the local retail grocers and druggists. Instead, the job is put up to jobbers to go out and do. The money which the company might have spent on salesmen in the territories is going directly for newspaper space. The company feels the important outlets will be covered by jobbers and that the weak-sister small accounts which are none too good financially would be the principal ones lined up by once-over specialty men.

The manufacturer now has opened a campaign in the Saturday Evening Post which offers a three-day individual sample package and a shaker for 25c or the sample package without the shaker for 10c. An appeal is made to the head of the family who as a boy wistfully watched the "soda jerker" in action to "mix his own." Women's publications also are used.

Localized newspaper campaigns city by city have been extended over a wide area. The shaker is offered only during the introductory period, long enough to get it in the hands of a reasonable number of families. What the manufacturer is working for is repeat business which the shaker, once in the home, encourages.

Newspaper merchandising departments have proven helpful in beating the "tom-toms" with the trade about the advertising. Upwards of six thousand window displays have been obtained within recent months.

Almost everybody is interested in children. The appeal with children featured not only has won the attention of many youngsters but also their parents. Much of the space is not large, but a "kid" drinking milk or mixing a malted drink carries the spotlight. The word, Free, with a picture of the shaker also is given good display.

A tipped box emphasizes that "30 real professional chocolate malted milks for 60c" can be made. The play element is given space, as for instance, in this copy:

"Thompson's has taken children's love of play and turned it into a love of health . . . . by making milk drinking a game.

"Like magic, in 15 seconds, little tots are changing plain milk into creamy chocolate malted mile AT HOME! Every pound makes full 30 glasses, costs only 60c. The shaker is free.

"Thompson's is the only malted milk that dissolves instantly without lumping in cold milk.

"Your druggist or grocer has Thompson's—60c the pound, shaker—free with first pound purchased."

This year the company has increased its appropriation about one-fourth over last year.

By searching beyond the obvious markets for its product, then experimenting locally to get a campaign which would do the work, by making the most of an appropriate introductory premium, by putting much of the sales load on newspaper space itself, the Thompson's Malted Food Company has evolved a selling plan which—once tested and proven—can be and is being extended market by market over the entire United States.

MANN RE-ELECTED BY MAINE PUBLISHERS

Cyrus Curtis and Dr. John Finley Speakers at Skowhegan—Many Members Affiliate with N. E. Press Association

Charles F. Mann of the Lisbon (Me.) Enterprise was re-elected president of the Maine Press Association at the annual convention of the association held in Showhegan Aug. 19 to 20. Other officers elected were: Vice-president, Samuel B. Erskine, Lincoln County News, Damariscotta; secretary and treasurer, Ora L. Evans, Piscataquis Observer, Dover-Foxcroft; executive committee, Albert K. Stetson, Aroostook Pioneer, Houlton; H. C. Prince, Madison Bulletin; and the three officers named.

At the business session, "Individuality in Local Editing," was the topic for round table discussion with representatives of 20 newspapers in the state participating.

On the second day of the convention, Cyrus H. K. Curtis, Philadelphia publisher, gave an interesting account of the establishment of the Saturday Evening Post. Dr. John Finley, associate editor of the New York Times also spoke. Governor Brewster gave an address on "The State and the Press."

Alfred DeNoyer, field manager of the New England Press Association, addressed the Maine association on the last day of the convention on the benefits of the New England association, the main object of which is to increase the volume of newspaper advertising in New England. Many of the members affiliated with the larger organization.

The Maine Press Bulletin which has been printed once a month at the Skowhegan Independent Reporter office and is sent to newspapers in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, will be continued, it was voted after some discussion.

Whether newspaper weeklies should carry advertising on the front page proved to be a subject for lively debate with a sharp diversion of opinion among members. President Mann took the position that it was better for each paper to decide for itself. He added that he had carried front page advertising for 57 years, one concern consistently using that space during all those years.

NEW STYLE IN DUE-BILLS

Statler Hotels Using Newspapers for First Time, Get Out Check-Books

There is a new style in due-bills.

It was set by the Fuller-Smith company, Cleveland advertising agency, handling the account of the Statler hotels which has started a big campaign in newspapers on a trade basis.

Instead of the old-fashioned slip of white paper, the agency is getting out what it calls "certificates of exchange," each certificate being good for $100 in trade at any Statler hotel. The checks are made up in the amounts due the newspapers in imitation leather folders, similar to those used for travelers checks.

The present campaign represents the first time that the Statler hotels have used newspaper space.

STATION BILLBOARDS BANNED

Following protests from citizens of five Long Island towns, the Long Island Railroad has agreed to remove all advertising signs from its stations in these places. The protesting towns are: Inwood, Woodmere, Lawrence, Hewlett and Cedarhurst.

NEW DAILY STARTED ON LONG ISLAND

Two Weeklies Merged to Form Lynbrook Nassau Daily Star with Col. Lloyd Gariscom as Publisher

The Lynbrook (Long Island) Nassau Daily Star began publication in Nassau County Aug. 16. Col. Lloyd C. Griscom of Syosset is president of the corporation which owns the paper; Oscar H. Julius is treasurer and Edward J. Smith secretary.

Installation of a 24-page Goss press, with a capacity of 20,000 papers an hour, was completed about two weeks ago.

The new daily paper is an outgrowth of newspaper ventures in this section which extend over the past 14 years. The New Era, a weekly, was established in 1913, and was successful. The South Shore Press was merged with the New era in 1925, and this paper was merged with the Freeport Recorder to form the new daily. Col. Griscom will continue publication of the Enterprise-Pilot at Oyster Bay and the North Hempstead Record at Great Neck on the north shore.

Col. Griscom entered the newspaper business two years ago when he acquired the New Era and several other weekly publications after a long and varied career in the diplomatic service of the United States government, and as a lawyer in New York City. He was ambassador to England, Japan and Brazil while serving as diplomat, and has since been connected with many outstanding movements of national significance.

Supporting Colonel Griscom are two other experienced newspaper and publication men, Oscar H. Julius and Edward J. Smith. The former is directing the business and mechanical side of the enterprise while the latter is in charge of the editorial department. Mr. Julius, before coming to Long Island, served for a number of years with some of the largest printing establishments in New York City.

The connection of Edward J. Smith with the new paper links the enterprise with its actual beginning as a weekly 14 years ago, when Mr. Smith took over the ownership of the New Era, then a struggling weekly in the village of Lynbrook. For more than nine years Mr. Smith devoted his time in building the paper. Mr. Smith then sold the New Era to Colonel Griscom and subsequently became connected with the paper again as editor.

SECOND AD TAX BILL

Alabama Measure Hitting Newspapers Referred to Committee

Alabama newspapers were again made the target of taxation when Representative Cockrell, of Clay County, recently made a proposal levying a two and one-half per cent tax on all newspaper and periodical advertising of amounts more than $15,000 annually.

The measure was referred to the House ways and means committee and its passage was considered uncertain in view of the fact that the legislature has already passed the general revenue bill providing revenue for four years.

MELVILLE STONE IS 79

Melville E. Stone, counselor and former general manager of the Associated Press was 79 years old last Monday. He passed the day quietly at his home in New York and made a short visit to the Associated Press office. In the evening he dined at the Lotos Club with a few intimate friends.

ISSUES "FACTS" BOOKLET

The New York Sun has just issued a 128-page booklet "Facts About New York" containing reprints of a series of brief articles describing interesting points in the city. The series appeared in the Sun under the caption "A Fact a Day About New York."

WOMAN EDITOR ELECTED PRESIDENT BY GEORGIA PRESS ASSOCIATION

Miss Emily Woodward of Vienna News Is First of Her Sex to Lead Press Group—Albany Herald and Dalton Citizen Win Trophies

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

EATONTON, Ga., Aug. 24.—The Georgia ess Association elected a woman presi- nt for the first time in the history of e organization today at the close of 41st annual convention held here.

Miss Emily Woodward

The new executive head is Miss Emily oodward, editor and publisher of the ienna (Ga.) News.

She has successively held the offices third, second, and first vice-president the association, and when nominated W. G. Sutlive, editor of the Savan- h News, was unanimously elected esident, to succeed Ernest Camp, editor the Monroe (Ga.) Walton Tribune.

For a number of years Miss Wood- ard has occupied a prominent place in urnalism of the State. Under her edi- rship during the past 14 years the ews, which is the only newspaper in oby county, has achieved a reputation more than local importance. Her rong editorial policies and sound busi- ss judgment, have made the paper a cognized factor in the progress of her mmunity.

Her newspaper career began in 1914, hen the Vienna News was offered for le by its owner, who had been elected a civil position and wished to dispose the paper. He approached Miss Wood- ard's brother as a possible purchaser, ho declared that he had no use for a wspaper, and if he owned it he would ve to get someone else to run it for m. Miss Woodward persuaded him to y it, and turn it over to her to run. nce then she has acquired control, and sole dictator of policy and manage- nt.

Although the Georgia Press Associa- n has about 40 women members, Miss oodward is the only woman in the ate who conducts a paper entirely thout masculine advice or assistance. esides her success in the field of jour- lism, Miss Woodward is a member of e State Democratic Committee, and rves regularly as congressional com- ittee woman for her district. She is in eat demand as a public speaker.

Miss Woodward has written a series Negro sketches, drawn from life hich are soon to appear in book form. e has also found time for poetry and e of her poems will be included in a rthcoming anthology, brought out by New York publisher.

Louis Morris of the Hartwell Sun as elected vice-president, Hall M. Stan- y corresponding secretary, Charles enns recording secretary and J. J. owell treasurer were re-elected.

The Albany (Ga.) Herald was awarded e Sutlive trophy for outstanding service its community in recognition of the ccessful campaign for fire prevention conducted by the paper. The Dalton Citizen was selected as winner of the Stanley trophy for the weekly newspaper presenting the best typography.

The convention was held this year in the historic town of Eatonton, the birthplace of Joel Chandler Harris, who originated the Uncle Remus stories. The editors were greeted upon their arrival with a special Uncle Remus edition of the Eatonton Messenger and a trip to the old Turnwold plantation, where Joel Chandler Harris had served his apprenticeship on the famous county newspaper, The Countryman, was a feature of the convention.

The Georgia editors will soon begin planning the reception and entertainment of a group of New England editors who will return the visit made them last spring by the Georgia group.

RECEIVER APPOINTED

Deputy Sheriff Handling Affairs of Ft. Smith Journal Company

Deputy Sheriff H. B. Patterson was appointed receiver for the Fort Smith Journal Publishing Company by Chancellor J. V. Bourland at a recent hearing in Chancery Court.

The application for a receivership was filed by the Western Newspaper Union and the George H. Morrill Company which alleged that Journal company owed them $3,197.18 and $108.94 respectively.

The defendant company, through its attorney, J. B. McDonough, in order not to commit an act of bankruptcy, refused to approve the appointment of a receiver. Patterson will take charge of the affairs of the company and collect the outstanding accounts and then report back to the court.

INCREASES PRESS ORDER

The Chicago Daily News has increase its order with R. Hoe & Co., Inc., from 68 to 72 press units. These presses are to be erected in the new home of the Daily News.

REPORTER WOOSTER, R. F. D., EXPOSES FAMOUS WESTCHESTER KANGAROO

Fearlessly Pedals Bicycle Into Heart of Chappaqua Kangaroo Wilderness from Whence Agile Beast Leaped Onto Front Pages of New York Dailies

New York City dailies have recently carried many stories concerning the nocturnal prowlings of a phantom beast, said to be a kangaroo. A reporter for the Ossining (N. Y.) Citizen-Sentinel wrote the following story of his "search" for the creature.

THE office of the Citizen-Sentinel was a scene of unhappy ennui this morning. The Hotel Arrivals and Births Reporter was sleeping noisily behind the news ticker. The Editor smoking a big, black cigar, was listlessly picking out an editorial with one finger while Orville was rolling dice with the Printer's Devil at the head of the stairs.

"Orville," said the editor bitterly, but kindly, mind you.

"Sir?" said Orville, pocketing his dice.

"Orville," said the editor firmly, "I am about fed up with all this Chappaqua Kangaroo business. I want you to organize an expedition, go to Chappaqua and get the inside dope."

"Chief," said Orville, "you have picked the right man to get the inside dope, all righty, all righty. If there is anybody in Ossining, who knows anything about Kangaroos that person is Orville Wooster, if I do say it myself."

"Shut up," said the editor crossly. "And get out of here."

* * *

It was some four hours later when Orville begrimed weary and pedalling a bicycle arrived in Chappaqua at the so' so' east end of Roaring Brook Swamp near Wampus Lake Road, where, according to the city paper, the kangaroos were last seen. He produced a quart of gin, a tin of pemmican and a Webster's Dictionary which he had carried along as mental and physical nourishment.

"A Kangaroo," he read aloud, "is one of any of the herbivorous leaping marsupial mammals of the family Macoropodidae."

"That's quite a good description," said a voice and Orville, looking up, beheld a little old, bewhiskered gentleman carrying a large net.

"Who are you?" asked Orville.

"I," said the little, old gentleman, "am Doctor Herman Zilch, Ph. D., Curator of Physical Anthropology and comparative Anatomy of the Museum of Applied Chiropractory. I am looking for those kangaroos."

"Pleased to meet you Doc," said Orville. "I am Orville Wooster, R. F. D., a journalist betimes and a naturalist of sorts, I too, seek, the kangaroos. Have a drink?"

"I don't mind if I do," said the Doctor. He did. They did, and did ad lib until the bottle was empty.

"Orville, old boy," said the Doctor, "I will now step the third number from the Kentucky Quadrille with appropriate gestures, Aleman left!"

"Right, you mean," said Orville, "but let it pass. I am about to play Opus 28 from Wagner without the aid of a musical instrument."

* * *

It was perhaps five hours later when the pair, each having exhausted his personal repertoire of parlor and social comical jokes and riddles, glanced into the swamp and saw a kangaroo. It was advancing in their direction and when it was about six paces away it halted and viewed Orville with an unfriendly eye.

"Hey," said Orville, "cut that out."

"Mph," said the kangaroo.

Orville felt the Doctor plucking at his elbow. "There is no doubt in my mind now," said the Doctor, "that the beast actually exists and I see no need for tarrying further. Let us go."

"That is the boy!" said Orville, "Great idea,, wonderful idea! We're on our way."

The pair started down the dusty highway at a brisk walk and it was only when Orville, glancing back, noted the kangaroo following, that the walk became a rout.

After loping a good furlong Orville and the Doctor heard a long, low "mph" and looking back again saw that now there were two kangaroos in pursuit. Deciding never to look back again the two naturalists sped on and on into the village where, leaning against a telegraph pole they perceived a policeman, with ruddy complexion and flat feet.

"Good day to you, Officer," said Orville, "Isn't it cool for August?"

"Yes it is," said the officer politely. "This is Chappaqua, by the way," he added.

"Kangaroos are chasing us, Officer," said the Doctor, breaking into the pleasant exchange of amenities.

"Soused," said the Officer admiringly. "Both soused. Well I'll have to do my duty. Come along, boys, and no resistin' an officer, mind you, or there'll be two charges instead of one."

"I do not choose to be arrested," said Orville.

"But I do," said the officer.

50 EDITORS ATTEND FIRST N. H. INSTITUTE

Dailies and Weeklies Represented at University Conference—Don Seitz and Prof. Adams on Program

Fifty owners and editors of the daily and weekly newspapers of New Hampshire recently attended their first joint newspaper conference at Durham, N. H., as guests of the University of New Hampshire. They were addressed by New York, Massachusetts and New Hampshire editors of note and spent the greater part of three sessions discussing the daily problems of the news and business offices.

Don J. Seitz, associate editor of The Outlook, and former business manager of the New York World, placed the modern newspaper daily on the old chopping block and took several vigorous belts at it, declaring that lust for money, the eight-hour day and business office control of the editorial department, have robbed the modern newspaper of its character and soul. Only once did he presume to stand by the modern newspaper, and that when he declared that there seldom appears anything in print worse than the people themselves have done.

Bristow Adams, professor at Cornell University, discussing the country weekly in particular and the press in general, labelled as absurd the ever increasing opinion of the public that scandal and crime occupy the bulk of the space in the modern newspaper. He declared that with tape measure and pencil, at a time when there were several of the most sensational crimes and scandals holding the center of the stage, he found by actual measurement of several New York dailies and a variety of others, that crime and scandal occupied only four out of every 100 inches of space. "The reason the public holds this opinion is because millions read only the crime and scandal news," he said.

William D. Sullivan, managing editor of the Boston Globe, declared the Lindbergh story the greatest piece of news that ever broke, and the story that has done more than any other one agency to discount the belief that crime and scandal are the cornerstones of the news columns.

Professor Adams, judging the exhibit of weekly papers, placed the Franklin Journal-Transcript first for local news and its handling; the Laconia Democrat, second, and the Carroll County Independent, third.

For philosophy, flavor and makeup of the editorial page, the Peterborough Transcript was first, the Carroll County Independent, second, and the Coos County Democrat, third.

For makeup, material and general news, on the first page, the Littleton Courier was first, the Hanover Gazette, second, and the Laconia Democrat, third.

For farm news, the Rochester Courier was first, the Laconia Democrat, second, and the Carroll County Independent, third.

HURT IN PLANE CRASH

Timothy A. McInerny, reporter for the Boston (Mass.) Post, was seriously injured when the airplane in which he was a passenger, enroute from Boston to Lowell, fell and was wrecked at South Tewksbury, Aug. 21. McInerny was taken to the Lowell Hospital, where it was reported that he would recover. The pilot was only slightly hurt.

TO DEPORT CHICAGO EDITOR

Stephen Zinich, editor of Radnick, official organ of the workers' party in Chicago, has been arrested for deportation by order of Secretary of Labor Davis. Zinich is charged with entering the United States illegally and with fomenting rebellion. Secretary Davis is understood to have acted upon recommendation of S. D. Smith, chief immigration inspector in Chicago. The orders call for the deportation of the Editor to Belgrade, Jugoslavia.

N. Y. DAILY DENIES SLUR IN AMERICAN MERCURY

Untrue That W. M. Walker Was "Summarily Discharged" for Writing "J. P. the Younger" Says Draper of Herald Tribune

An assertion made in the current American Mercury that W. M. Walker had been "summarily dismissed from the staff of the New York Herald Tribune," for writing an article published in H. L. Mencken's magazine derogatory to J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., was denied this week by Arthur Draper, the Herald Tribune's assistant editor.

The article in question was entitled "J. P. the Younger" and appeared in the June number of the Mercury. The Herald Tribune auditor's files show that Mr. Walker joined the staff of the Herald Tribune on Oct. 30, 1925 and left the paper March 7, 1927. Correspondence in the office of the Herald Tribune showed that he left the paper to return to his home in Athens, Ala., because of ill health. Subsequent letters between Walker and Frank Sprague, who, as financial editor of the New York Herald Tribune was the writer's immediate superior, tend to show that the most cordial relations existed between the writer and his employer. After he had been ill a little over two months Walker wrote asking what opportunity there was for him to get back on the paper. On May 18, Sprague wired that the job was open to him and asked when we would be able to return. When Walker later told Sprague that he would be unable to return until sometime in July, he was informed that unfortunately the position could not be held open for him that long, that another man must be employed to take his place.

In a letter dated Aug. 22, Mr. Walker wrote to Mr. Sprague expressing regret that he had been identified as he was in the American Mercury notice, and saying that he had asked to be credited as "'engaged in newspaper work in New York,' but that this was disregarded."

Editor & Publisher was unable to reach Mr. Walker himself.

At the office of the American Mercury, Charles Angoff, assistant editor, declared it was his understanding that Mr. Walker, who was on a leave of absence. had received a telegram refusing to give him work after the Morgan article had appeared in print. It is understood that the wire was sent by Mr. Sprague.

Mr. Walker is now living in Brooklyn doing free-lance work. He has an article in the present Mercury entitled "Pittsburgh Plus."

WISCONSIN GROUP EXPANDS

Marshfield Purchase Makes Third Daily Under F. E. Noyes Control

The recent purchase of the Marshfield (Wis.) Daily News by the News Publishing Company makes the third daily newspaper in which Frank E. Noyes of the Marinette (Wis.) Eagle-Star has a major interest. Mr. Noyes has been publisher of the Eagle-Star for the past 30 years.

Eight years ago he organized and started the Ironwood (Mich.) Daily Globe with Howard A. Quirt as managing editor and Linwood I. Noyes, his son, as business manager. The purchase of the Daily News at Marshfield was followed by the purchase and consolidation of a weekly newspaper there and the publication is now called the Marshfild News-Herald.

Howard A. Quirt is publisher and manager, having been transferred from Ironwood, and Siegel Mayer, formerly advertising manager of the Globe at Ironwood is a stockholder and advertising manager of the News-Herald. The stockholders of the News-Herald are the same as those of the Ironwood Daily Globe.

YOUNG NAMES A. N. A. E. OFFICERS AND COMMITTEE MEMBERS FOR YEAR

Burbach, Carroll and Donahue I. A. A. Advertising Commission Members—List of United States and Foreign Vice-Presidents Named

HARVEY R. YOUNG, president of the International Association of Newspaper Advertising Executives this week announced the complete list of officers and committee members for the coming year. The list follows:

President, Harvey R. Young, advertising director, Columbus Dispatch.

First Vice-President, John F. Tims, Jr., business manager, New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Secretary-Treasurer, Don Bridge, manager merchandising and national advertising, Indianapolis News.

Directors: L. M. Barton, advertising manager, Chicago Daily News; Frank T. Carroll, advertising director, Indianapolis News; Frank T. Carruthers, advertising manager, Denver Post; Thos. F. Collins, advertising manager, Milwaukee Journal; J. Carr Gamble, manager rotogravure advertising, St. Louis Globe-Democrat; Harry D. Guy, advertising manager, Dallas News; C. M. Kendall, advertising manager, Watertown Daily Times.

Members, Advertising Commission, International Advertising Association: George M. Burbach, advertising manager, St. Louis Post-Dispatch; Frank T. Carroll, advertising director, Indianapalis News; Wm. E. Donahue, manager local display advertising, Chicago Tribune. (The president and secretary-treasurer automatically are members of the Advertising Commission.)

Advisory Council: M. F. Aronhime, advertising director, Louisville Courier-Journal & Times; O. S. Bruck, advertising director, Beaumont Enterprise-Journal; Geo. M. Burbach, advertising manager, St. Louis Post-Dispatch; J. K. Groom, director of national advertising, Northern Illinois Group, Aurora; Wm. D. Keenan, advertising manager, Indianapolis Star; A. G. Newmyer, associate publisher, New Orleans Item-Tribune; A. L. Poorman, advertising manager, Providence Journal-Bulletin; G. W. Roche, advertising manager, Spokane Chronicle; A. L. Shuman,. advertising director, Ft. Worth Star-Telegram; Carl P. Slane, publisher, Peoria Journal-Transcript; Rhey T. Snodgrass, advertising manager, Minneapolis Journal; H. A. Sprague, business manager, St. Joseph News-Press; M. R. Thomas, advertising manager, Columbus Citizen; Harry T. Watts, business manager, Des Moines Register-Tribune-Capital; Louis W. Wiley, business manager, New York Times.

Committee Chairmen: Speakers Bureau, H. W. Roberts, advertising manager, Cleveland Plain Dealer; Convention Displays, Earl H. Maloney, advertising manager, Peoria Journal-Transcript; Convention Program, L. M. Barton, advertising manager, Chicago Daily News; Idea Exchange, James A. Austin, advertising manager, Omaha Bee-News.

Vice-Presidents

England—Lt. Col. Edward F. Lawson, London Daily Telegraph.
France—Fr. Marcel Knecht, Paris Le Matin.
Hawaii—H. S. Hayward, Honolulu Star-Bulletin.
Philippine Islands—Carson Taylor, Manila Bulletin.
Alberta (Canada)—George B. Cooper, Edmonton Journal.
British Columbia—R. J. Cromie, Vancouver Sun.
Manitoba—A. W. Moscarella, Winnipeg Tribune.
Nova Scotia—G. P. Greene, Halifax Chronicle.
Ontario—R. K. Stocks, Toronto Globe.
Quebec—C. P. Buckland, Sherbrooke Daily Record.
Alabama—Geo. C. Biggers, Birmingham News and Age-Herald.
Arizona—Wesley W. Knorpp, Phoenix Republican.
Arkansas—K. A. Engel, Little Rock Democrat.
California—W. R. Penney, San Francisco Call.
Colorado—W. C. Bussing, Denver News.
Connecticut—F. B. Dalton, Danbury News.
District of Columbia—C. I. Putnam, Washington Times-Herald.
Delaware—C. J. Pyle, Wilmington News-Journal.
Florida—J. M. Elliott, Jacksonville Times-Union.
Georgia—Boykin Paschal, Savannah Morning News.
Illinois—Louis Proehl, Peoria Star.
Indiana—Frank E. Hollis, Terre Haute Star
Iowa—F. Russell, Davenport Times.
Kansas—Knowlton Parker, Kansas City Kansan
Kentucky—Robt. J. Breckinridge, Lexington Herald.
Louisiana—C. P. Manship, Baton Rouge Advocate and State Times.
Maryland—Wm. F. Schmick, Baltimore Sun.
Massachusetts—Jas. T. Murray, New Bedford Standard and Mercury.
Michigan—H. S. Conlon, Grand Rapids Press
Minnesota—W. F. Johns, St. Paul Dispatch & Pioneer Press.
Mississippi—W. G. Johnson, Jackson Daily News.
Missouri—J. T. Barrons, Kansas City Star.
Nebraska—Walter E. Lamb, Omaha World-Herald.
New Jersey—D. P. Olmstead, Perth Amboy Evening News.
New York—Frank E. Tripp, Gannett Newspapers, Elmira, N. Y.
North Carolina—E. B. Jeffress, Greensboro Daily News.
North Dakota—Norman B. Black, Fargo Forum.
Ohio—H. A. Brandt, Dayton News.
Oklahoma—H. S. Dreier, Oklahoma City Oklahoman-Times.
Oregon—W. J. Hofmann, Portland Oregonian.
Pennsylvania—Homer E. Moyer, Harrisburg Patriot-News.
Rhode Island—Chas. O. Black, Pawtucket Times.
South Carolina—Wm. P. Etchinson, Columbia State.
Tennessee—Martin Clark, Nashville Banner.
Texas—A. L. Shuman, Ft. Worth Star-Telegram.
Utah—H. F. Robinson, Salt Lake Tribune.
Virginia—L. E. Pugh, Newport News Press and Times Herald.
Washington—J. Fred Braid, Seattle Times.
West Virginia—H. W. Manz, Huntington Herald-Dispatch.
Wisconsin—Irving C. Buntman, Milwaukee Herold.
Wyoming—W. S. Sopris, Sheridan Post-Enterprise.

WRITER RETURNS FROM VACATION ABROAD

The owner of a name known to thousands of newspaper readers photographed with her husband on her return from a trip abroad. She is Mrs. James Wolfe, but her readers know her as Beatrice Fairfax.

QUITTING PHOTOS FOR MAGAZINE WRITING

Paul Thompson Whose Pictures Have Been Used by Many Papers, Announces Retirement from Field

Paul Thompson, news photographer whose slug line "Photo by Paul Thompson" has been read by virtually every newspaper reader at one time or another, announced this week that he is retiring from the photo business to enter the field of magazine writing.

Mr. Thompson was formerly an active newspaper man, having served an apprenticeship as sporting editor of the New York Evening Sun, as reporter on the Morning Telegraph, and later as editor of The Illustrated Outdoor News, and dramatic critic for the Burr McIntosh Monthly.

From a hall bedroom at 125 Fifth Avenue the Thompson studio grew to a concern with a collection of 100,000 negatives and 1,000,000 prints. Notables photographed by Thompson included Jim Corbett, Theodore Roosevelt, Charles M. Schwab, Pierpont Morgan, Whitney Warren, William G. McAdoo, Helen Gould, David Belasco, King Edward, The Prince of Morocco, Kaiser Wilhelm, and several thousand other notables including kings, princesses, actors, fighters, editors and authors.

The change in the public attitude toward camera men is noted by Thompson in his experience with Whitney Warren, who, at Newport one day smashed a camera belonging to the early Paul Thompson office. This was years ago. Sometime later, having been impressed with the Thompson photo, Mr. Warren gave the firm the exclusive commission for taking photographs of a charity bazaar, of which Mr. Warren was the chief patron.

To Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Thompson has always felt indebted for her choice of his picture for the 1916 presidential campaign. "This is the one I like best," she wrote on the back of the photograph, and thus her choice became the official photograph of the future president.

CHICAGO PRINTERS WIN

By defeating the St. Louis team twice, Chicago won the championship of the Union Printers' National Baseball League recently.

KEY TO CONSUMER BUYING ABILITY

tatistical Rating of New Mexico Counties and Cities for Products of General Appeal, in Six Major Classes of Quality and Cost—An Original Simplified and Tested Formula from Basic Data

By NELSON H. SEUBERT

Copyright 1927 by Editor & Publisher Company. All rights are reserved and reproduction of these results, in whole or in part, without written permission of Editor & Publisher Co., will constitute infringement.

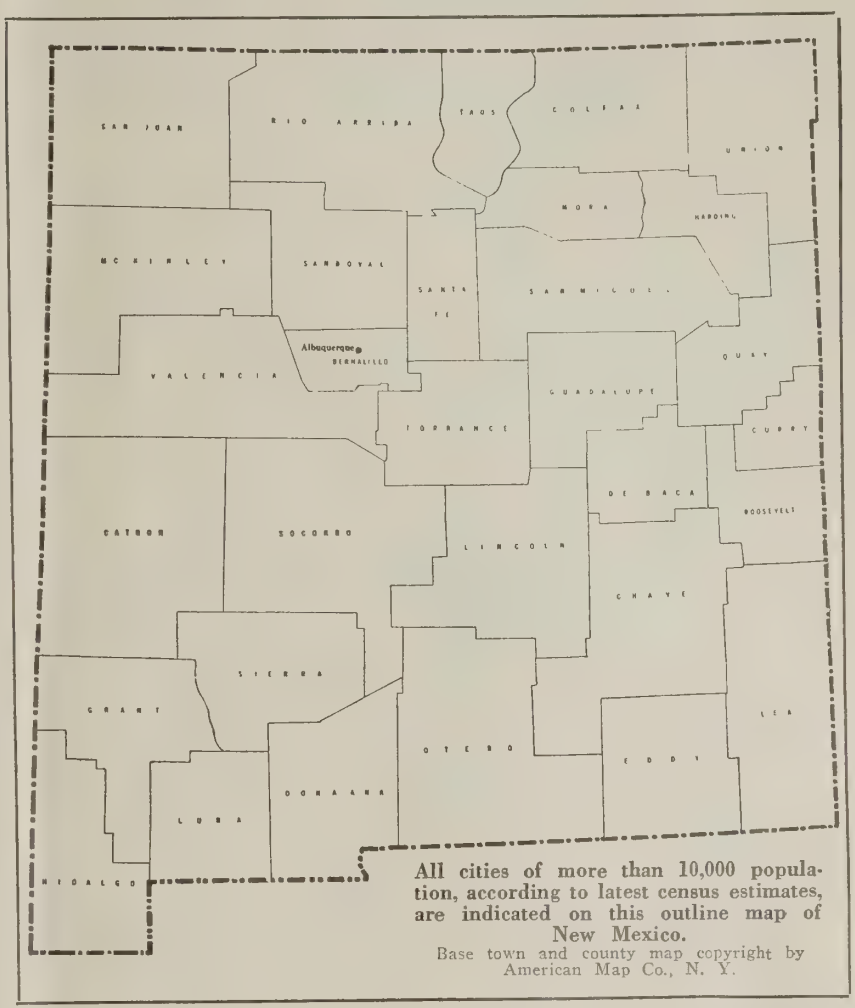
EVENTEENTH in the series of Editor & Publisher summaries of ıe consumer-buying-ability of the several ates in the Union is the story of New Iexico, presented on this page. The eries will be continued weekly until each f the 48 states has been described in ıe terms outlined below.

Consumer-buying-ability for a given egion, this series assumes, depends to large extent first upon the number of eople residing there, and second upon ıe amount of income they have available or the purchase of necessities and ıxuries.

A given number of people anywhere ill buy a more or less definite quantity f foodstuffs and other bare necessities f life, irrespective of their incomes. he latter factor becomes important hen the goods or services are not stark ecessities and when they are in the ıxury, semi-luxury class, as are a great umber of branded and advertised articles ow offered.

For that reason this survey is based n weighted averages of population and umber of income tax returns and their pplication to consumer buying ability is ivided into six classes, ranging from ecessities through the scale to what even he rich man regards as luxuries.

In the first class, covering necessities, opulation of the state, county or city s given a weight of 90 percent and umber of second class, covering staple goods, population is weighted at 70 per- ent and number of income tax returns t 30 percent. In the third class covering igh-priced necessities and low-priced uxuries, the division is 50-50. In the ourth class, covering medium-priced uxuries, population is weighted at 30 percent and income tax returns at 70. In the fifth class, high-priced luxuries, population is weighted at 10 percent and income tax returns at 90. In the sixth class, the supremely high-priced luxuries, the number of tax returns reporting incomes of more than $10,000 is substituted for the number of all returns and weighted at 90, while population is rated at 10 percent.



The population factor is derived by calculation the percentage of the population of the given locality to the population of the whole United States which is taken as 100. The number of all income tax returns is also taken as 100, and calculation is made on the percentage returned by each state, county and city. All calculations are carried to four decimal places in order to provide a percentage figure even for regions as sparsely populated as many sections of New Mexico and other states are.

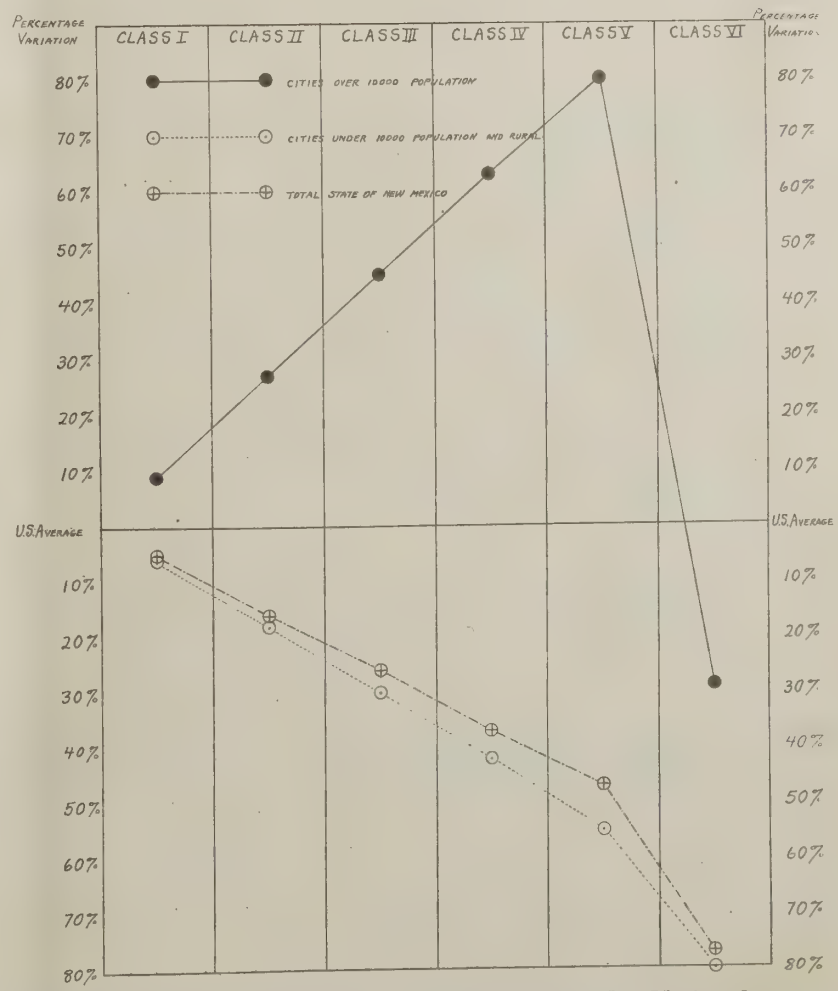
Applied to New Mexico, the statistics printed below show that the state as a whole has for necessities .3159 percent of the entire country's consumer purchasing ability; in the second class, .2810 percent; in the third class, .2460 percent; in the fourth class, .2110 percent; in the fifth class, .1761 percent and in the highest-priced luxury class, .0767 percent.

Nevertheless, the one city in the state having more than 10,000 population, is above the average for the entire country in its people's ability to buy all except the highest priced goods. The small cities and the very thinly populated rural districts are naturally below the national average.

This condition is simply illustrated in the graph below, charting the relative buying power of the cities, the small towns and rural districts, and the state as a whole, compared with the average of the entire country.

No sales manager would expect New Mexico to absorb any great proportion of his factory's output, but he would be mistaken who looked upon the market as one to be passed over. Even without great local concentration of wealth the city of Albuquerque is demonstrated to have purchasing ability for all grades of goods far above its quota, if the latter is determined on population alone. Other counties, not having a large city, show an excellent range of buying power in all classes below the sixth.

All cities of more than 10,000 population, according to latest census estimates, are indicated on this outline map of New Mexico.



Base town and county map copyright by American Map Co., N. Y.

BUYING POWER ANALYZED BY PRODUCT CLASSES FOR NEW MEXICO

Note: Figures below represent percentages of U. S. total carried out to four places: To use, mark off four places and insert decimal point.

Counties in bold face capitals—Cities in capitals and lower case

	CL No. 1	CL No. 2	CL No. 3	CL No. 4	CL No. 5	CL No. 6
NEW MEXICO	3159	2810	2460	2110	1761	767
BERNALILLO	304	324	345	365	385	146
Albuquerque	201	234	267	300	333	131
CATRON	20	17	14	10	7	2
CHAVES	95	89	83	77	71	49
COLFAX	219	226	233	240	247	43
CURRY	89	85	82	78	74	9
DE BACA	24	19	15	11	6	3
DONA ANA	152	128	104	79	55	52
EDDY	71	65	59	52	46	18
GRANT	231	211	191	170	150	42
GUADALOUPE	60	49	39	28	17	7
HARDING	28	23	17	11	6	3
HIDALGO	45	38	32	25	18	12
LEA	26	21	16	10	5	3
LINCOLN	64	54	45	35	25	11
LUNA	138	113	88	63	38	19
McKINLEY	124	121	118	115	112	27
MORA	106	85	64	43	22	12
OTERO	68	57	45	33	22	7
QUAY	80	72	65	57	49	16
RIO ARRIBA	170	135	101	67	32	47
ROOSEVELT	49	40	32	24	15	5
SANDOVAL	72	58	44	29	15	8
SAN JUAN	62	51	40	29	18	10
SAN MIGUEL	174	153	132	110	89	61
SANTA FE	128	117	106	95	84	45
SIERRA	42	34	27	19	11	19
SOCORRO	91	77	64	50	36	21
TAOS	105	84	63	42	21	19
TORRANCE	72	57	43	29	14	8
UNION	141	113	85	57	29	16
VALENCIA	115	96	78	60	41	34

This chart shows the relative variation for the State of New Mexico above or below the United States average for cities of 10,000 or more population, cities of less than 10,000 and rural population and the entire State.

PARTY OF U. S. JOURNALISTS RETURNS FROM GOODWILL TRIP TO NORWAY

Group of 13 Spent Six Weeks in Land of Midnight Sun as Guests of International League of Norsemen —Visited Fartherest North Paper

ENTHUSIASTIC in their praise of the grandeur of Norwegian scenery and of the hospitality of Norwegian journalists, members of the party of American newspaper men who spent six weeks in the land of the Midnight Sun, returned to New York Aug. 18 on the Norwegian-American Line S.S. Statvangerfjord.

The members of the party included the following:

John A. Anderson, publisher, the Skadinavien, Chicago; Henry E. Armstrong, editorial writer, New York Times; Royal Brougham, editor, Seattle Post-Intelligencer; Donald Day, Riga correspondent, Chicago Tribune; Carl W. Jones, managing director, Minneapolis Journal; Howard Kahn, editor, St. Paul Daily News; Gunnard Lund, editor-in-chief, Washingtonposten, Seattle; Kristian Prestgard, editor-in-chief, Decorah (Ia.) Decorahposten; Herman Roe, past president, National Editorial Association, and editor-in-chief, Northfield (Minn.) News; A. N. Rygg, editor-in-chief, Brooklyn (N. Y.) Nordisk Tidende; H. Sundby-Hansen, news editor, New York Herald Tribune; Leroy T. Vernon, Washington correspondent, Chicago Daily News.

As guests of the International League of Norsemen, the Norwegian Press Association, and the Press Bureau of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Norway, the American editors were invited to visit Norway to gain an insight into conditions in that country, and to gain an intimate acquaintance with the country and its people for the mutual benefit of both countries.

The "Committee of Honor and Reception" which planned the tour included the following Norwegian officials and heads of national organizations:

President, Hon. C. J. Hambro of the International League of Norsemen; Vice-President, M. Lind, consul general and president of the Norwegian Merchants Association; D. Grini, secretary general of the Association of Norwegian Newspapers; Dr. C. F. Holmboe, president of the Norwegian Export Industries' Association; P. Hougen, director of the Norwegian Bankers' Association; S. Iversen, president of the Association of Newspapers in Oslo; A. Kildal, secretary general of the International League of Norsemen; G. B. Lampe, director of the National Association for the Promotion of travel in Norway; Westfal-Larsen, shipowner, president of the Norwegian Shipowners' Association; H. B. Peterson, consul, president of the Federation of Norwegian Industries; P. Persen, president of the Norwegian Hotel and Restaurants' Association; T. Pryser, editor-in-chief, president of the Norwegian Press Association; E. Krog Prytz, jeweller, president of the Norwegian Association of Artisans; J. Vidnes, chief of the Press, Bureau of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Highlights of the trip were a cruise to the North Cape with an opportunity to view the midnight sun and a number of the beautiful fjords on the west coast of Norway; a motor trip over the mountains and through a number of typical Norwegian valleys; visits to the industrial cities of Rjukan and Notodden with inspection of the modern hydro-electric plants which provide cheap power for factories devoted to the manufacture of fertilizer extracted from the air, wood pulp and other products; an audience with King Haakon VII, in Oslo; a luncheon tendered by the Prime Minister of Norway; a dinner at the American Embassy given by the Minister from the United States in Oslo; and a trip by rail over the scenic Oslo-Bergen route.

Among the interesting newspaper offices visited was that of the semi-weekly, Nordkapp (The North Cape) published at Hammerfest, a city which boasts the distinction of lying further North than any city in the world. This newspaper plant does not own a type-setting machine. The paper is printed on a primitive drum cylinder press, made in Copenhagen, Denmark, which has seen 40 years' service and which the editor, Johs. Hole, agreed was "entitled to a pension."

Editor Hole, in addition to the distinction of publishing the "furthest North" newspaper in the world, is a giant physically. Frank P. Glass of St. Louis, past president of International Rotary, visited Hammerfest in June on a tour around the world and when introduced to Mr. Hole remarked: "This is truly the largest newspaper man I have met in my trip around the world. That I should find him in the world's most Northerly city is unbelievable."

Hammerfest is a city of 3,000 population. It was incorporated as a city sixty years ago. It built the first electric light plant in Norway, but that was due to necessity, Editor Hole admitted. For two months in the Winter, the city has continuous night with artificial light burning continuously. In February every year the citizens stage a big celebration when the sun puts in an appearance following a "vacation" of more than two months.

"During the long Arctic night the people grow nervous and fidgety," said Mr. Hole, "but while we have eight months of cold weather, there are compensations when we experience four months of ideal weather, enjoying 24 hours of daylight for about half of that period."

For a country with a population of only 2,500,000, Norway has an unusually large number of daily newspapers. Every political party—and there are seven political groups represented in the Norwegian Storthing or Parliament—must have its organ, with the result that the circulations of the different dailies are small compared with the circulation figures in the United States.

The Aftenposten (Evening News) in Oslo, the capital, has the distinction of being the largest newspaper in the land, with a circulation of 80,000 subscribers. The July 28 issue contained a half-tone of each of the visiting journalists with facsimiles of signatures and brief statements of impressions.

Herman Roe stated that his first visit to Norway was in 1906—twenty-one years ago—as a member of the St. Olaf College Concert Band of Northfield, Minn. That visit, wrote Mr. Roe, was a unique and memorable experience for the 50 young students from the largest college in America built by men and women who emigrated from Norway. Mr. Roe expressed the belief that the present visit of so many men prominent in newspaper making will tend to strengthen the bonds of friendship and goodwill which have always existed between Norway and the United States.

Group photograph of American Editors visiting Norway (left to right, fron row)—Howard Kahn, Gunnar Lund, H. E. Armstrong, J. A. Anderson, Lero T. Vernon, Donald Day. Back row—Royal Brougham, Herman Roe, A. N Rygg, H. Sundby-Hansen, Kristian Prestgard, and Carl W. Jones.

WRITERS' BOAT FIRED UPON

Chinese Cruiser Sends Six Shots at Vessel Carrying Two News Men

Dispatches from China state that a Chinese cruiser fired upon the steamer upon which H. V. Kaltenborn, associate editor of the Brooklyn Eagle and Henry F. Misslewitz, New York Times correspondent in China were returning from their interview with Chiang Kai-shek retired Nationalist general, Saturday Aug 20. Six shots passed across the vessel.

In order to hear General Chiang Kai-shek express his feelings and plans for the future, the newspaper men made a long and hazardous trip up the river from Shanghai and then up to the peak of a mountain where Chiang seeks quiet and isolation.

The interview lasted for more than an hour. The party included a guide, interpreter, and about a score of chair and provision coolies.

AMERICANS ENJOYING CARNEGIE TOUR

Overflowing Hospitality of England, France and Holland Delights Them but Tests Their Endurance

By Tom Wallace

Editorial writer, Louisville Times

BERLIN.—The American editors touring Europe as guests of the Carnegie Foundation arrived in Berlin physically exhausted from the intensive entertaining which had been done for them in England, France and Holland, but delighted with the programs they had lived through.

The French Foreign Office showed its interest in the party, and its hospitable disposition, by placing two large motor buses at the disposal of the Americans and providing interpreters where they were needed. The Americans enjoyed free trips by motor to Fontainebleau, Versailles and other points of interest in the vicinity of Paris. George Le Chartier, formerly a Paris newspaper man, now connected, in editorial capacity with the Carnegie Foundation, made himself one of the party and gave them the benefit of his ability to speak English, and the rather sketchy French which some members of the party boasted was given its trial in informal excursions to Latin Quarter restaurants rather than at formal social events.

The Dutch program was the most intensive. It was printed and each member of the party received a copy upon arriving at The Hague. A paragraph stated that Holland, like America "is a free country" and that anyone who wished to see Holland independently was welcome to do so. The program was so inviting that hardly anyone chose independent activities save on the last day, when a few Americans motored to Doorn, missing a reception in Leiden, by the Burgemeester, which included an interesting tour of that old city under his guidance.

In Amsterdam, where the Americans were entertained at dinner by the Burgemeester of that city, Harold Goff, of the Salt Lake City Deseret Evening News made the best after dinner speech which had been made by an American during the trip. Almost every American had been on his feet at least once in the capacity of a speaker responding Mr. Goff, by the way, declared for the abolition of the term "Dutch Treat" in America, in recognition of Holland hospitality which revealed its inappropriateness.

The Dutch provided each member the party with a great deal of prin matter about Holland and the princi cities of Holland, but no time was lowed for reading it. The progr began in the early forenoon and through luncheon and dinner, in A sterdam, Rotterdam, the Hague Zcheveningen, Holland's Atlantic C There the Government of the Neth lands was the host at a dinner.

U. S. NEWSPAPER PART STONED IN HOLLAND

Carnegie Peace Party Target Sacco-Vanzetti Demonstration— Guarded by Police at The Hague

The 25 American editors now tourir Europe as guests of the Carnegie Endov ment for International Peace were t target of Sacco-Vanzetti demonstratio in Amsterdam in which rocks we hurled, Cora Annette Harris, daught of Wade H. Harris, editor of the Cha lotte (N. C.) Observer, has written tha newspaper.

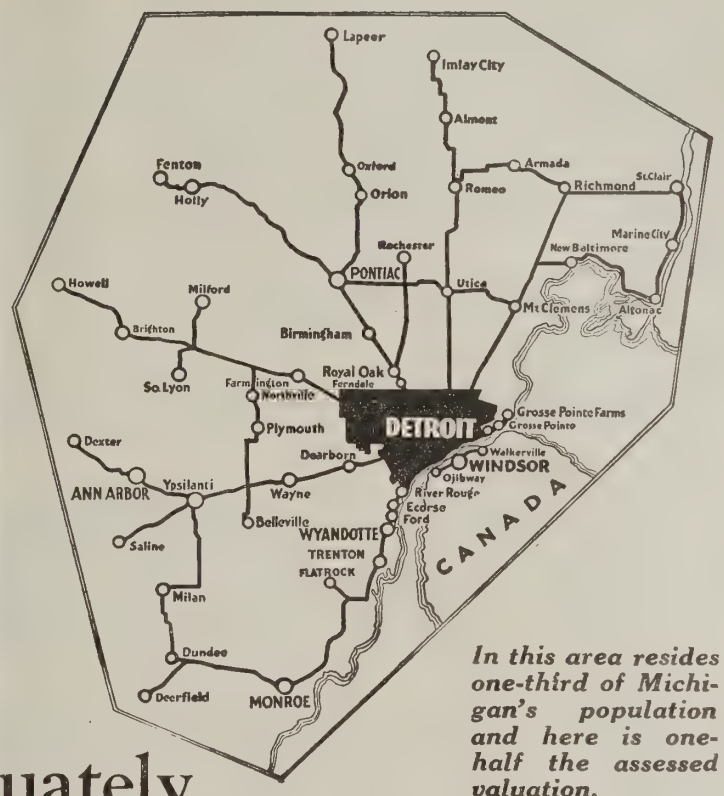
Her account follows:

"The American editorial party has en countered some wild experiences durin their stay in quiet, old, peace-loving Hol land.

"The party was entertained by th municipality of Amsterdam, and were me by four mounted policemen, which th party thought strange proceedings. W were accompanied by policemen at ever turn. As we drove to the Colonial In stitute for luncheon a mob of severa hundred gathered, carrying banners wit the inscription, 'Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent.' These screaming men, women and children were apparently appealing to the press for help, but the party was rushed into the building and every door was locked and guarded. Rocks were flying fast.

"The second demonstration was staged on our return from luncheon, but the square was well policed, and we escaped without injury.

"The following day the party was entertained at Rotterdam. We were escorted by 65 secret service men of Rotterdam and German police dogs. There were several arrests during the day.



"Likewise, the party was well guarded at Leyden. Nobody was allowed to stand within a block of the American editors' cars. We are being escorted every time we leave the hotel at The Hague.

"Being guarded is a new thrill, and one that I hope never to experience again."

Advertising Director of J. C. Penny Co. Advocates One Paper Coverage

"Our experience has conclusively demonstrated," said Mr. Whitman, "that one newspaper covering, for example, two-thirds of the trading territory population, enables us eventually to make our advertising effective with the entire population. When we have sold the two-thirds in a definite way, the force of that achievement brings the necessary influence to bear upon the families comprising the one-third. Therefore, the second newspaper, whether a member of a combination or not, is, in our case, excess cost."

From a speech delivered by Mr. Whitman before Advertising Convention in Denver.

In this area resides one-third of Michigan's population and here is one-half the assessed valuation.

In The Detroit Market The News Alone Adequately Covers the Field

In Detroit, particularly, one newspaper, The Detroit News, gives the advertiser ample coverage of its field.

The News, has for 54 years, been the HOME newspaper and today is so thoroughly circulated that no other Detroit paper can give the advertiser any substantial additional audience.

The Detroit News has the greatest circulation weekdays or Sundays in Michigan concentrated in the richest and most thickly populated area.

More than 95% of its weekday issue and 81% of its Suday issue is delivered in the area that has one-half the total wealth of the state and one-third of the population. And fully 80% of its local trading territory circulation is delivered to the homes by carrier.

Such thorough coverage of the homes of a community of Detroit's size is rarely if ever equalled. This penetration of the market by The Detroit News and its concentration in the most fertile and most productive area is one of the reasons why The News carries the bulk of all advertising placed in Detroit newspapers, 60% of the weekday space of Detroit local merchants, and 56% daily and Sunday being concentrated in The News.

When in Detroit do as Detroiters do and you will get the largest returns per dollar spent.

The Detroit News

For 54 Years Detroit's HOME Newspaper

354,000 Sunday Circulation 325,000 Weekday Circulation

INGENIOUS PRESS CHANGES ENABLE WEEKLY TO ADD A COLUMN

Brownstown (Ind.) Banner Went from Six to Seven Columns Gaining Two Full Pages of Space Without Buying New Equipment

IF your journalistic colleagues had for four successive years awarded you a trophy entitling you the best newspaper in the state, you might well rest content upon your laurels and the methods by which they had been achieved. Or you might reflect that laurels, while evergreen, might get dim and dusty with age unless they receive occasional attention. The second philosophy rules in the office of the Brownstown (Ind.) Banner, a weekly paper adjudged since 1923 by its fellows to be the best of its class in the state, and according to prevailing standards, an excellent weekly newspaper in any community.

Nevertheless, the Brownstown Banner appeared Aug. 17, in an entirely new dress. Its six columns were replaced by seven. Its old Century Expanded type gave way to the new Mergenthaler Ionic No. 5. Its cap headings were discarded in favor of Cloister capitals and lower case. The change from 6 columns 13 ems wide 20 inches deep to 7 columns 12 ems wide and 21 inches deep was accomplished without alterations in equipment beyond cutting down chases and buying new liners for the machines.

The story as told by C. G. Brodhecker, advertising manager of the Banner, who worked out the changes, is unique in its wealth of technical detail and as the process will doubtless be of interest to other small daily and weekly newspaper publishers who are contemplating new make-up, the privileges of this space are turned over to Mr. Brodhecker:

"Our equipment consists of two Intertype composing machines, a Model A and Model C, the latter equipped with 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 point Century Expanded with boldface, and 18 point Century Expanded Bold; a Cottrell single revolution press for 6-column quarto; Miller saw and router, casting box, etc.

"Our problem was to change to a 7 column paper without seriously disturbing the present equipment and to utilize what we had without having to purchase a new press.

"A 12-em 7 column paper will fit a 30 x 44 inch sheet, but leaves almost too narrow a margin for practical work. Hence the first thing we did was to make arrangements to get a 30½ x 44 inch sheet. This took us some time as the paper house had to have the paper made on a special run. We use Canadian news and it took us about two months to get the order through and stock in hand. The only trouble we expect to experience is that we must keep two to three tons of paper on hand and order our paper supply two months ahead.

"Next we tried the gripper adjustment on the press and found that by bending the grippers so that they would barely touch the tympan we could gain two picas on the gripper side of the paper. We constantly adjusted the grippers while running on our 6 column paper until we had them so as to utilize all the space possible and still get a perfect hold on the sheet.

"The next question was to adjust the chases properly. On a 30½ x 44-inch sheet we found that we had a 2½-pica margin all the way round, but that the center bar on the chases gave us a 4-pica margin. The chases were cut on the inside so that we had exactly 88 picas. The 7 column type-page measures 87 picas.

"The inside bars of the chases were cut (outside) in L shape, the top of the L being one pica in width and the extension of the lower part of the L one pica in width. This lets the inside bars of the chases overlap, giving a 3-pica margin between the edge of the forms. The tops of the chases were made in the same manner except that the top of the L was made two and one-half picas and the lower extension of the L one pica, which, overlapping, gave 6 picas between the tops of the two forms.

"We drilled seven holes at the bottom of each chase for a screw lock-up, countersinking the screws and using an octagon-shaped wrench for locking.

"For the side lock-up we had strips made beveled at top and bottom with a notch cut in each end. The bevel starts at 2 points thickness on top and bottom and is exactly a pica in thickness at the middle. The middle part is about 2 picas wide. After the forms are justified and the bottom lock-up loosened these wedges are driven between the chase and the form on the side, on the inside of the chase. Then the screws (using a two and one-half pica foot stick) are turned up gradually and the form locked snugly from the bottom.

"To lock the side for carrying to the press we use a clamp that fits over the top of the form. This clamp has a No. 1 Wickersham quoin fitted into one end and by locking the quoin tightly the forms will be solid enough to lift to the bed of the press.

"On the press the top clamp is removed and the end clamps on the bed of the press depended on to give enough squeeze to hold the forms tight. As the chases will be narrower than the width of the press we block in all the way round with wood furniture so that they cannot move in any direction.

"Mechanically the change works perfectly. Our first issue under the new size was a 16-page paper and tested the capacity of the innovation to the fullest. We ran four sets of four-page forms through the press, 4,500 impressions to each form, and did not experience the slightest difficulty.

"At the same time we enlarged the paper, we also changed the dress completely.

"Eight-point Century spaces poorly in a 12-em column, so after considerable tests we purchased two new fonts of the Mergenthaler No. 5 Ionic, 6¾ point. This gives us the same word count to the 12-em column that the 8 point Century gave to 13 ems. For all news matter we set this on an 8 point slug. For legals, fillers, and end of stories we use a 6½ point slug. On the latter the descenders are nicked a little, but this does not interfere with the readibility of the type.

"We have discarded an all-cap style for heads and in accordance with the Mergenthaler Linotype Company "ideal newspaper" suggestions have adopted Cloister bold in both the Roman and Italic, using this type for all banks in each head.

"The space we have gained amounts to practically two pages of the old 6 column quarto. Under the old arrangement we had 120 column inches to a page, while under the new we have 147, a gain of 216 column inches in eight pages. This enables us to run the same amount of advertising in eight pages now as formerly took ten, and as we average a 10-page paper, will save considerable in press work."

All the changes, specifications and plans were worked out by Mr. Brodhecker, who is also responsible for the make-up and general appearance of the paper. A. J. Brodhecker is editor-in-chief.

248,765

was the average net paid daily circulation of The Baltimore Sun (morning and evening issues) for the month of

July, 1927

The average net paid circulation of THE SUNDAY SUN per Sunday for the month of July, 1927, was 195,542.

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

WALTER C. WHIFFEN DIES IN MOSCOW

Associated Press Correspondent Had Wide Experience as Foreign Reporter—Served in Mexico and Japan

Walter C. Whiffen, Moscow correpondent of the Associated Press, died there on Aug. 22, after an operation he underwent last Saturday.

Mr. Whiffen had had wide experience as foreign correspondent, serving in the Far East and Mexico as well as on the European Continent.

After a period of service in the Chicago office of the Associated Press, his first foreign assignment was in Mexico, where he reported the events of the troublesome days of the Diaz-Madero regimes. In the battles and counter-revolutions that followed, he was in the thick of the fray, and more than once came through perilous encounters with graphic news stories of the happenings.

Later transferred to Petrograd, now Leningrad, which place he reached after visits to many of the news centers of Europe, he arrived in Russia at the time of the outbreak of the World War. He was slightly wounded on one of his various trips to the front. The Russian revolution came and went during his Petrograd assignment, but Mr. Whiffen termed it a "tame affair" to what he had experienced in Mexico.

Later he was sent to Peking, and shortly afterward to Vladivostok, when the Bolshevist, Japanese and American interests were involved there. He stayed through the retreat of the Kolchak army and then returned to Peking, where he remained until 1921, when he went to Tokio.

He was assigned to Moscow early this summer.

BANKRUPT DAILY SOLD

The Clearwater (Fla.) Herald, which has been in the hands of receivers, was sold Tuesday to A. W. Jordan, Clearwater attorney, for $5,000. Hearings were held before Judge H. P. Baya, referee in bankruptcy, who negotiated the sale of the paper.

DAILY ISSUES DIRECTORY

The Boston (Mass.) Evening Transcript has just issued an improved edition of its "Strangers' Directory" which distributes free of charge.

Many successful National Advertisers have "broken into" Greater New York by using Brooklyn papers only.

They meet the masses here through truly local or home Brooklyn newspapers.

The Standard Union generally gets its share, because its daily circulation leads all others.

R. J. R. Hunsiman
Publisher

Largest Week-day Circulation of any Brooklyn Newspaper more people read the TIMES in July, 1927 than for the same month last year, an increase over 1926 of 47%

23,968

A circulation record for the WASHINGTON TIMES. The net paid daily average circulation of the TIMES for July, 1927, was

74,834

Keen advertisers buy a rising circulation!

WASHINGTON TIMES
THE NATIONAL DAILY

RODNEY E. BOONE
General Manager, National Advertising
9 East 40th Street, New York

A. T. CHAPECK
932 Hearst Square, Chicago

FRANKLYN S. PAYNE
2412 Book Tower Bldg., Detroit

N. Y. WORLD VETERAN JOINS JERSEY DAILY

A. Zimmerman of Almanac Staff Named Assistant Business Manager of Plainfield Courier-News

Alfred Zimmerman, who has been connected with the New York World in various capacities for the past 25 years, has resigned effective Sept. 10 to join the Plainfield (N. J.) Courier-News as assistant business manager. He will supervise both circulation and advertising.

ALFRED ZIMMERMAN

Mr. Zimmerman started newspaper work on the Elmira (N. Y.) Telegram as assistant circulation manager. Later he became the circulation manager of the Newark (N. J.) Evening News, remaining for almost ten years. He left the Evening News to become country circulation manager of the New York Evening World.

In 1903 Mr. Zimmerman was placed in charge of the advertising for the World Almanac and has carried on this work since that time.

The Plainfield Courier-News which he now joins is a member of the Gannett group of dailies. Chauncey F. Stout and William Morrison are part owners. Mr. Zimmerman's son, A. Wallace Zimmerman is advertising manager of the paper. It is represented by J. P. McKinney & Son, New York.

Mr. Zimmerman is a member of the International Circulation Managers Association. He has been a resident of Plainfield for many years.

N. E. EDITORS TO RETURN GEORGIANS' VISIT

Newpaper Men From New Hampshire and Massachusetts to Make Savannah Trip This Fall as J. J. Pelley's Guests

A large number of newspaper editors and business men from New Hampshire and Massachusetts are making preliminary plans towards a trip to Georgia during the fall. They are to sail from Portsmouth probably in late October or early November on the steamship City of Chattanooga of the Savannah line. They will go as the guests of the Ocean Steamship Company and the Central of Georgia Railway of which J. J. Pelley of Savannah is president.

This trip will be one of the direct results of the visit to New England last spring of the members of the Georgia Press Association. The members paid a visit to Boston and to Portsmouth spending a day sightseeing in New Hampshire. One of the entertainments given at Portsmouth was a dinner at which F. W. Hartford, editor and publisher of the Portsmouth Herald and Times, presided.

During the dinner Mr. Pelley of the Ocean Steamship Company, who was host to the Southern editors on their trip north offered to carry the New Hampshire editors to Savannah on his ships if they wished to make the trip. The offer has now been accepted. Georgia editors are arranging for the entertainment of the New England editors.

Dates and details of the trip are to be announced soon.

NEW STATEN ISLAND M. E.

S. I. Newhouse, publisher of the Staten Island Advance, this week announced the appointment of Paul Smith as managing editor. Mr. Smith was recently managing editor of the Toledo News-Bee.

FINANCIAL GROUP TO MEET

Bank Advertisers Expect Record Attendance at West Baden

Present reservations indicate that the twelfth annual convention of the Financial Advertisers Association to be held at West Baden, Ind., Sept. 12-15, will be the largest in the history of the group, the Chicago headquarters office announced this week.

The theme of the convention will be "Getting, Keeping and Developing Profitable Business." C. H. Wetterau, vice-president, American National Bank, Nashville, Tenn., is chairman of the program committee.

There will be several departmental sessions, covering personal selling of trusts, advertising of trusts, advertising of the commercial and savings departments and investments. Addresses on how financial institutions in small, medium size and large cities build up business will be made.

More than 30 financial institutions have already entered exhibits for a gallery method in advertising study. Virgil D. Allen, assistant vice-president, First Bank and Trust Company, Utica, N. Y., heads the exhibit committee.

The only newspaper man on the program is Owen Connor, financial editor, Philadelphia Public Ledger, who will discuss "Newspaper Co-operation."

LEGION POST NAMES WALLIS

Frank Wallis of the Gravure Service Corporation, New York, has been appointed chairman of the publicity committee of the Advertising Men's Post of the American Legion, New York. He succeeds Frank Miller, Kelly-Smith Company, New York newspaper representatives, who is now in charge of the Post's employment bureau.

ALTOONA STAFF OUTING

The annual outing of the employes of the Altoona (Pa.) Times-Tribune was held at Ivyside Park, Aug. 20. More than 250 persons attended. The tug of war between the newswriters and the job printing department staff was won by the writers.

GOVERNMENT NEWS PROPERTY OF ALL, GENEVA OPINION

(Continued from page 3)

Lord Riddell, proprietor of the News of the World, London, representing Great Britain; Andre Meynot, of the Havas Agency, representing France; and George Bernhard, of the Vossische Zeitung, Berlin, representing the organized journalists.

The opening session was occupied almost wholly with Lord Burnham's adddress. Lord Burnham declared that the functions of newspapers in affecting conditions of supply and demand of commodities of which mankind stands in need are so important and are increasing to such an extensive scale that the economic section of the League of Nations must devote more attention to them than in the past if it wants to increase commercial intercourse and to break down the barriers of national exclusiveness.

"The brotherhood of man already has been the subject of an organized campaign of publicity in the United States," Lord Burnham said, "and the League of Nations must take into account the expanding utilities of the newspaper press as the intelligence department of international exchange."

The conference adopted the following resolutions:

"1. For the purpose of international communications press telegrams should be given priority over ordinary private telegrams."

"2. For the purpose of international communications a category of telegrams known as urgent press, to be established at double rates compared with ordinary press telegrams, should have priority over ordinary urgent messages."

Lord Riddell led the opposition, which was voted down 44 to 6.

A communication presented to the conference by F. J. Brown, director of the International Cable Companies Association, representing American, British, Danish, French, German, and Italian companies, declared all recommendations will be examined sympathetically, but expressed the fear that it wouldn't be fair to users of commercial traffic to permit ordinary press rates, which were often as low as one-sixth of commercial rates to be given precedence. Furthermore, he opposed the establishment of the new category to be known as "urgent press" because of administrative complications.

Ramon de Franch, representing La Prensa of Buenos Aires, raised on the floor of the conference the point of having official minutes stating that he had been informed that the presiding officer in accord with the secretariat of the League of Nations had decided that no official record of the conference would be taken or distributed among the delegates. De Franch protested against this procedure, pointing out that many of the delegates are neither French nor English and would therefore be unable to follow the proceedings in the absence of a printed record.

Sir Eric Drummond, replying for the League secretariat, cited economy as the reason for the decision to dispense with stenographic records, declaring that the appropriation assigned by the League Council for the meeting had already been exceeded, making it impossible to engage stenographers and typists necessary for the work.

Immediate response was received from Mr. Parker, and Mr. Koenigsberg, who offered to raise sufficient funds among the delegates to meet the stenographic expense, or to defray that expense themselves, in whole or in part.

Thereupon, Sir Eric Drummond offered to satisfy the wishes of the conference, even if he had to brave eventual criticism from the League Council for exceeding his appropriation.

MERRIMACK MARKET

Lowell, Mass. and Lawrence, Mass.

A competent man constantly in this field to co-operate with national advertisers and in contact with local retailers of this market, which has 2906 retail outlets.

Lowell, Mass.
Courier-Citizen & Leader
Lawrence, Mass.
Eagle and Tribune

Bryant, Griffith & Brunson, Inc.
New York, 9 E. 41st St. — Chicago, 1310 Bell Bldg.
Boston, 201 Devonshire St. — Atlanta, Walton Bldg.

Attention Value!

THE SUN is read in a relaxed, receptive frame of mind after the day's work is over by men and women who have time enough to read all the news and all the advertisements that interest them. The leisurely reading of The Sun on the way home and in the home gives each advertisement an unusually good opportunity to be seen and read.

The Sun.
280 Broadway, New York

Circulation Units vs. Prospects

THERE is no limit to the number of circulation units you can buy in any market, but there is a limit to the number of PROSPECTS you can sell.

Any newspaper publisher can inflate circulation to any extent you want (providing you permit him to load his advertising rate to pay the cost of the circulation schemes he must employ). He cannot, however, deliver any more PROSPECTS than the market contains.

Harrisburg's 83,422 population justifies a 45,000 newspaper circulation, and an 11¢ a line rate. You are not forced to pay a higher rate in any other city of its size in the entire United States.

If you are paying more than 11¢ a line, buying more than 45,000 circulation, to capture the Harrisburg market, you might just as well pay your tailor $150.00 for a $75.00 suit.

Write for our booket, Getting to the Bottom of Things in Harrisburg. It contains complete market data.

HARRISBURG TELEGRAPH
Central Pennsylvania's Greatest Daily
45,000 Circulation—11c a line
Represented by
STORY, BROOKS AND FINLEY
New York, Philadelphia Chicago, San Francisco Los Angeles

The Advertiser and Herald-Dispatch

Huntington, West Virginia

Newspaper Consolidation

The Huntington Advertiser and Herald-Dispatch consolidated August 8th, 1927.

The Advertiser continues as evening and the Herald-Dispatch as morning newspapers.

The Sunday edition is the Herald-Advertiser.

Complete coverage of the Huntington market will be sold at 12c per line flat for morning and evening editions; Sunday, 10c flat.

National advertising representatives in sole charge of selling as well as billing and collecting, are:

E. Katz Special Advertising Agency

Established 1888

Publishers' Representatives

New York
58 West 40th St.

Atlanta
22 Marietta St.

Chicago
307 No. Michigan Ave.

Kansas City
Waldheim Bldg.

Detroit
General Motors Bldg.

San Francisco
Monadnock Bldg.

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

INSTEAD of packing up his troubles in a kit bag H. I. Phillips, the newspaper humorist has put most of them into an article which he publishes in The American Magazine for September under the title "The Troubles of a Humorist." Such troubles are so numerous, according to Mr. Phillips, that one can get a good cry any time by simply going to the office of a newspaper column conductor "and taking a look at the poor slave trying to spread little rays of sunshine through a tattered typewriter ribbon."

The man at the typewriter looks as if he had a great hidden sorrow. He has. Mr. Phillips tells what it is, "It's the next day's column."

Few newspaper readers, says Mr. Phillips, believe a column writer spends much time in an office. The assertion is made that the best conducted newspapers do not want a columnist in the office more than two or three hours a day and some prohibit his coming down at all because his bearing depresses the rest of the staff.

The New York Sun gave Mr. Phillips an office with only one small window in it. This is so dirty that when it has to be washed, it is taken out and sent to the cleaner—so the article says. Mr. Phillips also has an office at the Associated Newspapers, Inc., but here his desk is so low he can't get his knees under it—the reason it was purchased.

A most serious trouble is thus outlined by Mr. Phillips:

> No matter how wrought up and indignant I get over a thing, nobody will take me seriously. This is a terrible handicap. Every man gets "het up" over some question of more or less importance now and then, and yearns to express himself vehemently and earnestly on the subject. My capacity for honest indignation is just as great as any other man's. Very often something strikes me as so wrong that I toss my hat into the ring and start turning handsprings in righteous wrath. But nobody pays any attention. People think I'm putting on a comedy act.
>
> Fully three years ago the taxicab of a very large transportation company collided with my car and tore off the rear bumper. The driver admitted it was his fault, gave me his name, and told me to write to the company. I did so. I wrote a five-page letter denouncing traffic conditions, taxicab companies, and taxicab drivers. I never got an answer, nor did I get a settlement. A few months ago I happened to meet an official of the company, and he floored me with the remark, "Say, Phillips, that was a very funny letter we received from you some years ago. We have it framed at the office. It gives us many a laugh."
>
> I had a similar experience with a service station. A repair job was done very poorly, and I wrote a letter to the company saying so. All the come-back I got was a letter assuring me that "your most amusing comments lightened our burdens considerably. I passed your letter around among the boys, and they enjoyed it immensely."
>
> What's the use?
>
> The only way I can work off a grouch is to write a letter to the newspapers and sign it "Constant Reader," or, "E Pluribus Unum."

Mr. Phillips is frank enough to admit that a column a day keeps procrastination away because the job refuses to take "No" as an answer. Some day he may decide, so he says, to write one newspaper feature a week and then when he does, he hasn't the slightest doubt but that he will feel more crowded for time than ever.

In outlining how he gets most of his ideas from the news columns of the newspapers, he gives the following specific illustration:

> A scientist in Berlin announces that cabbages have feelings. That's good for a poem or an article. An old sea captain on one of the big liners complains that modern skippers send out S O S calls for accidents like the breaking of a watch crystal. I can go a long way on that one. A report from Boston says that the chief of police is to recommend walking licenses for pedestrians.
>
> An item like that will help me begin the day right. The first thing I do when I reach my desk is to go through the newspapers in search of some news that can be burlesqued. In everything that I write some of the press services are entitled to credit for an assist.
>
> Then, after the "lead" for the column has been written, there comes the short stuff—the jingles and the paragraphs. The classified advertisements and personal notices bring a lot of grist to the mill. There is frequently to be found some offsprings of the old one:
>
> For Sale: Ford automobile, practically new owner has no use for it.
>
> All you have to do is stick a heading, "The Candid Motorist" on it.
>
> Another old standby is this one:
>
> For Sale: Newfoundland dog; will eat anything; very fond of children.
>
> That has been used in every column in the country at sometime and was probably in the ship news on Noah's Ark. But every now and again some dog owner will insert a similar advertisement in all seriousness; and it is a strong column conductor who can resist the urge to give it another chance.

Mr. Phillips is very positive that you simply can't keep a good joke down. Copied by many newspapers, it will have credit in the early days of its career but after a while it takes on a new twist and so loses its identity; but it often comes back to roost in a column of some other newspaper in the city where it started. Here are typical illustrations:

> The one about the man who called it near-beer being a poor judge of distance has had a particularly long life. The story of the Philadelphia watchman who shot two letter carriers two or three years ago because he mistook them for Confederate soldiers is still going strong in vaudeville and musical shows; it pops up in some newspaper now and then without credit being given to Bugs Baer, who fathered it. Will Rogers's observation of a decade ago that "New York will be a great city when they get it finished" appears in one form or another in the funny columns of press and magazines very frequently. Within the past month I have seen in three newspapers a slight variation of a paragraph I wrote five years ago, to the effect that the King and Queen of England's purpose in installing a radio set at Buckingham Palace was to pick the Prince of Wales out of the air. In fact it is so long since I used it that I almost used it again, with credit to a Western newspaper.

Mr. Phillips has a happy ending in his account of his troubles. He pays this tribute to the work of the "contribs" who often are an ever present help in time of trouble:

> Contributions are a great help to a columnist, and the one who resolves early in life that he will be independent of them has his work cut out. He will never know many prolonged rest periods. My original idea was to write the leading article or poem myself, letting it take up at least half of the column, write such other timely paragraphs as might occur to me, and then let the contributors do the rest. I have stuck to that plan, but it has been at a cost of much outside help in the pinches. The average contributor does not want to play second fiddle. He wants to see his own stuff occasionally lead the column. Now, the advantage of having good contributors is that when a columnist wants to go away on a vacation for a few weeks, or when he has a day when he doesn't feel like exerting himself, he can let them do his work for him. This makes it decidedly soft, and there are days when I wish I had let my contributors pitch instead of making them play in the outfield.

Mr. Phillips does not say so but the hard working reporter often thinks the column conductor's job is a snap because the contributors do most of the work.

* * *

READERS of EDITOR & PUBLISHER know, without being told, the attention which the editorial "Lindbergh Flies Alone" created immediately after its first appearance in the New York Sun on May 21, 1927. The editorial was, of course, from the pen of Harold M. Anderson who has been for 33 years a member of the editorial staff of the Sun. William T. Dewart, president of the Sun, has had the editorial put in a little brochure whi also tells the story of the editorial.

* * *

AN excellent advertising pamphlet h been put out by the News and t Age Herald of Birmingham, Ala., und the title "The Birmingham Market." T survey of the market and the story of h it can be covered by the two newspape just mentioned is the work of The Harv Advertising Agency of Atlanta.

How the survey was made is first to The composite results are then give One part is devoted to a comparison advertising linage of Southern paper Of special interest to me was the secti which concluded the pamphlet. It lis the public events sponsored by the New

The facts given speak for themselv both clearly and graphically, but t pamphlet itself speaks a good word for i printer because of the excellence of t typography.

$100,000 PLANT FOR WEEKLIES

Three Chicago Suburban Papers to B Housed in New Building

Lloyd Hollister, Inc., is erecting a plan to cost more than $100,000 at 1232-3 Central avenue, Wilmette, to house M Hollister's papers, the Wilmette Lif Winnetka Talk and Glencoe News.

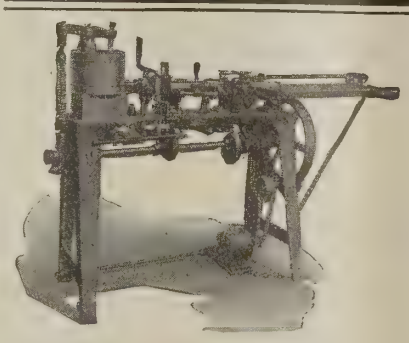
The new building will occupy a spac 80 by 155 feet and will be next door t the present plant. The front elevation o the building will be of buff colored fac brick. The structure will be set bac 30 feet from the street and this groun will be landscaped.

On the first floor of the two-stor newspaper home will be found the presse and a bindery. On the second floor wil be the editorial department, advertisin offices and the composing room. Th basement will contain the heating plant ventilating system, and storage space fo paper.

The new building is expected to b ready for occupancy this fall.

Salt Lake City's

new industries, located there during the last few years, have added an investment of $5,000,000 and an annual payroll of $4,000,000.



The Salt Lake Tribune

THE S. C. BECKWITH SPECIAL AGENCY

New York — Chicago — Detroit
St. Louis — Kansas City — Atlanta

M. C. MOGENSEN & CO., INC.

San Francisco — Los Angeles
Seattle — Portland

A Bigger Day's Work With the Elrod

The Elrod casts from 70 to 100 pounds of leads, slugs and plain rules an hour—under average conditions.

These results are secured without expert aid, and at a remarkably low cost—in labor, fuel and upkeep.

And the ample supply of strip material produced by the Elrod means quicker, better work at less cost in your composing room—a splendid reason why you should become an Elrod user.

Ludlow Typograph Co.
2032 Clybourn Ave., Chicago
Boston—New York—Atlanta—San Francisco

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

Getting Quality and Contrast

THE first essential in producing a well-printed page is fresh, distinctive display lines, such as you can get in unlimited quantities with the Ludlow, up to and including full-width 72-point.

Next comes the use of appropriate faces to give proper contrast and to maintain it from day to day. The unmarred newness of Ludlow type in sluglines and the distinctiveness of appropriate Ludlow faces give the desired contrast. Then it is only a question of adding a few new fonts from time to time to maintain that attractiveness and contrast in all its original freshness and vigor.

Ludlow users are adding new fonts every now and then and they find it pays, for in this way they can give overworked faces a rest and thus improve the appearance of their pages, at the same time increasing the effectiveness of their advertisers' sales messages. This Ludlow flexibility permits any Ludlow user to add new faces from time to time at a comparatively low cost—an investment that invariably proves profitable.

Ludlow Typograph Co.
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago

Boston: 470 Atlantic Avenue
New York: 63 Park Row
Atlanta: 41 Marietta Street
San Francisco: 5 Third Street

LUDLOW QUALITY SLUG COMPOSITION

NUMBER FOURTEEN OF A SERIES

THE DISTINGUISHED NEWSPAPER

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

Practising One's Own Preachments

The publishers of The Distinguished Newspaper have learned the wisdom of applying some of the old, familiar truisms to their daily task of turning paper, ink and news into an enviable profit. The phrases their less astute rivals consider "old saws" undergo conversion in the hands of these foresighted individuals and become valuable ideas or valued ideals which play no minor part in the success of The Distinguished Newspaper.

So it happens that the adage about practising one's own preachments has been advantageously applied to that paper's production. Coincident with its publishers' decision to raise the typographic standards of ads destined to appear upon its pages came the realization that improved typography in their own ads would show benefits greater, even, than those accruing to other users of the paper's space.

Accordingly they turned attention to the typographic improvement of their own advertising, with the result shown in the following spread. There, on one page, may be seen two of The Distinguished Newspaper's house ads. Attractively composed in Cloister and Cloister Bold, they contrast largely with similar ads from the ordinary newspaper shown on the second page. The benefits of the effort come about in a greater number of readers for the ads, more favorable impressions upon these readers, and the establishment of a high standard of typography for other advertisers—achievements rendered particularly profitable because of the economies of Linotype composition.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE CO., BROOKLYN, N. Y.

319.50

LINOTYPED IN THE CLOISTER FAMILY AND NARCISS

NEWSPAPER'S OWN ADVERTISING WILL SHOW ITS POLICY

CARELESS TYPOGRAPHY ON ALL ADS MAY BE EXPECTED OF PAPER CARELESS ON OWN

There is real, sound logic back of the aphorism which likens advertisements to salesmen and then insists that the reception extended both depends, in a good measure, upon their appearance. Advertisements unquestionably form impressions of their sponsors upon the minds of those who read them. By their appearance the readers unconsciously form an idea of the advertiser and his business methods, form it quickly and definitely. There is no opportunity for the advertiser to apologize for his representative's appearance. He cannot tell them that this particular advertisement does not look as well as he would like to have it; that the next time he will send a better dressed ambassador.

Thus it is important that every ad, whether large or small, should be graced with the advantages of good typography, but for a newspaper advertising its own wares, it becomes doubly essential. First it has to consider the possible effect of its advertisements upon ordinary readers. Too black ads make the rest of the paper difficult to read and the page that carries them is certain to give an impression detrimental to the publication carrying them. More important, however, is the possible effect of poorly arranged house ads upon the potential customer, the business man who may be considering a campaign for his own organization. When he sees one of the newspaper's own ads which is other than pleasing in its effect, he is likely to do more than receive an impression of distaste. The probabilities would lie with his immediately visualizing similar treatment of his own advertisements, an idea which no manner of argument could well displace, and what was originally a bit of typographic carelessness would turn into a lost account.

This page presents a demonstration of the point. Its advertisements, composed in unattractive type faces, poorly displayed, give scant promise that the paper carrying them would do any better by the advertising of its customers. Certainly they do not carry the promise that lies in the advertisements on the opposite page.

A LOST SHOE

ONE SHOE is not much good without its mate. Today one of our readers advertises for a shoe he lost before he ever had it on his foot.

The chances are very good that he will find the shoe within a few hours after The Ordinary Newspaper is off the press. Such, at least, has been the experience of other users of its classified ads.

RATES

First 25 words or less

When Paid in Advance	When Charged
35c	40c

One cent additional for each word over 25. Ads running two weeks or more—25 cents and one cent for each word over 25.

THE ORDINARY NEWSPAPER

GOOD LOOKS

SHAKESPEARE'S LINE TO THE EFFECT THAT "CLOTHES OFT PROCLAIM THE MAN" APPLIES TO NEWSPAPERS AS WELL. GOOD LOOKS COUNT, EVEN IN DAILY READING, AND SO THE ORDINARY NEWSPAPER MAKES AN EFFORT TO GIVE READERS THE LATEST NEWS WELL AND ATTRACTIVELY DRESSED.

THE ORDINARY NEWSPAPER

ANYWHERE'S POPULAR DAILY

Good House Ads Set Standard For Paper

They Lead to an Appreciation Of Good Typography on Part of Advertisers

House ads which have been given the advantage of careful typographic treatment are certain to repay the newspaper employing them in highly profitable fashion. First, of course, comes the benefit of a good impression upon the casual reader, the man who is unconsciously inclined to favor the paper because of its evident intention to make his reading easy and to save him from the jarring effect of black, incongruous types. Next is the profitable impress such typography leaves upon the mind of the prospective advertising customer. It brings him to the decision that the paper in question can be trusted to do an estimable job on the typography of the advertisements he himself is planning to run.

There is yet another way in which tasteful house ads show a valuable result. They set a higher standard for the other advertisers to follow by putting typographical appearance upon a competitive basis. If a newspaper's own advertising is so well arranged as to gain most of the attention, it will not be long before customers are asking and striving for similarly effective ads of their own.

Such a situation will apply chiefly to those advertisers who are already "typographically conscious," and at the same time cultivate an appreciation for better appearing ads in those advertisers not yet familiar with the means of attaining it themselves. The ultimate outcome is a general elevation of the paper's attractiveness. Its effectiveness as an advertising medium increases as a matter of course, and with it the value of its space.

Just how a newspaper's own ads can be made appealing and interesting is shown on this page. The first step was the use of more attractive type faces, Cloister Bold and Cloister being chosen. The arrangement was kept simple and the panels of readable type surrounded with ample white space. To help identify them as house ads, a similar style was used in both cases.

Our OLD Type

Characteristics of the new Ionic type which is being used in the news and want ad columns of The Distinguished Newspaper are a higher letter and wider face. The lines composing the type are broader and less susceptible to battering than was the old type.

Legibility is one of the first essentials of a good newspaper. Printing that is hard to read results not only in eyestrain but in mindstrain. Cleanness and clearness are qualities equally as desirable in typography as in literary style.

The first thing an actor or public speaker learns is to enunciate distinctly. By the same token, easy visibility should be the first aim of a newspaper. Without that mechanical prerequisite all other virtues are in danger of being diminished if not entirely lost.

Optical authorities tell us that 68 per cent of the people suffer from defective vision.

Our NEW Type

Characteristics of the new Ionic type which is being used in the news and want ad columns of The Distinguished Newspaper are a higher letter and wider face. The lines composing the type are broader and less susceptible to battering than was the old type.

Legibility is one of the first essentials of a good newspaper. Printing that is hard to read results not only in eyestrain but in mindstrain. Cleanness and clearness are qualities equally as desirable in typography as in literary style.

The first thing an actor or public speaker learns is to enunciate distinctly. By the same token, easy visibility should be the first aim of a newspaper. Without that mechanical prerequisite all other virtues are in danger of being diminished if not entirely lost.

Optical authorities tell us that 68 per cent of the people suffer from defective vision.

TO SAVE READERS' EYES

At the top of this advertisement are two columns carrying exactly the same reading matter. The column to the left is set in the type face formerly used by The Distinguished Newspaper, the one to the right in Ionic No. 5, the new face which optical authorities have hailed as the most legible text type yet developed, the type which The Distinguished Newspaper now employs throughout its pages.

Ionic gains its great legibility from the fact that its lower case letters are almost as high as the capitals. The proportion is purposely large because linotype designers heeded the fact that small characters compose fully three-quarters of the average newspaper column. They produced an easy-reading font by giving greatest attention to its most read portion.

Not only did these designers make the ratio between Ionic's lower case and capitals greater than that of the average Roman face, but descenders were shortened, capitals were heightened, and even more body added to the lower case. Into this large framework they built elements making for maximum legibility.

Ionic has no hairlines; there is practically no difference between the light and heavy strokes. Ionic serifs are sturdy. They are shorter, too, so space that formerly went between letters is now put inside the letters themselves. This, with the greater body size, brings about an even distribution of the "light spaces" in a word or line. Light comes through this new face; not around it.

All The Distinguished Newspaper's news linotype machines and want ad machines have been equipped with new mats. This change is in accord with this paper's policy of giving its readers a paper which is easy to read—clear in typography and clean in presswork.

The Distinguished Newspaper

ANYWHERE'S LEADING DAILY

Lost— ONE SHOE

ONE SHOE is not much good without its mate. Today one of our readers advertises for a shoe he lost before he ever had it on his foot. And the chances are very good that he will find it within a few hours. Such, at least, has been the experience of other users of The Distinguished Newspaper's classified ads.

And The Distinguished Newspaper's classified rate is only 20 cents per line per insertion!

The Distinguished Newspaper

ANYWHERE'S LEADING DAILY

More Attractive Typography—the Linotype Way

More attractive, more effective typography is not more expensive—if it is handled on the Linotype. The modern type faces on Linotype matrices make the production of attention-getting, readable ads an economical venture, for they put at the disposal of the newspaper all the dollars and cents advantages of the Linotype, the efficiencies of line-at-a-time composition, rapid make-up with slugs that cannot pi and dumpcart distribution.

It is because of these economies that leading newspapers are Linotype equipped and use the equipment for every type of composition. The efficiencies of the method put them in a position to give their advertisers the best of typography, at a saving to themselves. And like The Distinguished Newspaper, they practise their own preachments. They find it highly profitable to make their own advertisements both attractive and effective—the Linotype Way.

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE CO.
BROOKLYN, NEW YORK
SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS
CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO
Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

Cloister Bold Series

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

30 Point (30△155)
Modern man c

30 Point Italic (30△157)
Modern man c

24 Point (24△207)
Modern man can

24 Point Italic (24△209)
Modern man cann

18 Point (18△243)
Modern man cannot b

18 Point Italic (18△245)
Modern man cannot be

14 Point (14△154)
Modern man cannot be serv
Modern man cannot be serv

12 Point (12△276)
Modern man cannot be served
Modern man cannot be served

10 Point (10△302)
Modern man cannot be served by
Modern man cannot be served by

8 Point (8△370)
Modern man cannot be served by a to
Modern man cannot be served by a to

6 Point (6△268)
Modern man cannot be served by a tool that
Modern man cannot be served by a tool that

Swash Characters and Ligatures
A B C D E G J M N
P R T U Y
Qu ct st Qu ct st

PRINTED IN U. S. A.

NATHAN N. MEISSLER

Chicago Photographer Dies in Minneapolis Following Operation

Nathan N. Meissler, 40, secretary of the National Photograph & Advertising Company, Chicago, widely known newspaper photographer, died Aug. 23 at St. Barnabas' Hospital, Minneapolis, Minn., from peritonitis, following an operation. Mr. Meissler was spending his vacation with his family in the Twin Cities when he was suddenly taken ill Aug. 20 and removed to the hospital. He was operated on the following morning.

Mr. Meissler began his photographic career with the Chicago Evening American 27 years ago. He left the paper six years ago when he established his own business in the National Photograph and Advertising Company. During his career on the American he photographed kings and queens, presidents, and men and women of world renown. He also took pictures of all of the "big stories" that happened during his time on the paper. He served as photographer for the Hearst papers during the Mexican war and was at one time "lost" for a week.

Obituary

JOHN H. KANE, 33, for 12 years sports editor of the Pocatello (Idaho) Tribune, and southeastern Idaho representative on the state athletic commission for the past three years, died Aug. 14, following an operation for appendicitis.

WILLIAM P. BRENNAN, fifty-six, connected with the business and advertising departments of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram and Gazette fifteen years, died Monday night in his home there. He had been in ill-health several years. He was a native of Milford.

LEO P. O'NEIL, telegraph editor of the International News Service, Boston, died at Haymarket Relief Hospital, Aug. 20, following an emergency operation.

MRS. TECKLA MEYER, widow of Justus Meyer, who was editor of the Columbus (O.) Express-Westbote, died a few days ago at her home in Columbus.

CHARLES D. WEEKS, 18, former sports editor of the Cairo (Ill.) Bulletin and correspondent for the Associated Press in Cairo, died Aug. 14 as the results of injuries received in an automobile accident.

C. W. MCINTOSH, 72, publisher of the West Alexandria (O.) Echo, died a few days ago. He suffered a stroke of apoplexy several weeks previously.

DAVID WELLER, for many years a member of the composing room force of the Potsdam (N. Y.) Courier and Freeman, died Aug. 18, at Canton. He was 65. He formerly was in charge of the mechanical department of the Harvard Lampoon, monthly publication of Harvard University at Cambridge, Mass.

MRS. HARRIET J. BERRY, wife of Martin W. Berry, a member of the staff on the Boston (Mass.) Globe and assistant to the managing editor, died suddenly at her home in Sommerville this week.

MRS. SARAH M. CHEW, 82, widow of J. P. Chew, former newspaper publisher at Xenia, O., died a few days ago.

PROF. C. HENRY DICKERMAN, 36, for eight years professor of journalism at Denison University, Granville, O., died a few days ago at the home of his mother at Merchantville, N. J. He had worked on a number of newspapers in the East. Burial was at Philadelphia.

A. A. STRAUCH, 73, for many years editor of the Chadwick (Ill.) Clarion, died Aug. 12 in the Cook county hospital, Chicago, where he was taken after being stricken on a train en route to Chicago.

ALBERT E. DAVIS, 20, a compositor for the Dearborn (Mich.) Press, and his father, A. J. Davies, 48, a printer for the Dearborn Independent, were instantly killed Monday night when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by an eastbound Michigan Central passenger train at a grade crossing in Dearborn.

Are You Interested in Increasing Circulation?

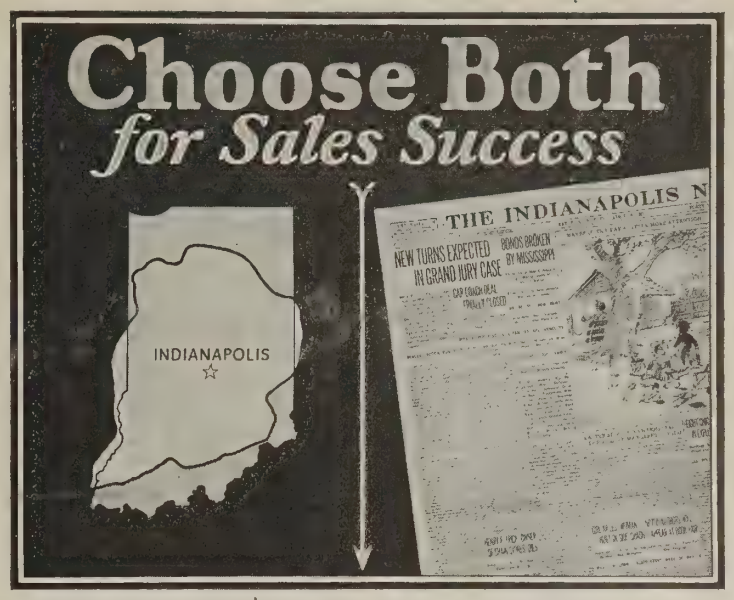
THE WORCESTER TELEGRAM-GAZETTE
WORCESTER, MASS.

Secured 16,000 new 6 months orders from offering this doll last Christmas. Equally successful offers on many others.

Price $36.00 per doz., F.O.B., N. Y.

We wish to announce that we have secured the services of Mr. R. C. Shelton, formerly of the Telegram-Gazette to assist newspapers in making their offers successful. His services are at your command.

Write today for exclusive rights in your territory.



Better Still

Order a sample of this wonderful doll today.

$3.00 (Express Prepaid)

Dept. S

FAIR TRADING COMPANY
307 SIXTH AVE., N. Y. C.

—This Market —This Medium

THE INDIANAPOLIS RADIUS is the two-thirds of Indiana directly influenced by Indianapolis—the metropolis of the state.

In this compact 70 mile radius are 2,000,000 prosperous people, unified by race, geography, transportation, language, mutual interest . . . every factor favorable to profitable selling!

Annual purchasing power, $750,000,000. Get your full share of business in this rich market by properly coordinated sales and advertising effort.

THE INDIANAPOLIS NEWS is one of America's really great newspapers.

Its prestige covers every phase of newspaper activity—circulation leadership, advertising dominance, editorial pre-eminence.

The powerful influence of The News on its public makes it the logical choice of advertisers.

Last year, 434 national advertisers (all non-medical) used The News exclusively in INDIANAPOLIS. You're always in good advertising company when you're in The NEWS.

The INDIANAPOLIS NEWS
sells The Indianapolis Radius

FRANK T. CARROLL, Advertising Director

New York: DAN A. CARROLL, 110 East 42nd St. Chicago: J. E. LUTZ, The Tower Bldg.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

Saving Space in the Classified Section—Tying Up History with Classified Promotion—New York Association to Resume Meetings Soon

A SAVING of one full column in every 17 with a concomitant increase in revenue has resulted from use of the new Ionic type in the classified advertising section of the New York Herald Tribune, L. L. Heaton, classified advertising manager of that paper told EDITOR & PUBLISHER in an interview this week.

"It is hard to figure the saving accurately," Mr. Heaton declared, "but by checks we have made we estimate we save a line in four out of every five advertisements we publish.

"The custom is to figure six average words to a line. In the type the Herald Tribune formerly used, 5½ point agate, 18 words of which sold for three lines, would generally break over into a fourth line. That fourth line was never paid for by advertisers, and while linage may decrease, revenue increases, we have found, when the change is made to the 5½ point Ionic."

C. W. Horn, classified advertising manager of the New York American, has started a promotion campaign in the Sunday American which cleverly links up present day real estate classified advertisements with local history of the various New York boroughs. The theme he is developing is expressed in the quotation "History provides today's index for tomorrow's opportunities." Prices which different sections of Manhattan brought in the past compared with what they are worth today are cited as reasons for buying now.

Dale C. Patterson has joined the classified advertising staff of the New York Herald Tribune as assistant to L. L. Heaton, classified advertising manager. He was recently on the staff of the New York American. He worked for two years under Mr. Heaton on the Philadelphia Bulletin.

The New York Association of Classified Advertising Managers will resume meetings Sept. 13 at the Advertising Club of New York, with the annual election of officers.

I. C. M. A. COMMITTEES NAMED BY HOUGH

Fifty-six of Circulation Managers' Group Picked to Co-operate with Officers During Coming Year

Harold Hough, circulation manager of the Ft. Worth Star Telegram and president of the International Circulation Managers Association, this week announced his complete list of committees for the ensuing year through Clarence Eyster, circulation manager of the Peoria (Ill.) Star, secretary of the association. The list follows:

MEMBERSHIP COMMITTEE: Chairman—J. C Montgomery, News, Detroit; Vice-Chairman—Will X. Coley, News & Observer, Raleigh; J. J. Abbott, Record, Philadelphia; Oscar Anderson, Journal, Montgomery; H. S. Blake, Capper Publications, Topeka; J. M. Black, Times-Picayune, New Orleans; Chas. T. Buck, Republican, Scranton, Pa.; H. B. Burgoyne, Standard, St. Catherines, Ont.; Robert J. Corrigan, Examiner, Los Angeles; Austin B. Croshere, New Bedford, Mass.; Don Davis, Tribune, Tampa; Clarence R. Deuel, Evening American, Chicago; R. M. Dunston, Democrat, Little Rock; Arthur H. Grossheim, Times-Star, Cincinnati; Louis J. Hoffmann, Star, St. Louis; G. M. McTaggart, Mail and Empire, Toronto; W. G. Mercier, Journal Gazette, Fort Wayne; A. Newman, New York Evening Post; Ralph M. Parsons, News-Tribune, Duluth; Chas. O. Reville, Sun, Baltimore; David H. Smith, Oregon Journal, Portland; J. E. Whittle, Review, Decatur.

PROGRAM COMMITTEE: Chairman—E. C. White, Chronicle, Houston; Vice-Chairman—Walter Golden, News & Tribune, Galveston; H. G. Kimber, Globe, Toronto.

RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE: Chairman—George W. Furbeck, Christian Science Monitor, Boston; Vice-Chairman—J. R. Marks, Citizen, Asheville; J. F. Sweeney, Free Press, Winnipeg.

BY-LAWS COMMITTEE: Chairman—J. N. Eisenlord, Daily News, Chicago; Vice-Chairman—J. A. Mathews, Pioneer Press, St. Paul; T. J. Dowling, Telegram, New York.

RAILWAY MAIL AND POST OFFICE COMMITTEE: Chairman—R. J. Seeman, Globe-Democrat, St. Louis; Vice-Chairman—W. C. Hixson, Post-Standard, Syracuse; Harold Leggett, Globe-News-Herald, Joplin.

CONVENTION COMMITTEE: Chairman—L. M. Hammond, Jr., Transcript, Boston; Vice-Chairman—Ted Booth, Press, Grand Rapids; W. L. Argue, Star, Toronto.

AUDITING COMMITTEE: Chairman—Wm. Elder, Evening Telegram, Toronto; Vice-Chairman—Harry W. Cullis, Times, Chester; George Moffett, Georgian-American, Atlanta.

AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS: Chairman—J. M. Schmid, Hearst Publications, Chicago; Vice-Chairman—Max Halmbacher, Daily Oklahoman, Oklahoma City; Chas. D. Chaffee, Beacon-News, Aurora.

TRANSPORTATION COMMITTEE: Chairman—James McKernan, Brooklyn; Vice-Chairman—Chas. Wilson, Dispatch, Columbus; Valentine Smith, Daily Mail, London, England.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE: Chairman—Sidney D. Long, Eagle, Wichita; Vice-Chairman—Karl F. Hall, Blade, Toledo; L. H. Kimball, Citizen-Patriot, Jackson, Mich.

NEWSBOYS WELFARE COMMITTEE: Chairman—John D. Simmons, Journal, Atlanta; Vice-Chairman—John J. Kirk, Plain Dealer, Cleveland; B. J. Ullman, Vindicator, Youngstown, Ohio.

PUBLISHERS ASSOCIATION COMMITTEE: Chairman—E. R. Hatton, Free Press, Detroit; Vice-Chairman—J. J. Lynch, Press, Cleveland; Seth J. Moore, Daily Eagle, Brooklyn.

GENERAL WELFARE COMMITTEE: Clarence Eyster, Peoria Star.

NECROLOGY COMMITTEE: Clarence Eyster, Peoria Star.

N. Y. SUN EDITOR ILL

Franz Schneider, financial editor of the New York Sun, is recovering from an attack of typhoid fever at the Stamford (Conn.) hospital.

BRADFORD MERRILL BETTER

Slow progress was reported this week in the condition of Bradford Merrill, general manager of the Hearst newspapers, who has been ill for several weeks at his home in Long Island.

OWENS LEAVES FOR ST. PAUL

Leo E. Owens, former general manager and secretary of the New York Journal of Commerce, left New York this week with Mrs. Owens and their young son to take up residence in St. Paul, where Mr. Owens is now a partner and resident publisher of the Dispatch and Pioneer-Press.

RIDDER PAPERS NOT FOR SALE

Rumors in New York this week that the New York Journal of Commerce had ben sold were denied by Sharton, general manager, who said, "the Ridders buy papers to operate, not to sell."

PUBLISHERS

This successful circulation building organization has instituted a new service which will interest publishers desiring additional circulation of a sound character which can be secured under the direction of their own circulation manager.
If desired we will conduct a thorough preliminary survey of your territory, which will indicate the number of potential subscribers available.
We will formulate a plan for a campaign—one to conform with your local conditions.
We will furnish you intelligent, energetic subscription salesmen with years of actual experience in the sale of sound, PERMANENT circulation.
Briefly, we will tell you how to get additional circulation and furnish you with the tools to get it.
And remember, everything handled by your own circulation manager without overburdening his department.
Wire or write immediately for complete details.

F. J. Marks Circulation Service
614 Park Bldg. — Cleveland, Ohio

READY FOR FALL CAMPAIGNS

Somewhere in the United States there is a representative newspaper that needs circulating where thousands of new subscribers secured quick will mean a large increase in advertising revenue during the coming year.

The original Hollister Circulation Organization under the personal direction of the writer with twenty years successful experience has conducted all the largest and most successful circulation campaigns on metropolitan newspapers during the past five years.

Now is the opportune time of the year for building circulation.

This organization consists of a large number of trained men now assembled and ready for quick action. Hollister Campaigns finance themselves. Carefully consider the possibilities of your field, then Phone, Wire or Write C. B. Hollister, temporary address Sylvania Hotel, Philadelphia, Pa.

Look at Akron—Tenth!

	Value of Products
New York City	$5,324 Millions
Chicago	3,439 "
Philadelphia	1,937 "
Detroit	1,599 "
Cleveland	1,094 "
St. Louis	874 "
Baltimore	678 "
Buffalo	675 "
Boston	582 "
Akron	565 "
Milwaukee	541 "
Los Angeles	531 "
Pittsburgh	518 "
Newark	490 "
Cincinnati	457 "

Akron ranks tenth in the U. S. in the value of manufactured products—surpassing cities two and three times as large. Only one Ohio city, Cleveland, produced more valuable goods than Akron, although four Ohio cities have greater population.

Buying power and individual wealth, factors you are interested in as an advertiser, are reflected in these figures and also in the fact that Building Permits for the first six months of 1927 were 37% greater than for a similar period in 1926.

The Akron Beacon Journal has the greatest circulation in this market, —more than one paper per family. As for its prestige, local linage figures prove it far ahead of any others.

AKRON BEACON JOURNAL

Member of the 100,000 Group of American Cities

STORY, BROOKS, and FINLEY, Representatives
New York Philadelphia
Chicago San Francisco Los Angeles

A QUARTER CENTURY OF UNEQUALED GROWTH

Last Month The Journal celebrated its Twenty-fifth Anniversary. In this brief span of a quarter century The Journal has surpassed contemporaries twice and three times its years.

In the first seven months of 1927 The Journal led all Portland newspapers in total display advertising.

This phenomenal growth can only be attributed to confidence placed in The Journal by buyers of advertising space.

We are but twenty-five years old—and still growing!

The JOURNAL
Portland, Oregon

BENJAMIN & KENTNOR COMPANY, Special Representatives

CHICAGO Lake State Bank Bldg. · NEW YORK 2 West 45th Street · LOS ANGELES 401 Van Nuys Bldg. · SAN FRANCISCO 58 Sutter Street · PHILADELPHIA 1524 Chestnut Street

3227

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

Doremus & Co., Opens New Boston Office—New Agency Incorporated in Bristol, Va.—A. & P. Stores Appoint Paris & Peart

DOREMUS & CO., advertising agency, has opened a new office in Boston, Mass., at 27 Kilby street, which will be occupied by the commercial department. The financial department will remain at 30 Kilby street. Doremus & Co. also has offices in New York, Chicago and San Francisco.

The Mercer Corporation, Inc., of Bristol, Va.-Tenn., with capital stock shown as 300 shares to 3,000 shares, without par value, has been granted a charter by the state corporation commission to do an advertising and publicity business. The officers are J. O. Mercer, president; S. S. Snapp, secretary, and Frank C. Johnston, all of Bristol, Va.

The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, Jersey City, N. J., chain grocery stores, has placed its advertising account with Paris & Peart, New York advertising agency.

Tom Dartnell, former manager of the research department of the Federal Advertising Agency, has joined the staff of the Blackman Company, New York.

A. K. Higgins has been appointed copy chief of Edwards, Ewing & Jones, Inc., New York, effective Sept. 1. He was formerly manager of the New York office of the Campbell-Ewald Company. At one time he was manager of the N. W. Ayer & Son copy department and later was production manager with Frank Seaman, Inc., New York.

E. D. Kennedy has left Time, weekly magazine, to join the copy staff of Frank Seaman, Inc., New York.

The Federal Advertising Agency has advanced D. E. Robinson to the position of director of research.

W. R. Enyart, formerly with Fairbanks, Morse & Co., has joined the staff of Buckley, Dement & Co., of Chicago.

A. E. Wright, for the last five years account executive with Potts-Turnbull Company, Chicago, has joined the copy staff of Henri, Hurst & McDonald, advertising agency of the same city.

Leon Kelly, account executive and copy writer of Farnsworth & Brown, Inc., New York, is author of a novel entitled, "Margherita," which has been published by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

AD TIPS

Blackman Company, New York, sending schedules to a few towns in the southwest on Camay Soap, a product of Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati.

Bohnett & Co., 3rd & Vine Sts., Cincinnati, Ohio. Will make up the lists during the months of September, October, for The Witt Cornice Company (ash cans and garbage pails), 2118 Winchell avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Glen Buck Company, 39 South La Salle street, Chicago, is doing some advertising on Erla Radio Battery, Electrical Research Laboratories, Chicago, in a few metropolitan centers where the local man makes the selection of the paper.

Collins-Kirk, Inc., 750 North Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. Will make up lists during the month of September or October for the Morton Salt Co., 208 West Washington street, Chicago, Ill.

Cramer-Krasselt Company, Milwaukee, Wis. It is reported that the A. B. Stove Company, Battle Creek, may consider a limited roto campaign this fall, to be handled by this agency.

Critchfield & Co., 14 East Jackson boulevard, have issued six insertions to newspapers for the advertising of the Lincoln Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.

Crowell, Williams Company, 612 North Michigan avenue, Chicago, has contracts all ready to be issued on Parker Pen Co., Janesville, Wis.

John H. Dunham Company, 431 North Michigan avenue, Chicago, will use a series of 14 half pages in metropolitan papers for the advertising of Dona Castile Soap (Armour & Co.). Will decide by Sept. 1 on the list on Fansteel Products Company (Radio) North Chicago, Ill.

Erickson Company, 381 Fourth Ave., New York. Will make up the lists during the month of September for the Bon Ami Company (Cleanser) of 17 Battery Place, New York.

Erwin Wasey & Co., 844 Rush street may handle a small campaign in the fall on the A. C. Spark Plug Co., Flint. Mich., it is reported.

Albert Frank Co., 134 South La Salle street, Chicago, is releasing orders in Middle West towns on McLaughlin Coffee Co., Chicago. Arrangements are being made with local dealers to install a dispensing machine which is followed by an advertising campaign.

Freeze & Vogel, Milwaukee, Wis., is placing teaser copy in Chicago papers on Brook Hill Laboratories, Chicago.

Dean W. Geer Company, Oshkosh, Wis., is now handling the account of Barlow & Seelig Co., Ripon, Wis., manufacturers of washing machines.

Henri, Hurst & McDonald 58 East Washington street, Chicago. Placing page copy in metropolitan papers at scattered points on Blue Valley Creamery Company, Chicago.

Manternach Co., 55 Allyn street, Hartford, Conn. Will make up the list during the fall months for the L. E. Scott Company, Inc. (Cleaning fluid), 31 Eden avenue, Southington, Conn.

Pacific Coast Advertising Company, is sending contracts to some Colorado and Wyoming newspapers for the advertising of Levi Strauss Co., San Francisco, Cal.

Prather-Allen-Heaton Co., Cincinnati, O., has issued six advertisements, to start immediately, to Chicago and New York papers only on Crosley Radio Co., Cincinnati. Plans are still indefinite for any other territory on this account.

Wm. H. Rankin Co., 342 Madison avenue, New York. Will make up the lists during the month of September for the Orphos Company (Tooth paste), of 22 West 32nd street, New York.

St. Paul Advertising Company, St. Paul, Minn., will have the new list on Ad-Ler-Ika Company, St. Paul, ready about September 1.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 420 Lexington avenue, New York. Will make up the lists during the month of September for The Cheek-Neal Company (Maxwell House Coffee and Tea), of Nashville, Tenn.

United Advertising Agency, Fifth avenue at 33d street, New York. Has been appointed to direct the advertising of Bourday, Inc., Paris and New York.

REPRESENTING THE NEWSPAPERS

EDWARD H. WALKER, formerly assistant to Herbert R. Schaeffer, of the William H. Rankin Agency, has joined the New York staff of the Allen-Klapp Company, newspaper representatives.

Mr. Walker is a graduate of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania. After he was graduated he spent two years in a sales capacity with the Walker Safe Company.

George N. Findlater, Jr., who has been with the William J. Morton Company, New York, as a solicitor for the last two years, will be transferred Sept. 1 to the Chicago office.

Weaver, Stewart Company, Inc., Chicafo, has been appointed to represent the Marshfield (Wis.) News-Herald and the Ashland (Wis.) Press.

GROWS HIS OWN GRAPES

George Carter of Smyrna, Del., in addition to being editor of the Wilmington (Del.) Evening Journal, is also a successful farmer, specializing in grape culture. A few days ago the farmers in Delaware who grow grapes for the market made a tour of the principal vineyards of the state. During their visit to Smyrna the members of the party were treated to refreshments by Mr. and Mrs. Carter, who received the guests on the lawn of their farm.

REPORTER INJURED

Frank Conklin, 58, reporter for the New York Evening World at the Brooklyn police headquarters, was struck by a motor truck last Monday and received a compound fracture of the right leg and severe bruises and cuts on the arms and body. Conklin, who has covered headquarters for the past 35 years, was on his way from the reporters' rooms to the police headquarters which is situated across the street when he was hit by the truck.

BECOMES SEMI-WEEKLY

The Easton (Md.) Gazette, heretofore printed once a week, has become a semi-weekly, being issued on Tuesdays and Fridays.

STARTS PROMOTION PAPER

The Attleboro (Mass.) Sun has started publication of a miniature edition of the paper carrying interesting business news reprinted from the columns of the regular paper.

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE
of the
INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION

Can supply you with competent circulation men of capacity and ability capable to take entire charge of your department or to fill important posts in the department.

Address the Secretary-Treasurer please, Mr. Clarence Eyster, care Star Building, Peoria, Ill.

FOR PROMPT SERVICE

TYPE

BORDERS ∞ ORNAMENTS ∞ BRASS RULE

Printers' Supplies

KELLY PRESSES • KLYMAX FEEDERS • PAPER CUTTERS
HAMILTON WOOD AND STEEL EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING OUR AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT

Carried in stock for prompt shipment at the following Selling Houses of the

AMERICAN TYPE FOUNDERS COMPANY

Boston	Baltimore	Pittsburgh	Cincinnati	Kansas City	San Francisco
New York	Richmond	Cleveland	St. Louis	Des Moines	Portland
Philadelphia	Atlanta	Detroit	Milwaukee	Denver	Spokane
	Buffalo	Chicago	Minneapolis	Los Angeles

"Pleasantly Free From Metal Troubles!"

The Burlington Free Press
Daily, Except Sunday
Burlington, Vermont

Merchant & Evans Co.,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Attention of Mr. F. T. Boyer, Supt.

Dear Mr. Boyer:

The last year's experience on the use of RESTORE METAL shows that you have given painstaking attention to our needs. We have been pleasantly free from metal troubles.

We use your Combination Metal exclusively and it gives good satisfaction in our newspaper linotypes, job printing company linotypes, and newspaper stereotype work.

Very truly yours,
Free Press Association,
DAVID W. HOWE,
Asst. Manager.

Briefly put, Mr. Howe's headline thought is the common reaction of all steady users of the

RESTORE METAL PLAN

Because—it keeps type metal always uniform, at original formula, with peak efficiency, all the time!

DESCRIPTIVE LITERATURE FREE

Why not send us a sample of your metal now in use . . . then we can give you definite evidence of the value of the Plan to type metal users?

MERCHANT & EVANS COMPANY
Manufacturers of SPARTAN Type Metals
Linotype—Intertype—Combination—Stereotype—Autoplate—Monotype
PHILADELPHIA
Stock in Principal Cities

2nd in America in CITY COVERAGE

Reaching 3.367 units of population per copy circulated, The Des Moines Evening Tribune-Capital ranks second in the United States of 305 daily newspapers in all cities of 75,000 and more population.

Closely following is The Des Moines Morning Register with a 5.292 ranking of unit coverage.

The total city of Des Moines circulation on the above basis is 73,230 copies daily in a city of 150,695 population.

Additional circulation of more than 150,000 makes a total daily circulation of 225,000—99% in Iowa, a state of 2,419,927 population—537,762 families.

Two separate and distinct publications, The Des Moines Register and Tribune-Capital provide twenty-four-hour news services. No duplication of editorials, features, comics, cartoons or press items.

IOWA MARKET DATA tells the complete story of these Iowa people who paid more than $2,100,000 during the current year to have The Des Moines Register and Tribune-Capital in their homes. The book tells about their electric and gas markets, number of automobiles they drive, their income from agriculture and manufacturing, number of wholesale and retail outlets for every city of more than 1,000 population, as also providing a complete picture of the city of Des Moines—Iowa's central distributing city, 150 to 350 miles distant from a city of the same or greater population in adjoining states. A copy awaits your request.

The DES MOINES REGISTER and TRIBUNE-CAPITAL

AUTHORITY: Audit Bureau of Circulations Blue Book containing reports to A. B. C. of date March 31,.1927.

WOMEN IN ADVERTISING AND JOURNALISM

Katharine Trenholm Is a "Home-Work" Newspaper Woman—Sophie Irene Loeb Appointed by League of Nations—Woman Publisher Heads Child Welfare Drive

ONE of the few newspaper women in the country who can entertain guests at her home while doing her daily work is Katharine Trenholm, radio reviewer of the New York Sun. Miss Trenholm sits in the living room of her home in East Orange, N. J. five nights of each week listening to the various stations broadcast. While she has never tried to be hostess to a bridge party at the same time, she is able to invite friends in who like to listen to the radio.

KATHARINE TRENHOLM

Sometimes Miss Trenholm wishes she were back again on the street reporting exciting stories with the rest of the "gang," but being a radio reviewer has its compensations. For instance, there are the laughs that she sometimes receives in the mail. In one letter she received some time ago addressed to Mr. K. Trenholm, the writer imagined the Sun's reviewer as a "grouchy old man, sitting in front of the loud speaker and twirling the dials and his mustachios." Another correspondent advised her to "tie a tin pie plate on the bed post and let your wife stand in the next room while you broadcast. If she lets you live to tell the story, you're a better man than I think you are."

A radio reviewer, Miss Trenholm says, works on an average of four hours an evening, starting at seven and finishing at 11.

"I find it similar to ordinary reporting," she said. "In covering a story the things that arouse you most gravitate to the lead, and it is the same in listening to radio programs."

Miss Trenholm has been on the Sun for seven years now. Three years ago she was made radio reviewer and in that time, she hasn't missed more than four nights, with the exception of two weeks spent on vacation.

Sophie Irene Loeb, writer for the New York Evening World, has been invited by the League of Nations to become adviser in its child welfare work. Miss Loeb has long been identified with this type of social work beginning about 18 years ago, when she went to the homes of widows in crowded districts of New York and conferred with them as to the best means of aiding them.

For seven years Miss Loeb was chairman of the Board of Child Welfare in New York, and last year addressed the first international Child Welfare Congress at Geneva, at which principal nations of the world were represented.

Mrs. Lytton Gray Ament, publisher of the New York Morning Telegraph, was this week named the head of a committee to produce a vaudeville revue and other entertainment to help raise $1,000,000 for the Child Welfare Committee of America. Mrs. Ament sailed Aug. 24 for Europe and will appoint members of her committee on her return.

Miss Alice Wheeler, member of the women's page staff, Worcester (Mass.) Telegram, has resigned.

Miss Sadie Lee Kirgan, who holds a degree from the University of Missouri, has succeeded her father, L. C. Kirgan, as editor of the Fairfield (Tex.) Recorder, weekly.

Miss Bonnie Daynes will be society editor of the Salt Lake City Telegram for the next two months, substituting for Mrs. Harry Hines who has gone to Europe on a vacation trip.

Miss Mary Duffy is a recent addition to the news staff of the Scranton (Pa.) Sun.

Faye Lewton Ashman has rejoined the staff of the Alliance (O.) Review as society editor. For a number of years before her marriage she was a member of the editorial staff.

WATERMELON WEEK CELEBRATED BY E. & P.

Opulent Product of Amon G. Carter's Patch Arrives in Splendor in Galvanized Iron Wash-Tub

EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S annual Watermelon Week was celebrated this week with the arrival from Texas of a huge melon lolling lusciously in the spacious precincts of a galvanized iron wash-tub. It was sent from the farm of Amon G. Carter, president of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and Record-Telegram. Every year Mr. Carter sends scores of choice melons from his farm to his friends in the publishing and advertising fields.

A letter from the "Hired Hand"—Harold Hough, circulation manager of the Star-Telegram — accompanied the melon. It follows:

"Each year about this time, I take a plane and fly over our 900 acre watermelon patch and see if we have any melons large enough to send a few of Mr. Carter's friends. It is a dangerous trip, because if a forced landing was necessary, in the middle of that jungle, the world would be without another high flyer. Tangled up in those fast growing vines, would mean to be crushed to death between two big, growing melons, fighting for floor space.

"Near the South eighty line, outside of the danger zone, I found a melon, which I lassoed out for you and it is being expressed to you today. It is not a big one from the center of the patch, but perhaps it will satisfy, if you cold storage him for a few days before opening.

"Won't you send me one of your cards, because next year when we plant your melon, I am going to put your card in the hill and raise you a special melon. When you slice it, you will find that the seeds spell out your name and address. We will sure get some wide publicity for Texas on that invention. I think it is the cleverest idea I have had today. To make it a success, all I have to do is to persuade the melons to do their part. I told Mr. Carter about the plan, thinking it might mean a raise—it did.

"However, it was not a financial raise. At that the Boss is not such a hard boiled feller after all. He is just back from the Dempsey-Sharkey fight and felt so good over the outcome, he has promised me if I would quit making speeches and writing non-sensible letters long enough to get your melon to you ripe and in good condition, he would take me to the Dempsey-Tunney fight in Chicago. Being a single man, I have never witnessed a good fight and am working just as I would if he was watching me. If the melon is not good, don't tell Mr. Carter—tell me and I will send another one.

"Texas crops this year are so great, they have pushed the field fences out into the roads."

"Yours 'till Henry makes up his mind," Amon Carter's Hired Hand, of Shady Oak Farm.

in

Detroit—

Free Press circulation reaches 31,000 more than the total number of families owning their own homes.

The "Free Press"

"Starts the day in Detroit"

With a stable, uninflated, liberal pursed circulation productive of greater advertising returns at lower cost.

ADVERTISING WOMEN VISIT U. S.

Miss M. G. Atkins and Mrs. J. Harvey-Smith Arrive from London

Two British advertising women, Miss Muriel G. Atkins and Mrs. J. Harvey-Smith, arrived in this country Aug. 22, on a business and pleasure trip. Miss Atkins is secretary of the Regent Advertising Club of London, and a business staff member of Odhams Press, Ltd., London, publishers of John Bull, Ideal Home, Passing Show, 20 Story Magazine and Picturegoer. While in this country she will act as advertising representative of these publications.

Mrs. Harvey-Smith is advertising manager of Payne-Jennings Publicity, Ltd., theatrical advertising agents and publishers, London. She is a member of the Regent Advertising Club and acts as business manager of Regent Activities, official organ of the club.

The English women were met at the dock by members of the New York League of Advertising Women and later tendered a luncheon by that group. On Thursday evening they were honor guests at a dinner given by the New York Advertising Club.

They will return to England late in September.

RESCUES DROWNING GIRL

Frank R. Glynn, Boston, Mass., advertising man, recently made a heroic rescue of a South Boston girl from drowning in Eliot, Me. Glynn recently underwent an operation on his arm, requiring 14 stitches, but did not hesitate to plunge into the water fully clothed to save the girl, who was being carried out by the swift current of the Piscataqua river. After he had brought the girl to shore, Glynn was forced to walk half a mile for medical attention for his arm.

This is Ionic No. 5 Ionic No. 5

This is Roman No. 2 Ionic No. 5

The two lines reproduced above were photographically enlarged from two seven point slugs, the upper line set in Ionic No. 5, the lower in No. 2.

A Larger Lower Case Gives Ionic No. 5

Greater Legibility

LOWER CASE LETTERS almost as high as the capitals accompanying them—there is the explanation of Ionic's exceeding legibility. The proportion is purposely large because Linotype designers heeded the fact that small characters compose fully three-quarters of the average newspaper column. They produced an easy-reading font by giving greatest attention to its most read portion.

Not only did these designers make the ratio between Ionic's lower case and capitals greater than that of the average roman face. All descenders were shortened, capitals were heightened, and even more body added to the lower case. Into this large framework they built elements making for the maximum legibility.

And the result? Ionic No. 5 has no hairlines—there is practically no difference between the light and heavy strokes. Ionic serifs are sturdy. They are shorter, too, so space that formerly went between letters is now put inside the letters themselves. This, with the greater body size, brings about an even distribution of the "light spaces" in word or line. Light comes through this new face; not around it.

In short, Ionic No. 5 is "all letter." Its great readability won immediate favor with newspaper readers, its mechanical advantages immediately attracted newspaper publishers. These two considerations combined explain its amazing popularity—tell why more than 500 papers have already adopted Ionic No. 5, the legible text face.

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY
BROOKLYN, NEW YORK
SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS
CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO
Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

530.27.3-8

LINOTYPED IN GARAMOND AND NARCISS

At the source of the news

Newspapers receiving United Press service are assured the most expert coverage of big news events like the Women's National Singles Tennis championships. In the accompanying picture Mary K. Browne, former national champion and now a United Press staff correspondent, is interviewing Helen Wills just before "Little Poker Face" goes on the courts at Forest Hills.

UNITED PRESS

In many a newspaper pl
because a single track foun
posingroom with a four tra

This causes too early a clos late a pressroom start an Moreover, the lack of suffi compels the use of otherwis

Among the newspapers free of their voluminous platem
The Philadelphia Evening E
daily operation sixteen Junio
Autoshavers, producing fort

WOOD NEWSPAPER MA
501 FIFTH AVENUE

there is traffic congestion connects a four track compressroom.

of ad. and news pages, too
oo late a pressroom finish.
nt printing time invariably eedless presses.

om these handicaps because ng capacity is, for instance, letin. This newspaper has in Autoplate machines and eight ight finished plates a minute.

HINERY CORPORATION
NEW YORK CITY

EDITORIAL

PROGRESS

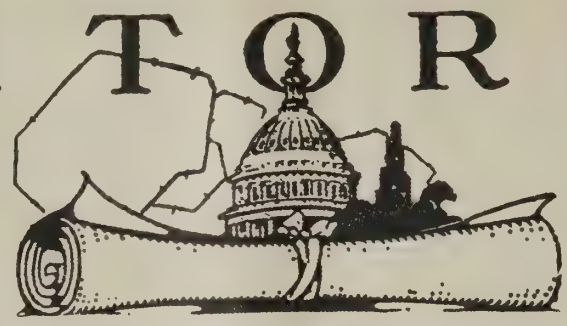
"IN PRINCIPLE" acceptance of the American idea of property right in news by the Geneva conference of press service and newspaper chiefs is assured, with the limitation, American also, that no ownership rights shall be recognized in the gathering of news pertaining to governmental activities.

All are agreed on the fundamental justice of the principle that a newspaper or news service which discovers and develops important news shall have the right to exploit its achievement to the fullest possible extent of prestige and profit. In the United States, no newspaper or responsible news service executive has been willing for the past 10 years to defend or countenance the old practice of "lifting" without compensation or credit the fruit of a competitor's efforts. Legal disabilities aside, this practice, which was once winked at, is now recognized as bad business, a foundation which will not support an enduring structure.

European news services are also working with a new background. The large agencies once drew their bread and butter from the government treasuries and industriously spread whatever propaganda their masters desired. They have today much greater economic resources. Their activities are no longer primarily those of government servants, even though in many cases they keep their old intimate touch with the chancellory. Many of them are highly efficient news machines. Their competitors have gained in strength also, and are not dependent as in their infant days upon what they could filch from the subsidized services. Their position has had no parallel in this country, where all newspapers and news services stand equal before government and where even the appearance of official favoritism has called forth countrywide criticism.

Eventually, as a result of these international meetings, we may expect the diminution of news flowing from official sources through exclusive official channels. The change will not follow immediately upon adoption of the Geneva resolution, but the very fact that the open door idea, broached last year by Roy W. Howard, has been so liberally defined is gratifying proof that the press in other lands is seeing its function in some slight degree as Thomas Jefferson saw it a century ago.

New Ambassadors to Europe—Lindbergh, Jimmy Walker, and a couple of hundred editors and publishers from Everywhere in America.



TEA

IMPORTATION of India black teas into the United States increased more than 2,700,000 pounds during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1927, according to the Department of Agriculture. India green teas were also imported in almost double their former quantities, while other varieties of the cheering herb show a marked falling off in American consumption. The total of all tea imports was about 1,000,000 pounds below the previous year's total.

The changes which this indicates in the American public's taste for tea coincide with an extensive advertising campaign which began to make itself felt during the reported year and which it is planned to carry on past the end of the present decade. The preference of American tea drinkers for black tea rather than green is traceable through the Department's records for a number of years, but in no previous year has the black leaf received such a remarkable impetus in popularity.

We loathe the thought of another concerted attack on our tummies by a new phalanx of tea-growers, but we seem to be in for it. Some bright young man is certain to convince the green tea people and others who are losing ground in the American market that the only weapon with which to fight Sir Charles Higham and his newspaper campaign for India Tea is another and if possible a bigger and better newspaper campaign for their own pet varieties. Still, we shall probably survive.

The big problem of the American newspaper industry is the town's Saturday night payroll, says a wit from the plains of Kansas.

Now, brethren, if I come unto you speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you, except I shall speak to you either by revelation, or by knowledge, or by prophesying, or by doctrine?—I. Corinthians, XIV; 6.

FIELD MANAGERS

IF the achievements and advancements of the newspaper industry during the past ten years were to be catalogued and rated as to magnitude and comparative importance, we believe that the growth of the country press, daily and weekly, would take first place on both counts. The consolidation philosophy has held strong sway in these branches of journalism, even more than in the large cities. The old-time country editor who lived off his job shop and the county printing and conducted his newspaper as a poverty-stricken party hack is nearly extinct. The county weekly and the rural daily are making regular advertisers of their local merchants and are obtaining a growing volume of national business. Cash rather than cordwood and vegetables pay for subscriptions, but the old intimate touch with the reader and advertiser is unbroken.

Credit for much of this intelligent application of sound business to country journalism belongs to the field managers of the state press associations. Unknown a decade ago, these men are assembled this week in Detroit for their second annual convention discussing with a view to immediate and practical solution ideas for the improvement of their clientele which in the not remote past were purely academic. The field manager appeared at the right moment to consolidate the efforts of years put forth by the National Editorial Association, the American Press Association, the Association of Advertising Agencies and EDITOR & PUBLISHER to convince national advertisers that the rural press was the great neglected road to new business and also to convince the rural press of the same truth. Much elementary work remains to be done in making the country journal accessible to the national advertiser, but there is now assurance that it will be done, and done well.

General decline in the classified linage of metropolitan dailies reflects the slower pace of trade.

GHASTLY PUBLICITY DEBT

WE await the coming of a learned one to demonstrate the gain to aviation or any other side of human life which accrued from the air race between Oakland, Cal., and the Hawaiian Islands last week. Three lives lost in preparation for the event, seven more probably snuffed out in mid-Pacific—that is a ghastly toll to be paid even for a great discovery. Its repetition should be made impossible.

Practicability of trans-oceanic flying has been amply proven by skilled military, naval and civilian flyers with carefully-prepared machines and a bountiful supply of good fortune. The next step is the development of aircraft to do on schedule what has to date been a spectacular stunt. Stringent regulations are needed to safeguard human life in the necessary experimental flights and to assure the collection of the scientific data which will produce the passenger and freight carrying planes that are sure to come.

No such end is served by such hurry-up events as the Dole Derby, which was flashed upon the public in suspicious conjunction with the magazine-advertising injunction to "Thank Jim Dole for the pineapples you eat." The newspaper fraternity has little cause for self-congratulation in this venture, and the commonwealth and the art of aviation are vastly poorer in the loss of ten adventurous souls.

FALSE RADIO ADVERTISING

VIEWED from any angle, direct advertising over the radio has little in common with sound business practice. Broadcasting is now well enough established for those intimately associated with it to assert definitely that the radio audience wants above all else entertainment, and secondarily and on specific occasions, spot news information. It accepts without resentment the element of commercialism involved in announcement of the name of the sponsor who pays for entertainment features, and for some articles or services it responds satisfactorily to "applause card" requests. It tunes out direct advertising when that appears to the detriment of the feature program and learns to avoid the stations which broadcast such advertising. So competent authorities report.

For that reason, probably, there has been little complaint of false or misleading radio advertising, the first case of which was reported in EDITOR & PUBLISHER recently. The Federal authorities acted with commendable dispatch in this instance. Celerity of prosecution and firm enforcement of "cease and desist" orders will do much to keep clean this medium, which lends itself so easily to misuse. The radio appeal is evanescent. It has no printed word to stamp and restamp its message upon the eye of the prospective buyer—the principal reason, beyond the one stated above, for its inefficiency as a direct medium—but by the same token it is the trusty weapon of the charlatan who can travel his devious path without leaving tracks. Federal censorship of programs is certainly indicated if individual broadcasters do not take every precaution for the protection of their unknown and unseen hearers against the exploitation which other media keep at the minimum.

Two good places to cut expenses: (1) Permitting writers to drag out their stories until the facts are thrice told; (2) giving space to press agents whose stuff is valueless to the newspaper and advertiser alike, since few read it.

"ROLLING THEIR OWN"

PRESS agent efforts to exploit the community booster spirit of California's numerous "up and coming" municipalities is meeting organized resistance in the bureau recently created by the newspaper publishers association. The newspapers did not object to giving their space and services free, even though everyone else who helped the booster event to success received compensation. They finally did object when the boosters went outside of the community to hire press agents at fancy fees, taking the funds to pay said fees from the money formerly set aside for paid newspaper space, the while expecting the newspapers to keep the home fires burning as of yore.

Publicity material for community events is now being written by the newspapers' own central bureau. The bars are up against outside press agentry. Funds are turned to paid newspaper space whenever possible and the money received for publicity service from the community helps strengthen the newspaper association for other worthy activities.

That is a practical solution of a problem which is particularly bothersome in a region where the booster spirit is all-pervading. Nowhere else have newspapers undertaken so vigorously intelligent steps to drive the publicity parasite from their structure, but even these efforts strike only at one phase of the many-headed evil. They do point in the right direction, however, which is the preparation of all local copy under the direction of the local editor. A newspaper adequately organized to serve its field should have rare need for press agent assistance.

So long as the nation's oil fields remain flush, don't look for any great drop in newspaper advertising linage. The automobile people will be at it harder than ever within a month, using big newspaper space to offset stiff competition in an apathetic market. And the oil-burner manufacturers have already started their fall newspaper sermons against the Demon Ash-Barrel.

PERSONAL

ADOLPH S. OCHS, publisher of the New York Times, was an honor guest at the sequicentennial celebration of the Battle of Bennington at Bennington, Vt., and at Walloomsac, N. Y., the field of battle, recently.

Herbert B. Swope, executive editor of the New York World, accompanied Governor Alfred E. Smith and Mrs. Smith on a hurried trip from the Executive Mansion in Albany to a boys' camp at Lake Luzerne when word was received that the Governor's youngest son, Walter, was seriously ill. Mr. Swope was staying at the Mansion as guest of Governor Smith.

C. K. Woodbridge, president of the International Advertising Association, is spending a short vacation with Mrs. Woodbridge on Cape Cod.

Maj. C. E. Lovejoy, editor and publisher of the Bronxville (N. Y.) Press, has been named executive secretary of the Columbia University Alumni Federation, with offices at Columbia University, New York City.

When the Buffalo-Fort Erie Peace Bridge was dedicated recently Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Butler had as their guests Sir Esme and Lady Isabelle Howard, the British ambassador to the United States and his wife being in attendance at the ceremony. Mr. Butler is editor and publisher of the Buffalo Evening News.

Edward M. Davis, editor and publisher of the Newark (Del.) Ledger, has been elected vice-president of the St. Georges (Del.) Trust Company.

Austin M. Goodwin, editor of the Portland (Me.) Sunday Telegram, was the principal speaker at the luncheon meeting of the Portland Civitan Club last week.

Miss Alicia Patterson, daughter of Joseph Medill Patterson, Chicago and New York publisher, will be married to James Simpson, Jr., son of the president of Marshall Field & Co., Chicago department store. The engagement of the couple was announced last week by Miss Patterson's parents.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

GEORGE M. BURBACH, business manager, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, who is in Europe on a vacation, recently spent two weeks motoring through Germany and Switzerland.

E. W. Waldron has succeeded Roy G. Johnson as general manager of the Albany (N. Y.) Times-Union.

John J. Casey, Jr., has joined the business staff of the Worcester (Mass.) Post as an advertising solicitor.

Announcement has been made of the approaching marriage of Edward E. Lindsay, of the advertising department of the Decatur (Ill.) Herald, to Miss Ellen Voorhies, which will take place early in the fall.

Advertising staff members of the Portland (Me.) Press Herald, Express and Sunday Telegram held their mid-summer field day as the guests of Fred S. Jordan, advertising man of that city.

Franklin D. Schurz, assistant to the president of the South Bend Tribune, is spending a vacation at Lake Minnewaska, N. Y.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

W. J. BAHMER, the veteran dramatic critic of the Pittsburgh Post, has been retained in that position on the newly merged Post Gazette.

E. M. Henderson, assistant managing editor of the Birmingham News, will direct the school of journalism of the Birmingham Southern College for the coming school year.

Earl Steele, reporter, Enid News and Eagle, has been made telegraph editor of the Enid Eagle, succeeding Guy P. Webb, who joins the faculty of the Enid high school in September. Harold Keith, Oklahoma Sigma Delta Chi, is reporting and doing desk work on the News and Eagle while staff members are vacationing.

Richard Adelbert Van Namee, local editor of the Lowville (N. Y.) Journal and Republican has just celebrated his fifty-fifth anniversary on that publication. He went to work on the Republican on Aug. 19, 1872, as a printer's apprentice. Mr. Van Namee has been local editor since 1886.

Charles E. Hewitt, managing editor of the North Tonawanda (N. Y.) Evening News, has been reelected a member of the board of education of that city for a five-year term.

Matthew Sweeney has been made librarian of the Albany (N. Y.) Times-Union. He formerly covered the federal beat.

Wayne Jordan has left the copy desk of the Toledo (O.) Times to join the copy desk of the Detroit Free Press.

M. C. Desmond of the staff, Toledo (O.) Times, has been placed on the copy desk.

Ray Warren, assistant sports editor of the Staten Island Advance, has resigned.

Frank C. Harper for years a member of the editorial staff of the Pittsburgh Press, who left there to write a daily volumn on the Chronicle-Telegraph, is back with the Press, following the merger of the Chronicle-Telegraph and Sun. He is again conducting a daily column.

Wilson Sullivan, city editor of the Albany (N. Y.) Times-Union, is touring New England and the Adironracks on his vacation.

Torrey Stearns has resigned as reporter on the Chicago Daily News to become associate director of information for the National Council of Y. M. C. A., New York.

MARRIED

MORRIS E. SWARTZ, JR., of the editorial staff, Harrisburg (Pa.) Evening News, to Miss Dorothy E. Buch of the Harrisburg Telegraph staff, Aug. 20.

Frederick Gardiner Fassett, Jr., of West Medford, Mass., former night editor of the Waterville (Me.) Sentinel, to Grace Pattangall Abbott, of Augusta, Aug. 13.

Gordon W. Dressel of the photographic staff of the Toledo (O.) Blade to Miss Doris Snover Milbourn.

Dean Turley, national advertising manager for the Decatur (Ill.) Review, to Miss Alpha Vick of Decatur, Aug. 13.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

E. H. TIPTON has been transferred from the Cheyenne, Wyo., bureau of the Associated Press to become correspondent at Santa Fe, N. M., succeeding B. H. Miller, assigned to the Helena, Mont., bureau. H. J. Frawley of Denver is now at Cheyenne.

N. A. Huse of the executive office of the Associated Press will return to New York on Monday from a vacation spent fishing in Canada.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

J. H. MAHER, publisher of the Hull (Ill.) Enterprise, has sold his interests to D. B. Gray, F. A. Farnsworth and Othedus Q. Campbell, who have taken possession of the paper. Mr. Campbell will be editor.

Estacada (Ore.) Eastern Clackamas News, a weekly, has been sold by W. B. Snyder to Frank Haines.

Eldorado (O.) Bee has been sold by Harry R. McPherson to Harry King of Youngstown, O. Mr. McPherson will move to Columbus to be associated with the Ohio State Archæogical and Historical Society.

W. G. Phippin, and his son, Donald Phippen of Red Creek, N. Y., owners of the Red Creek Herald, have purchased the Fair Haven Register from Charles M. Delling of Fair Haven, N. Y. The paper will be published under the name of The Register Publishing Company.

Earl E. Helfresh, owner and operator of the Helfresh Press, a job printing plant at Columbus, Ind., has leased the Columbus Weekly Star, owned and operated by M. A. Locke for many years, with an option to buy the paper later.

Walter C. Knapp has purchased a half interest in the Dansville (N. Y.) Breeze and will become an associate editor with his brother, B. H. Knapp, formerly sole publisher.

North Wilkesboro (N. C.) Wilkes Patriot has been sold to A. M. Critcher.

Greensboro (N. C.) Patriot has been sold by Thomas J. Murphy to William Gant, Jr.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

JOSEPH C. LAPPEUS, from church editor and librarian, Albany (N. Y.) Times-Union, to staff, Albany Sunday Telegram.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

EDGAR McDANIEL, publisher of the Coos Bay Harbor, a weekly newspaper of North Bend, Ore., is building a new home for the paper.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

ELK (Wash.) SENTINEL, A. R. Bergman, editor, began publication August 12. It is a weekly.

E. Rhian, until recently of the Little Rock (Ia.) Herald, will begin publication of an English paper in the office of the Niewsbald, Sioux Center, Ia. It will be known as the Sioux County Citizen. The Niewsbald, a Dutch paper published by H. Brandes, will continue to be published. Sioux Center has not had an English paper in 20 years.

W. Wester and Harry Wilson of Pasadena, Cal., have established the Manhattan Beach (Cal.) Progress, a weekly. The publishers have been connected with the Pasadena Morning Star.

ASSOCIATIONS

NEWSPAPERMEN'S GOLF CLUB of Boston held a tournament at the Charles River Country Club last week. A. S. Brown, Jr., of Brown's Letters won the first award with a card of 79. G. E. Hustis of the Post won first award in class B.

Officers of the OHIO NEWSPAPER ASSOCIATION met in Columbus a few days ago to consider applications for the position of field secretary. The association was organized to handle the field work of the Buckeye Press Association and will include dailies as well as weeklies. Raymond B. Howard of London, O., is president.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

DONALD A. McGREGOR, chief editorial writer of the Vancouver (B. C.) Daily Province, who won the gold medal offered by the Canadian Daily Newspapers' Association for the best editorial in Canada on the celebration of 60 years of confederation, has been a member of the Province editorial staff for the past 17 years.

DONALD A. McGREGOR

Before joining the Province he was with the Toronto Globe for four years and before that with the Montreal Herald for two years. He was born in Kincardine, Ont., 47 years ago, and is unmarried.

The editorial "What Is This Canada?" was a masterly outline of Canada's birth, growth, present positions and aspirations, written with a deep understanding of the spirit of Canada. It appeared in the Province, June 30.

METROPOLITAN FEATURES

COMICS
ELLA CINDERS STRIP
and
ELLA CINDERS PAGE
By Bill Conselman and Charlie Plumb

GOOD TIME GUY
New Daily Strip
By Frank Smiley (Bill Conselman)
Drawn by Mel Cummin

GLADYS
and the Young Moderns
1-Col. or 2-Col. Daily
By Alan Dunn

DICKEY'S DOGS
Once a week
By Robert L. Dickey

SPORTS
FEG MURRAY
Cartoons, Comment, Wise-Cracks

DAILY SERIAL
MILDRED BARBOUR
With Illustrations

FASHIONS
ELEANOR GUNN
Authoritative Daily Service

JUVENILE SECKATARY HAWKINS
With Club Page

WEEKLY STORIAL
LUCILLE VAN SLYKE
Illustrated

WEEKLY HUMOR
STEPHEN LEACOCK
A. A. MILNE
Illustrated

OTHER WEEKLY LEADERS
ZENITH FICTION
PINNACLE FICTION
SHORT SHORT STORIES EXPLOIT and ADVENTURE
—and—
PRE-EMINENT ARTICLES

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr. General Manager, Earl J. Hadley, Associate
150 Nassau St., New York City

BUILDING NEWSPAPER CIRCULATION

Capturing Good Will in the Net of a Good Time — Some Summer "Stunts" Developed by Toledo News-Bee—When Carriers Work With the Milk Men

ONE theory has it that the average person is most approachable in leisure moments, and, for the purposes of building newspaper circulation, this theory is held by Howard Stephenson, associate editor of the Toledo (O.) News-Bee, who, writing in the current issue of the Scripps-Howard News, reasons that the good will of readers can be captured with little expense and effort by providing them with opportunity to play.

"In the mass," Mr. Stephenson wrote, "the effort is considerable. Each item in our recreation program, however, reaches so many individuals that we are more than repaid. Note that the stress is laid on 'recreation' rather than sport. We carry on an extensive sports program, but believe that recreation offered to those who don't shine as athletes also has an important place.

"The picnic kit was the first development. The idea was borrowed from the Pittsburgh Press. We have three kits, each contained in an ordinary steamer trunk which will fit in the back of a Ford and can be handled easily. The kit contains: Two indoor balls and bats, tug-of-war rope, volley ball and net, soccer ball (also used as basketball), horseshoes, kiddy balls and bats, china eggs and wooden spoons, rope for three-legged races, skipping ropes, jacks and balls, marbles, bladder pump, thong needle, book of picnic games and first-aid kit.

"We offer the kits to organizations, each outfit serving 200 persons. On request, we frame up schedules of picnic games. We offer 20 prizes for each picnic, 10 steamer tickets for the all-day Put-in Bay ride and 10 for evening moonlight excursions. Prize tickets carry News-Bee advertising and the trunks are painted 'News-Bee Picnic Kit' in bright yellow. From June 15 to Oct. 15 we have constant call for the kits. They enable us to reach Sunday-schools and lodges with which other contacts are infrequent.

"We have never had a theft in three years of operation. The organizations agree to replace damaged or lost equipment and never fail to do so. We do a certain amount of replacement from time to time, to keep the equipment in good shape. The total cost of each kit is about $20. One kit will serve about 12,000 persons during the season.

"We are arranging a series of special picnics for former residents of small towns in our territory. On Findlay day, for instance, all the Toledo folks who used to live in Findlay get together, bringing their lunches, and we work out a program for them. Many persons from the old home town also drive up for the day. A good hookup is to run some of the promotion copy on the state page."

Another summer stunt is street dances, which are carried on with co-operation of neighborhood civic clubs. A block is roped off, the club supplies music, the city supplies police and ropes, and the dance is on." Mr. Stephenson continued.

"For sport fans, we run a contest to select the best All-American Association team. Prizes are $100 in cash.

"We hold a jacks tournament for girls through the playgrounds, conduct swimming lessons at all park pools with Red Cross co-operation and for boys are stressing the national model airplane contest sponsored by the Playground and Recreation Association of America. Our trophy for the playground final festival in August is the big topping for summer playground and activities.

"All this emphasis on recreation is accompanied by continual editorial campaigning for better recreational facilities. We started a campaign in July to provide skating rinks in vacant lots all over town next winter! Our ultimate object is a year-round recreation program put on by the city under proper supervision. The fact that all our playtime efforts have a serious social end gives to this entire summer program a dignity and prestige that attract ordinary home folks, rather than highbrows and lowbrows."

J. A. Grant, circulation manager of the Vancouver (B. C.) Star, in the current issue of his carrier paper, The Star Junior, urges the boys on his staff to watch for returning vacationists. Mr. and Mrs. City Dweller are coming home from the country. Mr. Grant reminds his boys with the following notice:

"Here's your big chance to cash in and make big profits for yourself. Keep your eyes open while delivering your route. Watch for the milk bottle on the porch. Get in touch with the milkman and work with him. He is also on the lookout for the returning vacationist. Ask him to pass the word to you as his customers return. You can do the same for him. It works both ways."

One hundred business boys of the Chicago Daily News and twelve adult leaders left Aug. 20 for Hastings Lake camp, near Lake Villa, Ill., on the fifth and last camping trip of the year. More than 400 business boys this year have earned the trip. A. M. Weinrich, supervisor of boys' work for the Daily News, was again in charge of the party.

FLIGHT TO PUBLICIZE COLOGNE PRESS MEET

International Press Exhibition Underwrites Trans-Ocean Hop of Lt. Koennecke Set to Start Soon for Philadelphia

The flight from Cologne to America of Lieutenant Otto Koennecke is now assured as far as the financial question is concerned, according to a New York Times dispatch. The City of Cologne and the International Press Exhibition, known as Pressa, in which the United States will participate when it is held next year, have agreed to furnish the necessary funds.

The flight will serve as propaganda for Pressa. It has been arranged that Lieutenant Koennecke shall carry a number of letters from the Reich Exhibition Commissioner and from the President of the committee to prominent personages in America.

The flier will also personally transmit the greetings of Pressa to John Clyde Oswald, president of the American Preparatory Committee, and also letters from the Mayor of Cologne to the heads of the city administrations of New York and Philadelphia. The plane will carry the flags of the city of Cologne and of Pressa.

Lieutenant Koennecke is prepared to take off as soon as weather conditions permit.

ENLARGED SCHOOL TO OPEN

Illinois Journalism School Can Now Award A.B. and M.A. Degrees

Opening of the new University of Illinois school of journalism at Urbana, Sept. 15, has been announced by Prof. Lawrence W. Murphy, director of the school.

The last general assembly of Illinois appropriated $30,000 for the new school. As a result of the opening of the new school, the university from now on will be prepared to award Bachelor of Arts and Master of Arts degrees in journalism. Prof. Murphy, who directed the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern this summer, in the absence in Europe of Director H. F. Harrington, announced that it was his intention to limit the school at the University of Illinois to an enrollment of 250, about the number of last year.

WITH THE GENERAL ADVERTISERS

Shredded Wheat Sues Kellogg—Gravure Campaign for Forhans—Transit Lines Advertising in Newspapers—American Safety Razor in Drive

A SUIT alleging unfair competition and unlawful appropriation of its trade-mark and goodwill was entered in the United States District court in New Haven Aug. 22 by the Shredded Wheat Company of Niagara Falls, N. Y., against the Kellogg Company of Battle Creek, Mich., and "certain grocers."

Forhans Tooth Paste has started an advertising campaign in newspaper gravure sections. To begin with, 18 papers are being used. Erwin & Wasey, New York agency, is directing the account.

Transit companies are using newspaper advertising and other publicity to an unequaled extent. This is more noticeable in the larger than in the smaller cities, but in almost every sizable community, railroads and street car lines are buying advertising space.

Recently the Boston Elevated Railway used full pages in newspapers of its city to describe services rendered. The United Railways and Electric Company of Baltimore have been consistent users of space. The Chicago Rapid Transit Company, the Chicago North Shore & Milwaukee Railroad and other large systems use the newspapers.

Sales campaigns in which all employes are enlisted have been undertaken by the Illinois Traction System, the Chicago, South Shore and South Bend Railroad, the North Shore & Milwaukee Railroad, and, in a lesser way, by many interurban lines.

Transit companies now regard themselves as merchandisers of transportation expecting to derive the same results from advertising as do merchants and bankers.

A general newspaper campaign is now being placed for the American Safety Razor Company by the Federal Advertising Agency, New York.

Alfred H. Bartsch, for 20 years sales manager of the American Bosch Magneto Company of Springfield, Mass., has resigned to become sales and advertising manager for the General Motors Company in Australia and New Zealand. Mr. Bartsch became the sales manager for the Bosch interests back in 1918 at the time the Government sold the property to private interests.

W. A. Scheaffer, president of the Scheaffer Pen Company, Ft. Madison, Iowa, last week opened the $100,000 club house which he donated for use of his employes. The building has been turned over to the workers, who will elect a board of governors to manage the club. Dormitories, gymnasium, lounges, billiard rooms, bowling alleys, lockers, roo garden, ballroom and dining room ar included in the structure.

FLASHES

Our position is that we shouldn't cance the French debt until the French give ou tourists free board and lodging.—Dalla News.

The Mississippi has caused almos every calamity except a special sessio of Congress.—Louisville Times.

It is perhaps appropriate that a ma with a foggy intellect should have a fog horn voice.—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

Wouldn't it be grand if some geniu could only cross the umbrella with th homing pigeon?—Louisville Times.

It may be if diplomats did their job a expertly as marines there would be fewe jobs for marines.—Detroit News.

We Americans are a great race, an seem able to maintain our independenc in Nicaragua under even the most tryin conditions.—El Paso Times.

If seeing is believing, men should hav implicit faith in women these days.—Pas saic News.

Nicaragua generals are ready to talk peace. The supply of privates must be giving out.—Honolulu Star-Bulletin.

In the old days the measure of hos pitality wasn't always liquid measure Vancouver (B. C.) Sun.

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely by
THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
Both Members of A. B. C.
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

One newspaper—the Pittsburgh PRESS—blankets the great Pittsburgh market, the fifth largest market in the United States. The PRESS has overwhelming leadership. At one cost, through a single newspaper, the advertiser quickly and thoroughly sells both dealer and consumer.
THE PITTSBURGH PRESS
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Represented by Allied Newspapers, Inc.
New York Chicago Detroit Atlanta San Francisco Los Angeles Seattle Portland

first! in OHIO
Dispatch Sets the Pace
During the first six months of 1927 The Columbus Dispatch carried more paid advertising than the second Columbus paper by 4,639,750 agate lines.
For years The Columbus Dispatch has enjoyed the distinction of being first in Ohio in paid advertising volume.
NET PAID CIRCULATION
City 60,216
Suburban 28,937
Country 24,525
Total Circulation 113,678
Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

HOE In St. Louis

Performance Is What Counts

New super-speed printing press units, as they now appear from the street level through the plate-glass windows of the new pressroom of The Times in the Buder Building, at Seventh and Market Streets

SO as to be better able to SERVE ST. LOUIS, The Times is now proceeding rapidly with plans for a newspaper home equipped with the latest devices known to the publishing business.

This large and costly installation includes a type of printing machinery hitherto unknown in St. Louis, new engraving and stereotyping equipment and one of the largest ground floor composing rooms without pillar supports to be found in the United States, furnished with newly devised systems providing for speed, efficiency and economic operation.

Feeling that there is popular interest in the installation of the latest devices employed in the publication of a daily newspaper, The Times invites the public to view the development now in progress in the Buder Building, at the northwest corner of Seventh and Market Streets, where R. Hoe & Company, the famous printing press engineers, have placed in the New Home of The Times the latest super-speed, unit type newspaper machines, the first of the kind in St. Louis.

The work of perfecting the new equipment will proceed rapidly and with the opening of the fall season the public will then have an opportunity to view the completed plant in all its interesting details.

A Telegram from Mr. Homer Bassford, Manager of The Times Tells The Story:

"On January twenty-ninth of this year in order to provide increased facilities we placed an order with you for eight Superspeed latest-type press units with the Hoe Patented Ink Pumps. On July eleventh these presses were operating most satisfactorily on editions at high speed. We are wondering whether this is not a record for press manufacture and installation of heavy-duty machines. It will interest you to know that these machines are placed on the street level behind plate glass windows and are daily attracting interested crowds. We thank you for your continued interest in this installation which has made good in everything you promised."

R. HOE & CO., INC. NEW YORK & LONDON

NEW YORK BOSTON CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO NEW ORLEANS DUNELLEN LONDON

W. D. NESBIT, POET AND HUMORIST, DIES SUDDENLY IN CHICAGO

Gained Prominence as Newspaper Writer and Was One of Pioneers in Special Agency Writing—Was Famous as After Dinner Speaker

WILBUR D. NESBIT, 55, poet and humorist and one of the pioneer "special writers" in the field of advertising, died suddenly Saturday, Aug. 20, in Chicago, where for the past 18 years he had been connected with the local office of the William H. Rankin Company, advertising agency, and for more than a decade as vice-president.

WILBUR D. NESBIT

Mr. Nesbit had spent Saturday morning in the office apparently in the best of health. He had luncheon at the Chicago Athletic Club, and after leaving for home was seized with a heart attack and died in the Iroquois Hotel, where he had been carried.

In addition to his prominence as a writer of both verse and advertising copy, Mr. Nesbit was widely known as an after dinner speaker, and presided at many notable dinners.

Mr. Nesbit was born in Xenia, O., on Sept. 16, 1871. He started his writing career in a small Indiana town and later went to New York. From 1899 to 1912 he worked successively as a feature writer on the Baltimore American, Chicago Tribune and Chicago Evening Post.

He went to Chicago from Indiana about the same time that George Ade, John McCutcheon and others of the period were beginning their newspaper careers. He was a close friend of all the coterie of Chicago writers and artists.

While he was with the Chicago Tribune, he became interested in advertising and was one of the first of the writers of definite position to take up the writing of advertising as a profession.

During the world war Mr. Nesbit's name became known throughout the country as the author of the poem "Your Flag and My Flag," which ran in part as follows:

"Your flag and my flag,
And how it flies today,
In your land and my land
And half a world away;
Rose-red and blood-red
The stripes forever gleam;
Snow-white and soul-white
The good forefathers' dream."

Authorship of this poem was disputed in 1918 when Mrs. Olive B. Montgomery, widow of Dr. Liston Homer Montgomery, who died in 1916, filed suit against Nesbit charging him with plagiarism. Nesbit, however, proved beyond all doubt that he had originally written it while he was on the Baltimore American in 1902 and that it had been published in his book, "The Trail of Boyland," which was brought out in 1904.

During the war, Mr. Nesbit wrote such advertising copy for the drives of the Liberty Loans and the Red Cross. He was advertising and publicity director of the Second and Third Liberty Loan Drives in Chicago.

At one time, he was associate editor of Advertising & Selling and at this time he wrote a book on advertising copy, which is in use today. Among his writings the best known are: "The Gentleman Rag Man," "Trail to Boyland," "Land of Make-Believe," "A Friend or Two," and "My Shadow."

The most notable work of Mr. Nesbit in the field of advertising was done for the products of Thos. E. Wilson Company, meat packers, B. F. Goodrich Company, Eskimo Pie Company, Add-A-Pearl Necklace, and the Baltimore & Ohio. At one time he was the editor of the magazine issued by the Baltimore & Ohio.

Mr. Nesbit was originally associated in advertising with John Lee Mahin, whose company was succeeded by the Wm. H. Rankin Company.

Mr. Nesbit was a prominent figure in all advertising functions in Chicago. He was toastmaster at the dinner given to Wm. Boyd now advertising director of the Curtis Publishing Company and presided over the dinner given by the Chicago advertising men to Charles A. Stoddard, at which Frank E. Munsey and Albert D. Lasker were the principal speakers. He was toastmaster at the luncheon given by the Chicago Association of Commerce in connection with the election of Mr. O. C. Harn as president of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Not long ago Mr. Nesbit put his knowledge of banquet customs into book form and the volume, "After Dinner Speeches and How to Make Them," complete with anecdotes for all occasions, is just now coming from the publisher.

During the past five years Mr. Nesbit was president of the Forty Club, an organization of forty leading men in business, medicine, literature, music and the stage. It includes such members as John P. McCutcheon, Col. Robert E. McCormick, Dr. John S. Golden, John C. Shaffer, publisher of the Chicago Evening Post, Otis Skinner, the actor, and Thomas E. Wilson, president of the Wilson Company. He was also president of the Indiana Society of Chicago, and a member of the Cliff Dwellers, Arts and White Paper clubs of Chicago, the University club of Evanston and the Columbia club of Indianapolis.

Mr. Nesbit is survived by his wife of Evanston, Ill., and three sons, Richard, of Montana; Robert, of Chicago, and Wilbur D., of Evanston.

Active pall bearers at the funeral, which was held Tuesday, were: Harold Dyrenforth; Evan Evans; William Johnson; William H. Rankin; Joseph Rushton; Lloyd Worth.

Many tributes to Mr. Nesbit from men prominent in advertising and publishing were received by his family and business associates.

Mr. Rankin's tribute follows:

"For 18 years I have worked side by side with Wilbur Nesbit. Each year I have learned more and more of the friendly gentle nature that was his. Few men had as many friends. Few were so widely admired, respected and loved. Here in Chicago thousands are mourning his loss. Telegrams from all over the country are paying tribute to him as an advertising man, public speaker, writer, and friend. James Whitcomb Riley, one of Wilbur Nesbit's strongest admirers, once said, 'Most writers write head high but Nesbit writes straight to the heart—heart high.'

"It is worth having worked these 18 years to have had such a friend and associate as Wilbur Nesbit has been to all of us."

James O'Shaughnessy sent the following telegram on behalf of the American Association of Advertising Agencies:

"The entire profession of advertising agencies is cast into deep sorrow over the great loss it has sustained in the passing of Wilbur D. Nesbit whose great achievements have earned for him a foremost place in the high rank of the advertising agency profession. Please accept this brief message as an expression of the heartfelt bereavement of the members of the American Association of Advertising Agencies on the untimely passing of a brother who had contributed so much, so devotedly and unselfishly to the improvement of the modern promotion of merchandising and to the upbuilding of the general welfare."

PROF. LOUIS FUERTES

Prof. Louis Agassiz Fuertes, well-known naturalist and authority on birds, who served as ornithologist of the recent expedition into Abyssinia which was sponsored by the Chicago Daily News and the Field Museum, was instanly killed Aug. 22 at Porter's Crossing near Unadilla, N. Y., when the automobile in which he was riding was struck by a train. Prof. Fuertes, who was on the faculty of Cornell University, was the leading painter of birds in this country. During the expedition to Abyssinia, he alone collected 1,000 rare birds and made many color sketches of birds in their native haunts.

PLANNING NOVELTY EXHIBIT

The Osaka Municipal Office, department of industry and commerce, Japan, has informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER that it plans to hold an Exhibition of Advertising Novelties in the near future and wishes American firms to send articles for exhibit. All of the articles sent should carry advertising. They will be returned upon request, the announcement said.

DAILY PICKS CONTEST WINNER

Margaret M. Burke, 19-year-old Somerville, Mass., girl, was chosen recently as the winner of the Boston (Mass.) Advertiser's "Boston's Best Girl Contest." The prize was two weeks' vacation in Hollywood as the guest of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, also a complete outfit from Boston shops.

DIRECT MAIL MEET OCT. 19

"Combating the rising cost of selling" will be the theme of the tenth annual convention of the International Direct Mail Advertising Association, which will be held Oct. 19-21 at the Hotel Stevens.

Eighteen Vera Cruz police officials have been held for trial on a murder charge. They're only a year behind Canton. Worcester (Mass.) Post.

now

195,000 Daily
425,000 Sunday

And The largest home-delivered circulation of any paper in its territory

Los Angeles Examiner

NEW HIGH RECORD

For the first seven months of 1927, the

BOSTON EVENING TRANSCRIPT

published a total of 544,273 lines of Financial Advertising, the largest amount in its history for a corresponding period, and 28,537 more than for the first seven months of 1926.

This reflects the increasing prestige of the Transcript in financial advertising

Boston Evening Transcript

Highest ratio of BUYERS to readers
National Advertising Representatives

CHARLES H. EDDY CO.
Boston New York Chicago

CLINE SYSTEM

CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO. CHICAGO

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control

is used by

Elkhart Truth
Elkhart, Ind.

Ask them about it

CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO.
Chicago: 111 West Washington Street
New York: 47 West 34th Street
San Francisco: First National Bank Building

The demand for The New York Times Prospectus on Community Advertising has been so great that the first edition is exhausted. Another printing has been ordered. Copies will be sent to advertising agencies, chambers of commerce, or public officials upon request to the

Advertising Department

The New York Times

Over 260,000 Homes in Michigan served by Booth Newspapers

The Grand Rapids Press
The Flint Daily Journal
The Saginaw News Courier
The Kalamazoo Gazette
The Jackson Citizen Patriot
The Bay City Times Tribune
The Muskegon Chronicle
The Ann Arbor Times News

National Advertising Representatives

I. A. KLEIN
50 East 42nd Street
New York City

J. E. LUTZ
6 N. Michigan Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

The World

These two newspapers offer the most powerful all-day service in New York available as a unit under a single contact. The 600,000 DAILY WORLD — EVENING WORLD readers constitute a highly concentrated force to be reckoned with in any campaign designed to effect distribution in Greater New York.

The Evening World

Pulitzer Building, New York
Tribune Tower, Chicago

INTERTYPE IDEAL NEWS FACE

Spacing

Why Do So Many Newspapers Double-Lead Their Editorials?

The answer is . . . To make them more readable, more legible.

Extra-leading is usually the first thing that the news writer thinks of when he or she is writing a front page story. Extra-leading has always meant easier reading.

Solid matter is hard to read.

If setting lines apart increases legibility, the same is true with individual letters. You must give the letters in a word a chance to breathe. That's one reason why Intertype IDEAL News Face is the easiest news face for the eyes.

Being of the Modern Roman group of type faces, Intertype IDEAL News Face is in harmony with the make-up of a newspaper column and is a STEADY letter. There is no confusion from vibration.

Also, it is a balanced letter. The light strokes and the heavy strokes are in correct proportion. It is not the same "color" all over. In other words: it is not a monotone which is just as tiring on the eyes as too much vibration.

You don't have to change to Intertype IDEAL News Face unless your readers like it better. And it won't cost you a cent to find out whether your readers will like it better. We have the plan if you have the time to get in touch with the nearest Intertype office.

Intertype matrices will run in OTHER slug-casting machines

Standardized

INTERTYPE

TRADE MARK

INTERTYPE CORPORATION

1440 Broadway, NEW YORK

Chicago 130 North Franklin Street; Memphis McCall Building; San Francisco 560 Howard Street; Los Angeles 1240 South Main Street; Boston 80 Federal Street; London; Berlin. . . Distributors in principal cities throughout the world

Intertype Century Expanded with Century Bold

EDITOR & PUBLISHER ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF SYNDICATE FEATURES

(Continued from page 8)

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Fashions Eleanor Gunn (d) (serial) (½) (ill)	Eleanor Gunn	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Fashions-Eleanor Gunn (s) (serial) (⅜-ill) (¾)	Eleanor Gunn	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Fashions, Fads & Fancies (3w) (½)		International Feature Service
Fashion Features (d) (1)	Julia Bottomley	Western Newspaper Union
Fashion Layouts (3w)		International Feature Service
Fashions, Men's (3w)	A. T. Gallico	Chicago Tribune Newspaper Synd.
Fashion Notes (w) (¼)	"Louisa"	Editor's Copy
Fashion Page (w) (fp)	Mary Marshall	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Fashions (Paris) (w) (hp)	Bettina Bedwell	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd.
Fashion Service (dw)		U. P. C. News Services, Inc.
Fashion Service (prints)		Editors Syndicate
Fashion Sketches (d)		Keystone Feature Service
Fashion Suggestions (d) (1)	Julia Blanchard	NEA Service, Inc.
Fashion, Today's (2w) (¼)	Vera Winston	Newspaper Feature Service
Fashions Vogue (d) (½)		United Feature Syndicate
Fashionable Folk (d) (2)	Julia Boyd	McNaught Syndicate
Fatty Lewis (w)	Arthur F. Killick	McNaught Syndicate
Favorite Dish, My (d) (¼)	Famous Women	Ledger Syndicate
Feature Letter (w)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Feature Page (w) (fp)		International Syndicate
Fiction (w) (f.p.)		World Color Printing Co.
Fiction English (d) (serial)	English Novelists	United Feature Syndicate
Fiction (Pinnacle (w) (fp) (ill)	Eminent Writers	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Fiction Service (dw)		U. P. C. News Service, Inc.
Fiction (Zenith) (w) (fp) (ill)	Eminent Writers	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
A Fighter's Letters to His Manager (w) (1½) (ill)	Walter Davenport	Bell Syndicate
Fighting Under Five Flags (w) (4) (ill.)	Tracy Richardson, Douglas de Younge Silver	Bell Syndicate
Filler (Baby Mine) (d) (3¼)	Paul Pim	George Matthew Adams Service
Filler Cheerful Cherub (d) (2¾)	Rebecca McCann	George Matthew Adams Service
Filler Editorial (w) (1)		Ullman Feature Service
Film Folk (d) (½)		Famous Features Syndicate
Film News and Features (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Financial Articles (w) (1 and ½)	B. C. Forbes	Premier Syndicate
Financial (Stock a Day) (d) (⅛) (Ill.)		Bell Syndicate
Financial and Business News Service (d)	Staff	Chicago Journal of Commerce
Financial Letter (w) (1)		Chicago Journal of Commerce
Financial Page Charts (3 t.a.w.) (2)	Various	National Newspaper Service
Financial Service (d)	Staff correspondents	Post Syndicate
Find the Missing Person (Puzzle) (d) (2)		Associated Newspapers
First Reader, The (d) (1)	Harry Hansen	New York World Syndicate
First Run Fiction (serials) (2) (ill.)		Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd.
First Run Fiction (w) (serials) (fp) (ill.)		Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd.
First Run Fiction (w) (short stories) (fp) (ill.)		Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd.
Fix Bayonets (w) (2) (ill.)	Capt. John W. Thomason
Folly's Daughter (d) (1)	Ann Lisle	International Feature Service
Folly's Daughter (d) (1)	Ann Lisle	King Features Syndicate
Food and Health (d)	Winifred S. Gibbs	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Food and Marketing Service (w) (½)	Winifred Worth	Allen Feature Service
Foreign Articles (w)	Frank H. Simmonds	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Foreign News Service (w)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Foreign Service (d)	Staff correspondents	Post Syndicate
Fun in Black and White (w) (fp)		National News Service
Fundamentals of Retailing (w) (serial) (¼)	Charles W. Meyers	King Editors' Features

G

Gardening for the Amateur (w) (1½)	T. H. Rand-McNally	Star Newspaper Service
Gardens (Inside and Outdoor) (d) (½)	Jane Leslie Kift	Ledger Syndicate
General editorials (d) (1)	Staff	NEA Service, Inc.
General News Service (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Getting Ahead in Business (w) (½)	Woodclif Woods	King Features Syndicate
Gilbert's Dispatches (d)	Clinton W. Gilbert	Post Syndicate
God's Program of Events (⅓)	Rev. James McKendrick	Keystone Feature Service
Golf, How to Play (3w) (½)	Armour	King Features Syndicate
Golf Instructions, Sol Metzger (d) (1)	Sol Metzger	Publishers Syndicate
Golf—Johnny Farrell Tells How to Play (d) (½)	Farrell	King Features Syndicate
Golf Stories—Sol Metzger (w) (2)	Sol Metzger	Publishers Syndicate
Good Housekeeping & Fashion (w) (fp)		King Features Syndicate
Good Manners (d) (1)	Mrs. Beekman	International Feature Service
Good Night Stories (d) (½)	Blanche Silver	Newspaper Feature Service
Gossip From Washington (w)	Dorothy Shumate	Women's National News Bureau
Gotham Day by Day (d) (½)	Ross Duff Whytock	Ledger Syndicate

H

Handy Big Headed Fillers (d) (graduated)	Staff	Handy Filler Service
Handy Fillers (d) (graduated)	Staff	Handy Filler Service
Handy Headed Fillers (d) (graduated)	Staff	Handy Filler Service
Happiness Chats (d)	Edith Johnson	Republic Syndicate
Hart's Puzzles (10w) (1)	J. F. Hart	Bell Syndicate
Haskin Letter (d)	Frederic J. Haskin	Haskin Information Bureau
Health & Success, Secrets of (d) (¾)	C. A. L. Reed, M.D.	International Feature Service
Health Articles (d) (⅔)	Dr. Lulu Hunt Peters	Central Press Assn. Inc.
Health Articles (w) (1)	Dr. William Brady	National Newspaper Service
Health Articles (d) (⅓)	Sir Arbuthnot Lane	D. P. Syndicate
Health and Diet Advice (d) (½)	Dr. Frank McCoy	McCoy Health Service
Health Beauty Articles (d) (½)	Lady Beatrice Gray	Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Health Is Happiness (w) (½)	Staff	Columbia Newspaper Service
The Health of The Workers (w) (serial) (½)	Dr. C. H. Barton	King Editors' Features
Health, Your (d) (1)	Royal S. Copeland	Newspaper Feature Service
Health Service (d) (½)	Dr. Morris Fishbein	NEA Service, Inc.
Heart Throbs	Joe Mitchell Chapelle	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
Helen and Warren (w) (2)	Mabel Herbert Urner	Bell Syndicate
Heroes of The Service (w) (4) (ill)	Theodore Roosevelt, Jr.	Bell Syndicate
Hints To Housewife (w) (½)	Staff	Columbia Newspaper Service
Hints for the Motorist (3w) (2)	A. L. Clough	International Syndicate
Hollywood Letter (w) (1)	Rosealind Shaefer	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd.
Hollywood Movie News (d) (½)	Dorothy Herzog	Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Home & Farm Building (w) (1½)	W. A. Radford	Western Newspaper Union
Home Economics (w)	Florence Brobeck	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Home Entertainment (w) (1)	Susan Gardner	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Home Harmonious (w) (qp)	Anita de Campi	Chicago Tribune Newspaper Synd.
Home Kitchen, The (3w) (½)	Jeannette Norton	Newspaper Feature Service
Home-Making Helps (3w) (½)	Wanda Barton	Newspaper Feature Service
Home Needlework (d)	Jennie Hirsch	Ledger Syndicate
Home Notes (a)	Jenny Wren	Ledger Syndicate
Home Owner and Builder (w) (2)		Audio Service
Home Plans (w) (¼)	Louise Bargelt	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd.
Home Sewing (3w) (⅓) (ill.)	Ruth Wyeth Spears	George Matthew Adams Service
Hotel News New York (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Hotel Stenographer (d)	Roe Fulkerson	McNaught Syndicate
Household, The (d) (1) (ill.)	Mrs. L. LeBaron Walker	Bell Syndicate
Household Hints (d)		Keystone Feature Service
Household Hints (d) (1)	Hortense Saunders	NEA Service, Inc.
Household Hints (d) (⅔)	Mrs. Mary Morton	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Household Page (w) (fp)	Mary Matsball	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Housekeeping, Efficient (d) (½)	Laura A. Kirkman	George Matthew Adams Service
Housewife's Economy Calendar (d)		McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Housewife's Idea Box (d)	Rae Ribler	Ledger Syndicate
Housewifely Wisdom-Pattern Page (w) (f.p.)		World Color Printing Co.
Housewifely Wisdom (w) (fp.)		National News Service
House & Garden (d) (½)		United Features Syndicate
House Plans for Home Builders (w) (4) (ill)	Cora Wilson	King Features Syndicate
House Plans (w) (2)	Special	NEA Service, Inc.
House Plans (w) (3)	W. W. Purdy	International Syndicate
Horoscope (d)		McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Horoscope (Your Lucky Hour (d) (2)	Veiled Priestess	Premier Syndicate
Horoscope (d) (4)	Genevieve Kemble	Newspaper Feature Service
How I Keep My Figure (d) (¼)	Notable Women	Ledger Syndicate
How Bright is Your Baby? (d) (⅓) (ill.)	Dr. June E. Downey	Science Service, Inc.
How Do You Know You Know (d) (¼)	Wm. Nelson Taft	Post Syndicate
How's Business (w) (1½)	Staff	Cambridge Associates, Inc.
How It Started (d) (¼)	Jean Newton	Bell Syndicate
How to Achieve Beauty (d) (½)	Mme. Rubinstein	Central Press Assn., Inc.
How to Earn Money at Home (d) (⅓)	Sara Spence	Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
How-To-Make-Home-craft (d) (2)	LaSalle	Editors Syndicate
How to Keep Well (dw)	Dr. W. A. Evans	Chicago Tribune Newspaper Synd.
How to Play Golf (d) (½)	Armour	King Features Syndicate
Howe About Everything (w) (1)	Ed Howe	Bell Syndicate
Human Nature Clinics (d) (⅓)	Thomas A. Clarke	Western Newspaper Union
Humor (w) (2) (ill)	Stephen Leacock	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Humorous Article (s) (1)	Frank Sullivan	New York World Syndicate
Humorous Article (s) (1)	Milt Gross	New York World Syndicate
Humorous Article (w)	Nina Wilcox Putnam	Republic Syndicate
Humorous Articles (d)	Will Rogers	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

I

I and George (w)	Nina Wilcox Putnam	Republic Syndicate
I Have Said in My Heart (d) (⅔)	Idah McGlone Gibson	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Ideal Girl, My (d) (1)	Celebrated Personalities	Ledger Syndicate
If Youth But Knew	Business and Professional Leaders	Famous Features Syndicate
Illustrated Articles (3w) (1½)		Gilliams Service
Illustrated Articles (w)	Alma Whitaker	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Indoor and Outdoor Gardens (d) (½)	Jane Leslie Kift	Ledger Syndicate
Industrial News and Features (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Information Bureau (dw) (½)	Staff	National Feature Service
Inspirational Articles (d)	Glenn Frank	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Inspirational Talks (4w) (½)	Winifred Black	Newspaper Feature Service
Intelligence Test (d) (½)	Special	NEA Service, Inc.
Intelligence Tests (d) (⅓)	Dr. John Scott Calhoun	National Newspaper Service
Interesting Court Decisions (d) (⅛)	Leo Wolfsohn	National Newspaper Service
Interior Decoration (d)	Jenny Wren	Ledger Syndicate
Interview-Editorial (d) (½)	Willis J. Ballinger	U. P. C. News Services, Inc.
Interview Service (w) (2-2½)	Willis J. Ballinger	U. P. C. News Services, Inc.
Interviews	Zoe Beckley	Famous Features Syndicate
Interviews (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Interviews	Staff	New York Allied News Bureau
Interviews with Celebrities on Children (w)	Clare Ogden Davis	McNaught Syndicate
Inventions-automobile (w) (⅛)	E. Lecraw	National Feature Service
Isn't It Odd? (w) (2)	William Atherton DuPuy	Science Service, Inc.

J

Jewelry (Your) and Your Personality (d) (½)	Dorothy Stote	Ledger Syndicate
Johnny Farrell Tells How to Play Golf (d) (½)	Farrell	King Features Syndicate
Johnson Serials (d) (½)	Gladys E. Johnson	George Matthew Adams Service
John Smith and His Car (w) (¾)	Frederick C. Russell	Ullman Feature Service
John Smith and His Radio (w) (¾)	Frederick C. Russell	Ullman Feature Service
Jots From Geography (d) (¼)	Ernest Henderson	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Joy	Barbara Webb	Famous Features Syndicate
Jubilee's Partner (d) (½) (ill)	Judd Mortimer Lewis	George Matthew Adams Service
Justajingle (d)	Hal Cochran	NEA Service, Inc.
Just a Moment with Irvin Cobb (d)	Irvin Cobb	Bell Syndicate
Just Folks (d)	Edgar A. Guest	George Matthew Adams Service
Justifiers (w) (fp)	Staff	NEA Service, Inc.

K

Kathleen Norris' Article (w) (2) (ill)	Kathleen Norris	Bell Syndicate
Keep This in Mind (d)	Oliver Keep	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Kellygrams (d) (½)	Fred C. Kelly	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Kit Carson (w) (3) (ill)	Arthur Chapman	Bell Syndicate
Kitchen Cabinet (d) (½)	Nellie Maxwell	Western Newspaper Union

L

Laddergrams (Puzzle) (d) (1)	Conant & Surrick	Ledger Syndicate
Laila (d) (serial)	John Newport	Eugene MacLean Features
Lardner Letter, Ring (w) (1) (ill)	Ring Lardner	Bell Syndicate
Laughing Around the World With Irvin S. Cobb (d)	Irvin S. Cobb	McNaught Syndicate
Laughs From Life (d) (1) (ill)		Bell Syndicate
Law Feature (d)	"Counsellor"	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Lawn Tennis Lessons (d) (⅛)	R. Innes-Taylor	Star Newspaper Service
Leacock, Stephen		Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Leased Wire Service (d)	Staff correspondents	Post Syndicate
Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson (d) (½)	Ray Stannard Baker	D. P. Syndicate
Lights of New York (dw) (¾)	Grant Dixon	Bell Syndicate
Line O'Type or Two (d) (1) R. H. L.		Chicago Tribune Newspaper Synd.

(Continued on page 42)

Statement of Policy

of

The Central Press Association

Incorporated

Our 560 client newspapers and the press generally are entitled to know of the plans and policies we have decided upon, following the consolidation of Johnson Features, Editors' Feature Service and The Central Press Co.

The daily product of Editors' Feature Service was very large and it was sold at a heavy loss, which could not be reduced if the quality and scope of the service were to be maintained.

The Central Press Association issued a somewhat smaller service, which it had maintained through seventeen years on a self-supporting basis.

Consolidation of the organizations still leaves us with a financial problem. We have decided to make a service larger and better in every way than either of the old services, and since we have chosen to improve the service, rather than remove the deficit by drastic economies, our solution is to be reached through the sales department.

We believe that the newspapers are willing and glad to support a fine service, and when we say support, we mean financial as well as moral support. No one really expects us as a matter of duty to operate permanently at a loss, which is what would happen if we did not sell our service at prices based on cost.

We are preparing a standard rate card which will provide a scale of prices based upon the present volume of the service, and upon circulations. Our prices will always be fair, and no higher than other organizations charge for similar or comparable service.

No reasonable editor could expect us to retain ALL the features of the old organizations. We have kept the BEST, and we have already begun adding new ones. The result will be a much stronger line of features than either could offer before.

What is of special and great importance is the fact that we plan to go further in increasing the speed and energy used in covering news events with special stories and pictures. The Central Press Association beat the world last March with the first story of Lindbergh's proposed flight to Paris. Three months ago it produced the first story of the plan of Mildred Doran to fly to Hawaii. We expect to continue keeping up the high standard of news excellence in the consolidated service.

Our attention will be given chiefly to quality and speed. It goes without saying that we shall avoid waste and extravagance, but this does not mean carrying economy to the point where the service would be affected even in a trifling degree.

We invite inquiries from progressive editors and publishers.

THE CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

INCORPORATED

1435 East Twelfth Street,
Cleveland

Times Building
New York

EDITOR & PUBLISHER ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF SYNDICATE FEATURES

(Continued from page 40)

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Listening in one Eve (d) R. H. L.		Associated Newspapers
"Listen, World" (d) (1)	Elsie Robinson	King Features Syndicate
Literary Articles (w) (2)	H. L. Mencken	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd.
Little Benny (d) (⅓)	Lee Pape	George Matthew Adams Service
Little Jack Rabbit (d) (⅓) (ill)	David Cory	George Matthew Adams Service
Little Red Ridinghood (w) (ill) Puzzle (1)		National News Service
Living and Loving (d) (⅓)	Mrs. Virginia Lee	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Lloyd-George, David, Fortnightly (2)	Lloyd George	United Feature Syndicate
Local Stories (w) (¾)	C. C. Berry	Editor's Copy
Louisa's Letter to Girls (w) (½)	"Louisa"	Editor's Copy
Love For Million (d) (serial)	Sally Jones	Eugene MacLean Features
Love Gossip (d) (⅓)	Laurel Gray	National Newspaper Service
Lovelorn Column (d) (½)	Priscilla Wayne	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Love Problems (d) (1) (serial)	Hazel Deyo Batchelor	Ledger Syndicate
Love's Embers (d) (½)	Adele Garrison	Newspaper Feature Service
Lucky Hour, Your (d) (2)	Veiled Priestess	Premier Syndicate

M

McDuffer Golf Comic (d) (1)	Barrie Payne	Publishers Syndicate
Magazine Features (d) (1)	Staff	New York World Syndicate
Magazine Page (fp) (w)		National News Service
Magazine Page (w) (2p) (ill)		World Color Printing Co.
Magazine Pages (w) (12p)	Various	Ledger Syndicate
Magazine Section (w) (2)		Ullman Feature Service
Maiden Meditations (w) (hp)	Sara Moore	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd.
Make It Yourself (d)	Jennie Hirsch	Ledger Syndicate
Making The Most Of Your Looks (d) (½)	Dorothy Stote	Ledger Syndicate
Man to Man (d) (⅛-¼)	"Top Hat"	Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Man Nobody Knows, The (dw)	Bruce Barton	Bell Syndicate
Manhattan Days & Nights (d) (600)	Herbert Corey	Associated Newspapers
Market Quotation Service (dw)		Chicago Journal of Commerce
This Marriage Business (w) (1½)	Connie and Bert	Bell Syndicate
Marriage Game (d) (⅓)	Mr. & Mrs. Arnold Hatton	National Newspaper Service
Marriage Problem, The (d) (1)	Celebrated Authors	Ledger Syndicate
Married Life Serials (d) (1)	Idah McGlone Gibson	National Newspaper Service
Matrimonially Speaking (d) (¼)	Mr. & Mrs. Hugh McKay	Ledger Syndicate
Medbury's Daily Humor (d) (1)	John Medbury	King Features Syndicate
Meditations of a Married Woman (4w) (½)	Helen Rowland	King Features Syndicate
Memory Teasers (d) (2)	R. H. Tingley	International Syndicate
Men & Markets (d) (1) (ill)		Publishers Financial Bureau
Men's Fashions (3w)	A. T. Gallico	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd.
Menu (d)		McClure Newspapers Syndicate
Menu (dw) (200)		Associated Newspapers
Menu (d)		Keystone Feature Syndicate
Midget Stories (d) (½)	Philip Horne	United Feature Syndicate
Minute Movies (d) (7-8) (ill)		National News Service
Milady Beautiful (d) (¼)	Lois Leeds	Ledger Syndicate
Mind Meter, The (w) (½)	Dr. J. Lowell Henderson	Bell Syndicate
Mirror of Hollywood (d) (⅛) (ill)	Alice Warder	National Newspaper Service
Mirror of New York (d)	Joseph Van Raalte	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Mirror of the Week's Trade (w) (1½)	Staff	Chicago Journal of Commerce
Miscellaneous Cartoons and Singles (w) (fp)		World Color Printing Co.
Miscellaneous News and Features (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Money At Work (d) (¼)	Miscellaneous	Associated Editors, Inc.
Montague Sunday (w) (1) (ill)	James J. Montague	Bell Syndicate
More Miles Per Car	Ray McNamara	Christy Walsh Syndicate
More Truth Than Poetry (d) (1½) (ill)	James J. Montague	Bell Syndicate
Mothers and Their Children (d)	Helen J. Millar	Associated Editors, Inc.
Motor Page (Canadian) (w) (fp)		Star Newspaper Service
Motorist, Hints for the (3w) (2)	A. L. Clough	International Syndicate
Movie (w) (fp)		World Color Printing Co.
Movie Page (w) (fp)	Link	National News Service
Movie Reviews (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Movie Service (d) (½)	Dan Thomas	NEA Service, Inc.
Moving Picture Album (w) (1)	Robert Sherwood	Bell Syndicate
Murders, Unsolved (d) (1)	Vance Wynn	Ledger Syndicate
Mutter & Mumble (w) (1)	John Medbury	King Features Syndicate
My Neighbor Says (d) (150)		Associated Newspapers

N

Nancy Page (d) (1)	Florence La Ganke	Publishers Syndicate
National Club News (d) (500)	Jane Randolph	Capital News Service
National Santa Claus Campaigns		Eastern Newspaper Service
National Sunshine Club (w)		Bell Syndicate
Nature Stories (w)	Thornton Burgess	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Nature's Notebook (d) (¼) (ill)	Dr. Frank Thone	Science Service
Natural History Stories (Children) (dw) (⅛)		Eastern Newspaper Service
Navy News (d) (½)	Vivian Lee Tillman	Army-Navy News Service
Needlework, Home (d)	Jennie Hirsch	Ledger Syndicate
New Automobile Inventions (w)	E. Lecraw	National Feature Service
New in New York (d&s) (½)	Gilbert Swan	NEA Service, Inc.
New York Day By Day (d)	O. O. McIntyre	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
New York Letter (d) (½)	Burton Rascoe	Central Press Assn., Inc.
New York Letter (d) (600)	Herbert Corey	Associated Newspapers
New York Letter (d) (1)	Walter Winchell	Graphic Syndicate
New York News Service (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
N. Y. Society Letter (w) (2)	Grace Robinson	Chicago Tribune Newspaper Synd.
New York Society Letter (w)	Howard White	NEA Service, Inc.
New York Stage (w) (2)	Gene Cohn	NEA Service, Inc.
N. Y. Theatre Letter (w) (2)	Burns Mantle	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd.
New York Theatre News and Reviews (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
News of the Broadcasters (d) (⅔)		Audio Service
News Features (d)		North American Newspaper Alliance
News Features (d)	Staff	Associated Press Feature Service
News	Staff	New York Allied News Bureau
News Features (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
News Features (dw)		World Wide News Service
News Features (d)	Staff and special	NEA Service, Inc.
News Features	Various	Current News Features
News Items (w) (2)		Editor's Copy
News Mat Service (Canadian) (w)		Star Newspaper Service
News Service, Evening Post (d)	Staff correspondents	Post Syndicate
News Wire Service (Canadian) (d)		Star Newspaper Service
News of Women in Congress (d)	Maxine Davis	Capital News Service
News of Women in Politics (d)	Jessie Tappan	Capital News Service
Noozie (d) (½&1)		International Syndicate
Novels, Popular	Various	King Features Syndicate
Norris Serials (d) (¼)	Margaret Norris	George Matthew Adams Service

(Continued on page 44)

See page 35 for directory of features of Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Merely Margie, a daily comic strip, by John Held, Jr.
Sentimental Sally, a weekly colored page, by John Held, Jr.
Felix, a new daily comic strip, by Pat Sullivan
Ritzy Rosey, daily fashion drawings, by Faith Burrowes
The Life of Edison, in 78 illustrated daily strips
Who's Brainy Now?, a daily question and answer strip
Golf articles by Tommy Armour, National Open Champion
Congressional Club Cookbook Recipes, 314 daily recipes
Fight articles by Gene Tunney, World's Heavyweight Champion
Fight articles by Jack Dempsey, Former World's Champion

the year's best new circulation-winning comics and features . . .

New Stars in the World's Greatest Galaxy of Circulation Makers

JOHN HELD, JR., one of the most popular artists of modern times has joined KING FEATURES SYNDICATE. His daily strip, "MERELY MARGY—AN AWFULLY SWEET GIRL", and his Sunday page in colors, "SENTIMENTAL SALLY," are the comic hits of the year.

A new daily comic which is attracting tremendous attention is "FELIX THE CAT" now drawn in daily strip form by PAT SULLIVAN, whose Sunday comic page in colors is already world famous. More than FIFTY newspapers booked it the first week.

All the Stars All the Time They're Stars

Among the biographies in illustrated strip form which in the past four months have proved so popular with the HEARST newspapers and numerous others is "THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON", approved by the great inventor himself.

GENE TUNNEY, world's heavyweight champion, and JACK DEMPSEY are writing daily signed articles of their training for the forthcoming championship battle in Chicago. Their stories are widely exploited by newspapers throughout the country.

* * *

MRS. CALVIN COOLIDGE and the wives of the famous men of Washington have written their favorite recipes for the CONGRESSIONAL CLUB COOK BOOK which is now ready for publication in newspapers.

* * *

WIRE or write NOW for the catalog which lists all the stars that are responsible for building and holding circulation in large papers and small alike in all parts of the world.

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.

M. KOENIGSBERG—PRESIDENT

241 WEST 58TH STREET NEW YORK CITY

EDITOR & PUBLISHER ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF SYNDICATE FEATURES

(Continued from page 42)

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Novelette (d) (⅛)		Keystone Feature Service
Novelette Service	Various	King Features Syndicate
Now I'll Ask One (d)		Famous Features Syndicate
Nunally Johnson's Column (d) (1)	Nunally Johnson	Post Syndicate

O

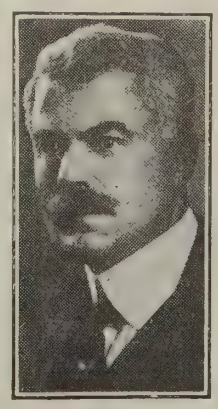
Obituary (w) (1½)	Wilbur G. Warner	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Odd Facts (varies)		Newspaper Feature Service
Of Interest to Women (d) (½)		Keystone Feature Service
O' Trusty (w) (2)	Don Wooton	NEA Service, Inc.
Old Doc Hawley (w) (2)	Don Marquis	King Features Syndicate
Old Gardener Says (d)		Associated Newspapers
Old Masters (d) (⅛)	Miscellaneous	NEA Service, Inc.
Once-Overs (d) (¼)	J. J. Mundy	International Feature Service
On Convention (series) (2)	Will Durant	United Feature Syndicate
One Hundred and One Wonders (d)	Edison Watt	Associated Newspapers
Otto Watt (d) (¼)		Associated Editors, Inc.
Our Children (d) (⅛)	Angelo Patri	Bell Syndicate
Our Family Food (w)	Winifred S. Gibbs	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Our Government (d) (½)		Audio Service
Our Jobs and What We See In Them (w) (serial) (¼)	L. A. Hartley	King Editors' Features
Outwitting Your Nerves (d) (½)	Dr. Josephine A. Jackson	George Matthew Adams Service
Over Life's Hurdles (d) (½)	Louis E. Bisch	Premier Syndicate

P

Page About People (Canadian) (w) (fp)		Star Newspaper Service
Paragraphs (Dog Hill Paragraphs) (d) (ill)	George Bingham	George Matthew Adams Service
Paris Fashions (w) (hp)	Bettina Bedwell	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Paris Fashion Board	Various	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
Paris Fashion Letter (w) (2)	Special writers	NEA Service, Inc.
Paris Fashion Service (d) (1)	Eve Tingey	Ledger Syndicate
Parental Problems (w) (1)	Dr. Arthur Dean	National Newspaper Service
Pattern Service	Lucille Lorraine	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
Personal Health Service (d) (¾)	Dr. William Brady	National Newspaper Service
Personality of Success (w) (serial) (¼)	Harry Collins Spillman	King Editors' Features
Pertinent Portraits (d) (1&2)		International Syndicate
Peter's Adventures (d) (⅓)	Mrs. F. S. Vincent	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Phelps, William Lyon (w) (1)	William Lyons Phelps	U. P. C. News Service, Inc.
Phillips, H. I. (humorous article)	H. I. Phillips	Associated Newspapers
Picture Page (Canadian) (d) (fp)		Star Newspaper Service
Picture Puzzles (d) (1)	Various	Associated Newspapers
Pinnacle Fiction (w) (fp) (ill)	Eminent Writers	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Pirates Ahoy! (w)	Charles B. Driscoll	McNaught Syndicate
Plans, House (w) (3)	W. W. Purdy	International Syndicate
Poems, Everyday (d) (125)	George Elliston	Associated Newspapers
Pointed Paragraphs (d)		Associated Newspapers
Political Articles (w) (1)	Josephus Daniels	National Newspaper Service
Political Reviews (d&s) (1&2)	Mark Sullivan	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Politics (New Jersey) (2w)	Irving A. Brody, Leo J. Hershdorfer	Jersey Feature Service
Pome Peddler (w) (½)	Ray Hoppman	Columbia Newspaper Service
Poor Pa (d) (1)	Claude Callan	Publishers Syndicate
Popular Science (d)	Edison Watt	Associated Newspapers
Popular Science (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Popular Science (d) (⅛) (ill)	Dr. John Scott Calhoun	National Newspaper Service
Popular Science (d) (1)	Garrett P. Service	International Feature Service
Potash & Perlmutter (w) (1) (ill)	Montague Glass	Bell Syndicate
Pre-Eminent Articles (w) (1½) (ill)	Eminent Writers	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Pre-School Age Children (d) (⅛) (ill)	Dr. Ethel Kawin	National Newspaper Service
Pure Food Articles (2w) (¾)	Royal S. Copeland	Newspaper Feature Service
Puzzle Page (w) (fp)		Premier Syndicate
Puzzle, Laddergrams (d) (1)	Conant & Surrick	Ledger Syndicate
Puzzles (Find the Missing Person) (d) (2)		Associated Newspapers
Puzzles, Hart's (10w) (1)	J. F. Hart	Bell Syndicate
Puzzles—Little Dot (d) (1)		Keystone Feature Service
Puzzle—Little Red Ridinghood (w) (1) (ill)		National News Service
Puzzles, Cross Word (dw)		Bell Syndicate
Puzzles, Cross Word (d) (2)		International Syndicate
Puzzles, Cross Word (d)		King Features Syndicate
Puzzles, Cross Words (d) (2)	Walter B. Gibson	Ledger Syndicate
Puzzles, Cross Word (d) (2)		Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Puzzles, Cross Word (w) (3)		Premier Syndicate
Puzzles—Big Dot (d) (2)		Keystone Feature Service
Puzzles, Dot (d) (1)	Elsa Kaji	International Syndicate
Puzzles, Teaser (d)	Walter B. Gibson	Ledger Syndicate
Puzzlette (d)	Alan S. Foster	Ledger Syndicate

Q

Question & Answer Features (d)	Wm. Nelson Taft	Ledger Syndicate
Question Box (d) (¾)	H. Addington Bruce	Ledger Syndicate
Questions and Answers (d)	Oliver Keep	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Question and Answer Dept. (d) (¼)	Wm. Nelson Taft	Post Syndicate
Quiz (Canadian) (d) (⅛)		Star Newspaper Service



R

Radio (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Radio-by-the-Clock Programs (d) (1)		Audio Service
Radio-by-Station Programs (d) (⅔)		Audio Service
Radio (coming events) (w) (1½)	B. W. Hughes	Editor's Copy
Radio, Current (d) (2)	A. C. Lescarboura	International Syndicate
Radio Doings (d) (1)		Audio Service
Radio Features (w) (2p)	Various	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Radio Fun (d) (ill) (¼)	Dorothy Pownall	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Radio—"Listening In on the United States" (2w)	Robert D. Heinl	Heinl Radio News Syndicate
Radio News (w) (1)	Carl H. Butman	Radio News Service (Washington)
Radio News Features (w) (2)	Carl H. Butman	Radio News Service (Washington)
Radio News Notes (d) (¾)		Audio Service
Radio News Service (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Radio News	Carl H. Butman	Washington Radio News Service
Radio Page (w) (fp)	Israel Klein	NEA Service, Inc.
Radio Pilot, The (w) (1)	Edgar Felix	D. P. Syndicate
Radio Programs (d)		Audio Service
Radio Programs (d) (1)	Staff	NEA Service, Inc.
Recipes from new Congressional Cookbook (d) (¼)	Famous Women	King Features Syndicate
Recipes of Famous Women (d) (¼)	Famous Women	Ledger Syndicate
Red Pants	Capt. John W. Thomason	Bell Syndicate
Retailing (Fundamentals) (w) (serial) (¼)	Charles W. Meyers	King Editors' Features
Retail Selling Spark Plugs (w) (serial) (¼)	Llew S. Soule	King Editors' Features
Right Word (Correct English) (d)	W. C. Nicholson	Associated Newspapers
Right Angles (d) (½&¾)	Dr. Alexander Cairns	King Features Syndicate
Rippling Rhymes (d)	Walt Mason	George Matthew Adams Service
Robinson Grew-So (w) (2) (juv)	E. W. Kemble	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd
Rogers' Humor (d)	Will Rogers	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Romantic Serials (d) (1)	Claire Pomeroy	National Newspaper Service
Round Table of Business (d) (1)	Glenn Griswold	Chicago Journal of Commerce
Ruby Robert—Alias Bob Fitzsimmons (d) (1)	Robert H. Davis	Bell Syndicate
Rubaiyat of a College Man (w)	H. C. Witwer	King Features Syndicate
Rupert Hughes' Article (w) (2) (ill)	Rupert Hughes	Bell Syndicate
Ruth Cameron (d) (½)	Ruth Cameron	George Matthew Adams Service
Rhymes of the Road (w) (1)	Dudley Glass	Premier Syndicate
Rhyming Optimist, The (d) (box)	Aline Michaelis	International Feature Service

S

Saint and Sinner (d) (⅛)	Anne Austin	NEA Service, Inc.
Sam N'Henry (w) (hp) (ill)	Correll & Cosden	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd
Santa Claus Campaigns		Eastern Newspaper Service
Sayings of Mrs. Solomon (2w) (½)	Helen Rowland	King Features Syndicate
Sayso of Holleran Yell (w) (qp) (ill)	Pegler	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Synd
Science Condensed Service (w) (1½) (ill)	Staff	Science Service
Science Features (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Science Illustrated Feature (w) (⅔) (ill)	Various authorities	Science Service
Science News Bulletin (d) (1½)	Staff and authoritative correspondents	Science Service
Science Shorts (w) (1)	Emily C. Davis	Science Service
Scrambled Zoo Contest (d) (1)	C. V. Fry	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Second Love (d) (serial)	Malcolm Duart	Eugene MacLean Features
Seckatary Hawkins (w) (hp) (ill)	Robert F. Schulkers	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Secrets of Health & Success (d) (¾)	C. A. L. Reed, M.D.	International Feature Service
Secrets of Good Health (d) (⅓)	Sir Arbuthnot Lane	D. P. Syndicate
Seen on Fifth Avenue		Newspaper Feature Service
Seibold's Dispatches (d)	Louis Seibold	Post Syndicate
Sentence Sermons (d)	Roy L. Smith	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Serial Fiction (d&w)		Western Newspaper Union
Serial	Marion Talley	Famous Features Syndicate
Serials (Norris) (d) (½)	Margaret Norris	George Matthew Adams Service
Serial Fiction (d) (2)	Staff and special	NEA Service, Inc.
Serial	Barbara Webb	Famous Features Syndicate
Serials (d&w)		Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Serials (d or s)		Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Serials (Johnson) (d) (½)	Gladys E. Johnson	George Matthew Adams Service
Serial	Madame Lupescu	Famous Features Syndicate
Serial	Mildred Harris (Formerly Mrs. Charles Chaplin)	Famous Features Syndicate
Serial Fiction (d) (1½)	Various	King Features Syndicate
Serial Fiction and Short Stories		Service for Authors, Inc.
Serials	Mildred Barbour	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Serial Novels (d)	Star Authors	Ledger Syndicate
Sermon (w) (½)	Ralph Walles Keel	Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Sermons (w) (1)	Rev. Thos. Gregory	Newspaper Feature Service
Sewing, Home (3w) (⅓) (ill)	Ruth Wyeth Spears	George Matthew Adams Service
Sherry	Barbara Webb	Famous Features Syndicate
Sherry (serial)	Barbara Webb	Famous Features Syndicate
Ship News, New York	Staff	New York Allied News Bureau
Ship News, New York (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Shopping Economy (d) (⅓)	Mrs. Harland H. Allen	Allen Feature Service
Short Stories (d)	Various	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Short Story Service (d) (1)		King Features Syndicate
Short Stories (d)		Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Short Stories (w) (1)	Eminent Writers	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Short Fictions (d) (1)		Western Newspaper Union
Short Stories	V. Blasco Ibanez	United Features Syndicate
Sidewalk Sermons (w) (ill) (humor) (¾)	Zipp	Columbia Newspaper Service
Sister Mary's Kitchen (d) (½)	Mary Dague	NEA Service, Inc.
Slanguage in a Bookshop (w)	H. C. Witwer	King Features Syndicate
Smiles (d) (1)		International Syndicate
Smile A Second, A (d) (⅛)		Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Snared (d) (serial)	Malcolm Duart	Eugene MacLean Features
Snowshoe Al (w) (qp) (ill)	Al Bromley	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Society News of Washington (d) (500)	Maxine Davis	Capital News Service
Society's Fashions (w) (2)	Betsy Schuyler	NEA Service, Inc.
Something to Think About (3w) (½)	Bruno Lessing	King Features Syndicate
Sometimes I Think So—Sometimes I Think Not (d) (¾)	Velva Darling	King Features Syndicate
Songs of Housewife (d) (¼)	Marjorie K. Rawlings	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Sonia (serial) (ill)	Vida Hurst	United Feature Syndicate
Sonia and Don (serial) (ill)	Vida Hurst	United Feature Syndicate
Speaking of Prohibition (Interviews)	Zoe Beckley	Famous Features Syndicate
Speaking of Divorce (Interviews)	Zoe Beckley	Famous Features Syndicate
Special Features (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Special Interviews	Zoe Beckley	Famous Features Syndicate
Spot News (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service

(Continued on page 46)

MEN'S QUESTIONS ANSWERED

By H. Addington Bruce

New Daily Reader-Holder

Gives valuable help to those confronted by business and personal problems.

Wire for Samples and Terms

LEDGER SYNDICATE

INDEPENDENCE SQUARE PHILADELPHIA, PA.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE FEATURES

COMICS
Winnie Winkle .....D & S
Smitty .....D & S
Gasoline Alley .....D & S
Gumps .....D & S
Moon Mullins .....D & S
Orphan Annie .....D & S
Harold Teen .....D & S
Texas Slim .....Sunday
Squire of Smithville .....Daily
Ching Chow .....Daily

CARTOONS
W. E. Hill .....Sunday
McCutcheon .....D & S
Carey Orr .....D & S
Gaar Williams .....D & S

FICTION
Blue Ribbon Daily Serial
Blue Ribbon Sunday Serial
Blue Ribbon Short Stories
Daily True Life Stories

MISC. DAILY FEATURES
Margaret Orr's "Stories of Girls"
Sentence Sermons by Roy L. Smith

WEEKLY HUMOROUS ARTICLES
Westbrook Pegler
"Sam 'N' Henry"
Duke Bakrak
Snowshoe Al

WEEKLY
E. M. Kemble's Children's Stories
H. L. Mencken Literary Articles
Burns Mantle Theatre Letter
Weekly Hollywood Letter
New York Society Letter
Builders Page
"About Broadway" by Hellinger
Book Reviews
Cartoon Fillers
Confessions of Authors
Club Ethics
Etiquette
Fashions (Paris)
Justice Series
Maiden Meditations
Sport Page
Women's Pages

DAILY & SUNDAY
Doris Blake
Cook Book
Antoinette Donnelley
Dr. Evans' Health Articles
Farm & Garden
Line O' Type
Men's Fashions
What's Wrong Here
Women's Fashions
You and Your Children

Two thrilling new serials to build up your Fall circulation

A Weekly Serial
MY LADY FAR AWAY
by Beatrice Grimshaw
for release
Sept. 11th

and a

Daily Serial
THE PORTRAIT INVISIBLE
by Joseph Gollomb
for release
Sept. 26th

Here are two serials with tremendous suspense interest! They're especially adapted to great circulation exploitation and are available at a season when circulation gains are most easily made.

The Chicago Tribune has made enormous strides in circulation with serials of this type, and they will exploit these serials in a big way. Buy leadership — your best opportunity for great circulation gains!

MY LADY FAR AWAY

is a romance-mystery laid in the heart of New Guinea, a corner of the world known to few white men or women. A young Englishman journeys there seeking evidence of his uncle's death with which he may claim title and fortune. Lured by the title and the adventures in store, a scheming, though fascinating young adventuress accompanies him. . . . The thrilling experiences, wild remoteness of the territory and unusual customs of the natives are vividly described by this Irish author whose home for many years has been in Patua, New Guinea. "Guinea Gold," "The Coral Queen" and "The Terrible Island" created a large following for Beatrice Grimshaw. MY LADY FAR AWAY can increase your circulation tremendously. Wire for price and proofs.

THE PORTRAIT INVISIBLE

The justice of Judge Craigin's sentences were not tempered with mercy. When he was found murdered in a suburban cottage it seemed likely to be a relative's revenge for a harsh sentence. Bruce, the judge's younger brother, resents the inference of a woman in the case, but despite the possibility of scandal, sets "The Goldfish" to push all investigation of the case. Bruce falls in love with his secretary, marries her, then—finds their honeymoon cottage furnished by her in the eccentric manner and with some of the books and pictures of the suburban cottage in which his brother was found murdered. . . . A distinctive new detective story by the author of these successes: "Master Man Hunters," and "The Girl in the Fog." Wire for price and proofs.

Tribune fiction has helped build the two largest newspaper circulations in the country. Follow the leaders—The Chicago Tribune and the New York News.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE Newspapers Syndicate

TRIBUNE SQUARE . . . . . Chicago

EDITOR & PUBLISHER ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF SYNDICATE FEATURES

(Continued from page 44)

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
James Stokley	Star Map (m) (2 ill)	Science Service
Starr Sterling Baseball Stories (w) (hp)		Star Newspaper Service
Starry Skies (m) (1)	Prof. S. G. Barton	Keystone Feature Service
Short Romance of Every-day Life (d) (fp)		National News Service
Steve Says (w) (⅓) (ill)	T. A. Webb	Columbia Newspaper Service
Stock A Day (d) (⅓) (ill)		Bell Syndicate
Stories (d) (1700 wds)		Associated Newspapers
Stories (short) (w) (1)	Eminent Writers	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Stories (w) (ill.)	Fannie Hurst	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Stories	Will Durant	United Features Syndicate
Stories of Civilization	Will Durant	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
Stories	Famous Authors	Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
Stories of Girls (d) (1)	Margaret Orr	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Stories (w)	Various	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Straight Talks to Women About Money (d)	Mary Elizabeth Allen	Allen Feature Service
Sub Rosa (d) (½)	Mimi	Bell Syndicate
Success Hints (d) (¼)	Various Celebrities	Ledger Syndicate
Success Recipes, My (d) (¼)	Various Celebrities	Ledger Syndicate
Sue to Lou (w) (6) (ill)	C. W. Gettier	Bell Syndicate
Sunday Motorist, The (w) (1)	William Ullman	Ullman Feature Service
Sunday School Lessons (w)	William Southern, Jr.	Republic Syndicate
Sunday School Lesson (w) (1)	H. Radcliffe	Editor's Copy
Sunday School Lesson (w)	Dr. W. T. Ellis	Ellis Service
Sunday School Lesson (w) (1)	Dr. W. E. Gilroy	NEA Service, Inc.
Sunday School Lesson (w) (6 col)	Harlowe Hoyt, Walt Scott	Publishers Syndicate
Sunday Magazine (w) (11p)		International Feature Service
Sunday Morning Breakfast (w)	Roe Fulkerson	McNaught Syndicate
Sunday Magazine Pages (Canadian) (w) (fp)		Star Newspaper Service
Sunshine Pellets (d) (½)	Dr. W. M. Thomson	Audio Service

T

Tabloid Magazine (w) (24p) (some in colors)		Herald Tribune Syndicate
Tabloid Tale (d) (⅙)		Keystone Feature Service
Tales of Real Dogs (w)	Albert Payson Terhune	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Talks to Women ("Trousers and Skirts")	Alma Whitaker	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Tammany (d) (1)	M. R. Werner	D. P. Syndicate
Teaser, Puzzles (d)	Walter B. Gibson	Ledger Syndicate
Technical News and Features (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Telegraphic Science Specials (d) (½)	Watson Davis and others	Science Service
Telling the World (d) (1)	Neal O'Hara	New York World Syndicate
Tell It to Elsie (d) (½) (w) (1)	Elsie Marlowe	Premier Syndicate
Test Yourself (d) (¼ ill)	Watson Davis	Science Service
That Radio of Yours (w) (¾)		Ullman Feature Service
That Body of Yours (d) (½)	Dr. James W. Barton	Bell Syndicate
That Gay Young Set (w) (2) (ill)	Lucille Van Slyke	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
That Little Game (cartoon) (3)	Bert Link	National News Service
That Motor Car of Yours (w) (¾)	William Ullman	Ullman Feature Service
Theatrical Column	George Halasz	Continental Features
Theatrical Column (w) (1)	John Anderson	Post Syndicate
Theatrical Letter (w)	Percy Hammond	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Theatrical Letter (s) (1)	A. Woollcott	New York World Syndicate
Theatrical Reviews and News (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Then and Now Fashions (d) (¼)	Judy Bushnell	United Feature Syndicate
The Wife & Co. (d) (serial)	Lyle Hamilton	Eugene MacLean Features
The World and All (d) (½)	Charles Driscoll	Central Press Assn., Inc.
This Dumb World (w) (½)	Bruno Lessing	King Features Syndicate
Those Lucky Pullens (d) (serial)	Malcolm Duart	Eugene MacLean Features
Thoughts (d)	Miscellaneous	NEA Service, Inc.
Three-Minute Journeys (2w) (¼)	Temple Manning	Newspaper Feature Service
Through a Woman's Eyes (3w) (⅓)	Jean Newton	Bell Syndicate
Tim Thrift Text (m) serial) (¼)	Tim Thrift	King Editors' Features
Tinymites (d) (2)	Hal Cochran	NEA Service, Inc.
Tiny Tot Tales (d) (ill) (¼)	Martha Hart	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Toby Tinkle (w) (ill) (½)	Martha Hart	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Today's Active Stock (d) (⅛) (ill)	E. A. Berg	National Newspaper Service
Today's Fashion (2w) (½) (¼)	Vera Winston	Newspaper Feature Service
Today in Astrology (d) (⅓)	Belle Barte	Ledger Syndicate
Today's Talk (d) (¼)	George Matthew Adams	George Matthew Adams Service
Tomorrow's Menu (d)		McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Trade News and Features (d)	Staff	Holmes Feature Service
Tree Top Stories (d) (¼)	Florenz Clark	Associated Editors, Inc.
Trend of Business (w) (¾)	Herbert S. Hollander	Ullman Feature Service
True Life Stories (dw) (fp tab)		Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
True Stories (d) (ill)		Payne Syndicate, Inc.
True Story (d) (1 to 2½)		Premier Syndicate
Truth About Love and Marriage (2w) (½)	Elinor Glyn	King Features Syndicate
Two-Way Pulpit (w)	Dr. John Roach Straton and Rev. Hubert C. Herring	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

U

Uncle Ray's Corner (d) (⅓)	Ramon Coffman	Publishers Syndicate
Uncle Sam Says (d) (⅛)	E. Lecraw	National Feature Service
Uncommon Sense	John Blake	Bell Syndicate
Up and Down Broadway (d) (1)	K. K. Kitchen	New York World Syndicate

V

Vanity Fair (3w) (⅓)		United Feature Syndicate
Verse (A. A. Milne) (hp) (ill)	A. A. Milne	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Verse & Prose (hp) (ill)	A. A. Milne	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Vogue Fashions (d) (⅓)		United Feature Syndicate
Vigorous Health (d) (⅛)	Paul J. Veatch	Graphic Syndicate, Inc.

W

Wake of News (dw) (1)	Harvey Woodruff	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
War Birds (d) (1½) (ill)		Bell Syndicate
Washington Dispatch (d)	Staff correspondents	Post Syndicate
Washington Letter (d) (½)	Rodney Dutcher	NEA Service, Inc.
Washington Notes (w) (1½)	Henry Sims	Editor's Copy
Way of the World (d) (½)	Grove Patterson	Central Press Assn.
Weekly House Plan Service (w) (2)	Various	Audio Service
Weekly News Review (w) (3)	E. W. Pickard	Western Newspaper Union
Weekly Sermons (w) (1)	Rev. Thos. Gregory	Newspaper Feature Service
Week's Wash (w) (humor)	Don Herold	Herald Tribune Syndicate
We Women (d) (½)	Betty Brainerd	Associated Newspapers
What the Good Book Says (d) (⅛)	R. W. Keeler, D.D.	Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
What Do You Know? (d) (½)	Sabina Connolly	King Features Syndicate
What Today Means to You (d) (½)	Mary Blake	Bell Syndicate
What Your Face Tells (d) (⅛)	Betty Morrison, Psy. D.	Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
What's the Answer? (d) (½)		King Features Syndicate
What's Behind Your Stock (d) (⅛)	Staff	Cambridge Associates, Inc.
What's What (d) (¼)	Helen Decie	Ledger Syndicate
What's What in Washington (d) (⅜)	Charles P. Stewart	Central Press Assn., Inc.
What's Wrong Here? (d) (1) (ill)		Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
When Murder Would Not Out (d) (1)	Vance Wynn	Ledger Syndicate
Who's Who & Timely Views (d) (⅓)	Albert Ritchie	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Who-Why-What-When-Where (d)	Wm. Nelson Taft	Ledger Syndicate
Why I Am Not Married (d) (1)	Celebrated Personalities	Ledger Syndicate
Why the Weather (d) (⅛)	Charles Fitzhugh Talman	Science Service
Wife's Transformation, A (d) (2) (ill)	Mary Culbertson Miller	Bell Syndicate
Wild Animal Interviews (w)	Wm. T. Hornaday	McNaught Syndicate
Willie Willis (d) (1)	Robert Quillen	Publishers Syndicate
Wire Comments on the News (d)	Will Rogers	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
With Women of Today (d) (½)	Mrs. Liliam Campbell	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Woman's Day (d) (½)	Allene Sumner	NEA Service, Inc.
Woman's Editorial (d) (½)	Olive Roberts Barton	NEA Service, Inc.
Woman's Feature (d) (1)	Florence LaGanke	Publishers Syndicate
Women's Features (w) (fp)	Various	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Women in the News (d) (½)	Special writers	NEA Service, Inc.
Woman's Page Art (d) (2)	Mary Tuttle	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Women's Page Articles		McClure Newspapers Syndicate
Woman's Page Articles	Dorothy Shumate	Women's National News Bureau
Women's Page Articles (d)	Mary Elizabeth Allen	Allen Feature Service
Woman's Page Copy (w) (2½)	Mrs. Florence Riddick Boys	Woman's Page
Woman's Page Features (d)		Keystone Feature Service
Women's Page Matter (d)	Helen M. Emery	Associated Newspapers
Women's Serials (d) (¾)	Carolyn Beecher	Associated Newspapers
Woman to Woman (d) (½)	Joan London	National Newspaper Service
Word Change Puzzles (d) (⅛)	John Knox	National Newspaper Service
World's Greatest Extremes (54 articles) (½)	John Johns	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Worst Story I've Heard Today	Will Rogers	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Wynn's Question Box, Ed, (w)	Ed Wynn	Bell Syndicate

Y

Yale Historical-Commemorative Series (m) (serial) (1)	37 Historians	King Editors' Features
You and Your Children (dw)	Mrs. Gladys Bevans	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Your Automobile (w)	Brokaw	NEA Service, Inc.
Your Baby And Mine (d) (½) (w) (ill) (1)	Myrtle Meyer Eldred	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Your Beauty (3w) (¾)	Mme. Jeritza	Premier Syndicate
Your Boy and Your Girl (d) (¾)	Dr. Arthur Dean	National Newspaper Service
Your Broadway & Mine (d) (1)	Walter Winchell	Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Your Car and Mine (w) (1)	William Ullman	Ullman Feature Service
Your Child in School (w) (¾)	Dr. Frank W. Ballou	Standard Editorial Service
Your Health (d) (1)	Royal S. Copeland	Newspaper Feature Service
Your Home and You (d)	Mary Marshall	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Your Job and the Other Fellow's	Mary E. Allen, Harlan H. Allen	Allen Feature Service
Your Marriage Problems (d) (½)	Patricia Lee	Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Your Radio and Mine (w) (1)	Frederick C. Russell	Ullman Feature Service
You Said It, Marceline (d) (⅓)	Marceline D'Alroy	Premier Syndicate

Z

Zenith Fiction (w) (fp) (ill)	Eminent Writers	Metropolitan Newspaper Service

NEWSPAPER ART

(Cartoons, Comic Strips, Magazine Covers and Sketches)

A

A Fool There Was (w) (3)	Pete Keenan	International Syndicate
Abie (w) (fp)	Hershfield	International Feature Service
Abie the Agent (d) (6)	Hershfield	International Feature Service
Amateur Etiquette (d) (1)	R. W. Calkins	National Newspaper Service
Antics of Arabella (d) (5)		Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Around the Dial (d) (1)	Various	Audio Service
Asparagus Tipps (d) (1)		Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Assorted Nuts (d) (1)	Hopp	Columbia Newspaper Service
Aunt Het (d) (1)	Robert Quillen	Publishers Syndicate

B

Barney Google (w) (7 or 8)	Billy De Beck	King Features Syndicate
Batchelor's Cartoons (d) (3)	C. D. Batchelor	Post Syndicate
Ben Webster's Career (d) (3)	Edwin Alger	Bell Syndicate
Betty (w) (fp) (comic)	Charles Voight	Herald Tribune
"Bible Says—" (d) (2)		World Color Printing Co.
Big World of Little Things (w) (1)	Alfred O. Shedd	Science Service

(Continued on page 48)

Each Day Brings

NEWS In Science

From the depths of the earth to the heights of the air science advances and each step is filled to the brim with "human interest." Our sixteen services give definite knowledge written in a style the layman can understand and enjoy.

We gladly supply samples of the following features.

Daily Science News Bulletin
- Illustrated Feature (weekly)
- How Bright Is Your Baby?
- Isn't It Odd
- The Science of Golf
- Nature's Notebook
- Why The Weather?
- Building and Flying Model Airplanes

Telegraphic Science Special
- Test Yourself
- Ask Yourself
- Science Shorts
- Star Map
- Big World of Little Things
- Science Condensed Service (weekly)
- Earthquake Wires (occasional)

SCIENCE SERVICE WASHINGTON, D. C.

Reproduction of one of many pieces of announcement and promotion material now being used in Dr. McCoy's home city by the

Los Angeles Times

For Your Health's Sake!

DR. FRANK McCOY

NOW Writing for Los Angeles Times

No Feature or Service has ever been so continuously called upon to prove itself as the McCOY HEALTH SERVICE

And here is the Answer

The Los Angeles Times, a great national institution in itself, is published a few doors away from Dr. McCoy's practice. No organization in America is in a better position to judge of Dr. McCoy's work and the man himself. It is one of the greatest compliments that has been paid this service since its inception. The Los Angeles Times have watched Dr. McCoy—they have known him during his fifteen years of continuous practice in Los Angeles—they see him here enjoying the largest private practice on the North American Continent—they know his standing.

In other words, the analysis is that this paper was NOT "SOLD" by mere sales talk or by the visit of a salesman, but knowing what Dr. McCoy is giving his readers through the McCoy Health Service, and knowing the years of experience, of practice, and research that is behind the whole of his service, they proudly announce that his daily talks have been added to their editorial columns. The Times have judged not only Dr. McCoy's great health work, but they have judged his work with respect to its relation to the newspapers of North America for which papers the Doctor writes Daily Health Articles. Such indorsation under such circumstances simply defies question or repudiation.

Only one Newspaper in Your City can get this Service! Let that Newspaper be yours!

Write or Wire Today

McCOY HEALTH SERVICE

Brack Shops Bldg. Los Angeles, Cal.

McCoy Health Service,
Brack Shops Bldg.
Los Angeles, Calif.

Gentlemen:

Please send us fullest particulars and price.

Paper .....

City and State .....

Your Name and Title .....

EDITOR & PUBLISHER ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF SYNDICATE FEATURES

(Continued from page 46)

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Bill Boster (w) (1)	Sughroe	Western Newspaper Union
Birdseye Centre (w) (8c,½p.)	James Frise	Star Newspaper Service
Bobby Thatcher (d) (6)	George Storms	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Boots and Her Buddies (d&s) (6)	Edgar Martin	NEA Service, Inc.
Bound to Win (d) (6)	Edwin Alger	Bell Syndicate
Bringing Up Bill (d) (6)	Jack Farr	Columbia Newspaper Service
Bringing Up Father (dw) (6 & fp)	McManus	International Feature Service
Broadway (d) (5) (tab)	Mark Hellinger	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Bughouse Fables (d) (2)		King Features Syndicate
Bungle Family (dw) (6 fp.colors)	H. J. Tuthill	McNaught Syndicate
Buttons & Fatty (w) (tab colors)		Thompson Feature Service

C

Can You Beat It? (d) (3)	Maurice Ketten	New York World Syndicate
Cap Stubbs (d) (6)	Edwina	George Matthew Adams Service
Capt. and the Kids (s) (fp)	R. Dirks	New York World Syndicate
Cartoon (sport) (d) (3)	Quill	King Features Syndicate
Cartoons ("Chapin")	A. B. Chapin	Ledger Syndicate
Cartoons (Editorial) (dw) (3)	Carey Orr	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Cartoon Follies of 1927	R. L. Goldberg	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Cartoons (Fontaine Fox) (d) (3)	Fontaine Fox	Bell Syndicate
Cartoons (Front Page) (dw) (3)	John T. McCutcheon	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Cartoons (General) (3w) (2)	Douglas	Associated Newspapers
Cartoons (General) (3w) (3)	Shoemaker	Associated Newspapers
Cartoons (Human Interest) (dw) (3)	Gaar Williams	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Cartoons (Humorous) (d) (3)	H. T. Webster	New York World Syndicate
Cartoons (Kessler) (d) (2 & 3)	C. Kessler	Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Cartoons (Kettner) (d) (3&2)	M. G. Kettner	Western Newspaper Union
Cartoons (Morris) (d) (3)	Wm. C. Morris	George Matthew Adams Service
Cartoons (News)	Jess Cargill	Central Press Assn.
Cartoons (News) (d) (3)	W. B. Johnstone	New York World Syndicate
Cartoons (News) (d) (2)	Clifford McBride	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Cartoons (News) (d) (3)	Ding and Brown	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Cartoons (News) (d) (3)	L. E. Thiele	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Cartoons (Political) (d) (3)	Rollin Kirby	New York World Syndicate
Cartoons (Political) (d) (4)	Clive Weed	New York World Syndicate
Cartoons, (Romantic) (3w)	Nell Brinkley, Alexander Popin Dorothy Flack	International Feature Service
Cartoons, (Sport) (d) (3)	Quill	King Features Syndicate
Cartoons, (Sykes') (d)	Charles Henry Sykes	Ledger Syndicate
Cartoon (That Little Game) (3)	Bert Link	National News Service
Cash and Carrie (d) (6)	Lou Skuce	Bell Syndicate
Chance Brother (d) (5)		Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Cartoons, (Chapin's) (d) (3)	A. B. Chapin	Ledger Syndicate
Checker Column (w) (½)	P. H. Ketchum	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Chic Cherie (Fashion Strip) (d) (6)		King Features Syndicate
Ching Chow (d) (1)	Sidney Smith	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Cicero Sap (dw) (6fp)	Fred Locher	New York World
Clarence (w) (fp comic)	Crawford Young	Herald Tribune
Column Comics (d) (½ and 1)		Associated Newspapers
Conquest of the Air (d) (6)	Nicholas Afonsky	McClure Newspaper Syndicate

D

Daily Pictorial Editorial (d) (2)		Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Diary of a Fashion Model (3w) (½)	Grace Thorncliff	Newspaper Feature Service
Danny Dingle (d) (5 or 6)	Dib	King Features Syndicate
Deb Days (d) (6)	Little Mabie, E. K. Bergey	Ledger Syndicate
Dickens' Classic Novels (educational) (d) (6)		King Features Syndicate
Dicky Dippy's Diary (d) (6)	Arthur Sinnott	Associated Newspapers
Dickey's Dogs (w) (3-2)	Robert L. Dickey	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Diversfied (d) (3 & 4)	Clare Briggs	Herald Tribune
Dizzy Drama (d) (2)	Joe Bowers	Ledger Syndicate
Doings of the Duffs (d) (6)	Ben Batsford	United Feature Syndicate
Down the Road (w) (203)	Frank Beck	Bell Syndicate
Dramatic Events in Bible History (w) (6)	Harlowe Hoyt, Walt Scott	Publishers Syndicate
Dumb Bells (d) (1)	Gar	Ledger Syndicate
Dumb Dora (d) (5, 6) (w) (7,8)	Chic Young	Premier Syndicate

E

Eddie's Friends (d) (3)	Knott	International Feature Service
Educational Strip (d) (6)	Phil Bessey & W. M. Braucher	NEA Service, Inc.
Educational Strip (Dickens' Novels) (d) (6)		King Features Syndicate
Educational serial strip (George Washington) (5, 6)	Woodward	King Features Syndicate
Educational Strip (The History of Marriage) (series) (d) (5, 6)	Westermarck	King Features Syndicate
Educational Strip (Life of Napoleon Bonaparte) (series) (5, 6)	Ida M. Tarbell	King Features Syndicate
Educational (Make-A-Book Series) (d) (6)	M. Genevieve Silvester	U. P. C. News Services, Inc.
Educational Strip (Masterpieces of Great Literature) (series) (d) (6)		King Features Syndicate
Educational Strip (Shakespeare's Immortal Dramas (series) (d) (5, 6)		King Features Syndicate
Elducational Strip (Story of Philosophy) (series) (5, 6)	Will Durant	King Features Syndicate
Educational Strip (Story of Superstitions) (series) (5, 6)	Sir J. Frazer	King Features Syndicate
Educational Strip (Story of Thomas Edison) (series) (5, 6)	Arthur J. Palmer	King Features Syndicate
Educational Strip (Story of Thomas Jefferson) (series) (5, 6)	W. E. Curtis	King Features Syndicate
Ella Cinders (d-w) (6)	Bill Conselman Charlie Plumb	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Elmer (w) (7, 8)		Newspaper Feature Service
Embarrassing Moments (d) (2)		King Features Syndicate
Ethel (d) (2 or 3)	Ethel Hays	NEA Service, Inc.
Etta Kett (d) (6)	Paul Robinson	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Eve's Epigram (d) (1)	Agnes Hucke	Ledger Syndicate
Everyday Movies (d) (3)	Denys Wortman	New York World Syndicate
Everything's Up to Ma (d) (6)	P. A. Schall	National News Service

F

Famous Fans (d) (3)	Ray Hoppman	Columbia Newspaper Service
Famous Monuments (w) (4)	Hendrick Van Loon	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Fashions (w) (2¼)	Annette Bradshaw	Newspaper Feature Service
Fashions, Paris Page (w) (fp)		International Feature Service
Fashion, Paris Sketches (d) (1)	Eve Tingey	Ledger Syndicate
Fashion Strip (Chic Cherie) (d) (6)		King Features Syndicate
Fashions, Today's (2w) (¼)	Vera Winston	Newspaper Feature Service
Fay King's Fancies (d) (5)	Fay King	Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Featherhead Strip (d) (6)	Osborne	Western Newspaper Union
Felix (d) (6) (w) (7 & 8)	Pat Sullivan	King Features Syndicate
Feminine Foibles (w) (3)	Annette Bradshaw	Newspaper Feature Service
Figgers Family (d) (6)	Victor Pazimino	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Fillum Fables (d) (6)	Chester Gould	King Features Syndicate
Finney of the Force (d) (6)	Alexander	Western Newspaper Union
Flapper Fanny (d) (1)	Ethel Hays	NEA Service, Inc.
Fontaine Fox Cartoons (d) (3)	Fontaine Fox	Bell Syndicate
Freckles and His Friends (d & S) (6)	Merrill Blosser	NEA Service, Inc.
Freddie the Shiek (d-w) (6) (7&8)	Jack Callahan	King Features Syndicate
Fritzi Ritz (d) (6)	Ernie Bushmiller	New York World
Front Page (w) (fp)	John Held	International Feature Service
Front Page Cartoons (d-w) (3)	John T. McCutcheon	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Front Page (w) (fp)	Dan Smith	Newspaper Feature Service

G

Gas Buggies (d) (6)	Frank Beck	Bell Syndicate
Gasoline Alley (d) (6) (w) (fp)	Frank King	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
George Washington (educational series) (5, 6)	Woodward	King Features Syndicate
Girligags (d) (2)	C. W. Gettier	Bell Syndicate
Gladys (d) (1-2)	Alan Dunn	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Gluyas Williams (d) (3)	Gluyas Williams	Bell Syndicate
Golf Comics (d) (1)	Sughroe	Western Newspaper Union
Golden Text (w) (2)	Carl Maier	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Good Time Guy (d) (6)	Frank Smiley	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Greatest Story in the World (d & w) (6) (ill)	Kor	U. P. C. News Service, Inc.
Grouches (d) (3)	Hendrix	Columbia Newspaper Service
Gumps, The (d) (6) (w) (fp)	Sidney Smith	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Gus and Gussie (d) (5 or 6)	Jack Lait	King Features Syndicate

H

Haenigsen Cartoons (d) (3)	Haenigsen	New York World
Hairbreadth Harry (d) (6)	C. W. Kahles	Ledger Syndicate
Hambone's Meditations (d) (1)	J. P. Alley	J. P. Alley
Hank and Pete (d) (6)	Ray Hoppman	Columbia Newspaper Service
Hard Hearted Hickey (d) (5, 6)	Darrell McClure	Premier Syndicate
Harold Teen (d) (5) (w) (fp)	Carl Ed	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Heart Throbs (d) (6)	Gladys Ripley	Editors Syndicate
Hello Hattie (d) (6)	Sals Bostwick	King Features Syndicate
High Lights of History (w) (fp, tab) (c)	J. Carroll Mansfield	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
High Pressure Pete (d) (6)	George Swanson	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Hill's Drawings (w) (fp)	W. E. Hill	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
History of Marriage, The (educational strip) (series) (5, 6)	Westermarck	King Features Syndicate
Home Decoration, Problems of (w) (3)	Annette Bradshaw	Newspaper Feature Service
Human Interest Cartoons (d-w) (3)	Gaar Williams	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate

I

In Animal Land (d) (6)	Edward McCandle	Bell Syndicate
Indoor Sports (d-w) (4)	T. A. Dorgan (Tad)	International Feature Service

J

Jack and Lil (d) (6)	H. I. Vorhees	National Newspaper Service
Jack Lockwill's Adventures (d) (6)	Gilbert Patten	NEA Service, Inc.
Jasper Jones in the Movies (d) (3) (cartoon)	Barney	National News Service
Jazzbo Jones (d) (6)	G. W. Walker	Columbia Newspaper Service
Jerry on the Job (d) (6)	Hoban	International Feature Service
Joe's Car (d) (6)	"Vic"	New York World
Jr-Wise Quacks (d) (6)	Williams Holman	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Just Among Girls (d) (2)	Paul Robinson	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Just Humans (d) (2 and 3)	Gene Carr	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Just Kids (d) (w) (2, 5, 6) (7 or 8)	Ad Carter	King Features Syndicate
Just Like a Man (d) (2 or 6)	Knott	International Feature Service

K

Kabibble Kabaret (d) (2)	Hershfield	International Feature Service
Katzenjammer Kids (w) (7 & 8)	Knerr	International Feature Service
Keeping Up With the Joneses (strip) (d) (5-6)	Pop Momand	Associated Newspapers
Kelly Kids, The (w) (7)	Ring	National News Service
Kelly Kids (w) (fp and ½ p)	Rohling	World Color Printing Co.
Kessler Cartoons (d) (2 & 3)	C. Kessler	Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Kid Dugan (d) (6)	Dick Dorgan	Bell Syndicate
Kids in Our Block (d) (5)		Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Kid Sister, The (d) (6)	Lyman Young	King Features Syndicate
Kiddies Can Do It (d) (1)		World Color Printing Co.
Kiddie Kapers (d) (2)	Bill Bailey	Columbia Newspaper Service
Kitty Kay (d) (1)	Nina Wilcox Putnam	Republic Syndicate
Krazy Kat (d-w) (6 & 1, 2, 3, or 6)	Herriman	International Feature Service

(Continued on page 50)

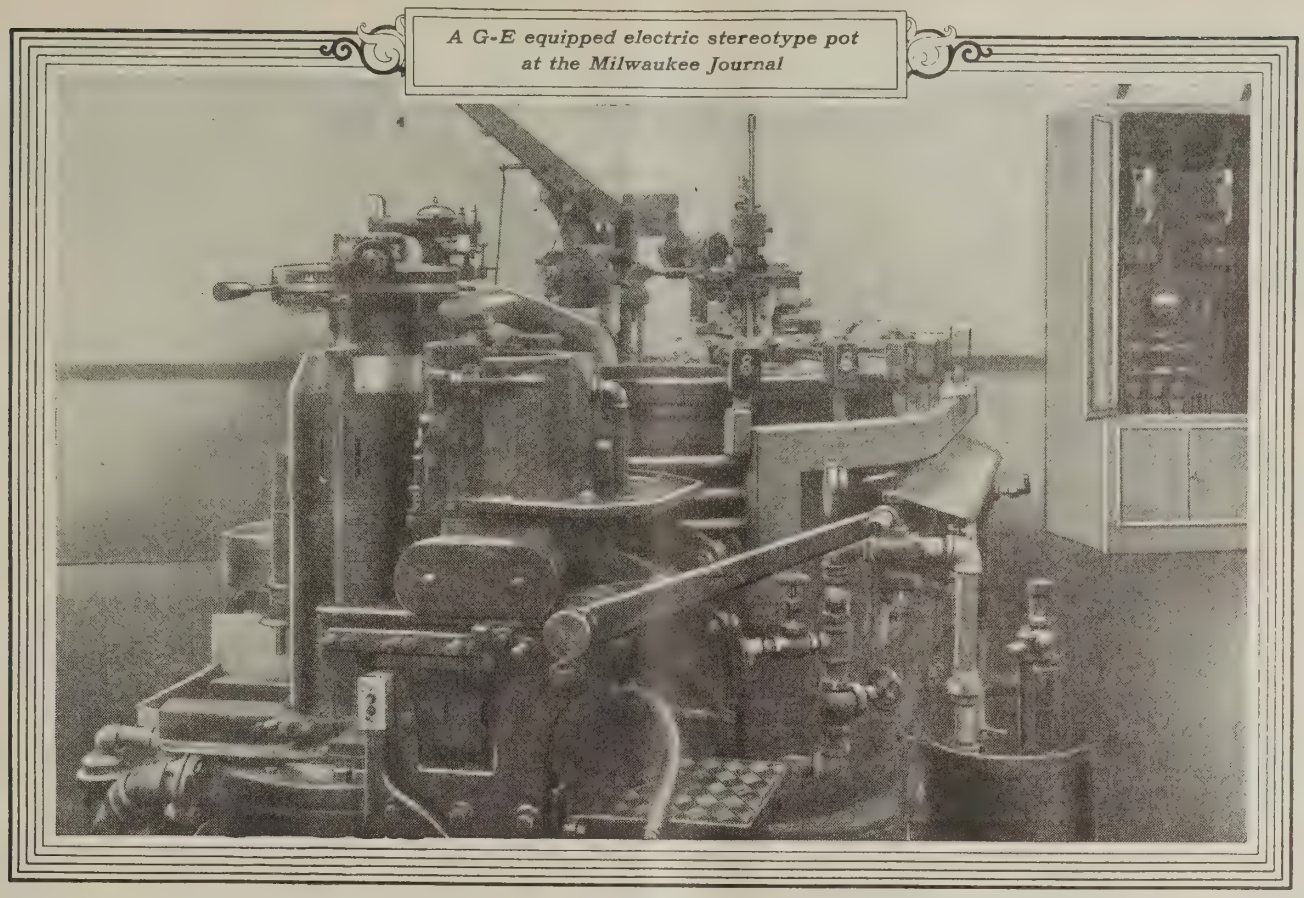
THE DUFFS

are spending their vacation at Lazy Lake.



"The Duffs" is consistently holding reader interest on the comic pages of sixty-five newspapers.

United Feature Syndicate
WORLD BLDG. NEW YORK

The
International Syndicate

Features Since 1899

Baltimore Maryland

A G-E equipped electric stereotype pot at the Milwaukee Journal

What's going on upstairs?

That's what the pressmen said when the beautiful new home of the Milwaukee Journal started operation. Plate after plate coming down from the stereotype room slipped on to the presses with astonishing ease. The uniformity of the plates reduced make-ready to the minimum.

The Milwaukee Journal left no stone unturned to make its new plant a model in the industry. The stereotype room was placed directly in the line of production next to the composing room, and three G-E equipped electrically heated stereotype pots were installed.

The room is cool, clean, and comfortable. Working conditions are so ideal that the output of the operators in the adjoining composing room has been increased. The pots require practically no attention —the precise automatic control insures fastest rate of heating without overheating. The waste in metal has been practically eliminated—and that means large savings in the stereotype room.

Be the first in your community to put electric heat into your stereotype pots. Your nearest G-E office will gladly help you study the problem—with no obligation.

Although electric heat will not supplant all other forms of heat for industrial purposes, there are processes in every industry where it is the ideal heat—the most economical heat—the heat that ultimately will be used.

ULTIMATELY ELECTRIC HEAT
IN EVERY INDUSTRY

570-48

GENERAL ELECTRIC

GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY, SCHENECTADY, N. Y., SALES OFFICES IN PRINCIPAL CITIES

EDITOR & PUBLISHER ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF SYNDICATE FEATURES

(Continued from page 48)

L

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Lady Bountiful (w) (fp) (c)	Gene Carr	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Laffs in the Day's News Dispatches (d) (5)		Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Let the Wedding Bells Ring Out (d) (1, 2, 4)		King Features Syndicate
Let's Go Town (w) (2)	Sparr	Western Newspaper Union
Little Annie Rooney (d) (6)	"Verd"	King Features Syndicate
Little Benny's Notebook (w) (3) (Sunday)	Lee Pape	George Matthew Adams Service
Little Jimmy (d-w) (3 or 6 & or 8)	Swinnerton	International Feature Service
Little Joe (d) (1)	I. Knickerbocker	NEA Service, Inc.
Little Mary Mixup (d) (6)	R. L. Brinkerhoff	New York World Syndicate
Little Napoleon (d) (6)	Bud Counihan	New York World Syndicate
Life of Napoleon Bonaparte (educational strip) (series) (5, 6)	Ida M. Tarbell	King Features Syndicate
Little Pal (d) (6)	"Les"	Associated Newspapers
Little Tommy Tucker (d) (5 & 6)	Herman Thomas	Payne Syndicate, Inc
Little Red Riding Hood (d) (1)		World Color Printing Co.
Looy Dot Dope	Milt Gross	New York World Syndicate

Mc

McBride's Cartoons (d-w) (2, hp, tab)	Clifford McBride	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
McDuffer (d) (1)	Barrie Payne	Publishers Syndicate

M

Mack & Marx (d) (5)		Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Magazine section cover (w) (fp)	Various	Ledger Syndicate
Make-a-Book Series (educational) (d) (6)	Genevieve Silvester	U. P. C. News Service, Inc.
Man in the Brown Derby (S) (fp)	H. T. Webster	New York World Syndicate
Masterpieces of Great Literature (educational strip) (d) (6)		King Features Syndicate
May and June (d) (5 & 6)	H. A. MacGill	Payne Syndicate, Inc.
May and Junie (d) (5)		Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Maze o' Magic (w) (tabloid)		World Color Printing Co.
Mazie the Model (d) (5 or 6)	Larry Whittington	King Features Syndicate
Meet the Misses (w) (fp, hp, tab)	Jack Wilhelm Campbell	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Men Who Made the World (d) (6)	Dr. Eliot Shoring	National Newspaper Service
Merely Margy, an Awfully Sweet Girl (d) (6)	John Held, Jr.	King Features Syndicate
Mickie (w) (1)	Sughroe	Western Newspaper Union
Mickey Mutt (d) (5 & 6)	H. G. Weagant	Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Minute Movies (d) (6)	Ed Wheelan	George Matthew Adams Service
Miss Imformation (d) (1)	Hy Gage	Ledger Syndicate
Modish Mitzi (fashion) (d) (6)	Jay V. Jay	George Matthew Adams Service
Mom'n Pop (d) (6)	Loren Taylor	NEA Service, Inc.
Moon Mullins (d) (6) (w) (fp)	Frank Willard	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
More Sports (w) (3)	H. F. Voorhees	National Newspaper Service
Morris (news) (d) (3)	Wm. C. Morris, George	George Matthew Adams Service
Mother Goose (w) (4)		Columbia Newspaper Service
Mother Goose Dot Puzzle (d) (1)		World Color Printing Co.
Movie strip (d) (fp)	Link	World Color Printing Co.
Moving Picture Funnies (d) (1)	F. W. Clarke	National Newspaper Service
Mr. Dough & Mr. Dubb (w) (7&8)	Opper	International Feature Service
Mr. & Mrs. (w) (fp comics)	Clare Briggs	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Mutt & Jeff (w) (fp)	Bud Fisher	Bell Syndicate

N

Nameless Cartoon Contest (w) (2 & 3)	Ed LeCocq	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Nebs, The (d-w) (6)	Sol Hess	Bell Syndicate
Nize Baby (S) (fp)	Milt Gross	New York World Syndicate
Noah Numbskull (d) (1)	Lee W. Stanley	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Nonsense (d) (1)	Lee W. Stanley	Central Press Assn., Inc.

O

Oliver's Adventures (d) (6)	Gus Mager	McNaught Syndicate
Omar Jr. (d) (1)	Thornton Fisher	Ledger Syndicate
Once Overs (d) (3)	C. D. Batchelor	Post Syndicate
Orphan Annie (d) (5) (w) (fp)	Harold Gray	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Otto's Auto (d) (1)	"Otto"	Ledger Syndicate
Our Boarding House (d & S) (3)	Gene Ahern	NEA Service, Inc.
Outline of Science (d) (6)	Max Hahn	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Over Here—Over There (d) (6)	Ernest Henderson	Register & Tribune Syndicate
Out Our Way (d & S) (3)	J. R. Williams	NEA Service, Inc.

P

Paris Fashions (w) (fp)		International Feature Service
Paris Fashion Sketches (d) (1)	Eve Tingey	Ledger Syndicate
Pa's Son-in-Law (d-w) (6) (fp)	C. H. Wellington	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Peter Rabbit (w) (fp comic)	Harrison Cady	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Petey (d) (5 & 6)	Charles Voight	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Polly and Her Pals (d-w) (6) (7 or 8)	Sterrett	Newspaper Feature Service
Poor Pa (d) (1)	Claude Callan	Publishers Syndicate
Potash & Perlmutter (d) (6)	Montague Glass	Bell Syndicate
Problems of Conduct (d) (1)	R. W. Calkins	National Newspaper Service
Problems of Home Decoration (w) (3)	Annette Bradshaw	Newspaper Feature Service
Puzzle Strip (Who's Brainy Now?) (d) (6)		King Features Syndicate
Puzzlers (d) (6)	A. W. Nugent	New York World Syndicate

R

RadiObituaries (d) (1)	Harry Lawrence	Audio Service
Red Magic section (S)	Staff	New York World Syndicate
Reglar Fellers (d) (6)	Gene Byrnes	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Roger Bean (d) (6)	Chic Jackson	George Matthew Adams Service
Rolls Rosie (d) (1)	Irama Benjamin	Ledger Syndicate
Romantic Cartoons (3w) (3 or 4)		Newspaper Feature Service

S

Salesman Sam (d & S) (6)	C. D. Small	NEA Service, Inc.
Sally's Sallies (d) (1)	R. J. Scott	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Satterfield Weather (d) (½)	R. W. Satterfield	Central Press Assn., Inc.
School Days (d) (3)	Clare V. Dwiggins	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
School Days (w) (fp) (c)	Clare V. Dwiggins	McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Seezem & Squeezem (w) (7)	Oscar Hit	National News Service
Shakespeare's Immortal Dramas (educational strip) (d) (5, 6)		King Features Syndicate

(Continued on page 52)

Save Money on Useful Equipment

Newspaper Presses

8-page Duplex flat-bed Perfecting Press, Angle Bar Type
16-page Scott Web Newspaper Press, Class X, 2 plates wide
20-page Duplex Metropolitan Model Newspaper Press
32-page Hoe Quad Unit Type Press
All complete with motors and stereotype equipment.

Casting Boxes

8 col. Hoe Flat Casting Box
7 col. Hoe Flat Casting Box
4 col. Meyer Both Combination Casting Box and Melting Pot
4 col. Mo. Central Type Foundry Casting Box

Form Tables

Hall New 7 and 8 col. Steel Form Tables, made extra heavy to withstand rough usage, mounted on roller bearing casters —substantial throughout
Smouse Steel Elevating Table
30 x 44 Double Steel Form Table

Stereotype Equipment

4-ton Hoe Metal Furnace with pump
2-ton Goss Metal Furnace with pump
500 lb. Wood Nathan Metal Furnace
800 lb. Blatchford Linotype Metal Furnace
Hoe Type High Power Plate Shaver
Hoe and Goss Mat Rollers
7 and 8 col. Stereotype Chases

Linotypes

Model 3 Mergenthaler Linotype
Model 4 Mergenthaler Linotype
Model 5 Mergenthaler Linotype
Model 8 Mergenthaler Linotype
Model 14 Mergenthaler Linotype
2 Model A Intertypes
Cutler Hammer Electric Melting Pots, 110 volt Alternating Current Linotype Motors
Full Size Magazines for model 5, 8, 9, 14 or 22 Linotypes
4 Split Magazines
Large Selection of Both Composition and Display Mats—Some new Space Bands Magazine Racks

Miscellaneous Machinery

23 x 35 R. Hoe Washington Proof Press
26 x 40 R. Hoe Washington Proof Press
17 x 36 Challenge Roller Proof Press
10 x 24 Wesel Self-inking Newspaper Proof Press
Midwest Saw Trimmers, both pedestal and bench type Wesel Cabinet Saw

Monotype Equipment

Lanston Monotype Sort Casters with and without lead and rule attachments
1—Monotype Double Keyboard
Monotype Air Compressors
Monotype Composition & Display Mats

Furniture

6, 8 and 10 ft. Make-up Tables
Hamilton Double Steel Type AdMan Cabinet, 44 case
Hamilton Sort Cabinet
Hamilton Wooden Single Type Cabinet, style No. 2035
Galley Storage Cabinets—various sizes

Write for current list of Offerings

THOMAS W. HALL COMPANY

N. Y. Sales Office
575 Washington St.,
Walker 7522

After September 15th:— Main Office, and Factory
Stamford, Conn.
Stamford 1833

INTERNATIONAL PAPER CO.

Two Outstanding Newspapers

New York Herald Tribune
and
Chicago Daily News

are now using INTERNATIONAL SUPEROTO
Exclusively, for the printing of their
ROTOGRAVURE SECTION

The New York Herald Tribune has used International Paper Co. Superoto exclusively since January, 1927. The Chicago Daily News has used International Paper Company Superoto exclusively for nearly three years.

INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPANY

Main Sales Office:
100 East 42nd Street, New York City
Branch Sales Offices:
BOSTON CHICAGO PITTSBURGH ATLANTA PHILADELPHIA

EDITOR & PUBLISHER ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF SYNDICATE FEATURES

(Continued from page 50)

SYNDICATE	AUTHOR	FEATURE
"Sketches from Life" (d) (3)	Temple	World Color Printing Co.
Sketches, Paris Fashions (d) (1)	Eve Tingey	Ledger Syndicate
Skippy (w) (7 & 8)	Percy L. Crosby	King Features Syndicate
Slim Jim (w) (6-7)	Armstrong	National News Service
Slim Jim and the Force (w) (fp)	Armstrong	World Color Printing Co.
Small House Plan (w) (4)	Various	Audio Service
S'Matter Pop (d-w) (6, fp)	C. M. Payne	Bell Syndicate
Smitty (d) (5) (w) (fp)	Walter Berndt	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Somebody's Stenog (d-w) (1 fp)	A. E. Hayward	Ledger Syndicate
Snoodles (d) (6)	Cy Hungerford	George Matthew Adams Service
Sonnysayings (d) (1)	Fanny V. Corry	Ledger Syndicate
Sords Points (d) (2)	John Sords	Central Press Assn.
Splinters (d) (1)	Farr	Columbia Newspaper Service
Spark Plug (d) (6)	Billy De Beck	King Features Syndicate
Squire Edgegate (d) (6)	P. A. Schall	National News Service
Squire of Smithville (d) (1)	Nissley	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Star Adcraft Service (m) (mat service)	Harry S. Bressler	Star Adcraft Service
Story of Aviation (d) (6)	Doris E. Drawbridge, Ralph W. Maxwell	Superior Feature Service
Story of Thomas Edison (educational strip) (series) (5, 6)	Arthur J. Palmer	King Features Syndicate
Story of Thomas Jefferson (educational strip) (series) (5, 6)	W. E. Curtis	King Features Syndicate
Story of Philosophy (educational strip) (series) (5, 6)	Will Durant	King Features Syndicate
Story of Superstitions (educational strip) (series) (5, 6)	Sir J. Frazer	King Features Syndicate
Striebel Weekly (w) (5 and 3)	John H. Striebel	Associated Editors, Inc.
Sunday Guest (w) (2)	Edgar A. Guest	George Matthew Adams Service
Sunday tabloid Magazine (8)	Staff	New York World Syndicate
Susie Sunshine (d) (6)	Earl Hurd	King Features Syndicate
Sykes' Cartoons (d) (3)	Charles Henry Sykes	Ledger Syndicate
Sympathetic Sue (d) (5)		Graphic Syndicate, Inc.

T

Tabloid Comics (d) (1)	Various	Keystone Feature Service
Telling Tommy (d) (6)	Paul Pim	King Features Syndicate
Tepee Tales (d)	El Comancho	Republic Syndicate
Texas Slim (w) (fp)	Ferd Johnson	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Then the Fun Began (d) (2)	Faber	International Feature Service
Thimble Theatre (d) (2) (w) (6)	Segar	King Features Syndicate
Those Folks (w) (7)	Ken Kling	National News Service
Tillie the Toiler (d) (6) (w) (7&8)	Russ Westover	King Features Syndicate
Tiny (d) (6)	Charles McManus	King Features Syndicate
"Three Little Pigs" (d) (2)		World Color Printing Co.
Today's Fashions (2w) (¼)	Vera Winston	Newspaper Feature Service
Today in History (d) (1)	Ralph W. Maxwell	Superior Feature Service
Today in Storyland (w) (fp)		National News Service
Toonerville Folks (fp)	Fontaine Fox	Bell Syndicate
Toots & Casper (d) (6) (w) (7&8)	J. E. Murphy	King Features Syndicate
Topical Cartoon (d) (3)	Don Wotton	NEA Service, Inc.
Two Orphans, The (d) (6)	Zere	King Features Syndicate

U

Uncle Wiggily's Adventures (w) (fp, tab) (c)	Howard Garis-Lang	McClure Newspaper Service
Us Boys (d) (6)	McNamara	King Features Syndicate

V

Vignettes of Life (w) (hf or fp)	Frank Godwin	Ledger Syndicate

W

The War Ten Years Ago (d) (6)	Yardley & Bennett	Ledger Syndicate
Washington Tubbs II (d&S) (6)	Roy Crane	NEA Service, Inc.
Webster Cartoons (d) (3)	H. T. Webster	New York World Syndicate
Who's Brainy Now? (puzzle strip) (d) (6)		King Features Syndicate
Willie Willis (d) (1)	Robert Quillen	Publishers Syndicate
Winnie Winkle (d) (5) (w) (fp)	M. M. Branner	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Why They Never Married (d) (2)	Billy Hayes	Bell Syndicate

Y

You Said It, Marceline (d) (6)	Marceline D'Alroy	Premier Syndicate
Yelps and Wags (d) (1)	Hank Swartz	Bell Syndicate

SPORTS PAGE FEATURES

(Including Sports Page Cartoons and Art)

A

NAME OF FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
All-Year Sports (d) (½)	Frank Leonard	George Matthew Adams Service
Amateur Sports and Physical Training (w)	Lawson Robertson	King Features Syndicate
Around the Memoir Table (d) (½)	Joseph Kaye	King Features Syndicate
As Edgren Sees It (3,w) (1-2) (ill)	Robert Edgren	Bell Syndicate

B

Baseball (d-w) (1)	Irving Vaughn	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Baseball (2w)	Babe Ruth	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Baseball News and Dope (w)	Frederick J. Lieb	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Basketball (series) (2)		International Syndicate
Big World of Little Things (w) (1)	Alfred O. Ehedd	Science Service
Believe it or Not (d) (3)	R. L. Ripley	Associated Newspapers
Bunker's Golf (w) (1) (ill)	J. P. Glass	Republic Syndicate

C

Campus Comments (w)	Knute Rockne	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Cartoons (Sport) (d) (5)	Walter Hoban	Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Cartoons (Sport & Article)	Burris Jenkins	New York World Syndicate
Cartoon (Sport & Article) (w) (3)	Hype Igoe	New York World Syndicate
Cartoon (Sport) (w) (4)	I. Knickerbocker	NEA Service, Inc.
Cartoon & Text (d) (3 or 2) (ill) (¼)	Feg Murray	Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Cartoons (Sport) (d) (3)	Joe Archibald	McClure Newspaper Syndicate

(Continued on page 53)

The Electrical Appliance field in ILLINOIS——

Illinois is one of the greatest markets for electrical appliances in the country. 1,000,000 homes use electricity. Since Illinois has 1,205,000 families, the figures show that nearly every home is electrically equipped and that practically every family is a potential buyer of electrical equipment.

There are over 1243 retail stores in Illinois who specialize in the sale of electrical appliances. An advertising campaign in the local newspapers will not only interest these 1,205,000 families in your product, but will at the same time enlist the aid of these 1243 electrical dealers who favor the advertised brand.

What other more efficient and more economical sales effort can you apply to reach the great buying power of Illinois than thru these local newspapers listed below if you are a manufacturer of electrical equipment. And, what state offers you a better market than Illinois for electrical goods.

If you want more facts on Illinois' buying power, write to these newspapers.

		Circulation	Rates for 2,500 Lines	Rates for 10,000 Lines
Alton Telegraph	(E)	11,035	.05	.05
†Aurora Beacon-News	(E)	19,440	.07	.07
Belleville Advocate	(E)	6,840	.03	.03
†Chicago Daily Journal	(E)	125,007	.26	.24
Freeport Journal-Standard	(E)	9,791	.05	.05
†Joliet Herald News	(E)	20,107	.07	.07
†Matton Journal Gazette	(E)	5,857	.04	.04
Moline Dispatch	(E)	12,292	.05	.05
Monmouth Daily Review Atlas	(E)	5,574	.035	.035
Peoria Star (S) 23,872	(E)	31,103	.085	.07
Waukegan Daily Sun	(E)	5,666	.035	.035

A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1927.
†Government Statement, March 31, 1927.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF SYNDICATE FEATURES

(Continued from page 52)

NAME OF FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
Cartoons (Sport)	R. L. Ripley	Associated Newspapers
College Sports (w) (¾)	Bob Matherns	NEA Service, Inc.
Cross Word Puzzles	Various	Republic Syndicate
D
Down the Line (d) (1)	W. O. McGeehan	Herald Tribune
E
Edson's Sport Cartoons (d) (⅜)		Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Evans Says (d) (1)	Billy Evans	NEA Service, Inc.
F
Fiction	Various	Thompson Feature Service
Following the Babe (serial)	Lou Gehrig	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Football (3w)	Tad Jones	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Football (3w)	Knute Rockne	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Football (3w)	Glenn S. Warner	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Football Benefits (d) (½)	Football Captains	Devil Dog Syndicate
Football Series (3w) (½)	Various	National Newspaper Service
Football Training Talks (series)	B. A. Hoban	International Syndicate
Foxy Phann (d) (1) (Comic)	W. Laufer	NEA Service, Inc.
Funny Reviews of the Baseball News (w)	Nick Altrock	Christy Walsh Syndicate
G
Golf Articles (w) (1) (ill)	J. P. Glass	Republic Syndicate
Golf (2w)	Bobby Jones	Bell Syndicate
Golf (2w)	Francis Ouimet	Bell Syndicate
Golf (d-w) (1)	Harland Rohm	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Golf (w)	Gene Sarazen	Bell Syndicate
Golf Cartoon (w) (4)	"Vic"	New York World Syndicate
Golf as Champions Play it (d)	Leading Players	Associated Editors, Inc.
Golf Column (humorous) (w) (1)	Walter Trumbull	Post Syndicate
Golf Comics (d)	Sughroe	Western Newspaper Union
H
Horsemanship (w)	Capt. F. S. Jacobs	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Horse Race Service (d) (varying)	J. B. Snodgrass	Post Syndicate
Hughes' Sport Column (3-w) (1)		Bell Syndicate
I
Igoe's Articles	Hype Igoe	New York World Syndicate
In the Rough (d) (6)		Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate
Inside Golf (d) (⅕) (illus)	Chester Horton	National Newspaper Service
Indoor Sports (d) (4)	T. D. Dorgan (Tad)	International Feature Service
J
Jones Articles (2-w) (1)	Bobby Jones	Bell Syndicate
L
Life of Jno. L. Sullivan (d-w)	Joe Dorney	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Listening Post (d) (1)	Walter Trumbull	Post Syndicate
Live Sport News Features (d)		Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
M
Motion Pictures Stories	Various	Thompson Feature Service
N
Nut Cracker (d) (⅛)	Jimmy Powers	NEA Service, Inc.
O
Off the Field with Big League Pilots (3w) (2)	Henry P. Edwards	United Features Syndicate
Ouimet's Articles (2-w) (¾)	Francis Ouimet	Bell Syndicate
P
Par Chart (w) (⅛) (ill.)	Chester Horton	National Newspaper Service
Pennant Races (w)	John J. McGraw	Christy Walsh Syndicate
Pictorial Golf (2-w) (2)	H. B. Martin	Bell Syndicate
R
Referee, The (d) (⅛)	Billy Evans	NEA Service, Inc.
S
Sarazen's Article (w) (¾)	Gene Sarazen	Bell Syndicate
Say So of Holleran Yell (w) (2)	Westbrook Pegler	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Serials (d)	Various	Thompson Feature Service
Soccer Science (series) (2)		International Syndicate
Sport Heroes (d) (2-col. drawing)	W. Laufer	NEA Service, Inc.
Sporting Articles (d) (¾)	Frank G. Menke	King Features Syndicate
Sporting Page Variety (d) (⅛)		Western Newspaper Union
Sportfolio (d) (⅛)	Wm. Nelson Taft	Ledger Syndicate
Sportlight (d) (¾)	Grantland Rice	Herald Tribune
Sports (w) (fp)	Various	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Sports Comment (w) (½)	"Sheridan"	Editor's Copy
Sport Ritticisms (d) (¼)	Bill Ritt	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Sport Done Brown (d) (¾)	Norman E. Brown	Central Press Assn., Inc.
Sharkey Articles	Jack Sharkey	Famous Features Syndicate
Sports (d-w) (1)	Walter Eckersall	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Sports Letter (w) (¾)	James J. Corbett	Newspaper Feature Service
Sullivan's Sport Whirl (d) (1)	Ed Sullivan	Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
T
Tee, Fairway and Green (3 t.a.w.) (½) illus.)	"Chick" Evans	National Newspaper Service
Tennis (w) (½) (ill)	Helen Wills	United Feature Syndicate
Tennis (2w)	Wm. T. Tilden, 2nd	Christy Walsh Syndicate
That Little Game (d) (3)	Link	World Color Printing Co.
Them Were The Days (d) (6)	Wood Cowan	U. P. C. News Services, Inc.
Trumbull's Sports Letter (d) (1)	Walter Trumbull	Post Syndicate
Turf (dw) (½)	French Lane	Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate
Tunney, Signed Stories by (3w)	Gene Tunney	King Features Syndicate
Today in Sport (d) (⅓)	Jack Kofoed	Post Syndicate
Today in Sport History (d) (1)	R. W. Maxwell	Superior Feature Service
Trap Gun and Rod (w) (1)	Sandy Griswold	National Newspaper Service
W
Wayside Tee (w) (½)	Grantland Rice	Herald Tribune Syndicate
Wearin' Out the Green (w) (1)	Walter Trumbull	Post Syndicate
Women's Athletics (d) (⅛) (ill)	Mary Caldwell	National Newspaper Service the fellow who used to buy the city hall

from engaging strangers is now purchasing one paper buys to "cover" metropolitan markets and though it does keep money in circulation
it puts circulation
in a false light—
The Detroit Times
delivers only to part of the population.

DIRECTORY OF SYNDICATE WRITERS AND ARTISTS

A

Adams, Franklin P., New York World Syndicate.
Adams, George Matthew, George Matthew Adams Service.
Ade, George, Bell Syndicate.
Ahearn, Gene, NEA Service.
Alexander, Western Newspaper Union.
Alger, Edwin, Bell Syndicate.
Allen, Mrs. Harland H., Allen Feature Service.
Alley, J. P., Bell Syndicate.
Altrock, Nick, Christy Walsh Syndicate.
Anderson, John, Post Syndicate.
Archibald, Joe, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Armour, King Features Syndicate.
Armstrong, World Color Printing Company.
Austin, Anne, NEA Service, Inc.

B

Babson, Roger W., Publishers Financial Bureau.
Bargeit, Louise, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Baker, Ray Stannard, D. P. Syndicate.
Bakrak, Chicago Tribune Newspaper Syndicate.
Bailey, Bill, Columbia Newspaper Service.
Ball, W. S., International Syndicate.
Ballinger, William J., U. P. C. News Service, Inc.
Ballou, Dr. Frank W., Standard Editorial Service.
Barnes, Julius H., King Editors' Features.
Barbour, Mildred, Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
Bart Belle, Ledger Syndicate.
Barney, National News Service.
Barton, Bruce, Bell Syndicate.
Barton, Bruce, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Barton, C. H., King Editors' Features.
Barton, Dr. James W., Bell Syndicate.
Barton, Olive Roberts, NEA Service, Inc.
Barton, Prof. S. G., Keystone Feature Service.
Barton, Wanda, Newspaper Feature Service.
Batchelor, C. D., Post Syndicate.
Batchelor, Hazel Deyo, Ledger Syndicate.
Batford, Ben, United Features Syndicate.
Beck, Frank, Bell Syndicate.
Beckley, Zoe, Famous Features Syndicate.
Bedwell, Bettina, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Beecher, Carolyn, Associated Newspapers.
Beekman, Mrs. Cornelius, Premier Syndicate.
Beekman, Mrs., International Feature Service.
Bell, Dr. Alvin E., Central Press Assn.
Belmont, Marie, International Feature Service.
Bennett, Ledger Syndicate.
Berg, E. A., National Newspaper Service.
Bergey, E. K., Ledger Syndicate.
Benjamin, Irma, Ledger Syndicate.
Berndt, Walter, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Berry, C. C., Editors Copy.
Bessey, Phil. NEA Service.
Bevans, Mrs. Gladys, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Bingham, George, George Matthew Adams Services.
Bisch, Louis E., Premier Syndicate.
Black, Winifred, Newspaper Feature Service.
Blake, Doris, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Blake, John, Bell Syndicate.
Blake, Mary, Bell Syndicate.
Blanchard, Julia, NEA Service, Inc.
Blosser, Merrill, NEA Service, Inc.
Bonner, Mary Graham, Western Newspaper Union.
Bostwick, Sals, King Features Syndicate.
Bottomley, Julia, Western Newspaper Union.
Bowers, Joe, Ledger Syndicate.
Boyd, Julia, McNaught Syndicate.
Boys, (Mrs.) Florence R., Woman's Page.
Brady, Dr. William, National Newspaper Service.
Bradshaw, Annette, Newspaper Feature Service.
Brainerd, Betty, Associated Newspapers.
Branner, M. M., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Braucher, W. M., NEA Service, Inc.
Bressler, Harry S., Graphic Syndicate.
Briggs, Clare, Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Brinkerhoff, R. L., New York World.
Brinkley, Nell, International Feature Service.
Brobeck, Florence, Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Brokaw, NEA Service, Inc.
Bromley, Al., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Bronner, Milton. NEA Service, Inc.
Brookman, Laura Lou, Register & Tribune Syndicate.
Brown, Norman E., Central Press Assn., Inc.
Bruce, H. Addington, Ledger Syndicate.
Burgess, Thornton, Herald Tribune Syndicate and Associated Newspapers.
Bushmiller, Ernie, New York World Syndicate.
Bushnell, Judy, United Feature Syndicate.
Butcher, Fanny, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Butman, Carl H., Washington Radio News Service.
Byrnes, Gene, Herald Tribune Syndicate.

C

Cadman, Dr. S. Parkes, Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Cady, Harrison, Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Cairns, Dr. Alexander, King Features Syndicate.
Caldwell, Mary, National Newspaper Service.
Calhoun, Dr. John Scott, National Newspaper Service.
Calkins, R. W., National Newspaper Service.
Callahan, Jack, King Features Syndicate.
Callan, Claude, Publishers Syndicate.
Cameron, Ruth, George Matthew Adams Service.
Campbell, Mrs. Lilian, Central Press Assn., Inc.
Campbell, Murry, Register and Tribune Syndicate.
Cargill, Jess, Central Press Assn., Inc.
Carlyle, John, Associated Newspapers.
Carmody, F. J., Ullman Feature Service.
Carr, Gene, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Carroll, Raymond G., Post Syndicate.
Carter, Ad, King Features Syndicate.
Chapin, A. B., Ledger Syndicate.
Chapman, Arthur, Bell Syndicate.
Charters, Dr. W. W., King Editors' Features.
Clark, Florenz, Associated Editors, Inc.
Clarke, F. W., National Newspaper Service.
Clarke, Thomas A., Western Newspaper Union.
Clift, Betty, Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Clough, Albert L., International Syndicate.
Cobb, Irvin, Bell Syndicate, and McNaught Syndicate.
Cochran, Hal, NEA Service, Inc.
Coffman, Ramon, Publishers Syndicate.
Cohn, Gene, NEA Service, Inc.
Collins, Harry, King Editors' Features.
Connolly, Sabina, King Features Syndicate.
Conselman, Bill, Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
Cook, Ted, King Features Syndicate.
Copeland, Royal S., Newspaper Feature Syndicate.
Corbett, James J., Newspaper Feature Service.
Corey, Herbert, Associated Newspapers.
Correll, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Cory, David, George Matthew Adams Services.
Cory, Fanny V., Ledger Syndicate.
Cosden, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Couch, Ralph F., Couch Publishing Company.
Counihan, Bud, New York World Syndicate.
Cousins, Wilfred, King Features Syndicate.
Cowan, Wood, U. P. C. News Services, Inc.
Crane, Dr. Frank, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Crane, Roy, NEA Service, Inc.
Crosby, Percy L., King Features Syndicate.
Curtis, W. E., King Features Syndicate.

D

Dague, Mary, NEA Service, Inc.
D'Alroy, Marceline, Premier Syndicate.
Daniels, Josephus, National Newspaper Service.
Dare, Frances Associated Newspapers.
Darling, J. N., Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Darling, Velva, King Features Syndicate.
Davenport, Walter, Bell Syndicate.
Davis, Clare Ogden, McNaught Syndicate.
Davis, Emily C., Science Service.
Davis, Maxine, Capital News Service.
Davis, Robert H., Bell Syndicate.
Davis, Watson, Science Service.
Dean, Dr. Arthur, National Newspaper Service.
Deane, Mme. Hall, Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
De Beck, Billy, King Features Syndicate.
de Campi, Anita. Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Demaree, Al, Publishers Syndicate.
Dempsey, Jack, King Features Syndicate.
De Pyster, Katherine, Premier Syndicate.
Decie, Helen, Ledger Syndicate.
Dib, King Features Syndicate.
Diamond, Bushnell, Newspaper Feature Service.
Dickey, Robert L., Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
Dickson, Bob, Register & Tribune Syndicate.
Dirks, R., New York World Syndicate.
Dix, Dorothy, Ledger Syndicate.
Dixon, Grant, Bell Syndicate.
Donnelly, Antoinette, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Dorgan, Dick, Bell Syndicate.
Dorgan, T. A., ("Tad"), International Feature Service.
Dorney, Joe, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Douglas, Associated Newspapers.
Douglas, Cozette, Newspaper Feature Service.
Drawbridge, Doris E., Graphic Syndicate.
Duart, Malcolm, Eugene MacLean Features.
Dunn, Alan, Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
Durant, Will, King Features Syndicate and United Feature Syndicate.
Dutcher, Rodney, NEA Service, Inc.
Dwiggins, C. V., McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

E

Eckersall, Walter, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Ed, Carl, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Eddington, Jane, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Edgren, Robert, Bell Syndicate.
Edwards, Henry P., United Feature Syndicate.
Edwina, George Matthew Adams Services.
Eldred, Myrtle Meyer, Register & Tribune Syndicate.
Ellis, Frank, Register & Tribune Syndicate.
Elliston, George, Associated Newspapers.
Emery, Helen M., Associated Newspapers.
Esty, Lucien, Bell Syndicate.
Evans, Billy, NEA Service.
Evans, "Chick," National Newspaper Syndicate.
Evans, Dr. W. A., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.

F

Faber, International Feature Service.
Farr, Jack, Columbia Newspaper Service.
Farrell, Johnny, King Features Syndicate.
Felix, Edgar, D. P. Syndicate.
Ferguson, Wynne, Bell Syndicate.
Fishbein, Dr. Morris, NEA Service, Inc.
Fisher, Bud, Bell Syndicate.
Fisher, Thornton, Ledger Syndicate.
Fister, Alan S., Ledger Syndicate.
Flynn, John T., U. P. C. News Services, Inc.
Forbes, B. C., Premier Syndicate.
Forbes, Edna Kent, George Matthew Adams Services.
Foster, Alan S., Ledger Syndicate.
Frank, Glenn, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Frazer, Sir J., King Features Syndicate.
Frise, James, Graphic Syndicate.
Fry, C. V., Register & Tribune Syndicate.
Fox, Fontaine, Bell Syndicate.
Fulkerson, Roe, McNaught Syndicate and Central Press Assn.

G

Gage, Hy, Ledger Syndicate.
Gallico, A. T., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Gar, Ledger Syndicate.
Gardner, Susan, Register & Tribune Syndicate.
Garrison, Adele, Newspaper Feature Service.
Gehrig, Lou, Christy Walsh Syndicate.
George, Lloyd, United Feature Syndicate.
Gettier, C. W., Bell Syndicate.
Gibbs, Winifred S., McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Gibson, Idah McGlone, National Newspaper Service and Central Press Assn., Inc.
Gibson, Walter B., Ledger Syndicate.
Gilbert, Clinton W., Post Syndicate.
Gilroy, Dr. W. E., NEA Service, Inc.
Glass, Dudley, Premier Syndicate.
Glass, Montague, Bell Syndicate.
Glyn, Elinor, King Features Syndicate.
Godwin, Frank, Ledger Syndicate.
Goldberg, R. L., McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Gould, Chester, King Features Syndicate.
Gray, Lady Beatrice, Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Gray, Harold, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Gray, Laurel, National Newspaper Service.
Gregory, Rev. Thomas. Newspaper Feature Service.
Grey, Nita, International Syndicate.
Griswold, Sandy, National Newspaper Service.
Gross, Milt, New York World Syndicate.
Guest, Edgar A., George Matthew Adams Services.
Gunn, Eleanor, Metropolitan Newspaper Service.

H

Haenigsen, New York World Syndicate.
Halasz, George, Continental Features.
Hall, Quin, King Features Syndicate.
Hammond, Percy, Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Hamilton, Lyle, Eugene MacLean Features.
Hanny, W., International Syndicate.
Hansen, Harry, New York World Syndicate.
Hapgood, Norman, United Feature Syndicate.
Hart, J. F., Bell Syndicate.

(Continued on page 55)

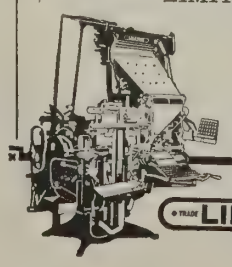
Largest Circulation and Largest Volume of Advertising of any Daily west of the Missouri river.

LOS ANGELES
EVENING HERALD
REPRESENTATIVES
Chicago, JOHN H. LEDERER, 910 Hearst Bldg.
San Francisco, A. J. NORRIS HILL, 610 Hearst Bldg.
New York, HERBERT W. MOLONEY, 604 Times Bldg.

ADVERTISERS who understand the Iowa situation know from experience that the consumers' market there cannot be properly sold without the use of newspapers in these twenty-one key cities.

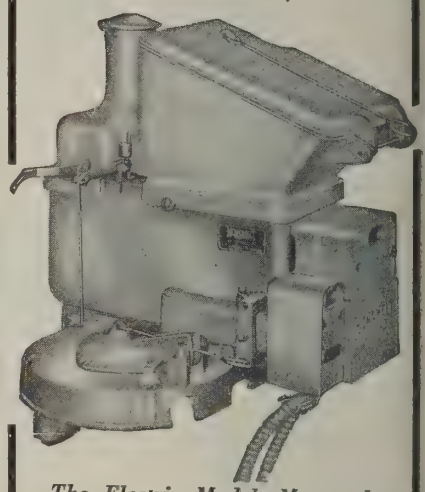
IOWA DAILY PRESS ASS'N
DAVENPORT, IOWA.



Ames Tribune	Iowa City Press Citizen
Boone News-Republican	Keokuk Gate City
Burlington Gazette	Marshalltown Times-Republican
Burlington Hawk-Eye	Mason City Globe-Gazette & Times
Cedar Rapids Gazette	Muscatine Journal & News-Tribune
Centerville Iowegian & Citizen	Oelwein Register
Council Bluffs Nonpareil	Oskaloosa Herald
Davenport Democrat & Leader	Ottumwa Courier
Davenport Times	Sioux City Journal
Dubuque Telegraph-Herald	Sioux City Tribune
Fort Dodge Messenger & Chronicle	Washington Journal
Fort Madison Democrat	Waterloo Courier
	Waterloo Tribune

From the Linotype Mailbag

"The Satisfaction of Using Linotypes"



"We wish to express to you our appreciation of the service we received in connection with the erection and installation of our new Model 14. Your Mr. Poole gave us quick and efficient service and we were also given valuable assistance by your Mr. Weir. Service of this nature contributes not a little to the satisfaction of using Linotypes."

TRIBUNE AND TELEGRAPH LIMITED
Welland, Ont.

LINOTYPE

Double Melting is OBSOLETE

The Electric Model—Monomelt System

The MONOMELT SYSTEM is the modern idea—one melting only

Why tolerate the heavy loss of type metal in the unnecessary melting and pigging of metal? The Monomelt System does away with the metal furnace and all its costly waste of time, labor and type metal. Monomelt does all the work in preparing perfect metal for the slug. It melts, cleans, feeds and guards the temperature of the metal automatically. Plants that use the Monomelt System never go back to the metal furnace.

EXHIBITOR
GRAPHIC ARTS EXPOSITION
New York Sept. 5-17, 1927

The Monomelt Co.
4541 Ravenswood Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

Let us send you full particulars. Mail the coupon below.

Please Explain How the Mono-Melting System, if installed in our Plant, would ☐ Increase production 10%.

☐ Eliminate hot and cold metal.
☐ Cut metal drossage 75%.
☐ Save time, labor and floor space.
☐ Clean and purify our type metal.
☐ Prevent sunken and defective letters.
☐ Insure clearer and sharper type faces.
☐ Eliminate our re-melting furnace.
☐ Produce solid slugs.

We have the following machines:

No. of Machines	Make	No. With Gas Pots	No. With Electric Pots
	LINOTYPE
	INTERTYPE
	INOGRAPH

Ludlows Elrods Monotypes

Firm Name .....
Street No. .....
City and State .....
Signed by .....
Title .....

(Continued from page 54)

Hart, Martha, Register & Tribune Syndicate.
Harris, Mildred, Famous Features Syndicate.
Haskin, Frederic J., Haskin Information Bureau.
Hatton, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold, National Newspaper Service.
Hayes, Billy, Bell Syndicate.
Hays, Ethel, NEA Service, Inc.
Hayward, A. E., Ledger Syndicate.
Heinl, Robert D., Heinl Radio News Syndicate.
Held, John, International Feature Service.
Hellinger, Mark, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Henderson, Ernest, Register & Tribune Syndicate.
Henderson, Dr. J. Lowell, Bell Syndicate.
Hendrix, Columbia Newspaper Service.
Herold, Don, Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Herring, Rev. Hubert C., McNaught Syndicate.
Hershfield, Harry, International Feature Service.
Herzog, Dorothy, Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Hess, Sol, Bell Syndicate.
Hirsch, Jennie, Ledger Syndicate.
Hitt, Oscar, National News Service.
Hoban, International Feature Service.
Hoban, B. A., International Syndicate.
Hoban, Walter, Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Hollander, Herbert S., Ullman Feature Service.
Holman, Williams, Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Hoppman, Ray, Columbia Newspaper Service.
Hornaday, Wm. T., McNaught Syndicate.
Horton, Chester, National Newspaper Syndicate.
Horne, Philip, United Feature Syndicate.
Howe, Ed, Bell Syndicate.
Hoyt, Harlowe, Publishers Syndicate.
Hubbard, Kin. National Newspaper Service.
Hucke, Agnes, Ledger Syndicate.
Hughes, Ed, Bell Syndicate.
Hughes, Rupert, Bell Syndicate.
Hughes, B. W., Editors Copy.
Hungerford, Cy, George Matthews Adams Services.
Hurd, Earl, King Features Syndicate.
Hurst, Fannie, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Hurst, Vida, United Feature Syndicate.
Hill, W. E., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.

I

Ibanez, V. Blasco, United Feature Syndicate.
Igoe, Hype, New York World Syndicate.
Innes-Taylor, R., Star Newspaper Service.

J

Jackson, "Chick," George Matthew Adams Services.
Jackson, Dr. Josephine A., George Matthew Adams Services.
Jacobs, Capt. F. S., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Jay, Jay V., George Matthew Adams Services.
Jenkins, Burris, New York World.
Jeritza, Mme., Premier Syndicate.
Johns, John, Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Johnson, Ferd, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Johnson, Gladys E., George Matthew Adams Services.
Johnson, Nunally, Post Syndicate.
Johnstone, W. B., New York World Syndicate.
Jones, Bobby, Bell Syndicate.
Jones, Sally, Eugene MacLean Features.
Jones, Tad, Christy Walsh Syndicate.
Jordan, Anne. Newspapers Feature Service.
Jordan, Mrs. C. B., Ledger Syndicate.

K

Kahles, C. W., Ledger Syndicate.
Kaji, Elsa, International Syndicate.
Kawin, Dr. Ethel, National Newspaper Service.
Kaye, Joseph, King Features Syndicate.
Keel, Ralph Walles, Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Keeler, R. W., D. D., Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Keenan, Pete, International Syndicate.
Keep, Oliver, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Kelly, Fred. C., Central Press Assn.
Kemble, E. W., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Kemble, Genevieve, Newspaper Feature Service.
Kessler, C., Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Ketchum, P. H., Register & Tribune Syndicate.
Ketten, Maurice, New York World Syndicate.
Kettner, M. G., Western Newspaper Union.
Keys, J. L., Keyes Religious News Service.
Kift, Jane Leslie, Ledger Syndicate.
Killick, William, McNaught Syndicate.
King, Fay, Payne Syndicate, Inc.
King, Frank, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Kirby, Rollin, New York World Syndicate.
Kirkman, Laura A., George Matthew Adams Services.
Kitchen, K. K., New York World Syndicate.
Klein, Israel, NEA Service, Inc.
Kling, Ken, National News Service.
Knerr, International Feature Service.
Knickerbocker, I., NEA Service.
Knott, International Feature Service.
Kofoed, Jack, Post Syndicate.
Kor, U. P. C. News Services, Inc.
Korman, Murray, Universal Feature Service.
Knox, John. National Newspaper Service.

L

La Ganke, Florence, Publishers Syndicate.
Lait, Jack, King Features Syndicate.
Lane, Sir Arbuthnot, D. P. Syndicate.
Lane, French, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Lardner, Ring, Bell Syndicate.
LaSalle, Editors Syndicate.
Laufer, W., NEA Service.
Laurie, Annie, Newspaper Feature Service.
Lawrence, Harry. Audio Service.
Leacock, Stephen, Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
LeCocq, Ed., Register & Tribune Syndicate.
Lecraw, E., National Feature Service.
Lee, Patricia, Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Lee, Mrs. Virginia, Central Press Assn.
Leeds, Lois, Ledger Syndicate.
Leo, Associated Newspapers.
Leonard, Frank, George Matthew Adams Services.
Lescarboura. Austin C., International Syndicate.
Lessing, Bruno, King Features Syndicate.
Lieb, Frederick J., Christy Walsh Syndicate.
Link, World Color Printing Company.
Link, Bert, National News Service.
Lisle, Ann, International Feature Service and King Features Syndicate.
Little, R. H., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Locher, Fred, New York World Syndicate.
London, Joan, National Newspaper Service.
"Louisa," Editors Copy.
Lowe, Corinne. Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Lowell, Lucy, International Feature Service.
Lupescu, Madame, Famous Features Syndicate.

M

MacDonald, Harrison C., Publishers Syndicate.
MacGill, H. A., Payne Syndicate, Inc.
McBride, Clifford, Central Press Assn., Inc.
McBride, Clifford, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
McCandlish, Edward. Bell Syndicate.
McCann, Rebecca, George Matthew Adams Services.
McCoy, Dr. Frank, McCoy Health Service.
McClure, Darrell, Premier Syndicate.
McCutcheon, Jno. T., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
McGeehan, W. O., Herald Tribune Syndicate.
McGraw, John J., Christy Walsh Syndicate.
McIntyre, O. O., McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
McKendrick, Rev. James, Keystone Feature Service.
McManus, Charles, King Features Syndicate.
McManus, George, King Features Syndicate.
McNamara, King Features Syndicate.
McNamara, Ray, Christy Walsh Syndicate.
Mabie, Litta, Ledger Syndicate.
Maier, Carl, Central Press Assn., Inc.
Mager, Gus, McNaught Syndicate.
Manning, Temple, Newspaper Feature Service.
Mansfield, J. Carroll, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Mantle, Burns, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Marshall, Mary, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Marlowe, Elsie, Newspaper Feature Service and King Features Syndicate.
Marquis, Don, King Features Syndicate.
Martin, Edgar, NEA Service.

(Continued on page 56)

Our Customers Write Our Ads

Jackson, Miss., Daily News Says—

"We have never had a serious delay or accident of any kind in five years' operation of our 24-page DUPLEX TUBULAR press."

DUPLEX PRESSES

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS

Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

The largest evening paper circulation in Baltimore

151,059
May, net paid

May, 1927, sets a new circulation record for daily papers in Baltimore.

The NEWS, with its May net paid circulation of 151,059, enjoys a margin of 24,141 copies over that of the Evening Sun, its nearest competitor.

You reach more of Baltimore through the

BALTIMORE NEWS

Largest circulation of any daily paper in the South

CIRCULATION, PLUS READER CONFIDENCE, PLUS DEALER CONFIDENCE

There's an ideal combination for an evening newspaper.

The Binghamton, N. Y., Press has all of the above qualities and many more.

"An Institution Devoted To The Service Of Its Community." That's the slogan which appears on all local promotional advertising, and that's the ideal which has been faithfully followed during the past 22 years.

It is upon this rock that The Binghamton Press has built a carrier-delivered coverage of better than 97% in its home market, and it is upon this rock that the average retailer is willing to accept and recommend goods advertised in their favorite home newspaper.

The Binghamton Press has a modern, well-organized Promotion Department equipped to give practical cooperation to all reputable manufacturers and their advertising agents in studying the local situation and in planning and executing merchandising and advertising campaigns.

Because the Binghamton Market is strictly segregated from any other contiguous territory—because its buying power can be reached through one newspaper—because it combines almost every type and condition of working class, professional class and upper strata, it is the ideal market for try-out campaigns.

There are many more interesting facts available if you are interested.

May we present them?

THE JOHN BUDD COMPANY

National Advertising Representatives

NEW YORK 9 East 37th Street. CHICAGO Tribune Tower. ST. LOUIS Chemical Building. ATLANTA Healey Building.

SAN FRANCISCO Sharon Building. LOS ANGELES Chamber of Commerce Bldg. PORTLAND Security Bldg.

(Continued from page 55)

Martin, H. B., Bell Syndicate.
Mason, Walt, George Matthew Adams Services.
Matherns, Bob, NEA Service.
Matthews, Dr. Shailer, National Newspaper Service.
Matthews. Lamar, International Feature Service.
Maxwell, Nellie, Western Newspaper Union.
Maxwell, Ralph W., Graphic Syndicate.
Maxwell, R. W., Superior Feature Service.
May, Edna, Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Medbury, John, King Features Syndicate.
Menke, Frank, King Features Syndicate.
Meyers, Charles W., King Editors' Features.
Michaelis, Aline, International Feature Service.
Millar, Helen J., Associated Editors, Inc.
Miller, Mary Culbertson, Bell Syndicate.
Milne, A. A., Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
Mimi, Bell Syndicate.
Mitchell, Dr. Winston, National Newspaper Service.
Momand, Pop, Associated Newspapers.
Montague, J. J., Bell Syndicate.
Moore, Sara, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Morris, William C., George Matthew Adams Services.
Morrison, Betty, Psy. D., Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Morton, Mrs. Mary, Central Press Assn., Inc.
Mundy, J. J., International Feature Service.
Murphy, J. E., King Features Syndicate.
Murray, Feg, Metropolitan Newspaper Service.

N

Nason, Leonard, Bell Syndicate.
Newport, John, Eugene MacLean Features.
Newton, Jean, Bell Syndicate.
Nichols, Ann, United Feature Syndicate.
Nicholson, W. C., Associated Newspapers.
Nissley, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Norton, Henry Kittredge, NEA Service, Inc.
Norton, Jeannette, Newspaper Feature Service.
Norris, Kathleen, Bell Syndicate.
Norris, Margaret, George Matthew Adams Services.
Nugent, A. W., New York World Syndicate.

O

O'Hara, Neal, New York World Syndicate.
Opper, International Feature Service.
Orr, Carey, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Orr, Margaret, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Osborne, Western Newspaper Union.
Otto, Ledger Syndicate.
Ouimet, Francis, Bell Syndicate.

P

Palmer, Arthur J., King Features Syndicate.
Pape, Lee, George Matthew Adams Services.
Paris, Viola, United Features Syndicate.
Patterson, Grove, Central Press Assn., Inc.
Patri, Angelo, Bell Syndicate.
Patten, Gilbert, NEA Service.
Payne, Barrie, Publishers Syndicate.
Payne, C. M., Bell Syndicate.
Pazimino, Victor, Central Press Assn., Inc.
Pegler, Westbrook, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Pente, Will, National Newspaper Service.
Peters, Dr. Lulu Hunt, Central Press Assn., Inc.
Phelps, William Lyons, U. P. C. News Services, Inc.
Phillips, H. I., Associated Newspapers.
Pickard, E. W., Western Newspaper Union.
Pim, Paul, George Matthew Adams Services and King Features Syndicate
Plumb, Charles, Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
Pomeroy, Claire, National Newspaper Service.
Popin, Alexander, International Feature Service.
Powers, Jimmy, NEA Service.
Pownall, Dorothy, Register & Tribune Syndicate.
Purdy, W. W., International Syndicate.

Q

"Quill," King Features Syndicate.
Quillen, Robert, Publishers Syndicate.

R

Radcliffe, Henry, Editors Copy.
Radford, W. A., Western Newspaper Union.
Randolph, Jane, Capital News Service.
Rand-McNally, T. H., Star Newspaper Service.
Rascoe, Burton, Central Press Assn., Inc.
Rawlings, Marjorie K., Central Press Assn., Inc.
Reed, C. A. L., M. D., International Feature Service.
Reeder, Earl, National Newspaper Service.
Ribler, Rae, Ledger Syndicate.
Rice, Grantland, Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Richards, Mable S., National Newspaper Service.
Richardson, Tracy, Bell Syndicate.
Ridgway, Frank, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Ring, National News Service.
Ripley, Gladys, Editors Syndicate.
Ripley, R. L., Associated Newspapers.
Ritchie, Albert, Central Press Assn.
Ritt, Bill, Central Press Assn.
Robbins, L. B., Houghton Mifflin Company Syndicate Bureau.
Robertson, Lawrence, King Features Syndicate.
Robinson, Elsie, King Features Syndicate.
Robinson, Grace, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Robinson, Paul, Central Press Assn., Inc.
Rockne, Knute, Christy Walsh Syndicate.
Rogers, Will, McNaught Syndicate.
Rohlfing, World Color Printing Company.
Rohm, Harland, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Roosevelt, Jr., Theodore, Bell Syndicate.
Rowland, Helen, King Features Syndicate.
Rubinstein, Mme. Helena, Central Press Assn., Inc.
Russell, Frederick C., Ullman Feature Service.
Ruth, Babe, Christy Walsh Syndicate.

S

Sarazen, Gene, Bell Syndicate.
Satterfield, R. W., Central Press Assn., Inc.
Saunders, Hortense, NEA Service, Inc.
Schall, P. A., National News Service.
Schulkers, Robert F., Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
Schuyler, Betsy, NEA Service, Inc.
Scott, R. J., Central Press Assn., Inc.
Scott, Walt, Publishers Syndicate.
Segar, King Features Syndicate.
Seibold, Louis, Post Syndicate.
Service, Garrett P., International Feature Service.
Shaefer, Rosalind, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Shedd, Alfred O., Science Service.
Sherwood, Robert, Bell Syndicate.
Shipman, J. E., International Feature Service.
Shoemaker, Associated Newspapers.
Shoring, Dr. Eliot, National Newspaper Service.
Silver, Blanche, Newspaper Feature Service.
Silver, Douglas de Younge, Bell Syndicate.
Silvester, Genevieve, U. P. C. News Service, Inc.
Simmonds, Frank H., McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Sims, H. S., Editors Copy.
Singleton, Anne, United Feature Syndicate.
Sinnott, Arthur, Associated Newspapers.
Skuce, Lou, Bell Syndicate.
Small, C. D., NEA Service.
Smiley, Frank, Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
Smith, Dan, Newspaper Feature Service.
Smith, Roy L., Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Smith, Sidney, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Snodgrass, J. B., Post Syndicate.
Soule, Llew S., King Editors' Features.
Sords, John, Central Press Assn., Inc.
Spafford, Justin, Bell Syndicate.
Spayth, George W., Ledger Syndicate.
Spears, Ruth Wyeth, George Matthew Adams Services.
Spence, Sara, Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Spillman, Harry Collins, King Editors' Features.
Standish, Persis, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Stanley, Lee W., Central Press Assn., Inc.
Sterrett, Newspaper Feature Service.
Stewart, Charles P., Central Press Assn., Inc.
Stokley, James, Science Service.
Stote, Dorothy, Ledger Syndicate.
Straton, Dr. John Roach, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Striebel, John H., Associated Editors, Inc.
Stuyvesant, Ruth, Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Sughroe, Western Newspaper Union.
Sullivan, Frank, New York World Syndicate.
Sullivan, Mark, Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Sullivan, Pat, King Features Syndicate.
Sumner, Allene, NEA Service, Inc.
Swan, Gilbert, NEA Service, Inc.
Swanson, George, Central Press Assn., Inc.
Swartz, Hank, Bell Syndicate.
Swinnerton, International Feature Service.
Sykes, Charles Henry, Ledger Syndicate.

T

Taft, William Nelson, Ledger Syndicate.
Taft, Wm. Nelson, Post Syndicate.
Talley, Marion, Famous Features Syndicate.
Talman, Charles Fitzhugh, Science Service.
Tappan, Jessie, Capital News Service.
Tarbell, Ida M., King Features Syndicate.
Taylor, Loren, NEA Service.
Temple, World Color Printing Company.
Terhune, Albert Payson, McNaught Syndicate.
Thiele, L. E., Central Press Assn.
Thomas, Dan, NEA Service, Inc.
Thomas, Herman, Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Thomason, Capt. John W., Bell Syndicate.
Thompson, Clinton R., International Syndicate.
Thompson, R. W., Register & Tribune Syndicate.
Thomson, Dr. W. M., Audio Service.
Thone, Dr. Frank, Science Service.
Thorncliff, Grace, Newspaper Feature Service.
Thrift, Tim, King Editors' Features.
Tilden, 2nd, William T., Christy Walsh Syndicate.
Tillman, Vivian Lee, Army-Navy News Service.
Tingey, Eva A., Ledger Syndicate.
Tingley, Richard H., International Syndicate.
Trumbull, Walter, Post Syndicate.
Tunney, Gene, King Features Syndicate.
Tuthill, H. J., McNaught Syndicate.
Tuttle, Mary, Register & Tribune Syndicate.

U

Ullman, William, Ullman Feature Service.
Urner, Mabel Herbert, Bell Syndicate.

V

Van Loon, Hendrick, Christy Walsh Syndicate.
Van Raalte, Joseph, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Van Slyke, Lucille, Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
Vaughn, Irving, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Veatch, Paul J., Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Verd, King Features Syndicate.
"Vic," New York World Syndicate.
Vincent, Mrs. F. S., Central Press Assn., Inc.
Vive, Mme. Qui, King Features Syndicate.
Voight, Charles, Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Vorhess, H. F., National Newspaper Service.

W

Walker, G. W., Columbia Newspaper Service.
Walker, Mrs. L. LeBaron, Bell Syndicate.
Warder, Alice, National Newspaper Service.
Warner, Glenn S., Christy Walsh Syndicate.
Warner, Wilbur G., Central Press Assn., Inc.
Warren, F. B., Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Watson, Dr. John B., King Editors' Features.
Watt, Edison, Associated Newspapers.
Wayne, Priscilla, Register & Tribune Syndicate.
Weagant, H. G., Payne Syndicate, Inc.
Webb, Barbara, Famous Features Syndicate.
Webb, T. A., Columbia Newspaper Service.
Webster, H. T., New York World Syndicate.
Weed, Clive, New York World Syndicate.
Wellington, C. H., Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Werner, M. R., D. P. Syndicate.
Westermarck, King Features Syndicate.
Westover, Russ, King Features Syndicate.
Wheelan, Ed, George Matthew Adams Services.
Whitaker, Alma, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
White, Howard, NEA Service, Inc.
White, G. W., Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Whittington, Larry, King Features Syndicate.
Whytock, Ross Duff, Ledger Syndicate.
Willard, Frank, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Williams, Fred, Star Newspapers Service.
Williams, Gaar, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Williams, Gluyas, Bell Syndicate.
Williams, J. R., NEA Service.
Wills, Helen, United Feature Syndicate.
Wilson, Cora, King Features Syndicate.
Wing, Hannah, International Feature Service.
Winchell, Walter, Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
Winston, Vera, Newspaper Feature Service.
Witwer, H. C., King Features Syndicate.
Wolfe, Dr. L. S., Editors Copy.
Wolfsohn, Leo, National Newspaper Service.
Woodruff, Harvey, Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Woods, Woodclif, King Features Syndicate.
Woodward, King Features Syndicate.
Woollcott, Alexander, New York World Syndicate.
Work, Milton C., National Newspaper Service.
Worth, Winifred, Allen Feature Service.
Wotton, Don, NEA Service.
Wren, Jenny, Ledger Syndicate.
Wynn, Ed, Bell Syndicate.
Wynn, Vance, Ledger Syndicate.

Y

Yardley, Ledger Syndicate.
Young, "Chic," Premier Syndicate.
Young, Crawford, Herald Tribune Syndicate.
Young, Lyman, King Features Syndicate.

Z

Zere, King Features Syndicate.
Zipp, Columbia Newspaper Service.

EXECUTION REPORTER DIDN'T WRITE A WORD

THE newspaper man who watched the electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti didn't write a line about what he saw.

W. E. Playfair, of the Boston office of the Associated Press, acted as observer for all the newspapermen covering the story. They waited in another part of the prison until the execution was finished. Another A.P. man was waiting with the others and wrote the lead which went to the association's members.

Playfair got the assignment to cover the execution six years ago when the two radicals were first convicted. The law of Massachusetts stipulates that only one representative of the press shall witness an electrocution.

Have you a friend in Kansas City

Ask him if he doesn't read The Kansas City Star

SERVICE
THE CHARLES PARTLOWE COMPANY
America's Largest Circulation Building Organization
RESULTS COUNT
OCCIDENTAL BLDG. INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

if you have something to SELL —

—and it's good.
—and you want other folk to know it's good.
—thrifty folk who have money and the habit of spending.
—people who live in the prosperous Cleveland market.

then—
you must tell them about it through
The Ohio's Greatest Newspaper
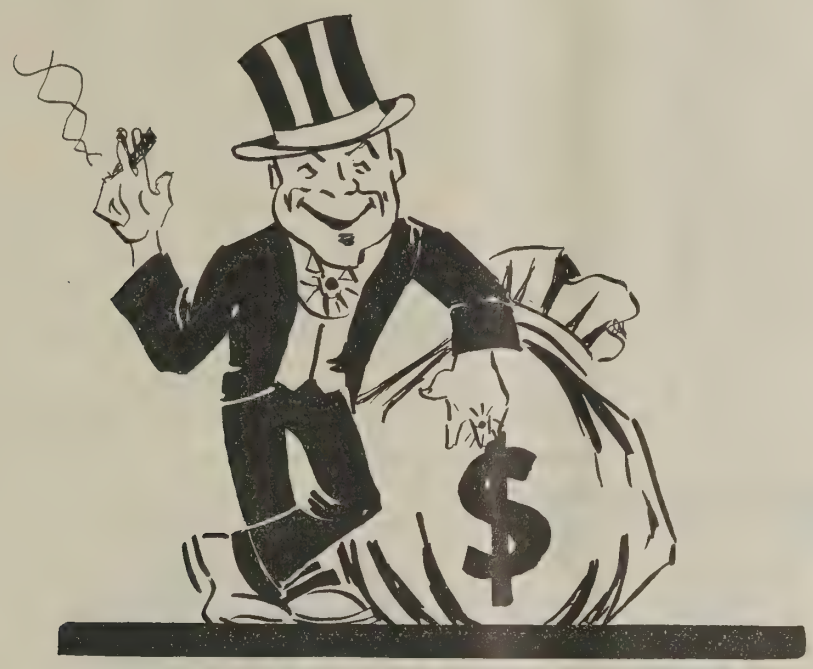
Cleveland News
DAILY AND SUNDAY
Represented by Geo. A. McDevitt Co.
250 Park Ave., New York
914 People's Gas Bldg., Chicago

NEW OFFICES GRAYBAR BUILDING

On and after August 1st the new offices of this organization will be 1823 Graybar Building, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York City.

S. P. WESTON, INC.
Newspaper Buildings, Production, Operation Surveys, Valuations.
420 Lexington Avenue, New York



Buffalo, The Wonder City of America
Buffalo—a profitable Market for Advertisers

Sales in Buffalo are splendid for advertising goods. Employment conditions excellent, retail and other business thriving. One newspaper will put your story over to 83% of the people—that paper is the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS
Read in 4 out of 5 Buffalo Homes
EDWARD H. BUTLER
Editor and Publisher
KELLY-SMITH COMPANY
Representatives
Graybar Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Tribune Tower Chicago, Ill.
Atlantic Bldg. Philadelphia
Waterman Bldg. Boston

After All
It's not so much how many read your story as how many put credence in it.
THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD
Goes not only into the homes but also into the hearts of 150,000 substantial families daily.
Second Largest Morning Daily in Philadelphia
Always Reliable

New Wealth—New Purchasing Power—

The South's Offer-------

Yes, they have plenty of money to spend in the South—for business is extremely good. The great and permanent prosperity, founded on the purchasing power which has more than trebled in the past 10 years, is today reaching greater heights than ever before.

With the incomes of the people increasing to unprecedented proportions, it is only natural that they are spending more for the better things of life. They have become educated to the value of the advertised product. Such products as automobiles, radio, building products, tires, steel, typewriting machines, washing machines, iceless refrigerators, phonographs, electric appliances, farming implements, etc., are enjoying increased sales.

Your opportunity for bigger business lies only in your ability to bring the merits of your product before these people. Advertising your product in these papers listed below will bring it to their attention with such force that you will realize the value of the South's new wealth and new purchasing power.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
ALABAMA
*Mobile News-Item .....(E)	13,141	.05	.05
*Mobile Register .....(M)	23,326	.08	.08
*Mobile Register .....(S)	34,630	.10	.10
FLORIDA
†Daytona Beach News-Journal.....(ES)	9,083	.065	.065
*Lakeland Register .....(E)	7,055	.04	.04
†Miami Herald .....(M)	44,668	.11	.11
†Miami Herald .....(S)	48,751	.12	.12
*Orlando Sentinel .....(M&S)	10,105	.06	.06
*Pensacola News and Journal.....(E&M)	9,389	.07	.07
†St. Augustine Record.....(E&S)	3,972	.04	.04
*St. Petersburg Independent.....(E)	12,874	.065	.065
*Tampa Times .....(E)	27,813	.08	.08
*Tampa Tribune (M) 41,400.....(S)	53,248	.10(.14S)	.10(.14S)
*West Palm Beach Post.....(M)	12,081	.07	.07
GEORGIA
*Augusta Herald .....(E)	14,190	.05	.05
*Augusta Herald .....(S)	14,797	.05	.05
†Macon Telegraph .....(M)	25,011	.08	.08
†Macon Telegraph .....(S)	25,011	.08	.08
*Savannah Morning News (M), 21,766.(S)	22,691	.06(.07S)	.06(.07S)
KENTUCKY
*The Lexington Leader.....(E)	19,739	.07	.07
*The Lexington Leader.....(S)	19,772	.07	.07
†Paducah Sun .....(E)	9,695	.04	.04

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
NORTH CAROLINA
*Greensboro Daily News.....(M)	30,066	.08	.07
*Greensboro Daily News.....(S)	33,311	.09	.08
*Salisbury Post .....(E)	7,718	.04	.04
SOUTH CAROLINA
*Columbia State .....(M)	23,096	.08	.08
*Columbia State .....(S)	25,242	.08	.08
*Greenville News & Piedmont.....(M&E)	36,285	.11	.11
*Greenville News .....(S)	25,199	.08	.08
*Spartanburg Journal .....(E)	4,471 }	.05	.05
*Spartanburg Herald (M) 6,943.....(S)	9,048 }
TENNESSEE
*Chattanooga Times .....(M)	31,623	.10	.10
*Chattanooga Times .....(S)	31,078	.10	.10
†Memphis Commercial Appeal.....(M)	103,168	.18	.18
†Memphis Commercial Appeal.....(S)	136,115	.25	.25
*Nashville Banner .....(E)	59,574	.11	.11
*Nashville Banner .....(S)	59,843	.12	.12
VIRGINIA
*Danville Register and Bee.....(M&E)	15,660	.06	.06
*Danville Bee and Register.....(E&S)	20,919	.07	.07
*Newport News Times-Herald.....(E)	8,394 }	.05	.05
*Newport News Daily Press.....(S&M)	5,777 }
*Roanoke Times & World News...(M&E)	27,321	.08	.08
*Roanoke Times .....(S)	16,912	.07	.07
*Staunton News-Leader (M), Leader..(E)	7,064	.035	.035

* A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1927.
† Government Statement, March 31, 1927.

ROTOGRAVURE PRESS FIRM IS SOLD

J. F. Webendorfer Company Plant at Mt. Vernon, N. J., Acquired by Harris-Seybold-Potter Company of Cleveland

R. V. Mitchell, president of the Harris-Seybold-Potter Company, Cleveland, this week announced that the corporation which was formed the first of this year by a merger of the Harris Automatic Press Company, of Cleveland, the Seybold Machine Company, of Dayton, O., and the Premier and Potter Printing Press Company, Inc., of New York City, has purchased the J. F. Webendorfer Company's plant at Mt. Vernon, N. J. This concern manufactures rotogravure printing presses and is said to have produced about 70 per cent of those now in actual use in the United States.

A. F. Harris, vice-president and general manager of the Harris concern, said:

"The J. F. Webendorfer Company has an enviable reputation in the printing press manufacturing line and we consider it a valuable asset. The owner started the business in a small way and has good success. He will remain in charge of the plant."

Mr. Harris said that no financing will follow the deal, as the plant was purchased out of the earnings of the Harris-Seybold-Potter concern.

The Harris plant is one of the largest makers of offset presses in this country.

Mitchell is also the head of a large Cleveland concern engaged in the investment banking business.

JULY NEWSPRINT PRODUCTION

United States and Canadian Output Totaled 281,493 Tons

Newsprint production in Canada during July, 1927, amounted to 162,564 tons and shipments to 159,843 tons, according to figures just issued by the News Print Service Bureau, New York. Production in the United States was 118,929 tons and shipments 119,840 tons, making a total United States and Canadian newsprint production of 281,493 tons and shipments of 279,683 tons. During July, 16,876 tons of news print were made in Newfoundland and 736 tons in Mexico, so that the total North American production for the month amounted to 299,105 tons.

The Canadian mills produced 103,443 tons more in the first seven months of 1927 than in 1926, which was an increase of 10 per cent. The United States output was 90,387 tons, or 11 per cent less than for the first seven months of 1926, that in Newfoundland 34,145 tons or 34 per cent more, and in Mexico 1,207 tons, or 17 per cent more, making a total North American increase of 48,408 tons, or 2 per cent.

During July the Canadian mills operated at 80.5 per cent of rated capacity and the United States mills at 81.5 per cent. Stocks of newsprint paper at Canadian mills totaled 32,282 tons at the end of July and at United States mills 27,764 tons, making a combined total of 60,046 tons, which was equivalent to 4.4 days' average production.

PLANNING SIBERIAN TRIP

Adam Breede, editor and publisher of the Hastings (Neb.) Tribune, who has adventured in many of the world's farthest corners, is planning a trip to northwestern Siberia to hunt the white Russian bear and the rare black fox. He has followed the big game hobby for years and has more than 100 specimens of his hunts in his home and newspaper plant.

600 AT STAFF PICNIC

The 600 employes of the Portland Oregonian, with their families, held their annual picnic on Sunday, Aug. 14, at Chautauqua Park, near Oregon City. Addresses were made by O. L. Price, manager, and Edgar B. Piper, editor. A program of general entertainment followed.

"SPEECHES FOR ALL OCCASIONS"

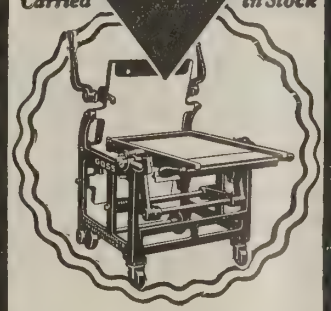
I. A. A. Is Reorganizing Speaker's Bureau, Getting Out New Book

Reorganization of the Speakers' Bureau of the International Advertising Association is underway, and when work is completed it is expected the bureau will be capable of providing speakers and speeches for all advertising occasions.

A booklet is being prepared which will deal in part with the advantages offered to executives, who, when they travel, will devote a part of their time attending lunches at advertising clubs in various cities and delivering lectures on the subject of how to make more money by advertising. The same book will instruct advertising clubs in the etiquette of receiving visiting speakers, and presenting them after luncheon to the assembled guests.

The chairman of the speakers' bureau is Charles W. Meyers, director of public relations of the Armour Company, Chicago, who recently returned to this country from a European trip. Each year Mr. Armour visits every state of the union on a speaking tour for his company, and has addressed 250 different advertising clubs on various occasions.

COSGROVE SUCCEEDS HUSTON



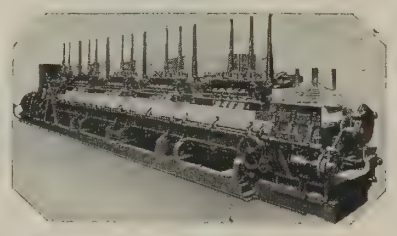
Gerald E. Cosgrove, of Dubuque, Ia., has gone to the South Bend Tribune as an editorial writer following the retirement early in July of McCready Huston who had been with the Tribune for the last six years. Mr. Huston retired to devote himself to literary work in which he has been engaged for some time. Mr. Cosgrove spent six years in the traffic department of the Associated Press and five years ago joined the Dubuque Telegraph-Herald as a feature writer. Subsequently he served as state editor, telegraph editor, city editor, news editor, editorial writer and assistant managing editor.

JOINS BIRMINGHAM DAILY

George T. Maxwell, a native of Delaware and for some years employed on Delaware papers, has become cartoonist for the Birmingham (Ala.) Age-Herald. Before going to Birmingham he was with the Harrisburg (Pa.) Patriot.

Supplies and Equipment

GOSS
STEREOTYPING MACHINERY
Carried in Stock



Fastest, most easily operated, most accurate and durable flat casting box you can buy. Perfectly balanced. New design lock-up bar allows for quick change when regulating thickness of casts. Positive quick lock-up at four points on box with one lever movement. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

Rebuilt
GOSS & HOE
PRESS
BARGAINS
ALL TYPES
SEND for LIST
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.
CHICAGO – NEW YORK – LONDON

Keep your message before your clients and prospects. The EDITOR & PUBLISHER is your ever-present salesman.

Halvorsen Newspaper Stuffing Machines

are now being used by many of the leading newspapers from coast to coast and border border. In one plant the machine has saved one-fifth of its cost in six months. Papers can be delivered in better condition to distributors and to the readers.

After a thorough investigation you will want to invest
Write for full particulars

NONPAREIL MACHINE COMPANY
36 S. Throop Street, Chicago

Modern
Composing Room Furniture

as made by us will speed up production and reduce costs—a real saving in your Pay Roll. Are you interested? If so, consult your regular dealer in printers' supplies or write us direct.

Do it now!

HAMILTON MFG. CO.
TWO RIVERS, WIS.

INVISIBLE EXPENSE

When your blankets are old and worn out, they cause poor printing and many delays, due to the sheets breaking.

Complaints from readers on late delivery and loss of sales.

Rebates to advertisers for poor printing.

Excessive waste paper and extra expense for power and light.

The saving in these items of Invisible Expense for one week will buy a new set of blankets.

You cannot afford to lower your efficiency by false economy.

New England Newspaper Supply Co.
Worcester, Mass., U. S. A.
Cable Address NENSCO, Worcester.

Success

A well equipped plant is one of the essentials to the publisher fighting for success.

The man who has attained success recognizes the fact that up-to-the-minute equipment is necessary to maintain and hold what he has won.

If you have outgrown equipment to sell, or need additional machinery, the market place for both services is the Classified Columns of

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Employment—Equipment—Services

EDITOR & PUBLISHER Classified Advertising Information RATES

SITUATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .50 per line
3 Times — .40 per line
ALL OTHER CLASSIFICATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .75 per line
4 Times — .60 per line

White space charge at same rate per line per insertion as earned by frequency of insertion. Minimum Contract space, three lines. The Editor & Publisher reserves the right to classify, edit or reject any advertisement.

ADVERTISING

General Promotion

If You Want More Local Advertising put us to work for you selling our "Worthwhile" features. Write F. G. Hogan Syndicate, Lemcke Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind., or Kane, Pa.

Supplies

Shading Sheets for Art work and Benday effects. Bourges Service, Inc., 144 West 32nd Street, New York.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Brokers

Class Paper in South for $15,000, or two-thirds interest for $10,000. Established high-grade publication with fine opportunity. Chance for advertising man. Harris-Dibble Co., 345 Madison Ave., New York.

High Grade Properties in Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Arkansas, both daily and weekly; exclusive listings; no damaging publicity; personal service in every deal; special attention to financing. All matters absolutely confidential. High grade newspaper bonds for sale. Clyde H. Knox, 851 Board of Trade Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

Southern California—Evening paper, exclusive field; good equipment; earning handsome dividends on price asked. Initial payment 100,000. Also half interest in morning paper, initial payment $25,000. J. B. Shale, Times Bldg., New York.

Newspapers for Sale

Evening Daily—$51,000 buys controlling interest in Evening Daily. Highly prosperous Texas community. 50,000 population. Only one other newspaper. Large field. Six Linotypes. Thirty-Two page Goss. Wire Corr & Company, Denver, Colorado.

CIRCULATION

Promotion

Circulation—When quick, additional circulation overage becomes necessary, remember that our twenty years in this one line of endeavor is your proof against experimenting. Write or wire. Pacific Coast Circulation Service, Bell Block, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Circulation Builders—Blair & Austin, 1504 Centre ave., Reading, Penn. Originators of Salesmanship Club Campaigns.

Ask the Man Who's Had One! In over 20 years of nation-wide experience, we have proved ourselves always able to produce greater results per dollar expended. Our circulation building campaigns, large or small, have all expert management and attention. Address us now, care of The World-Herald, Omaha, Nebr., or at any time at Box 288, Waterloo, Iowa. Myers' Circulation Organization.

Baby Alice Dolls, $36.00 dozen. Quick water shipment to California. Freight $0.10 each. B. Dinkney, 307-6th Ave., New York, N. Y.

Circulation Builders—A Clean-cut, self-financing, personally conducted campaign that will make you more money now and for years to come; 20 years' experience. The Alward Syndicate, 453 W. 9th street, Erie, Pa.

Superior Circulation Builders—The W. S. Kendall Company, 104 North Bailey Ave., Louisville, Kentucky. The circulation-building organization that has set the standard for aggressive, successful circulation campaigns for nearly twenty years.

The World's Largest Circulation Building Organization—The only circulation-building service in Newspaperdom furnishing publishers' affidavits of the exact results of its every campaign. The Charles Partlowe Company, Occidental Building, Indianapolis.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Advertising Manager—Experienced, enthusiastic, aggressive, with fund of good ideas. Only daily in small New York State city. Tell your full story in first letter, which will be held in confidence. Times, Geneva, N. Y.

Advertising Men and Reporters wanted who can sell space on commission in State-wide number embracing historical features, photographs and commercial surveys. 8 weeks work. Room 207, Jersey Journal, Jersey City.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Advertising Manager for established drug trade journal. Real opportunity for high grade man with successful record as salesman and executive; salary and commission. Write details, experience and references. C-914, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation—We want best canvassing crew in United States; six to ten men, hard house-to-house plugging. No contests, but premiums or other inducements permitted. C-921, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager, small town morning and evening dailies. Circulation 7,000; town 20,000. High pressure not wanted. Salary reasonable. Must know detail and be able to assume responsibility. Experience essential. News Messenger Co., Marshall, Texas.

District Manager wanted for house-to-house solicitation. Prefer one who has had newspaper experience. Write Circulation Manager, Lima Ohio, Lima Star, giving full particulars and references.

Editor & Manager—Unusual opportunity for a man of particular qualifications is offered by a weekly newspaper about to be started in Brooklyn. The enterprise needs an editor and manager who is familiar through actual experience with the field of the neighborhood journals in the metropolitan area, who can manage campaign for classified advertising and edit and select news and feature copy. He will have ample assistance, will be paid a good salary and will be expected to take charge of organization from its start. Write full details to C-933, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Accountant—Circulation Manager—Young man, 28, eight years' experience as circulation manager and assistant. Practical experience in auditing and accounting. Knowledge of newspaper accounting and cost finding. Desires position as accountant or circulation manager. Willing to combine both on small daily. Excellent references. C-930, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Capable, aggressive newspaper advertising man, twenty years' experience in all branches, desires permanent location in city of 100,000 or over. Letters of reference speak in highest terms of past work, ability and character. Located with such papers as Public Ledger, North American, Bulletin, Philadelphia; Washington Post. Married, 42. Morning or evening proposition. C-898, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Executive—Long experience in promotion of local, national and classified on metropolitan and suburban papers. Enviable record for constructive building, aggressive salesman and thorough organizer. Am seeking connection with publisher who needs a man of proven ability, initiative and a will to meet and overcome keen competition. Write for interview and record. C-905, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising—Producer, good copy and layout man, now available; A-1 reference. C-931, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Now employed in city of 75,000. Increased national 250,000 lines last year and gaining 50,000 lines in 1927. Experienced in all branches. Desires position where opportunity for real work and advancement exists. Now getting $125. Present employer knows of this advertisement. Address C-917, Editor & Publisher.

Ad Writer—Missouri Journalism graduate with varied practical experience. Good layouts, copy, sketches. Available September 1. C-915, Editor & Publisher.

Agency Executive, now owner of small advertising agency seeking suitable connection; 8 years advertising and selling experience. Clean record, progressive and responsible. Age 32, married. C-924, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising—Young man, married; several years' agency experience, desires connection with reputable paper. C-918, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager or Assistant to Publisher—Two and a half years' business and general manager of New York daily, where I made astonishing good record under trying conditions. Property I manage now on profit basis for first time in five years. Thoroughly understand all departments, including engraving. Successful record gained by hard work and perseverance. Savings in overhead and purchasing were enormous. Ownership conditions warrants seeking new connections. American, married, age 36, highest references. Will be available September 15th. Box C-896, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager—Thoroughly trained in every branch; now employed as advertising director in city of 75,000, but desires larger position. Excellent references from present employer. Interview can be arranged. Address C-916, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager or assistant to General Manager; 7 years on Eastern and Mid-West daily as office manager, circulation manager and treasurer. Qualified newspaper accountant. Knows credits and collections. Originated classified collection system that increased collections 75% first month. Prefer Eastern location. At liberty October 1st. Salary $75. Married, family. Age 33. Best of recommendations. Address C-983, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Circulation—Road man with long experience. References. South preferred. C-923, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Promotion Manager connected with combination paper, 100,000 circulation, forced to seek change. Married, family. Salary $60. References, personal interview. Wire R. C. Shelton, Telegram-Gazette, Worcester, Mass.

Circulation Manager, 20 years' experience, familiar with all methods promotion and A. B. C. records, etc. Can produce under adverse conditions. Reasonable salary. References. C-920, Editor & Publisher.

Desk and Re-write Man—Newspaperman with 15 years' experience seeks position on Eastern daily. Accurate, speedy, efficient. Unusually good at producing humorous features. C-929, Editor & Publisher.

Desk, Re-write or Street—Newspaper man, experienced, seeks opening. Available at once. C-932, Editor & Publisher.

Editor, now employed, seeks position with established trade paper whose management wants man of ability, integrity and industry. Write C-922, Editor & Publisher.

Editor and Editorial Writer of wide newspaper and business magazine experience, desires connection with solid, sane daily. Will not boast here, but can furnish references and samples enabling you to form your own opinion as to my size. Am interested only in established, well organized, stronger papers. Now in Chicago, but will move. Can prepare humorous column and paragraphs you might like. Address C-928, Editor & Publisher.

Editor—Some small daily publisher sadly needs my experience as editor and manager to build up his paper. C-899, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial—Experienced man of Eastern, Western and Metropolitan service, wide reading, extensively informed and able to write fluently, who has held desk and managerial positions, desires to make change from place now filled for temporary personal reasons to one with the advantage of utilizing his varied training and equipment. Especially strong on heads, news, make-up and purposeful editorial handling. Just the man for news editorship or managing editor in cities up to 100,000, either farming or industrial community. C-903; Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor, with uninterrupted record of success, now employed, seeks worthwhile and permanent connection in city under 100,000. Good organizer, strong executive, college man, 40. Knows news and men and how to handle both. Experience covers 16 years in metropolitan and smaller fields. Sound editorial writer. Record and references gladly submitted. C-919, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter—
Who?—Reporter, a cub, but trained.
What?—Wants a job.
When?—Starting September.
Where?—Anywhere.
Why?—He is ambitious, aims his guns at reporting. Now ready to pull the trigger and fire away at his chosen field. References. C-926, Editor & Publisher.

Sports Writer, young, nearly five years' experience, seeks job preferably as sports editor of paper of about 25,000. Will consider anything. References. C-927, Editor & Publisher.

Washington Correspondent, thoroughly experienced, with unusual news sources; who does not depend on departmental carbon copies, but looks for news, desires new connection. Metropolitan experience; Christian; independent politically. C-912, Editor & Publisher.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Addressograph for sale. Hand Model, also Foot Model . . . 50,000 "B" Frames, latest design. Will sell all or part. Prices very attractive. A. H. Hoffman, Inc., Landisville, Penna.

Publishers!
Secure your Executives through the Classified Department of
Editor & Publisher

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Equipment for Sale—Two sixty H.P. web press drives, direct current, 220 volts, with Cutler-Hammer control boards; push button control, eight station boxes. These controls have been used about one year and every part is in first class condition. Reason for selling is consolidation of two papers. Was used on an octuple press. Will make an attractive price if taken at once. Delivery near Boston. Address C-884, Editor & Publisher.

Duplex—16-page tubular plate press, Goss Comet and several other good bargains in new presses. Griffiths Publishers Exchange, 154 Nassau St., New York.

For Sale—One complete photo-engraving plant. Miles Machinery Co., 64 West 23d St., New York.

Goss Comet eight page press for sale; in good condition, with full chase equipment. Reason for selling, buying larger press. Chief Printing Company, Perry, Iowa.

Job Presses, Paper Cutters, Wire Stitchers, etc.—A complete line. Overhauled and guaranteed machines at bargain prices. Easy terms. Hoffman Type & Engraving Co., 114 E. 13th St., N. Y. City.

Linotypes—A number one and number five for sale. Both in running order. Reasonably priced. Chief Printing Company, Perry, Iowa.

Twenty Fonts of 6½ point latest newspaper text type for sale. Excellent condition, used only a few months. Box C-925, Editor & Publisher.

Used Goss Mat Roller for wet mats only, for sale cheap. The Goss Printing Press Co., 153 So. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

SUPPLIES

Metal

Standard Linotype, Stereotype and Monotype metal at substantial discounts when purchased in ton lots or over. Let us quote you. American Alloys Company, 1939 East Sergeant St., Philadelphia.

Newspaper Properties Bought, Sold and Appraised
All negotiations confidential
PALMER, DEWITT & PALMER
Business Established in 1899
350 Madison Ave. New York
Pacific Coast Representative:
M. C. Moore, 515 N. Canon Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

CONSOLIDATION

The merging of newspaper interests is a subject that has received special study and investigation by this firm for nearly 17 years. It is a big subject and requires considerable technical knowledge, both as to valuation and operating methods. When properly organized, the results are never disappointing.

We have been factors in many important consolidations, sales and appraisals.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

WANTED — Editorial writer with newspaper experience for position with New York State small city daily. Cover age, education, political affiliations, positions held, present salary; and send clippings representing recent work. Mention our No. 900.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

One Dollar will be paid for each idea published. Send clipping for payment.

MOST cities now operate school savings accounts in their schools. See your banks in July or August and prepare for a splash a week or so before the reopening of school in the fall, showing the advantages of these accounts and urging the parents to co-operate in teaching the children to save. In a great many cities, the school savings accounts have become highly profitable for the banks.—B. A. T., Springfield, O.

Run a heading, "Coupon Day," over a page or spread of ads of local concerns offering special discounts or premiums to folks who cut out their ads and bring them to the store on a certain day.—Frank H. Williams.

Each year the Davenport (Ia.) Times runs directories of the county fairs in and about Davenport. The county fair season is here. With good roads people can be attracted for many miles to a fair. Fair secretaries know this and will advertise if properly approached.—D. A., Davenport, Iowa.

Put on an "Out Size Week," during which local stores advertise special prices on all extra small or extra large sizes. Offer prizes for the smallest and largest people buying goods during the week—getting the reports on the purchasers from the stores. Get the stores to come in with advertisements on a special spread in your paper.—F. H. W.

Sixteen or seventeen articles comprise more than 75 per cent of the nation's food bill of $20,000,000, according to statistics compiled by Chandler & Co., a New York brokerage firm. Why not use their statistics as the basis of an interesting article centered in a page, or double page, of special ads? Around the article run advertisements from sixteen firms featuring these articles. The articles include pork, fish, chickens, other meats, milk, wheat, flour, sugar, butter, eggs, wheat bread, white potatoes, ice cream, coffee, canned vegetables, apples and canned fruits.—U. S. V.

Schools start in September. Now is the time to start working up special page advertising, this to suggest wants for those going "Back to School." In the middle column of the page can be carried a story about the improvements made on school buildings, changes in texts and the like. Advertising space on the page will be valuabble.—Yandell C. Cline.

One Boston newspaper recently ran an "anonymous" advertisement paid for by the coal dealers and urging the people to get in their winter's supply. The ad depicted a young fellow at the telephone with the following message in Writing, printed cross corners of the ad: "They will deliver the Winter's Coal tomorrow—It is cheaper now—and insures safe, economical heat for a year."—D. P.

An Indiana newspaper interested a hardware store in offering three prizes for the best letters from readers on the value of tool sets around the home, and for unique uses to which tools were put in the home. The value to the store came from showing others the desirability of having such sets of tools in the home. The contest was announced and conducted, of course, in paid space.—Bert A. Teeters.

DAILY HOST TO CHILDREN

Reading (Pa.) Times and Charles J. Esterley Bring 3,500 to New York

More than 3,500 children of Reading, Pa., visited New York and nearby resorts on Monday this week on an excursion sponsored by the Reading (Pa.) Times and Charles J. Esterley, former representative from Berks-Lehigh county, Pa. Special trains brought the big group.

When the party took boats for a sail down the bay, a photographic dark room was installed on one of the steamers where lay-outs for Tuesday morning's Times were made. In charge of the arrangements were J. J. Hornstein, publisher, and Russ Symontone, managing editor of the Times, and Harry Sterrett, composing room foreman.

Funds for the party were raised by popular subscription in Reading, where the excursions have become a yearly event.

HUNCHES

One Dollar will be paid for each idea published. Send clipping for payment.

A "SAVES STEPS" column has been inaugurated by the Portland Oregonian. Each day there are many suggestions printed on how to save time and money within the home. The leading contribution wins a daily prize of $1, which is all it costs the paper for this "live" department and the many other ideas which are printed, but not awarded prizes.—C. M. L.

A friendly contest designed to reduce errors is bearing fruit for an Ohio newspaper. Every editorial error that can be found is clipped up daily and one point charged against the reporter and desk man who handled the copy. The points are totaled each month and an award made to the staff member with the lowest number of points.—B. A. T.

It would be a good stunt, from two angles, for the paper to each week run a little story headed "Greetings to Newcomers" or something like that. In this story would be given the names of new residents in the city with their former residences—these names being obtained from the gas company, city water department, etc. The newcomers would feel pleased at seeing their names in the paper in this way and this weekly list would also give the local merchants a good list of prospects to circularize for business.—Frank H. Williams.

What is the most romantic age? An analysis of the records at the city clerk's office will give you some interesting data on which to base a human interest story. One paper finds that 26 is the invulnerable age and 21 the most romantic and that "child" brides of 15 and 16, frequent 10 years ago, are rare and sensational now.—D. P.

The Provo (Utah) Herald runs a column called the "Nosey Reporter," in which criticism of the city and surrounding country is published as it is gleaned from tourists as they pass through that part of the country. Negative criticisms as well as positive criticisms are often published. This column has popularized in unique fashion the local editorial matter.—Jesse T. Simmons.

So much has been written about the evils of divorce of late, but so far little if any effort has been made by the newspapers to get the views of the average man or woman on this subject. Why not send the star reporter to interview a leading religious authority or two, a social worker, a judge who has had much to do with the divorce court, a prominent educator, a labor leader, and one or two others; then, after printing their views, throw your columns open to the public. The result will be entertaining, if not profitable, reading. Give a small prize for the best letter, if you like.—Fred. L. W. Bennett.

ADVERTISER REWARDS EMPLOYES

One hundred employes of Remington Rand, Inc., national advertisers, and their wives are on their way back from Europe after a vacation at the expense of the concern as a reward for faithful service during the past year. More than 2,000 representatives in the organization throughout the country competed.

If Quality

of circulation is your first consideration.

The Evening Star

With Sunday Morning Editions

Washington, D. C.

will have your preference—same as it has the preference of practically everyone in the National Capital.

The Star's circulation is home circulation—both quality and quantity—the kind that counts most with advertisers.

N. Y. Office—110 E. 42nd St.
Dan A. Carroll

Chicago Office—Tower Building
J. E. Lutz

Why I Am the Modern Don Juan

by

LORD BEAVERBROOK, the admitted lover of a thousand beautiful women, now in a New York prison and sought all over the world by the authorities for hogswoggling maids, widows, debutantes and even grandmothers of several millions of dollars.

A story from the pen and over the signature of this great wooer in which he tells the reasons for his success as an international lover.

Thirty daily installments, illustrated by photographs furnished by Lord Beaverbrook.

Wire your order

Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
350 Hudson St., New York, N. Y.

NEA Service newspictures are always on top of the news—or ahead of it.

NEA Service, Inc.,
1200 West Third Street
CLEVELAND, OHIO

INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

leads in Original Exclusive Features
on
World Spot News

63 Park Row New York City

Space is space—but the BEST Classified Advertising publicity justifies its daily appearance in your newspaper

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building, Philadelphia

DO YOU NEED A TRAINED MAN?

The Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, an organization of college trained newspaper, magazine and advertising men, wants to help you find him. The Bureau puts you in touch with experienced, energetic men—it saves you time by recommending only those who meet your requirements.

If you expect a vacancy, please write John G. Earhart, Director, Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, 836 Exchange Ave., Chicago, Ill.

NO CHARGE TO EMPLOYERS

ROTO-GRAVURE Sections for Newspapers & Magazines

STANDARD Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

Direct Your Plans On This Rich Area

The fact that the Empire State is first in population—in commerce—in export, means that it is also first in consuming power—earning power and buying power. Therefore, New York State should be first on your advertising list.

No state begins to attempt to offer the national advertiser as rich a market as is found here. The New York State families are known not only to be large producers but great spenders. So great is its wealth, and so huge its buying power that hardly a product manufactured today hasn't some outlet in some part of the State.

When planning your advertising campaign, think of New York State first.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
Albany Evening News.....(E)	44,444	.13	.13
Albany Knickerbocker Press.....(M)	35,073	.12	.12
Albany Knickerbocker Press.....(S)	57,820	.17	.17
Amsterdam Recorder-Democrat .....(E)	7,845	.04	.04
††Auburn Citizen-Advertiser Journal...(E)	10,295	.065	.055
Brooklyn Daily Eagle .....(E)	77,991	.24	.24
Brooklyn Daily Eagle .....(S)	90,532	.24	.24
Buffalo Courier Express.....(M)	110,686	.22	.22
Buffalo Courier Express.....(S)	161,164	.30	.30
Buffalo Evening News .....(E)	149,773	.25	.25
Buffalo Evening Times.....(E)	109,285	.21	.21
Buffalo Sunday Times.....(S)	128,158	.21	.21
Corning Evening Leader .....(E)	9,029	.05	.05
Elmira Star-Gazette Advertiser....(E&M)	34,213	.11	.11
Geneva Daily Times.....(E)	5,627	.04	.04
Gloversville Leader Republican.....(E)	7,177	.035	.035
††Ithaca Journal-News .....(E)	7,711	.05	.05
Jamestown Morning Post.....(M)	11,705	.04	.035
Mount Vernon Daily Argus.....(E)	9,866	.05	.05
Newburgh Daily News.....(E)	12,506	.06	.06
New Rochelle Standard-Star.....(E)	8,458	.04	.04
The Sun, New York .....(E)	265,440	.65	.60
New York Times .....(M)	375,249	.80	.784
New York Times .....(S)	653,427	1.05	1.029
New York Herald-Tribune .....(M)	289,674	.6435	.624
New York Herald-Tribune .....(S)	366,220	.693	.672
New York World.....(M)	302,199	.595	.58
New York World.....(S)	593,383	.72	.58
New York Evening World.....(E)	305,746	.505	.69
Niagara Falls Gazette .....(E)	21,817	.07	.07
Port Chester Item .....(E)	5,065	.045	.035
Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise....(E)	13,411	.06	.06
Rochester Times-Union .....(E)	73,856	.21	.20
Troy Record .....(M&E)	22,426	.07	.07
††Watertown Standard .....(E)	17,825	.07	.07

 A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1927.
†† Government Statement, March 31, 1927.

Lemuel F. Parton
Charles F. Speare
John B. Foster
O. L. Scott
David Lawrence
Rowland Wood
Ben G. Kline
Bertram G. Zilmer
Lawrence Perry
J. C. Royle
Edward Price Bell
Paul Scott Mowrer
George T. Hughes
William F. Heffernan
George DeWitt Moulson
Robert Mack
Fair Play
Harry Nichols
Negley Farson
James L. Butts
John Gunther
Edgar Ansel Mowrer
Hiram K. Moderwell
A. R. Decker
Paul Wright
Reginald Sweetland
Constantine Brown
J. Russell Kennedy
William H. Brayden
Junius B. Wood

Whenever you see these names, you see a distinctive newspaper

WHENEVER you see these names in a newspaper, you know that paper has the exclusive city-of-publication rights for the service of the Consolidated Press Association.

These names mean stories by the foremost American writers of telegraphic and cable dispatches.

Whenever you see these names in a newspaper, you know that newspaper speaks to a discriminating audience, an audience that demands something more than a routine record of events, an audience that wants to know the "why" and "how" as well as the "what."

The writers of the Consolidated Press Association and the Chicago Daily News Foreign Service make up the only staff in the world whose dispatches are transmitted on a schedule unbroken by bulletins and uninterrupted by spot news.

Write for details.

The Consolidated Press Association

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

New York	Chicago	San Francisco	Paris
Eighth Floor	Third Floor	Third Floor	Fourth Floor
World Building	Daily News Building	Bulletin Building	19 Rue d'Antin

THIS ISSUE: RETAIL CENSUS PROVIDES NEW BUSINESS SIGNPOSTS

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 — The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America — 1927

MEMBER A.B.C.

SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY.

MEMBER A.B.P.

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1888; Newspaperdom, March, 1892; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Advertising, January 7, 1925; Revised entry, Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Vol. 60. No. 15 — NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 3, 1927 — By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A. $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign. — 10c Per Copy

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

Circulation in Chicago's Better Homes Gives The Daily News Educational Advertising Leadership

THE family that believes in higher education, that can afford to send the boy to college, the sub-deb to boarding school, is representative of that solid, financially responsible citizenry to which the most effective advertising is directed.

This class is predominant in the more than 400,000 Chicago families reached by the circulation of The Daily News. Educational advertisers, accordingly, choose The Chicago Daily News above every other Chicago week-day newspaper. During the first six months of 1927, The Daily News carried 24,143 agate lines of educational advertising . . . 2,775 lines more than the highest week-day morning newspaper . . . 18,266 lines more than the next evening newspaper.

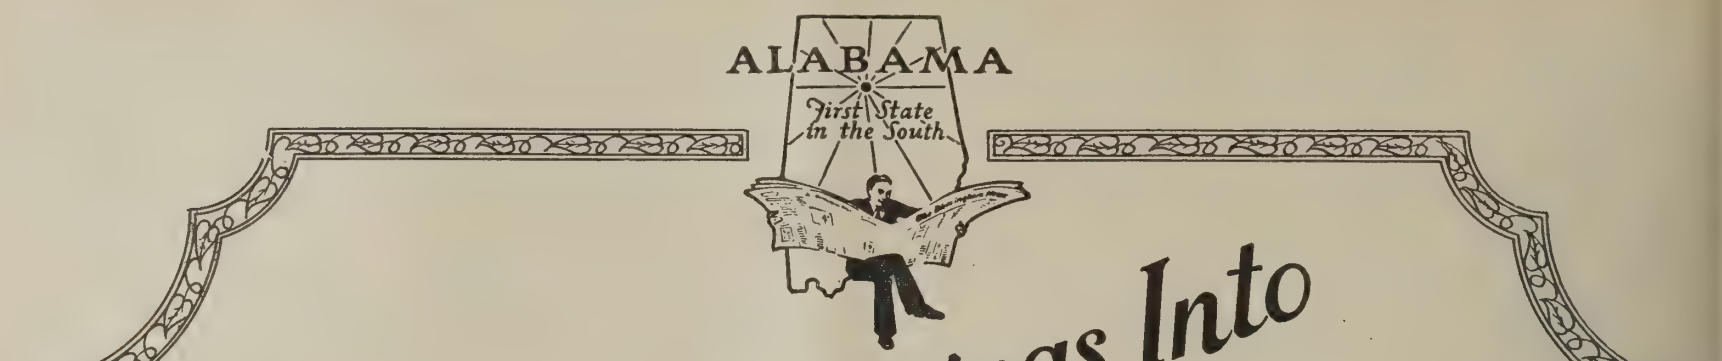
Leadership in educational advertising is indicative of "character," that important factor of circulation which, linked with concentration, produces the effectiveness in advertising for which The Daily News is notable.

September's here, bringing oysters, radio, the early frost, grid practice and

College Days

Thousands of young members of The Daily News family are leaving this month for college, boarding and prep schools and the first great adventure of youth.

In this, as in many other activities of the Chicago home, The Daily News is glad to serve as an adviser and a friend. Its educational advertising pages offer each week-day the most comprehensive index to educational opportunities published by any Chicago newspaper. Its Personal Service Bureau furnishes literature and advice on educational subjects. In addition it issues "What School and Why," a yearly guide to the leading schools and colleges of the United States.



The Daily News performs these services because it believes in the value of college training—because it is eager to maintain as a predominant factor in its circulation the alert, progressive young men and women that higher education develops.

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

Advertising Representatives:	NEW YORK J. B. Woodward 110 E. 42d St.	CHICAGO Woodward & Kelly 360 N. Michigan Ave.	DETROIT Woodward & Kelly 408 Fine Arts Building	SAN FRANCISCO C. Geo. Krogness 253 First National Bank Bldg.

Member of the 100,000 Group of American Cities

The Average Daily Net Paid Circulation of the Daily Nev [illegible]x Months Ending June 30, 1927—441,414

Alabama Swings Into A Snappy Fall Stride!

Fall Business in Alabama will be good—just mark that down for a fact.

Crop conditions throughout the state were never better at this time of the year. Advancing cotton prices, new highway construction and other public improvements announced for the near future are giving impetus to business in every line.

In Birmingham the iron and steel industries show increasing activity. Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company (U. S. Steel) plants, after several weeks of idleness for repairs and replacements are again in full operation, and the tonnage of unfilled orders of the U. S. Steel Corporation shows a good increase.

Coal production is increasing—coke demand is showing renewed life—there is improvement in the demand for cast iron pipe. Retail merchants are making their plans for an active selling season. Everybody is "getting set" for a good Fall business.

ALABAMA-BIRMINGHAM—FORM A RICH AND RESPONSIVE MARKET. THE "SURVEY," A THOROUGH ANALYSIS OF THE NEWSPAPER SITUATION IN BIRMINGHAM, WITH MUCH VALUABLE INFORMATION CONCERNING THE WEALTH AND SIZE OF THE CITY, SUBURBAN AND STATE-WIDE MARKETS, TELLS HOW YOU MAY COVER THIS FERTILE FIELD MOST PROFITABLY AND ECONOMICALLY. SEND FOR IT AND LEARN THE FACTS.

The Birmingham News

Morning Evening Sunday

The South's Greatest Newspaper

NATIONAL REPRESENTATIVES

KELLY SMITH CO., New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia—J. C. HARRIS, Jr., Atlanta

Retail Sales---$362,168,000

¶ The Domestic Distribution Department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States selected Baltimore as the first city in which to make a Distribution Census.

¶ The figures now available show that 11,455 retail establishments sold merchandise amounting to $362,168,000 in 1926. The average sales per capita were $454.82.

¶ Sales by 1,588 wholesale establishments in 1926 totalled $468,924,400 during the same period.

¶ The complete report based on figures collected by the United States Bureau of the Census lists figures of vital importance to any firm interested in the possibilities of the Baltimore market.

¶ The analysis is remarkably complete—although one all important fact was not included.

¶ And that fact is that the way to reach this Baltimore market is through the columns of the Sunpapers! But a fact as well known as that was probably regarded as self-evident!

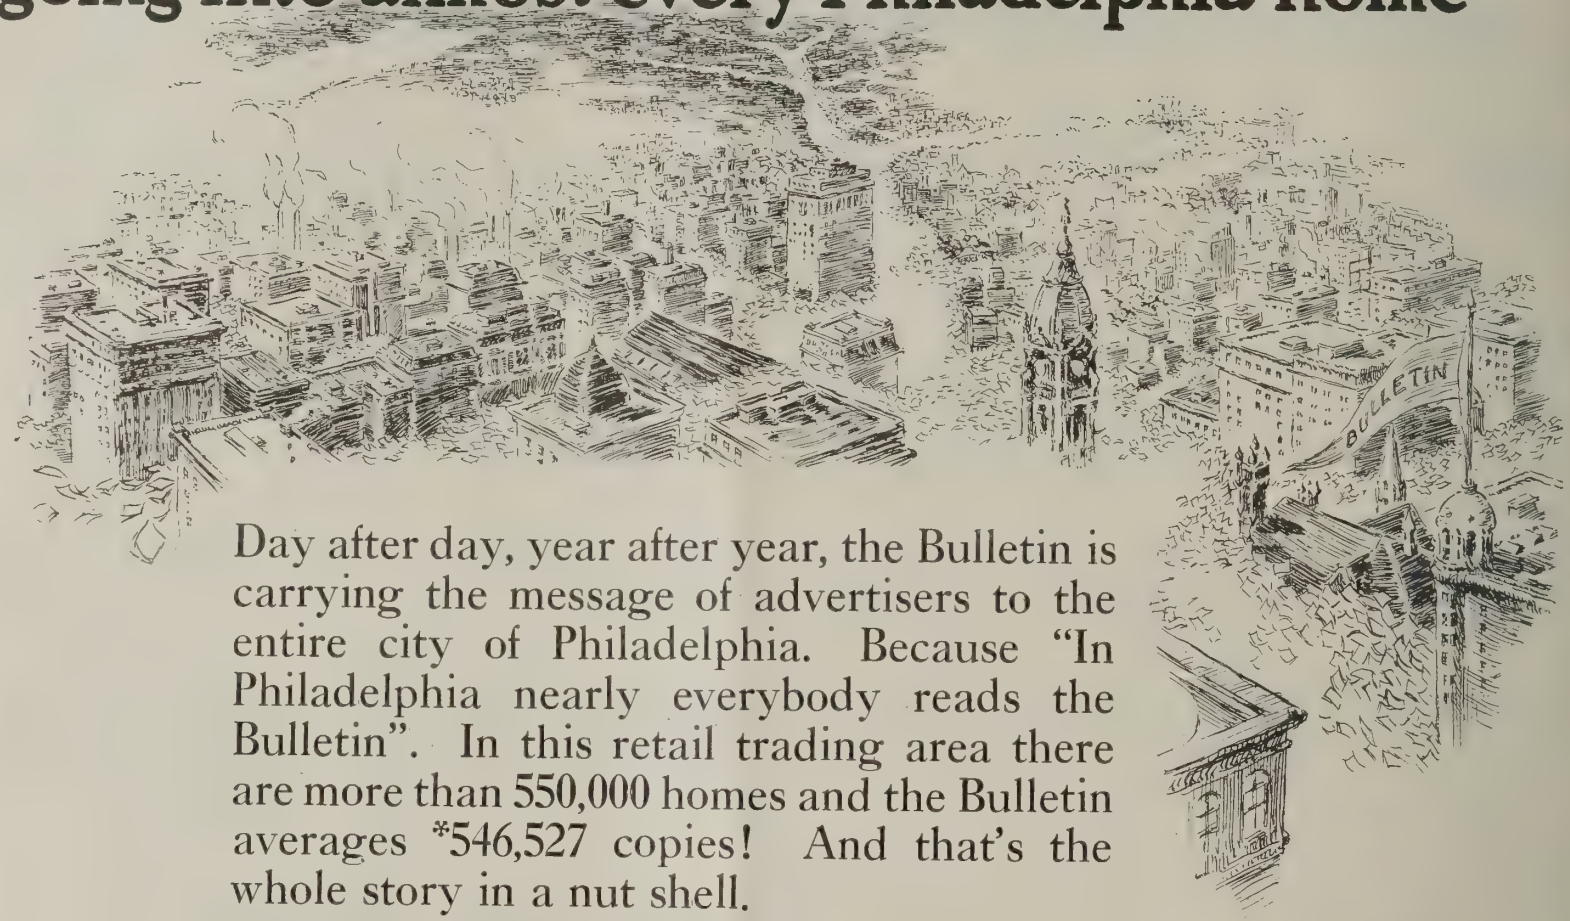
Average Net Paid Circulation for Month of July, 1927

Daily (M. & E.) . . . 248,765

Sunday 195,542

Gain of 5,454 Daily and 7,809 Sunday Over July, 1926

JOHN B. WOODWARD
Bowery Bank Bldg.,
110 E. 42d St., New York
GUY S. OSBORN
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago
C. GEORGE KROGNESS
First National Bank Bldg.,
San Francisco



Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

MORNING EVENING SUNDAY

Baltimoreans Don't Say "Newspaper"—They Say "SUNpaper"

Every evening a stream of Bulletins flows out, going into almost every Philadelphia home

Day after day, year after year, the Bulletin is carrying the message of advertisers to the entire city of Philadelphia. Because "In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads the Bulletin". In this retail trading area there are more than 550,000 homes and the Bulletin averages *546,527 copies! And that's the whole story in a nut shell.

DOMINATE PHILADELPHIA — Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

"The Evening Bulletin is sold on its merits as a newspaper; no prize, premium, coupon, guessing contests, or other methods of artificially stimulating circulation have been used."

New York	247 Park Avenue (Park-Lexington Building)
Chicago	Verree & Conklin, Inc., 28 East Jackson Boulevard
Detroit	C. L. Weaver, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 321 Lafayette Boulevard
San Francisco	Thomas L. Emory, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 681 Market Street

*Audit Bureau of Circulation's report of net paid daily average circulation for the six months ending March 31, 1927. April, 1927, 557,090, May, 565,147, June, 552,608 copies daily.

(Copyright 1927, Bulletin Company)

Member of Associated Press

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication, by The Editor & Publisher Co.
J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1700 Times Building, 42nd St., at Broadway,
New York. Telephones, Bryant 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056. Charter Member Audit Bureau
of Circulations. Member Associated Business Papers Inc.

Vol. 60 NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 3, 1927 No. 15

Advertising Cost of Baltimore Retailers Averaged About 3 Percent of Sales

Detailed Census of City's Distribution, First of Series to Be Published for Typical U. S. Markets, Reveals Remarkable Wealth of Trade Information

By ARTHUR ROBB

NEW signposts are being erected upon the Main Street of business—retail distribution. Copies of the new 1926 Census of Distribution of Baltimore, laid this week upon the desks of newspaper editors, advertising agencies, and business men reveal facts hitherto regarded as unobtainable regarding the channels by which the stream of manufactured and cultivated materials reach the consumer. They tell in the language of dollars and cents how $369,000,000 passed from the pockets of the 200,000 families of a great metropolitan market into the cash registers of 11,127 merchants operating stores classified under 44 heads.

They delineate many ramifications of retail trade and reveal outlets for goods the consumer needs which must astound all who have not a minute and detailed knowledge of the retail broadways and back alleys. The figures, presented in gratifyingly clear fashion tell a story almost in paragraph form, revealing their import to any business man of average intelligence rather than concealing it for the benefit of the wizards who can combine cryptic figures to prove anything. They lend themselves easily to comparison with the already established fund of knowledge and the auspices under which they were compiled make safe the prediction that they will stand unshaken under any such trial.

For instance, EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week assembled the table which appears below, comparing the retail sales in a number of important trades with the newspaper advertising they carried last year in the Baltimore press. In many lines, the table indicates, the proportion of its retail sales to the total parallels amazingly closely the proportion of its advertising linage to the total linage carried by all the city's newspapers. In other lines, such as radio, which are marked by intense public interest and keen price competition, the proportion of advertising considerably exceeds the proportion of retail sales.

Rough calculation of the money represented in the linage accredited to the listed retail lines gives it a value of about $11,300,000, or about 3 per cent of the total listed retail sales. The newspaper rate used in the calculation was an average of the national and local cards of all the newspapers, weighted according to the total volume of business carried by each of the several Baltimore newspapers. The figure was a small fraction below 30 cents per agate line, but the round 30 cents was used for convenience in calculation.

The percentages of linage were calculated for each class against the total volume of all the papers, including a considerable volume which is not primarily retail, but much of which has some influence in attracting and guiding the consumer in retail purchases.

The classifications of the census and of the linage records kept by the Baltimore newspapers cannot be aligned throughout the scale of retail trade and there is no doubt that some of the blanks in the linage column could be filled from the miscellaneous line, or from some other lines which have a more general definition in the newspaper offices than in the minds of the census enumerators.

Building materials, paint and similar products, plumbing and heating supplies are listed under separate headings in the census to quite an impressive proportion of the total sales, but the newspapers' records show no entry on any of these lines. The oil burner linage alone in several Northern cities is now as large an element at certain seasons as several of the classifications listed.

Nevertheless, despite the occasional gaps in the comparison, the ratio of 3 per cent between total sales and total advertising is directly in line with the current theory of space-buyers and space-sellers.

Department stores, of course, had the largest volume of business for any single retail classification. Their 1926 turnover, covering 44 stores, totalled $54,651,200, or 14.8 per cent of the total sales. In the table below, this total is combined with that given by the Census for drygoods and notions, to produce a total of $59,254,900, or 16.06 per cent of the total. The department stores were likewise the largest users of newspaper space, taking 11,362,072 lines, or 21 per cent of the newspapers' advertising volume. Some portion of this advertising budget should, no doubt, if it could be subdivided, be applied to other lines.

Directly behind the department stores in volume come the 2,852 grocers and delicatessens with aggregate sales of $54,285,200, or 14.71 per cent of the total. In the table below their operations have been combined with all of the other sales of foods and drinks to produce the stupendous total of $101,387,400, which is no doubt well below the mark in that it does not include the food sold in department stores and chains whose principal sales are in other lines. The total listed as spent for food is 27.47 per cent of the consumer's retail dollar. Food advertising in the Baltimore newspapers, principally national in character, totalled 9.70 per cent of the total linage, or 2,775,615 agate lines. As most of the 6,225 outlets for the sale of food are negligible as important advertising prospects the discrepancy between retail sales and the amount spent for newspaper advertising is more apparent than actual. Discounting it thus heavily, it is still plain that advertising is not playing its full part in the distribution of foodstuffs.

Radically different conditions prevail in the automotive industry, which took the third largest share of the retail income—new automobiles representing a turnover of $16,810,200, or 4.56 per cent of the total, taken in through 60 stores.

Added to this total in the table below are the sales of accessory stores and of gasoline and oil, to produce the total of $34,283,600, or 9.29 per cent of the total sales. Automotive advertising, including the classified used car copy, also accessories and gasoline, totalled 5,249,445 agate lines, or 9.70 per cent of the total. The agate line is demonstrated to be an indispensable factor in keeping the motor channels flowing.

Furniture and housefurnishings, sold through 258 establishments, are checked with total sales of $16,607,600, or 4.50 per cent of the total. This does not include the great volume of this class of goods which reach the public through department stores, hardware stores and other establishments which carry them as a sideline. Another figure in the table which takes these factors into consideration, gives the total for furniture and house-furnishings at $30,683,300, or 8.32 per cent of the total. The linage for this merchandise totalled 3,803,946 agate lines, or 7.03 per cent of the total advertising volume.

With surveys like that just concluded in Baltimore extended to other cities and made annually or biennially over the more important markets of the country, advertisers would be armed with a definite knowledge of how great a quantity a given area could absorb of their product and therefore how much advertising and sales efforts should be put forth to attain their proportion of the total. Newspaper advertising forces would also have a definite key to the amount of business their media should receive from advertisers and commodity groups.

Table VIII of the census presents data on the relation of wages and salaries to total sales. The average for the entire city is 11.89 per cent. The highest ratio of wages to total net sales obtains in type-writer and calculating machine establishments—33.08 per cent; electrical supply and appliance stores show a ratio of 25.72 per cent; optical goods stores,

(Continued on page 44)

COMPARISON OF RETAIL SALES AND LINAGE IN BALTIMORE NEWSPAPERS

Kind of Business	No. of Establishments	Amount of Sales in $	Percent of Total Sales	Amount of Newspaper Linage in Year 1926	Percent of Total Newspaper Linage, 1926
Art and Antique	59	$841,000	.23	.....	....
Automotive, Accessory, Gas and Oil	437	34,283,600	9.29	5,249,445	9.70
Food*	6,225	101,387,400	27.47	2,775,615	5.13
Boot and Shoe	194	5,611,600	1.52	650,338	1.20
Building Materials	62	14,351,100	3.89	.....	....
Cigar and Tobacco	278	3,610,400	.98	926,466	1.71
Clothing, Women's†	250	9,784,200	2.65	3,156,803	5.83
Clothing Men's‡	545	14,557,200	3.94	1,981,210	3.66
Coal, Wood, and Ice	163	11,980,100	3.25	.....	....
Department Stores	465	59,254,900	16.06	11,362,072	21.00
Drugs and Medical	367	11,059,800	3.00	2,337,423	4.32
Electrical Goods	57	4,791,400	1.30	.....	....
5 & 10-Cents Stores	37	4,620,100	1.25	.....	....
Florists	107	1,792,400	.49	.....	....
Furniture and House-Furnishings	258	16,607,600	4.50	3,803,946	7.03
General	8	114,400	.03	.....	....
Hay, Grain & Feed	24	1,958,900	.53	.....	....
Hardware	261	8,504,800	2.30	.....	....
Jewelry	145	5,307,000	1.44	602,004	1.11
Leather Goods	31	707,800	.19	.....	....
Motorcycles & Bicycles	10	115,300	.03	.....	....
Musical Instruments	49	2,146,700	.58	383,917	.71
Optical Goods	22	946,000	.26	.....	....
Paint, Oil Varnish & Wallpaper	33	403,100	.11	.....	....
Plumbing & Heating Supplies	53	2,330,100	.63	.....	....
Radio	17	934,500	.25	625,899	1.15
Restaurants	706	12,659,800	3.43	.....	....
Sporting Goods	14	615,100	.17	.....	....
Stationery & Books	73	3,683,400	1.00	305,212	.56
Toys & Games	11	110,400	.03	.....	....
Typewriters, Etc.	16	763,400	.21	.....	....
Unclassified	150	33,192,900	8.99	3,509,278	6.49
Totals	11,127	$369,027,300	100.00	37,675,628	69.60

*Includes Grocery and Delicatessen, Dairy and Poultry Products, Fruit and Vegetables, Meat and Fish, Bakeries, Soft Drinks and Ice-cream.

‡Includes Men's Furnishings and Ready-to-wear, Custom Tailors, and Men's and Boys' Hats and Caps.

†Includes Women's Clothing and Millinery.

MODESTO NEWS-HERALD SOLD TO McCLATCHYS

Owners of Sacramento and Fresno Dailies New Owners of Morning and Evening Combination

Purchase of the Modesto (Cal.) News-Herald by the McClatchy family, owners of the Sacramento and Fresno Bees, has been announced.

Immediate control of the new publication was assumed by the new owners, who were stated as C. K. McClatchy, editor of the Sacramento Bee, his wife, Ella K. McClatchy, and his son, Carlos K. McClatchy, editor of the Fresno Bee.

The price paid was not revealed.

E. L. Sherman and several associates were the former publishers.

The Modesto paper is published both in the morning and evening. It is a consolidation of the Evening News and Morning Herald, the combination having been consummated about three years ago.

Upon taking over the paper, the McClatchys announced that Hugh Walls will continue as business manager, and that Frederick B. Moore, formerly of the San Francisco Bulletin, Los Angeles Times and Fresno Bee will be the managing editor.

PURITANISM IN NEWS HIT BY CITY EDITOR

James Barrett, New York World, Sees Growing Tendency to Judge News on a Moral Basis—Scorns "Menace" of Tabs

A "growing menace of puritanism in news" was decried recently by James W. Barrett, city editor of the New York World, addressing a dinner meeting of the Suburban Press Club at East Orange, N. J. Mr. Barrett's subject was announced as "The Effect of Tabloid Journalism on the American Press," and instead of pulling the long face, and giving a blue-law talk on the menace of the modern picture paper usually expected from a representative of a standard sized daily, he insisted that what was needed was less pussy-footing and more frankness and candor on the part of the American press.

"I am not disturbed about the tabloids," he declared. "I am alarmed by the spectacle of newspapers refusing to print crime on the ground that it might be bad for readers' morals, when the crime concerned may be of vital concern to the safety and well being of the community. I am more deeply concerned about the growing tendency to judge news on a moral basis—the tendency to ask is it good, instead of asking first of all, is it true? The tendency to ask 'would it be good for our people to read this' instead of asking 'what are the facts?'

"I am more deeply disturbed about the growing tendency of the so-called decent papers to create popular demi-gods, like Lindbergh, for example, instead of trying to put every news development in its proper historical and scientific background.

"Why did nobody publish the story of the history of the Lindbergh family? Because we think it would be bad for people to know that the domestic situation there was not as beautiful and harmonious as it ought to be to be the background for the immaculate young man whose high moral qualities rather than his engine enabled him to make the first non-stop flight from New York to Paris.

"Our business is to get the news first. Our business is to get the whole collection of facts, no matter how well or how badly they fit in with our moral concepts, and to do it first! If we do our own job and discharge our own responsibilities, we don't need to worry about the tabloids. But a puritanical pose will not serve as a protection against our own incompetency."

FLORIDA MERGER

Clearwater Sun Buys Morning Herald at Bankruptcy Sale

The Clearwater (Fla.) Morning Herald was absorbed last week by the Clearwater Evening Sun which immediately suspended its Saturday afternoon edition and inaugurated a Sunday morning edition.

The Herald was purchased after going through bankruptcy by Paul Poynter, majority owner of the Clearwater Sun, the St. Petersburg Times and other newspapers. Clearwater is now a one newspaper town. J. R. Brumby is publisher and editor of the Sun.

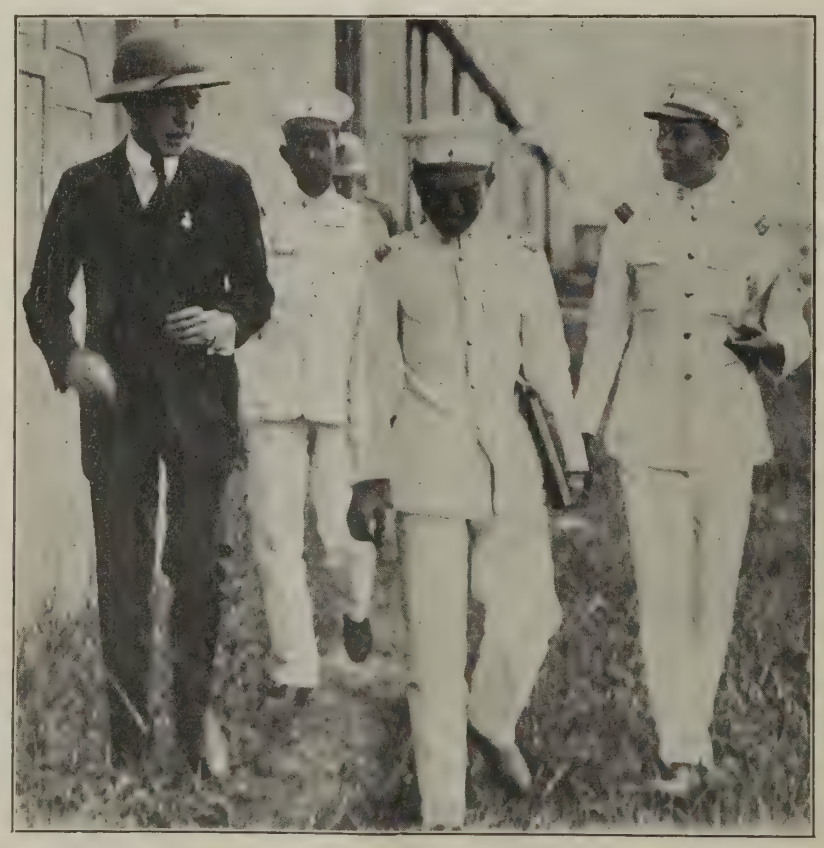
N. Y. TIMES SPENDING $500,000 ON CABLES

Tolls for Last 12 Months Reached That Figure Editorial Reveals—News from China Costs $350 Per Column Is Claim

Commenting on resolutions regarding cable rates and transmission considered at the International Press Conference held in Geneva last week upder the auspices of the League of Nations, the New York Times in an editorial published Aug. 26, revealed that cable tolls had cost it in excess of $500,000 during the last 12 months. The editorial read in part:

"The enormous volume of press cables and radios that has been sent across the Atlantic ever since the war has resulted in greatly increased facilities for transmission. It now costs five cents a word for press messages from London and five and a half cents from Paris. The German and Italian rates are several cents higher. This means that a column of news from London costs upward of $50 for cable tolls alone. The press rate from Tokio is 21 cents a word and from Shanghai 31 cents. This works out at more than $200 per column from Japan and between $300 and $350 per column from China. It is thus obvious that, a transpacific news service is an expensive luxury.

"As the number of ties which bind together the different continents continues to grow, the question of cable and radio communication becomes of world-wide interest. Frequent mention has been made in our columns of the advantages of easy press communication in furthering better relations between nations. One of the reasons why the Orient and the Occident are not in complete accord is because the high cost of intercommunication has prevented that easy dispatch of news which prevails between Europe and America. Incidentally, if the European press had availed itself of the trans-atlantic facilities to the same extent as have the American newspapers, there would be much better understanding of America in Europe than has been manifested in recent weeks."



EDITOR & PUBLISHER CALENDAR

Sept. 5-17—Educational Graphic Arts Exposition, Grand Central Palace, New York.
Sept. 8-10—Montana Press Assn., annual convention, Great Falls, Mont.
Sept. 9-10—Northwest Texas Press Assn., annual convention, Wichita Falls, Tex.
Sept. 12-15—Financial Advertisers Assn., annual convention, West Baden, Ind.
Sept. 15-17—Washington Press Assn., meeting, Wenatchee, Wash.
Sept. 20-21—National Publishers Assn., 8th annual meeting, Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa.
Sept. 21-23—Tri-State Editorial Assn., annual convention, Sioux City, Ia.
Sept. 21-23—Mississippi Press Assn., annual convention, Clarksdale, Miss.

WELLIVER A PITTSBURGH EDITOR

Judson C. Welliver former Washington correspondent later President Harding's publicity man, is now editor of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, six-day morning paper owned by Paul Block.

BLACK INSPECTS SIAMESE AIRPORT

Van Lear Black, chairman of the board of the A. S. Abell Company, publishers of the Baltimore Sun and Evening Sun, photographed in Bangkok, where he made an inspection of Siam's largest airport. Mr. Black recently flew from Holland to Java.

REPORTERS UNEARTH FLOGGING EVIDENCE

Two Texas Men Exposed Case, Resulting in First Trial Under New Anti-Mask Law

(By telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

TYLER, Tex., Sept. 1.—As the first trial under Texas' new anti-mask law began here today, a young country editor and a cigar chewing reporter from the city settled down to cover the final chapters of the story of terror and hooded floggers they uncovered almost three months ago. They were Hal Winsborough, editor and part owner of the Marshall (Tex.) News and Messenger and Ed Rider, staff correspondent of the Houston Chronicle.

Early in June, four masked men broke into the homes of tenant farmers near Marshall and flogged an aged couple, their son and his wife. Hints of the outrage crept into Houston. Rider, who had just walked into the city room after covering an up-state murder trial, left for Marshall less than an hour later. The floggers' victims had disappeared. Ranchers warned Rider he'd "better not write nothing to hurt this county." Rider found the old couple at last fleeing down a lonely road in their rickety wagon. He obtained photographs and an exclusive interview, giving first details of the flogging. And took the victims back to Marshall with him. Telegrams to Federal Judge Estes, of Texarkana, and Governor Moody brought Texas Rangers and Department of Justice agents to investigate the peonage angle. Rider enlisted Winsborough's aid, and the editor traced the other two victims and brought them back.

The two newspapermen carried their evidence to the district attorney. A special session of the grand jury was called.

Rewards of $2,500 were offered. And Cain Anderson, wealthy planter and rancher, and three other men were indicted with speed that made a record in East Texas criminal history. All this time, both men were constantly shadowed and threatened. Winsborough is a Missouri University journalism graduate. Rider has worked on the Seattle Star, N. E. A. Service, Inc., and was managing editor on the Houston Press. Others covering the trial are H. C. Marshall, Associated Press; Tom Butler, Tyler Courier-Times, and Asa Bordages, Houston Press.

ALABAMA LIBEL BILL DIES ON CALENDAR

Measure Prohibiting Criticism of Public Officials Was Unacted Upon as Legislature Closed

An effort to silence press criticism in Alabama failed last week when a libel bill directed at newspapers and sponsored by Representative Frey died with the legislative session which ended Aug. 26.

The bill, should it have become a law, would have given any city, county or state official civil recourse against any newspaper publishing criticisms of his public actions.

James Esdale, grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan of Alabama, and other Klan officials of the state are said to have attended yesterday's session and witnessed the death of the measure, which the Birmingham Age-Herald said "it was generally agreed was sponsored by the organization which Mr. Esdale heads in Alabama." Mr. Esdale is reported to have conferred more than once during the debate in the House with Representative Frey. Both the Age-Herald and the Birmingham News have vigorously attacked the Klan in connection with Alabama's recent siege of floggings.

GENEVA CONFERENCE DENOUNCES CENSORSHIP

Resolutions Also Passed Regarding Press Rates, Equality in Government News, and Property Rights in News—"Battles" Fail to Materialize

By ALBIN E. JOHNSON
Geneva Correspondent of EDITOR & PUBLISHER

(Special Cable to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

GENEVA, Aug. 31.—Resolutions regarding press rates, news property rights, equality of official and non-official agencies in the handling of government news, censorship, transportation of news and protection against unauthorized lifting of news, passed by the League of Nations International Press Conference which concluded here Monday, will be presented to the League Council and Assembly. These bodies will recommend to all governments members of the League that they comply as far as possible with the desires of the world press.

A resolution against governmental censorship of press dispatches proposed by Robert P. Scripps at Monday's conference session was unanimously adopted. After reciting the advantages of uncensored communication of news, the resolution said:

"Therefore be it resolved by this conference that all governments which now impose censorship be asked to abandon and publicly to announce abandonment of such censorship at least as applied to dispatches of foreign correspondents and at least in times of peace."

The conference was successful beyond the most hopeful expectations. These meetings which arose from the resolution of M. Yanez, a member of the Chilean delegation to the League, have blazed the way for similar future conferences, including other branches of the journalistic profession and industry. They have also brought about international recognition of the press as the most powerful factor in the world's political, economic and social life.

Nearly a score of Americans participated and are being given credit as largely responsible for the great amount of business transacted and the good feeling which marked the settlement of contentious questions. American initiative was injected into the meeting by Karl A. Bickel, Kent Cooper, M. Koenigsberg and F. T. Birchall and while the representatives of the American press associations came to Geneva prepared to fight for their respective domestic policies, according to pre-session reports, the expected battle did not materialize and the American delegates mutually suggested compromise measures on property rights and news-gathering equality which steered the conference clear of dangerous rocks.

From the American point of view, the resolution on news protection stands out as the most important. It recommends as a fundamental principle that "Publication of a piece of news is legitimate in all cases where the news in question has reached the person who publishes it by a regular and unobjectionable manner and not by an act of unfair competition. No one may acquire the right to suppress news of public interest."

The conference decided that the fullest protection should be granted to unpublished news during the period of transmission for publication. It was provided that it shall be illegal for unauthorized persons to receive for publication or in any way distribute through the press or by radio broadcasting and in any other way information destined for publication in the press or through broadcasting.

What was heralded as a fight between the Associated Press and the United Press was settled by a resolution stating that "there shall be no preferential right in official news issued by governments or by government officials. Such news may be published without restriction in full or in part. Free and equal opportunity shall be granted to all newspapers, press services, press bureaus and correspondents for access to and transmission of such news."

Regarding property right in published news, the conference recommended protection which permits reproduction within a specified period, subject to full acknowledgement of the source of such news and suitable payment.

The principle was affirmed that newspapers and news associations, etc., are entitled to the reward of their labors after as well as before publication of exclusive features. It is provided that this recommendation should not be regarded as encouraging a news monopoly.

International agreement upon this matter is urged by the conference which asks the League of Nations to request its member governments to give it their immediate consideration.

Censorship in time of peace was denounced in a resolution declaring it to be one of the most fruitful causes of misunderstanding and conflicts.

A petition submitted by five of the most prominent suppressed Italian newspapers, including Aventi, Il Popolo, Matteotti's La Justicia and Voce Republicaine, signed by Signor Turati and others was not considered officially by the conference, but privately Lord Burnham, the chairman, and others, declared that conditions which now exist indicate that Fascism is doomed to perish eventually.

The resolution regarding peacetime censorship says:

"It is our unanimous conviction that peace-time censorship, whether carried on openly or disguised, is a fundamental obstacle to the normal exchange of international information, rendering difficult understandings between nations."

Impossibility of abolition of censorship in many countries for the time being is recognized, but it is recommended that censors be news specialists and that journalists be informed of deletions in the copy, that transmission charges on suppressed wordage be refunded and that complete equality of treatment shall be granted to all journalists.

Numerous other resolutions asked that international courtesies, such as passport simplification, telegraphic facilities, freedom from taxation, etc., be granted journalists. Regional press understandings were urged. Correspondents were asked to exercise care to avoid tendencious, inaccurate, exaggerated and deliberately distorted news.

A special resolution adopted appeals to the press of the world to contribute every means at its disposal to the establishment of world peace, combatting hatreds between nations and between classes, preparing the way for moral disarmament.

A series of resolutions concerning press rates asks for a 50 per cent reduction wherever possible in the present schedules; for priority of press telegrams over regular commercial traffic; for the establishment of an "urgent press" category at a 50 per cent increase over the regular press rates via telephone, radio, cables and telegraphs; asks that permission be granted for transmission of coded messages at press rates, especially by wireless.

It was urged that newspaper transportation facilities be improved and that circulation of newspapers internationally be facilitated and encouraged rather than prohibited, as is the case in several Balkan states.

Nearly 200 delegates and advisors participated, including 63 official delegates, 20 assessors, and 36 experts from 38 countries. Sir Eric Drummond, secretary of the League of Nations, entertained the delegates at dinner, and M. Avenol, Under-Secretary of the League, tendered a reception, as did Nicola Titulescu, Roumanian member of the League council, acting for the latter body.

Robert P. Scripps, president of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, who replied in behalf of the American Press to Sir Eric Drummond's welcoming speech at the official banquet of the conference, later gave a dinner in behalf of the United Press and the Scripps-Howard newspapers to the British delegation.

The guests included Lord Burnham; Sir Eric Drummond; Sir Campbell Stuart, of the London Times; Sir Roderick Jones, of Reuters; Hon. Frank Carrell, of the Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph; A. C. C. Holts, of the Melbourne Argus; Thomas Mackenzie, chief editor of the Friend of Bloemfontein, South Africa; Arthur Sweetser and H. R. Cummings, American and English members, respectively, of the League secretariat; James McDonald, chairman of the American Foreign Policy Association; Karl A. Bickel, president of the United Press; G. B. Parker, editor-in-chief of Scripps-Howard newspapers; Ed L. Keen, vice-president and general European manager of the United Press; Dr. E. J. Bing, European business manager of the United Press; and Henry Wood, manager of the United Press bureau at Geneva.

After the dinner, which was served in a special apartment of the Hotel des Bergues, the guests, at Mr. Scripps' suggestion, engaged in round table discussion of Anglo-American relations and the common interests in world peace.

GENEVA GROUP VIEWS PARIS SIGHTS

Photograph taken in the Tuileries Garden, Paris, following a meeting preparatory to the Geneva press conference of the League of Nations. In the group are (left to right) George B. Parker, editor in chief of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers; Robert P. Scripps, proprietor of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers; Karl A. Bickel, president, United Press Associations; Thomas Sidlo, counsel for the Scripps-Howard Newspapers; A. L. Bradford, chief correspondent in France for the United Press.

MORE PICTURE SPEED

Beam Radio Service Expected to Make for Rapid Transmission

Material increase in the rapidity of transmission of news pictures is promised when the first short-wave beam wireless station operating between the United States and England inaugurates its service within a few weeks, according to the Marconi Company.

The company has announced that it is developing a new system of facsimile transmission especially adapted to the beam system and hopes to be able soon to send written and printed matter, drawings and photographs by high speed wireless telegraphy.

The beam system differs from the present system of transmission, where energy is radiated in all directions, by employing a reflector which concentrates the whole energy of the transmitter in a very narrow angle. Provided the distant receiving point lies within the arc of that angle it is obvious it will receive about 36 times more energy that it would if the same power radiated uniformly throughout 360 degrees. The employment of a similar reflector on the receiving end, still further increases energy received.

BROUN IN NATION NEXT WEEK

Heywood Broun's first contribution for the Nation will appear next week, he told EDITOR & PUBLISHER on Wednesday evening. His copy, he said, had to be in on Thursday and he hadn't decided what he was going to write about. Reports of threatened injunction proceedings by the New York World, Broun's former employer, if the writer contributed to a magazine, were denied. Mr. Broun was confident there would be no court action resulting from his contract with the Nation. His column in the Nation will be headed "It Seems to Heywood Broun."

DAILY BROADCASTING NEWS

The New Bedford (Mass.) Evening Standard is broadcasting news dispatches nightly through the radio station WMAF, North Dartmouth, Mass., operated by Col. Edward H. R. Green, son of the late Hetty Green.

SAFETY-FIRST DRIVES BY NEWSPAPERS URGED TO CUT INSURANCE RATES

Publishers Are Paying High Premiums Now on Liability for Delivery Trucks Because of Accident Frequency—Charge Is Double That of Other Industries

NEWSPAPER publishers, seeking to cut expenses, may find a way by considering the drivers of their trucks. Death often rides with a load of newspapers on a wild dash to catch a train; and costly injuries follow a truck in its haste to meet an outpouring baseball crowd.

Insurance rates are high; but, as explained to EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week by an insurance agent, these rates can be cut by carefulness and by the creation of what is referred to in insurance circles as "low accident frequency."

Public liability insurance rates are made by a rate making body created by law and filed with the insurance commission of the state. In New York the body is known as the National Casualty and Bureau Conference. The rates are based on experience records of the industry concerned. Credit is given for good experience and a debit is charged when the experience is bad.

At the present time the newspaper rate for public liability is high as compared with some other industries. In New York the average rate for a truck under one ton operated by a newspaper is $538 a year. This insures for all public liability. For the same insurance coverage contractors pay $342 a year for the same sized truck, while retail stores pay $198.

The newspaper rate can be cut 50 per cent by use of the good experience allowance, and this allowance is based on individual records.

Thus, if a newspaper's drivers have been found to be reckless and the rate is high, a safety-first campaign among the drivers may very well change the experience record and bring about a lower charge to the publisher.

"There is only one way to reduce accidents of a newspaper's automobile fleet, and that is by constant education among the drivers," the insurance agent advised. "Monthly meetings with addresses on the necessity of careful driving is one way of accomplishing this end.

"It is found effective for such speakers to try and make the drivers picture themselves in the position of the parent whose child was injured or killed by some reckless newspaper driver."

There are, of course, many ways to keep the drivers constantly on the alert to avoid accidents. A common practice is to award prizes to the best drivers, the men who have the fewest number of accidents over a given period of time; or to the men, or groups of men, who keep their machines in the best condition.

The Chicago American is operating very successfully a safety council, with officials of the paper acting as judges. Every driver is compelled to report his accidents to this council at its regular meetings. Model trucks, street cars, and other "properties" are provided, and the drivers are made to picture for the benefit of the judges how the accident happens. The judges decide whether or not the driver was at fault, questioning him carefully. Three times before the safety council amounts to a discharge.

A newspaper man's view of the subject was furnished EDITOR & PUBLISHER by Thomas Dowling, circulation director of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers, with headquarters on the New York Telegram.

"The newspapers themselves," he said, "may be held largely responsible for the high insurance rates. Newspaper drivers have a habit of playing fire department and making race tracks out of crowded city streets. Only the other day I rode with one of my own drivers from the Telegram plant three and a half miles through traffic to the Grand Central Station. We left at 5:30 to catch a 5:50 train. We made it, with plenty of time to spare; but I don't care to make the ride again.

"It is hard to impress upon these drivers the delicate line between the need of rushing to get copies on stands to get readers and the need of going slow to keep readers. Newspapers make more enemies than friends, I believe, by the way trucks are handled.

"A newspaper truck is rushing to be first at a given point in order to get more readers and injures some one. The crowd which gathers, as well as the victim, become angry at the newspaper whose name is on the truck that did the damage.

"An increase of $3 a week in wages may mean the difference between a good and a bad driver. For $45 a week, let us say, unintelligent and reckless service is obtained, while for $48 steadier men are available. It costs the newspaper $150 a year more for the driver of that truck, but at the same time the insurance rate may be cut.

"A newspaper that pays its drivers good money is engaging a salesman and a mechanic combined. Such a driver takes better care of his car and helps keep the circulation figures up.

"To prevent accidents one important point is to keep the automobiles of a fleet in good condition. It is not rare for a newspaper truck to make as many as 500 stops a day. Our trucks are checked every day and we tear down a car and overhaul each truck every 15 months."

OPENS WIRE AT 5 A. M.

I. N. S. Advances Starting Time to Expedite Filing

International News Service started last week opening its main trunk wire at 5 o'clock in the morning.

Marc A. Rose, the executive editor of the service, who is responsible for the change, said that it enabled the staff to move a considerable amount of copy, which formerly clogged the wires when spot news was breaking. He said he had received word from a number of client editors approving the innovation. Five in the morning in this country is 10 o'clock in London and there are many cables that can be moved in the early hours. The main wire closes at 6 o'clock in the evening.

I. N. S. has also printerized its racing wires, which now serve 15 points. Form charts are still being sent by Morse, however.

DAILIES' NAMES PRUNED

Olympia (Wash.) Olympian and Recorder Now Daily Olympian

S. A. Perkins, publisher of the Olmpia (Wash.) Morning Olmpian, Evening Recorder and Sunday Olmpian-Recorder on Sept. 1 changed the names of these papers to the Daily Olympian. Three editions will be published daily under the new name, as well as a Sunday paper.

Mark Shields, former secretary to Gov. Roland H. Hartley, and previously connected with Spokane and Seattle papers, has joined the Olympian as news editor. I. F. Rebmen, former circulation manager of Boise, Idaho, Eugene and Salem, Ore. papers, has been appointed circulation manager and John E. H. Markle has been promoted from advertising to business manager.

J. L. Burton Lewis editor, will continue in charge of news and editorial rooms, and Earl McCallum as general manager.

Plans call for the publication of an eight page minimum. Full 24-hour Associated Press leased wire service has been started.

Mr. Perkins is also owner of the Bellingham (Wash.) Herald.

CRITIC CHASES VOTES

Langdon Post, N. Y., Evening World, to Run for State Assembly

Langdon Post, moving picture critic of the New York Evening World, has turned politician as a side-line. He intends to run for the state assembly as representative of the 10th District on the Democratic ticket, and has been officially designated as a candidate of Tammany Hall. The primaries are to be held Sept. 20.

LANGDON POST

The 10th District comprises New York's theatrical center, lower Park avenue, and part of Greenwich Village. Opposing him on the Republican ticket will be Phelps Phelps, who has represented the district for the last three years.

Mr. Post has been on the staff of the World for the last two and a half years. He began as a district reporter and became moving picture critic last January, succeeding Palmer Smith who resigned to accept a government job in Washington. Mr. Post fought with the first division in France and returning to this country continued his interrupted college course at Harvard.

After he was graduated in 1923, he spent a short time working in the oil fields of Oklahoma, before he came to New York to work for the World. He lives at 129 Park avenue.

FLORIDA CIRCULATORS ORGANIZE GROUP

Frank Stanford, Orlando Morning Sentinel, Elected President at First Meeting Held Aug. 25 with 22 Attending

Organization of the Florida Circulators' Association was completed at a meeting held in Orlando, Aug. 25, and attended by 22 circulation men from leading newspapers of the state.

Frank Stanford, of the Orlando Morning Sentinel, was elected president; Don R. Davis, Tampa Morning Tribune, vice-president, and V. A. Bridges, Miami Daily News, secretary-treasurer. A membership committee was also appointed with John Watkins, Daytona News-Journal, chairman, assisted by Oliver Richmond, St. Petersburg Independent, and R. B. Staats, Lake Worth Leader.

Mr. Davis led a discussion at the meeting on how to increase circulation revenue. It was generally agreed that it was necessary to demand some form of security, either cash or personal bonds from carriers and agents, and to set a dead-line date on which all accounts must be paid. A raise in retail and wholesale rates where possible was urged, and department heads were advised to use greater care in the purchase of supplies.

THREE WORLD MEN RESIGN

Pringle and Taylor to Free Lance—Barnes Doing Movie Work

Resignations of Henry Pringle, Howard C. Barnes and Ralph Taylor from the news staff of the New York World were announced this week. At the same time, Oliver H. P. Garrett left the paper on a leave of absence to engage in moving picture work, writing scenarios on the Pacific Coast.

Pringle and Taylor are planning to free-lance for the magazines. Both have had considerable success lately in this medium, Pringle writing for the American Mercury and Taylor for Munsey publications, the Argosy and Flynn's. Barnes has obtained employment with a moving picture company.

"NET" SALES MEAN NET, SAY BRITISH PAPERS

Certified Figures Do Not Include Promotion Copies, They Reply to Advertising Man's Question

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Writing in the "Readers in Council" feature of The Newspaper World, an advertising man, concealing his identity under the pseudonym "Interested," asked if the firms of accountants who give certificates of circulations to the large newspapers take into account as free copies the undoubtedly large quantities of papers distributed through newsagents in connection with the newspapers' schemes of canvassing for readers (with the free insurance schemes as an added inducement to the public to subscribe to that paper). These copies are supplied to the wholesale newsagents, who pay the newspaper the wholesale rates, and in turn charge the retail newsagent who distributes the copies. The newspaper then pays the newsagent the regular price for every copy he distributes in that manner. Is this regarded as a genuine sale, the Newspaper World correspondent asked, and is it included in the net sales returns which have shown such large increases during this year in London.

The London Daily Mail on Wednesday, Aug. 17, replied with a definite statement from its accountants that the net sale figures of the Daily Mail (1,823,292 copies daily during June) were not inflated by the means suggested in The Newspaper World inquiry, or by any other means. On the following day the London Daily Express (with its certified net sale for July of 1,124,664 copies daily) and the London Daily Chronicle (June figures 986,540 copies daily) replied in similar terms, and the London Daily News (selling 663,014 copies daily in June) published a like statement from its accountants on Aug. 18.

In an article dealing with the question in its Aug. 20 issue The Newspaper World pertinently says: "Net sales certificates are prepared primarily for the use and guidance of advertisers, and it is now some years since the significance of these certificates began to be realized and their publication demanded by advertisers and their agents.

"In the meantime, however, the primary object of net sales certificates has, in some cases, become obscured, with the tendency for net sales to acquire bulk without vitality, so that the advertiser finds his business stimulant 'under proof' though adequate in quantity.

"When net sales, cost of space, and the results cease to move together in a satisfactory ratio, and the first two factors continue to rise while the third remains constant, the advertiser loses his interest in the newspaper auditor's figures, and may even come to dread it."

Point is lent to these thought-provoking sentences by the recently published report of the advertising committee of an English sea-coast holiday resort, which shows that one London daily paper, with a comparatively small net sale, pulled 50 per cent better results with a smaller expenditure on space, than another daily of similar class but with a net sales figure 75 per cent in advance. Advertising rates of British national newspapers usually are increased pro rata with the increase in the circulations, and advertisers are beginning to ask at what point the circulations of the papers in which they buy space cease to be profitable to them.

SPAIN INVITES I. A. A.

Headquarters office of the International Advertising Association this week received an invitation to hold its 1929 convention in Barcelona, Spain. Recently a similar invitation was received from Berlin, Germany. The Spanish invitation was signed by Raphael Bori, general secretary of the Publi-Club of Barcelona. The 1928 convention is scheduled to be held in Detroit.

BAR TAKES PART BLAME FOR TRIAL SENSATIONS

Vain Judges and Publicity Seeking Lawyers Contributing to Court Spectacles—Press Handling Improving, Says Committee—"Trained Seal" Reporting Scored

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER*)*

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 31.—Co-operation between the bar, the bench and the press to curb unwholesome tendencies in realistic news reporting of criminal and divorce proceedings has produced gratifying results and paved the way for an early return to rationalism in both pictures and print, a special committee of the American Bar Association reported to-day to the Association's fiftieth annual convention.

The report outlined three years' activity of the committee in its effort to bring about between the legal and journalistic professions "a better understanding of the functions of the two groups and of the ethical concepts which should govern the conduct of their members."

Proceeding since its organization in July, 1924, under a formula stressing co-operation and mutual helpfulness rather than the threat of punishment for offending editors, the committee has found its faith in the press more than justified by the cordial reception of its suggestions and endeavors.

"It would not help the cause to review instances wherein certain members of the press have shown coolness or resentment toward the approaches of the committee," the report says. "But, on the other hand, some of the leading journals have given emphatic approval and assurances of support to the movement."

The New York Times, New York Herald Tribune, Evening World, Evening Post, Chicago Tribune, Baltimore News, Chicago Daily News, Boston Herald and the Christian Science Monitor were commended. Henry L. Mencken's widely quoted article on "Justice and the Press" was cited as evidence of a healthy attitude of self-criticism within the journalistic profession, and Charles Merz' "Bigger and Better Murders" in the August Harper's was characterized as "a hopeful sign."

"A hopeful sign of the day is that the extravagance of the press, the vanities of individuals engaged in the administration of justice, the fevered curiosity of the hordes of thrill addicts, all have at last become the target of poignant public ridicule," the report said in citing Merz and Mencken.

Equally responsible with the press for sensationalism, however, the report concedes, are the activities of many lawyers and not a few members of the bench who have not been loath to capitalize the personal publicity offered by their connection with celebrated proceedings.

"Sensational stories about trials of shocking crimes, scandalous divorces and other morbid cases too often have the ear marks of having been instigated by the lawyers. And it is not unknown even that judges have some times facilitated similar activities.

"It is taken for granted that all thoughtful judges, lawyers and journalists now recognize the destructive effect of sensational publicity concerning courts and trials. At first impression the readers would naturally ascribe the motive and the blame to the newspapers alone. And there, of course, it properly belongs, but not entirely. For our intensive pursuit of the subject and searching of trials often lead back toward our own ranks and even to the doorsteps of the courts themselves."

The case is cited of a notorious thug, who, during a trial in a midwestern city, was interviewed in jail to the extent of a full column with pictures, establishing clearly, once freed from the harassing rules of evidence, that he was quite innocent. Pointing an accusing finger at the bar, the report asks: "Could anyone doubt that this was done with the participation, or at least the connivance, of the prisoner's counsel?"

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN
(Staff Correspondent of International News Service)

The committee denies the contention of the press, as voiced in a recent editorial in the New York Times, that "absolute publicity of all that is done in the name of justice is vital in a republic."

"There is no universal right in the public to attend upon or to be informed of all trials and other proceedings in the courts," the committee answers, "and the rights of the press are no other than those of the public at large."

It is pointed out that many of the state constitutions provide public trials only as a safeguard to the accused, who may, if he elects, demand a private trial from which all save jury, counsel, and judge would be excluded.

"For that reason there is no absolute right in the publishers of newspapers, for themselves or for the information, amusement or agitation of the public, to attend or report trials; and the privilege of attending and reporting usually accorded has no basis in the constitutional guarantees concerning the freedom of speech and the press.

"Newspaper men, like members of the public at large, may under some circumstances and for special reasons be excluded from trials, even though they be publicly held; and their conduct in attendance and in relation to the trial is subject to the reasonable regulation and control of the court, for the protection of the rights and persons of the litigants, their counsel, the witnesses, jurymen and all persons involved in the trial, and for the protection of the processes of the court for the ends of justice between the parties, which is the dominant consideration.

"On the other hand, assuming the usual privilege of attendance and reporting to be extended and availed of, the responsibility rests upon each newspaper representative to decide for himself whether he will use it decently and properly, or abuse it."

Without attempting to dictate to the press how it should conduct its own affairs, the committee offers the following formula as a possible beginning for a code of clear and proper rules embodying the ethics of the relations of press and court:

"Just how far the newspaper man may go to describe the proceedings for his journal and its readers is a delicate question. We may, however, venture the statement of an elementary rule—

"The newspaper reporter may, truthfully, fairly, accurately, objectively, write down and describe in words for publication every emphatic fact which he legitimately sees or hears in or about the proceedings!"

In advocacy of such a rule, the committee suggests that it eliminates at the outset "the play of imagination, exaggeration, effusion, distortion, deduction, conjecture, prediction and all the secondary mental processes often exercised upon primary physical facts by ingenious reporters."

These mental processes, if any, it is further suggested, "do havoc to litigants, courts, the processes of public justice, and inevitably tend to undermine public confidence in our judicial institutions through deliberate misrepresentations."

With most editors, the committee has come to the conviction that the quality and character of a news report on any event is primarily a function of the individuality of the writer.

"There is no more justification for having these trials reported by a layman reporter, or by dramatists, actors, preachers, scenario writers and 'sob-stuff artists' than there is for having a financial, economic or scientific analysis made by a reporter knowing nothing of finance, economics or science.

"Trials should be reported by persons educated and trained in the technic of the proceedings, as well as being gifted with a popular and truthful literary style."

Recommending that the committee be continued for another year, as undoubtedly it will be, according to influential members of the convention, the report closed with the observation:

"There can be no more opportune time than the present for the press to cease making vulgar amusement of our law enforcing institutions, and to do its part to build them up in the knowledge, the wholesome respect and confidence of the people."

Andrew R. Sherriff, of Chicago, signed the report as chairman of the committee. Others who signed were:

Wendall H. Cloud, Kansas City, Mo.; Julius Henry Cohen, New York; Andrew A. Bruce, Chicago; Arthur W. Cupler, Fargo, N. D.; Vernon H. Loucks, Chicago; R. Allen Stephens, Springfield, Ill.; Charles A. Boston, New York; Thomas H. Franklin, San Antonio, Tex.

BELFAST DAILY'S NEW LONDON OFFICE

The Belfast Telegraph and its London staff before the new office just opened on Fleet street, in the heart of London's newspaper row.

BRITISH CHIEF JUSTICE ATTACKS NEWSPAPERS

Says Any Rich Man Without Scruples or Experience Can Buy a Paper and Wreck Reputations —Is Noted Wit

Lord Hewart of Bury, the Lord Chief Justice of England, doesn't like newspapers or newspaper men. He stated his dislike last Thursday in Toronto, addressing the joint luncheon of the Canadian and Empire clubs in that city. He spoke with what Canadian reporters described as such "exquisite irony" that when he concluded there was some doubt as to whether the noted jurist was joking or serious.

Few direct quotations were obtainable in New York this week from His Lordship's address. He himself was in Buffalo, attending the convention of the American Bar Association.

According to one account published by the Toronto Globe Aug. 26, His Lordship "pictured the printing machine as a monster working mischief not only in the realm of domestic relations, but also in international affairs." Most of the address, the Globe said, was directed against "the alleged deficiencies of the press—its tendency to standardize thought and eliminate human individuality."

The Toronto Star telegraphed its New York correspondent asking for comments from New York newspaper editors. The Star in the telegram described the whole speech as "an unprovoked attack on the press."

The jurist, the Star said, quoted from Leslie Stephen's collection of remarks about the press, among others Morley's remark about "the hirelings of the press who daily pawned their souls for the price of a bottle of wine or a cigar," and also Morley's phrase describing the press as "that huge engine for keeping discussion at a low level."

"The press never fails to stick up for public opinion when it is with them," the Lord Chief Justice was quoted as saying.

He also pictured white rolls of paper going into the printing press and coming out "like snow flakes soiled with fog" and declared that "anyone with money, no matter what his natural capabilities, could acquire a newspaper and shatter reputations of individuals and make mischief in international affairs with frightful consequences."

Commenting on the Toronto speech, the New York Sun stated this week that the "reputation of the present head of King George's permanent judiciary had preceded him across the Atlantic.

"He has been accepted in London law courts," the Sun explained, "as the successor of Lord Darling as a wit who could enliven and give comic relief even to the drab details of a sordid murder trial. It is said that when he presides in a criminal case the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice loses half of its oppressiveness by losing all its sadness. In fact, Lord Hewart is a shining example of the 'judicial humorist' to whom W. S. Gilbert gave a place up near the top of the little list kept by his Lord High Executioner."

F. T. CARROLL JOINING PITTSBURGH PRESS

Advertising Director, Indianapolis News, Named Assistant General Manager—Succeeded by Don Bridge

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 31.—Frank T. Carroll, advertising director of the Indianapolis News, has resigned to become assistant general manager of the Pittsburgh Press, it was announced today. He will take up his new duties Sept. 20. Don U. Bridge, manager of the national advertising and merchandising departments of the News, will be the new advertising manager of the News. Earl Shea, manager of local display advertising will become assistant advertising manager and will continue actively in charge of the local advertising department.

F. T. CARROLL

DON BRIDGE

Mr. Carroll, on the Pittsburgh Press, will work in the advertising department of the Press. Mr. Carroll started his newspaper career in Detroit as a salesman of classified advertising on the Detroit News. Later he became advertising manager of the Bay City (Mich.) Times, and from 1911 to 1913 was associated with his brother, Dan A. Carroll, Eastern representative of the Indianapolis News, in New York City.

In May, 1914, Mr. Carroll was brought to Indianapolis as assistant to O. R. Johnson, then business manager of the News. On Mr. Johnson's death he was made advertising director.

Mr. Carroll has taken an active interwill work in the advertising department. practice, and for four years was president of the Association of Newspaper Advertising Executives. He is at present a director of the Association. He is a director and vice-president of the 100,000 Group of American Cities, Inc., and is a member of the National Advertising Commission representing the A. N. A. E. in the International Advertising Association.

Mr. Bridge has been with the News more than ten years and prior to that in his youth he was a carrier boy at Newcastle and at Peru. He began work on the News as a local display salesman and his progress has been rapid, serving successfully as merchandising representative, merchandising manager, national advertising sales representative and manager of national advertising and merchandising. He formerly was circulation district manager and classified advertising salesman on the Cincinnati Post. Mr. Bridge is a graduate of De Pauw University. He belongs to several local clubs and is secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Newspaper Advertising Executives.

Mr. Shea began work for the News as a newsboy in 1899. He was a charter member of the News' Newsboys Band in 1900 and was a member of the organization when it won the international medal as the best juvenile band at the World's Fair in 1904. Mr. Shea then served as office boy and positions of growing importance on the News for ten years.

He became manager of local advertising on the News three years ago.

NEW A. N. P. A. MEMBERS

The Denver (Col.) Post and the Salem (Ore.) Capital-Journal have been elected to membership in the American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

AD BUDGET RAISED

A fund of $450,000, instead of $100,000 as originally planned, will be raised over a period of three years by the New York Development Association, Inc., to be used largely for newspaper space, it is announced by George A. Lawyer, of Watertown, managing director. A campaign will be inaugurated soon covering all the units in the new association. The natural resources of northern New York state will be widely advertised by the association.

30,000 WATCH SWIM MARATHON

Thirty thousand Chicagoans saw Isabelle Smith, a 16-year old girl win the Chicago Herald and Examiner's second annual lake marathon, with Emma Shemaitis, last year's champion, 27 seconds behind her. The marathon was held in Lake Michigan, Aug. 28. The first three to finish were given diamond medals. Of the 242 swimmers who started, 205 crossed the finish line, and all who finished received gold medals.

ADVERTISING "DADDY" ADVISES HIS BOYS

R. T. Stanton, 78, Plays Golf with Youngsters Telling Them to Work in Classified Departments to Learn Ad Business

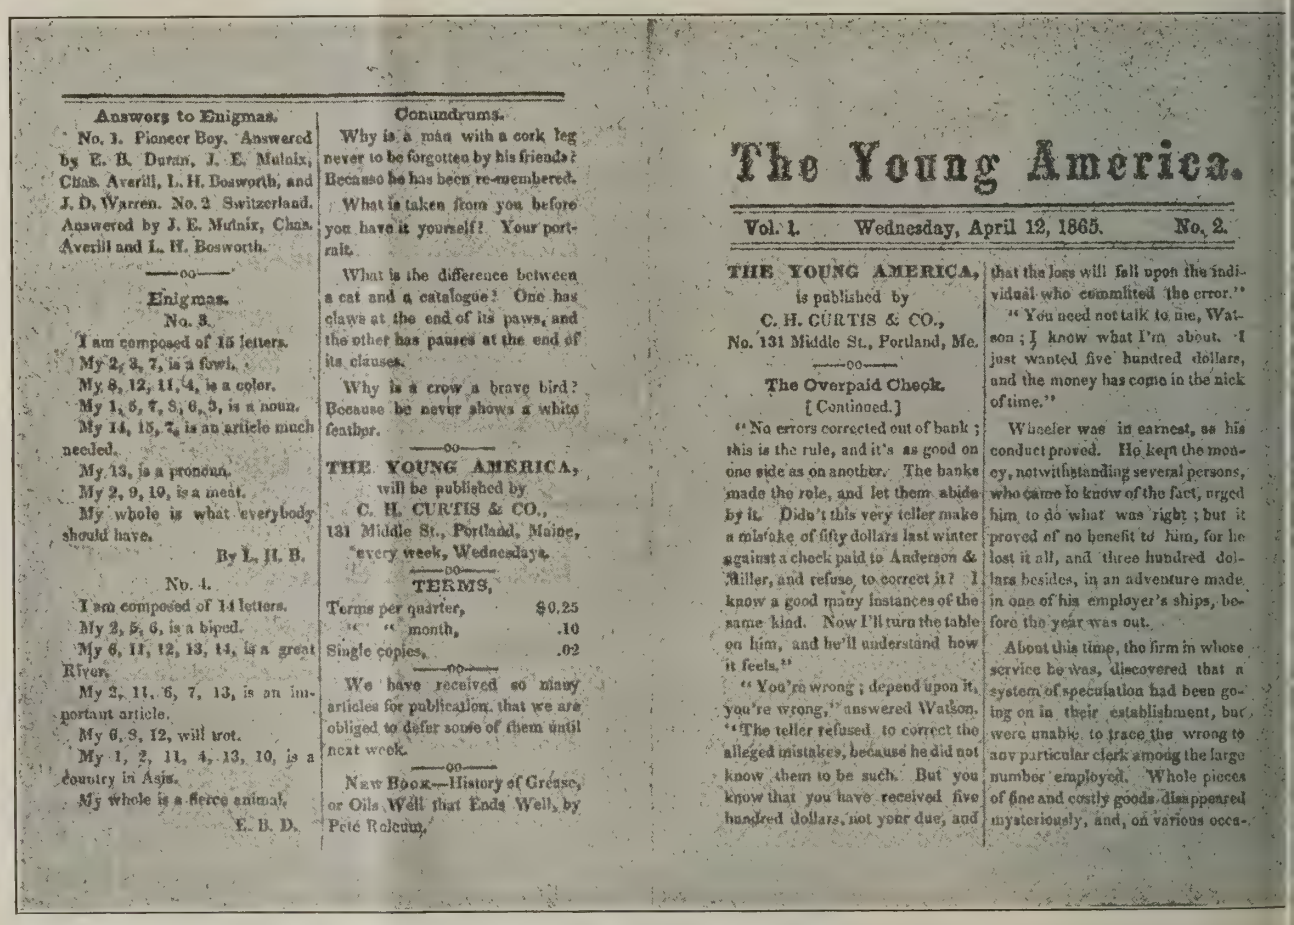
"If I have any hobby," said R. T. Stanton the other day, "I would say it was helping boys."

Which may be the reason why Mr. Stanton, who is nearing 79, is called "Dad" by a number of prominent advertising men, some young, and others already gray. Mr. Stanton retired three years ago, after 40 years spent in advertising. For thirty years of that time he was western manager for Century Magazine.

Mr. Stanton plays golf with these "boys" of his, and has been known to outplay a number of younger men. If anyone asks him how to get started in advertising work, he advises them, he said this week, somewhat as follows:

"Get on a daily paper and work on the classified advertising department. If you stick it out one year then at least you've cut your eye teeth in the advertising business.

"I know of no finer discipline for the young man than soliciting classified space. The work develops wit and keeps the neophyte continually on his toes.



"I don't care what line of advertising the young man has in mind. Even a copy writer would profit considerably from a year's work in the classified department of a daily paper.

"It gratifies me particularly to see college men start in the business this way. There's nothing like it to take the swelling out of a fellow's head. In classified, a man is in the selling trenches and is made to know it."

Not long ago, it was learned for the first time this week, some of Mr. Stanton's "boys" presented him with a fine platinum watch. On the back of it was the inscription:

"TO DEAR DAD. WE LOVE YOU."

CYRUS CURTIS' FIRST PAPER DISTRIBUTED AT LUNCHEON

Answers to Enigmas.

No. 1. Pioneer Boy. Answered by E. B. Dunn, J. E. Mulnix, Chas. Averill, L. H. Bosworth, and J. D. Warren. No. 2 Switzerland. Answered by J. E. Mulnix, Chas. Averill and L. H. Bosworth.

Enigmas.

No. 3.

I am composed of 15 letters.
My 2, 3, 7, is a fowl.
My 8, 12, 11, 4, is a color.
My 1, 5, 7, 8, 6, 3, is a noun.
My 14, 15, 7, is an article much needed.
My 13, is a pronoun.
My 2, 9, 10, is a meat.
My whole is what everybody should have.

By L. H. B.

No. 4.

I am composed of 14 letters.
My 2, 5, 6, is a biped.
My 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, is a great River.
My 2, 11, 6, 7, 13, is an important article.
My 6, 8, 12, will not.
My 1, 2, 11, 4, 13, 10, is a country in Asia.
My whole is a fierce animal.

E. B. D.

Conundrums.

Why is a man with a cork leg never to be forgotten by his friends? Because he has been re-membered.

What is taken from you before you have it yourself? Your portrait.

What is the difference between a cat and a catalogue? One has claws at the end of its paws, and the other has pauses at the end of its clauses.

Why is a crow a brave bird? Because he never shows a white feather.

THE YOUNG AMERICA,
will be published by
C. H. CURTIS & CO.,
131 Middle St., Portland, Maine,
every week, Wednesdays.

TERMS,

Terms per quarter, $0.25
" " month, .10
Single copies, .02

We have received so many articles for publication, that we are obliged to defer some of them until next week.

New Book.—History of Grease, or Oils Well that Ends Well, by Petè Roleum.

The Young America.

Vol. 1. Wednesday, April 12, 1865. No. 2.

THE YOUNG AMERICA,
is published by
C. H. CURTIS & CO.,
No. 131 Middle St., Portland, Me.

The Overpaid Check.

[Continued.]

"No errors corrected out of bank; this is the rule, and it's as good on one side as on another. The banks made the rule, and let them abide by it. Didn't this very teller make a mistake of fifty dollars last winter against a check paid to Anderson & Miller, and refuse to correct it? I know a good many instances of the same kind. Now I'll turn the table on him, and he'll understand how it feels."

"You're wrong; depend upon it, you're wrong," answered Watson. "The teller refused to correct the alleged mistakes, because he did not know them to be such. But you know that you have received five hundred dollars, not your due, and that the loss will fall upon the individual who committed the error."

"You need not talk to me, Watson; I know what I'm about. I just wanted five hundred dollars, and the money has come in the nick of time."

Wheeler was in earnest, as his conduct proved. He kept the money, notwithstanding several persons, who came to know of the fact, urged him to do what was right; but it proved of no benefit to him, for he lost it all, and three hundred dollars besides, in an adventure made in one of his employer's ships, before the year was out.

About this time, the firm in whose service he was, discovered that a system of speculation had been going on in their establishment, but were unable to trace the wrong to any particular clerk among the large number employed. Whole pieces of fine and costly goods disappeared mysteriously, and, on various occa-

Facsimile of first paper published by Cyrus H. K. Curtis

FACSIMILES of the first paper ever published by Cyrus H. K. Curtis were handed out to guests attending a luncheon given in the publisher's honor on Aug. 22 in Portland, Me., by the Chamber of Commerce of that city. A copy of this facsimile, obtained from Julian S. Mason, editor of New York Evening Post, who attended the banquet, is reproduced above.

Mr. Curtis started his first paper, The Young America, in Portland on April 5, 1865, when he was 15. He had just resigned as carrier for the Portland (Me.) Press, where he had received a salary of $2 a week, and was working for the Portland Argus.

His association with newspapers had caused him to want to own one himself, an ambition which he confided to his chum, Walter Goold. They decided to start a boy's paper and the Young America was the outcome of their plans. It was to be a weekly and sell for two cents a copy and a printer had been found who agreed to print as many as 400 copies for $5.

While Mr. Curtis and his friend felt there was a crying need for a paper such as they were to publish, the public did not sense the fact. There was not the rush to obtain copies that the boys had anticipated.

This state of affairs came as a distinct shock to Walter, who was worried about getting the $5 with which to pay the printer. This point did not seem to trouble young Curtis. He made active plans to issue the second number. No publication, he reasoned, could be made successful in a single issue.

The $5 indebtedness was too much for Walter and the partnership was dissolved and young Cyrus was left as the sole mainstay of Young America, in other words its financial backer, its publisher, its editor, and as it finally turned out even its "printer's devil."

Young Curtis, however, had faith in his project and after paying the $5 debt on the first number out of his hard earned savings, he decided that the logical plan for continuing the paper was to set up his own printing plant.

With this idea in view, he went to Boston where he purchased a discarded hand press for $2.50 and he also invested in enough type to set up one page of his paper at a time. He had to set a page print it, and distribute the type four different times in order to get out one edition. The type he bought cost him $15, and, thus, when he returned to Portland he had invested $20.50 in equipment.

His determination to establish Young America was too strong to admit defeat and gradually he got it going, developed a small job printing business and made his enterprise a paying one. Its weekly income, however, was decidedly different from that of the present Curtis Publishing Company, for it netted him only $8 for each seven days.

The young magazine publisher continued to carry papers for the Argus and went to school every day during the time he published Young America. He got its circulation up to 400 copies a week and by 1866 had increased his investment in the publishing plant to $200. In that year a fire occurred in Portland on July 4, the home of Young America was burned to the ground, and the publisher was left "financially shattered."

I. R. KIRKWOOD, K. C. STAR EDITOR, DIES AT 48

Succumbs to Heart Attack at Saratoga Springs—His $625,000 Insurance Made Out in Behalf of Star Associates Insures Ownership of Paper Remaining With the Staff

IRWIN RUSSELL KIRKWOOD, 48 years old, editor of the Kansas City Star and majority stockholder in the Kansas City Star Company, died at 2:55 o'clock Monday morning at the United States Hotel at Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

His death was caused by a heart attack induced by hemorrhages of the stomach. He was unconscious 24 hours before his death.

Mr. Kirkwood had gone to Saratoga Springs to dispose of some fine Kentucky horses he owned.

Control and management of the star will remain in the hands of the staff. Ample provisions had been made for just such an occurrence as the death of Mr. Kirkwood with the attendant sudden marketing of 51 per cent of the company's stock.

Upon the death of Mrs. Kirkwood, Feb. 27, 1926, the provisions of the will of Mr. Nelson for the sale of the Star became effective, and Mr. Kirkwood for himself and his associates was the successful bidders for the property which was sold to him and his associates by the trustees for $11,000,000 on July 12, 1926. The Kansas City Star Company, of which Mr. Kirkwood was president, with stockholders numbering approximately 100 of the Star staff, has since been the owner and publisher of the paper.

No stock in the star is, or has been, held by anybody outside of the organization. None can be. Under the terms of the organization of the Kansas City Star Company, and by agreement with the Trustees, all stock held by members of the staff must be relinquished to the organization in the event they leave it, or upon their death. Mr. Kirkwood's stockholding will, as in the case of any other member of the company removed by death, revert to the organization for resale among the stockholders.

Realizing that the floatation of his stock might create a threat against continued staff control, Mr. Kirkwood insured his life for $625,000, making the minority stockholders the beneficiary of the policy with the stipulation that the insurance payment should be used for the purchase of the stock made purchaseable by his death.

By that foresighted provision, the stockholders of the company will find themselves the recipients of approximately $50 for each share they already own, thus with ready cash to finance the proportinate purchase of the stock he held.

Mr. Kirkwood's will also provides a period of one year for his stock in the star to be purchased by surviving members of the staff.

Irwin Russell Kirkwood came of an old Maryland family settled since the eighteenth century in Harford county in that state, where he was born Dec. 30, 1878, the son of Robert J. and Caroline Kirkwood. He was educated in private and public schools and passed his young manhood in Baltimore. He took an early interest in sports and was a member of the New York and Aiken, S. C., Racquet and Tennis clubs.

Mr. Kirkwood came to Kansas City in 1905 as a salesman for the B. T. Whipple Real Estate Company, and later was associated with Fred Hornbeck in the sale of Orient railroad lands in Texas. He afterwards formed a connection with the Maryland Land Company,

On Nov. 15, 1910, he married Laura Nelson, daughter of William Rockhill Nelson, founder of the Star.

Following the death of Mr. Nelson in April, 1915, Mr. Kirkwood became associated in the direction of the Star as representative of the trustees of the estate.

Mrs. Kirkwood left her husband a life interest in her $2,000,000 estate, which included White Pine Camp in the Adirondack Mountains, the summer home where President Coolidge passed his vacation in 1926.

The late Irwin R. Kirkwood

The $2,000,000 interest is released to the people of Kansas City by the death of Mr. Kirkwood. It is to be used to construct an art gallery under the terms of Mr. Nelson's will.

From April 5, 1924, when Mr. Kirkwood became editor of the Star, he devoted all his time to the conduct of the paper, of whose policies and purposes he had gained a deep and sympathetic insight through his association with William Rockhill Nelson, for whose great newspaper abilities and personal leadership he had the profoundest admiration and respect. His own newspaper abilities were quickly recognized and attested in April of this year when he was elected a director of the Associated Press.

Industrial and Missouri river development went hand in hand for Kansas City, in Mr. Kirkwood's belief, and he enlisted in both the project for inland waterway development for the southwest and for the industrial expansion of this city for which purpose the recent organization of the Chamber of Commerce was perfected. Mr. Kirkwood was elected a director of that organization. He conducted a wide correspondence in the interest of Missouri river development, traveled extensively in its interest and attended the gatherings of the Rivers and Harbors Congress. In these activities he was a close associate with Herbert Hoover

Mr. Kirkwood had a broad interest in the arts. He was a director of and generous contributor to the Kansas City Orchestra Association. The Kansas City Art Institute, the Horner Institute and the Kansas City Conservatory. He firmly believed Kansas City had a responsibility and an opportunity to become a cultural centre as well as a commercial capital for the surrounding territory

In 1912 Mr. Kirkwood followed Col. Theodore Roosevelt into the Progressive movement and became national committeeman of that party in Missouri. He had the genuine crusading spirit that was the birthmark of that shortlived party, and never wavered in his alliance to its ideals or in his personal admiration and devotion to his leader. He attached Col. Roosevelt to the Star as contributing editor and their association continued closely until the end of Roosevelt's life.

He was a member of the executive committee of the Roosevelt Memorial Association.

At the outbreak of the World War Mr. Kirkwood at once sought to enter the service, but was barred on account of physical disabilities. He was not satisfied with the ruling and persisted in his efforts so successfully that he finally was accepted and entered the army as a private at Camp Joseph E. Johnston at Jacksonville, Fla. Since the war he had shown an active interest in the welfare of veterans' organizations and was a member of the American Legion and the reserve officers' association. He was a major in the Officers' Reserve Corps.

The interest Mr. Kirkwood took in pure bred stock was not confined to horses, though he has been a polo player and a breeder. Pure bred stock he held to be of a fundamental value to agriculture, and the development of the stock farms at Sni-a-Bar, near Kansas City, provided under the will of Mr. Nelson, enlisted his constant interest.

The Kirkwood family came originally from Scotland and the Kirkwood farm in Harford county, Maryland, acquired by the first comers in 1735, still remains a family possession. The churchyard of the old Bethel Presbyterian Church in that county, which still stands, is marked by the memorials of these Scottish progenitors.

The surviving members of Mr. Kirkwood's family are his father Robert J. Kirkwood; a brother, Thone S. Kirkwood; a sister, Margaret E. Kirkwood, all of Baltimore, and a brother, John R. Kirkwood, of Washington.

The funeral party left Saratoga Springs, Monday night and arrived in Kansas City at 7.40 o'clock Wednesday morning. The body of Mr. Kirkwood was accompanied home by Frank C. Baker of Kansas City, who was in Saratoga Springs; Bayard Tuckerman, another close friend; members of Mr. Kirkwood's family; Roy A. Roberts, Washington correspondent of the Star, and Mr. A. F. Seested, general manager of the Star.

Funeral services were conducted at 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon at Oak Hall, Mr. Kirkwood's home, and, previous to his occupancy, the home of William Rockhill Nelson.

The services were conducted by the Rev. Robert Nelson Spencer, rector of the Grace and Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, in which Mr. Kirkwood was a vestryman. The church was the church of the Nelson and the Kirkwood families.

The Boys' Memorial Choir of the church, endowed by Mrs. Laura Nelson Kirkwood as a memorial to her mother, sang.

The body was borne to the William Rockhill Nelson Memorial Chapel at Mount Washington Cemetery, where lie Mr. Nelson, Mrs. Nelson and Mrs. Kirkwood.

The pall bearers were from the same group of Mr. Kirkwood' associates on the Star who were pallbearers at the funeral of Mr. Nelson in 1915, Mrs. Nelson in 1921, and Mrs. Kirkwood in 1926:

A. F. Seested, George B. Longan, H. J. Haskell, Roy A. Roberts, F. C. Trigg, E. G. Pinkham, D. Austin Latchaw. H. L. Nicolet, Earl McCollum, John T. Barrons.

At 2:30 o'clock, when the services began, a hush fell in the downtown streets. Street cars and busses of the Kansas City Railways Company stopped for a minute. Traffic patrolmen were instructed to halt other traffic for one minute. This was the city's tribute.

The presses of the Star were silent and all other activities at the Star were ceased during Mr. Kirkwood's funeral.

GEORGE HERBERT SMITH

London Reporter Who Once Lent King Edward a Pound, Dies

(Special to Editor & Publisher)

LONDON.—Reminiscences of the time when the late King Edward acted as rewrite man for the benefit of a reporter, who, on another occasion lent the king a pound, are recalled by the death in a nursing home near London on August 18 of George Herbert Smith, for 33 years reporter at Their Majesty's Court on behalf of the Press Association.

Soon after King Edward came to the throne he presented new Colors to a regiment. The newspapermen covering the ceremony were unable to hear a word of the King's speech, and so Mr. Smith wrote out a suitable speech and submitted it to His Majesty, who later returned it to him, in time for publication, with alterations made in green pencil. At another function the King wished to purchase a button-hole bouquet but discovered that he had attended without money, and Mr. Smith lent him a golden sovereign.

SPACE BUYER SEES IMPROVEMENT IN NEWSPAPER SOLICITATIONS

More Intelligence Being Applied in Getting Advertising Contracts—Genuine Merchandising Co-operation Landing Many Accounts

By A. J. SLOMANSON

THE majority of newspaper representatives have heretofore arranged their solicitations so that their calls to the agency space buyers would be made just prior to the advertising campaigns. Usually representatives make at least five calls on the space buyers before definitely ascertaining when the schedule is to start. It is obvious that this method of solicitation has involved a great waste of time, effort and expense on the part of the representatives. The question arises, how can more business be obtained without having to wait until the campaign is started. Of course, large advertisers arrange their campaigns at certain periods, and it is necessary that they do this in a systematic manner in order to stimulate a greater demand for their products, and thus keep up the distribution in the different cities throughout the country.

Generally there are hundreds of small advertisers who have practically no distribution, and although they have a meritorious product, are rather handicapped in obtaining distribution because of lack of capital required for selling expenses. Though it may be necessary for the small manufacturer to advertise seasonally because of the nature of the product, it is known that a definite time is not set for commencing such a campaign due to the uncertainty of the small advertiser's finances for advertising purposes. The average small advertiser's campaign is spasmodic and most space salesmen know that it requires constant solicitations throughout the year to obtain the business.

One space salesman, who represents a mid-western newspaper, approached the writer with the usual question of when the advertising of a small manufacturer would start again. Knowing that the advertiser did not have any distribution in the city in question, my reply was rather evasive as I knew the client would not begin a campaign in any city where there was no distribution, and neither would the agency recommend it. The space salesman, however, realized that he would have to report the matter to his superior, as generally space salesmen are required to keep a record of all calls made. He also knew that he would have to make periodic calls at the agency to keep in further touch with the account, and so he put on his thinking cap to determine how he could obtain the business before waiting until the client decided to get distribution in the city in which the newspaper was published. The writer was asked if a wholesaler in that city could be interested in stocking a small supply of the product, would the advertiser appropriate a sum for advertising in order to help the wholesaler procure dealer distribution. The client was consulted and the newspaper solicitor was told to go ahead and obtain a wholesaler to stock a dozen cans of the product. Naturally the local office of the newspaper got in touch with a drug jobber and submitted the proposition. The product was found to be satisfactory, likewise the discounts to jobbers and dealers, therefore a small supply was ordered by the jobber. Of course, the manufacturer supported the jobber with advertising and at the present time the article is on sale in 550 stores in the city in question. This is an example of how one space salesman did not wait to get the business.

Another salesman called to ascertain when the advertising of another product would be started, and he too was given an indefinite answer. Rather than return to the office without the business, he cogitated for a moment, then inquired whether the advertiser needed a distributor in the city the salesman represented. It happened that the client had some distribution in that city but was anxious to obtain several sales agents to keep in touch with the advertiser's customers, also to procure new business.

The writer inquired whether the salesman knew of any agents in his city who would be interested in handling the product. If this same question were asked a number of other salesmen, the statement would have been noted on the information card that evening and no further effort made to help the advertiser since there was no advertising promised. This particular salesman, however, did not just jot down some notes on his card, but wrote his home office to get the names of several sales agents who would take on the product and to report within two weeks so that the advertising agency could be notified accordingly.

The salesman did this without being promised the business and within two weeks presented a letter from his home office together with three letters from sales agents who were interested in the matter. The advertising manager of the local newspaper did not know of any sales agents who would be interested, but rather than discourage the salesman's further efforts in trying to get the business by sending an unsatisfactory report, he inserted a small display ad in the newspaper on his own initiative and thereby obtained the names of three reliable agents who were anxious to take on the product. Obviously with this kind of co-operation the newspaper was given the business.

Still another salesman calling on the writer was told it was not known when a certain campaign would commence. The salesman asked whether there was any available appropriation and was answered in the affirmative, although the client would not advertise because of lack of distribution. Then the salesman asked that if the distribution could be obtained would the manufacturer be interested. After the writer consulted the advertiser the salesman was asked to get eight leading dealers in any city to carry the product and the advertiser would run a three months' campaign, and also would send an amount of goods to the dealers on consignment. This did not obligate the local newspaper office to secure orders for the advertiser since the dealers were to have the goods on consignment. Just a little constructive persistence on the part of the salesman resulted in his obtaining the advertising schedules for eight newspapers in different cities he represented.

Just the other week another salesman called on the writer and inquired about advertising a certain commodity. In this instance the client was advertising in about 75 other cities but not in this particular city because of the high rates, also because there was very little distribution and demand for the article in the congested centers of the larger cities. The salesman, however, had expected a negative reply and came all prepared with magazine sections from recent issues of the Sunday newspaper which carried articles pertinent to the product in question. Naturally the agency space buyers cannot keep in touch with the editorial content of all the newspapers, and the fact that these articles were appearing, offered the advertiser a splendid opportunity to tie up the special editorial content with his article. Another case where the salesman did not wait until the agency or advertiser decided to start advertising in his city.

The above are merely a few examples of how aggressive newspaper salesmen are becoming and it seems inevitable that within the next decade that vigorous selling ideas on the part of space salesmen will create more advertising. The time is coming when publishers will not depend entirely on having their salesmen call on agencies and advertisers to get information concerning certain campaigns and then keep a record of them, but instead will discover ways and means to procure more business and prevent such a loss in advertising linage as is being recorded at the present time.

Newspaper publishers are known to be the agents of progress, yet there are no business men so reckless in their direct mail and present selling policies as are the publishers. Fortunately there is a new school of space salesmen developing who are determined to get more business through constructive selling methods and without wasting so much time as has been done in the past.

IVY LEE CRITICIZED FOR SOVIET REPORT

Press Agent Sarcastically Treated by Easley of Civic Federation Who Marvels at Wonders Performed After 10-Day Study

Propaganda being put out by Ivy Lee in connection with his recent visit to Russia and his efforts to obtain recognition of the Soviet government were attacked this week in sarcastic vein by Ralph M. Easley, chairman of the executive committee of the National Civic Federation.

Lee, according to Easley, spent 10 days in Moscow, obtaining so much information that he must have undergone a period of "riotous conferring." In a letter to Lee written by Easley and made public by him, the latter said:

"I am told by one who checked it up that to keep all the engagements and attend all the functions, social and otherwise, mentioned in your report, you must have abandoned for that ten-day period all ideas of eating and sleeping and spent the entire 240 hours in one continuous round of 'riotous' conferring. I think my informant was wrong. What you doubtless did was to start the Skvirsky bureau in Washington at work on your report as soon as you made up your mind to go to Russia so that upon your return Colonel Skvirsky would have it ready for you to add a few touches of local color.

"Much is permitted a professional publicity man, especially when he affects also the rôle of statesman, because of the recognized commercial motive which must dominate his every act and every word, however beautiful the rhetoric with which he may envelop the latter. But there are limits. We are told that you made a tearful appeal to the Secretary of State—and doubtless you have addressed President Coolidge and Chief Justice Taft also. Why not? They are helpless to stop the delivery of mail to themselves."

BALDERSTON BACK

N. Y. World's London Correspondent Here for Production of Play

John Balderston, London correspondent of the New York World, has returned to this country for the American production of his play, "Berkley Square."

The play was presented in London with considerable success. It was staged in St. Martins Theater, where it ran for five months. The Broadway opening is expected shortly. Mr. Balderston plans to remain in this country about 10 weeks.

DINNER TO ZIMMERMAN

A testimonial dinner will be tendered Alfred Zimmerman, advertising manager of the World Almanac, by his associates of the New York World at Turn Verein Hall, on Thursday evening, Sept. 8, at 7 p. m. Mr. Zimmerman leaves the World Sept. 10, to become assistant business manager of the Plainfield (N. J.) Courier-News.

REUTERS INCREASES ITS U. S.-LONDON FILE

News Service Between America and England Vastly Expanded, Says Douglas Williams — Sacco-Vanzetti Took Big Space

Douglas Williams, American manager for Reuter's Ltd., British news agency, has returned to his New York post after a 10 weeks' combined business and vacation trip in England.

While in London, Mr. Williams, at the request of Sir Roderick Jones, chairman of Reuters, instituted certain changes with a view to increasing and improving Reuter's international news service, and also held conferences with a number of British newspaper editors.

"Reuter's service from America has steadily increased since the war and today the New York office has a largely augmented editorial staff necessary to keep up the steady 24-hour flow of news now demanded by foreign newspapers," Mr. Williams told EDITOR & PUBLISHER. "Apart from general and political news, a detailed sports service is now filed while human interest and special stories, although in less demand in England than in America, are not neglected. Recently, for instance, the story of John Coolidge keeping his mother up late while he danced in a Yellowstone Park hotel with two college girl waitresses was given a big play in England, especially by the evening papers.

"The British press showed unusual interest in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, and on the night of the execution we filed several thousand words over a specially connected Western Union wire running direct into the London office. Average transmission was less than a minute. Every London morning paper, which, on the advice of Reuter's New York bureau had kept open until 5.30 a. m. (12.30 a. m., New York time), printed flashes under Reuter's credit. Subsequent dispatches detailing the execution monopolized the London evening papers."

EDITORS VISITS POWER SITES

Northern New York Group Makes Tour of Water Developments

To acquaint themselves at first-hand with the program of water-power development in the Adirondack mountain region—a matter which is becoming of a paramount interest to voters of New York state—a group of northern New York state newspaper men, mostly editors, made a tour last week of the Moose and Black River sections, visiting power plants and paper mills.

Included in the party were: Dr. R. S. Baker of the Syracuse Post-Standard; LeRoy E. Snyder, assistant manager of the Gannett newspapers; Roy C. Katts, assistant editor of the Gannett papers; J. Harold Slater, city editor of the Syracuse Journal; E. H. Cullings, editor, Gloversville Herald; Gardner Kline, editor, Amsterdam Recorder; H. W. Lee, editor, Oneonta Star; Paul B. Williams, editor, Utica Press; F. R. Champion, Schenectady Union-Star; A. R. Kessinger, editor, Rome Sentinel; V. T. Atwood, Utica Observer-Dispatch; Lee N. Fuller, Watertown Times, and F. W. Spaulding and A. B. Parker of the Watertown Standard.

CRITICA OPENS NEW PLANT

With the inauguration of a new seven-story building for the evening newspaper Critica, Buenos Aires now has four newspapers which boast of publishing equipment on a par with the leading newspapers of the northern hemisphere.

PLANNING RADIO SHOW

The first radio show in Albany, N. Y., is being arranged for the first week in November by the Knickerbocker Press and Albany Evening News. Special radio sections are being prepared in conjunction with the exhibit.

FEELING THE PULSE OF A DYING DAILY

Symptoms of Its Decline Analyzed by Prospective Purchaser—Interesting Study in the Retrogression of Once Prosperous Newspaper—Slip-Shod Methods in All Departments Uncovered

The writer of the following article is a newspaper executive of wide experience and his story is a recital of actual facts.

MY opportunity to make a two months' intensive study of this newspaper property came quite unexpectedly. It was the result of a casual visit to a city, and also the invitation of my friend, the publisher, to join him in saving his paper, already tottering on its last legs.

It was a paper that once paid an annual dividend from $75,000 to $100,000. It had been built up by the uncle of the present publisher. On the death of the uncle the paper went to the nephews, two of them. The first wound up his career as publisher with a debt of $300,000. The second nephew had just been able to keep the institution going.

The $300,000, I soon discovered, represented a new press, the cost of which with the installation ran to $100,000. An additional $50,000 represented a new home, now enjoyed under a rental of 7,000 annually, most of the money having been spent in alterations, structural improvements, etc. The remaining $150,000 was charged off to bad management in the overhead, covering a period of ten years.

The second nephew had finally managed to keep going by transferring his current indebtedness to a bonded indebtedness, and long time bank loans, but his income was still far too short to provide for his ultimate escape.

There were two other evening papers in the field, one of which was eminently prosperous. What could be done to save the situation? First of all, I made a canvass of the leading merchants and advertisers, and from them I obtained the opinion that nothing could be done. Many of them had subscribed to the bond issue, not as an investment, but as an evidence of personal friendship for the publisher. His personal standing in the community was of the highest, but his credit otherwise, made it impossible to obtain even weekly payrolls from any of the banks.

The paper itself, editorially, had been allowed to run down. It was poorly printed. It was the smallest in size. It published only a fragment of the news of the day.

Then it was that I took up my inventory of the various departments, one by one—the editorial, the advertising, the circulation, the business office, the composing room, and the press room.

The publisher was also the editor, and general manager. His staff, the smallest in town, included many oldtimers. The various salaries were those he had inherited from his brother's administration. No attempt had ever been made to weed out the deadwood, or to hire young reporters just starting in the business. The reporters were all his friends. Someone else would have to discharge the incompetent ones, he said, and I saw that here, as elsewhere, things had been allowed to drift.

The repeated intoxication of one old timer gave us a chance to hire two new young reporters for $15 each, which meant a saving of $10 a week. The old timer was discharged. The men were then told to report at 8 a. m. instead of 8.30 and 8.45, and also to write inside stories for the next day. Their output was double that of the former staff man.

The same trouble, namely, that of familiarity between the publisher and his managing editor, existed between the managing editor and his reporters. It was remedied by putting a new man on the desk, who made certain that the machines had early morning copy.

New type, that is to say new type found in old cases, was used for display heads, and all hand-set heads eliminated. Only those we could set on machines were used—that is for single column heads.

The hour for going to press was set ahead an hour, so that we were on the street first instead of last. Economy in space was obtained by reducing the depth of our display department headings; altogether, a saving of one and one-half columns. The second banks of single column inside heads were also eliminated, thus making a still greater saving in space for additional news.

Daily reports were then submitted by the managing editor showing how many columns of news, how many scoops, etc., we printed in comparison with the other evening papers.

I got something of a shock when I took my inventory of the features—comic strips, woman's page stuff, daily editorials from New York, etc. We were paying for $150 worth every week, and using about $40 worth. The good features were retained, the others summarily dropped, effecting a saving in overhead of $110 weekly. Everybody from business manager to editor had been in the habit of signing these contracts. This was stopped. Then we started three new local features by staff men.

The limited circulation was due in part, I saw, to the fact that people could buy the paper on only half the news stands. It was hidden out of sight on those stands which sold it. Newsboys in the center of the city made a practice of keeping it on the inside of their armful, never displaying it. There had been a time when there was a home delivery system, but it had been dropped.

We re-established our circulation department, home delivery, and offered tempting prizes for new subscribers in the way of dolls, dishes, books, etc.

We also started the publishing of a serial story, and these ideas, together with our new local feature columns, gave us a circulation boost of 1,000 inside the first week.

Our advertising department, laboring with other troubles, had forgotten about the need of rate cards. We had none. What little advertising we carried was for single insertion. The contract line idea had been forgotten.

Our stock market news was the worst in town, and we had no bank advertising, although probably the banks did more business with this paper, through loans, than with any other paper in the city. We had no financial news department, no real estate or automobile page.

The advertising staff had been allowed to go its own way, without any program for prospects, renewals, etc. This was remedied by 5 p. m. meetings of the staff when a comparison was made with the other papers, and a schedule prepared for the next day.

We were a union shop, but the lack of support here was noticeable. Frequently the men were rushing about for copy, or idly sitting by while the boy went to the editorial room. We at once established a reserve copy hook, so that they would be busy at all times. All that was needed was a little system.

One useless machine was sold outright for $1,000, which met the composing room pay roll for one week. New type was discovered tucked away in old cases. There was a saving in composition through the use of page mats. The men saw we meant business, and they gave us a willing hand.

We bought none of our supplies on a cash basis with the result that we paid much higher prices—from those to whom we were indebted. This was especially true of the paper situation. By buying in the open market we affected a saving annually of $8,000 on paper alone.

Economies in our salary list reduced our expense in this list $250 a week. Electric bulbs were no longer left to burn all night. Steam heat was turned off at 6 p. m.

There had been no budget of expense and income. We established one for each department—that is, the advertising, circulation, classified, etc.

Reporters, who wrote our new automobile, financial, real estate and building news were instructed to do missionary work for the advertising men.

Of all the losses in previous years, none had been bigger than that of white paper. Our paper had been sold for a cent when it was costing one and one-third cents for paper alone. Our price was now two cents, but we cut down 600 copies each night by eliminating useless returns, and a "free list."

The crux of the whole situation as I saw it was that of little or no management. This was especially true in the editorial department. Noon day meetings of business men, such as the Advertising, Rotary, Kiwannis and Automobile clubs, as well as many meetings of women's organizations were never reported by the paper.

The paper took the United Press service, but no attempt was made to use the Red Letter Advance sheets for time copy. National stories were not localized. Citizens were seldom interviewed. No attempt was ever made to build up stories of local news interest.

Incidentally, another feature established was The Open Forum, which was a success from the start. Cuts and mats were unearthed in a dust pile, and used to enliven the pages.

The previous management, or mismanagement, to put it mildly, had concentrated on the bigger department stores, so that when they cut down their space, things were in bad shape. We set about at once to build up with the smaller stores.

It was a pathetic sight altogether, including the loss of a family fortune, and it might have been prevented with a little wise foresight.

I took an option on the paper, but when I presented the complete picture to my financial backers, they said it would take too much money, with only a second place in sight in the evening field. Since then, I have wondered how many other papers in the country are facing the same plight through a lack of real knowledge, or—a lack of courage on the part of the publishers to face the truth.

IN BLACK HILLS WITH COOLIDGE

Correspondents photographed in Black Hills with President Coolidge. Front row (left to right): Philip Kinsley, Chicago Tribune; John T. Lambert, Universal Service; President Coolidge; James L. Wright, Buffalo Evening News; Carlisle Bergeron, Washington Post; Charles R. Michael, New York Times. Top row (left to right): Francis M. Stephenson, Associated Press; Paul Mallon, United Press; George Durno, International News Service; John Russell Young, Washington Star.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN NAMED BY S. N. P. A.

President Robert Ewing Appoints Leaders of Six Important Groups Within Southern Organization

Col. Robert Ewing, publisher of the New Orleans States and president of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association, this week named the chairmen of the various S. N. P. A. committees. They follow:

ADVERTISING—Col. Luke Lea, Nashville (Tenn.) Tennessean.

BUSINESS AFFAIRS—John A. Park, Raleigh (N. C.) Times.

EDITORIAL AFFAIRS—Marcellus E. Foster, Houston (Tex.) Press.

LABOR—H. C. Adler, Chattanooga (Tenn.) Times.

POSTAL RATES—Urey Woodson, Owensboro (Ky.) Messenger.

LEE SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM, Washington & Lee University—Major John S. Cohen, Atlanta (Ga.) Journal.

Members of these committees who will work with these chairmen on problems of the Association will be named by President Ewing in the near future.

"BOB" DAVIS ELECTED

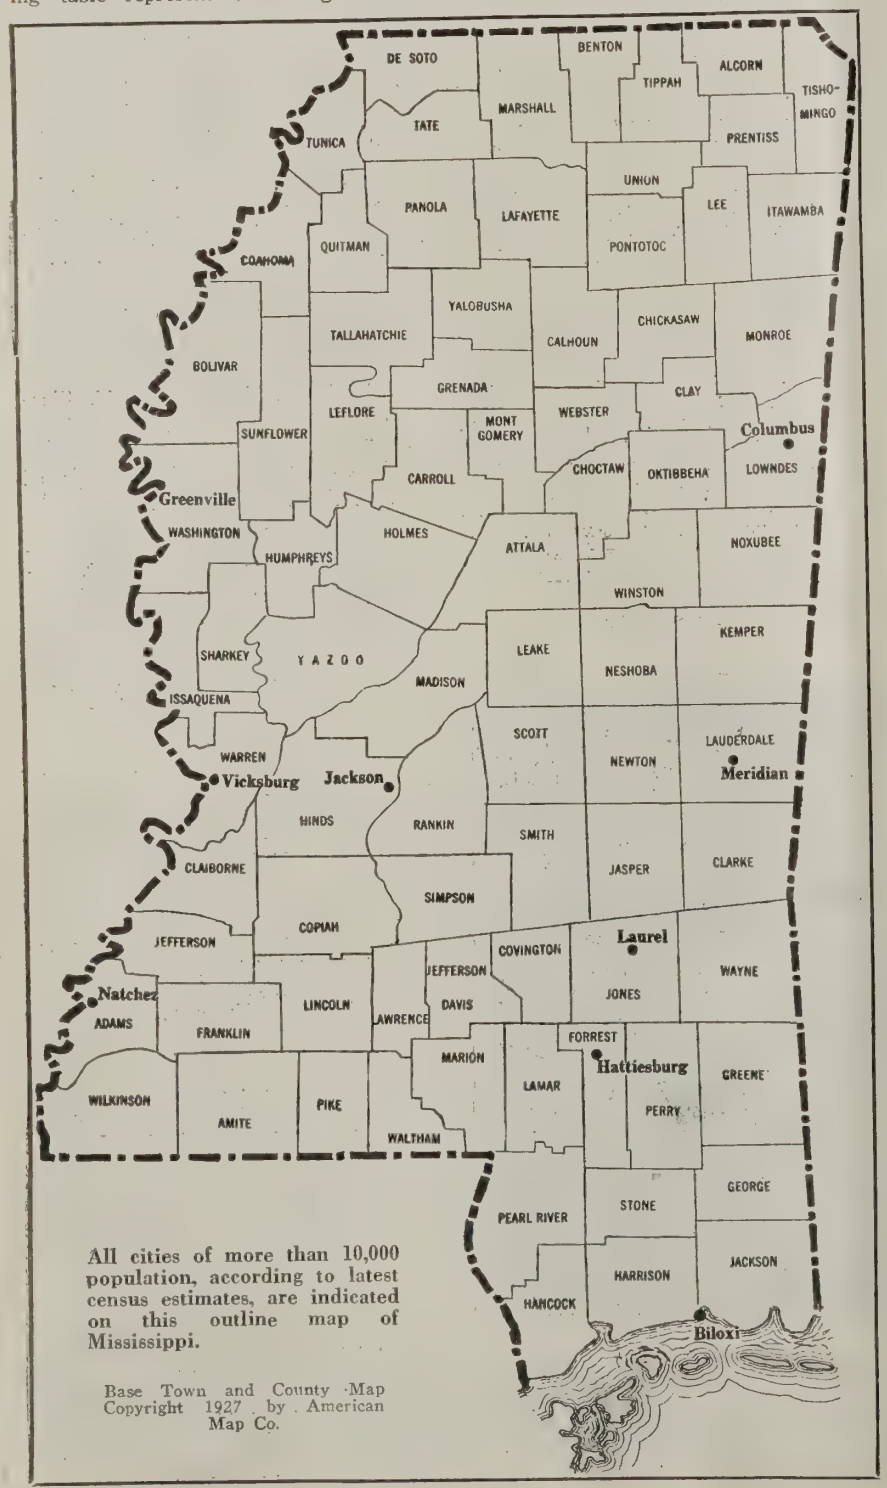
Robert H. Davis, writer of the column "Bob Davis Recalls" in the New York Sun was re-elected honorary president of the Stevenson Society of America at a meeting held at Saranac Lake last Saturday afternoon in the cottage which the celebrated writer occupied during the winter of 1887-1888.

KEY TO CONSUMER BUYING ABILITY

Statistical Rating of Mississippi Counties and Cities for Products of General Appeal, in Six Major Classes of Quality and Cost—An Original Simplified and Tested Formula from Basic Data

By NELSON H. SEUBERT

Copyright 1927 by Editor & Publisher Company. All rights are reserved and warning is given that reproduction of these results, in whole or in part, without written permission of Editor & Publisher Co., will constitute copyright infringement.



MISSISSIPPI, the 18th state to be covered in EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S current series on consumer-buying-ability, presents the fairly common picture of a large commonwealth, thinly populated in the rural districts and with no large cities to concentrate population and wealth. Its small cities, however, as shown by the chart on Page 49, are above the average for the whole country in purchasing power, according to the present formula.

Its rural districts are considerably below the U. S. average, and the state, as a whole, can be considered as possessing from 1.45 per cent of the nation's purchasing power for necessities, to fourtenths of 1 per cent of the nation's capacity to absorb luxuries.

The six columns shown in the adjoining table represent various gradations in price and quality of goods ranging from staples and necessities to luxuries purchasable principally by people whose incomes are sufficient to meet all ordinary needs and leave a surplus for extraordinary comforts and luxuries.

This survey is based upon the assumption that population and income, considered from available statistics in their proper inter-relations, will give an index to the ability of a community's members to purchase various grades of advertised goods. Obviously the one index cannot be applied indiscriminately to ability to buy a loaf of bread, a six-cylinder car, and masterpieces of period furniture. Population statistics alone might indicate the number of loaves of bread to be consumed in a certain period by a given number of people. Income, however,

(Continued on page 49)

All cities of more than 10,000 population, according to latest census estimates, are indicated on this outline map of Mississippi.

Base Town and County Map Copyright 1927 by American Map Co.

BUYING POWER ANALYZED BY PRODUCT CLASSES FOR MISSISSIPPI

Note: Figures below represent percentages of U. S. total carried out to four places: To use, mark off four places and insert decimal point.

Counties in bold face capitals—Cities in capitals and lower case

	CL No. 1	CL No. 2	CL No. 3	CL No. 4	CL No. 5	CL No. 6
MISSISSIPPI	14548	12143	9738	7333	4928	4000
ADAMS	174	158	141	126	110	92
Natchez	114	111	108	105	102	85
ALCORN	188	156	124	93	61	48
AMITE	142	114	86	57	29	19
ATTALA	186	149	111	75	38	42
BENTON	73	57	42	26	10	12
BOLIVAR	507	420	333	246	159	94
CALHOUN	125	98	71	44	17	13
CARROLL	151	119	87	55	23	28
CHICKASAW	167	136	103	72	41	26
CHOCTAW	93	74	54	34	15	10
CLAIBORNE	97	77	57	37	17	14
CLARKE	135	110	85	60	35	22
CLAY	132	107	83	59	34	25
COAHOMA	374	320	265	211	157	97
COPIAH	216	175	134	95	54	48
COVINGTON	111	88	66	44	21	16
DE SOTO	200	159	117	77	36	36
FORREST	184	174	163	154	144	146
Hattiesburg	125	128	131	134	137	139
FRANKLIN	105	84	63	42	21	15
GEORGE	42	33	25	16	07	12
GREENE	104	83	63	42	21	29
GRENADA	104	89	74	59	44	22
HANCOCK	79	67	55	42	30	33
HARRISON	294	263	232	202	171	91
Biloxi	105	94	83	72	61	33
HINDS	461	448	435	422	409	348
Jackson	225	259	293	326	360	303
HOLMES	298	247	196	147	96	110
HUMPHREYS	165	134	103	74	43	32
ISSAQUENA	57	46	35	23	12	17
ITAWAMPA	129	100	72	44	15	14
JACKSON	173	144	114	85	56	40
JASPER	147	116	85	54	23	16
JEFFERSON	119	96	72	48	25	17
JEFFERSON DAVIS	95	74	54	34	13	14
JONES	288	255	221	188	155	161
Laurel	136	132	128	124	120	124
KEMPER	146	116	87	57	27	20
LAFAYETTE	143	114	85	56	27	16
LAMAR	110	91	72	53	34	19
LAUDERDALE	367	345	324	303	282	253
Meridian	219	228	237	246	255	226
LAWRENCE	94	75	56	36	17	10
LEAKE	126	99	72	44	17	21
LEE	243	200	156	114	71	54
LEFLORE	315	279	242	206	170	171
LINCOLN	187	156	124	93	62	48
LOWNDES	213	184	154	126	97	93
Columbus	97	92	87	82	77	74
MADISON	222	185	147	110	73	42
MARION	147	122	96	70	45	30
MARSHALL	196	157	118	80	41	25
MONROE	246	203	158	115	72	69
MONTGOMERY	104	85	67	49	30	11
NESHOBA	160	127	94	61	28	42
NEWTON	155	124	94	64	33	31
NOXUBEE	178	145	111	77	44	44
OKTIBBEHA	127	103	79	55	31	18
PANOLA	210	172	134	95	57	46
PEARL RIVER	148	123	98	73	48	55
PERRY	78	63	48	32	17	23
PIKE	259	241	224	205	187	84
PONTOTOC	160	126	93	59	25	18
PRENTISS	144	115	86	57	28	19
QUITMAN	196	157	117	77	38	40
RANKIN	151	120	89	57	26	17
SCOTT	123	100	76	52	29	28
SHARKEY	122	99	77	54	31	35
SIMPSON	149	118	88	58	27	27
SMITH	120	94	69	43	17	13
STONE	56	45	35	24	13	6
SUNFLOWER	398	323	248	173	98	62
TALLAHATCHIE	320	261	202	142	83	70
TATE	146	116	87	57	27	16
TIPPAH	127	100	74	48	21	18
TISHOMINGO	129	102	75	47	20	14
TUNICA	172	139	107	75	42	43
UNION	166	133	101	68	35	36
WALTHAL	114	91	67	43	20	16
WARREN	271	266	261	254	249	193
Vicksburg	167	183	200	216	232	178
WASHINGTON	449	389	330	269	210	17
Greenville	132	130	128	126	124	98
WAYNE	127	101	75	48	22	14
WEBSTER	94	74	55	35	15	10
WILKINSON	114	91	68	44	21	16
WINSTON	150	119	89	59	28	20
YALOBUSHA	143	122	101	80	59	3.
YAZOO	320	263	206	149	92	81

FINANCIAL ADVERTISERS TELL THEIR STORY

How Banks Can Best Use Newspaper Space Explained by Ten Advertising Managers in Book Published by Bureau of Advertising, A.N.P.A.

ADVERTISING managers of 10 financial houses contribute to a book entitled "Finance and Advertising" issued last week by the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

The symposium was gathered under the direction of Sam P. Judd, chairman of the Newspaper Division of the research committee of the Financial Advertisers' Association. Mr. Judd, in an introduction, answers the question of why should a bank use newspaper advertising, by the imperative assertion that "unless conditions are unusual, a bank must use newspaper advertising." Then the 10 contributors relate how they have put the imperative medium to work for them.

Typical institutional copy used in Pennsylvania newspapers by S. W. Straus & Co. This advertisement was in large size—4 columns by 180 lines in depth.

W. E. Brockman, advertising manager of the Minnesota Loan & Trust Company of Minneapolis, in the opening chapter, describes how his bank buys copy in local newspapers to sell its salesmen to prospective investors. Other contributors and the subjects covered are: Alice E. Davis, Mercantile Trust Company, St. Louis, "Putting Bank Service 'On the Shopping List'"; J. K. Waibel, advertising counsel, Continental and Commercial National Bank, Chicago, "Faith and Fashion"; I. I. Sperling, publicity manager, Cleveland Trust Company, "A Campaign for Atmosphere"; Julian M. Case, advertising manager, Dime Savings Bank, Detroit, Mich., "Reminder Ads"; F. R. Kerman; assistant vice-president, Bank of Italy, San Francisco, "Tying up with Community Copy"; F. M. Staker, manager, publicity department, Commerce Trust Company, Kansas City, "Promoting Life Insurance Trusts"; H. B. Matthews, vice-president and director of advertising S. W. Straus & Co., New York, "Selling Investments Through Newspapers"; Stewart C. Pratt, Farmers Loan and Trust Company, New York; and George Dock, Jr., advertising manager, William R. Compton Company.

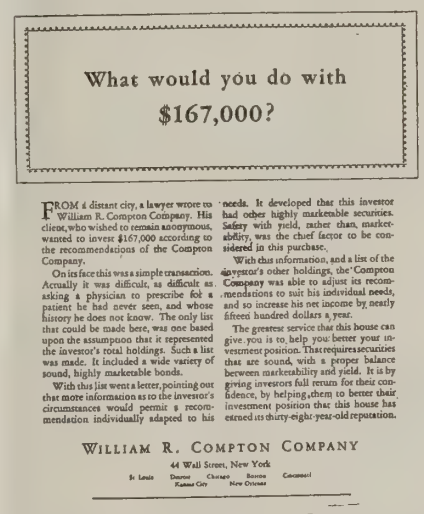
Financial houses, always powerful, have it seems, discovered a new power in advertising placed in the newspapers. This medium has been found to be the "logical mainstay" of investment advertisers; a means of reaching women and teaching them the advantages of a banking connection; a medium for promoting public interest in saving; and for selling the many services which at one time were hidden within the cold marble walls of the conservative banking institution that hesitated to advertise except for the purpose of publishing complex financial statements.

By Mr. Matthews, vice-president of S. W. Straus & Co., newspaper advertising was described as "the artillery of any successful campaign to sell investments."

"It permits the dealer to put his selling appeal before the public with a clearness, a flexibility and a convincingness, which other media lack," he wrote in the Bureau's book. "Newspaper advertising lays down a barrage which not only creates good will and prestige but affords a preparation for the efforts of salesmen and direct mail which is possible in no other way.

"It may be safely said that to create confidence is the first, although far from the only, aim of effective investment advertising. Investment money is different from other kinds of money—different from that which is spent for pianos or food or clothing or toothbrushes or radio sets or any one of a thousand necessities or luxuries. It is the money which is laid by as a safeguard for oneself and one's loved ones against declining years or the rainy day which comes in most lives sooner or later. Being money which is invested, it is put out with more care, more forethought and more consideration than money which is merely spent. Therefore, the investment dealer who wishes to sell securities to the public must first imbue that public with confidence in his responsibility as a dealer and in the quality and attractiveness of his product.

"For these purposes the newspapers come naturally to hand. They permit the use of institutional campaigns designed to create prestige and acquire good will, while at the same time they are equally adapted to intensive selling efforts on individual issues of securities. Newspapers permit close co-ordination of advertising and actual sales effort. When a new bond issue is brought out, a house of national distribution times its advertising so that throughout the country its specific offering advertisement can appear on the same day in dozens or scores of newspapers all over the country in every city in which a local selling effort is being put forth.



"Too, the newspaper permits continuity and frequent repetition. It allows the greatest possible flexibility in handling a sales argument, so as current market conditions change one's methods of attack and one's sales appeal may change accordingly. No delay is necessary. Newspapers are available day by day to carry the precise argument the advertiser believes to be most favorable to him in changing conditions and the precise arguments most effective in any particular locality.

"A well-known banker once said that the American people are economically illiterate, but since the war and the days of the Liberty Loan they are learning fast. Before the war the bond-buying class was estimated at some 300,000 to 400,000 people, but today practically everyone knows what a bond is and a coupon is, and the number of potential buyers which constitute the field to which the investment dealer appeals runs into many millions—numbers in fact so large as to be impossible to estimate with any degree of accuracy.

"In the work of economic education of the American people the newspapers naturally have contributed powerful aid. Particularly in their financial pages have they been of great help in raising the general standards of economic and financial knowledge of the American people.

"Here in the financial pages of the newspapers is the natural and principal market for investment securities. Here is the day's financial news. Here are the day's quotations. Here the investor naturally turns to learn what is going on in the securities market and the Stock Exchange and here indeed is created an atmosphere favorable to the investment advertiser.

"True, many newspapers—in fact, the majority—place the principal emphasis on the news columns and speculation rather than investment. The day's doings on the Stock Exchange are emphasized sometimes to too great an extent in comparison with what is printed about investment securities. The reason generally advanced is that stocks are more colorful, more picturesque, more dramatic and more "newsy" than bonds or mortgages. This is true, and yet it is a fact that more people are interested in bonds and in mortgages—that is, presumably sound investments—than in stocks which represent speculation rather than investment.

This piece of copy extracted a merry laugh from a competitor and a good order from a new customer who had $167,000 invested in bonds.

"The history of the business of S. W. Straus & Co. in its newspaper advertising is a close parallel to that of many others. Our first advertisement, published some thirty-two years ago, was in a newspaper. In this same newspaper, one of the largest in the country, we used, for instance, space costing approximately $3,000 in 1912. This sum has increased steadily year by year until the same publication has carried space over our signature amounting to more than $50,000 a year.

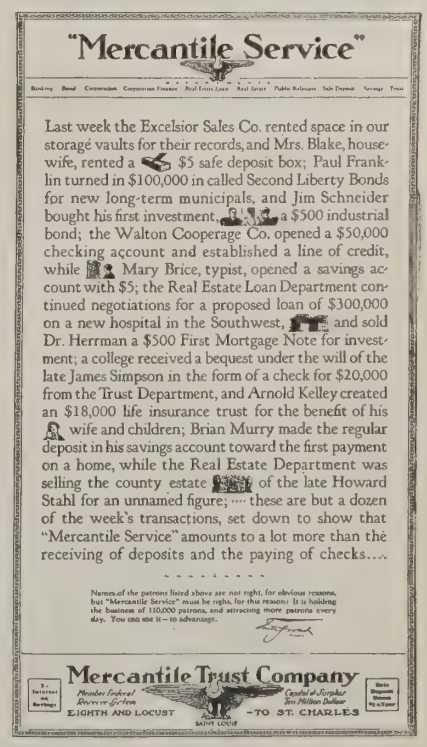
"In the experience of our company as in the case of many others, the growth of our advertising appropriation has been linked closely with the development and growth of our organization until it is now an organization with offices in more than fifty principal cities. In developing each of these local territories we have relied on the local newspapers as powerful and effective media. We believe in continuity and in keeping everlastingly at it, and this continuity is carried out in all of our advertising.

"While newspapers must be the chief reliance of the investment advertiser, they should be used in combination with other media to achieve the best results. Magazines of national circulation, especially those with constructive and well-edited investment departments, are highly valuable for background, name-building and prestige-building—and in some instances valuable alike for direct sales. Direct mail, letters, and circulars form a portion of every investment-selling campaign that cannot be overlooked. Some advertisers have had good results from such media as subway, elevated, street car, or bus-card advertising, from window display and outdoor display.

By the nature of things, however, the newspaper is a medium which links up more closely with concentrated selling effort, which permits the greatest timeliness in presenting the sales appeal, and reaches the largest body of real prospects at the lowest comparative cost."

This note of the comparative cheapness of the newspaper advertising medium is also emphasized by Mr. Case, of the Dime Savings Bank of Detroit. It is his system to use small space persistently, and he has thus, he reports, achieved success. He wrote in part:

"I believe the small advertisement has a very definite place and function under certain conditions. For example, a situation where the advertiser is approaching a prolific season for sales and his appropriation does not permit the continued use of large or even medium-sized advertisements. It is important to him that he keep his name before the public as often as possible, as a constant reminder. Here seems the logical place for use of a series of small but frequent insertions.



"To cite a specific case, we found ourselves in just this position a couple of years ago. It was late in December. The month had been very productive of new accounts and the approaching month offered an unusual opportunity for securing a larger number of new customers.

"Christmas Club and other holiday advertising had cut into the appropriation so that the space we could use during January was only normal. Considering the situation from all angles the logical procedure seemed to be keeping our name before the public as much as possible throughout the entire month.

"A little calculation showed that a series of three-inch single column advertisements, one each day in our three local papers, would accomplish what we desired and at no greater expense than the cost of two or three insertions of normal size.

"A series of thirty small pieces was prepared with a change of copy daily

(Continued on page 45)

"Our advertisements are about people because people are interested in people," writes Alice E. Davis of the Mercantile Trust Company, St. Louis.

SAYS BIG FIELD WAITS ADVERTISER WHO WILL "DEBUNK" HIS COPY

Writer Speculates on What Might Happen if Ads Told the Truth About Products They Promote—Urges "Confession" Advertising

By CLARENCE T. HUBBARD

AVIATION and advertising are not so far apart. As words, both begin with the initial letter A, the first letter of the alphabet—as actualities both have been in the process of experimentation for some time—and both are still undeveloped powers. Advertising, of course, is not quite as spectacular as aviation.

But——

In our own field we are also enjoying our little "hop offs"—some serious, some accidental, some startling, and others amusing.

Who now will pull the "Lindbergh" in the advertising world?

True Story magazine almost did it when it took an entire page in the New York Times and so went after the Campbell's Soup account. In advertising to the Campbell's Soup folks—a whole page in a newspaper soliciting their advertising for the magazine—they flew over unknown territory. It was startling, original, courageous.

The Dodge motor car with its slogan idea was another attempt. The New York banks with their "financial statements which anyone can read" as appearing in the New York theatre programs are on a brave and courageous flight. The open advertising of certain sanitary articles is an adventure in territory previously shunned.

But in advertising are we betting on the wrong horse?

Let's think about it a bit.

For years we have watched the biplane and the monoplane, but with much reservation. For cross-country and trans-Atlantic flights we "bet" on dirigible. In fact, it has been agreed for some time that we would be eventually going back and forth over the ocean, the English Channel, from New York to Florida, and other routes on airships, but never by airplane. The airplanes, we averred, would be all right for war scouting, or for short jumps, but never for any dependable passage. But we were betting on the wrong horse!

For years now we have been applauding the courageous originality of advertising—electrical flashes, color splashes, trellised billboards, startling copy, spectacular advertising, original advertising, courageous advertising. Maybe we've picked the wrong horse?

Some day an advertising "Lindbergh" is going to amaze us by riding the right filly—advertising confession.

No, I don't mean the "truth in advertising" business. That is a worthy movement all its own. I mean straight from the shoulder advertising which admits that the product advertised is, perhaps, the second best.

To take a paragraph from real life——

I recently listened to some field representatives of a nationally known concern discussing matters with their home office executives.

"How is Old Man Cochran doing?" inquired one of the home office men.

"Well, not so good," replied one of the field executives. "He lost his company, you know. And the other day we got a letter from him, announcing that he had taken on the Unionville Products Company."

"Why I never even heard of the company!" exclaimed the home office man whose memory served him that Old Man Cochran had once been their branch office manager but had gone into business for himself.

"Neither did I," replied the field stimulator, "but we got a letter filled with the usual bunk about his now having a company by which he could render real service and so forth and so on."

This average business man with his conversational reference to "the usual bunk" does not help advertising. And that reference is being made every day. Maybe I am spluttering in the wrong direction, but it seems to me that if Mr. Cochran had tried the unexplored course of sending out an announcement letter admitting that he wasn't doing so awfully good after all but that he had taken on a company which had facilities and service, and that he was trying his best to establish himself, that it would have gone over much better than "the usual bunk."

Certainly, to tiptoe a step further, if you opened your morning paper and read this—wouldn't you more than just glance?

"SECOND RATE FURNITURE—BUT WORTH THE PRICE

"Coming clean folks, that's what it really is. We sell furniture (it doesn't fall apart) for folks in medium circumstances.

"What's the good of our claiming it to be as good as the furniture bought by the four hundred. It can't be. It's good furniture for the price. That's our honest and dependable statement. It means that while it won't last a lifetime, it will give satisfaction for many years. It's worth the price—and no more."

Or this:

"NOW ABOUT OUR CLOTHES

"Our men's suits, folks, are not the best, they won't wear like Calvin Coolidge's tailor-made wearables, you can't hand them down to your grandchildren.

"But they will wear for a good solid year and look well. The material is not imported—it's made up in a New England town. They're not the world's best suits. However, for forty-five dollars, they're all for the money that you can honestly expect and that is what we are offering—$45 suits—and we are not going to say that they are $95 or $100 suits, for they are not. They're $45 suits, but there's forty-five big dollars' worth in them."

Some day this is going to happen. Some one will tell you by advertising that their house which is for sale is in need of some repair; that their oil burning furnaces do need a little attention now and then; that their cigars don't hold the ash well, but for a nickel they are a good smoke if you own an ash tray; that their heralded automobiles are good for a couple of years if you clean the spark plugs but for the money they are a fair exchange. When that day comes the dictionary dictators will be out of luck and products will be sold for what they are worth and not for what is advertised out of folks.

Advertising confession is the horse I am betting on.

GOVERNOR BARRED FROM NEWS

The name of Acting Governor Eugene Gilmore of the Philippines was barred from the news columns of Manila newspapers in a resolution passed Aug. 29 by 50 representatives of local newspapers attending a meeting of the Manila Press Association. The Governor's name is to be eliminated from the news until he has agreed to permit a daily interview, personally or through his cabinet. The Governor had refused to discuss his plans with newspaper men and had issued orders barring reporters from the offices in the Malacanan Palace.

FRANCE EXPELS WRITER

Jules Broune, Paris correspondent of Tass, the Soviet News Agency, was ordered expelled from France by the Minister of the Interior on Aug. 30. The order was based on the charge that Broune sent his headquarters exaggerated reports of recent Sacco-Vanzetti manifestations in Paris.

ANTHRACITE DISTRICT MEETING

Editors to Confer at Mt. Carmel, Pa., with Business Leaders

Editors of the various newspapers in the anthracite field have been asked to attend a meeting in Mt. Carmel, Pa., during November for the purpose of considering with merchants, bankers, and chambers of commerce the best way to win back the hard coal market and insure steady work at the anthracite mines in the future.

The meeting is largely the result of newspaper agitation in the interest of the coal industry. Editors in the coal field have also been credited with inducing the mine owners to employ newspaper advertising to help stir up the demand for hard coal again. Some of the copy has already appeared.

REAL "DETECTIVE-REPORTER"

Biscup of Tulsa World Made Special State Investigator

Having appeared as a state witness in half a dozen murder trials, and because of confessions and evidence he has obtained, Walter Biscup, reporter for the Tulsa World, was this week appointed as special investigator for the county attorney's office.

Byron Kirkpatrick, county attorney, said the reporter had been of great assistance to his office.

As the present county investigator is on his vacation, Biscup will make all investigations for Tulsa county.

Biscup has been the county building reporter for the Tulsa World for the past year.

KFI WANTS ADVICE ON RADIO PUBLICITY

Admits "Editor & Publisher" Criticism of Some Releases "Perhaps Justified" and Asks Radio Editors for Suggestions

Station KFI, in a note to radio editors, asks how its service may be improved, in the new publicity release which followed publication of an article "By a Radio Editor" in EDITOR & PUBLISHER recently. The note follows:

"EDITOR & PUBLISHER's recent wallop at the publicity releases of KFI and other stations was perhaps justified insofar as the two stories quoted were concerned.

"Sometimes news is slim and ideas weak and no office can turn out 100 per cent acceptable copy day after day. A captious critic can poke any front page full of holes, and applesauce has been known to flow from the most sacred of editorial pens. KFI and other stations try to furnish legitimate, fresh and interesting sidelights on the operation of a broadcasting station. Occasional failure does not and should not damn the entire system.

"Let the radio editors speak for themselves. A form card to us asking to be dropped from our mailing list will save your waste baskets. Another form card to offending stations, notifying broadcasters of material desired and material banned, would do a lot to clean up the situation.

"Can you suggest how our service can be bettered?"

"Ready Response from Substantial Readers" says Greenleaf & Crosby Co.

In These Words Florida's Oldest and Largest Jewelers Testify to the Pulling Power of Florida's Largest Newspaper

RETAIL jewelers who can build the 12-story building shown on the right must know something about advertising and advertising media. Here is what they say of the Florida Times-Union:

"We have noticed that advertising in this newspaper meets with a confidence from readers that is highly desirable for advertisers.

"A newspaper having such acceptance from its readers is sure to produce sales.

"Ready response from substantial readers contributes to the satisfactory results we have always attained through the Florida Times-Union."

The Florida Times-Union
JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

Now Ready

The Richmond News Leader
1927-28
HAND BOOK

This handbook of Richmond, Virginia is designed for Advertising Managers and Agencies, Sales Managers, Business Executives and all others who are interested in merchandising and selling in a profitable market.

In compiling this book it has been our aim and desire to gather for the busy executive in a brief yet comprehensive form those facts and statistics that will give at a glance the true condition and potentialities of this fertile market. The reader may safely accept its contents as true and authentic.

We have also endeavored to show in this handbook why The Richmond News Leader not only is given preference by national and local advertisers in Richmond, but also why it is recognized as the first medium in circulation and reader interest throughout the thirty counties (550,000 population) embodied in Richmond's trading area.

The Richmond News Leader reaches far more people and far more dollars, and has far greater coverage of Richmond and its trading area than any other newspaper in Virginia. The book also contains route lists of the various retail and wholesale outlets in Richmond . . . an invaluable aid to the sales representative when he has occasion to call on the trade in Richmond. This handbook is yours for the asking.

SEND FOR YOUR COPY NOW!

Write to Kelly-Smith Company at any of the addresses given below, or, to J. B. Keough, Atlanta, Ga., or to the Business Manager Richmond News Leader, Richmond, Virginia.

National Representatives:

KELLY-SMITH COMPANY

Graybar Bldg., New York City	Waterman Bldg., Boston, Mass.	Atlantic Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.	Tribune Tower, Chicago, Ill.

J. B. KEOUGH, ATLANTA, GA.

Advertise to Richmond and Its Trading Area Through Virginia's Greatest Newspaper

The Richmond
NEWS LEADER

"On News Leader Square"

Covers Richmond Like a Roof

WRITERS KEEP FRUITLESS VIGILS AT LE BOURGET WAITING OCEAN HOPS

Life of a Paris Correspondent Isn't What It Was Before Lindbergh Took Off—Often Wait Till Dawn to Hear Flight Is Postponed

AVIATION, or more precisely cross-Atlantic flights, have brought a new care into the life of the special correspondent abroad. One meets a special on the streets of Paris looking pale; he comes away from a press conference at the Quai d'Orsay yawning: he has been having "a night out," but a night out at Le Bourget air field waiting for a rumor to materialize, and has spent long, trying nocturnal hours which have meant not a single line of copy.

Comes a message during the day, more generally late in the evening, that Givon, Costes, Drouhin, Tarascon or someone else is tuning up his plane and will "start tonight for sure." A straight tip, not the slightest doubt, just as it has been a straight tip without any "if" for weeks past.

A hasty meal, then an automobile out to Le Bourget aerodrome, four miles north of Paris, a long straight road from the Porte de la Villette, a whiff of a Chicago stock yard, with a turning search-light in the darkness as objective. Le Bourget field stretches away in the night. On its margin are three squat, square buildings, the official headquarters of the Commandant of the Airport, a private building belongs to an Eglish air company, and the Customs House, the upper part of which is M. Crette's restaurant.

The newspaper correspondents congregate in the restaurant. At first they are few, but soon their numbers grow, and all the important American newspapers and agencies are represented. Following them come the French reporters and the camera men. Ten o'clock, eleven o'clock, no sign of an aviator leaving. Costes is to fly from Villacoublay, near Versailles, to Le Bourget, fill up there, and be off. Givon may go on the Blue Bird, Drouhin may wheel out Miss Columbia and turn her head homeward, taking Levine. . . . Will the Columbia fly at all? Will anyone go off? Speculation is general and theories of air-currents, weather forecasts, and storm zones are discussed, air pilots, French, English and German, joining in.

As the night wears on the restaurant fills up, and mid-night brings out a crowd from Paris—sensation hunters, those who missed the arrival of Lindbergh as well as those who did not and have come for more. Soon the whole place is a babel. Here is a famous artiste from the halls, there a writer of a novel which has sold by thousands in the States. A famous violinist sits with his hat slouched over his eyes. A group of admirers surrounds a long-haired man who looks gloomily at everyone and everything out of owl-like eyes, seeking for one more thrill.

And in this crowd the specials wait and watch and work, listening vaguely to what is going on around them, but keen on the main job. Something is going to happen, someone is going to start on the big air-hike—perhaps! Here, cut off from the rest of the world by a belt of night, we have Paris in small, all sorts and conditions of humanity present themselves for study.

As the hands of the clock over the bar point farther into the night the prices of what the restaurant has to offer increase, and cups of coffee at democratic prices at nine o'clock move up to aristocratic heights by half past one. Suddenly someone calls "Hush." Conversation stops, the red haired girl in the corner breaks off half a giggle. Everyone runs to the windows and camera men look to the instruments. High up, somewhere, outside is the distant throb of an air engine. Everyone looks up, and soon a tiny light is described creeping along aloft. It comes nearer and nearer. Then there is a pop, and a spark falls from it and bursts into a green flare that floats gently downward. This is a signal, and at once the field that was a sea of darkness springs into the vision as the powerful ground lights are lit up. The moving point of light in the air draws nearer and now is four points of light floating through the air. They form a distinct square, one on each wing tip, one fore and one aft, but not a line of the plane can be seen though it is only a short distance off. Suddenly the square tilts and slides sideways down the sky to earth. It is only when the machine rides firmly along the ground that it can be recognized as a plane. The big flares are turned off, and once more it is just four lamps.

There is a run towards the machine, correspondents arriving first, press-camera men next, and cinematograph operators bringing up the rear, a weird obstacle race in the dark. The engine runs slow, then stops.

"Etes-vous Costes?"

A helmeted-head over the side of the plane shouts, "Comment?" The pilot deafened by the noise of his motor has not shaken off his deafness. Someone goes right up close and shouts in his ear;

"Are you Costes?"

"No, I'm not Costes. I'm just in from Lyons, thirty-first regiment of aviation."

"Did you fly over Villacoublay?"

"Yes."

"Notice anything?"

"All lit up, looks like something going on there."

There is a rush back to the restaurant and to telephones hidden away in nooks and corners. The best of the lot is the Associated Press private line right inside the restaurant to its office in Paris, and a man standing by the instrument can see what is going on all over the field before him. Others less fortunate can get a glimpse of the field only from the top of a ladder that is used for passengers alighting from planes.

The hubbub begins again. Newcomers now grow scarce, and as the aerodrome clock clangs out two some of the sensation-seekers give up and go home. But there is no going home for the newspapermen. Percy Phillip, of the New York Times, is telling a golf story with his inimitable Scotch accent, to James, who is nodding "Yes" but thinking about tomorrow's tasks. Dashiel, of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, walks up and down before a row of tables to keep awake. S. F. Wader, of the Associated Press, picks up the private telephone for the twentieth time, and Hal Walker, of the same organization, comes and goes with the latest from this source and that.

There is another whirr in the air, and again everyone is on the field. The small light circles overhead and then comes to earth. Once again a false alarm, just a military plane in from Nancy.

Drizzling rain begins to fall and hopes for a departure grow less, especially as the latest weather reports of conditions over the Atlantic are not promising. Dawn creeps through a wet sky, and the big aerodrome looking forlorn comes back to view. Officialdom in the main building is moved at the sight of the waiting men and condescends to give information —scarce since a plane did not land at Issy—"Costes will not fly."

The motor cars are cranked up, the doors bang, and the specials and the stragglers go home to Paris, while the sleepy-eyed waiter counts up tips that gladden his heart and bring his dreams of early retirement a step nearer.

"Hell, not a line of real copy," sighs the special as he tucks himself into a corner of his car. But the watch must be kept, the most tiring, uncertain watch the newspapermen abroad is called upon to keep, but there are reputations to be lost and won on Bourget field.

This is truly a mechanical age. Even public officials are frequently machine made.—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

A. E. BRAUN GIVES BONUS TO PITTSBURGH STAFFS

EMPLOYES of the Pittsburgh Post and the Pittsburgh Sun, the morning and afternoon papers acquired by the Hearst-Block interests, have been given a bonus of approximately $100,000 by Arthur E. Braun, former president of the Post and Sun Publishing Companies, in appreciation of their services.

The amount given each employe will depend on his salary at the time the papers were sold and his term of service. Office and copy boys, it is said, will receive $100. The bonus ranges from that sum up to $5,000, which will go to the head of one of the departments, who has worked on the Post for nearly four decades.

PAGE FELLOWSHIP AWARDED

Philip Hewitt-Myring, London Daily News, to Spend Year in U. S.

Philip Hewitt-Myring, editor of the "leader page" of the London Daily News, has been awarded the Page Journalistic Fellowship for 1927-28. He will arrive in this country shortly to spend a year here studying on various newspapers.

Mr. Hewitt-Myring has been a member of the Daily News staff since 1919. He is 27 years old. In addition to newspaper work he has written considerable literary criticism. He was educated at Eton and in 1919 became a second lieutenant in the Grenadier Guards, Special Reserve. His mother was an American, a Miss Schuyler of New York.

Thomas T. E. Cadett, the first Page Fellow to come to the United States, returned recently after working a year in this country on various newspapers, ending his tour on the New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS EDITOR BEFORE GRAND JURY

Boyd Gurley Testifies in Continuation of Political Probe Started by Thomas Adams of Vincennes

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 31.—Boyd W. Gurley, editor of the Indianapolis Times, and James W. Noel, an attorney, Tuesday appeared before the Marion county grand jury which is investigating charges of political fraud and corruption in Indiana. It is thought the men were called to testify in connection with a story published in the Times several weeks ago which charged that Governor Ed Jackson, while secretary of state in 1923, offered Governor Warren T. McCray $10,000 and a guarantee of immunity from prosecution if he would name James E. McDonald prosecuting attorney of Marion county to succeed William P. Evans, McCray's son-in-law who resigned when the Governor faced trial for using the mails to defraud.

Ex-Governor McCray was paroled from the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., today after having served three years and four months of his ten year sentence. Mr. Noel was McCray's attorney in the trial.

Both the Times and the Indianapolis News, after publication of the charges in the Times story demanded that Governor Jackson disprove them or resign. Up to the present Jackson has refused to comment.

Gurley has taken an active part in the political probe, which is now in its eleventh month. The present grand jury is the third one to investigate charges made by Thomas H. Adams, editor of the Vincennes Commercial, that D. C. Stephenson, former Indiana Klan leader now serving a life sentence in the state prison for murder, controlled the affairs of the state from 1922 to 1925. More than 200 witnesses have been questioned.

Twelve months ago the circulation of the Daily Oklahoman and Oklahoma City Times was 140,000—of the Sunday Oklahoman, 83,000.

Today, 151,000 prosperous Oklahoma homes receive a copy of the Oklahoman or the Times. The Sunday Oklahoman has climbed to 91,000.

This indicates a traditional habit of new residents in Oklahoma City to subscribe to the biggest two newspapers in the State.

The DAILY OKLAHOMAN OKLAHOMA CITY TIMES

Represented by E. KATZ SPECIAL ADVERTISING AGENCY, New York, Chicago, Detroit, Kansas City, Atlanta, and San Francisco

Announcement

NEA Service is now issuing a twelve-page magazine section. Front cover is in four colors. Back cover is in two colors. First release will be for November Sixth.

If you are interested in magazine pages you'll want NEA quality. Write or wire for further details and reservations.

NEA Service, Inc., Cleveland, Ohio

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service

CHAMPION SPARK PLUG WINS FIGHT AGAINST PIRATING IN JAPAN

Suit Brought Under International Trade Convention Clears Market of Fraudulent Goods—Apology Published by Infringers in All Dailies

PIRATING of American trade-marks and their application to goods of inferior quality has met a setback in Japan, according to reports which have just reached this country of a victory obtained by the Champion Spark Plug Company, of Toledo, Ohio, over a number of manufacturers and dealers in Tokio, Nagoya, and Osaka.

Last Spring the Shanghai agent of the Champion Company discovered a sample plug retailing in Shanghai for half the price of the Champion's plug, of which it was a good imitation. Container, guarantee and advertising matter differed from that accompanying the genuine plugs only in the misspelling of several words. Investigation by C. F. Cahusac, patent attorney at Tokio, and C. Stillwell of his staff, located the manufacturers in Nagoya and selling agencies in Tokio and Osaka. Suit was instituted May 5, the manufacturers being charged with misrepresenting the place of origin of the goods and fraud in the use of another party's trade name and place of manufacture, the action being taken under the International Convention regarding fair competition. The Japanese court at Nagoya announced that it would prosecute the accused under the fraud statutes of the national criminal code.

Two days after suit was instituted, the accused requested arbitration. The request was disregarded and the dealers, anxious to avoid publicity, organized a meeting at Nagoya and agreed after a 36-hour conference to surrender all their imitation goods to Mr. Cahusac.

Steps were also taken, pending trial, to impound the stocks of the Daiichi Jidesha Kumiai, Nagoya, the manufacturers, and the Iwayama Shoton, Osaka, a large wholesale house which had exported the illicit product. Seven principals of the factory when brought to court for preliminary hearing attempted to influence the court in their favor, but the public procurator, W. Ichihara, declared that he would prosecute to the extent of the law, saying that the defendants had given no thought to Japan's good name abroad.

The defendants then published in all of the Japanese dailies, and in two English-language papers as well, an apology over their own signatures and with the dealers deposited 10,000 yen in cash to be held for a year by the Champion Company as security for future good behavior. The terms upon which the dealers escaped prosecution were included in an agreement between Mr. Cahusac, representing the American firm, the Japanese manufacturers, and the retailers, the gist of which follows:

1. The Champion Company agreed to withdraw its criminal suits against the manufacturers and dealers.
2. It also agreed to waive all claims for damages, except as provided below.
3. The manufacturers and dealers agreed to deposit 10,000 yen to the credit of the Champion Spark Plug Company for one year, to be forfeited if the agreement was broken in any particular.
4. The manufacturers and dealers agreed to make a public apology at their own expense in five papers in Tokyo, two in Nagoya, two in Osaka, and one in Kobe.
5. The manufacturers and dealers also agreed to deposit 2,000 yen with Mr. Cahusac to defray preliminary expenses that might be incurred if the agreement was broken.
6. The manufacturers and dealers agreed to turn over to the Champion company's attorney within three weeks all spark plugs in stock in Nagoya, Osaka, Tokio, and Yokohama, and to make every effort to obtain all such plugs from other places.
7. The manufacturers and dealers agreed that 5,000 yen would immediately become forfeit if either of them defaulted on the agreement and that the entire surety would be forfeited if both defaulted.
8. The Champion Company agreed that the dealers would not be discriminated against in respect to handling genuine Champion plugs.
9. The manufacturers and dealers agreed that the Champion Company should immediately publish at the expense of the infringers any infringement of any article of the agreement.

The Kobe Herald, commenting editorially under the head "Trade Piracy," said:

"These efficient proceedings were necessarily costly, five attorneys being engaged in addition to the legal representatives of the complaining company, but the point gained is a valuable one. It is a victory for honest trade, a heavy blow to a class of unscrupulous industrialists and traders in Japan whose activities for many years past have brought the whole country into disrepute commercially. For years foreign manufacturers have been putting up with such abuses on the assumption that they could not be stopped, but a British patent attorney has at last put an effective stop to one glaring case of infringement, and there are others.

NEWSPAPER MAN CONVICTED

W. W. Edwards, southern newspaper man, was convicted Aug. 27 in Asheville, N. C., of attempted blackmail and given a suspended sentence by Judge R. A. Nunn. In a letter to Wallace B. Davis, local banker, purporting to come from an Italian radical, Edwards had demanded $500 on threat of dynamiting the banker's home.

PROPOSES PACIFIC CONFERENCE

Dean Walter Williams Suggests 1928 Meeting in Tokio Speech

Dean Walter Williams, of the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri, outlined plans for a Pan-Pacific Conference of newspaper men in an address on Aug. 5 before the International Journalists' Association of Japan, Tokio.

Though Pan-Pacific conferences are numerous for educators, economists and scientists, this will be the first conference of journalists on exclusively Pacific coast problems, Mr. Williams said. In explaining the purpose of his journey to Japan and China, Mr. Williams said that he was authorized by the Pan-Pacific Union, and by the Press Congress of the World, of which he is honorary president, to sound out the journalists of Asia on the proposal of a Pan-Pacific conference of newspaper men, and to make preparatory arrangements.

The conference would be held at Honolulu in July of next year under the auspices of the Pan-Pacific Union and would last either for a fortnight or a month. Representative journalists from each of the nations bordering on the Pacific would participate.

RALEIGH TIMES WINS $60,000 LIBEL SUIT

Editorial Calling Fundamentalist Pastor an "Immigrant Ignoramus" Was Not Libelous, Southern Jury Decides

North Carolina's first evolution trial, a consolidated libel action for $60,000, brought by Rev. Dr. James R. Pentuff, Baptist clergyman of Concord, against Publisher John A. Park of the Raleigh Times, and former editor Oscar J. Coffin, has been won by the defendants.

Twice this controversy, growing out of the Poole bill to prevent the teaching of evolution in state-supported schools, has been in the state courts. The Times, its publisher and its editor were sued in October last, but Judge A. M. Stack presiding at that trial non-suited the plaintiff, Dr. Pentuff, on the ground that the editorial animadversions upon him did not constitute a cause of action.

Dr. Pentuff speaking on the Poole bill before the 1925 general assembly, was characterized by Editor Coffin as an "immigrant ignoramus," as "unmannerly in debate" and "uncharitable in his conduct toward members of his denomination." The editorial assault on the cleric was twice made.

When the several anti-evolutionist organizations in the summer of 1926 undertook to elect a legislature which would outlaw evolution, Dr. Pentuff entered the fight and came to Wal county, 25 miles from Raleigh, where h lectured on the subject of evolution ar his meetings pledged war on the evo lutionists. It was here that Editor Coff twice attacked him and twice was sue with his associate Mr. Park.

The supreme court sitting on the fir litigation reversed the judgment of th October court and held actionable pe se the words of the Raleigh Time Nevertheless, the newspaper men wer to trial Aug. 25, and without offerin testimony, reiterated their allegation against the minister. The paper refuse to print a retraction and to avail itself o the libel laws mitigating damages. Witl out putting on its own witnesses, th paper went to the jury after having re peated its charges against the clergyma and in two hours it won a verdict hold ing that its words assaulting the ministe were true and that the damage to h character was exactly a cipher.

Newspapers of the state regard th victory as far-reaching. The supreme court opinion reversing the lower cou was based on the holding that the word used were of peculiar damage to th minister by virtue of his profession. Th Raleigh Times under this handica rested its case a second time and truste to an unknown jury 150 miles from th home of the paper, and neighbors to th preacher, to sift the evolution from th lawsuit.

The libel action for $60,000 was, o course, based on the editorial attack; bu the assault was predicated on the minis terial incursion into Wake county politic for the purpose of organizing the count and others against state institution teaching the regular course in biology The arguments before the Cabarrus jur were almost solely religious. The jur was asked to punish "the high priest o infidelity" and to set down with th weight of much gold, "the oligarchy a the University sending out the deadlie poison to young people."

It is a victory that very few people i North Carolina thought possible to wi The testimony began August 25, ende on the evening at 7:30 and the jur agreed at 9:30. Judge Thomas B. Fin ley presided.

MAGNETIC PLAYER BOARD for WORLD SERIES

Now Leasing—One Hundred to One Hundred and Fifty Dollars

Play the game in front of your building or in public park or square

Supply limited—Wire today

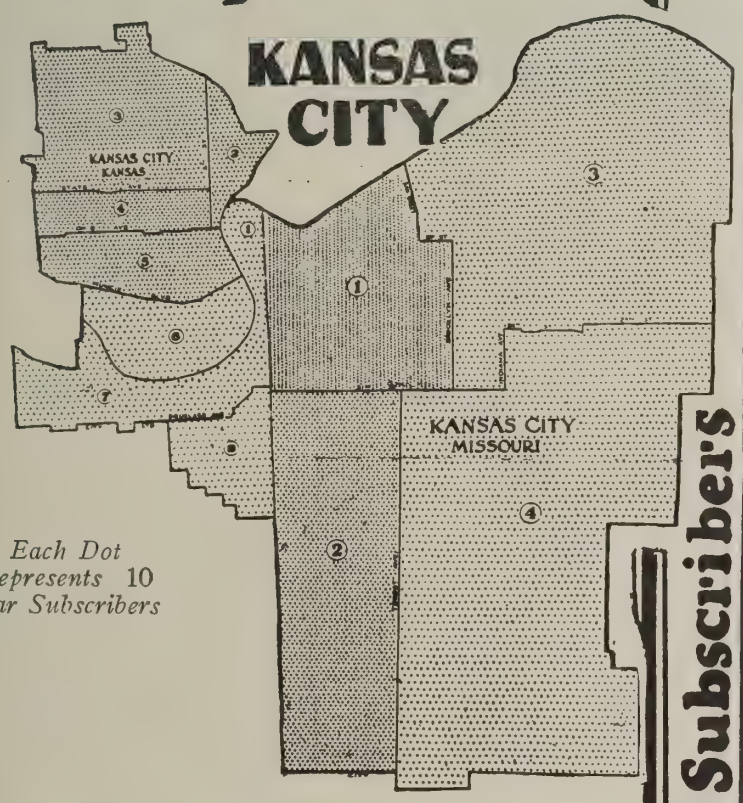
Standard Magnetic Baseball Player Board Corp.,
George H. Reynolds, Treas. New Bedford, Mass.

Distinctive Advertising

THE almost universal demand for more distinctive more attractive and more effective newspaper pages is being met with the Ludlow—the simplest and most practical system for setting ads and heads.

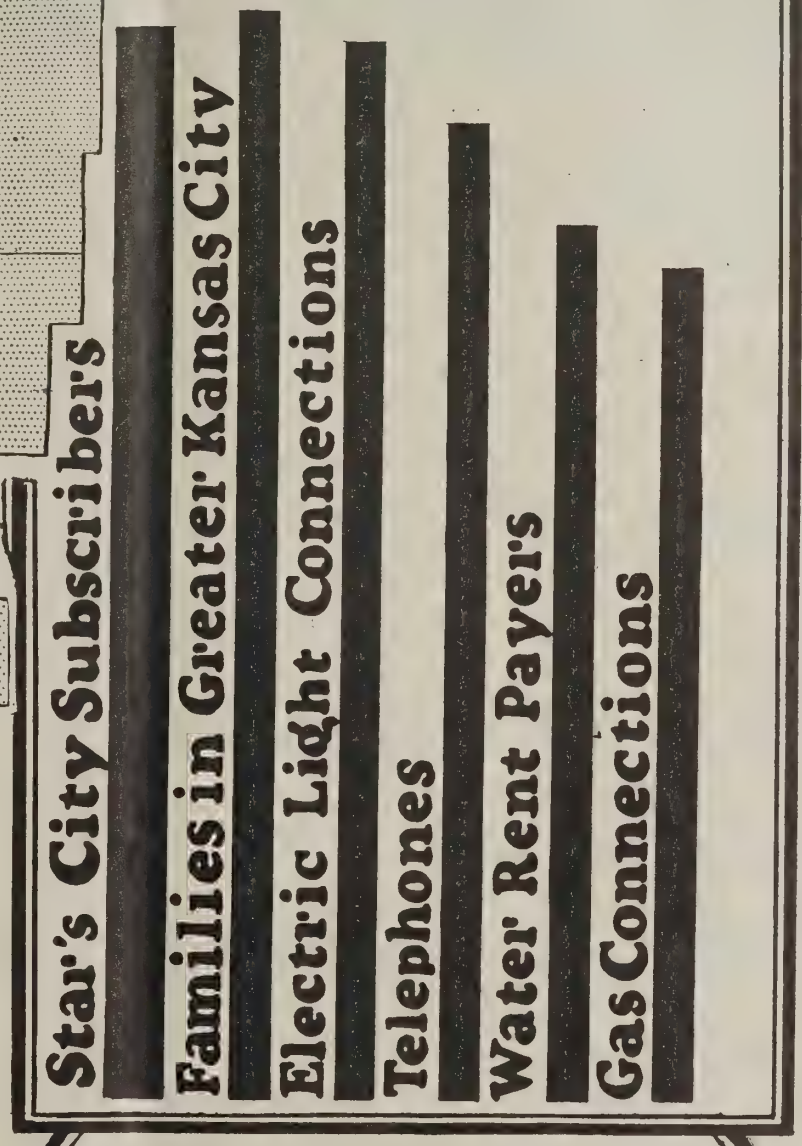
Besides saving time and money, the Ludlow assures bright, new type in slugs, delivered on the galley in unlimited quantities, as needed. With the Ludlow you can cast, without machine or mold changes, any size face up to full-width 72 point upper and lower-case, and even 84 point caps.

This explains why newspapers of every size the world over are setting their news headings, feature headings and advertising display with Ludlow faces.



Complete facts about the Ludlow of today and what you can accomplish with it in your plant will be gladly sent on request.

Ludlow Typograph Company
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago, Ill.



Boston: 470 Atlantic Avenue
New York: 63 Park Row
Atlanta: 41 Marietta Street
San Francisco: 5 Third Street

PRINCIPAL DISPLAY LINES SET IN LUDLOW CAMEO

complete coverage of Kansas City!

Each Dot Represents 10 Star Subscribers

THE chart and map on this page tell a story of circulation coverage which reflects an unusual condition.

The Kansas City Star possesses the quality of appealing to the masses as well as to the classes.

So broad is The Star's scope of service, so manifold are its uses to the business men of Kansas City and its territory that The Star is an integral part of the city's social and commercial life.

Star's City Subscribers (evening)	144,496
Star's City Subscribers (morning)	139,153
Star's City Subscribers (Sunday)	139,788
Families in Greater Kansas City	146,341
Electric Light Connections	143,542
Telephones	132,383
Water Rent Payers	120,122
Gas Connections	115,150

(Figures and Circulation as of July 1, 1927.)

TOTAL Net Paid Circulation (July Averages)

Evening 242,705 Morning 238,441 Sunday 279,162

THE KANSAS CITY STAR

New York Office
15 East 40th St.
Lexington 10122.

Chicago Office
1418 Century Bldg.
Wabash 1067.

STATE PRESS FIELD SECRETARIES AT DETROIT CONVENTION

Delegates to the annual meeting of the Association of State Press Field Secretaries in Detroit last week included (left to right): Len W. Feighner, Nashville, Mich.; Henry Z. Mitchell, Bemidji, Minn.; C. M. Meredith, Quakertown, Pa., president of the National Editorial Association; Charles Spatz, Boyertown, Pa.; B. Arp Lowrance, Charlotte, N. C.; Wil V. Tufford, Clinton, Ia.; secretary of the Inland Daily Press Association; Jay W. Shaw, Elmira, N. Y.; J. S. Hubbard, Columbia, Mo.; Herbert C. Hotaling, St. Paul, Minn., secretary of the National Editorial Association; L. J. Ball, Toronto, Ont.; Herman Roe, Northfield, Minn.; Sam S. Haislet, Minneapolis; Harry Porte, Salt Lake City; Elmo Scott Watson, Chicago; O. W. Little, Alma, Kan.; Erwin Funk, Rogers, Ark.; Edwin A. Bemis, Littleton, Colo., president of the association; J. W. Weir, Elkins, W. Va.; John L. Meyer, Milwaukee; E. F. Tucker, Denison, Ia.

NOVELIST DENIES N. Y. STIFLES TALENT

Playwright Says Writers Get Bogged Down in Newspaper Work—Bromfield Wrote 5 Novels in Spare Time

The question of whether New York stifles or stimulates the ambitions of young people with writing talent was argued this week by two Pulitzer prize-winners. Paul Green who won the play prize with "In Abraham's Bosom" took the negative view in an interview appearing in McClure's Magazine.

"I have seen dozens of young men strike out for New York to express their souls," he was quoted as saying. "But before they can do any expressing they have to eat, so they get a job on a newspaper or in an advertising office, intending to do their writing on the side. Time goes on, the job looms larger and expression dwindles. Perhaps, in the first spasm of ambition, they publish one thin volume entitled, 'Song of My Soul,' and are never heard from again. Greenwich Village and Times Square have gobbled them up.

"If I had to stay in New York my pen would run dry within the year. And if I wrote to please the New York critics—God help my work!

"Stay at home, read books, ignore artifical standards and keep a steady job. Those are my precepts for the youngster who wants to write. Art pursued eight hours a day is likely to run thin. If you have a steady job you can write when you really have something to say and stop when you haven't."

In an interview in the New York Evening Post, Louis Bromfield who also won a Pulitzer prize with his novel "Early Autumn" answered Green's statements.

He declared that his jobs in New York had given him invaluable experience. Born in Ohio, Mr. Bromfield began work as a newspaper man in New York after the war, in which he saw foreign service.

"I began on the City News Association, then went to the Associated Press, then to Musical America, and after working with Brock Pemberton, the producer, I became advertising manager for a publishing company," Mr. Bromfield said.

"During the time I held these jobs I wrote five novels, submitted the fourth and fifth for publication and had them published. After the second was published I was well enough off to chuck the jobs and devote all my time to writing.

"It probably takes an iron constitution to work at a job in New York and write on the side, but it gives one invaluable experience. The more experience a writer has with life in general the better off he is. Life in New York is as much life as anywhere, and perhaps a little more so.

"This talk of New York ruining an author is the bunk. If it is in a fellow to write, he'll write whether he is in an Arizona desert or a small town boy in a big city.

"The worst part about New York is getting to know too many people, but of course that comes at the other end, when you are established, and then you can go to Europe to do your writing."

Robert Bridges, editor of Scribner's Magazine, declared that while it is true that living in New York is harmful for some writers, yet "a great many men have found it a most exhilarating adventure, with fine friendships and associations that could not be had in smaller towns."

NEWSPRINT SURVEYED BY CANADIAN BANK

Report of Institution Insists There Is No Serious Danger of Overproduction—U. S. Consumption Increased at 7 Per Cent Rate

A report of a survey made of the newsprint situation by the Canadian Bank of Commerce and made public in Toronto last week insists that there is no serious danger of over-production and discounts previous warnings in that direction.

Operation has been at about 85 per cent, of capacity, a decline of about 10 per cent in comparison with last year's record, it is pointed out, but, with the new mills brought into operation and the additions to existing plants, production during the first six months of this year has been 102,000 tons more than the corresponding period of last year. The shipments during the last half year were about 90,000 tons in excess of those in the first six months of 1926, mostly to the United States, which absorbs about 90 per cent of the Canadian production.

"Consumption in the United States during the past few months has increased, and," the survey goes on, "as previous experience has shown that a larger quantity of paper is used in the latter part of the year, the normal rate of increase, about 7 per cent, is likely to be maintained, although, of course, it probably will be much below the abnormal rate of 18 per cent recorded in 1926.

"The United States mills curtailed production by about 9 per cent, and further reduction is expected. In Newfoundland production was increased by 40 per cent, to 118,600 tons, and in Mexico by 23 per cent, to 7,600 tons, making a net increase for North America of 4 per cent, which is less than the average rate of increase in consumption in the United States. Imports of European paper into the United States usually form only about 5 per cent of the total consumption, but in recent months shipments by Scandinavian countries have doubled, and have been sold at prices below those of the Canadian product. The Scandinavian paper, however, is not of as good quality as that made here, and generally it does not meet the requirements of American publishers, who, in recent years, have become particular about the grade of paper they use."

Our Customers Write Our Ads

Jackson, Miss., Daily News Says—

"We have never had a serious delay or accident of any kind in five years' operation of our 24-page DUPLEX TUBULAR press."

DUPLEX PRESSES

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS

Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

A. B. C.

Statement for year ending June 30, 1927,

29,049

Twice the circulation of any other newspaper in

ALTOONA

Many local merchants use the Mirror exclusively and practically all national advertisers.

The ALTOONA MIRROR
ALTOONA, PA.

Business Direct Fred G. Pearce, Adv. Mgr.

BUY ONCE---and you've bought EVERYTHING!

NEWSPICTURES---Always First. Daily from New York and Cleveland and spot coverage by radiophoto, telephoto, airplane and fast mail from auxiliary plants in every section of the country.

COMICS---"Boots and Her Buddies," "Freckles and His Friends," "Mom'n Pop," "Our Boarding House," "Out Our Way," "Salesman Sam," "Wash Tubbs," "Little Joe," "Flapper Fanny," "Book of Knowledge" strip, "Jack Lockwill's Adventures" for boys, bedtime story and color picture.

SPORTS---Complete page headed by Billy Evans, Werner Laufer, Bob Matherne, Jimmy Powers and special writers, covering the entire realm of sport. Splashy art every day.

FOR WOMEN---Complete page containing those famous "Ethel" drawings, Allene Sumner's "The Woman's Day," Olive Roberts Barton's family editorials, Hortense Saunders' interviews with feminine leaders, Betsy Schuyler's "400" fashion letter, Germaine's Paris letter, Julia Blanshard's helps to housewives, Sister Mary's recipes, Anne Austin's "Saint and Sinner," splashy style illustrations, house plans, beauty articles and stories about prominent women.

PAGE ONE---Every day from Cleveland and New York a feature spotlight on the current news, or T. N. T. matter anticipating the news (Tomorrow's News Today).

FICTION---Prepared especially for newspapers, with Ernest Lynn and Anne Austin showing the way.

EDITORIAL---Don Wootton's cartoons, Gilbert Swan's New York letter, Dr. Morris Fishbein's health article, Rodney Dutcher's Washington letter, editorials, paragraphs, The Book Survey, New York stage letter, Dan Thomas' news of Hollywood, travel articles, world of science and nature.

FOREIGN---The only blanket service with its own cameramen and correspondents throughout the world, headed by Milton Bronner in London and Minott Saunders in Paris.

GENERAL---Intelligence tests, cross-word puzzles, radio programs, weekly auto page, weekly farm page, weekly radio page, Sunday School lesson, weekly page of justifiers, fillers and humor, Bible quotations and "daily thoughts," justajingles.

SNAP!---Monthly magazine for and about newspaper folk.

PREPAREDNESS---Comprehensive annual morgue of those in the public eye, here and abroad. Special services before every championship athletic event. Preparedness for conventions, holidays, trials and every important event that can be anticipated.

FAR WEST---Regular service from San Francisco for Pacific Coast clients and protection for all clients on events of national importance.

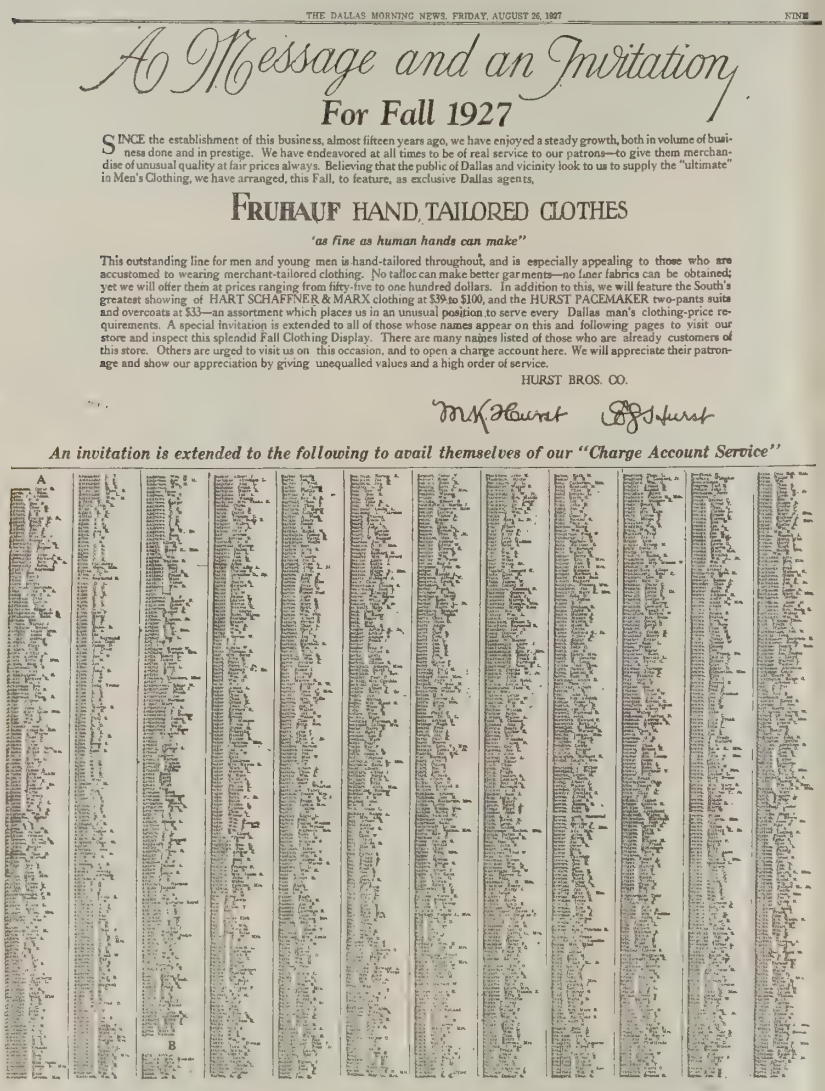
All of the above goes regularly to full service clients of NEA Service, Inc., WITHOUT EXTRA ASSESSMENT, at a rate based on circulation. It furnishes an editor with EVERYTHING he needs beyond local news and wire report.

FULL PAGE COMICS available in four-page ready-prints, containing eight comics by eight different artists, in color mats and in black-and-white mats.

MAGAZINE PAGES now prepared on a regular schedule, in four colors and in black-and-white, containing America's best newspaper art and edited by magazine experts.

NEA Service, Inc., Cleveland, Ohio

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service—Backed by 34 Years' Experience



STORE INVITES NEW CHARGE ACCOUNTS IN SIX-PAGE NEWSPAPER AD

Copy in Dallas Newspapers Includes 18,000 Names, Set Directory Style, of Local People Clothier Wants on His Books—Reaction Favorable

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

DALLAS, Tex., Aug. 31.—Announcing the opening of the fall season and the acquisition of several new lines of merchandise, Hurst Bros. Co., retail men's clothiers, of Dallas, last week published a unique advertisement, occupying six full pages.

The idea originated with W. S. Loring, a Dallas advertising man who represents a number of large local concerns in several lines of business, and who has charge of the Hurst Bros. advertising.

THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS, FRIDAY, AUGUST 26, 1927 NINE

A Message and an Invitation

For Fall 1927

SINCE the establishment of this business, almost fifteen years ago, we have enjoyed a steady growth, both in volume of business done and in prestige. We have endeavored at all times to be of real service to our patrons—to give them merchandise of unusual quality at fair prices always. Believing that the public of Dallas and vicinity look to us to supply the "ultimate" in Men's Clothing, we have arranged, this Fall, to feature, as exclusive Dallas agents,

FRUHAUF HAND TAILORED CLOTHES

"as fine as human hands can make"

This outstanding line for men and young men is hand-tailored throughout, and is especially appealing to those who are accustomed to wearing merchant-tailored clothing. No tailor can make better garments—no finer fabrics can be obtained; yet we will offer them at prices ranging from fifty-five to one hundred dollars. In addition to this, we will feature the South's greatest showing of HART SCHAFFNER & MARX clothing at $39 to $100, and the HURST PACEMAKER two-pants suits and overcoats at $33—an assortment which places us in an unusual position to serve every Dallas man's clothing-price requirements. A special invitation is extended to all of those whose names appear on this and following pages to visit our store and inspect this splendid Fall Clothing Display. There are many names listed of those who are already customers of this store. Others are urged to visit us on this occasion, and to open a charge account here. We will appreciate their patronage and show our appreciation by giving unequalled values and a high order of service.

HURST BROS. CO.

M K Hurst S J Hurst

An invitation is extended to the following to avail themselves of our "Charge Account Service"

A

B

Eighteen thousand citizens of Dallas saw themselves listed as desirable charge account prospects for a clothier, who aimed to capitalize the interest people exhibit in newspaper mention of their names and affairs.

This announcement was published in the Dallas Morning News and in the Evening Times-Herald. Approximately 18,000 Dallas people were invited by name to open a charge account at the Hurst store. These names were arranged in directory style, being set in agate type in seven columns, alphabetically, and with twelve columns to the page. On the first page about a third of the space was occupied by an explanatory announcement, the balance being devoted to names, and the balance of five pages were devoted entirely to names, with the exception of a small space, about four columns by nine inches, which was used to exploit merchandise.

No reference was made on these pages to the purpose for which the names were published, a line being carried at the top of each page stating that those whose names appeared thereon could obtain full information by referring to page nine, where an invitation was extended to inspect the fall displays and to open a charge account with the store.

The effect of the advertisement was most favorable. It secured instant attention, and was closely observed by all readers of the papers in which it was published.

In commenting upon this advertisement, he said:

"It has come to my attention so many times that people like individual mention, that I have often wondered how it would be possible to personalize a newspaper announcement. A few years ago I published a page advertisement for one of my clients, an automobile dealer, containing a list of the local owners of his make of car. Inadvertently a few names were omitted, and much to everyone's surprise, we received letters and telephone calls from these persons asking why they had been overlooked.

"Others whose names had been included, acknowledged the fact, and seemed much pleased that their names appeared on the list. Then, too, I have never known it to fail that newspaper reports containing names of those attending special meetings, banquets, etc., are closely scanned, and have been told by acquaintances frequently that they noticed I attended such-and-such an affair. So it is a natural conclusion that a list of printed names has an attraction for a large number of people. From these experiences, I conceived the idea that a retail store would attract a great deal of attention by inviting people known to be good credit risks, to open an account, and to publish their names. Naturally, accounts being carried by the store would be included.

"The unfavorable reaction, if any, would come from those whose names were omitted—but these would not be doing business with the store. The many thousands whose names were included, and who were not already customers, would unfailingly be complimented, and thus the good effects would so far outweigh the bad, that the results as far as the store was concerned, would be very satisfactory.

"This is the theory upon which the plan was based, and the results to date seem to warrant us in believing that it is the correct one. We have had a very large number of compliments—busy men of affairs have taken the time to write us, thanking us for having included their names. We have also had a number of inquiries as to the reason for some names being omitted, but we are always able to explain the cause of the omission, and receipt of such an inquiry gives us a splendid opening to solicit a new account, if it proves to be a desirable one.

"There is no bad reaction to the store, or to the newspaper, in publishing such a list of names, as nothing was said to the effect that this list embodied all of the people in the city who were worthy of credit—but it was merely published as a list of those whom Hurst Bros. especially desired to see in their store, and who were welcome to charge account service.

"Naturally, this is but one step in a campaign to increase our book-business, as we will follow up the list by mail, by personal solicitation, etc. Also, publication of this announcement had a tremendously good effect upon the sales force of the store, as it demonstrated a desire upon the part of the firm to assist them in opening new accounts, and gave to them a splendid list for personal solicitation. Human nature is a strange thing. Put a 'wet paint' sign on your building, and passers-by will almost invariably finger the surface—print a list of names, and readers will almost invariably look for their own."

The New York Times

Continuing Leadership

In eight months this year The New York Times published 18,823,590 agate lines of advertising, 6,792,392 lines more than any other New York newspaper. For the month of August alone The Times printed a total volume of 1,920,182 agate lines, 738,978 lines more than any other newspaper.

The Times leadership is steadily maintained despite the censorship which excludes thousands of lines of advertising monthly.

MERGER IN MARYSVILLE

Morning Appeal Bought and Suspended by Evening Democrat

After 67 years of continuous publication, the Marysville (Cal.) Appeal, one of the oldest daily newspapers in California passed out of individual existence on Sept. 1.

The Marysville Democrat, afternoon publication, absorbed the Appeal on that date and discontinued it as a morning daily. The afternoon paper henceforth will be known as the Democrat-Appeal. It will not publish a Sunday edition.

Such equipment in the Appeal plant as is needed by the Democrat will be retained, and the rest sold.

In the negotiations which resulted in the consoldation, V. M. Cassidy and Alvin Weis represented the Appeal, while Eugene McLain of San Mateo, principal owner of the Marysville Democrat and the Oroville Mercury, acted for the purchasers.

F. W. McKechnie is president and editor of the Democrat-Appeal.

Harry Butler is advertising manager of the merged papers.

Geo. T. Reed

Head Machinist

Los Angeles (Cal.) Evening Herald

....“Twenty-seven years of active machinist experience on various makes of typesetting machines confirms my belief that the Mergenthaler Linotype machine stands forth preeminent above all others. Quality and service is rightfully the slogan of the Mergenthaler Linotype.”

GOOD WORK
GOES INTO IT

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

GOOD WORK
COMES OUT
OF IT

“A hair, perhaps, divides the false and true”
. . . Sang OMAR

But in the Linotype factory it is more likely to be only a fifth of a hair and there is no “perhaps” about it. Parts must be right; right to the half-thousandth of an inch or they don’t go into the Linotype. Such accuracy is unusual in manufacturing practice; but then too it is unusual for an intricate machine like the Linotype to give twenty-five, thirty, or even thirty-five years’ service . . . as Linotypes frequently do.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY
BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED
NEW ORLEANS TORONTO, CAN.

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

LINOTYPED IN GARAMOND AND GARAMOND BOLD

HOW DAILY CARRIED 3,000 CHILDREN TO NEW YORK AND BACK

Four Special Trains and Three Boats Used on Reading Times Outing—Each Child Tagged and Every Group of 10 Had a Chaperon

WHEN the Reading Times, owned by John H. Perry, with I. J. Hornstein as publisher, carried 3,000 poor children to New York for a boat trip on the New York harbor and up the Hudson, Monday, Aug. 2, Times men did the work. Experience on two previous trips for kids, one a boat trip on the Delaware river in 1925, the other a visit to Philadelphia's Sesqui-centennial, showed that newspapermen could efficiently handle the strenuous work.

Originated by Abe Hurwitz, managing editor, the plan for the trip was carried out by three men: Rus Symontowne, acting managing editor, who handled the all-important work of raising the Annual Kiddies Outing Fund; Harry Y. Sterrett, foreman of the composing room; and Edward R. Hintz, assistant secretary of the Reading Chamber of Commerce, but proud of his former county-editorship on the Times.

Within a little more than 12 hours the 3,000 kids were placed on four special trains, carried 145 miles to Jersey City, placed aboard three Iron Steamboat Company boats, taken down the bay to view the Statue of Liberty, on down to Coney Island, back to the Battery and up the East river under the Brooklyn, Manhattan and Williamsburg bridges, and then around and up the Hudson almost to Grant's Tomb, then back to Reading again. They were fed on the trains going and coming, fed on the boats, given caps, toys, noise makers. There were no accidents, no lost children, no hungry kids.

Food? Twenty thousand ham and cheese sandwiches, 22,000 pretzels, 6,500 bricks of ice cream, 2,200 quarts of milk, 3,000 bottles of pop, 16,000 honey cakes, 11,660 lollypops, with 10,000 cups for the milk. Then there were thousands of bells, caps, clatter-bells and what not.

The children gathered at three widely separated playgrounds in Reading at 6.30 a. m. (None were late.) They marched to the two passenger stations of the Reading railway and boarded the four special trains, named the Red, White, Blue and Green specials. Several hundred children from two large orphanages in Berks county had been brought to Reading by trains a few minutes before.

Each child was given a tag reading: "I belong on the White train; Car No. 2 My name—Johnny Smith. My station (referring to the playground at which he reported at 6:30 a. m.)—Fifth and Spring." With the four trains named and each car numbered, the children had no trouble finding their cars. Each group of 10 children was in charge of a chaperon, who placed the names of the children, the name of their train and car number on their tags. Every person who went on the trip, including each reporter who covered, it was tagged. Doctors, visiting nurses, food distributors, everyone wore a red, or white, or blue, or green tag, the color corresponding to the color of the train he or she rode upon.

Officially, prominent business men had been picked as train leaders. Really, Times men did the work. Working from baggage cars placed in the centers of the trains, they first checked the number of children and adults in each car; appointed capable looking chaperons as car leaders, one to a car; and began the distribution of articles. The car leaders of each train were summoned to the baggage car, where they were given boxes containing as many read, white and blue caps as there were people in their cars. They then distributed these.

The same procedure was followed successively with bells, bananas, honey cakes, lollypops, pretzels, sandwiches and noisemakers. Careful routing by railway officials enabled the trains to reach Jersey City in 3 hours, 15 minutes, just after the last distribution was finished, as planned.

A special car had gone ahead earlier in the morning and ice cream was handed out to the youngsters as they stepped onto the gangplanks of the boats. Further distributions of food and toys were handled in similar fashion. In all cases, the actual work was done by Times men, as had been planned.

The news coverage was carried out efficiently. Herbert C. Kohler, city editor, with two reporters, established an "office" in a car on the return trip and stepped off the train at Reading with three complete stories on paper, ready for final editing and heads. Before the fourth, or Green, special train had reached Reading, the stories of the boat trip were in the composing room.

A photographer and engraver accompanied the party and fitted up a temporary dark room on the "flagship," in which they developed and printed pictures and "doped out" their layouts.

USING DISPLAY SPACE TO COLLECT TAXES

City of New Haven Abandons Small Legal Copy for Larger Space Warning Citizens Payments Are Due

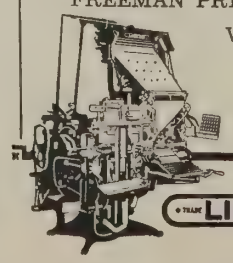
Municipalities throughout the east are keeping their eyes on the efforts of the city of New Haven to collect a greater part of levied taxes by taking space in the local newspapers, and urging citizens to pay their taxes before a penalty clause is invoked. Although but two series of advertisements have been placed, Edward J. Stanford, tax collector, is of the opinion that increased collections will more than make up the cost of the advertising.

"The law requires," Mr. Stanford said, "that legal notice that taxes are due be printed in the newspapers. Up to the present time, a two-inch ad has been inserted in the classified advertising pages of the newspapers, fulfilling the legal requirement. But this has been a failure, for hundreds of tax-payers never read the classified columns, and, from year to year, forget the time limit, and then grumble over not having been given sufficient warning. We intend to continue to use a display advertisement which measures three columns in width and six inches in depth. By using large type, and stressing the fact that the penalty clause will be strictly invoked, we reach thousands of people who in previous years forgot about their taxes until it was too late."

Asked about the results of the advertising, Mr. Stanford expressed himself as of the opinion that it was a "great success."

"One thing," he said, "the flow of payers to city hall has become more even. No longer do some people suddenly remember that their taxes must be paid in a day or two and rush down to city hall along with several other thousands. We begin our advertising at least three weeks before the last day of grace expires, and have a more or less continuous stream. Our figures show a substantial increase, and I know of no better way of building up good will."

Mayor John B. Tower, who has been credited with originating the idea of advertising to the taxpayers, is of the opinion "that it is unfair to insert a notice in the back of the paper which is of interest and importance to thousands of people, and expect them all to see it.



"I believe the city does its best when it takes a good amount of space in the local newspapers, and advertises just as other corporations do. We stress the fact that by paying taxes when they are due, not only is the penalty avoided, but the city is provided with the funds necessary to enable it to render its services to the taxpayer."

From the Linotype Mailbag

"More Overnight Service"

"I wish to thank you for your promptness in filling a rush order for a small part. I sent in late in the day—March 16—for a long transfer finger and found it awaiting me in the office when I went to work this morning—March 17."

FREEMAN PRINTING CO.
Waukesha, Wis

LINOTYPE

WEEKLIES INCORPORATED

The Sun Publishing Company, publisher of the Hartford (Conn.) Sun, has filed a certificate of incorporation with the state authorities, giving an authorized capital of $250,000 of which $100,000 is paid in. The Sun Publishing Company also publishes the Wethersfield News and the Manchester Sun, two other Connecticut papers.

NEW CLEVELAND "COLYUM"

A new "columist" made his bow in the Cleveland Press, August 24. He is Samuel P. Burrill, formerly of the editorial staff of the Cleveland Times which suspended publication several months ago. The column is headed "Yesterday, To-Day and To-Morrow," and he calls it a "hodge podge of comment and guesses" in his first article.

NEWS MEN DRAFTED A RADIO ANNOUNCERS

Cincinnati and Indianapolis Reporters Broadcast Races and Lindbergh Reception—Studio Directors Like Results

Managers of broadcasting stations ar turning to newspapers for "radio re porters."

Recent examples were the broadcastin of the Latonia Derby, when Edward Allen and John W. Larue, of th Cincinnati Enquirer news staff, gave a account of the thrilling race and a run ning account of events prior to the bi race.

These two men, well posted on tur events, gave the histories of othe Derbies, described the crowd, told of th notables there and even described th gowns of women visitors at the trac Their radio "story" amounted to a min iature of what would be elaborated o in the news columns of the Enquirer th following morning.

Later the Cincinnati Times-Star len three of its best reporters and editors fo the broadcasting of the reception to Co Charles A. Lindbergh.

In Indianapolis the broadcasting of th annual automobile race fell to John E Heiney, of the Indianapolis News Other stations have called on newspape men on occasions of a similar nature.

Studio directors say that newspape men are qualified to give more interest ing accounts of news events than men i their organizations who are traine chiefly to narrate the merits of a sym phony or to pronounce correctly th names of certain composers.

At any rate the use of trained news paper men would prevent such faux pa as occurred during the broadcasting o the reception at the International Peac Bridge when Premier Stanley Baldwi was referred to as Sir George Baldwin.

FOR SALE

In New England

EXCLUSIVE EVENING DAILY with Printing and Publishing Business. Price $50,000 on very attractive terms.

We have for immediate sale a prosperous evening daily exclusive in its field together with a printing plant doing high class booklet, book and job work, also the publisher of several weekly and monthly publications. These enterprises combined do a business of over $75,000 per year. Modern printing plant, 4 linotypes, Ludlow, Duplex Press, two job presses, all office and composing room equipment, total inventory value $31,800.

The property located in a beautiful city of 16,000 people.

Labor costs lower than any city in the United States.

Write or wire for details.

Palmer De Witt & Palmer
Newspaper properties.
350 Madison Ave., New York

Blanketing Your Retail Stores

The fourteen business papers carrying the rotogravure insert advertisements of the Kimberly-Clark Company circulate and duplicate the seven classifications which contribute over 70% of the local advertising to the newspapers of America—your newspaper.

The clothiers, jewelers, department stores, furniture stores and other larger local advertisers in your city are being told every month about how rotogravure can be used to effectively convey their sales messages in your rotogravure section.

If your advertising department needs suitable photographs to interest local advertisers, refer to our large service catalog of photographs available to you without cost, or write the Rotogravure Development Dept. of the Kimberly-Clark Company, 208 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

On the next three pages we show a few attractive layouts using some of the photographs, backgrounds, borders and panels which are yours for the asking.

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Manufacturers of ROTOPLATE The perfect paper for rotogravure printing

NEW YORK: 51 Chambers St. . . . LOS ANGELES: 716 Sun Finance Bldg. . . . CHICAGO: 208 S. La Salle St.

Kimberly-Clark Company

Established 1872

Neenah, Wis.

THIS simple but effective single column layout is suitable for a florist or any shop or store that sells things for the bride—shoes, stockings, underwear, gowns, etc.

Border from page 28 and photo number 273

Furs

OF QUALITY

Fur neck pieces are going to be very popular again this fall. Photo number 247 is shown at the left but there are five more fur piece illustrations on pages 19 and 20 of the large photo catalog.

$00

Furriers are large users of roto space

NAME HERE

Address

WHILE this photo number 276 is primarily one to illustrate an ad for lingerie or negligees, it also serves very well for a florist. Background number 413 and type panel from page 29 complete the layout.

THIS is on lingerie p seen. The num background nu panel from page
ment that will attention of all

This Gives Y

The nine advertising layouts on the page following are n limited possibilities offered y up attractive displays for y rotogravure section of your

The hundreds of photograp panels and borders available
Development Department o mit of many thousands of com
why more of your local adv
your rotogravure section.

Any of your advertising soli of paste and an hour or two,
ads than we show here.

Rotogravure space is more shown about how his advert

Have you made plans for a most charming

s we have ever Mounted on and with type es an advertise-
lto attract the
of your paper.

a Rough Idea

e two pages and the eight pecimens of the almost unrtising department to make al merchants to use in the utrations, backgrounds, type through the Rotogravure nberly-Clark Company per-cts forming attractive reasons hould use more lineage in vith a pair of shears, a pot ake up even better looking sold when the prospect is will appear when printed.

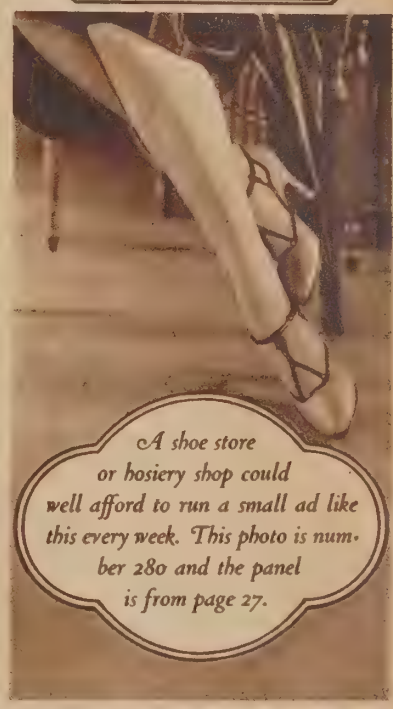
nted drive on roto this fall?

This shows how two photos, upper number 200 and lower number 203, may be combined with a panel from page 27 to conceal the joining line.



Lost An important piece of paper, a deed, a mortgage, or maybe valuable jewels are gone. Avoid the inconvenience and perhaps serious financial loss by having your own safety deposit box.

Rentals as low as $5.00 PER YEAR

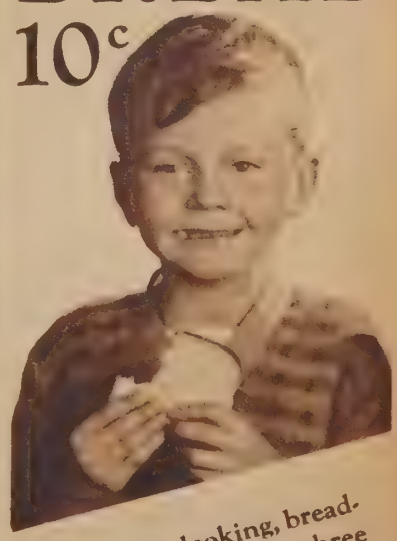
This is illustration number 381 and border from page 28 of our photo service catalog.



A shoe store or hosiery shop could well afford to run a small ad like this every week. This photo is number 280 and the panel is from page 27.

HOME interiors like number 28 are suitable for many classifications such as furniture, interior decorating, rugs, lamps, antiques, insurance, banks and real estate, "Save your money and own your own home," etc. This background is number 411 and the type panel from page 29.

BREAD
10c

This healthy looking, bread-eating boy is one of the three children in photo number 354 and silhouetted as shown.

COMFORT in Your Home

An architect, realtor, landscape gardener, house decorator, roofer or awning maker could use an illustration like this one.

HALL'S
Real Estate

Many of the photos can be cut in half. The above girl and also the one below are both from number 62.

ZILCH

Bobs WITH Chic

This very pleasing ad for a hair dresser or beauty shop is made up of illustration number 267, and five of the girls' heads and the border shown on page 27.

Telephone Worth 9015

So Good!

Remember that most all of the photos shown in our catalog will lend themselves to small reduction as shown here. All of these cookie pictures and this border are in the catalog.

PAUL'S COOKIES

TEMPTING

Frenchy little luncheons, afternoon teas and late suppers always delightfully served at

HENRICIKS

WRAPS

Original creations and last minute reproductions of New York and Paris models at prices lower than you would expect to pay.

JACQUES HOLCOMB
Hinsburg Avenue

FURS

Every fur called by its real name at

Billmont's

75 ENTER ATLANTA DAILY'S TOUR

Big Motorcade Sponsored by Journal Leaving September 5 On Trip to Quebec Over New Highway

A motorcade, sponsored by the Atlanta Journal, celebrating the completion of Appalachian Scenic Highway through the eastern states, will begin its northward way from Atlanta to Quebec on the morning of Sept. 5.

This tour marks the culmination and success of a three-year intensive campaign on the part of newspapers and highway officials of the states through which the road runs, for a great mountain thoroughfare stretching from the Gulf to Canada.

Between 60 and 75 cars will take part in the tour. Entrants from all parts of Georgia, Alabama, Florida and Louisiana, are assembling in Atlanta for the start, while other entrants will join the motorcade at points north. The Appalachian Scenic Highway, stretching from Atlanta to Quebec, Canada, presents 1,800 miles of either concrete or asphalt pavement, complete except for 75 miles of gravel roadbed. The two southern legs of the highway, one leading to New Orleans and the other to St. Petersburg, Florida, converge in Atlanta.

The building of the Appalachian Scenic Highway is the latest achievement of the press which has been preaching the value of automobile highways for a score or more of years. One of the leaders of this movement has been Major John S. Cohen, president and editor of the Atlanta Journal, which organized and sponsored this tour.

Twenty years ago when the automobile was first coming into general use, Mr. Cohen realized its future and the immense part good roads would play. The New York Herald and the Atlanta Journal joined forces early in the century not only for the purpose of stimulating an interest in good local roads, but for the purpose of creating a realization of the value of interstate highways. Together they planned the layout of the National Highway, reaching from Jacksonville to New York.

Three years ago Mr. Cohen began to boost the idea of an international as well as interstate highway, running through some of the most beautiful and historic country of America, both through the Atlanta Journal and personally. The highway commissions, state officials and the newspapers of every state through which it was to pass gave their co-operation and endorsement, and today the project stands practically complete.

Among those who have entered cars in the tour, besides Mr. Cohen are Col. J. M. Thomson, publisher of the New Orleans Item; Henry M. McIntosh, editor of the Albany (Ga.) Herald; F. W. Hoss, managing editor of the Johnson City (Tenn.) Chronicle; Herbert L. Grimm, publisher of the Gettysburg (Pa.) Times; George E. Graff, publisher of the Williamsport (Pa.) Sun and the Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin; Col. W. H. Anderson, publisher of the Troy (N. Y.) Times; Major Edward M. Brown, of New York, publisher of Nomad Travel Magazine.

Bobby Jones, of Atlanta, famous golfer and British open champion, has entered the tour and will have as his guests O. B. Keeler, of the Atlanta Journal staff and Mrs. Keeler. Another noted golfer who will be in the tour is Joe Kirkwood, Australian golf champion and world's trick shot player.

CORRECTION

EDITOR & PUBLISHER regrets the error in its issue of Aug. 20 which stated that F. J. Reilly, present business manager of the Brooklyn Standard Union, was at one time secretary to Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times. Mr. Reilly was manager of the magazine department and later assistant advertising manager of the Times.

H. C. DERWENT

Managing Director of British Newspaper Group Dies at 70

H. C. Derwent, 70, managing director of the Bradford & District Newspaper Company, Ltd., and well known British newspaper man died recently at Bradford, England.

He was one of those delegates who attended the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at Atlantic City in 1923 and who helped obtain the convention for England in 1924. He was largely instrumental in the formation of the Bradford Publicity Club, one of the first to be formed in England as an outcome of the London convention.

At the funeral a wreath was laid on the grave on behalf of the New York Advertising Club, among the members of which Mr. Derwent had made many friends, by Thomas McDougall, governing director of Thomas McDougall Ltd., of Kingsway, London, and one of the honorary members of the New York Advertising Club.

30 REPORTERS COVER WELL CAVE-IN STORY

Big Corps Rushed to Auburn, Mass., Where Man Was Imprisoned for More Than 30 Hours

Not in many years has a newspaper story carried such reader interest in Worcester, Mass., as that concerning Fred Leneau of Auburn, three miles from Worcester, who was caught in a cave-in at the bottom of a 40-foot well, last week. He was imprisoned there for more than 30 hours, before he was released by the combined efforts of employes of the Worcester sewer department, and volunteer workers.

Leneau was caught at 6:30 p. m., Thursday, August 25, and was not brought to the surface until 12:45 a. m., Saturday morning. He had been caught by timbers in such a way that he could talk to the workers, but was unable to move.

The Worcester Telegram sent two men to the scene early Thursday night, and other reporters from the paper joined them when it became apparent that the rescue was the work of hours. Boston newspapers were represented at daylight the next morning, and reporters from others parts of Massachusetts were soon on their heels. More than 30 reporters and almost as many cameramen were there by noon on Friday. This group was augumented by three moving picture cameramen.

The reporters were on their toes all Friday afternoon and evening, when it was apparent that Leneau's rescue might be effected momentarily. The Worcester Telegram had devoted several columns to the story in its Friday morning editions, and the Gazette and Post both played in up in the afternoon. Both evening papers printed extra editions in time for the Friday night theater crowds, when rescuers had been hindered by another cave-in.

Worcester people had become so interested in the plight of the prisoner that more than 6,000 calls of inquiry were received at the Telegram-Gazette switchboard Friday night between 6 p. m. and midnight. WTAG, the paper's broadcasting station, which was to have closed its program at 10:10 p. m., with the reading of the news bulletin, stayed on the air until after midnight.

The telephone company, on its own initiative, had installed a telephone at the scene of the accident, and reporters for the Telegram-Gazette held this instrument for eight hours, keeping direct communication with their office up to the time of the release of the man.

When Leneau was brought to the surface, Edward F. Breen, one of the Telegram reporters, was holding this telephone, and was giving a word picture of the proceedings to William L. Roach, county editor of the paper.

HELEN WILLS

Whose triumphs at Forest Hills and Wimbledon have made her

QUEEN OF THE TENNIS WORLD

HELEN WILLS

Is Writing a New Series of Weekly Articles on Women's Sports illustrated with

HER OWN DRAWINGS

WIRE FOR PARTICULARS

United Feature Syndicate

WORLD BLDG., NEW YORK

EDITORIAL

STAR-CHAMBER

THE American Bar Association, in convention assembled this week at Buffalo, heard from its committee on co-operation of the press and the bar the dictum that "there is no universal right in the public to attend upon or to be informed of all trials or other proceedings in the courts and the rights of the press are no other than those of the public at large."

The public and the press, the committee avers, may be excluded from any trial if the parties request a trial in private and the court accedes. The belief among journalists, which is characterized as a "misapprehension," that the public, through the press, has an inalienable right to attend court proceedings, is stated to have its basis in the abolition of star-chamber proceedings brought about in England 300 years ago "in the right and for the protection of litigants."

Doubtless the learned members of the committee know their law. Doubtless, also, as they assert, the constitutional guarantees of a free press have nothing at all to do with the right of the press to be present at civil or criminal trials. Doubtless, the presiding judge has the right under the curious twists and omissions of our legal structure to bar the public and the press from his presence whenever it seems to him that the public interest would be conserved by secret proceedings. If our memory serves us, there is also a statute upon the English law-books which prohibits the press from reporting the proceedings of the Houses of Parliament, and that the last attempt to enforce it, generations ago, brought forth such a storm of public protest that the law died then and there, though its corpse remains unburied.

We cannot predict that modern Americans would rise in mobs to storm a courtroom from which the judge had barred the press, but we can assert the deep conviction that our press and public would tolerate no such invasion of privileges which time and practice have given the status of rights. Experience has taught the Anglo-Saxon to regard as suspect actions of his elected and appointed servants which must be shielded from the light of publicity.

With much of the committee's report, EDITOR & PUBLISHER and most of the nation's editors will find themselves in agreement. Many of the common abuses are sins committed "two by two" and the committee freely confesses that lawyers and judges as well as newspaper men have sinned against public decency.

The remedy, however, lies far from the path of upholding judges in the exercise of shadowy powers to bar press and public from the public halls whenever His Honor's discretion indicates that course. We fear the remedy is more dangerous than the disease.

Blindly competitive business rivalry is the most destructive force in modern American journalism.

SUPREME TEST

DESCRIBING numerous press agent devices that have been employed in motion picture promotion, Carl Laemmle, the maestro of Universal Pictures, makes in the Aug. 27 issue of the Saturday Evening Post this astoundingly frank statement:

> I have yet to learn of a single instance wherein any of these free space seekers have ever contributed a single exploitation campaign that spelled success for their employers. * * * I do know that editors don't like to be victimized, and I put a stop to such methods of publicity, which, to my mind, make enemies instead of friends.

For which EDITOR & PUBLISHER extends the hand of congratulation to Mr. Laemmle. Editors don't like press agents. Advertising agencies protest that they tolerate 'em only because their clients demand as a premium news space exploitation. And now one of the former top-notch, A-1 clients rises in meeting to testify his reform. Press agents make no money for Mr. Laemmle, and they lose him his friends.

The last five words are the kernel of the nut, for the press agent cannot survive in an atmosphere of editorial hostility. Make that effective, against pressure from within as well as without the newspaper office, and you make the free space-grabber a member of the spectral Order of Fire Engine Horses, headed by Kaiser Wilhelm and including the Old-Fashioned Girl, Lo the Poor Indian, the Bartender, the Liveryman, the Man-Who-Tried-to-Beat-the-Train-to-the-Crossing and the Hero-who-thought-it-was-Pre-War-Likker. The P. A. deserves well at its hands.

To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven.—Ecclesiastes, I; 1.

A NEW DAY

SINKING all their minor differences of policy, the American press association delegates to the League conference at Geneva mapped new paths of progress for the press in every nation. The conference did not back-track from the high standards it set last year; it went forward, and its recommendations, even if not given immediately the force of law in the nations members of the League, will bear the League's stamp of recognition of the press as an indispensable force in the formation of public opinion and in the intercourse of commerce.

In this country the press has almost from the beginning had such public recognition, but it is only in recent years that the newspapers and news services of many other lands, with a few conspicuous exceptions, have emerged from the cloud of contempt which envelops the mercenary whose public actions are guided by gain rather than the public interest. There is no vanity in asserting that the American ideal of the press is the highest and most beneficial to humanity that present civilization possesses, and, even though American practice does not always measure tip to tip with the criterion, the extension of the latter to places where it has not been known can result only for the welfare of their journalism and the peoples it is its privilege to serve.

No need for a dull paper in these days of features—long, short, wide, narrow, wire, mail, informative and frequently amusing.

IRWIN KIRKWOOD

AS president and editor of the Kansas City Star, Irwin Kirkwood was eligible for an important place in American journalism, and by his conduct of that great journal's affairs during the 12 years that have elapsed since the death of his father-in-law, Col. W. R. Nelson, he had signally validated his right to that place. He was barely on the threshold of what promised to be a distinguished career when death called him this week.

His professional colleagues first learned to know and respect his ability ten years ago when he obtained the services of Col. Theodore Roosevelt as a contributing editor to the Star. The arrangement was consummated as the result of a meeting on a train of Kirkwood and Roosevelt, with the latter warning Kirkwood that many of his readers would be furious at the thought of Roosevelt being allowed a free voice in the columns of their favorite daily. It was audacious, and successful, and it was notice to all that the spirit of the Star had not died with Nelson.

Kirkwood's acumen was again demonstrated in his arrangement last year for the purchase of the Star from the estate of Col. Nelson by a group of its staff members associated with himself, and in the provision of adequate insurance upon his life to secure the purchase by the surviving stockholders of the interest held in his name. The entire industry is watching closely the conduct of a great newspaper owned entirely by its employes and it will be more than ever interested in the developments which the next few weeks will bring. Acquisition of the Kirkwood controlling interest in the Star by outside parties would be disastrous to one of the most promising experiments in the present journalistic era. Happily, that is not now in prospect.

Self-confidence, says Mr. Levine, is nine-tenths of flying. In which case we advise Mr. Levine to wear lead-soled shoes unless he hopes to spend the rest of his life aloft.

NET SALES

WHILE there is no direct parallel between American methods of certifying newspaper circulation figures under the Audit Bureau of Circulations and the British methods, under which individual newspapers employ chartered accountants, a question has just arisen in London which has its points of interest on this side of the water.

Discussing the sworn statements of net sales by several leading newspapers, a reader of the Newspaper World asked whether net paid figures included copies distributed free through news agents in connection with insurance canvassing—copies which were debited to the wholesaler and by him to the retailer, who is reimbursed by the newspaper; also whether free distribution copies charged to and used by department heads, who subsequently recovered their outlay as "publicity expenses," were included as certified net paid circulation.

Prompt reply was made by the accounting firms involved and by the managements of the Daily Mail, Daily Express, Daily Chronicle, and Daily News. All of the newspapers were unanimous and unequivocal in stating that their certified returns included only copies bought and paid for by the public, which statement was corroborated by the accountants. The stories received prominent display, with veiled hints in one newspaper that all of its competitors were not equally virtuous.

We must confess our admiration for this way of doing business, with the exception of the covert charge that competitors are dishonest. There has been an oversupply of such charges in American newspaper affairs; considerably less since the A. B. C. became the force that it is, but even a little is too much. Such methods may undermine a competitor's shady methods, but they also shake the public confidence in all newspapers. With definite proof that a competitor's business statements are dishonest, a newspaper's plain duty is to expose the cheat. Until such evidence is in hand, and legally bullet-proof, silence is the wise policy.

"Out of the mouths of dead men" do precedent-loving lawyers speak when they want to be catty, about the press, for instance.

RETAIL BALTIMORE

DIRECT attack upon the world's most pressing economic problem, the distribution of merchandise, undertaken by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in co-operation with the U. S. Department of Commerce, has produced one of the most entrancing set of statistics that has ever reached this desk. The distribution census of Baltimore, made by the Bureau of the Census along lines laid down by the bodies mentioned, is epochal, and the promise that similar information will be available shortly for 10 other typical cities is top-of-column news for all concerned in the sale of goods to the consumer.

Manufacturers of goods for general consumption work the national market with not much more information about it than the street peddler has of the families on his side of the road. Here and there newspaper and magazine publishers have compiled surveys of their local trading areas, but the lack of generally-accepted definitions and the competitive space-selling element that enters into many of these services limit their utility. Various formulae of purchasing power are available, some with genuine merit, some plausible, some downright asinine. EDITOR & PUBLISHER is now publishing weekly the Seubert formula, combining population and income statistics in varying ratios to indicate the consumer purchasing power for goods over a wide range of prices. This formula checks closely with retail sales statistics in the few areas where they can be had and it avoids the fallacy that one index number can be employed over the whole gamut of advertised goods.

With retail sales tabulated regularly for the key markets of the nation, there is hope that some of the hit-or-miss sales and advertising can be eliminated, with obvious benefits to every unit in the distribution chain. The Baltimore census idea, refined by the processes of experience, and extended to the limit of possibility, will be worth all it costs.

PERSONAL

W. T. DEWART, publisher of the New York Sun, accompanied by Mrs. Dewart and their three children, Mary, William, Jr., and Thomas, has opened his summer home, Keewaydin, at the Thousand Islands, and will remain there several weeks. The Dewarts returned from Europe last week.

Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, will return to New York from the International Press Conference in Geneva on the Leviathan, due in New York, Sept. 6.

Joseph T. Mackey, secretary and treasurer of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, sailed for Europe on the Olympic Aug. 26. While abroad Mr. Mackey will visit the companies affiliated with the makers of the linotype, in England, Germany and France. Harry L. Gage, assistant director of Linotype typography, returned from Europe on the Majestic Aug. 30. He arrived in company with George W. Jones of London, member for Great Britain of the International Typographic Council.

Col. Al Fairbrother, former publisher of the Greensboro (N. C.) Daily Record, and Mrs. Fairbrother, who recently toured Europe and are now on their way back to California, their present home, accompanied by Maj. Edny Ridge, present publisher of the Record, stopped in Charlotte last week, when Col. Fairbrother was entertained at the Manufacturers' Club at dinner. Among the newspaper men invited to the dinner were F. B. Morgan, of the Charlotte News; Felix Grisette, editorial writer, Charlotte Observer, Leary W. Adams and Joseph P. Watkins, of the Observer staff, the latter managing editor of the Record during the period that Col. Fairbrother had it.

Godfrey DeTonnancour, former editor of L'Independent, French daily newspaper published at Fall River, Mass., has been renamed postmaster of Fall River by Cong. Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Attleboro. DeTonnancour has already served one term.

Eugene L. Belisle, publisher of L'Opinion Publique, a French daily newspaper published in Worcester, Mass., has returned following a five weeks' trip to Canada.

Raymond D. Kennedy, president of the Hudson (N. Y.) Daily Record Company, has gone to Breckenridge, Co., for a two weeks' vacation.

William Hughes, former publisher of the Scranton (Pa.) Sunday Telegram, is now engaged in the hotel business in that city.

Harold C. Place, editor of the Toledo (O.) News Bee, is spending his vacation with his family at Waukezoo, Mich.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

GEORGE MULROY, for several years a member of the Business Survey of the Chicago Tribune, has been added to the sales force of the Tribune's national advertising staff.

Joseph Mahalico, former advertising manager for the Wilkes-Barre (Pa.) Telegram, is now on the staff of the Scranton (Pa.) Scrantonian.

William H. Pearson, formerly business manager of the Ogdensburg (N. Y.) News, which was suspended a year ago, has disposed of his job print business in that city.

First Lt. R. H. Dunlap, O.R.C., began a tour of active duty at Fort Screven, Ga., Aug. 29. Dunlap is advertising director of the Miami (Fla.) Daily News. After leaving Fort Screven he will spend a month's holiday in New York, Boston and on a motor tour of the New England states.

J. E. Bradley, manager of the Scranton (Pa.) Times, is enjoying a three weeks' vacation in Canada.

T. Ed Cavanagh, for 16 years connected with the advertising department of the Albany (N. Y.) Times-Union, has joined the staff of the Albany Knickerbocker Press and Evening News as service manager.

F. N. Insinger, of the Seattle Times staff, is resigning to join G. F. Steele & Co., New York newsprint brokers. He will continue to live in Seattle and act as vice-president and western manager of the newsprint company.

George A. Steger, auditor, and Paul H. Erler, composing room foreman of the Toledo (O.) Blade, have returned, with their families, from a fishing and camping trip in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

Martin Weir, advertising manager of the Scranton (Pa.) Republican, addressed the Kiwanis Club of that city on "Optimistic Advertising" at a recent meeting in the D. A. R. Chapter House.

Carl L. Estes, advertising manager of the Tyler (Tex.) Courier-Times, has gone to Rochester, Minn., for medical attention at the Mayo Bros. clinic. Mr. Estes was stricken while returning from the International Rotary convention at Ostend, Belgium.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

FRANK HEDGES will return to Tokio in September where he will resume his position as correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor. He left Tokio in September, 1926, to spend a year traveling around the world.

James A. Stuart, managing editor of the Indianapolis Star, is spending his vacation making a motor tour of historical points of southern Indiana and Kentucky.

Robert Ginter, Pittsburgh, formerly managing editor of the Gazette Times in that city, was recently named secretary of the new state air board formed in Pennsylvania.

Victor Keen, manager of the Kobe office of the Tokio Japan Advertiser, will return to his post in September after a vacation in the United States. Mr. Keen is also New York Herald Tribune correspondent in Japan.

James E. Cogan, editor of the American Legion column in the Chicago Daily News, will sail Sept. 7, with the "Old Gang" of Cook county, for the Paris convention of the Legion.

Charles J. Gotthart, Jr., of the Chicago Herald and Examiner local staff, has just returned from a three weeks' tour which included Montreal and Quebec, Niagara Falls, Detroit, Saginaw and Pittsburgh.

Frank L. Skeldon, of the staff, Toledo (O.) Blade, sailed this week to attend the American Legion convention in Paris. He will write a series of articles for his newspaper from Europe.

Frank D. Burke, employed for several years as a reporter on Albany and Troy (N. Y.) newspapers, was among the successful candidates for admission to the New York state bar in the recent examination. He now lives in Brooklyn.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

WILLIAM R. MINER, recently made city editor of the St. Louis Star, is one of the youngest men in the country to be in charge of a city desk on a metropolitan daily. He is 24 years old and entered newspaper work as a cub reporter on the Star five years ago.

WILLIAM R. MINER

He came to St. Louis seven years ago from his home in Sheridan, N. Y., in order to attend Washington University. After two years of college work, he was given a job on the staff of the Star and gradually rose to the rank of rewrite man, star reporter, assistant city editor and now city editor.

His service on the Star was broken for a time in 1924 when he went to London, England, and while there worked in the bureaus of the New York Herald Tribune and the Philadelphia Public Ledger. He is unmarried.

Kenneth Sullivan, managing editor of the Rockville (Conn.) Leader, has been spending his vacation at Lake Waccaboc, N. Y.

Jackson L. Sedwick, assistant city editor of the Dayton (O.) Herald, and Mrs. Sedwick are parents of a daughter, born Aug. 28.

Gene Morgan, editor of the "Hit or Miss" column in the Chicago Daily News, is to attend the Paris convention of the American Legion, sailing for France, Sept. 10.

Sidney Ward Phelps, who was graduated from Yale in June, will join the staff of the Tokio Japan Advertiser in September.

George Biehl, of Union City, N. J., Hudson County correspondent of the New York World and Newark Ledger, has joined the staff of the Union City (N. J.) Hudson Dispatch.

William C. Howells, who has charge of the Columbus, O., bureau of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, is spending his vacation at Williamstown, Mass.

Lester Jordan, who received his Master of Science in Journalism degree from the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern University last year, has resumed his position as sports editor of the Waxahachie (Tex.) Light and director of information at Trinity University, Waxahachie. He will also be head of the department of journalism at Trinity.

(Continued on page 32)

JAMES MONTGOMERY FLAGG

is doing a series of drawings, with snappy comment. It's called and will run once a week three columns wide.

I MEAN TO SAY

These sketches are among the most attractive of Mr. Flagg's works. There's a laugh in every one. And there's an original philosophy in the text that accompanies each drawing.

This series will be released soon.

To be sure of service from the first

WIRE NOW!

McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

V. V. McNITT, President — Times Bldg. New York — CHARLES V. McADAM, Vice-President

Leacock means Laughter

"Ace of Humorists"

Every Week
illustrated by Salg

If he's not running in your territory, wire us, our expense, for terms.

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr., General Manager. Earl J. Hadley, Associate

150 Nassau St., New York City

(Continued from page 31)

Clarence Shaw, copy reader on the Scranton (Pa.) Times, has obtained a two months' leave of absence and will attend the American Legion convention in France. Later he intends to visit England, Italy and Germany. Mr. Shaw will write special articles for the Times on the Legion's meeting.

Donald G. MacLean, who for the past nine years has been connected with the Toronto Globe, has joined the editorial staff of the Monetary Times of Canada.

Miles Tiernan, assistant city editor of the Indianapolis Star, and Mrs. Tiernan, are the parents of a son, Paul Miles.

A. J. O'Malley, city editor of the Scranton (Pa.) Times, is planning to attend the world series games to be played in New York City.

Max Shafer, of the Astoria (Ore.) Morning Astorian staff, has been appointed secretary of the Raymond Chamber of Commerce, Raymond, Wash.

James G. Monnett, real estate editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, has returned from a trip to Seattle, Wash., where he went to cover the annual meeting of the national organization of real estate dealers. He was elected a director of the National Real Estate Editors' Association which was formed at the Seattle meeting with about 25 members.

Murray Powers, managing editor of the Marion (O.) Star, and Mrs. Powers spent the week in New York City.

R. J. McDougall, news editor of the Vancouver (B. C.) Province, who has been on a three months' leave of absence in Penticton, B. C., on account of health, has resigned from the Province to resume the editorship of the Penticton Herald, of which he is the controlling owner.

MARRIED

VERNON R. FROST, editor of the Cheney (Wash.) Cheney Free Press, to Miss Bonny E. Peters, a graduate of Washington State College, Aug. 26.

Paul Grant of the auditing department, Chicago Tribune, to Catherine Flyke.

Evelyn Lull of the auditing department, Chicago Tribune, to Joseph Bradley.

Miss Eva Margaret Wilson, West Virginia newspaper woman, for the past year in charge of the Grafton office of the Clarksburg Telegram, to Wilbur C. Carnes of Welch. Mrs. Carnes will be associated with the Welch Daily News.

George S. McManus, a member of the advertising staff of the Boston Globe, to Miss Katherine A. Toomey, of Arlington, Mass., at St. Agnes' church, Arlington, Aug. 22.

Thomas Dixon of the circulation department, Chicago Tribune, to Marie Kelly.

Thomas Lippert of the circulation department, Chicago Tribune, to Margaret Fortman.

Max Miller, reporter on the San Diego (Cal.) Sun, to Miss Margaret Ripley, Aug. 24.

William Zielke of the Chicago Tribune pressroom to Ruth Blunck recently.

Charles Smutny of the Chicago Tribune library to Martha Logue.

Vernon K. Richards, for five years dramatic critic of the Toledo (O.) Blade, to Miss Anita Elise Kelly, Aug. 20. Mrs. Richards, under her professional name, Anita Loring, was with the Earl Carroll Vanities last season. She intends giving up theatrical work.

J. H. Turner, advertising manager of the St. Augustine (Fla.) Record, to Miss Edith Dean Cardy of Jacksonville at Riverside Avenue Christian Church in Jacksonville, Aug. 4.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

G. F. FINE has been sent from the New York office to the Mexico City bureau of the United Press to relieve A. W. Folger who is to be transferred to Lima as manager of the U. P. bureau there, after a vacation. Mr. Fine has worked on newspapers in Springfield, Mo., Richmond, Ind., and Bakersfield, Cal.

V. B. Snell has been appointed Associated Press correspondent at Tulsa, effective Oct. 23.

Dempster News Service, of Massillion, O., has been incorporated with $10,000 capital stock by Jessie Dempster, Robert Dempster and W. C. Holzworth.

ON THE MECHANICAL SIDE

A. R. HOPKINS, formerly editor and general manager of the Havana Telegram, and for four years mechanical superintendent of the Los Angeles Record, has arrived in Tokio to take charge of the mechanical departments of the Tokio Japan Advertiser. Rodney Payne accompanied Mr. Hopkins to become foreman of the composing room of the Japan Advertiser.

John Lahti of the press room staff, Worcester (Mass.) Telegram-Gazette, is on his way to Canada and Alaska on a big game hunt.

J. W. Williams, of the mechanical department, Salt Lake City Desert News, and Mrs. Williams are parents of twins, both girls.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

GREENFIELD (MASS.) RECORDER, Merchants Edition, Aug. 17.

Worcester (Mass.) Post, Schools and Colleges edition, Aug. 25.

Worcester (Mass.) Gazette and Telegram, 24-page Home Life editions, Aug. 23.

Sheridan (Wyo.) Post-Enterprise, Annual Sheridan County Fair edition, Aug. 21.

Miles City (Mont.) Daily Star, Eastern Montana Fair edition, Aug. 28.

Austin (Tex.) American-Statesman 84-page special edition celebrating the recent 56th anniversary of the Statesman.

Waynesboro (Pa.) Record Herald, New School Building edition of 12 pages, Friday, Aug. 26.

Owatonna (Minn.) Journal-Chronicle, 18-page State Fair edition, Aug. 26.

Chatham (Ont.) Daily News, Dollar Day edition, Aug. 22.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

STEUBEN NEWS, INC., of Hammondsport, N. Y., owners of a string of weekly newspapers in Steuben County, have discontinued the publishing of the Savona (N. Y.) Review. At the same time the Canisteo Chronicle was purchased from H. C. Hubbard. Lyle E. Petteys has been appointed by Steuben News to take over the managership of the Chronicle.

ASSOCIATIONS

MORE than 100 persons were in attendance at the recent clambake of the NEWSWRITER'S UNION in Scranton, Pa., held near Montdale, Pa. The usual program of athletic events was called off due to the weather. Martin Hayes is president of the union.

Annual outing of the SCRANTON NEWSWRITER'S UNION, No. 3, has been scheduled for Aug. 27 at Fleetville, Pa. Joseph M. Butler is chairman of the general committee.

BALTIMORE PRESS CLUB will provide working quarters for the out-of-town newspaper men who will cover the Atlantic Deeper Waterways convention in Baltimore Sept. 9 to 16, and the centenary celebration of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Sept. 24 to Oct. 8. Typewriters will be provided, also stationery, and there will be messenger service between the press club headquarters and telegraph offices. Edward H. Pfund, executive secretary of the club and chairman of the House Committee will be in charge.

SCHOOLS

POWELL KELLEY and Brooks G. Connally have been elected editor and business manager, respectively, of the Trinitonian, official newspaper of Trinity University, Waxahachie, Texas.

NEWS MEN SUE DETECTIVES

Hackney and Angle of Tampa Times Charge False Arrest

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

TAMPA, Fla., Aug. 30.—Two suits totalling $10,000—$5,000 each—against Harry R. Myers and Lawrence Ponder, former city detectives, were filed today by John Hackney, assistant city editor of the Tampa Times charging them with making an illegal and malicious arrest.

Hackney was arrested Saturday afternoon without a warrant and convicted in police court yesterday, along with B. Z. Angle, city editor of the Times. They were charged with conspiracy to violate a city ordinance pertaining to the prohibition laws and were sentenced to serve ten days in jail.

Hackney's petition contends that he was arrested without a warrant and that his prosecution in Municipal court was based upon malice on the part of the officer.

Similar action will not be taken by Angle, who voluntarily surrendered at police headquarters when notified by Hackney that Myers and Ponder were looking for him. Attorneys for Angle and Hackney today were preparing a motion for a new trial which will be formally entered within the next day or so.

Among other allegations of error, it is expected that the attorneys will contend that the newspaper men were arrested illegally—no warrants having been issued—and that the court permitted the admission of testimony that had no bearing on the case.

INCREASES REPRESENTATION

Milwaukee Sentinel Opens Chicago Office—Speer to New York

Stanley C. Speer, advertising director of the Milwaukee Sentinel has been promoted to New York representative of that newspaper and assumed his new position this week.

Mr. Speer joined the Sentinel three years ago after working on newspapers in Atlanta, Birmingham, Memphis and Little Rock. No successor will be appointed, publisher A. C. Backus announced. The administration of advertising will be under the direction of the general management.

Coincident with the promotion of Mr Speer, the Sentinel announced the opening of a Chicago office in room 502, 32(W. Madison, with William C. Henni in charge as Western manager and Wallace M. Hughes, assistant.

Mr. Henning, until recently was with the Weaver, Stewart Company as Western manager representing Wisconsin newspapers for three and one-half years Earlier he was associated with the Chilton-Class Journal Company and the Chicago Herald and Examiner.

For four years Mr. Hughes was associated with the Utica Observer and for six years was automobile advertising manager of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald. Mr. Hughes has recently been with the national advertising department of the Sentinel.

FLASHES

Only time a horse gets scared nowadays is when he meets another horse.—Wall Street Journal.

Usually the first thing that strikes a visitor to this country is a motorcar.—Worcester (Mass.) Post.

Dr. Edward Grant Conklin alleges that we have not found a more perfect woman than the Venus de Milo or a more perfect man than Apollo. Obviously Dr. Conklin never reads movie publicity.—South Bend Tribune.

Mr. Levine has hung up another record. He is the first man to kidnap his own airplane.—New York Sun.

When better enforcement laws are made, the Eighteenth Amendment will need them.—El Paso Times.

If they continue to increase the size of buses, locomotives will have to cross crossings cautiously.—Greenville Piedmont.

Golf standards are now three: bogey, par and Bobby.—New York Evening Post.

Propaganda. Any statement by our opponents—Florence Herald.

READY FOR FALL CAMPAIGNS

Somewhere in the United States there is a representative newspaper that needs circulation where thousands of new subscribers secured quick will mean a large increase in advertising revenue during the coming year. The original

Hollister Circulation Organization

under the personal direction of the writer with twenty years successful experience has conducted all the largest and most successful circulation campaigns on metropolitan newspapers during the past five years.

Now is the opportune time of the year for building circulation.

This organization consists of a large number of trained men now assembled and ready for quick action. Hollister Campaigns finance themselves. Carefully consider the possibilities of your field, then

Phone, Wire or Write

C. B. HOLLISTER

Temporary address SYLVANIA HOTEL, Philadelphia, Pa.

INTERTYPE IDEAL NEWS FACE

It has been said that all reading demands an effort. To produce a type for newspaper use which can be read almost without effort is a problem which has engaged the attention of Intertype designers for years.

Any Type Face is Not a Good News Face

You wouldn't use a free and open and slanting italic type face for all the news columns of your newspaper. The effect would be too active—too dazzling on the eyes.

To be easily read a news face must be STEADY. Action must be reduced to a minimum.

All type faces can be grouped into four or five groups.

The least active group of all is the Modern Roman group—the group that was used as the basis for designing the Intertype IDEAL News Face.

However, a news face must have more than steadiness. A Modern Roman face may not have sufficient difference of color between the light and heavy portions of each letter. This will produce a monotone which is almost as tiring on the eyes as too much action.

The Intertype IDEAL News Face is a perfectly steady and yet a perfectly balanced type face that has sufficient color around each letter as well as in each letter.

Small wonder is it that this type face has been chosen as the news face for such papers as The New York Times, The Cleveland Plain Dealer, The Dallas Times-Herald, and others.

Let your readers decide which type they like best in your newspaper. We have a plan for doing this that does not cost a cent to try. Get in touch with the nearest Intertype office.

Intertype matrices will run in OTHER slug-casting machines

Standardized

INTERTYPE

TRADE MARK

INTERTYPE CORPORATION

1440 Broadway, NEW YORK

Chicago 130 North Franklin Street; Memphis McCall Building; San Francisco 560 Howard Street; Los Angeles 1240 South Main Street; Boston 80 Federal Street; London; Berlin. . . Distributors in principal cities throughout the world

Intertype Century Expanded with Century Bold

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

Campbell-Ewald Service Department Ends Convention—Appointments Announced by Grace & Holliday—Savage Now With Fisher-Wilson Agency, St. Louis

Members of the Campbell-Ewald Travel Service Department, (Left to right) A. S. White, F. S. Radspinner; R. J. Thomas; P. J. Malarney; O. L. Skinner; M. L. Kiebler; V. H. Bergmann; H. M. Stuart; R. J. Manney; R. W. Johnson; W. R. Ewald, director; F. H. Weissinger; R. F. Glynn; D. F. Mason; H. L. Batterson; W. H. Birchfield; R. B. Owens, Jr; D. W. Harway. (Left Rear) G. B. Castle, assistant director (right rear) C. P. Shaw, Pacific Coast supervisor.

OUTWARD bound to every corner of the United States are the 19 representatives of the Travel Service Department of the Campbell-Ewald company after the conclusion of the eleven-day second annual convention at the home offices in Detroit.

This unique department was organized just two years ago by H. T. Ewald, president of the company, with six traveling representatives, which has been augmented since that time to the present force of 19, together with four other persons in the home office. The department is headed by W. R. Ewald.

The convention was addressed by R. H. Grant, vice-president in charge of sales of the Chevrolet Motor Company; B. G. Koother, director of sales section, General Motors Corporation and H. G. Weaver, assistant to the director of sales section; advertising and assistant advertising managers of Buick, Crevrolet, Oakland and Oldsmobile Motor Car companies; and department heads, contact men and officials of the Campbell-Ewald company. The Olds, Chevrolet, Oakland and Buick factories were visited in the course of the convention.

Each representative is provided with a motor car and travels through a definite zone continuously, with headquarters in the Campbell-Ewald branches or in the Chevrolet zone offices. Travel is entirely and exclusively by automobile, the men never entering a train from one end of the year to another.

It was the original intention of Mr. Ewald, in creating the department, to provide close contact with the newspapers and check up on outdoor advertising for the benefit of the clients of this agency. Regular schedules were provided in each zone so that each dealer outlet of the company's clients would be visited several times a year.

From the dealers these traveling representatives obtain the public's reaction to the various products as well as the dealers' opinions on the advertising being conducted for the various clients. But this was only the beginning of the work.

The secondary function of the traveling representatives—to make investigations for the Research Department of the home office—has become highly important. Telegrams sent out from the home offices will, within the same day, send these men immediately to obtain information desired. A rather elaborate survey can thus be made within three or four days.

A motor car was presented to the traveler who had done the best work during the last year. Two men were chosen, Robert Owens and Cliff Shaw, but in the draw-off, Mr. Owens won the car.

Three additions to the staff of Grace & Holliday, New York advertising counsel, were announced this week by Edward R. Grace.

F. W. Schnirring, formerly advertising manager of the Sonora Phonograph Company, has joined the staff of the New York office; T. L. Munger, a former newspaper man, has been named chief of publicity; and S. E. Purcell has been made manager of the Miami office.

The Miami office is now handling the advertising of the City of Coral Gables.

W. C. Savage of Chicago recently joined the staff of the Fisher-Wilson Advertising Agency of St. Louis as account manager. Before going to St. Louis he was associated for six and a half years with the Chicago Tribune in the national advertising and business research departments.

Emil Brisacher and Staff, advertising agency, will move its San Francisco offices on Sept. 5, to the Crocker building. The new quarters will contain a model kitchen and testing laboratory under the direction of a domestic science expert.

The Quinlan Advertising Company has moved into new and enlarged quarters in the Pure Oil Building, 35 East Wacker Drive, Chicago.

CITY USING 22 NEWSPAPERS

Davenport, Ia., Telling Its Selling Story in Paid Space

The Davenport (Ia.) Chamber of Commerce is launching a newspaper campaign to "sell" the city more thoroughly to its trading radius and this week the first of a series of advertisements appeared in 22 newspapers in 20 adjacent Iowa and Illinois towns. The series will run 20 weeks.

General copy, emphasizing parks, golf courses, the radio station, parking facilities, theaters, municipal art gallery, and other advantages of the city, is used. The schedules are two columns, six inches. Milton Hult is chairman of the advertising committee.

BUILDING NEWSPAPER CIRCULATION

Dailies Using Dempsey-Tunney Fight for Circulation Contests—Toledo News-Bee Promoting Golf and Association Baseball—Price Increases Predicted

TWO different methods of using the Dempsey-Tunney fight as the background of a circulation or good will building contest are being followed by the New York Evening Telegram and the Chicago Evening American.

The Evening Telegram is offering five $40 tickets to the champion boxing fans of the greater city who can answer a list of 20 questions prepared by the sports department of the paper and write a comment on the question "Is boxing a worthwhile sport?" To keep interest moving from day to day the 20 questions were published this week in series of five.

In Chicago the Evening American is conducting a "Biff and Bamm" contest, awarding a $40 ringside ticket every day but Sunday. The tickets are given for the cleverest answers in rhyme to a question asked either by Biff or Bamm in a daily cartoon.

Declaring that there have been several successful increases in newspaper charges from two to three cents a copy during the past 18 months, Jacob Omansky, of Jacob Omansky & Co., circulation consultants of Cleveland, this week predicted that the coming year would see more similar boosts "than at any time since the war."

"With few exceptions the properties that show the largest earnings consistently are those that operate their circulation departments along sound economic lines," Mr. Omansky said. "Two cent papers with wholesale rates of $1 or $1.25 a 100 manage to keep their circulation expenses to 50 per cent of their circulation receipts. Three cent papers, with wholesale rates of $2 a 100 keep their expenses to about 33 per cent of their receipts.

"To circulation expenses charge all costs, including promotion, from the time the papers leave the press room. It is a fact that these percentages apply to all papers from 10,000 circulation up to those with six figures. To maintain such a healthy condition there is no room in a promotion budget for contests and other costly methods of adding new readers which were perhaps justifiable in the days when advertising rates could be raised easily and when linage was kiting upwards, but surely not now.

"There are other important angles in the relation between circulation receipts and expenses. A 3 cent paper, for instance, with a $2 a 100 wholesale rate, publishing an average of about 24 pages a day, can take in enough from circulation to pay the departmental cost, plus the white paper. Small papers that average only 16 pages a day with the same rates and circulations of more than 10,000 can take in enough to pay for the press and stereotyping costs as well. Thus a 3 cent paper operating in the circulation department at 50 or 60 cents per 100 and collecting $2 per 100 cannot become circulation poor, and is obviously in a stronger position and less dependent upon advertising linage than a two cent paper can be."

James L. Farley, for 20 years circulation manager of the old Philadelphia North American and Mrs. Farley will leave on the S. S. Antonia from New York, Sept. 8 on a European tour. They will be gone eight weeks and will visit France, Austria, Germany, England and Ireland. Mr. Farley is now in the real estate business in Philadelphia.

The Brooklyn Daily Times was host to more than 1,400 carrier boys last Thursday, Aug. 25, when the daily's fourth annual track and field championship meet was held at a local athletic field. E. S. Dobson, circulation manager, was in charge. The large number of newsboys were paraded through the heart of Brooklyn in 26 motor busses.

The Toledo (O.) News Bee is capitalizing on the interest in sports events in its territory with two contests that are attracting interest.

The newspaper is promoting and offering cups for the junior golf tournament of the Toledo golf district. It is for girls and boys under 20 and has a large entry list.

The other contest is selecting an all-American association baseball team. At the time it was started the Toledo club was leading the association and the prize offered to the winner was a trip to the "little world series," in which Toledo will take part if it wins the pennant. In case the local team is nosed out the winner will be sent to the fall classic between National and American league leaders.

The Cleveland Press is conducting a harmonica contest in connection with the Cleveland Board of Education. The champion will receive $100 and the champion boy quartette will receive a contract for a week's engagement at Loew's State Theatre.

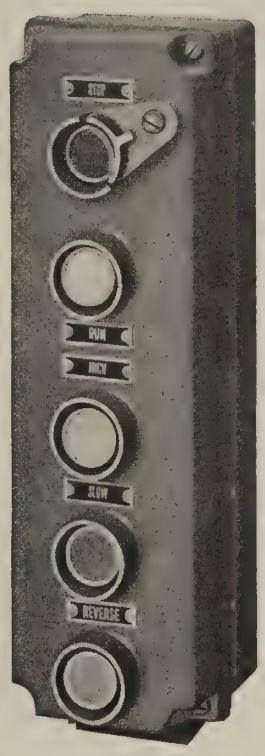
H. B. Appleby, partner of Gregory & Appleby, circulation builders, has been presented a gold watch in honor of his firm's third anniversary. Presentation was made in the office of the Norristown (Pa.) Register. The company sells a complete accident policy to newspapers. Recent papers using the service include the Paterson (N. J.) Press-Guardian and the Camden (N. J.) Morning Post.

FOR PROMPT SERVICE

TYPE

BORDERS ∞ ORNAMENTS ∞ BRASS RULE

Printers' Supplies



KELLY PRESSES • KLYMAX FEEDERS • PAPER CUTTERS
HAMILTON WOOD AND STEEL EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING OUR AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT

Carried in stock for prompt shipment at the following Selling Houses of the

AMERICAN TYPE FOUNDERS COMPANY

Boston	Baltimore	Pittsburgh	Cincinnati	Kansas City	San Francisco
New York	Richmond	Cleveland	St. Louis	Des Moines	Portland
Philadelphia	Atlanta	Detroit	Milwaukee	Denver	Spokane
	Buffalo	Chicago	Minneapolis	Los Angeles

CLINE UNIVERSAL CONTROL SYSTEM

The CLINE SYSTEM gives automatic push-button control of each function.

Independently operated from any location.

There are no levers to push or buttons to turn.

NOTE: All the best known machines at the Graphic Arts Exposition are operated by CLINE SYSTEM

CLINE SYSTEM — CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO. CHICAGO — QUALITY SERVICE SAFETY — CLINE WESTINGHOUSE

CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO.

NEW YORK CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO

WOMEN IN ADVERTISING AND JOURNALISM

Girl, 27, Inherited Weekly Paper—Miss Rose Grace Covering Fashion News Abroad for Department Store—In Charge of Special Section—Miss Parsons Back East

THE case of Miss Eva Kildow of Roseville, near New Lexington, O., is not an exact duplication of the frazzled Cinderella tale. But it is near enough to be entertaining, even though it does not contain an Edward West Browning, a "Peaches," or a Honking Gander in its list of characters.

About a year ago, Frank R. Johnson, editor and owner of the Roseville Leader, died suddenly. Miss Kildow then had only been working for the Leader for several weeks. On the death of its publisher, however, she carried on. When Mr. Johnson's will was read a little later, Miss Kildow found she had inherited the paper.

"People said I never could make a go of it," Miss Kildow said the other day. "But I'm still here."

You know how things are on weeklies. Sometimes Miss Kildow works 18 hours a day. It is quite a business, being editor, owner, printer, reporter and advertising manager of the Roseville Leader. In spare moments, Miss Kildow does job printing. The only time she calls in any help is on press day, when two boys aid her in getting the Leader ready for the mails. Hard work, yes!

"But what's the difference," said Miss Kildow, "when you are working for yourself."

Miss Rose Pearl Grace, assistant advertising manager of the Denholm & McKay department store of Worcester, Mass., sailing this week for a six weeks' tour of Europe, will record her trip in a series of fashion letters to be used in the store's newspaper advertisements. Miss Grace's stunt will thoroughly "cover" the style centers of Europe, especially Paris, for the store's customers and newspaper readers.

Miss Helen Eason, of Enid, Okla., has been contributing a series of travel letters to the Enid Morning News on topics of interest in her European trip this summer.

A solid marble restaurant was recently opened in Monroe, La. To celebrate the occupancy the Monroe News-Star issued a special section. The entire section was written and sold by Irene Sims Shields of the newspaper's advertising department.

Miss Anna Nicholas, literary editor of the Indianapolis Star, is spending the summer in Europe.

Louella Parsons, moving picture writer of the New York American and other Hearst newspapers, returned to New York this week from the Pacific Coast. She will spend two weeks in the city and then go to Chicago, where she will cover the Dempsey-Tunney fight.

Lulu King of the educational display advertising department of the Chicago Tribune resigned recently after 17 years of service. She purchased a book store in Winnetka.

Mazie Clemens, reporter on the New York World staff, has returned from a month's vacation.

Miss Marjorie Edwards, daughter of Editor Henry Edwards of the Tyler Journal and Troup (Tex.) Banner, has joined the staff of the Gatesville (Tex.) Messenger.

WITH THE GENERAL ADVERTISERS

Wheatsworth, Inc., New Name of F. H. Bennett Biscuit Company—"Old Gold" Takes to Air Advertising—Philadelphia Shirt Manufacturers in Merger

DIRECTORS of the F. H. Bennett Biscuit Company, makers of Wheatsworth biscuits, flour and other products, have decided to capitalize on the goodwill attached to the name Wheatworth by changing the company's name to Wheatsworth, Inc. The company was formed in 1907 to market the whole wheat products devised by Dr. Thomas L. Bennett.

Newspapers in 10 big cities are being used in a campaign which will start shortly promoting Old English Wax. The account is handled by the John F. Murray Advertising Agency, New York.

P. Lorillard Company, which used newspapers to introduce "Old Gold" cigarettes to the smoking public, this week signed a contract with the National Broadcasting Company to broadcast Broadway shows direct from the stage, with incidental plugging for Old Gold. Lennon & Mitchell, the advertising agency that directs this account, informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER that the broadcasting program was supplenmental to the newspaper campaign which is being continued on a large scale.

Johns-Manville, Inc., have appointed a new advertising agent, W. L. Brann, Inc., of 270 Madison avenue, New York.

The Shredded Wheat Company of Niagara Falls, N. Y., has just conducted a prize essay contest among the school children of America with the twenty winners, accompanied by their teachers, receiving free trips to Niagara Falls, the "Home of Shredded Wheat." Essays were contributed by some 200,000 school children throughout America.

The Clicquot Club Ginger Ale Company at Millis, Mass., recently shipped an entire trainload of Clicquot Club ginger ale from Millis to the west. The special train of 40 freight cars went through to Chicago, advertising a well-known New England product, and was then split up for shipment to various western and midwestern cities. The run was made in 72 hours. The shipment was the first such movement of a New England trademarked product and was made in special refrigerator cars. It also marked the 40th anniversary of the concern.

The L. Needles-Brooker Company, of Philadelphia, manufacturers of Fruit of the Loom Shirts, has been merged with the Samuel Sternberger Company, of Philadelphia, manufacturers of Eclipse Shirts, under the firm name of Eclipse-Needles Company. A consumer and trade campaign is being prepared by the United Advertising Agency, Inc., of New York, which has been appointed to handle the account.

The Pacific Coast Borax Company announces the appointment of E. R. Haddox as sales manager for their packaged goods line. For several years Mr. Haddox has been in charge of packaged goods sales for the Borax Company's Pacific Coast territory. Under his new assignment he will assume direction of both sales and advertising for the entire United States market.

FAMILY REUNION

Albert N. Burkholder the veteran managing editor of the Reading (Pa.) Eagle was the principal speaker at a reunion of the Burkholder family which was held at Hershey Park, near Harrisburg, Pa., recently.

ADDENDA TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S FOURTH ANNUAL SYNDICATE DIRECTORY

FOLLOWING are features and syndicates which, through error, were not included in EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S fourth annual directory of syndicate features published last week:

GENERAL FEATURES

Name	Author	Syndicate
Attic Salt Shaker	W. Orton Tewson	United Feature Syndicate
Fun Shop (d)	M. F. Judell	McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Information Service	Staff	Newspaper Information Service
Jewish Humor	Leo M. Glassman	Jewish Telegraphic Agency
New York Letter	William Z. Spiegelman	Jewish Telegraphic Agency

SPORTS

Sport Notes	George Joel	Jewish Telegraphic Agency

CORRECTED ADDRESSES

Audio Service	326 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.
Newspaper Information Service	1322 New York Avenue, N. W., Washington D. C.
Akron Newspaper Service	122 Akron St., Rochester, N. Y.
Army and Navy Service	National Press Club, Washington, D. C.
Jewish Telegraphic Agency	611 Broadway, New York
Wide World Photos, Inc.	New York Times, New York.

Ionic No. 5

The blackface type is Ionic No. 5; the outline is Roman No. 2

Ionic No. 5 Is More Readable Because It Is Larger

MANY factors contribute to the legibility of Ionic No. 5; the increased weight, the even color, the stronger serifs, the roundness of the letters, the better distribution of the white space around the letters, the fact that it will not break down in stereotyping, but more important than any of these is the fact that it is actually larger, point size for point size, than any other newspaper face.

Just how much larger is graphically shown in the illustration at the top in which 7 point Ionic is superimposed on 7 point No. 2.

And this great gain in size and legibility is achieved without loss in word count. If Ionic were a type of ordinary design, this increase in size would not be of any particular value because the space that is saved would have to be put between the lines. But Ionic is different. It doesn't need much white either between letters or between lines. The letters are closely fitted together and still hold their contour. The lines can be half a point to a full point closer together and still be easily followed as is shown in the illustration at the left. Ionic No. 5 is made in four sizes, 5½, 6½, 6¾ and 7 point, in combination with Bold Face No. 2 or Italic and Small Caps.

Why Ionic No. 5 Requires Less Leading Than Ordinary Types

In ordinary types the vertical strokes are emphasized. These pronounced vertical strokes have a tendency to interrupt the normal horizontal motion of the eye. It is therefore necessary to put more white space between the lines so that the eye can follow them back and forth across the column.

Ionic is more rounded, the strokes are of even weight, and the letters are more closely tied together so that each line is a continuous band of color across the page. It is easier for the eye to follow the lines and consequently they can be put a little closer together without loss of legibility.

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

Linotyped in the Garamond Family

Why You should use Gas the Perfect Fuel

Just a brief outline that will give you abundant food for thought—

COMPLETE and INSTANT CONTROL—the results of which are:

Economy in production
Elimination of spoilage
Maintenance of uniform quality in product
Greater average speed in manufacturing operations
Increased output

NO FUEL STORAGE in your plant — which means:

Economy in factory space
No capital tied up in fuel
You pay for gas AFTER using, not before
A constant fuel supply always instantly available

ELIMINATION OF SMOKE and ash removal —resulting in:

Enhanced value of real estate and buildings
Savings in cost of cleaning, painting and redecorating
Better working conditions
Increased man-power efficiency

Gas is saving money for others in your line of industry. It will do the same for you. For further information, consult your local gas company, or write to

American Gas Association
420 Lexington Avenue, New York City

We have an interesting booklet which will be sent on request.

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

Jack Sharkey Signs Contract with Famous Features Syndicate—Jim Jeffries with United Feature—Special Simmonds Cable Service Starts—Fables in Slang in Strip Form

JACK SHARKEY has signed a contract with Famous Features Syndicate, and stories under his by-line will be offered to newspapers covering the Dempsey-Tunney fight. It has not yet been decided who will be the fighter's literary assistant.

Special cable service on the Frank Simmonds stories from Geneva was started this week by the McClure Syndicate. After the Geneva conference, Mr. Simmonds will visit the important European capitals, spending a total of 14 weeks on the Continent.

The "Fables in Slang" of George Ade have been prepared in comic strip form and are being offered to newspapers by the Bell Syndicate for publication beginning Oct. 3. Art Helfant, formerly of the New York Daily Mirror, is the artist.

W. J. Voss, associate editor of the Ullman Feature Service, Washington, D. C., has left on a business trip which will take him to southern Texas.

"Memoirs of Jackie Coogan," a new feature, is being offered by Famous Features Syndicate.

Irwin Barbour, general manager of the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, has reached the Pacific Coast on a combined business and pleasure automobile trip. He expects to return to New York, Oct. 5. Fanny Marshall, a member of the same syndicate's staff, is spending her vacation in Maine.

Frederic William Wile, who runs a syndicate under his own name in Washington, D. C., has been commissioned to edit "A Century of Industrial Progress," a centenary jubilee volume to be issued by the American Institute of the City of New. York, early in 1928. Secretary Hoover will write the introductory chapter and the George H. Doran Company will publish the book.

John N. Wheeler, president of the Bell Syndicate, has recovered from a recent illness, and this week was able to come to his office in New York from his home Ardsley-on-Hudson, New York.

Jim Jeffries, former world's heavyweight champion, will report the Dempsey-Tunney fight and part of the preliminary training for the United Feature Syndicate. He will be assisted by a well known sporting writer.

Howard Wheeler, president of the United Feature Syndicate, has returned from a month spent at Grand Isle, Vt., the summer home of Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, who is contemplating writing his memoirs.

Stephen F. Tillman has bought out the interest of Vivian Lee Tillman in the Army and Navy News Service, Washington, D. C.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

"Hunting a Home" Column New Trick in Washington—"Mr. Speed" Knocks on Doors of Gloversville Homes—Boston Advertiser Quits Classified

SEEING is believing, and belief is 99 per cent of a sale. But to make people go out to see a house for sale is not always as easy as it sounds. The Washington Daily News is now furnishing readers of its house for sale classification with far-seeing eyes every Saturday. The "eyes" belong to Marjorie Binford, and she writes down what she sees in an advertising column in the Daily News called "Hunting a Home."

Miss Binford visits homes to be advertised and, in sketch and type, tells readers of the many attractive and different features she observes. The feature is said to have attracted considerable attention and promises to be the means of obtaining more and better real-estate advertising. The advertising is sold by the space instead of by the agate line.

The Gloversville (N. Y.) Leader-Republican classified department is stirring up interest during the dull season which comes at the fag end of vacation time by having a "Mr. Speed" call at 25 or 30 homes every day and give $5 gold pieces to persons who answer the door with the most recent issue of the newspaper in their hands and who properly repeat the daily slogan printed therein. The slogan is a "puff" for the paper, such as: "Excuse me, Mr. Speed, you are from the Leader-Republican, a paper that should be read in ninety-nine of every one hundred homes in the Glove Cities, and which has a splendid classified ad page." The slogan must be repeated accurately. Consolation prizes consist of theatre tickets.

The Boston (Mass.) Daily Advertiser has discontinued its classified advertisement columns. In the future all classified ads will be run in the Boston American, the evening Hearst newspaper published by the same concern.

Ray Bright is the new classified advertising manager of the Houston (Tex.) Press. He worked previously on the Houston Post and Houston Chronicle and was classified advertising manager of the Chattanooga Times in 1925.

REPRESENTING THE NEWSPAPERS

TWO newspapers this week announced the appointment of Scherer, Inc., as national advertising representatives. They were the Rochester (Ind.) News-Sentinel and the Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) News. Through the appointment the News-Sentinel becomes a member of the Indiana Leagoe of Home Dailies and the News a member of the Michigan League of Home Dailies. The News has not been represented heretofore in the national field.

Thomas F. Clark Co., Inc. has been appointed the national advertising representative of the Griffin (Ga.) Daily News.

George W. Breadner, formerly of the Canadian Salt Company, has joined the New York office of the William J. Morton Company, newspaper representatives, succeeding George N. Findlater, Jr., transferred to the Chicago office.

HANWAY SELLS IN LAREDO

Control of the Laredo (Tex.) Daily Times has been sold by J. E. Hanway, publisher and editor of Casper, Wyo., to Edmund P. Walker & Co., of Chicago and W. P. Allen of Laredo, who will remain as general manager of the Times.

ANTI-GAMBLING CRUSADE

The Chicago Daily News is conducting a crusade against gambling. One of the exposures made this week was a certain Al "Scarface" Capone and his gang have built up a gambling syndicate profiting at a rate of $1,000,000 a month, with one-fourth of the profit going to the police and municipal authorities for "protection."

COMPANY TO MARKET TELEGRAVURE FORMED

Codograph Service Corporation Chartered in Delaware for Exploitation of Ford's Recent Invention

Arthur S. Ford, inventor of telegravure, the process of "setting" pictures from code on typesetting machines, has placed his invention in the hands of a New York syndicate for exploitation.

Harry J. Taylor, spokesman for the syndicate, informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week that a company is being formed and incorporated in Deleware to be known as the Codograph Service Corporation, with offices at 342 Madison Ave., New York, the Canadian Pacific Building. Officers of the company have not yet been elected.

Mr. Ford described his financial backing as "substantial," but declined to reveal the amount, or the names of the men, six in number, who are underwriting the venture.

"It is premature to make any announcement now," Mr. Taylor said. "Within 60 days we hope to be able to speak definitely.

"All we can say now is that the company is being formed to merchandise Mr. Ford's invention satisfactorily. We do not intend to make the invention a stock-selling scheme."

As first made public last April in EDITOR & PUBLISHER, Mr. Ford's invention is described by its creator as "a system of making printing plates at a distance. This is accomplished by breaking any desired picture up into 'atoms,' which are coded according to their special formation and given an alphabetic letter. The code made up of these letters is transmitted by cable, telephone, letter or by any other means, and the original picture is re-created by assembling duplicates of these characters on a typewriter, typesetting machine, or any other convenient way."

At Mr. Taylor's office samples were shown of half-tones made from photographs Mr. Ford has produced using a specially constructed typewriter, which has keys of the code needed for constructing pictures.

It is understood that the Codograph Service Corporation will organize methods of furnishing newspapers with pictures by code and arrange to lease them the right to use the necessary linotype or monotype fonts for setting the pictures, when they are perfected.

TOKIO REPORTERS USE CARRIER PIGEONS

Inning-by-Inning Baseball Flashed by Birds, Says I. N. S. Tokio Correspondent Here on Vacation For Few Weeks

When the Japanese Babe Ruth knocks a home run the ball is followed over the fence by a flock of carrier pigeons, speeding the news to Tokio's newspaper offices and downtown scoreboards.

LUTHER A. HUSTON

This quaint method is the only means of communication between the large stadium and the newspaper offices, according to Luther A. Huston, International News Service correspondent in Tokio, who is in New York for a few weeks on vacation.

Although the Japanese are well acquainted with the telephone and telegraph, no wires have ever been installed at the stadium. The inning by inning scores are sent by carrier pigeon and after the game the Japanese news writers come to the office to write their stories.

This practice was cited by Mr. Huston to illustrate the difficulties of gathering news in Japan, where the elaborate wire and phone facilities used by American newspapers are unknown. It was only with great difficulty that the foreign correspondents in Tokio persuaded the Ministry of Communications to install a telephone line from Tokio to the little village of Hayama, where the Japanese Emporer died recently.

Japanese news agencies do not use the leased wire system, but telephone their news reports to their offices in various cities. The report is transcribed and delivered to local newspapers by boys.

"A cheaper press rate in the Pacific, enabling correspondents to transmit a more complete report is the biggest problem at the present time," Huston said. "The present cable rate is 27 cents a word, and radio 18 cents a word. Radio, I have found, is generally just as reliable as cable."

All wire services are a government monopoly in Japan, he said, which tends to slow up the handling of news. All operators and officials are Japanese. Every cable filed must go through the Ministry of Communications.

Mr. Huston has been in Tokio for I. N. S. for the past three years. He arrived in this country Aug. 1 on vacation, spending three weeks at his home in Tacoma, Wash. He arrived in New York this week to sit in on the I. N. S. cable desk for a short time before returning to the coast. He sails for Tokio from Seattle Sept. 27.

"The Largest Business of Its Kind in America"

HOTALING'S NEWS AGENCY

NEW YORK

Distributors of Out-of-Town Newspapers

RETAIL BRANCHES

NEWS-STANDS—43rd & Broadway North End of The Times Bldg.

WOOLWORTH BUILDING Barclay St. Entrance

FOREIGN NEWS DEPOT
The TIMES BUILDING

FROM "NEWSPAPER HEADQUARTERS," 308 West 40th STREET.
We make five deliveries daily to the principal hotel news-stands.
(Call Longacre 4649)

Any daily, Sunday or weekly newspaper in the world secured. Low prices quoted on quantity and standing orders.
Back numbers of New York and out-of-town newspapers carried in stock.

FOOD FACTS vs Food Fakers

A FEW years ago, the American newspapers practically eliminated the quack doctor and patent medicine faker.

A GOOD many of these are now staging a come-back under the guise of beauty experts, health experts, reducing experts and diet specialists.

THEY are capitalizing on the American public's desire for health, their interest in eating and their inclination to pursue a hobby. They reach the public through syndicated newspaper articles or public meetings, publicity for which is secured through the newspapers.

THEIR doctrines run from cure for cancer and corns to protection against old age and fat. Their formula is usually a trick diet and the purchase of a book. Most of these faddists unfortunately decry bread, this being their ballyhoo principally because bread has been man's universal food through the ages.

AMPLE authoritative evidence can be furnished that bread has its place in the diet from childhood to old age, through sickness and in health.

WE subscribe to the modern tendency to eat less, and more intelligently. We don't want our women "fair, fat and forty." We want them fair always, fat never, and forty only to their families. We don't want our men carrying a pouch and sitting on the porch—we'd rather have them cutting a figure on the fairway. But we don't want to have these things by jeopardizing the health of the nation. If you are too fat, eat less. If you are sick, see a doctor. Don't go after form relief by a food fad.

MANY well informed doctors and groups are disseminating valuable health information through the newspapers, and this is adding to the health and happiness of the people.

THE object of this advertisement is to ask American newspaper publishers to investigate the authenticity, authority and reputation of their medical syndicate writers, just as they verify their news items and vouch for their advertisements.

BUY for your reader the same medical advice that you buy for your family. Don't misconstrue reader interest in temporary circulation builders as a stamp of approval. That which attracts the Public may not be in the interest of the People.

"The Department of Agriculture issued a public warning: In view of the wide spread of literature and advice of so-called "diet experts" it seems desirable to warn people against adopting the dietary recommendations of those without real scientific standing in the community. Some of the advocates of freak diets are sincere, but are, themselves, deluded. Others are fakers . . . If the deductions of many food faddists, accepted as facts, were really operative, it would be difficult to explain how the human race has survived."

From "Time," August 15, 1927

AMERICAN BAKERS ASSOCIATION

1135 Fullerton Avenue, Chicago, Illinois

"ME TOO" SOLICITATION A WASTE OF TIME

Space Buyer Gives Tips to Small City Papers on How to Get and Hold National Accounts In Coast Speech

"Inside advice" to small city newspapers on how to obtain more national advertising was given by W. F. Hannaford, space buyer for the Dan B. Moner Company, Los Angeles, in a speech before the annual meeting of the Southern California Newspaper Publishers' Association.

Some of Mr. Hannaford's ideas, quoted from the Southern California Editor, organ of the association, follow:

"Agency people and advertisers need to know about your paper, and a good rate card is always necessary in their files. Supplementary information, too, in convenient form for filing in a letter size folder about once in every quarter will be very valuable to space buyers, and will be kept for reference. If you could watch me wade through my mail a few times and see how large a percentage of the matter that comes in goes straight to the waste paper basket, beacuse of its trick folds or bulk, or some other inconvenience, you would quickly realize the value of the simple mailing piece that will file easily and can be referred to quickly.

"Circulation figures are very important to the space buyer, and don't be afraid to give the true figure. There is an emphatic reaction developing against this idea of big circulation at any cost. A circulation figure of 3,000 papers in a community where the population is listed as 450, needs a very definite word of explanation to inspire confidence.

"If there is a particular account you want, first study the account and what you can do for it. The 'me too' argument is having less and less force. The fact that the advertisement appeared in another paper is no argument that it should be in your paper. Has the product distribution in your territory? Can it get distribution? Is there a good dealer to handle it? etc. The answers to these questions will form the basis of a good selling talk for you and get you a hearing at least.

"Let me suggest that you take care of it. I can illustrate what I mean, perhaps, by telling of a very recent experience in our office. A certain good sized newspaper in the northwest has been soliciting a certain account which has been going out of our office for the past two years and a half. The representative of the paper has called on us a number of times, has telephoned, has written innumerable letters. The national advertising manager of the paper has written time and time again, has sent long letters and short letters, has sent us surveys running into many pages, showing the importance of his paper in a wonderfully rich territory. Our advertiser was not very much interested in that territory, but finally, last fall, he authorized a schedule of about four weeks with a small advertisement running practically every day during that period, and two or three larger advertisements interspersed with the smaller ones.

"When the checking copies began to come in, we were rather surprised to find our small advertisement buried at the bottom of the page under four column, ten or three column fifteen-inch, and all sorts of larger advertisements, with evidently never a thought as to the effect it might have on this advertiser they had worked so long to win.

"Letters of protest brought alibis and excuses and explanations, but no indication that the paper really cared whether the schedule continued or not. The chief emphasis was along the line that we should be thankful that our advertisement was able to get in the paper at all, because of its importance and crowded pages, and many other advertisers that must be considered. To my notion, this is one way not to take care of an account.

"Foreign advertisements are very often smaller than your local merchants will use. I believe it will pay any publisher to watch the foreign advertisements, especially the smaller ones, in the matter of position and watch them especially in the earlier days of the campaign. Handle these small advertisements as you would like to have a small advertisement of your own handled.

"1. Check with the dealer and see if the advertising is doing him any good.

"2. Work with the dealer and see if interest and help make the advertising pay.

"3. Furnish the advertiser checking copies.

"4. Send in your bill promptly at the end of the month.

"5. Have your invoices made out in detail, showing the number of inches, the day the advertisement ran, and the rate per inch."

AD TIPS

N. W. Ayer & Son, 308 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Placing orders with newspapers in selected sections for the D. & S. Slade Company, spices, Boston.

Biow Company, Inc., 9 East 40th street, New York. Again placing orders with the Yele Electric Corporation, radio batteries, Brooklyn.

Bisberne Advertising Company, 58 E. Washington street, Chicago. Placing account for C. W. Beggs Sons Company, marcelle brilliantine de France, Chicago.

Buchen Company, 28 East Jackson boulevard, Chicago. Placing account for the Climax Engineering Company, Clinton, Iowa.

Campbell-Ewald Company, Book Building, Detroit. Placing accounts for the Ph. H. Fostel Milling Company, Mascoutah, Illinois, and the Reynolite Division of the Reynolds Spring Company.

Collins-Kirk, Inc., 752 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Will make up its newspaper list in September and October on John F. Jelke Company, Chicago.

D'Arcy Advertising Company, 1501 Locust street, St. Louis, Mo. Issuing 3,000 line schedules to a few newspapers on Anheuser-Busch Company, St. Louis, Mo. (Barley Malt).

Earl B. English Company, Drexel Building, Philadelphia. Again placing orders with newspapers in various sections for the United Medicine Company, Philadelphia.

Friend Advertising Agency, 171 Madison avenue, New York. Placing account for the Hair Specialty Company, New York.

Gale & Pietsch, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Is considering a limited list of papers in the north for next year's campaign on the Insulite Company, Minneapolis, Minn.

Grace & Holliday, Miami, Fla. Has secured account of the City of Coral Gables.

Grace & Holliday, Penobscot Building, Detroit. Placing accounts for the Lynite Pistons and Connecting Rods for the Aluminum Company of America and Chenevert & Company, marine builders.

Hanff-Metzger, Inc., Paramount Building, New York. Placing account for Alpina, Inc., Berne, Switzerland, manufacturers of snake, lizard and other reptile leathers.

Hays Advertising Agency, 246 College street, Burlington, Vt. Placing orders with some Pennsylvania newspapers for the Dy-O-La Dye Company, Burlington.

E. T. Howard Company, 420 Lexington avenue, New York. Again placing copy with newspapers in various sections for the L. E. Waterman Company, Ideal fountain pen, New York.

Charles W. Hoyt Company, Inc., 11 East 36th street, New York. Placing account for the Rutland Fire Clay Company, Rutland, Vt., manufacturers of "Rutland" patching plaster and roof coating.

Johnstone Advertising & Sales Service, Inc., 26 Forbes street, Rochester, N. Y. Placing account for E. Griffith Hughes, Rochester, N. Y.

H. W. Kastor & Sons Advertising Company, Lytton Building, Chicago. Again making contracts with newspapers for the Cooper Pharmacal Company, Chicago.

Lord & Thomas and Logan, 247 Park avenue, New York. Making contracts with newspapers for Julius Kayser & Company, gloves and underwear, New York.

Morse Advertising Company, Detroit, Mich. 63 W. Milwaukee street. Will make up next year's list on Herpicide Company, Detroit, Mich., during September.

Newell-Emmett Company, 40 East 34th street, New York. Now handling account for the Ansonia Clock Company, New York.

Newell-Emmett Company, Inc., 40 East 34th street, New York. Placing account for the Graybar Electric Company, New York, manufacturers of electrical supplies.

Procter & Collier, McMillan street at Reading road, Cincinnati, O. Sending contracts to a few scattered points on U. S. Playing Card Company, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Richardson-Briggs Company, 216 Superior avenue, N. E., Cleveland, Ohio. Reported to have secured account for the Piso Company, medical, Warren, Pa.

Roche Advertising Company, Straus Building, Chicago. Placing account for the Chero-Cola Company, Columbus, Georgia.

Arthur Rosenberg Company, Inc., 15 West 37th street, New York. Now handling account for the Dan Ross Tailoring Company, New York.

Sherman & Lebair, Inc., 183 Madison avenue, New York. Making contracts with newspapers in various sections for the B. V. D. Company, underwear, New York.

F. P. Shumway Company, 453 Washington street, Boston. Again placing orders with newspapers in various sections for the Glastonbury Knitting Company, underwear, Addison, Conn.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 410 North Michigan Boulevard, Chicago. Now handling the account of the Real Silk Hosiery Mills, Indianapolis, Ind.

Charles H. Touzalin Company, 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Issuing contracts to newspapers generally on Stewart-Warner, Chicago (Radio).

United Advertising Agency, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Placing account for the Zenith Radio Corporation, Chicago.

United Advertising Agency, 609 Pierce, Sioux City, Iowa. Placing 2,000 to 3,500 line contracts in 35 of the larger cities for the Julius M. White Manufacturing Company, Sioux City, Iowa, manufacturers of White Radio Socket Power Units ("A," "B" and "A-B" battery elimination).

Charles A. Weeks, Inc., 270 Madison avenue, New York. Placing account for the Bleacident Laboratories, Inc., Jersey City, N. J.

William & Cunnyngham, 6 North Michigan Boulevard, Chicago. Is sending schedules to a few towns on Holland Pen Co., Holland, Michigan. Now placing the entire account for the Vesta Battery Co., Chicago (Radio).

Winsten & Sullivan, Inc., 420 Lexington avenue, New York. Reported will place account for Schieffelin & Company, Vernax furniture cream, New York.

If a woman has so all-fired much intuition, why does she ask so many questions?—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

NEWSPAPER ENGINEERING

An organization specializing in newspaper buildings, all phases of newspaper engineering, operation and production problems, analytical surveys and valuations.

S. P. WESTON, INC.

Newspaper Buildings, Production, Operation Surveys, Valuations.

420 Lexington Avenue, New York

Buffalo, The Wonder City of America

Buffalo—a profitable Market for Advertisers

Sales in Buffalo are splendid for advertising goods. Employment conditions excellent, retail and other business thriving. One newspaper will put your story over to 83% of the people—that paper is the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

Read in 4 out of 5 Buffalo Homes

EDWARD H. BUTLER
Editor and Publisher

KELLY-SMITH COMPANY
Representatives

Graybar Bldg. New York, N. Y. — Tribune Tower Chicago, Ill.
Atlantic Bldg. Philadelphia — Waterman Bldg. Boston

One newspaper—the Pittsburgh PRESS—blankets the great Pittsburgh market, the fifth largest market in the United States. The PRESS has overwhelming leadership. At one cost, through a single newspaper, the advertiser quickly and thoroughly sells both dealer and consumer.

THE PITTSBURGH PRESS

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper

Represented by Allied Newspapers, Inc.

New York Chicago Detroit Atlanta San Francisco Los Angeles Seattle Portland

Read in 4 out of 5 Homes In PEORIA

PEORIA JOURNAL-TRANSCRIPT

"The Try-Out Medium In the Try-Out City"

America's Complete Newspaper

NEW YORK Herald Tribune

UTAH - IDAHO
WESTERN WYOMING
and
EASTERN NEVADA

—Salt Lake City is the distributing center of this great area, the population and wealth of which is increasing rapidly.

The Salt Lake Tribune

THE S. C. BECKWITH SPECIAL AGENCY
New York — Chicago — Detroit
St. Louis — Kansas City — Atlanta

M. C. MOGENSEN & CO., INC.
San Francisco — Los Angeles
Seattle — Portland

first! in OHIO

Dispatch Sets the Pace

During the first six months of 1927 The Columbus Dispatch carried more paid advertising than the second Columbus paper by 4,639,750 agate lines.

For years The Columbus Dispatch has enjoyed the distinction of being first in Ohio in paid advertising volume.

NET PAID CIRCULATION

City	60,216
Suburban	28,937
Country	24,525
Total Circulation	113,678

Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

Member "A. B. C." Member "A. B. P."

There Are Three Kinds of Advertising

Are you developing all 3?

The advertising income of your newspaper comes through 3 doors

One door is marked "LOCAL DISPLAY"
Another door is marked "CLASSIFIED"
A third door is marked "NATIONAL ADVERTISING"

What percentage of your total volume of advertising is NATIONAL advertising?

The answer to that question indicates to what degree you have grasped your opportunities to build income.

The Bureau of Advertising of the A. N. P. A. estimates that approximately $220,000,000 was invested in 1926 by national advertisers in newspaper campaigns. The same authority estimates the amount spent in advertising some General Motors lines in newspapers in 1926 as $3,800,000.

You have observed the "trend toward newspapers"—you have sensed the rising tide of national newspaper advertising.

Yet how about your National Advertising "DOOR"—is it shut or open?

Are your own selling programs efficient and effective? Are you advertising your market and your medium in the columns of EDITOR & PUBLISHER?

Advertisers and advertising agents on EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S paid subscription lists placed more than $100,000,000 of national advertising last year.

It will pay you to cultivate intensively this field

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

"The Newspaper Advocate"

1700 Times Building 42nd St. and Broadway New York City

ICE FIRM USING CLEVER COMMENTS IN COPY TO BUILD GOOD WILL

"Hallie Icemore's" Daily Quips Have Fixed Attention Upon Small Daily Copy of Spartanburg, S. C., Company —Occupies Regular Position

By ARTHUR G. KEENEY

Cleverly written paragraphs increase the popularity of many newspapers. It is even probable that some newspapers are bought on the streets because they are known to contain exceptionally good editorial quips; but it is a South Carolina ice manufacturer who has discovered that cleverly written paragraphs can be made to sell ice.

Wehn Howard B. Carlisle, Jr., assumed the management of the Hallett Ice and Coal Company, Spartanburg, S. C., a couple of years ago, he decided to experiment with printers' ink. He knew that advertising—the right kind—pays; but he wanted to ascertain for himself what kind of advertising builds good will for the advertiser while causing people to buy his merchandise.

Mr. Carlisle harbored no hallucinations concerning his own ability to write advertising copy. He employed a former newspaper man to write his copy.

The Hallet copy probably is unique when one remembers that it is designed to sell ice, build good will for the advertiser and yet do both of these things without causing readers to suspect that anything of the sort is being done.

"Hallie Icemore," a comely girl of eight or ten summers, was introduced to Spartanburg newspaper readers some months ago. No one has seen her, but she is better known than any other member of her sex in the city. Her open smile beams out at newspaper readers every morning and every afternoon, and her features have become as well known as her ability to say clever things that, apparently, have nothing in common with the ice business.

In hundreds of Spartanburg homes her brief chats cause families gathered about the breakfast table to enjoy a hearty chuckle before scattering for the day's work. When, an hour or two later, a wagon from Hallett Ice and Coal Company approaches, the housewife greets the driver with a smile and directs that her refrigerator be filled with Hallett ice.

"Hallie" sells ice because she creates a friendly atmosphere for Hallett drivers to enter. Their ice is, in reality, sold before they arrive, and yet "Hallie" has not mentioned ice.

How does she do it?

Well, for instance:

"I declare! Danny's mother's peach tree has lost two limbs in two days. If that boy doesn't do better, his folks will have to buy all their preserves."

Who is Danny?

This explains:

"My little neighbor, Danny, ain't my sweetheart any more, but I'm still his, 'n he better not have anybody else, either."

Mother's and father's foibles are freely discussed by little Miss "Hallie."

"Mother took a new kind of aspirin last night, and it stopped her headache in five minutes, even if she did take it by mistake. It was my dress button."

And: "Daddy thinks there's nobody like Mother. He says you can reason with other people."

"Hallie" is intensely human:

"Mother and little Brother are in the mountains and Daddy and I are having the best time! This morning at breakfast I put my knife in my mouth and Daddy drank out of his saucer."

"Hallie Icemore" never talks enough to be tiresome. Once a subject has been touched upon and exhausted—in about a dozen words—a new topic is taken up. For instance, with the New York-Paris flight the principal conversational topic, "Hallie" remarked:

"These days, Aunt Vivian always asks somebody to look at the morning paper before she does, for fear Lindbergh's been killed flying."

Just beneath "Hallie's" comment appears, each day, a "box," in which housewives are advised to buy their ice from "the red wagon." Hallett's chief competitor uses yellow wagons.

Hallett Ice and Coal Company, in reality, doesn't care whether newspaper readers notice that this appeal for the red wagon is there. "Hallie Icemore's" name is so inseparably tied up with the company's name that the purpose is achieved anyway.

How does Hallett Ice and Coal Company know that its little protege makes friends for her sponsors?

Telephone calls, letters, voluntary statements to company officials and employes—such things occur every day. No stronger evidence could be offered that an ice company can get away from the conventional type of advertising and can sell more ice. People know exactly where to find "Hallie" because, like the comic strips, she has her own private niche. She appears in the lower left-hand corner of the back page every day—and she bids fair to remain there the rest of her life.

Incidentally, the Hallett company sells coal and it employs a master salesman for that product, too. His name is "Hal Cole," and he is just as successful as his little cousin, "Hallie Icemore."

Newspaper advertising that makes the public speak favorably of the advertiser will sell that advertiser's merchandise, and it isn't necessary to spend tremendous sums in order to induce people to regard the advertiser with favor.

ORLANDO CLUB PAYS TRIBUTE TO HUNT

Adopts Memorial Resolution at Special Meeting Praising Former I. A. A. General Manager and Local President

The Advertising Club of Orlando, Fla., recently held a memorial meeting for the late Carl Hunt, past president of the club and former general manager of the International Advertising Association.

The entire program was devoted to "Carl Hunt As I Knew Him," in which 17 members gave brief sketches of his qualities. At the conclusion of the program, an "Appreciation" of the work of Carl Hunt was presented with the recommendation that it be spread upon the minutes of the Club. The appreciation follows:

"There has been removed from our midst a man whose presence has been a source of inspiration and whose friendship we prized as deeply as that of anyone who has ever lived among us.

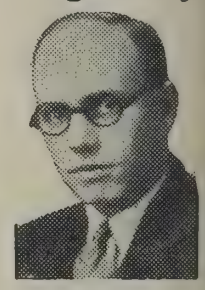
"Carl Hunt was a friend to every member of this club, and while we were favored in having him as one of us, we realize that he belonged to every Advertising Club in the world and that the influence of his life principles and ideals is felt today wherever modern business is transacted.

"To know Carl Hunt as we have known him was a rare pleasure. Many others knew him officially in connection with his activities on behalf of the International Association of Advertising Clubs. All respected and admired him. We knew him intimately. We knew him to love him.

"We met him from day to day and grasped his hand in warm friendship. We listened to the even tones of his voice. We told him our problems and always found him sympathetic. We knew his worth as a man. We knew his worth as a friend.

"Carl Hunt touched our lives in a manner that endeared him to us; and he went out of our lives as he had lived—cheerfully, quietly, fearlessly.

"ORLANDO AND ORANGE COUNTY ADVERTISING CLUB,
"John S. Masek, president,
"W. R. Mandelcorn, secretary."



BUILDING NEW HOME

A one-story brick and concrete building, 75 x 50 feet in size, will be occupied about Oct. 15 as the new home of the Cleburne (Tex.) Daily Times, published by George W. Bowman.

Whenever you see a dispatch signed by

Owen L. Scott,

special staff writer,

you know the paper that prints it has exclusive city-of-publication rights to the dispatch of this member of

CONSOLIDATED PRESS

SUPREME
METAL FURNACE
For Remelting and Refining Metals
IMPROVED SIMPLEX METAL FEEDER
For Composing Machines
ALFRED W. CHANNING, Inc.
Manufacturers and Distributors of Equipment for Printers
27 Thames St., N. Y.

The insignia that represents GOOD service.

Over 400 newspapers discovered a simple and practical solution to their checking proof problems, when they accepted our NEW and Complete Checking Proof Service. Under this plan the Publishers' office is relieved entirely of all detail work.

Less expensive— Greater results.

(Two months' trial test offer)

The Advertising* CHECKING BUREAU *Inc.
79 Madison Ave. NEW YORK — 538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO

The World

These two newspapers offer the most powerful all-day service in New York available as a unit under a single contact. The 600,000 DAILY WORLD — EVENING WORLD readers constitute a highly concentrated force to be reckoned with in any campaign designed to effect distribution in Greater New York.

The Sunday World

Pulitzer Building, New York
Tribune Tower, Chicago

now
195,000 Daily
425,000 Sunday
And The largest home-delivered circulation of any paper in its territory

Los Angeles Examiner

PUBLISHERS

This successful circulation building organization has instituted a new service which will interest publishers desiring additional circulation of a sound character which can be secured under the direction of their own circulation manager.
If desired we will conduct a thorough preliminary survey of your territory, which will indicate the number of potential subscribers available.
We will formulate a plan for a campaign —one to conform with your local conditions.
We will furnish you intelligent, energetic subscription salesmen with years of actual experience in the sale of sound, PERMANENT circulation.
Briefly, we will tell you how to get additional circulation and furnish you with the tools to get it.
And remember, everything handled by your own circulation manager without overburdening his department.
Wire or write immediately for complete details.

F. J. Marks Circulation Service
614 Park Bldg. — Cleveland, Ohio

DO YOU NEED A TRAINED MAN?

The Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, an organization of college trained newspaper, magazine and advertising men, wants to help you find him. The Bureau puts you in touch with experienced, energetic men —it saves you time by recommending only those who meet your requirements.

If you expect a vacancy, please write John G. Earhart, Director, Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, 836 Exchange Ave., Chicago, Ill.

NO CHARGE TO EMPLOYERS

Speaking of Selling Power—

The Keystone State Newspapers Can Prove It---

If there are any doubts in your mind about Pennsylvania as a market of the highest rank, where profitable business can be developed thru advertising in the local newspapers, write to the newspapers listed below and ask each one to give you a list of their advertisers who are now using or who have been using in the past, the advertising columns of each respective paper.

Write to the advertisers and ask them about their experience with their advertising campaigns in Pennsylvania. The replies you will receive from these advertisers will convince you that you are not only losing sales but your product is losing prestige and that you are overlooking a group of papers that have real selling power, and that reach the worth while families in Pennsylvania.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Allentown Call .....(M)	33,300	.11	.11
Allentown Call .....(E)	23,638	.11	.11
††Beaver Falls Tribune .....(E)	7,141	.03	.03
††Bethlehem Globe Times ....(E)	14,147	.06	.06
††Brownsville Telegraph .....(E)	7,818	.04	.04
Chester Times .....(E)	19,742	.08	.07
††Coatesville Record .....(E)	6,866	.035	.03
Connellsville Courier .....(E)	6,012	.02	.02
Easton Express .....(E)	34,476	.10	.10
Erie Times .....(E)	30,594	.08	.08
††Greensburg Tribune Review.(EM)	14,800	.05	.05
††Hazleton Plain-Speaker ....(E) ††Hazleton Standard-Sentinel ..	20,582	.08	.07
Mount Carmel Item .....(E)	4,340	.0285	.0285

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Oil City Derrick .....(M)	6,903	.04	.04
Scranton Times .....(E)	43,000	.13	.12
Sharon Herald .....(E)	7,656	.0357	.0357
Sunbury Item .....(E)	5,922	.035	.035
Warren Mirror-Times .....(ME)	9,685	.043	.043
Washington Observer and Reporter .....(M&E)	18,130	.06	.06
††West Chester Local News ...(E)	11,941	.04	.04
Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader ..(E)	26,442	.08	.06
Williamsport Sun and Gazette & Bulletin .....(ME)	28,722	.09	.09
††York Dispatch .....(E)	20,131	.05	.05

A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1927.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1927.

BALTIMORE'S ADVERTISING COST 3 PER CENT

(Continued from page 3)

25 per cent. The aggregate of salaries and wages represented more than 25 per cent of the net sales in five trade groups; between 15 per cent and 20 per cent in 8 groups; between 10 per cent and 15 per cent in 15 groups; between 5 per cent and 10 per cent in 13; and less than 5 per cent in 3 trade groups. It should be noted that in independent grocery and delicatessen stores, fruit and vegetable stores and soft-drink parlors, among others, the proprietors constitute most of the selling force and their ratio is therefore unduly low.

On the other hand, most of the heavily advertised lines are in the middle ratio groups—between 10 and 20 per cent. Department stores, with large forces of comparatively low-salaried sales people, show a ratio of 17.42; automobile stores, with comparatively few and well-paid sales representatives, have a ratio of 9.39 and automobile accessory stores have a ratio of 11.05. Women's clothing stores show a ratio of 15.02; while men's clothing and ready-to-wear stores show 10.57. Radio stores, the beneficiaries of considerable national and local advertising, have a ratio of 11.96; drug stores, also large local advertisers and the gainers by many national campaigns, keep salary and wage sales ratio down to 12.88. With more information on other cities, interesting avenues of speculation will be opened as to the definite influence of advertising on other elements of retail sales cost, but conclusions cannot be drawn from the limited information available.

With the experience gained in Baltimore as a guide, the Bureau of the Census has extended the work to Atlanta, Chicago, Denver, Fargo, N. D., Providence, San Francisco, Springfield, Ill., and Syracuse, cities representative of different types of population conditions and various kinds of business activity. Field work has been completed and the reports are now being tabulated.

In the Baltimore census all business establishments other than those embraced in the Census of Manufactures were included. They were divided into two classes—those primarily engaged in the distribution of commodities, and those whose income is derived principally from the performance of personal services. Because of their incompleteness, due to difficulties in locating the many small firms engaged in personal service, all figures relating to such business were omitted from the report.

Concerns engaged in manufacturing and whose operations include a large distribution element were included. Custom tailors, manufacturers of cigars selling also at retail, and a number of establishments doing light manufacturing where practically no machinery is required and where the whole volume of business is relatively small, are examples. Moreover, bakeries, although technically manufacturing establishments, were canvassed because many are so small that they are not included in the Census of Manufactures.

Chain stores were so designated on the schedule and in order not to burden any distributor unduly, such organizations made only one report for all stores under their ownership in Baltimore.

Gas and electrical appliances are sold to a considerable extent by public utility companies and the merchandising departments of such establishments are enumerated as separate selling organizations.

In a few instances, concerns sold both at retail and at wholesale. Where this occurred the classification as to type of distributor is made according to the manner in which the larger proportion of sales are performed. If a wholesale establishment and a retail establishment were operated under the same ownership in separate buildings, two separate schedules were procured.

Wherever possible the attempt was made to combine stores not specifically covered by the classification with stores dealing in directly related merchandise. For example, mineral water with "soft drink and ice cream parlors"; pickles and sauerkraut with grocery stores; crockery and basketware with furniture and household furnishing establishments. Some ingenuity also was necessary in classifying properly the types of commodities sold. Hair goods and handkerchiefs, which were combined with "notions," present typical examples.

The report is summarized as follows:

"During the year 1926 there were 11,127 retail establishments in Baltimore with sales aggregating $369,027,300. Of these, 9,819 were independently owned, while 1,308 were units of chain store organizations. Sales through the former class totalled $287,259,800; and through chain stores $81,767,500.

"Using the Baltimore population estimate of the Census Bureau as of July 1, 1925 (792,296), the sales per capita amounted to $456.72. A total of 37,121 employes are engaged in the operation of Baltimore's retail stores, who, together with 10,950 firm members and proprietors actively engaged in retailing, make a total of 48,071 persons deriving the major portion of their income from the sale of merchandise. In return for these services, $43,871,900 was paid in salaries and wages (exclusive of compensation or earnings of proprietors). Total salaries and wages represent nearly 12 per cent of sales, with the ratio higher or lower according to the type of store and the merchandise sold.

"The average inventory for the year computed on a cost basis was $46,753,000; while the value of stock on hand December 31, 1926, computed on the same basis, was $46,905,900.

No. of Establishments		11,127
No. of Employes....	37,121
Firm Members and Proprietors	10,950
Total Persons Engaged		48,071
Salaries and Wages of Employes.....		$43,871,900*
Inventory at Cost:
Average for year...		$46,753,000
Actual, Dec. 31, 1926.		46,905,900
Net Sales:
Independently Owned.	$287,259,800
Chain Stores	81,767,500
Total		$369,027,300

* Exclusive of compensation or earnings of proprietors.

DAILY RATES EMPLOYES

A personnel rating has been given every person on the pay roll of the Chicago Daily News, by a committee which has just completed its work.

ROLLING SNOWBALLS IN SUMMERTIME

That Is What Walter Lister, City Editor, N. Y. Telegram, Calls the "Old Safety Razor Blade Stunt" He Revived

Walter Lister, city editor of the New York Evening Telegram, Scripps-Howard Newspaper, and Mrs. Lister attended one of those dinners the press agents have been giving newspaper men on board the Ile de France, new steamship of the French line, and that was when it happened. Mr. and Mrs. Lister strolled, after dinner, to the aft deck rail, and sighed Mrs. Lister to Mr. Lister:

"My dear, I wish you'd brought your old safety razor blades with you. I know of no better place to get rid of them."

Came the dawn, then, of an idea to the mind of the Scripps-Howard city editor—a revival of the old safety razor blade wheeze. "I think," he said profoundly, "that that will still make a good story."

He was right. About 10 days ago the Telegram started its readers to figuring out just what could and should be done with old safety razor blades. As this week drew to a close, so many letters were coming in with either wisecracking or serious suggestions in answer to this perplexing problem, that the editors of the paper weren't sure how long the story would last. For much of the time it was played up on page one, illustrated with a cartoon drawn by a staff artist. No prizes were offered for the suggestions, but they came in anyway, after an original push from Mr. Lister.

"It's what I call rolling snowballs in summertime," said Mr. Lister to EDITOR & PUBLISHER, when interviewed this week. "There are few things better for creating good will for a newspaper than to get readers to write in to the editor. And the best way to do that is to start a discussion or ask for advice, even on such a silly subject as where to put old razor blades. It was a subject on which everyone seemed to have something to say, and the stories as run from day to day based on the letters we received all had a laugh in them."

To start the "snowball" rolling, wires were sent to prominent men asking them what they did with their old blades.

"Seriously, what do you do with your old blades," was asked, and Mr. Mencken replied:

"Put them in the collection plate."

A wire was also sent to the Gillette Safety Razor Company, which wired back: "Put them in the Grand Canyon."

This is the solution which was suggested in F. P. A.'s "Conning Tower" in the New York World several years ago when that columnist was inviting his readers to solve the same momentous question.

EUBANK AN AUTHOR

Weekly short stories written for the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle by Kent Eubank, its oil and gas editor, will shortly be published by the Burton Publishing Company of Kansas City, under the title of "Horse and Buggy Days."

Detroit
Fourth Largest City
For most complete and economical coverage concentrate in one paper—
The Detroit News.
Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

A NEW DEAL IN PITTSBURGH
America's fourth largest market
The Sun-Telegraph
Evening and Sunday
—The evening issue combining the former Evening Chronicle Telegraph and Evening Sun.
—The Sunday issue combining the former Sunday Post and Sunday Gazette Times.
National advertising representatives: Paul Block, Inc., 247 Park Avenue, New York; Century Bldg., Chicago; General Motors Bldg., Detroit; Little Bldg., Boston; Commonwealth Trust Bldg., Philadelphia.

ADVERTISERS who understand the Iowa situation know from experience that the consumers' market there cannot be properly sold without the use of newspapers in these twenty-one key cities.
IOWA DAILY PRESS ASS'N
DAVENPORT, IOWA.

Ames Tribune	Iowa City Press Citizen
Boone News-Republican	Keokuk Gate City
Burlington Gazette	Marshalltown Times-Republican
Burlington Hawk-Eye	Mason City Globe-Gazette & Times
Cedar Rapids Gazette	Muscatine Journal & News-Tribune
Centerville Iowegian & Citizen	Oelwein Register
Council Bluffs Nonpareil	Oskaloosa Herald
Davenport Democrat & Leader	Ottumwa Courier
Davenport Times	Sioux City Journal
Dubuque Telegraph-Herald	Sioux City Tribune
Fort Dodge Messenger & Chronicle	Washington Journal
Fort Madison Democrat	Waterloo Courier
	Waterloo Tribune

Largest Circulation and Largest Volume of Advertising of any Daily west of the Missouri river
LOS ANGELES EVENING HERALD
REPRESENTATIVES
Chicago, JOHN M. LEDERER, 910 Hearst Bldg.
San Francisco, A. J. NORRIS HILL, 640 Hearst Bldg.
New York, HERBERT M. MOLONEY, 604 Times Bldg.

Space is space—but the BEST Classified Advertising publicity justifies its daily appearance in your newspaper
THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building, Philadelphia

The Morning Telegraph
the leading newspaper in Theatricals, Turf, Finance and Motion Pictures, prints all of the day's worth while general news, with exclusive features covered by a great staff of special writers.
It has the largest professional circulation of any newspaper in the United States.

After All
It's not so much how many read your story as how many put credence in it.
THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD
Goes not only into the homes but also into the hearts of 150,000 substantial families daily.
Second Largest Morning Daily in Philadelphia
Always Reliable

FINANCIAL ADVERTISERS TELL THEIR STORY

(Continued from page 13)

or the month. Particular attention had o be paid to the layout and illustration f this series to overcome the natural oss of attention value incurred through he limited space used.

"These little advertisements proved to e quite a departure from the customary un of bank advertising as the accomanying reproductions show. That they were effective, was proved by the results.

"How much new business this campaign produced it is impossible to determine with accuracy, but this particular January set a record in number of accounts secured."

An interesting comparison between mediums is obtainable in the case of the William R. Compton Company, which advertises in both newspapers and magazines. Mr. Dock, describing the institutional campaign his company places, said:

"Of the total appropriation for this advertising, 80 per cent is spent in newspapers, and 20 per cent in national magazines. This is not an arbitrary allocation. It was decided upon as a result of a careful investigation, made by one of the foremost commercial advertising agencies. It is based upon the location of the company's offices and of its customers, and upon similar consideration of the sales potentialities of the respective cities in which these offices are placed.

"The purpose of this advertising has been to illustrate the extent and value of the services which this particular company assures its customers. As was intended, it has resulted in immediate sales and in the forming of a large number of new receptive contacts that will eventually mean further sales. As was also intended, it has given many investors a broader and clearer conception of investment facts, and of the ways in which this company prepared to help them.

"After reading a few of the first advertisements of this series, investors, particularly those who had already been customers of the Compton Company, began to take advantage of the various services that these advertisements described. They had never realized before that such services had any personal value to themselves, or that they even existed. This demand led to the rapid development of a much more capable and comprehensive service organization within the company. Whatever merit the advertising has had in producing immediate business, certainly its more important accomplishment in the long run was in making available to the public a better type of service than was rendered by this particular organization before advertising created the demand for it."

Alice Davis of the Mercantile Trust Company, St. Louis, has devised an interesting form for her advertising copy, which runs under the heading "Mercantile Service."

"Realizing that when we advertise in newspapers we must compete with the news (because people buy newspapers for the news) this element is put into our advertising whenever possible," she wrote. "Our advertisements are about people because people are interested in people. We may write a news story about what has happened to a number of people in all our departments during the noon hour; or tell what complete banking service has done for one family. Since most every one is familiar with some of the bank's service, something in the story must be familiar—and if attention can be attracted to that part then there is a possibility of sustaining the reader's interest to the end.

"Bank advertisers need the kind of faith in advertising that doesn't demand quick and definite returns—the kind of faith the new saver has when he opens his account—who knows his results will come some time in the future.

"In the final analysis we are convinced that the cumulative effect of years of advertising is the building of a good reputation for the bank and the winning of public acceptance. The results of any bank's advertising can only be checked by the growth of that bank over a span of years."

RUNS PAGE 1 FARM COLUMN DAILY

Stoughton (Wis.) Courier-Hub Finds Plan Has Substantially Increased Circulation—Writer Visits Farms Daily

The Stoughton (Wis.) Daily Courier-Hub, is probably the only daily newspaper in the United States which runs a column of farm news on its front page every day.

One year ago the publishers decided that something must be done to establish the paper in the rural districts around Stoughton. They had a fair circulation in the country as the result of subscription contest but the question was how to keep the list intact.

I. M. Kalnes, an experienced farm editor, was engaged to visit every farm within a radius of ten miles of Stoughton and write daily articles on his visits. He began calling on the Stoughton farmers and found that many of them were indifferent in their attitude toward the paper.

The left hand column on the front page was reserved for the farm news with the heading "Around the Rural Routes With The Hub Man." Mr. Kalnes had previous experience with farmers and had the advantage of being able to speak the Norwegian language in a community in which that nationality predominated. He knew just how to approach them, and it wasn't long until the attitude of the farmers toward the paper, Courier-Hub, was entirely changed. New subscriptions began to come in and renewals were sent in without solicitation.

Today, as the result of close contact with the farmers, the Courier-Hub has almost a 100 per cent circulation in the farming community and has gained hundreds of friends.

Mr. Kalnes' system of making friends with the farmers is very simple. If the farmer does not happen to be in the house when he calls, he goes out to the barn or to the field to meet him and extend greetings. He talks over the farmer's problems with him.

In his daily articles, Mr. Kalnes tells about the members of the family and goes into detail regarding the farm, buildings, crops, and stock. He uses, on the average, one-third of a column telling about one place. Pictures are frequently used of people and of buildings.

A classified advertising promotion plan is being used with excellent results among the farmers. Subscribers are given a coupon book worth $3.00, each coupon worth 25 cents to apply on the cost of any classified ad. A large number have taken advantage of the plan and the classified column is gradually being increased. The average price of these classified ads is 50 to 75 cents.

WINS EDITORIAL PRIZE

H. P. Davidson, editor of the Wolfville (N. S.) Acadian won the contest conducted by the National Committee for the celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation to determine the best editorial appearing in a weekly newspaper, dealing with the Confederation and progress of Canada. Mr. Davidson's editorial was entitled "Canada's Greatness." Second prize went to W. H. Robertson, Goderich Signal while C. H. Hale, Orillia Packet and Times received third place.

TAKE AIR TRIP

L. W. Bailey editor of the Dallas Dispatch, and Theodore H. Barrett, city editor of the Dallas News, recently made a trip in a National Air Transport airplane to Kansas City and return, on a test flight prior to the inauguration of regular aerial passenger service.

Imperial METAL

©1927, Imperial Type Metal Co.

Imperial well-liked in the "Brass City"

WATERBURY, Connecticut, known as the "Brass City of the East" is fortunate in having two such alert, up-and-coming papers as the Democrat and the Republican. Not only do they rank high in Eastern newspaper circles, but circulation figures bear witness to a very live popularity among Waterbury folk.

Imperial feels entirely at home in Waterbury, since both the Democrat and the Republican, tho divided on some issues, agree in the use of Imperial type metal and Plus Plan service. The experience of these and brother publishers the country over, has demonstrated that Imperial metal, kept in constant working trim by the Plus Plan, will last indefinitely. The remarkable saving in metal costs easily explains Imperial's rapidly growing clientele.

Write today and learn how the Plus Plan can be adapted to your shop.

IMPERIAL TYPE METAL COMPANY

Manufacturing the following metals:

LINOTYPE
ELROD
INTERTYPE
LINOGRAPH

MONOTYPE
LUDLOW
STEREOTYPE
THOMPSON

Philadelphia
Cleveland

New York
Chicago

EXHIBITOR
GRAPHIC ARTS EXPOSITION
New York Sept 5-17, 1927

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

RIGHTLY or wrongly "Your Money's Worth" (The Macmillan Company) by Stuart Chase and F. J. Schlink is considered by lay readers to cast reflection upon American newspapers for not putting the interests of their subscribers before the interests of their advertisers. The reading of this volume leaves a distinct impression on the minds of many that the newspaper is a party to a swindle to rob the ultimate consumer of his hard earned dollars through getting him to buy the things he does not need and does not want.

The authors are speaking of advertising campaigns to promote sales when they say:

> The mad tea party has infinite variations. It gives us a Mother's Day—for the especial delight of florists, and a Father's Day—to the joy of haberdashers. For all we know, the undertakers—or to sound the modern note, the morticians—are now lobbying for a Cyanide of Potassium Day, subsequent to their campaign against the heinous practice of burial at sea. The Shoe Sole Manufacturers would have us stand up more and the National Trouser Makers, sit down more!

Later on they make this enlightening comment along the same line:

> Meanwhile the New York World commenting on the hard times due to overproduction in the diamond industry, and the wholesale dumping of crown jewels on the market since the war, sagely advocates that the diamond merchants fore-gather and finance a "get-engaged-oftener" campaign!

The general theme of the volume is well given in this quotation:

> There is the magnificent technique of "selling the package," rather than what the package contains. Gilt paper, shiny nickel boxes, layers of glassine paper and tissue, bright colors, ribbons, fancy and costly printing, the shapes of perfume bottles—all add to the purchasing appeal and with singular efficacy detract attention from the material which lies embalmed in all this glitter.

The authors evidently think they have proved their point of how consumers are swindled through advertising when they quote a medical journal as saying that "four hundred, ninety-five dollars worth of Listerine has the antiseptic value of a cent's worth of corrosive sublimate."

That assertion may be technically true but to me, at least, it is worth the difference in price to know positively that my family at my summer home is using Listerine as a mouth wash and not a solution of corrosive sublimate. I have never tasted corrosive sublimate—neither have the authors of the book or they would not be alive to tell the story—but I am positive that Listerine has a more agreeable taste than the deadly poison which has such antiseptic value and which has its place to rid an infested house of the vermin.

Instead of advertisements for tooth paste and powder, the authors would doubtless prefer to have newspapers insert the following:

> "A dentifrice is not a therapeutic agent for diseased gum tissue. It is under no circumstances, a cure for or even a preventive of pyorrhea. The medicines and drugs incorporated in many of the popular and widely advertised dentifrices are valueless and only afford the manufacturers selling talks to get their product before the public. Laboratory experiments lead an investigator to conclude that some dentifrices are put on the market in utter ignorance of the dental and biochemical principles involved, or with intent to mislead the multitude. The dentifrice really plays a minor role in mouth hygiene."

Possibly the authors believe the newspapers are fooling their readers too much by ads containing "big endorsements" of products. At least, they print a letter from which the following is taken:

> The writer will be glad to consider arranging for endorsements of commodities or products of national reputation from Her Majesty, the Queen of Roumania.

To be fair to the volume, however, it must be said that its authors insert many things that deserve the careful attention of newspaper publishers and advertising managers. For instance, it quotes the following from the address of Doctor Arthur J. Cramp of the American Medical Association before the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World:

> Are there any patent medicines that should be advertised? My own answer to the question is that I do not know of any. The very conditions under which patent medicines are sold make such sales inimical to the public health. So long as proprietaryship and secrecy of composition are the controlling factors in the industry, there is too great an incentive to fraudulent and misleading claims. So long as modern advertising methods call for creating demands instead of merely filling them, the patent medicine business will continue to be a vast industry of playing on the fears of the public and making hypochondriacs by suggestion.

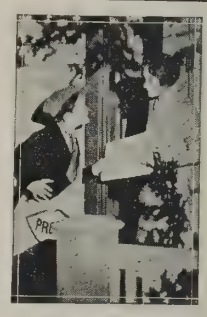
The authors of "Your Money's Worth" frankly lift their hats in honorable salute to the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World—as the Association was then called—for at least listening to Doctor Cramp. But then they add, "There seems to be no shrinkage of tall bottles wrapped in even taller stories, on these shelves."

Farther along in the volume, in the chapter headed "Along Main Street," the authors ask these questions:

> How many of us know that rice wholesaling at seven cents a pound becomes puffed rice at sixty-one cents a pound; wheat wholesaling at two and a half cents, puffed wheat at sixty-eight cents; corn at one and a fourth cents, corn flakes at twenty cents Is the puffing worth the mark-up?

For the benefit of the authors I will answer one question. When I was a youngster and used to snatch a handful of wheat from a chute in a local grist mill, I would say that the puffing was not worth the mark-up. But now when my teeth are not in the condition they were in my kid days, I would say, as I eat my puffed wheat in the morning, that the puffing is worth the mark-up.

After chatting about questionable practices in marketing ice boxes, the authors turn to beds. What they have to say about the marking of the latter through newspaper advertising is nowhere near so critical as an article which I read in EDITOR & PUBLISHER some time ago about the advertising of a certain mattress.



People have been told the truth about various products oftener than the authors of "Your Money's Worth" would have you believe. New York City, for example, once made a sincere attempt to have bread bought and sold by weight. But it simply could not get the people to buy bread that way. Before a radical reform can be hoped for on the part of the advertisers, there must be a radial reform on the part of the ultimate consumer—something that Messrs. Chase and Schlink overloked.

They also overlooked a number of very fine things that have been done for the ultimate consumer by the Kansas State Agricultural College at Manhattan, Kan., and by the School of Retailing at New York University. The Federal Trade Commission is mentioned frequently in the book but is not given full credit for the excellent work it has done in looking after the interests of the ultimate consumer.

Two chapters deserve an O. K. without any qualifications. They are those which bear the headings "Quack, quack" and "More Quacks and Cure-alls." A careful reading of these two chapters ought to help the advertising department of any American newspaper to pass more intelligently upon much copy that is submitted for publication. The authors, however, overlooked many of the high standards adopted for medicinal advertising by such newspapers as the New York Times.

In general "Your Money's Worth" has much to be commended. It also has much that might be intelligently criticised.

In as much as the authors ask many questions in the volume, I see no reason why I should not ask a few about the volume itself. Why was such an expensive jacket put on the book? An ordinary piece of cheap brown paper would have protected the volume just as well. Why was so much money spent to give it such an attractive cover—one of the

Over 260,000 Homes in Michigan served by Booth Newspapers

The Grand Rapids Press
The Flint Daily Journal
The Saginaw News Courier
The Kalamazoo Gazette
The Jackson Citizen Patriot
The Bay City Times Tribune
The Muskegon Chronicle
The Ann Arbor Times News

National Advertising Representatives

I. A. KLEIN
50 East 42nd Street
New York City

J. E. LUTZ
6 N. Michigan Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely by
THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
Both Members of A. B. C.
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

If Quality
of circulation is your first consideration.
The Evening Star
With Sunday Morning Editions
Washington, D. C.
will have your preference—same as it has the preference of practically everyone in the National Capital.
The Star's circulation is home circulation—both quality and quantity—the kind that counts most with advertisers.
N. Y. Office—110 E. 42nd St.
Dan A. Carroll
Chicago Office—Tower Building
J. E. Lutz

The largest evening paper circulation in Baltimore
151,059
May, net paid
May, 1927, sets a new circulation record for daily papers in Baltimore.
The NEWS, with its May net paid circulation of 151,059, enjoys a margin of 24,141 copies over that of the Evening Sun, its nearest competitor.
You reach more of Baltimore through the
BALTIMORE NEWS
Largest circulation of any daily paper in the South

in
Detroit—
Free Press circulation reaches 31,000 more than the total number of families owning their own homes.
The "Free Press"
"Starts the day in Detroit"
With a stable, uninflated, liberal pursed circulation productive of greater advertising returns at lower cost.

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE
of the
INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION
Can supply you with competent circulation men of capacity and ability capable to take entire charge of your department or to fill important posts in the department.
Address the Secretary-Treasurer please, Mr. Clarence Eyster, care Star Building, Peoria, Ill.

ROTO-GRAVURE
Sections for Newspapers & Magazines
STANDARD
Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

nost attractive covers I have seen? Why vas such good paper used in printing the contents? The message of the authors vould have been just as forceful on a nuch cheaper grade of paper. Why vasn't the volume put out simply as a aper edition, and thus save the ultimate consumer considerable money? Why ave the publishers spent so much money n advertising the volume? I have had nough experience in the book publishing eld to know the cost of composition, the ost of printing, binding, etc. Knowing the otal cost fairly accurately, I am wonderng whether the "puffing-up" of a series f magazine articles is worth the two ollars asked for this volume. The same ogic that holds for puffing up a cereal lso holds for puffing up a serial. But o be more serious, I think it mighty vorth while to stimulate the demand for book that contains so much excellent naterial as "Your Money's Worth."

It was time for "thirty" long ago. A efrain of a popular song comes to my nind: "Have a good time, don't get mad, et your money's worth." I have had good time reading the book. Its conents have not made me mad although have been somewhat critical.

And I have got my money's worth from he volume even at its puffed-up price.

* * *

EVERY reader of EDITOR & PUBLISHER who glances through the editorial age of the New York Sun knows that Bob Davis is publishing many recollections under the standing head, "Bob Davis Recalls." Some of these recollections were recently brought together by Mr. Davis in a book, "Over My Left Shoulder" (D. Appleton & Co.). To his volume, the preface was contributed y Irvin S. Cobb.

Public dinners often bring about trange dinner companions, precisely as ractical politics is said to bring together trange bed-fellows.

At a recent public dinner, Davis found imself at the same table with the Right Reverend William Thomas Manning, D.D., LLD., Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New York. To he latter between the soup course and he meat course, Davis told a nice little ove story, quite different than those ound in "Elmer Gantry."

"Why don't you write that for your Sun column," said the Bishop. "It is perfect love story."

"Perhaps, some day," replied Davis.

After the dinner was over a friend emarked, "I saw you talking the Bishop o death. What were you telling him?"

"Watch the Sun," replied Davis. "You will find it there."

"If you see it in the Sun, it is so" s the slogan—or used to be—of the Sun. Davis printed the story. It told about girl, Sylvia Nichols by name, whose ather conducted a foundry in Bridgeport. She is the heroine. The hero is he son of a prosperous naval outfitter n the same city. The heroine sang in he church choir but the hero was the illage cut-up.

One crisp Sunday morning the latter eard the former sing a sacred solo. The rest of the story tells itself. Cutting ne courtship short and deleting the chat o the father, I need only to give the eply of the girl:

"I am honored by your proposal. I esteem nd admire you. I feel, however, that I should efine my state of mind concerning my choice f a husband. I wish to dedicate my life to hristian effort and, all things being equal, I ook forward to becoming the wife of a minisr. You may not be so inclined, nor is it fair f me to ask that you devote your whole existnce to a career that might be a sacrifice. If ou feel that you could . . . ."

The young man accepted the challenge nd simply asked the girl to decline her offers until she had heard his first rmon. This she agreed to do and the oung man went to New York to become student in a theological seminary. fter graduation he went to a little hurch in Branford, Conn., to preach his rst sermon. At its close the girl walked o the aisle, put her hands in those of e young minister and said, "I will be our wife."

They were married in Branford where they remained for several years. Then taking along a small Mason and Hamlin organ, they went West to become missionaries among the Indians. Together they built "crude churches on the plain, carried the Cross to the red men, succored the emigrants and rendered Christian service to mankind." Hardships they had in plenty but never a cross word between them.

They passed away in 1905 within a few months of each other, and they sleep in the high Sierras side by side, one headstone recording their existence and their immortal love.

What is the story doing in "Our Own World of Letters"? It is the story which opens the new volume, "Bob Davis Recalls 60" just published by D. Appleton & Co.—a volume of true stories of love and laughter and tears. These sixty tales of real life also appeared on the editorial page of the New York Sun under the title "Bob Davis Recalls."

I may have occasion to refer to this volume again. But Bob Davis is so fond of the unexpected ending and so many will doubtless take this tale as a piece of fiction that I ought to quote the snapper that Davis puts at the close.

That was the story I was telling the Bishop at the Commodore banquet; and for the eye of my friend who wanted to know the details I take this occasion to impart the gratifying truth that Sylvia Nichols and her minister were my mother and father.

O. Henry at his best never gave the reader a greater surprise than the unexpected twist at the ending of this short story.

* * *

ALFRED A. KNOPF announces another volume in a series of handbooks of journalism. The new volume, which takes up the subject of book reviewing "as practiced in contemporary newspapers," is from the pen of Wayne Gard of Grinnell College.

In the same series another volume, already scheduled for publication in October, is "Printing for the Journalist." Its author is Eric W. Allen, Dean of the School of Journalism at the University of Oregon. Other volumes already published include "What is News?" by Gerald W. Johnson and "The Column" by Hallum W. Davis.

* * *

ANOTHER new journalism book scheduled for immediate publication is one dealing with news and its mode of treatment by American newspapers. It is to be published by George H. Doran and Company.

* * *

A CORRESPONDENT wants to know where he can find information about La Libre Belgique. The best information about this little newspaper which the Germans were never able to suppress, may be found in "The Secret Press in Belgium" by Jean Massart, vice-director of the Class of Sciences in the Royal Academy of Belgium. An English translation, thanks to Bernard Miall, has been published by E. P. Dutton & Co. An article in The Independent for September 6, 1919 tells how La Libre Belgique defied and out-tricked Von Bissing. Brand Whitlock, American ambassador to Belgium, in his book entitled "Belgium" (D. Appleton & Co.) also tells how La Libre Belgique appeared with irregular regularity on Von Bissing's table.

SOUTHERN A. P. GROUP MEETS

Representatives of the Associated Press and of seven North Carolina morning newspapers held a conference at the Hotel Charlotte, Aug. 27, to discuss problems of the news service in the state. Those present were: W. F. Caldwell, of Atlanta, Ga., news editor of the Southern Division of the A. P.; J. H. Jenkins and J. R. Williamson, of the Charlotte bureau; William P. Sharpe and J. Worth Bacon, of the Winston-Salem Journal; A. L. Stockton, Greensboro News; Frank Smethurst, Raleigh News and Observer; Captain John D. Langston and Henry Belk, Goldsboro News; R. B. Page and Lamont Smith, Wilmington Star, and J. A. Parham, Charlotte Observer.

Somewhere In This Old U.S.A. There Is A Publisher Who Wants To Meet Me—And I Want To Meet Him

One of the best known newspaper men in the country wants to get in touch with a publisher who is seeking an executive qualified to serve as his assistant or to take complete charge of his advertising department.

For five years the writer of this advertisement has been connected with one of America's most successful newspapers. He has an invaluable background of editorial, circulation and advertising experience. He has addressed practically every leading advertising club in the country. He can furnish references that are a tribute to his ability and personality. He is married, in his early thirties and physically fit.

He seeks a connection where his accomplishments will bring their rewards; where there is a real job to be done and where he can have unlimited opportunities and the assurance of permanency with an organization that is human and appreciative.

Box C-950
Editor & Publisher

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

OGLE ASKS A QUESTION

To Editor & Publisher: Your article on combination newspapers in the issue of Aug. 13, implies a criticism of "resolution framers" who treat the question "in the most general terms in spite of differences in individual characteristics of the various combinations." To be very specific, therefore, I would like to ask this question: How can you justify the policy of those 58 newspapers who, according to your summary, sell space separately to local advertisers, but only in combination to national advertisers? If the local retailers are entitled to buy space in either of the publications, can you suggest any reason why the national advertiser should not be allowed to do the same thing?

The usual answer that many local retailers cannot afford to buy the complete coverage of the two papers is no answer at all. There are many national advertisers who are in exactly the same position.

I am sure the members of the Association of National Advertisers would be interested in hearing a logical answer to this question from a publisher of this type of enforced combination.

Yours truly,
Arthur H. Ogle,
Secretary-Treasurer, Association of National Advertisers.

MR. WALKER'S STATEMENT

August 29.

To Editor & Publisher: It chafed my tender sympathies to read of the futile efforts made by your paper to reach me in remotest Brooklyn for a statement regarding the disagreement between the American Mercury and the Herald Tribune as to whether I was discharged or resigned. It seems that my name and address, appended to one of my letters quoted in your story, might have furnished some clue had you been eager to present anything other than the viewpoint of the Editors and Publishers.

I had tried to avoid publicity in this incident but since your paper solicited, I understand, and printed a statement from both the Tribune and the Mercury, perhaps I may as well request brief space in your columns.

None of Mr. Draper's omissions—principally that Mr. Sprague had definitely given me to understand that I was on leave of absence rather than resigned—interest me sufficiently to warrant a correction. I have no denials, apologies nor alibis to offer.

As I was out of the city I cannot testify to what happened at the Tribune around May 27—the date that copies of the Mercury appeared there. I am unable to verify the unauthorized assertion that I was "summarily dismissed"—an overstatement of the apparent facts. Had I been asked I should have advised against the use of that phrase. Nevertheless, it is my opinion that publication of the Morgan story undoubtedly prejudiced the Tribune's editors against even retaining or re-employing me—which seems to be the belief of numerous newspaper men who might know, Variety, the theatrical magazine, and Mr. Macfadden's eminent Graphic.

This, you will understand, is not written to perpetuate a weary argument, because neither the subject, my inclinations nor my sources of information justify further discussion. It proceeds merely from an annoyance that is soothed only by the heartening echo of the chuckles that the incident afforded some of the less reverent newspaper men about town.

As a more or less guilty bystander in this publishers' duel, I am impelled only by an inelegant disgust to quote:

"Well, what Cambronne said to Maitland, ere the English fire made smooth the brow of the hill against the sinking light of day, say I to you, and all of you. . . . "

Yours truly,
W. M. Walker.

RADIO ADVERTISING

To Editor & Publisher: Your Aug. 13 edition, page 4, reviews the first false radio advertising case before the Federal Trade Commission. Before the recent International Advertising Association meeting at Denver I expressed my disapproval of radio advertising, unless broadcasters read from copy which has been scrutinized by some competent and unbiased official. Better still, in my opinion, would be strict regulation through a licensed broadcaster, same to be under bond. I base my statements on evidence obtained here in Salt Lake City where we have received frequent complaints on "loose" advertising statements made over the radio. In my opinion this matter should be regulated before errors and misrepresentation have gained too much headway.

Edgar M. Ledyard, President Advertising Club of Salt Lake City.

OBJECTS TO GERMAN SERIES

To Editor & Publisher: We are in receipt of the first installment and promotion matter on a series of articles on German war heroes, the series being issued by one of the largest feature services in the newspaper world. I already have told the feature company what I think of the series and I am repeating my sentiments to you in the hope that other editors will proffer their reactions in your columns. I take it for granted E. & P. has read the series.

First of all I object strenuously to the publication of such a series. I know of course our paper is not compelled to use it—but some papers may. Why is such a series necessary? What good will it do? Will it increase circulation or stimulate good will? What percentage of readers will enjoy or approve and how many will disapprove?

The feature service issuing the series obviously realizes it is handling dynamite for throughout the promotion material are reassurances in effect that "we Americans are fair-minded" and "have forgotten the war" and "right or wrong the German soldier was a brave man," etc. In addition the service includes an editorial for use with the series. The editorial, needless to say, excuses the appearance in "(Name of your paper)" of the series, reiterating the promotion justifications in even more pronounced form.

With due regard to the service company's creditable performances in the feature line, I cannot help but think it has erred seriously here. The feature company's own defense of the series is ample proof it knows there will be criticism of the stories. Were the series to be read only by students, history "bugs" or professors of political economy possibly there would be no come-back on them. This will not be the case. As the most verdant cub knows, there are millions of newspaper readers today who do not want to forget the war, who still are convinced that Germany wronged the world and who would regard any such series as purely German propaganda. As a newspaper man, I maintain that Germany should bear the burden of winning her way back into the good graces of the world—not the American newspapers.

So in the name of common-sense newspaper practice, why try to "kid" the millions out of their attitude toward Germany? A few more flights, Berlin to New York for example, will do more in 32 hours to accomplish the same purpose than all the series on German war heroes that can be compiled. Why not let nature and time take their course and heal the sores? They can't, these sores, be cured with cathartics. If we must have a series on war heroes, then let us start with Americans and in turn take up the French, British, Belgian and Italians. Possibly when these have run the gauntlet of our column rules and a few score German aviators have crossed the Atlantic and the war debt is squared, a series on German war heroes will be good stuff.

Yours truly,
T. G. Hallinan,
Managing Editor, Winter Haven (Fla.) Daily Chief.

SEEKS GEO. H. DONOHUE

To Editor & Publisher: Will you be so good as to let me know whether you know where George Harris Donohue can be reached by letter. Mr. Donohue has been in newspaper work for many years and I am in hopes that for that reason you may know of someone who knows him. About ten years ago he was circulation manager of one of the Philadelphia dailies; before that he was connected with the Hearst papers, in New York.

I have been wanting for a very long time to return a loan he kindly made me in Boston years ago but have been unable to find anyone who knew where Mr. Donohue can be reached. Therefore I would appreciate the kindness more than I can tell you if you will give me any information you may have, or make any suggestion as to how to go about finding a newspaper man who is so apparently "lost," as Mr. Donohue seems to be—although doubtless there are any number of people who know where he can be addressed, but I surely have been unfortunate in not being able to run across any of his friends.

Can you tell me through what medium I should try to get in touch with him? It really means a lot to me to have this debt wiped off the slate—and I would be awfully grateful if you can help me in the matter.

M. Auldyn,
General Delivery,
Newark, N. J.

PRESS AGENT'S CODE

To Editor and Publisher: I note in your issue for Aug. 20, page 37, column 2, an interesting story on "First Ethics Code for Publicity Men Drawn," in which you give the code principles promulgated for publicity workers by the students in the University of Wisconsin, section of journalism.

Although the story is an interesting one, it is slightly misleading since the Theatrical Press Representatives of America, which was formed about 5 years ago and now embraces in its membership the leading theatrical press representatives of the United States with its allied newspapers, drew up a code of ethics which was incorporated in its first construction, and this code has been religiously adhered to by its members and enforced by its officers.

Although a code of this kind was sent to you some time ago, we were not surprised that it was not used, but perhaps in view of the fact that you credit the University of Wisconsin with having drawn up the first code, you may be interested in reprinting the code drawn up five years ago by this association.

The principal points are as follows:

"To bring together in a professional and fraternal relation all those theatrical press representatives—both men and women—who are eligible for membership.

"To maintain the strictest ethics and so uphold only those practices which are fair and honorable.

"To secure and maintain an equitable contract, fair alike to employee and employer.

"To encourage its members to merit the esteem and confidence of business associates by rendering faithful and efficient service at all times.

"To urge its members to gain and retain the unbounded respect of the press and the public alike by a conscientious regard for the facts in all advertising and reading material.

"To help eradicate by close co-operation with whomsoever may be concerned any and all irregularities and evils which may be brought to its notice."

It is admitted that if a more comprehensive code of ethics than the above can be drawn, it is not known to the members of this association.

Dixie Hines, Chairman,
Publicity Committee.

JOINS TEACHING STAFF

Fred M. Pownall, editorial writer on the old Des Moines Capital and recently in charge of the bureau of accuracy of the Des Moines Register-Tribune-Capital, has been appointed university editor and assitant professor in the school of journalism at the University of Iowa. Mr. Pownall has been associated with Des Moines newspapers the last 12 years. He is an alumnus of the University, taking his B. A. degree in 1911 and M. A. in 1913.

FALL RIVER HERALD-NEWS IN NEW PLANT

THE Fall River (Mass.) Herald-News has moved into its own new four-story plant.

The newspaper, of which E. D. Toohill is general manager, is occupying the entire building. A new Hoe sextuple press has been installed in the basement, and new equipment also includes 11 Intertypes and a Ludlow type caster.

On the first floor the advertising and bookkeeping departments are housed; the second is given over to editorial; the third composing; and the fourth photo-engraving.

TEXAS NEWS MAN DIES

The body of Mike Welker, veteran southeast Texas newspaperman and until a short time before his recent death at Beaumont active editorial writer for the Beaumont Enterprise, has been taken to Winchester, Tenn., for burial. Welker, age 53, succumbed to throat infection. Heading the list of honorary pallbearers were former Gov. W. P. Hobby and J. L. Mapes, co-publishers of the Beaumont Enterprise and Journal. Hobby also is president of the Houston Post-Dispatch. It was Welker, who as a reporter for the Beaumont Journal and correspondent for outside papers, in 1901 told to the world the story of the first gusher in the celebrated Spindletop oil field.

P. A. BARRETT

P. A. Barrett, 69, of Scranton, dean of the newspaper writers in northeastern Pennsylvania, died Aug. 28 after a brief illness. He was editor of the Catholic Light, official organ of the Scranton Roman Catholic diocese and for 31 years was correspondent for the Elmira (N. Y.) Telegram when it operated Scranton and Wilkes-Barre editions. At one time Mr. Barrett was also owner and editor of the Scranton (Pa.) Times. He observed his 50th year in the newspaper business about a year ago.

Obituary

JOSEPH BURRAL, for years an advertising writer in Scranton and Pittsburgh, died recently at the State Hospital, Scranton, from self-inflicted wounds. Burral several months ago shot and killed his wife and then turned the gun on himself. Mr. Burral was one of the founders of the Scranton Advertising Club and was widely known in newspaper circles in the northeastern part of Pennsylvania.

Mrs. B. H. THOMAS, wife of the editor of the Gurdon (Ark.) Times, died recently after an illness of four years' duration. Mr. Thomas has been treasurer of the Arkansas Press Association for several years.

ELIZABETH M. SMITH, for many years secretary to the late Eugene Moriarty when he was publisher and editor of the Worcester (Mass.) Evening Post, died Aug. 24 at Worcester.

OTIS FLEMING, 31, Jonesboro, Ark., newspaper man, died Aug. 27 at the home of his parents, after a long illness. He had been connected with the Jonesboro Evening Sun for some time.

CHARLES S. FERGUSON, 74, for more than half a century a newspaper writer and publisher in Jeffersonville, Ind., and Clark county and a notable figure in Indiana journalism, died Friday, Aug. 27, at the Kentucky Baptists' hospital, Louisville. He started the Charlestown Herald, weekly, and later was city editor of the Jeffersonville Evening News. For more than a quarter of a century he served as correspondent for Louisville and Indianapolis dailies.

CHARLES H. SMITH, 70, advertising executive associated with Berry Brothers, Detroit varnish firm, for the past 50 years, died at his Calvert Avenue home in Detroit, Friday, Aug. 26. As the first advertising manager for Berry Brothers, Mr. Smith coined such descriptive and now well-known trade names as "Liquid Granite," "Luxeberry Wood Finish," "Berrycraft," etc.

P. L. MCGREAL, for many years with the Oil City (Pa.) Derrick died at Houston, Tex., on Aug. 27.

KEY TO CONSUMER BUYING ABILITY

(Continued from page 12)

plays an increasingly important part as the cost of the commodity increases.

For that reason, population is given a weight of 90 per cent in the first column, and income is weighed at 10 per cent, the income factor being the number of U. S. income tax returns made by the community under consideration. In Class II, the weights are population, 70 per cent, income, 30 per cent; in Class III, population, 50 per cent, income, 50 per cent; in Class IV, population, 30 per cent, income 70 per cent; in Class V, population, 10 per cent, income, 90 per cent. In Class VI, the income factor is the number of returns for incomes of more than $10,000, weighted at 90 per cent and population at 10 per cent.

The resultant figure in each column can be used as the community's percentage of the entire nation's purchasing capacity, by the insertion of a decimal point four places from the right. Mississippi, for instance, appears in the table as having 1.4548 per cent in Class I; 1.2143 per cent in Class II; .9738 per cent in Class III; .7333 per cent in Class IV; .4928 per cent in Class V; and .4 per cent in Class VI.

This chart shows the relative variation for the State of Mississippi above or below the United States average for cities of 10,000 or more population, cities of less than 10,000 and rural population and the entire State of each merchandising class.

INDIANA

A salesman who travels thru Indiana always sends in good sales reports accompanied by substantial orders. He finds advertised merchandise easy to sell because he gets whole hearted co-operation from the dealer.

There is a good reason for these good sales reports and good business. Indiana is a market that very rarely encounters dull times. So diversified are its industries, so rich its agricultural crops, that the people are always one step ahead of prosperity.

The people as a class are very enterprising and energetic. Not only do they know how to earn money but they are known to live well and enjoy life.

No national advertiser can make a mistake if he concentrates his efforts on this rich market. He is always assured of a steady volume of business.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Columbus Republican	(E)	5,027	.03
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(M)	38,539	.08
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(S)	30,255	.08
Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(E)	44,217	.10
†Frankfort Times	(M&S)	8,231	.04
Gary Evening Post-Tribune	(E)	17,002	.06
Huntington Press	(M&S)	5,058	.03
Indianapolis News	(E)	130,079	.25
Lafayette Journal & Courier	(M) 7,931 (E) 13,813	21,744	.06
††La Porte Herald-Argus	(E)	6,839	.04
Marion Leader Tribune	(M&S)	9,898	.04
††Shelbyville Democrat	(E)	4,063	.025
South Bend News-Times	(M) 9,858 (E) 18,288	28,146	.07
South Bend News-Times	(S)	26,421	.07
South Bend Tribune	(S) 23,482 (E)	24,351	.07
Terre Haute Tribune	(E&S)	22,973	.06

A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, March 31, 1927.
†Government Statement, October 1, 1926.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1927.

21 NEWSPAPER ADS HELPED DETROIT

City Boosts Appropriation to $700,000 Following Success of Small Initial Campaign—Estimate Tourists Spent $105,000,000 in 1926

It was a case of one little taste inviting a full helping in Detroit.

Last year this city undertook its first organized advertising campaign, placing 21 advertisements in newspapers of the south, east and central states. Then it was that those people who have their ears to the ground actually heard one of those bangs that are forever being talked about. This small initial campaign went over in just that way.

Business men of the city formed the Greater Detroit Committee, Inc., immediately, and $700,000 was raised, approximately $400,000 of which is to be used mainly in advertising in the leading newspapers of the country. Detroit copy is now appearing in 40 newspapers from the Atlantic Coast to the Mississippi and from the Gulf of Mexico to Canada.

The first small drive brought Detroit the greatest tourist and convention year in its history. The convention bureau estimated that $105,000,000 was left by tourists in Detroit in 1926.

The present campaign is gaining even more impressive results, according to J. Lee Barrett, vice-president of the bureau. Copy was first placed last April in southern newspapers. As warmer weather approached, newspapers of the north were added until the total of 40 was reached.

"Thousands of inquiries have poured into the bureau's office," Mr. Barrett said. "They have come from every part of the United States, from Canada, South America, Europe and Asia.

"With all this advertising and publicity, the question arises: Was the campaign successful? The answer to this may be found in two places. One is the number of inquiries for detailed information about Detroit and the number of visitors in the city during the summer, and the other is the number of conventions coming here in 1928.

"There are 93 conventions already booked for 1928. The 37th Triennial Conclave of the Grand Encampment Knights Templar U. S. of America is already planning and working out arrangements for the encampment of the order on July 15, 1928. The committee estimates that 300,000 delegates will attend. The Convention Bureau put a conservative estimate of 100,000 as the number of delegates that will attend the convention."

GRAYBEARDS AT BANQUET

Three Men Have Worked for Detroit Free Press Total of 175 Years

George M. Mulford has for the last 60 years been engaged in the service of the Detroit Free Press. That fact was made the occasion recently of a celebration in Detroit, when 40 fellow workers banqueted their veteran colleague.

Mulford is a member of the circulation department. Flanking him at the banquet table were Ben O'Connor, stereotyping department, and Frank O'Connell, member of the composing room staff. These three men have spent a total of 175 years working for the Free Press. O'Connor has served for 59 and O'Connell for 56 years.

William H. Pettibone, general manager, has completed his 39th year on the same Detroit newspaper.

METAL RESEARCH URGED

Charles F. Hart, New York Times, Hopes for Better Alloy

An alloy could be developed for printing plates and type casting which would be far superior to the lead, tin and antimony now used, in the opinion of Charles F. Hart, mechanical superintendent of the New York Times. He believes that metallurgists have not devoted the time and attention to type metal that it deserves.

"Aluminum, or some aluminum alloy, is now being used for printing plates in a few commercial plants, although it is not now practical for newspaper work," Mr. Hart has pointed out in a bulletin sent to members by the mechanical department of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. W. E. Wines is director of this department.

Mr. Hart laid stress upon the importance of keeping the stereotype metal in good condition and of proper composition.

"Good metal is necessary for production of a good stereoplate," the bulletin quotes Mr. Hart as saying, "and if the press room is given good plates press room troubles are 90 per cent over."

OCCUPIES NEW PLANT

The Chicopee (Mass.) Herald, semi-weekly, has just moved into its new building at 73 Exchange Street and has installed a new type E Duplex press, a new Whitlock, No. 3 pony and a model B Intertype. The paper has been changed from seven columns to an eight column, 12 em paper. Lester G. Taft, is editor and business manager and Everett B. Lackie, advertising manager.

Supplies and Equipment

Modern
Composing Room Furniture

as made by us will speed up production and reduce costs—a real saving in your Pay Roll. Are you interested? If so, consult your regular dealer in printers' supplies or write us direct.

Do it now!

HAMILTON MFG. CO.
TWO RIVERS, WIS.

USED NEWSPAPER PRESSES

Scott 16, 24 and 32-Page Presses

GOSS 24 and 28-page presses good for black or color work, also Goss Sextuple.

HOE Pony Quadruple, Quadruple, Sextuple, Sextuple color Press, Octuple and Double Sextuple Presses.

DUPLEX Metropolitan Quadruple stereotype presses—print up to 32 pages.

Available for Early Delivery

WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY
Main Office & Factory.....Plainfield, N. J.
New York Office..Brokaw Bldg., 1457 Broadway
Chicago Office.....Monadnock Block

Salesmen and Representatives can be secured through the Classified Service of
Editor & Publisher

GOSS STEREOTYPING MACHINERY Carried in Stock

Fastest, most easily operated, most accurate and durable flat casting box you can buy. Perfectly balanced. New design lock-up bar allows for quick change when regulating thickness of casts. Positive quick lock-up at four points on box with one lever movement. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

Drive and Control for Newspaper Presses

A representative installation on a Scott Straight-unit press is that of a 100-hp., a-c. equipment at the Newark, N. J., Ledger.

GENERAL ELECTRIC

Factory Rebuilt Presses for Immediate Delivery

21-in. Col. Goss High Speed Octuple Press.

22-in. Col. Hoe Right Angle Sextuple Press with colors.

22-in. Col. Goss Five-Decker 40-page Press.

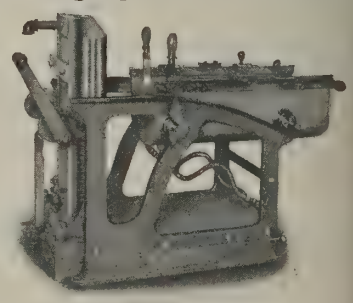
22-in. Col. Goss High Speed 4-Decker, 32-Page Press.

22-in. Col. Goss High Speed Octuple Press.

22-in. Hoe High-Speed Super-Imposed Unit-Type Octuple Press.

Others for Early Shipment
LET US KNOW YOUR WANTS

The Goss Printing Press Co.
Main Office & Factory Chicago, Ill.
New York Office 220 W. 42nd St.
San Francisco Office 646 Call Bldg.



BLANKETS
of all kinds for all makes of
Rotary Newspaper Printing Machines
Automatic Efficiency Felt Blankets
Monocork Blankets
Oil-proof-face Rubber Blankets
Cutting Rubbers and Conveyor Wire.

You can save waste paper, increase production and obtain better printing when your machines are properly blanketed.

We specialize in the manufacture of Newspaper Printing Blankets and carry a complete line, including all widths and thicknesses.

New England Newspaper Supply Company
Worcester, Mass., U. S. A.
Cable Address NENSCO
Worcester, Mass.

Hoe Patented Duo-Cooled Equipoise Curved Casting Mould

"It is essential to Success to be the first out with the news—and Minutes count."

This Hoe Curved Casting Mould is a time-saver, designed especially for Speed and Efficiency. Cold Water circulating through the stationary Lid and the concave Side, gives quick cooling for rapid Casting.

IF IT'S A HOE, IT'S THE BEST

R. HOE & CO., INC. 504-520 Grand Street, New York City

7 South Dearborn Street CHICAGO, ILL.
Pere Marquette Bldg. NEW ORLEANS, LA.
7 Water Street BOSTON, MASS.

Employment—Equipment—Services

EDITOR & PUBLISHER Classified Advertising Information RATES

SITUATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .50 per line
3 Times — .40 per line
ALL OTHER CLASSIFICATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .75 per line
4 Times — .60 per line

White space charge at same rate per line per insertion as earned by frequency of insertion. Minimum Contract space, three lines. The Editor & Publisher reserves the right to classify, edit or reject any advertisement.

ADVERTISING

Supplies

Shading Sheets for Art work and Benday effects. Bourges Service, Inc., 144 West 32nd Street, New York.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Brokers

Glass Paper in South for $15,000, or two-thirds interest for $10,000. Established high-grade publication with fine opportunity. Chance for advertising man. Harris-Dibble Co., 345 Madison Ave., New York.

Middle West Properties—Exclusive listings. No damaging publicity. Personal service in every deal. Everything confidential. High grade newspaper bonds for sale. Clyde H. Minox, 851 Board of Trade Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

This Splendid Little Daily in desirable Illinois town of 7,500 dominates a field of 75,000. Circulation only 2200 and gross business averaging only $40,000 a year. Nothing on earth but poor management can stop this paper from 3000 circulation and $75,000 business. Controlling owner just gone to his reward. Property available for $40,000, half cash desired. Large enough for two active men. Equipment best in county. Prop 695x. The H. F. Hendricks Agency, Litchfield, Ill.

Very Desirable evening paper; exclusive field; Wisconsin; modern plant; earning handsome dividends. Evening paper North Carolina: exclusive field; fine modern plant; earning large dividends. Also several desirable weeklies. J. B. Shale, Times B'dg., New York.

CIRCULATION

Promotion

Circulation—When quick, additional circulation coverage becomes necessary, remember that after twenty years in this one line of endeavor is your proof against experimenting. Write or wire. Pacific Coast Circulation Service, Bell Block, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Circulation Builders—Blair & Austin, 1504 Century ave., Reading, Penn. Originators of Salesmanship Club Campaigns.

Ask the Man Who's Had One! In over 20 years of nation-wide experience, we have proved ourselves always able to produce greater results per dollar expended. Our circulation building campaigns, large or small, have all expert management and attention. Address us now, care of the World-Herald, Omaha, Nebr., or at any time at Box 288, Waterloo, Iowa. Myers' Circulation Organization.

Toby Alice Dolls, $36.00 dozen. Quick water shipment to California. Freight $0.10 each. B. Pinkney, 307-6th Ave., New York, N. Y.

Circulation Builders—A Clean-cut, self-financing, personally conducted campaign that will make you more money now and for years to come; 20 years' experience. The Alward Syndicate, 453 W. 9th street, Erie, Pa.

Superior Circulation Builders—The W. S. Kendall Company, 104 North Bailey Ave., Louisville, Kentucky. The circulation-building organization that has set the standard for aggressive, successful circulation campaigns for nearly twenty years.

The World's Largest Circulation Building Organization—The only circulation-building service in Newspaperdom furnishing publishers' affidavits of the exact results of its every campaign. The Charles Partlowe Company, Occidental Building, Indianapolis.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Advertising—I am looking for an advertising salesman of outstanding ability for position of advertising manager and working salesman. (Only salesman employed on the paper) on the leading twice-a-week paper in Detroit's greatest suburb. Must be able to plan entire campaigns; design, layout and sell snappy copy; sell job work and be a real salesman, not mere copy writer. Salary and commission. Only high-class man wanted, who is married and wants a permanent, profitable connection. $25 to $40 a week men not wanted. Record, Wyandotte, Michigan.

Circulation—We want best canvassing crew in United States; six to ten men, hard house-to-house plugging. No contests, but premiums or other inducements permitted. C-921, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Correspondents—National Jewish Daily Wants Correspondents Everywhere. Jewish Daily Bulletin, 621 Broadway, New York.

Reporter, afternoon, Northwest. Must be fast, digger, rapid on typewriter, capable some desk work. Must be western man. Getting news absolute requirement, or out of job. No loafers need apply. Will fill job on basis deliver or quit. Tell all first letter. C-938, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Accountant—Circulation Manager—Young man, 28, eight years' experience as circulation manager and assistant. Practical experience in auditing and accounting. Knowledge of newspaper accounting and cost finding. Desires position as accountant or circulation manager. Willing to combine both on small daily. Excellent references. C-930, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Executive—Long experience in promotion of local, national and classified on metropolitan and suburban papers. Enviable record for constructive building, aggressive salesman and thorough organizer. Am seeking connection with publisher who needs a man of proven ability, initiative and a will to meet and overcome keen competition. Write for interview and record. C-905, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Twelve years' experience, including one year each New York and Chicago, national fields; 6 years executive, both local and national. Thorough organizer and intensive salesman, accustomed to keen metropolitan competition. Intimate knowledge retail and national merchandising. Especially equipped to create large volume of new business. Excellent reason for desiring new opportunity. Six years present employers. Splendid record and best references. Correspondence invited in strict confidence. Age 33, married. Protestant. Address C-801, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Capable, aggressive newspaper advertising man, twenty years' experience in all branches, desires permanent location in city of 100,000 or over. Letters of reference speak in highest terms of past work, ability and character. Located with such papers as Public Ledger, North American, Bulletin, Philadelphia; Washington Post. Married, 42. Morning or evening proposition. C-898, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager or Assistant—Twelve years' experience. Capable and aggressive, worked on paper carrying second largest volume in state. Can service large and small accounts with layouts, special campaigns, etc. Not afraid of hard work. Under 30 years of age, married. Can give best references. Would like to locate in Wisconsin or nearby. C-936, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Capable, aggressive advertising man, twenty years' experience in all branches, local and national, desires permanent location city of 100,000 or over. Letters of reference speak in highest terms of past work, ability and character. Located with such papers as Public Ledger, North American, Bulletin, Philadelphia; Washington Post. Married, Protestant. F. H. Riordan, 5915 Webster St., Phila., Pa.

Advertising—Management, sales and sales promotion, research and merchandising—Young college man with eight years' successful experience, now employed, would welcome new opportunity as newspaper advertising manager, advertising agency executive, or sales and advertising manager for national advertiser. Available 30 days after reaching agreement. C-937, Editor & Publisher.

Ad Writer—Missouri Journalism graduate with varied practical experience. Good layouts, copy, sketches. Available September 1. C-915, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager or assistant to General Manager; 7 years on Eastern and Mid-West daily as office manager, circulation manager and treasurer. Qualified newspaper accountant. Knows credits and collections. Originated classified collection system that increased collections 75% first month. Prefer Eastern location. At liberty October 1st. Salary $75. Married, family. Age 33. Best of recommendations. Address C-983, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager or Assistant to Publisher—Two and a half years' business and general manager of New York daily, where I made astonishing good record under trying conditions. Property I manage now on profit basis for first time in five years. Thoroughly understand all departments, including engraving. Successful record gained by hard work and perseverance. Savings in overhead and purchasing were enormous. Ownership conditions warrants seeking new connections. American, married, age 36, highest references. Will be available September 15th. Box C-896, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Circulation—Want to connect as Circulation Manager, with a newspaper that desires to grow by safe and sane methods. A non-believer of premiums, with a long and successful career as circulator, from newsboy to circulation manager. Office-owned routes is my forte and working with boys is my hobby. More than doubled the circulation for the newspaper that I work on now, in the territory I cover. Now all phases of circulation. My best references are my present and past employers. Age 31, married. Address C-826, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager, 20 years' experience, familiar with all methods promotion and A. B. C. records, etc. Can produce under adverse conditions. Reasonable salary. References. C-920, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager, 34, employed. Not seeking. Awaits inquiries. C-934, Editor & Publisher.

Composing Room Foreman or Superintendent wishes a permanent position; can give reference as to ability, character and reliability; experienced in large and medium plants; 14 years in one place. Address C-868, Editor & Publisher.

Desk—Experienced all around man daily or weekly. Near New York preferred. C-939, Editor & Publisher.

Desk Man, telegraph editor, copy reader, desires position on Southern afternoon daily. C-940, Editor & Publisher.

Desk and Re-write Man—Newspaperman with 15 years' experience seeks position on Eastern daily. Accurate, speedy, efficient. Unusually good at producing humorous features. C-929, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer—I left the editorial writers' office of a better known daily to edit and write for large business magazine publishers. A plan to move offices included continuation of my services as managing editor but I prefer return to newspaper work. Have specialized as paragrapher and columnist. You will respect my references and can judge my samples. C-928, Editor & Publisher.

Editor—Some small daily publisher sadly needs my experience as editor and manager to build up his paper. C-899, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial—Experienced man of Eastern, Western and Metropolitan service, wide reading, extensively informed and able to write fluently, who has held desk and managerial positions, desires to make change from place now filled for temporary personal reasons to one with the advantage of utilizing his varied training and equipment. Especially strong on heads, news, make-up and purposeful editorial handling. Just the man for news editorship or managing editor in cities up to 100,000, either farming or industrial community. C-903; Editor & Publisher.

News Executive, editorial writer, columnist of wide experience; can produce cheaply, paper of which you'll be proud; more interested in opportunity than starting salary; now employed; seeks permanent place, Southeast. C-935, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Man, young, wide experience, wants connection with small daily or weekly of promise. References. Townsend Godsey, Maryville, Mo.

Reporter—
Who?—Reporter, a cub, but trained.
What?—Wants a job.
When?—Starting September.
Where?—Anywhere.
Why?—He is ambitious, aims his guns at reporting. Now ready to pull the trigger and fire away at his chosen field. References. C-926, Editor & Publisher.

$25,000

One of our clients tells us that the above figures represent his earnings this year and that Editor & Publisher Classified Service put him in touch with the opportunity that is proving so profitable.

Seek Newspaper or Advertising opportunities in the logical way—get in touch with

Classified Service

Editor & Publisher

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

For Sale—24 Page Hoe Press and complete stereotyping outfit, in excellent condition, at a fraction of the value of the stereotyping equipment alone.

Bought this equipment at bankruptcy sale, being a part of the plant of the Clearwater Morning Herald at Clearwater, Florida.

Outfit can be seen on floor but must be moved quickly regardless of price realized. Write or wire H. A. Orrell, Mech. Supt. Times, St. Petersburg, Florida.

For Sale—One complete photo-engraving plant. Miles Machinery Co., 64 West 23d St., New York.

Job Presses, Paper Cutters, Wire Stitchers, etc.—A complete line. Overhauled and guaranteed machines at bargain prices. Easy terms. Hoffman Type & Engraving Co., 114 E. 13th St., N. Y. City.

Printers and Bookbinders:—Two Revolution Presses, Drum Cylinder Presses, Power Paper Cutters, Lever aper Cutters, Colts and Universal Presses, Chandler & Price Presses, GoldingJobbers, New Style Gordon Presses, C. & P. Presses with Miller Feeder, Multi Color Presses, Folders, Punches, Perforators, Wire Stitchers, Numbering Machines, Standing Presses, Embossers, Shears, Proof Presses, at greatly reduced prices and upon most liberal terms. American Type Founders Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

Twenty Fonts of 6½ point latest newspaper text type for sale. Excellent condition, used only a few months. Box C-925, Editor & Publisher.

Used Goss Mat Roller for wet mats only, for sale cheap. The Goss Printing Press Co., 153 So. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

Equipment Wanted

Wanted to Buy used dry mat roller with motor and scorcher. Give complete descriptions and cash price. The Evening Republican, Mitchell, S. Dak.

CONSOLIDATION

The merging of newspaper interests is a subject that has received special study and investigation by this firm for nearly 17 years. It is a big subject and requires considerable technical knowledge, both as to valuation and operating methods. When properly organized, the results are never disappointing.

We have been factors in many important consolidations, sales and appraisals.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

WANTED — Editorial writer with newspaper experience for position with New York State small city daily. Cover age, education, political affiliations, positions held, present salary; and send clippings representing recent work. Mention our No. 900.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Newspaper Properties Bought, Sold and Appraised

All negotiations confidential

PALMER, DEWITT & PALMER

Business Established in 1899
350 Madison Ave. New York
Pacific Coast Representative:
M. O. Moore, 515 N. Canon Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

One Dollar will be paid for each idea published. Send clipping for payment.

THE Boston Herald has added a large volume of linage by having certain advertising staff men devote their entire time to soliciting tie-up advertising on automobile, radio and other national accounts from all over New England by telephone. The copy usually carries the trademark of the manufacturer with the name and local address of the dealer.—James M. Mosely, Boston.

The Houston Chronicle increased reader interest in and built up its classified automobile advertising by conducting a contest for the best letter on "Why I Like to Deal with .... Auto Agency." A prize of $100 to be applied on the purchase of any second hand car the winner might select from the agency about which the letter was written. Of course the letter had to be written about some agency whose ad appeared in the automobile classified display section. The nature of the contest was such as to increase belief in reliability and confidence in used car dealers and for this reason appealed strongly to dealers.—Norman B. Terry.

Why not have a little contest to inject new life into your auto section, as to who covered the most mileage during his vacation this summer, giving Sept. 30 as closing date? Give a few nominal awards which may be cash or accessories for letters indicating the longest trips. This will stimulate others to lengthen their motor trips and help auto and accessory dealers.—C. M. L., Seattle, Wash.

On Saturday or on Sunday morning run a directory headed "THESE BUSINESSES OPEN SUNDAY." In this directory include a representative list of all businesses of various kinds that operate locally on Sunday. State that the directory is published as a service to those people who may have occasion to patronize some of these businesses on Sunday.—Frank H. Williams.

To stimulate interest in your advertising pages both among the readers and the advertisers themselves offer a prize of five dollars or so for the best letter written each week explaining why the writer thinks a certain ad that meets his or her approval is the best published in the pages of your paper that week. Use the title "Do You Know Good Advertising?"—C. E. Pellissier, Boston.

If the golf season hasn't provided your paper with at least a full page of extra advertising, you can profitably follow the Columbus (Ind.) Republican. The opening of a new course was the subject of a feature story, with a sketch of the course and a picture of the club house used as illustrative matter. Around this was massed advertising of merchants who sell men's and women's togs, as well as all kinds of golf supplies.—Yandell C Cline.

A newly paved business section of a city or suburb presents a good entering wedge for the advertising manager to solicit full page group ads from the business men of that section announcing the improved streets and inviting the inspection of them. This plan usually gets the advertising of the "hard-boiled" merchant who never spends a cent on advertising, and introduces the advertising salesman to many new prospects for regular advertising.—J. M. M., Asbury Park, N. J.

The Utica (N. Y.) Observer-Dispatch has an arrangement with a local insurance firm to put a paid reading notice immediately after every report of an accident. This develops a steady flow of profitable little readers with the "—adv." at the end of them. The number of accidents in any city or town during 24 hours are usually quite numerous. The tieup works very well for both parties. The desk must be on the qui vive, however, always to add the paid reader.—Oxie.

NOT LORD BEAVERBROOK

Stanley, Author of "Don Juan" Memoirs, Has No Right to British Title

An advertisement of the Graphic Syndicate, Inc., of New York, in EDITOR & PUBLISHER last week offered to newspapers a series of articles entitled "Why I Am the Modern Don Juan," purporting to be the memoirs of "Lord Beaverbrook," who was described as an inmate of a New York prison after a career in which he had won by fraud the love and money of numerous women. There was no indication the name was assumed.

It will be obvious to all readers of EDITOR & PUBLISHER that there is no possible connection between this author and the distinguished proprietor of the London (England) Daily Express, who is the only person having the right to the title of Lord Beaverbrook. This designation and others of high repute throughout the world, were used by Frederick Stanley, according to the New York police, in his long career of deception and theft which ended last June in his arrest in New York.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER regrets the oversight by which the advertiser was permitted to so designate him in its advertising columns.

OPENS ATLANTIC BRANCH

On Sept. 1, Allied Newspapers, Inc., opened an office in the Walton Building, Atlanta, Ga., with George M. Kohn as manager.

HUNCHES

One Dollar will be paid for each idea published. Send clipping for payment.

MILADY'S wardrobe seems always to be an interesting subject these days when there is so little of it anyway, and now it develops, according to some of the young ladies, that the greatest expense of clothing is not, as one might think, dresses, nor shoes nor hats, but stockings. It is said that the average young woman spend $2 per week on stockings, or a total of about $100 in the course of a year, which would go far toward a fur coat or some other prized possession. If a girl earns only $18 or $20 per week this is a subject for serious consideration. Here is a chance for a good story by talking with some of the young women of your acquaintance and finding out if these figures hold true in all parts of the country, and what the girls thing about it. Lots of humor in such a story if handled right. What do the merchants say?—Cyril E. Lamb.

Under the caption, "What I would Do to Improve Indianapolis," the Indianapolis (Ind.) News is publishing daily a series of letters by Indianapolis business and civic leaders.—E. C. Hill.

Get the friendship of all the church people of your city and at the same time provide your readers with a most interesting feature, by asking the head of each church represented in your city to make a statement setting forth its principles in, say, 150-175 words. A cut of the writer and his church would be of value but is not indispensible. The little story could contain the name of the writer, and his title, the year the church was established and when it came to the particular city, its approximate membership nationally or internationally and locally, and its headquarters and local address. The feature could be headed by a little sketch of about two or three hundred words by the member of the editorial staff.—Fred L. W. Bennett, Salt Lake City.

One New England newspaper heads its columns of local items with the following unusual phrase "Over the Coffee." Another paper uses for its head "Newsy Notes About Newsy Folks," while a third one has the heading of "Our Folks and Other Folks."—D. P., Fall River, Mass.

"Today's News Today"

UNITED·PRESS

Complete wire reports for evening, morning and Sunday newspapers everywhere.

NEA Service newspictures are always on top of the news—or ahead of it.

NEA Service, Inc.,
1200 West Third Street
CLEVELAND, OHIO

Daily Paris Style Hints

By Alice Langelier

Are Written Exclusively for

INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

63 Park Row, New York City

Give Your Readers
DAILY HEALTH TALKS
by Dr Frank McCoy
"The Mayo of Health Writers"
A health service that is different—home treatments without medicine or costly apparatus, based on a knowledge of food chemistry and the mechanics of the body
WIRE OR WRITE
McCoy Health Service
Brack Shops Building, Los Angeles, Cal.

What Do You KNOW ?

A Great Questions and Answers Feature

New Questions Daily

King Features Syndicate, Inc.
New York City

HOW CAN I GET MARRIED?

A Young Girl's Search for True Love

Greatest Human Interest Circulation Making Feature of the Year

There is not a girl who will not want to read this story, to say nothing of the BOYS and even the MAMMAS AND PAPAS.

Thirty instalments, illustrated by posed photographs. Released September 7.

Wire your order

Graphic Syndicate, Inc.
350 Hudson St., New York, N. Y.

SERVICE
THE CHARLES PARTLOWE COMPANY
America's Largest Circulation Building Organization
RESULTS COUNT
OCCIDENTAL BLDG.
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

SELL YOUR GOODS IN NEW ENGLAND—

Occupying an area of 2% of the total area of the United States and with a population of nearly 7% of the country's total population—this small territory possesses 16% of the Nation's savings, the highest savings per capita of any reason of the country.

Not only is this a record but a remarkable achievement for a group of people who accumulated such wealth thru earning power.

The national advertiser should, therefore, see New England in its true proportions —a consuming market, as it actually is. Here you have wealth and earning power. It is natural to conclude therefore, that unlimited buying power exists.

The value of a market is determined solely by its buying power. Where then can you find a territory in the United States so small in area—so easily covered, that possesses such a wealth of buying power. What national advertiser who has a good product can afford to stay away from this market.

There are a hundred and one other reasons why you should concentrate on this market. The newspapers listed below are ready to furnish you the reasons. Write them today.

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Attleboro Sun	(E)	5,786	.03	.03
Boston Globe	(M&E)	286,361	.50	.50
Boston Globe	(S)	333,452	.55	.55
††Boston Transcript	(E)	38,245	.20	.20
Boston Post	(M)	394,851	.60	.60
Boston Post	(S)	350,627	.55	.55
Fitchburg Sentinel	(E)	12,069	.06	.045
Haverhill Gazette	(E)	16,415	.065	.05
Lynn Item	(E)	17,004	.065	.05
††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader	(M&E)	20,621	.07	.07
New Bedford Standard Mercury	(M&E)	32,607	.10	.10
New Bedford Sunday Standard	(S)	29,262	.10	.10
North Adams Transcript	(E)	10,427	.05	.04
Pittsfield Eagle	(E)	18,264	.05	.05
Salem News	(E)	21,495	.09	.07
Taunton Gazette	(E)	9,414	.045	.035
Worcester Telegram-Gazette	(M&E)	99,207	.28	.25
Worcester Sunday Telegram	(S)	52,740	.21	.18

CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Bridgeport Post-Telegram	(E&M)	44,370	.15	.15
Bridgeport Post	(S)	23,171	.10	.10
Hartford Courant	(M)	33,017	.09	.09
Hartford Courant	(S)	58,674	.13	.13
††Hartford Times	(E)	56,077	.13	.13
Middletown Press	(E)	8,560	.05	.03
††New Haven Register	(E&S)	48,507	.145	.135
New London Day	(E)	12,293	.06	.045
††Norwich Bulletin	(M)	12,342	.07	.05
Norwalk Hour	(E)	6,429	.04	.04
††South Norwalk Sentinel	(E)	5,320	.04	.03
Stamford Advocate	(E)	10,937	.05	.04
Waterbury Republican-American	(M&E)	25,234	.08	.08
Waterbury Republican	(S)	15,903	.08	.08

MAINE—Population, 768,014

Portland Press-Herald Express, Sun & Telegram	(M&E)	59,356	.20	.16

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683

Concord Monitor-Patriot	(E)	5,773	.0375	.025
††Keene-Sentinel	(E)	3,980	.036	.023
Manchester Union-Leader	(M&E)	32,585	.15	.12

RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
††Newport Daily News	(E)	6,249	.0336	.0293
Pawtucket Times	(E)	28,449	.08	.08
Providence Bulletin	(E)	71,443	.20	(B).27
Providence Journal	(M)	38,599	.12	(B).27
Providence Journal	(S)	74,009	.20	.20
Providence News	(E)	28,021	.08	.08
Providence Tribune	(E)	21,162	.10	.09
Westerly Sun	(E&S)	5,273	.03	.03
Woonsocket Call	(E)	14,880	.05	.05

VERMONT—Population, 352,428

Barre Times	(E)	7,282	.03	.025
††Brattleboro Reformer	(E)	3,520	.035	.02
Burlington Free Press	(M)	14,265	.05	.05
Rutland Herald	(M)	11,816	.05	.05
††St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record	(E)	4,061	.03	.02

 A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, March 31, 1927.
†† Government Statement, March 31, 1927.
(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

Supreme

Among New York Evening Newspapers

Every month for two years The Sun has led all New York evening newspapers in volume of advertising.

Advertisers use The Sun to such a large extent because it is read by active, intelligent, prosperous people—people who have varied needs and the means with which to purchase what they want—people who respond readily to advertisements of products that satisfy their desires.

The Sun would not have the kind of readers it has or the number of readers that it has if it were not for its editorial excellence. The Sun's news columns are complete, accurate and interesting; its editorials are strong, fearless and important in their influence on current thought; its features are instructive and entertaining.

The Sun

280 Broadway New York City

THIS ISSUE: WHY PHILIP PAYNE FLEW WITH "OLD GLORY"

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

MEMBER A.B.C.

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1927

MEMBER A.B.P.

SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; Newspaperdom, March, 1892; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Advertising, February 7, 1925; Revised entry, Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Vol. 60. No. 16 NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 10, 1927 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A. $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign. 10c Per Copy

CONGRESS LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

Reproduced from the Century Magazine of February, 1890

THE GRAND REVIEW OF UNION TROOPS AT THE CLOSE OF THE WAR

The entire Union Army at any period of the Civil War did not equal the host that buys The Tribune every Sunday

WITH the nation torn asunder over the questions of national Union and slavery, the North and South stretched their resources to the limit in the Civil War.

The North exhausted every expedient to obtain volunteers—maintained a rigorous draft—and poured every man it could obtain into the battle areas.
And yet, with its resources strained to the utmost, the North never once had as many men in the field as buy The Chicago Tribune every Sunday!

IT takes comparison with great events, and the great hosts of history, to give reality to the tremendous figures involved in describing Tribune circulation.

On one bloody day—July 3, 1863—the two victories of Gettysburg and Vicksburg saved the Union. Yet the 283,000 men who participated on both sides in these gigantic struggles would form only a small part of The Tribune's present day circulation.

Add to them the 105,000 men Grant led into the Wilderness in '64—add the 62,000 with which Lee opposed him—and the city and suburban circulation of The Daily Tribune would provide numbers enough for both sides of all these struggles, with enough left over to equal in number the two-day triumphal parade of the Grand Army of the Republic through Washington after the war was ended!

When it comes to The Sunday Tribune, we must use the entire Civil War to get comparisons.

Picture all the men the Union sent into the field at any one time in the war—and you wouldn't have as many as buy The Chicago Tribune every Sunday!

In four long years the Union fought through to victory. In the bloodless battles of commerce, The Chicago Tribune hammers through, every day, carrying your sales messages to a dominating percentage of the buyers in Chicago and the Chicago trading territory.

The Daily Tribune carries your sales messages to 588,502 buyers in Chicago and suburbs alone—reaches 59% of the families in Chicago—60% of the families within Chicago and suburbs. No other Chicago daily reaches as many with its TOTAL circulation.

The Sunday Tribune's city and suburban circulation of 688,152 reaches 70% of the families in Chicago and suburbs. Its country circulation of 402,063 reaches 20% to 80% of the families in 547 cities and towns of more than 1,000 population in the five states of the Chicago territory. No newspaper in America not owned by The Tribune can equal The Sunday Tribune's total circulation of 1,090,215.

Such coverage places advertiser's sales messages before a dominating percentage of the buyers in America's richest market!

Chicago Tribune

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Circulation: 769,645 daily; 1,090,215 Sunday

CLEAN-CUT PRINT

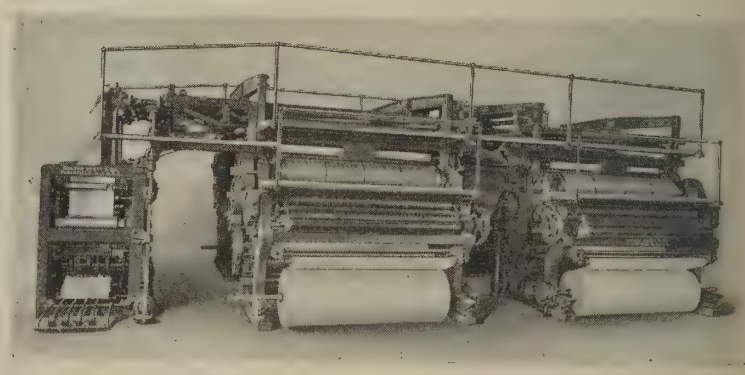
READABLE print-type "as clean as a hound's tooth."

That's the first impression subscribers get when they read a newspaper printed on a Scott "Straight-Unit" or "Multi-Unit" press.

Trimness, neatness, clear decisive type matter that "puts across" the written word in a manner not equalled by any other press.

Why?

Because a Scott Unit is the only unit having solid forged steel printing cylinders, in special roller bearings, capable of printing without streaks at 400 r. p. m. or faster. And it is the only unit having vibration against the form rollers and equipped with two large transfer rollers between the ink drums to insure uniformity of ink feed at all speeds.



Scott presses, in other words, assure a smudgeless, streakless paper produced at any speed.

An easy-to-read paper is a paper that is read. For increased circulation install—

Scott

"Multi-Unit" or "Straight-Unit" Presses

Cylinder Speed—400 r. p. m.

WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY

Main Office and Factory - - - - - - Plainfield, New Jersey, U. S. A.
New York Office - - - - - - - - - - - 1457 Broadway
Chicago Office - - - - - - - - - - - 1330 Monadnock Block

Cable Address: WALTSCOTT NEW YORK

GAINS

The New York Herald Tribune was FIRST in gains in Total Advertising among all New York newspapers in 1925 and 1926.

• • •

The Herald Tribune is the ONLY standard size morning newspaper in New York to show a gain for the first seven months of 1927 in Total Advertising—65,594 lines.

• • •

The Herald Tribune was FIRST among all New York newspapers in gains in National Advertising in 1926 over 1925.

• • •

The Herald Tribune showed the largest gain among standard size morning newspapers in New York in National Advertising for the first seven months of 1927—70,073 lines.

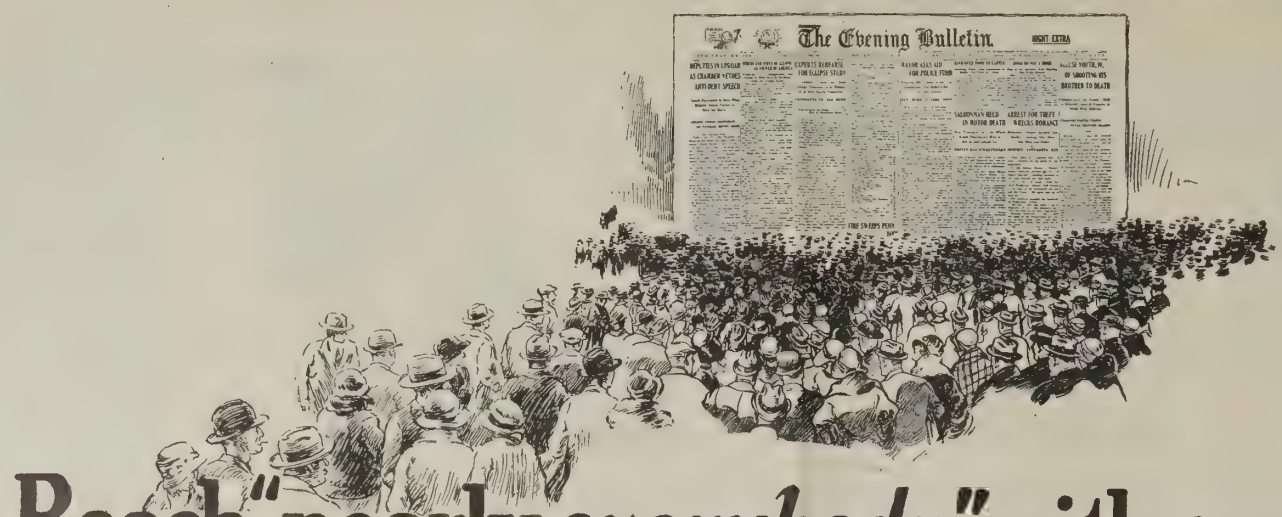
• • •

The Herald Tribune in the short time of three years advanced from EIGHTEENTH to THIRD place in National Advertising amongst all American newspapers.

• • •

The Herald Tribune advanced in Total Advertising from FIFTH to SECOND place in three years amongst all New York City newspapers.

NEW YORK



Herald Tribune

BOSTON
Carroll Judson Swan, 931 Park Square Bldg.

CHICAGO
Woodward & Kelly. 360 N. Michigan Ave.

DETROIT
Woodward & Kelly, Fine Arts Building

SAN FRANCISCO
Thomas Emory, 681 Market Street

Reach "nearly everybody" with one paper

Every evening, Greater Philadelphia sits down to one paper — the Bulletin. "In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads the Bulletin." In this retail trading area there are more than 550,000 homes and the Bulletin averages *546,527 copies! And that's the whole story in a nut shell.

DOMINATE PHILADELPHIA } Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The Evening Bulletin.

"The Evening Bulletin is sold on its merits as a newspaper; no prize, premium, coupon, guessing contests, or other methods of artificially stimulating circulation have been used."

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

New York .....247 Park Avenue (Park-Lexington Building)
Chicago ..... Verree & Conklin, Inc., 28 East Jackson Boulevard
Detroit ..... C. L. Weaver, Verree & Conkin, Inc., 321 Lafayette Boulevard
San Francisco ..... Thomas L. Emory, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 681 Market Street

*Audit Bureau of Circulations report of net paid daily average circulation for the six months ending March 31, 1927.

(Copyright 1927, Bulletin Company)

Member of Associated Press

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication, by The Editor & Publisher Co.
J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1700 Times Building, 42nd St., at Broadway,
New York. Telephones, Bryant 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056. Charter Member Audit Bureau
of Circulations. Member Associated Business Papers Inc.

Vol. 60 NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 10, 1927 No. 16

General Advertisers Drive Into Traffic Jam By Using Peak Local Days

Space Buyers Missing Many Opportunities, Bird's-eye View of National Linage by Days Shows—Experience Cases Cited to Prove Advantages of Spreading Copy

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

ARE national advertisers missing an opportunity by bunching their space on the newspapers' bulkiest days?

"Yes!" is the inevitable answer of any thinking critic who looks over newspapers from everywhere and who studies the days national schedules are appearing.

"Feast or famine" is the rule governing many newspaper production departments. On Thursday and Friday, the peak days of the week almost universally, a deluge of local and national big space; on Saturday, in many cases, almost no advertising of a national character. Monday and Wednesday are inclined to be lighter days with Sunday and Tuesday, by and large, rather sizable, sometimes even formidable.

"I'm getting scared at the colossal proportions department store advertising and other local advertising assumes to compete for attention with my national advertising," the president of a leading and long-established New York agency commented in no uncertain terms to the writer: "I am getting concerned at the vast bulk many of our large dailies are assuming. It means more intense racing of bulk against bulk."

His remedy, higher rates for local advertisers and a limiting of the amount of space any one advertiser can use, overlooked another approach: the release of national schedules on the newspaper's "quiet days" when the copy can command much more attention than on the hectic "heavy days."

The purpose of advertising is to get a message into people's minds. It has to be cumulative in effect. It has to keep nudging and reminding. National advertising is educational. It is planned to promote long-run growth of sales. Why shouldn't national copy in Saturday's issue of a newspaper, with comparatively little competition and with an audience just about the same as any other day, in the long run build up as much demand on the local dealer as a schedule appearing on Thursdays?

Of course, every newspaper publisher would welcome a smoothing of the peaks and valleys. Linage which fluctuates less from day to day would mean greater efficiency and economy in operating his composition room and in taking care of his general overhead costs. In the long run, this undoubtedly would have a bearing on lower rates.

Scant attention has been given up to the present to the subject of what days in the week newspaper schedules should be released. The copy, the art, the medium, the merchandising, all get detailed study but nothing much is said as to what parts of the week constitute "best bets" (on a long-pull basis). It is often a hit-and-miss decision.

